CANDIDATES IN ND ELECTIONS CITE CAMPAIGN PLANS, GOALS

By FRANK LIPO and GUARINO
Senior Staff Reporters

Student body presidential and vice presidential elections Tuesday feature seven tickets, a substantial increase over the past few years.

"Atitude, programming and finances," are three areas that the Jim Domagalski-Laurie Bink ticket plans to address.

"Do students get their $35 worth (of the student activity fee)?" Domagalski said. "The $35, we've been getting it no."

Domagalski and Bink said they plan to gain respect by having student support behind their ideas and seeking student input beforehand. "We first must gather the support of students in order to gain the respect of students and the administration," he said.

"We expect to get along with the administration, not try to change it," said the Ticket to Campbell.

"It is not feasible for each other's position, working to achieve goals that are best for the student body, as well as the administration's," according to the Thomas Grier-Svet Guenther ticket.

The ticket mentioned three priorities once elected to office: a restructuring of parietal regulations and penalties, on-campus "21" social gatherings, and the formation of an ethanol research committee.

"Fancy posters and colored posters don't mean much," said Guenther. "People should be aware of the importance, not quantity."

"Establishing and utilizing all the avenues of communication and of student input" is a goal of the Bruce Lohman-Jim Cran dall ticket, said Lohman. Lohman said his administration would encourage any student to walk into his office and have input. He said he would stress such students into the right channel for action and would encourage them to pursue ideas themselves.

"There are existing University committees' which can handle student concerns," said Lohman. Lohman said his administration would understand the system and push the right button for proper action. Using proper channels and not just loud rhetoric would best serve students, Lohman said.

"The ticket of Mike Miller-Sheila O'Connor is completely against an increase in the student activity fee," according to Millen. "A complete financial reform is necessary for student government. "Few people" see PLANS, page 4.

Drug users get help on campus

Counseling and Psych Services helps ND

By ALEX PELTZ

Whether a student seeks help at Notre Dame for a drug problem voluntarily or through referral from the Office of Student Affairs, he or she would find the help in the same place - the Counseling and Psychological Services Center.

But while counseling is available at the center, there is no specific program for drug users, as there is for alcoholics. "We don't have a program at this time in an organized setting," said Peggy Croston, alcohol and drug counselor.

She said most counseling for drug problems is done on a one-to-one basis. But since most students who use drugs also use alcohol, they often are involved with alcohol counseling groups, she said.

"I do include referred student in SOAP groups so they can get some information on other kinds of drugs," Croston said. SOAP, Students On Alcohol Problems, is a group program much like Alcoholics Anonymous, in which students get a chance to discuss their alcohol-related problems.

Croston said she would like to have some kind of formal setting such as SOAP for drug counseling.

"My quarrel is that it's been my experience that the message is more clear when they can talk to one another," Croston said. "They laugh a lot, make jokes.

She said she thought the recent incidents, where drug-related problems caused commotion, may force the administration to create such a program.

She said she was talked about in any counseling is strictly confidential.

"We put out a number of publications. But, the people who come are not alcoholics, simply alcoholics," Sullivan said. Sullivan said it would be possible to offer drug counseling through the Alcohol Education Office. "We administered a survey and included questions about drug use. We tried to make it visible that there were other drug problems."

Sullivan said she could offer counseling for students who smoke pot. But she said she has never seen anybody for drug use. "They don't show up for it."

Scholastic eliminates SMC editor position

By PEGGY PROSSER
Staff Reporter

To "increase the efficiency of the production schedule," the position of Saint Mary's editor at Scholastic magazine has been eliminated, said the magazine's editor-in-chief, Jim Basile.

"We had to change our production system over break. I didn't like the way it was running," Basile said.

Although Saint Mary's students will still take part in the production of the magazine, it was not feasible to "keep both a Notre Dame and Saint Mary's editor covering Scholastic's stories, according to Maher Mounasher, Scholastic's general manager.

"It was inefficient to have two people on stories, there was too much overlap," said Mounasher.

Although her position as Saint Mary's editor no longer exists, former editor Barb Blanchette still handles many of the same editorial duties as well as serving as production manager, Basile said.

"Barb is still in charge of recruiting people from Saint Mary's who can work in business, art and layout," Basile said.

As production manager, Blanchette handles photo assignments and layout of the magazine, while still working to encourage Saint Mary's students to participate, he said.

Because the College does not have an equal number of students at Notre Dame, coverage of Saint Mary's events will become more unified with Notre Dame coverage, according to Mounasher.

"Since we don't have an equal number of subscribers from Saint Mary's and Notre Dame, we can't give equal coverage," said Basile.

"We really don't want to give Saint Mary's tokens coverage," said Mounasher.

Scholastic has gone beyond covering campus events at both schools, and both Mounasher and Basile consider it to be a "general interest" magazine, said Basile.

Because of this, the magazine covers a wide variety of stories, such as women in education at Notre Dame minority issues at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's and major political events, Basile said.

"We aren't a newspaper, we don't specifically cover Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. We cover wider things, such as politics and medical issues," he added.

The Counseling and Career Development Office, staffed by one full-time and three part-time counselors, is directed by Dr. Mary DePauw. DePauw was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Feigl said rectresses and resident assistants inform the dean of students when a drug offense comes to their attention. That individual is Mary Anne O'Donnell, who was busy with matters relating to Sophomore Parents' Weekend this week and was unavailable for comment.

The Alcohol Education Office is available for students with questions or problems relating to abusive drinking, according to Molly Sullivan, the part-time counselor at the office.

"I am a substance abuse counselor," Sullivan said. She works 10 to 12 hours a week at the office. She has worked there for three years. "I introduce myself as a person available to deal with drug problems."

