Mayor calls for increased patrols to monitor conduct of partygoers

By FRANK LIPO
Executive New Editor

The South Bend Police Department is revising its patrolling schedule in the Northeast Neighborhood, in a move designed to control a wave of recent student parties which have disturbed area residents, according to South Bend Mayor Roger Parent.

The increased patrols come in the wake of complaints by area residents against the noise level generated by the parties this spring and the behavior of some partygoers, Parent said yesterday at a news conference in front of a house at 601 E. Corby Blvd.

The house is rented by Notre Dame students and was the scene of the arrest of three Notre Dame students last Thursday and Saturday nights during parties given by the occupants.

Parent also distributed a petition to residents of the neighborhood, protesting what they say are "increasing problems caused by Notre Dame student population abusing and misusing private property throughout the neighborhood."

Parent said that while the recent stoppage of the parties was the result of police action, other South Bend residents who have been disturbed have also been subject to police action.

"We certainly don't want to come out here and arrest them (partygoers), but if we have to we will," he said.

Uniformed officers on foot patrols, uniformed officers in cars, and undercover plainclothes officers will be used to enforce city noise regulations and to monitor the conduct of partygoers, according to Captain Patrick Cordell, head of the South Bend Police Department's East Sector, who was also in attendance at the press conference.

Parties will be monitored with notes made at the time, said Cordell. If the volume of a particular party is louder than 51 decibels, the maximum allowed after 10 p.m. under a local noise ordinance, officers of the residents will be written citations and taken to court, said Cordell.

"These special patrols also will be instructed to arrest anyone who is being loud at parties, who is publicly indecent or acting in a disorderly fashion, Cordell said.

Increased police patrols will not interfere with the normal work shifts, said Cordell. Parent said money is budgeted each year for special programs like this.

"Student parties are always a problem in the spring and fall, according to Parent. But this spring there is an additional problem for the police, he said. Police officers have been verbally abused and otherwise attacked by students while attempting to break up parties, he said.

"We certainly don't want to come out here and arrest them (partygoers), but if we have to we will," said Cordell.

South Bend city attorney Eugenia Schwartz, who was also at the press conference, said that "it's the past we've had complete cooperation and we've had no issues," she said.

"We haven't had that kind of response and respectful attitude from the folks who have been issued the citations this year," she said.

Schwartz said there were parties broken up at six different addresses last weekend, each with more than 100 students in attendance.

"At this particular address (601 E. Corby), there were two parties that had to be broken up and two separate noise citations issued," she said.

The house at 601 E. Corby was also the site of a student being bitten numerous times by a police dog Thursday night.

He said police officers Kevan Morgan, saying he is the victim of an unprovoked attack, is considering filing a legal action against the South Bend Police Department.

Cordell said Morgan, who was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct, public intoxication and resisting law enforcement, had assaulted the handler of the dog.

"It's the only way that we would use dogs is if we had more than 200 people," he said.

Buildings renovations, memorial to be completed roughly on time

By JOHN FLORE

Regardless of the original setbacks due to weather conditions, the completion of the War Memorial and the renovations in the Lafortune and the Law School are now more than half way completed, said Director of Physical Plant Don Dedicke.

Dedicke said construction time was lost in November because of heavy rain, and in December because of the extreme cold.

He said all three projects will be finished roughly by the projected times.

"I don't expect either building to be 100 percent complete in September," Dedicke said.

He said the student center and the Law School will be "essentially" completed on schedule.

According to Dedicke, 40 percent of the face brick has been applied to the new wing of Lafortune, and what many consider historic's worst center and the Law School addition is under construction.

Dedicke also said new furniture for the Lafortune addition and food service equipment for the new Huddle have been ordered.

"Once the brick work on the student center is finished, then walls and windows will be installed, he said.

In assessing the war memorial, Dedicke confirmed that the monument was originally scheduled to be finished by commencement, but that black granite, ordered from Italy, has not yet arrived. The granite should be shipped during the week of March 26, he said.

The granite will be used to "pave the horizontal surfaces" around the hamburger, he said.

Dedicke said LaFortune and the Law School are now "exciting" buildings. Both of these buildings are slated for 1987 spring completions, he said.

Student Activities Director Joni Neale described the floor plan of the new Lafortune facilities.

She said the basement will contain a new recreation center, game room, TV lounge and 24-hour laundry. It will also hold three stores.