Sullivan said most of the students who come to her just have questions. "They are referred to me through RAs," she said. However, she said some of the students are counseled for disciplinary reasons.

"We put out a number of publications. But, the people who come are not alcoholics, simply alcoholics," Sullivan said. Sullivan said it would be possible to offer drug counseling through the Alcohol Education Office. "We administered a survey and included questions about drug use. We tried to make it visible that there were other drug problems."

Tylenol precautions already taken on both ND and SMC campuses

By ROB HENNIG

Precautions have been taken on both the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses in lieu of the recent Tylenol scare in the New York area, which prompted health officials to ban Tylenol capsules in Indiana and other states.

Saint Mary's Shatzen Bookstore, a Notre Dame bookstore, removed all Tylenol from its shelves prior to the state banning of capsule sales, said bookstore spokesman Barbara Racine.

"We pulled it as soon as the first story broke out about the death," she said.

According to Brother Conan Moran, the Hammes Notre Dame bookstore manager, the bookstore did not stock Tylenol in any form before the incident. He said he does not intend to stock Tylenol in the immediate future.

The Student Health Center at Notre Dame also does not stock Tylenol.

"We've never carried Tylenol," said Carol Seager, director of the center. She added, however, "If someone comes in and particularly requests Tylenol, we can get it for them."

Gloria Chethminski, director of the Saint Mary's health service, said the service never has carried Extra Strength Tylenol, but continues to stock Regular Strength Tylenol. She said the health service doctors have not asked that other forms of Tylenol be removed at this time.

Anyone with Extra Strength Tylenol capsules should return them to the pharmacy where they were purchased, Chethminski said.

Jim Gosher of Broadmoor Drugs in South Bend said the pharmacy there is exchanging capsules for caplets.

Gosher added there is a toll-free number set up by Tylenol manufacturer Johnson and Johnson for anyone with questions. The number is (800) 237-9800.

JoAnn Widerquist, assistant professor of nursing at Saint Mary's, said the Tylenol scare poses potential problems for community health.

"If people in general can't trust the packaging, that brings all medicine into question," she said.

She added, however, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's probably won't be affected in any direct way. Most people are not abnormally affected by the incident, according to Sheridan McCabe, associate professor of psychology at Notre Dame. "Some people don't think about it, others don't buy Tylenol anymore," he said.

William Tageson, associate professor of psychology at Notre Dame, said a copycat effect takes place when someone imitates the actions of others. "Sometimes the people who think it's okay to do this type of activity (by sensationalizing the news)," he added.

"Somebody who is really paranoid and angry at the company (Johnson and Johnson) could be the culprit," Tageson said. It might be somebody who was fired or had another grievance against the company, he said.

Tageson indicated the motive would be "getting revenge upon the company." He included not just the manufacturer, Johnson and Johnson, but also distributors or warehouses as the potential victims intended by the culprit. "I'm sure that they somehow justify it to themselves," Tageson said.

ND worker wins $3 million lottery

By CLIFF STEVENS

Krauser said he purchased the winning ticket at Way-Low Grocery in Michigan on U.S. 31. "I played every week when I got up that way. I've always played the same numbers," he said.

Krauser, 61, said he will officially retire in April after 38 years of service at the Notre Dame power plant. "Until then I will be on vacation," he said.

The money will be put in a trust fund for his two children, a daughter who graduated from Notre Dame in 1982 and a married son, he said. "There won't be a new house (or car) anytime soon," he said.

Krauser said he has gotten over the initial excitement. "Not much has changed. I can retire earlier, outside of that not much is different," he said.

After validating his winning ticket, he received the first of 20 $127,599 annual payments.

And he will continue to play the lottery. "I wouldn't make a special trip though," he added.

"I enjoyed my job at Notre Dame. If I hadn't I wish I would have been fired or quit," Krauser said.
Becker, Scheuermann selected for top Observer posts in 1986-87

Kevin Becker, a sophomore Program of Liberal Studies and computer applications major, has been named managing editor of The Observer, and Eric Scheuermann, a junior accounting major, has been named business manager.

A native of New Orleans, Becker joined the newspaper at the beginning of his freshman year by working in the production department.

In March of his freshman year, Becker was promoted to assistant Viewpoint editor. He has served as a regular Viewpoint columnist since arriving at The Observer.

We are serious candidates," said Don Montanaro, of the Mike Swieck - Don Montanaro ticket.

"As for the most pressing issue facing students, Swieck said, "We wonder sometimes - would a true Hungarian eat Hungarian Noodle Bake?"

"We propose continuous restructuring of student government," said Swieck. "The administration can borrow our crayons whenever they want to (referring to their campaign posters)."

Looking into the possibility of fraternities, sororities and coed dorms are three goals mentioned by the Mike Torkelson-John Kromer ticket. "Just about any other university in the country has a social life," said Torkelson, "not just on campus, but off." Scheuermann, a resident of Stowe, Vt., has worked at The Observer since his freshman year.

"I fully expect that progress to continue," Becker said.

"Our goal is to install a team concept in our staff, to promote a united effort in serving the community, and to open our organization to more students," Becker concluded.

"We want to spend our time rebuilding student life instead of student government," he continued. In their "quest to return student government to students," Torkelson said he and Kromer are "facing" to "show our solidarity with the student body."

"Our first priority is to place the office in a much better position," Scheuermann said.

"We want not only to have the best newspaper at the University of Notre Dame, but the best newspaper in the country at the lowest cost," Scheuermann said.

Becker and Scheuermann will assume their new positions April 1, 1986.