Radiation spreads as Soviets maintain wall of secrecy

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Up against a wall of Soviet secrecy, Western governments were left Tuesday with a day to pull out of the stricken Ukraine, where a nuclear fire swept across Europe and touched off a storm of world outrage.

The radiation detection levels were dropping at the devastated Chernobyl nuclear power plant, but a Soviet diplomat was quoted as saying the inferno was "just uncontrolled" and U.S. sources in Washington agreed.

In its most detailed casualty report, the Soviet government yesterday said two people were killed in the accident, 197 others were hospitalized. But unofficial sources confirmed reports spoke of higher casualty tolls.

Those reports did not speak of potential long-term casualties. But the London-based Greenpeace environmental group said Tuesday at least 10,000 Soviets would develop cancer over 30 years as a result of what many consider history's worst nuclear disaster.

European health officials reassured the public that radiation levels presented no major danger. But anger built up against the Soviets for maintaining a wall of secrecy even over the deadly nuclear event from the rest of the world until Monday, three days after it happened.

The Soviet Union has an obligation to give its international community a clear picture of what happened and why," Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe said at a West European ministers' meeting in Italy.

His West German counterpart, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, called on Moscow to stop down all nuclear power stations similar to the crippled Chernobyl plant, which uses an unusual graphite-moderation process.

The Soviet government has thrown a wall of official secrecy around what happened last week at Chernobyl, a four-reactor complex 60 miles north of Kiev.

"I am not authorized to tell you anything," a Ukrainian Health Ministry official yesterday, in a typical comment. He was reached by telephone by Moscow.

Later in the day, the official news media carried a 300-word statement by the Soviet Council of Ministers saying remedial measures had reduced the radioactive spillings from the damaged reactor, and the "radiation levels in the area of the atomic power station (had been) lowered."

It said the chain reaction had been shut down and specialists were Mayor's crackdown on partygoers may be a rally for political support

Dan McCullough
Senior Staff Reporter

It's getting harder and harder for a fellow to get a beer around here. Just ask Jeff Morgan.

This past weekend, Morgan, a Notre Dame sophomore, was at a party on Coral Street that was starting to get a little out of hand. The police arrived and tried to break up the little gathering, which had become a big brawl.

Frustrated at the students' restlessness to leave, the cops rounded out the K-9 corps - the mean dogs. One thing led to another, and Morgan ended up with 22 dog bites on his arms, legs and other parts of his body.

Yesterday, South Bend Mayor Roger Parent and police officials claimed the police were using the attack dogs to intimidate the students so they would leave the party more quickly. When you have a couple of hundred people milling around, sometimes it's more effective to scare them off with snarling dogs than with snarling sergeants, they said.

A point well taken.

But Morgan was more than intimidated by the police dogs. He claimed he didn't provoke the attack, that he was an innocent victim. The police claimed he assaulted the officer, or attempted to assault, the officer holding the leash of one of the dogs. A witness says Morgan was waving his arm to show the policeman he was leaving, leading to confusion.

It is virtually impossible to know what happened. As you and I aren't comedians, we can't pass judgment. Sooner or later, a real judge may have to be called in, as Morgan is considering taking legal action against the police.

In a press conference yesterday in front of the hamburger stand where the party and assault took place, Parent said he didn't know there was a police report. He said the police presented reporters with a petition from citizens complaining about noise from partygoers, but said he wasn't impressed.

The neighborhood people have a good point. How would you feel if 200 students were parties drugs long into the night next door to your house while you were trying to sleep? Students should try to understand the complaints, and should be considerate of the neighbors.

And many students do try to keep things under control. But lately, off-campus parties almost invariably become flooded by rowdy bands of mostly underaged students looking for a place to blow off a week of steam. Very often lawns get trampled by partygoers, and the public is left with a mess.

Very often, police will close down one party, follow the groups of students to the next gathering, and then close that one down.

There are a couple of reasons for this vicious system.

First, political policy succeeded in intimidating many students into seeking thrills off-campus. Second, the local bars have suddenly dried up as the image of the Notre Dame student isn't what it used to be. The image of the Notre Dame student is that of rich, spoiled, snobby people who aren't smelling so good, for old Roger.

Parent needs something to garner the support of the South Bend voters; something they can really rally around; a common enemy, as it were. Hmmm, let's see....

Hey! What about Notre Dame students? We are an easy target. The image of the Notre Dame student puts forth in the mind of many South Bend residents, accurate or not, is that of rich, spoiled children reaping the benefits of a first-class education while the hard-working citizens toil for their daily bread.