Memorial a place to reflect on costs of war

Father Robert Griffin
Letters to a Lonely God

Catholic pacifists are a rare breed who should indeed, as the pacifists, be called the children of God. The Church has a place for them, and one shouldn't mind if they drift onto the Notre Dame campus with their splendid prophetic visions. In the meantime, the Church has a place for peace - its name is the children of God. The Church has a place for them, and one shouldn't mind if they drift onto the Notre Dame campus with their splendid prophetic visions. In the meantime, the Church has a place for peace - its name is the children of God.

Dear Lettie,

I hear it denigrated as a waste of life by some, and yet it is sweetly and seemly to die for the cause. The brave and careless off to the altar of war, and my as adventurers and daredevils, my fathers submitting to the will of the God they die for their country, for their peace, not for the vagaries which gobble up countries and nations have their backs to the wall. They end up fighting wars as the fresh.

Yet forty-four years later, at the 12th station, where the Giver of life was delivered up for the sins of the world, I was at work - teaching. Yesterday I was at work - teaching. Yesterday I was at work - teaching.

The war memorial should be an idealism of the pacifists doesn't mean that the fallen heroes had died in vain, unless appeasement of the bloodlust of the warmongers in love with death. The heroic tradition prefers to view them as victims offering themselves in sacrifice, giving up their lives so that the nation can live. Any cynic will tell you that there's no such thing as a good war or a bad peace.

All this is ancient history, almost. Yet memories of the sufferings brought by Vietnam stay fresh.

The new war memorial on the fieldhouse will serve as a reminder of the multitude of choices that lie ahead in the world, and how to adjust his crown, and put Isaac to the sword is sometimes seen as doomed to failure as a law in their natures advising them to fight. Now it's this generation's had its war.

Elie Wiesel also saw God involved in the sufferings caused by the Nazi atrocities: "The SS buried two men and a boy before the assembled inhabitants of the camp. The men died quickly, but the death struggle of the boy lasted half an hour. "Where is God? Where is he?" a man behind me asked. As the boy, after a long time, was still in agony on the rope, I heard the man cry again, "Where is God? Where is he?"

On the far side of St. Joseph's Lake stands Calvary, the 12th station depicting Christ hung on the cross of the Cross. In Him, through Him, with Him, God enters the darkness of being and dying, in spiritual and physical solidarity with the centuries of the world's crucifixion. In the terrible decades of the modern age, filled with unprecedented horrors, God as a sufferer has gone before us to the heart of darkness. Raw kids have bit down on foxholes and beaches, and Christ's grace has been there waiting for them. Notre Dame's equivalent of the Wailing Wall will remind us that Kilroy ar-ived at the 12th station, where the Terrors gathered the millions of victims of war, the atrocities, and famine; and Kilroy was one on our own.

The war memorial should be an awesome and holy place, where veterans gather as witnesses for something as simple and old-fashioned as patriotism. Fifteen years ago, as students wrestled over the heartbreak of Vietnam, I noticed that the ROTC candidates were wrestling also. All those fight- turned concussions were searching for a view of the truth they could live with. The graces of idealism were evenly distributed among the pacifists and the cadets who got classed with the "baby-burrers". It's the same way now. Some upstaging goes on among those trying to dismiss Stonehenge with contempt. The purpose of the memorial is to remind the campus of the classmatess going before who became heroes. It seems shabbily and second-rate not to feel pride and gratitude to the dead who were faithful to the call of duty, which told them they had to help the country against its enemies. Because of technical difficulties, this week's episode of "The Gipper's Ghost" does not appear in today's paper. The series will resume next Friday.

Sophomore Literary Festivale brings eight authors to campus

assistant features editor

A ll rising campus authors watch with much interest for the Sophomore Literary Festival begins Saturday with a chance to hear and meet eight established literary figures in a week-long series of lectures and workshops. The festival opens with an appearance by modern poet Alan Ginsberg, whose writing was a direct inspiration for the Beat literary movement in the 40's. "Allen Ginsberg is probably the most well-known of all the speakers this year," said Peters, festival chairman, said. Peters said also that Ginsberg's appearance Saturday would be his third at Notre Dame.

Ginsberg first became known in 1949 with the publication of "Howl and Other Poems," a long-line poem styled in the manner of Walt Whitman which became an embodiment of the Beat movement. The Beat, more popularly known as the Beatniks, was a group of poets and novelists such as Jack Kerouac, author of "On the Road," who wrote in the language of the streets about previously unmentionable topics. Poets Gregory Corso, Michael McClure and Gary Snyder were other prominent members of the movement.

Ginsberg, who works as a book reviewer, a market researcher and among other awards Cormier has won are the top prize for news writing for the Associated Press in 1979. Among the awards Segal has received are the Guggenheim Fellowship in 1976. Sukenick is the current editor of Sulfur and comparative literature at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Eshleman has published the original works of Ginsberg and comparative literature at the University of California at Los Angeles. He has received a Fulbright Fellowship in 1976. Some of his most popular works include "Up," "Out. "986," "Long Talking Bad Conditions Blues" and "The Death of the Novel and Other Stories.

Sukenick is presently an English professor at the University of Colorado, Boulder. Segal, a writer of prose, poetry and children's literature, was born in Vienna, Austria, in 1928. She holds a bachelor of arts degree from Brandeis University, a master of arts degree from Stanford, University in 1960, a Ph.D. from Stanford in 1965. Also is the author of "The Gourd Dancer" and "The Way to Ranny Mountain." Oliver was born in Maple Heights, Ohio, in 1935. She worked for some time as a secretary to the sister of poet Edna St. Vincent Millay. In 1972 she served as chairman of the writing department of the Fine Arts Work Center, the same organization with which Dugan is currently associated.

Other Poems," Other Poems, which frequently deal with life in all its aspects from a psychological and spiritual viewpoint, have been published in magazines such as the New Yorker, Atlantic and Harper's Magazine.

The festival's closing speaker is Robert Cormier, a native of Leominster, Mass., who has worked as both a reporter and free-lance writer in addition to his occupation as a novelist.

Cormier won the American Library Association Award for books for young adults in 1974 and is characterized by many critics as an author whose best work is directed toward young adults. Cormier's novel includes "The Chocolate War," "The First Death," "Beyond the Chocolate War.

After a successful run of the "The Chocolate War," "I Am the Cheese," "After the First Death," "Beyond the Chocolate War," among other awards Cormier has won are the New York Times Outstanding Book of the Year Award in 1974, 1977 and 1979. This year's guests were chosen by federal economic officers, each of whom made suggestions and considered suggestions from faculty advisors Connie Mahler and John Marshman. To see FESTIVAL. page 2

Bankrupt millionaire pedals to new career

P.A. CIMINO

What happens when a millionaire stock trader loses everything in one fell swoop during an unforseeable day at the market? He picks himself up and starts again, right? Not so for Jack Casey; he opts for the more simple world of a bicycle messenger. With this slightly unorthodox catch, Columbia Pictures hopes to utilize its newest vehicle, "Quicksilver," to win a few races at the box office.

"Quicksilver" is the story of Casey's physical and psychological defeat and his subsequent attempt to come to grips with his possible futures. Set in an unaquainted city, footage was filmed in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco to create a non-specific urban setting, the story begins with Casey (Kevin Bacon of "Footloose" and "Diner" fame) on the floor of a stock exchange using his magic touch in an attempt at influencing options trading through a non-traditional maneuver. His play backfires terribly and leaves him bankrupt. At the same time his parents' savings are irretrievably lost. This fact sets up a touching scene where Casey confronts his father with the dismaying news and ultimately forces upon him the realization that he has literally been playing with fire for the last three years.

Devastated and dejected, he walks the city streets (seemingly for days) until he spies a used bicycle in a thrift shop and decides to become a messenger. What follows is an interesting view of the relationship between the internal workings of man's mind and the external influences of his surrounding environment.

Put simply, "Quicksilver" is a good film. It is well-paced, enthusiastic, entertaining and uplifting. Still it does have some flaws. The opening is disjointed and filled with scenes lacking dialogue and explanation. The audience is left to surmise for itself what is going on. This lack of explanatory background information continues throughout the film to the extent that various relationships come and go with no enlightening facts other than some facial expressions. These expressions, while strongly portrayed, are visibly inadequate and could greatly be enhanced with some dialogue. The ending is also a little strange and the whole plot has the effect of leaving the moviegoer hungry for something more.

On the other hand, the acting is worthy of merit. Bacon is at his usual best and convincingly entertaining. He has handled troubled characters excellently in the past and continues this convention. He also engages in numerous frames of exciting cycling which he trained for extensively and wheeled through himself.

Bacon is joined in the film by Jami Gertz (from the short-lived TV show "Square Pegs") and Paul Rodriguez (from the similary transitory "a.k.a. Pa-loho"). Forget Gertz. Her part is not worth a fire pitche and her acting belongs in a seldom-watched sitcom. Rodriguez, in contrast, is marvelous as a latin messenger with his feet on the ground and his head in the clouds. His character is charming and serious. Rodriguez is also able to add a spark of comedy in the mix which helps him mold a figure which brings Casey back in touch with the facts of reality.

On the whole, "Quicksilver" is high geared entertainment and certainly worth a trial run. And if nothing else, it can serve as a fine alternative to spinning one's wheels uselessly in neutral on a boring evening.

Quick Silver

Quicksilver is the story of Casey's physical and psychological defeat and his subsequent attempt to come to grips with his possible futures. Set in an unaquainted city, footage was filmed in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco to create a non-specific urban setting, the story begins with Casey (Kevin Bacon of "Footloose" and "Diner" fame) on the floor of a stock exchange using his magic touch in an attempt at influencing options trading through a non-traditional maneuver. His play backfires terribly and leaves him bankrupt. At the same time his parents' savings are irretrievably lost. This fact sets up a touching scene where Casey confronts his father with the dismaying news and ultimately forces upon him the realization that he has literally been playing with fire for the last three years.

Devastated and dejected, he walks the city streets (seemingly for days) until he spies a used bicycle in a thrift shop and decides to become a messenger. What follows is an interesting view of the relationship between the internal workings of man's mind and the external influences of his surrounding environment.

Put simply, "Quicksilver" is a good film. It is well-paced, enthusiastic, entertaining and uplifting. Still it does have some flaws. The opening is disjointed and filled with scenes lacking dialogue and explanation. The audience is left to surmise for itself what is going on. This lack of explanatory background information continues throughout the film to the extent that various relationships come and go with no enlightening facts other than some facial expressions. These expressions, while strongly portrayed, are visibly inadequate and could greatly be enhanced with some dialogue. The ending is also a little strange and the whole plot has the effect of leaving the moviegoer hungry for something more.

On the other hand, the acting is worthy of merit. Bacon is at his usual best and convincingly entertaining. He has handled troubled characters excellently in the past and continues this convention. He also engages in numerous frames of exciting cycling which he trained for extensively and wheeled through himself.

Bacon is joined in the film by Jami Gertz (from the short-lived TV show "Square Pegs") and Paul Rodriguez (from the similary transitory "a.k.a. Pa-loho"). Forget Gertz. Her part is not worth a fire pitche and her acting belongs in a seldom-watched sitcom. Rodriguez, in contrast, is marvelous as a latin messenger with his feet on the ground and his head in the clouds. His character is charming and serious. Rodriguez is also able to add a spark of comedy in the mix which helps him mold a figure which brings Casey back in touch with the facts of reality.