Parent has the political smarts to capitalize on this hostility, even though the University is currently number one employer in his city. After all, students can vote.

The result is the crackdown on the bars, and the "intimidation" of the attack dogs.

Not to mention a royal pain in the rump for Jeff Morgan.
 visitor who lost a son in an automobile accident several years ago, spoke of the profound sense of empathy he shares with the families who have also lost ties. "The magic of which Kesey spoke, to the "ability to see eyes to heaven" in an act of faith in God's mercy.

Kesey expressed regret at the "spiritual crisis" this nation is experiencing. He called for the use of a nonviolent means of behavior on campus, why should it allow it in our neighborhood?"

Parent said he felt the University was doing all it could about the off-campus party situation. He said he reads the petition.

The campus party situation. He said he reads the petition.

On Saturday night, Gary Hyppe, 22, of Marshall, was arrested for public intoxication and Thomas Sullivan, 14, of Marshall, was arrested for public intoxication, possession of alcohol and littering. Also on Saturday night, Dennis O'Brien, 19, of 172 Dillon, was arrested at Scanlon's Corby address for being in a minor possession of alcohol.

Two students, Hemant Tiwari, 29, of E. Severn St. and Michael O'Hagan, 20, of E. St. Louis Blvd., were delivered citations for violations of the city noise ordinance.

According to President of the Northeast Neighborhood Center, Arthur Quigley, credit as well as blame should be given to students. The area residents generally have a good relationship with students, despite the problems of recent weeks, said Quigley, an associate professor of electrical engineering at Notre Dame.

He said many students help residents through volunteer work. Through crime watch and cooperation between students and year-round residents, the character of life has improved in the Northeast Neighborhood, he added.

Residents of Mexico City flee quake
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY - A major earthquake yesterday sent Mexico City residents fleeing into the streets and rocking four coastal states, creating panic reminiscent of that caused by last September's catastrophic tremor.

But initial reports indicated yesterday's quake and two aftershocks caused no major damage or injuries.

Mexican seismological experts said the quake measured 6.5 on the Richter scale and lasted 65 seconds.

The first floor of the new wing in the student center will be the location of the new, expanded Huddle, Neal said.

The second floor will contain the Student Activities Offices, the minority student lounge, the black student lounge and the international student lounge, she said.

Neal added that roughly one-half of the floor space on the third story of the addition will be occupied by The Observer. Also housed here will be the AM radio station, Ad works, and publications: The Jugger, the Dome, and the Scholastic.

Hughes will be performing at all of the football games and most of the basketball games next year. "I see it as my responsibility to become the embodiment of the Notre Dame spirit," he said.

Hughes said he really enjoyed the different perspective of the game while actually being on the field instead of simply spectating from the stands during his debut.

"I had a great time talking to alumni, getting my picture taken, and having people ask me for my autograph," he said.

Hughes is enthusiastically awaiting the upcoming season and he said he hopes to cheer the Irish to many victories.

Did you ever initiate a conversation about sex with your parents? Did they ever initiate one with you? Why or why not? If your answer is no to any or all of these questions, don't feel bad or left out, you are not alone.

Michael Froning

Most parents and children in the United States are victims of that old double standard: sex is all right, as long as teenagers don't know about it. Most parents subscribe to this view, and treat sex as a taboo subject, refusing to teach their children the facts of life. Rather, the parents let their children learn on their own, which inevitably means they learn the hard way.

This is duly reflected in the teenage pregnancy rate of United States teenagers. In white teenagers, the rate is 85 pregnancies per 1000 girls and in black teenagers, the rate is startling 163 pregnancies per 1000 girls.

This may not seem like a lot, until compared with other countries. While the US has an overall teenage pregnancy rate of about 95 per 1000 girls, other countries, such as Sweden, France, Britain and Canada range from only 15 (Holland) to 45 evenly have governments which take positive action towards the issue of sexuality. This results in better (for that matter exsisting) sex education programs in schools at a young age, easier access to birth control and abortion and better social services for pregnant teenagers. Yet teenagers are not necessarily more sexually active in these countries than their American counterparts, they are just better informed.

In Sweden, the reproductive process is taught beginning at the age of seven and students learn about birth control by the age of 12. In Britain and Holland, birth control is virtually free to teenagers, courtesy of the government. And in France, one private birth control firm commits every Wednesday afternoon to group discussions for teenagers.
The common theme throughout is one of "a better informed teenager is a more cautious teenager.