On the whole, "Quicksilver" is high geared entertainment and certainly worth a trial run. And if nothing else, it can serve as a fine alternative to spinning one's wheels uselessly in neutral on a boring evening.
Cacophonous production leaves Shakespeare in a real tempest

FRAN NORTON features writer

Last night in Washington Hall, director Mark Piklinik presented his rendition of Shakespeare’s “The Tempest.” Above the title should have been placed the phrase “Based Loosely Upon.” One should not alter Shakespeare to this degree. Does one add a few more brahminckes to the “Mona Lisa?” Attach arms to the “Venus de Milo?” Add a few more curves to Marilyn Monroe?” No. To borrow a phrase: “If it ain’t broke, don’t fix it.”

As written, “The Tempest” explores the thoughts and actions of a group of castaways. There are three main subplots, all of which are controlled by Prospero, the exiled Duke of Milan. He is a very wise man, whose devotion to knowledge has harnessed the forces of nature. Last night, he seemed more of a weak, ranting despot. The first major subplot concerns a pair of lovers, Miranda and Ferdinand. She is the daughter of Prospero, and has been raised on the island; he is the son of the king of Naples. Last night their romance suffered from over-direction.

The second subplot deals with the plotting of two lords to seize con­ control of power. The third subplot mimics the tragic action of the second, substituting a fool and drunken butler for the devious lords. These suffered from miscasting and extraneous cheap laughs that were added by the director.

In Shakespeare, it is the language of the play that captivates and carries the audience. In this production, that language was ignored, implying that audience was too igorant to appreciate it. Instead being allowed to present itself, the play was contorted into a melange of differing styls that all oppose each other.

Even the first scene, a storm at sea, appears to be more of a Felliniesque nightmare. At times I was unsure as to whether I was wat­ ting “Godspell,” “Brigadoon,” or “The Gong Show.” Variations of style can be done with Shakespeare, the film “Forbidden Planet” and direct­ dor Peter Brooks have demonstrated this. However, this production proved more of a sideshow than “The Tempest.”

Vote for divestment

The battle lines are drawn. The Notre Dame administration is sticking by its conviction that getting rid of University investments in companies that do business in South Africa will hurt more than help that blacks that are victims of the oppressive apartheid policies of that country's government.

On March 1, 1986, the Anti-Apartheid Network, among others, called for Notre Dame to live up to its moral commitment as one of the leading voices in Catholic America by divesting.

Tuesday's question goes to the students. On the ballot next week, along side the student body president and class officers election, will be a referendum on whether the University should or should not divest its South African investments.

Students are being asked their opinion on this complicated issue. Is it better for the University to continue holding investments in South African companies in order that effective social change can be made from the inside, as Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, contends? Or would it be better to make a statement against the racist policies of that country by getting out?

Not an easy question.

The Observer believes the constructive engagement policy embraced by Notre Dame and South African investments policy does not work. Contrary to what Hesburgh and the Board of Trustees claim, it is not helping the welfare of the black workers in that country. Indeed, it is adding to an unjust system based on the theory of racial superiority.

Last fall, the Anti-Apartheid Network called for the University to divest if the South African government had not taken steps to end the apartheid system by Feb. 1, 1986. That deadline has passed. With it perished the hopes of millions of oppressed blacks, as did an opportunity for the University to live up to the ideals it espouses. It's no longer a moral issue. It's a travesty.

Students should support the divestment referendum. If the University's students call for divestment, the University will have to listen. Universities and colleges across the country will listen, as will state legislatures, city governments and private businesses.

The world will know that the students of the most visible Catholic university in the United States want social justice.

Vote yes to divest.

Dear Editor:

In the past day I have been asked by many people who I support in the current election. Many of these are my friends and feelings about the election, but I must add that I do not endorse any particular candidate. My feelings are strong in the sense that I want it to be a fair election, and that I want the best person to win. As well, I would like to see students take these candidates very seriously. There is a quite a range of candidates, and very different options as to the direction student government will take. Many of the candidates would make an excellent leader, but all are very different.

While the posters on the walls and the platforms may make the candidates seem very similar, there is a great opportunity for the students to view each candidate as an individual and to see what type of person they are. This is also an opportunity for the candidates to participate in a campus-wide debate in the library auditorium. I encourage all students to attend and ask the candidates tough questions. The type of leadership chosen can make a very real difference at Notre Dame and you can as well by for the best candidate to the top of the pile.

This election is not just one for those who have chosen to seek office, but for you, the typical student. The student body president represents the students in the Campus Life Council, to the administration and to the Board of Trustees. These avenues of student input are serious and you should be serious about who you send. Take the time to find out about all the candidates and then make the choice for the best person. It will be then that you can personally say: I put that person there, and I answer to it.

For all the seniors, don't forget to vote. For the candidates, good luck! And for everyone, remember the debate Sunday.

Bill Healy

no easy solutions

It is about time Father Hesburgh stopped comparing the present conditions in South Africa with the American situation during the civil rights movement. The comparison is unfair both ways.

While the posters on the walls and the group with the most to lose with the South African blacks than in the United States. In other words, the South African black today sees his or her situation as more intensely hopeless, particularly the youth.

As Hesburgh himself says, the violence is full of desperation and despair. The chosen method of execution for black south Africans black in the 1960s saw drastic measures as the only way out. Many South African blacks do.

If Hesburgh wishes to make a comparison, maybe the rhetoric of the Boer regime and the civil rights leaders seems similar, if ironic as it sounds.

This comparison consists of terms like "minority rights," "joint responsibility," "mutual respect," and "cooperation and development." These are the standards now used by the South African government and the liberal black leaders.

If South Africa administration consistently backs away from divestment, and Hesburgh uses his experience in the U.S. civil rights movement to show similarities (which I hope you have surmised by now, hardly exist), then it is drawing conclusions with our own nation's history.

Administration should divest from South Africa right now

The issue is not whether our divestment will bring the white government to its knees. It would be nice, but it is absurd to think that our divestment will end Afrikaner domination of the peoples of South Africa.

We should divest because it is the right thing to do.

First of all, divestment does a symbolic good for the black workers in South Africa. This is surely consistent with the Notre Dame administration's position on civil rights in the past as well such as abortion and the arms race, the University has not only taken a stand, but has also acted in a way more powerful than just press releases and speeches.

We cannot possibly affect change that the administration claims that Western business in South Africa is not possible. Real reform is not happening. Hesburgh claims that we lose whatever power we have when we divest. The truth is that who we power we have is imaginary, and to believe that slow reform through the white government is a pipe dream. What is important is who controls much of the business in South Africa, which has been controlled by Afrikaners.

The civil service in South Africa is controlled by Afrikaners. Instead, we question the Afrikaners' business community is becoming vocally active in the struggle to dismantle apartheid, and the group with the most to lose with the destruction of white power is the Afrikaners, not the English-speaking whites. Some black leaders even maintain that business would be better under "one man, one vote."

So further divestment would have the good effect of driving a deeper wedge between the Afrikaners who control the civil service and business community and the group with the most to lose with the destruction of white power.

The Afrikaners would lose everything that they have, and we should divest because it is the right thing to do.

On March 3, 1986, the correct reaction to the University. Peter Waltzke is right when he says that we should divest because we need to stop all "moral posturing." It is time to act.

Wrestling team travels to Missouri to compete in Western Regionals

By ED JORDANICH
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame wrestling team is in Springfield, Mo., today and tomorrow to compete in the NCAA Western Regionals. The 17-team tournament will determine the individuals who will advance to the NCAA Championships in Iowa City, Iowa March 10-11.

According to Irish coach Fran McCann, his team's field is dominated by four conference champions: Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan State. McCann knows the importance of this meet, especially for the freshmen.

"Seedling will certainly be a crucial factor," he says. "Our young people will be nervous and hopefully they won't all be thrown to the dogs right away. We've handled pressure really well the past year and everyone is enthusiastic and ready to wrestle."

"We wrestled pretty well last weekend and we're in the best shape of the season both mentally and physically. Our program is geared to face tough teams during the season and to try to get people into the NCAA finals. I'm very pleased with what we've accomplished so far. Now we can see our hard work and sacrifice pay off."

Duroso's 36-5 record is tops for the Irish and the freshman should be in the 134-pound regional final Saturday. Two other freshmen, Boyd (18-6) and Wagoner (17-11), are likely to do well.

The Irish lineup this weekend will be the same as it has been the last month of the season. That includes 118-pound Carl Hildinger (16-10), 126-pound Carlin (16-8), 150-pound Ron Wineski (10-15) and 183-pound Lewis (13-11), 167-pound and heavyweight Spero Karas (9-12).

Women's interhall begins playoffs

As the women's interhall basketball season winds down, Breen-Phillips, Walsh, Farley and Lewis "A" all have clinched a spot in the playoffs.

With only one game to go, Breen-Phillips boasts a perfect 9-0 record. Haunted 7-2, Loyola will have a chance to blemish Breen-Phillips' season with a win in a meaningless game Sunday.

Loyola last played Wednesday against Badin. Badin came out on top, 39-29. At the half, however, Loyola only trailed by one. Captain Maureen Connolly led all scorers with 21 points. A Notre Dame wrestler (right) strives to gain the North Dakota HOCKEY point against DePaul and Marquette tomorrow at 1 p.m. in Stepan.

With only three returning champions in the Bengals this year and some strong contenders emerging from the Novice tournament held last fall, the struggle to decide who will receive championship jackets this year should be a wide-open one.

"The great thing about the Bengals is that everyone that participates has a shot at the title," says Kelly. "Of course, there are always a few top fighters to keep your eyes on. Some of these fighters to keep an eye on are veterans of last year's bouts and would like nothing better than to avoid this one again.

The 135-pound division features a former champion, Anthony Bonacci, and a semi-finalist from last year, Edward "Fast Eddie" Borreman, while the 145-pound division contains a Novice champion, Pat "Joe Man" Loughran and another semi-finalist from last year, Thom "The Truth" and "Lightning" Newell.

Other top returners include: 125-pound senior Patrick McCormick; Frederick "Earth Dog" Ahlholm, a 174-pound junior; 154-pound junior Ted "The Truth" Gradel; and John "The Captain" Uhl, a 194-pound heavyweight.

With the number and quality of the fighters this year, both in the ring and in fundraising, the Bengals this year could prove to be the most successful to date.

"Being the president of the club, it has been a challenge to me to make this tournament as good and as large as I could," says Kelly. "We've sold more adds this year, and we've had more boxes come out than ever before.

In order to accomplish this, the club must surpass the $15,000 that was raised and the 8,500 fans that saw the Bouts last year. 47 bouts are scheduled for Sunday night at 6 p.m. at Stepan, with the semis and finals being held at 7:30 p.m. on the nights of March 5 and 7, also at Stepan. A three-night pass may be purchased for four dollars at either of the dining halls, and single tickets may be bought for three dollars at the door.

MBA student leads by example

Reilly finds success at Notre Dame

By KEVIN HERBERT
Sports Writer

"Without a doubt, Tim Reilly is a real fine success story. In my seven­teen years here, his story ranks in the top two or three," comments Notre Dame hockey coach Charlie "Lefty" Smith.

Reilly is a 5'10 right winger from Melrose, Mass. He is currently enrolled in the concentrated MBA program at Notre Dame.

"The low point of my years here was the day the official announce­ment was made that hockey would be a club," says Reilly.

The club year did not take any of his eligibility, so Reilly has been unable to play hockey for Notre Dame as a graduate student. However, he has had to pay for this year out of his own pocket, as his hockey scholarship expired at the end of his senior year.

"When Reilly was a freshman, all he wanted to do was play hockey, and not much else," says Smith. "He had to be disciplined and with each year he has matured both on the ice and in the classroom. He has handled new pressures extremely well.

"He is a great competitor and a very effective leader by example. Notre Dame and its environment have been a real asset to him."

"The team has leaned on him for experience and leadership in dif­ferent situations," continues Smith. "He possesses excellent qualities. The way he has been able to over­come a bad 'break' and other adver­sities is very admirable."

Last season, Reilly was the sec­ond leading scorer for the Irish as he notched 22 goals and 39 assists for 61 points in 28 games.

"The high point of my Notre Dame hockey career was the win­ning of the Great Lakes Tournament my freshman year," says Reilly.

"I am glad that I could play this year. This season, for the first time, we made some trips east. This has given me the opportunity to play in from of some of my hometown friends."

"Hockey has helped me to adjust to the tougher curriculum here in the MBA program also.

"However, it has been difficult for me to keep hockey in the same perspective as before because the classes are so much tougher." Reilly looks back on his years at Notre Dame in a positive light.

"My goals as an incoming freshman were to get a degree and to improve my hockey skills. I believe I made it to the point where I would have an opportu­nity to move on to the pros," he says.

"Now, with it almost behind me, I am very happy not only to have received a degree, but to have gone one step further with the MBA."

"Hockeywise, there still is some room for improvement. All in all, however, I am happy with what I have and am grateful to the school for what it has given me," said Reil­ly.

Track team returns home for meet

Special to The Observer
The Notre Dame track team returns home this weekend after a three-week hiatus, closing the home portion of its 1986 schedule with a three-way meet against DePaul and Marquette tomorrow at 1 p.m. in the ACC.

"We should do well," says Irish head coach Joe Price. "This meet will give an opportunity for some people in some different events and it will give some guys an opportunity for some wins.

"They're (DePaul and Mar­quette) going to have some good distance runners. But we should do well, and we'll be fine in the long and triple jumps."

One of the strength of the Marquette squad is who familiar to Notre Dame. Keith Hanson, may not be part of the strong corps of distance runners. Plane feels that last fall's national Catholic champion may have the weekend off to prepare for the upcoming ECAC and NCAA championships.

"Marquette will have some of their other top people here," says Price. "They have a hurdler named Pat Weas and a distance runner, Tony Robinson, who will run well."

Notre Dame's outstanding two­mile relay team will compete after the NCAA cham­pionships last Saturday in a meet at Boston College. The team, com­prising of John McNellis, Jeff Van Wie, Robert Windt, and Rob Tyler, clocked in at 7:24:84.

"To the best of my knowledge," says Price, "that is the best time in the nation."

Fencers strive to remain unbeaten at Great Lakes Championships

By FRANK HUEMMER
Sports Writer

When the Irish men's and women's fencing teams travel to Appleton, Wis., this weekend for the Great Lakes Championships, it will mark another step in Notre Dame's quest for a national championship. Both teams currently stand undefeated as the men have compiled a 26-0 record and the women a perfect 23-0 mark.

The Great Lakes Championships are a regional tournament that originated in 1967 and is used to seed teams in the NCAA. It places all the schools not affiliated with the Big Ten in direct competition.

Teams from Tri-State, Eastern Michigan, Michigan-Dearborn, University of Detroit, University of Chicago, Lawrence University, Carleton, Case-Western Reserve, and Cleveland State will all be on hand this weekend. However, none of these teams is expected to present quite as much of a challenge as Wayne State.

"We should be favored to win the Great Lakes Championships based on our win-loss record against common opponents," says Notre Dame men's coach Mike DeCicco. "However, Wayne State will be tough because all three of their fencers in each weapon match up very closely to our fencers."

The qualifiers from Saturday's Great Lakes will compete Sunday in the Midwest Qualifier. Only two members from each team in the three weapons are allowed to enter the Midwest Tournament. Furthermore, five Big Ten schools, Wisconsin, Illinois, Northwestern, Michigan State, and Ohio State will send their best fencers to this qualifier. All these fencers will compete, with the top eight epees, seven foils, and six sabers advancing to the NCAA competition.

The men's fencing team sends nine fencers, three in each weapon, to compete in the Championships.

In the foil competition seniors Mike Van der Velden and Charles Hugg-Crathard and sophomore Yehuda Kovacov should provide the Irish team with a great deal of strength. In the saber the Irish will go with the experience of seniors Tony Consoli, Don Johnson, and John Edwards. DeCicco thinks the contribution of the seniors has been a major reason for this year's success.

"We are fortunate to have probably the finest senior group of fencers since 1945," he says. "We have never had seniors contribute so much to our team effort. The 20 seniors work extremely well together and are a real close knit bunch of guys."

In epee, seniors Mike Costigan, Christian Sherpe and junior John Haugh will compete.

"In order to have a chance at winning the NCAA's we must come out of the Midwest Qualifier with the maximum of qualifiers," says DeCicco. "Therefore, we must qualify people, two in each weapon, and if that happens we have a good shot at winning the NCAA's."

The women's team, under head coach Yves Auriol, will also be attempting to maintain its unblemished record in Saturday's Great Lakes and Midwest Qualifier.

When the Irish men's and women's fencing still exists and the title has been won, the way they are rolling toward it is one of the ways in which this year's team has been successful.

"We are so together now that they are believing in their ability as a team and are really training hard."

"The women might be a year away from being considered a NCAA's challenge, because of experience. However, they are so together now that they are believing in their ability as a team and are really training hard."

The possibility of an NCAA title exists and the action this weekend will be an important step in accomplishing this feat.

FLOC boycott ends nationally

The Campbell Soup Company is pleased to report that the eight-year boycott of Campbell Soup products by the Farm Labor Organizing Committee (FLOC), of which Notre Dame has been a part, is over.

It ended February 19 when FLOC, the Tomato Growers Association and Campbell signed agreements which were the result of union bargaining between the FLOC and Ohio tomato farmers who sell to Campbell. Additionally, collective bargaining agreements have been signed by cucumber farmers, FLOC and Viscic Foods, a Campbell subsidiary.

Because of these contracts, the Dunlop Commission, the impartial body set up by the National Council of Churches to oversee this dispute, announced the suspension of the FLOC-imposed boycott nationally.

Historically, the boycott centered on a migrant labor dispute in Ohio. FLOC wanted to start a union of migrant labor there. Largely unsuccessful in dealing directly with the farmers who grow the tomatoes, FLOC opted for a boycott of a major area processor hoping to pressure the company into collective bargaining.

Throughout this controversy, Campbell Soup has maintained that it is not opposed to unionization efforts, but to the way in which FLOC had chosen to address the issue.

In May of 1985, Campbell and FLOC signed an understanding which paved the way for binding elections on tomato farms selling to Campbell. This gave the migrants the right to elect union representation if they so chose.

Since the early 1950's the Campbell Soup Company has had a formal policy of endorsing and supporting organizations and agencies whose focus was to provide better working and living conditions for minorities and women in this country.

In keeping with that policy, Campbell Soup developed a strong program of social justice for migrants, which it has expanded over the past five years. That program has included free day care for migrant farmworkers' children, health care insurance, upgraded housing on farms contracting to Campbell, and the strongest pesticide use restrictions in the state of Ohio.

Campbell will continue its focus on support for migrants, as well as for other minority groups, to meet the challenge and the promise of America — the promise of opportunity, the promise of hope.

For more complete information on the settlement of the Campbell Soup boycott, or on Campbell programming for migrant release write: Campbell Cares, Box 80K, Camden, NJ 08057.
Bengal Bouts begin Sunday night with largest field ever competing

By SCOTT INGLIS
Sports Writer

For the past 56 years, Notre Dame has turned to boxing, situps, jumping rope and shuggling in the ring with the hopes of becoming a college boxing champ. That long and glorious tradition continues this weekend at Stepan Center. With a record number of boxers from the Notre Dame Boxing Club will step into the ring Sunday night to resume the annual event.

"This is the largest Bengal Bouts turnout in the history of the program," says club president and former Bengal champion, Ed Kelly. "The boxers who are in this event are phenomenal, and we are only six boxers shy of doubling the number we had back in 1978." The Bengals, founded all those years ago by Notre Dame alumnus Dominic (D.J.) Napolitano, represent, of course, more than just a boxing tournament. They represent a way of life and a means to a higher goal than just winning.

Irish to face hungry Warrior team

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

The Irish co-captains have both had outstanding careers during their time at Notre Dame. An all-American candidate, Keys has received offers from several of the Irish record book during her four years. Ebben has been a dependable performer for the Irish. Both have been key members of the squad.

Keys sat out the Butler win on Wednesday with a rib injury but did return to the lineup tonight for her home finale. Notre Dame's bench has been a dynamic weapon for the Irish in recent years.

Keys will be back on the court for the final two games. Notre Dame will face Ohio State and Marquette in Milwaukee this weekend.

Sorin blows out Morrissey, advances to championships

By TERRY LYNCH
Sports Writer

Chris Nanni scored 19 points and Rick DiBernardo added 10 last night, as the Sorin interior basketball team advanced to the final round of the double-elimination playoffs with a 47-29 win against Morrissey. Sorin completely dominated the game from the opening tip, and the team from the Manor seemed to tire quickly in the ACC pit floor. Greg Dingens scored six points in the losing effort for Morrissey.

Sorin was all over the court during the game, as the Sorin point guard hit virtually all of his outside shots, went 7-of-7 from the free-throw line and was the key player in the first half on account of a tight man-to-man defense and a big edge as they headed into tournament play.

"For us, these games down the stretch are very important," said Ebben. "We want to go into the NCAA tournament with a certain amount of momentum." Ebben and Keys will be back on the court for the final two games. Notre Dame will face Ohio State and Marquette in Milwaukee this weekend.

Bisons visit ACC tonight

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

But although defeated, lefty Smith's Notre Dame hockey team takes the ice for two games with the Bisons of North Dakota State this weekend at the ACC hockey rink.

The games, Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m., will be played at the ACC hockey rink. The Irish have already clinched the conference crown, and they are looking to wrap things up.

"I hope we can fall back on the idea that when you're hurt, you push a little harder," said Smith. "The guys who play are going to have to go at it 110 percent for us to be effective. We think that (grad student) Brent Chapman, (sophomore) Mark Anquillare, and (senior co-captain) Bob Thebeau will be back from last weekend's injuries and will be ready to contribute in a big way this weekend." North Dakota State was 24-10 last year and Smith realizes that the Bison's return will be an important one.

"It's going to be a big game for us," Smith commented. "Looking at who they've played and beaten in the last two years, I'd say we'll be dealing with a fine team. They've really decided to build their hockey program."