Currently, attitudes is just the opposite in the US. Sex education is virtually non-existent, birth control and abortions, though not difficult to obtain, are certainly not con-dominant by the government (much less provided for), and social services hardly compare with those of Western European countries.
The US, in its infinite wisdom, tends to take the attitude of "what we don't teach our teenagers, they won't know." Think again.

In fact, the Guttmacher survey found a direct correlation between a teenage pregnancy rate and a lack of openness on sexuality by governments. In the institute's words: "It's no country (except the US) was there an effort by government to prevent sex or encourage chastity."

The problem with the US's reactionary attitude towards sex, is that teenagers reach puberty at an age of 12 or 13 as opposed to 14 or 15 as it was at the turn of the century.
And an uneducated, sexually curious teenager of this age is dangerous for obvious reasons. Not knowing better, the uninformat-et teenager is far more likely to experiment with sex to learn about it than to ask at school or home about it, especially considering the attitude of most parents.

Dame graduate students.

I didn't know anyone knew anything about Chocolate Biscuits.

Garry Trudeau

What to do? Get a clue. The Western European countries take the attitude that sex is a necessity in life, just like eating or sleeping. If the US follows this lead, denigrifies sex and makes it a part of life, it will lead to greater teenage awareness of sexuality and a lower teenage pregnancy rate, as the aforementioned countries already demonstrate.

This is not to say the government should pay for abortion or contraceptives, like the French do, or sex education classes. But exposure, openness, a positive attitude at a young age towards sexuality and more comprehensive sex education services are a minimum requirement for combating the outrageous teenage pregnancy rate in the US. The US needs to dispose of its attitude that ignorance of their sexuality will keep teenagers out of trouble. It is simply not true. We cannot afford to let teenagers make irreversible mistakes out of ignorance. Unfortunately, human sexuality is not like a math class where if you add one plus one and get three, you start over.

"Retributive justice" is the idea that reprosable injury should be inflicted on the offender. The idea has been popularized in the US, and is often referred to as "eye for an eye." In the words of St. Paul, "I urge you not to love the evil, but to love the good, and to hate evil." And Jesus adds, "But I say to you, that if you love your enemies, you will be the child of God, for God is love.

What do you think about the use of "retributive justice" in any other context besides justice for the offended? Should people not be able to replace the offender's loss? Is it justified to kill in revenge of a murder? Should there be an equal distribution of the "wrong" that was done? Is it just that the wrongdoer pays in kind, just like the proverbial "eye for an eye"?

Today's Church will seem foolish in future years

Twenty-five years ago, the Catholic Church was a real institution in the eyes of its listeners understood very well, and they said it with their backs to their congregations. Parish councils did not exist; lay people had virtually no role in the Church. In accordance with Church law, the faithful dressed themselves food and drink (including wine) from midnight the night before Mass until they received communion the following day, and everyone abstained from meat. To break these rules was a sin.

Greg Stohr

life goes on

If you long for those “good old days,” stop reading this column and check out P.O. Box Q or something. I think most Catholics, though, are quite happy no longer to have to toll under such archaic traditions. They have found a lot of enlightened leaders at the Vatican II Council, that have shown the Church members the message of Christ (love of God and neighbor) and not technicalities. They understand Church rules should help members become like Christ, not inspire awe or fear of “sinning,” as did many pre-Vatican II traditions.

These Catholics can look back on the Church of 1956 and say, “Boy, I sure am glad we don’t do that anymore.” Their predecessors as far too concerned with the sensibilities of their flock enough with its essence. They might wonder how their religion could have ever been so misunderstood, and they wish the Church had realized its errors earlier.

When we as United States citizens reflect on the pre-Martin Luther King era, we are appalled that our nation could have maintained such cruel, discriminatory practices. Notre Dame looks back and is ashamed it ever survived with no paupers at all. This phenomenon is an effect of liberalization — people moving away from mindless traditions, whether they be subjugation of blacks or saying Mass in Latin, and toward a level of thought where they see in hindsight and finds a history full of folly and devoid of reason.

Likewise, 25 years from now the Church will probably reflect on 1986 and wonder about itself. What now seems an obvious step.

Lack of sense caused problems at Mardi Gras

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to a recent article in the Scholastic on “New Orleans Hospitality,” in which the author and a few friends attended Mardi Gras and encountered a few problems. Although we cannot deny that the events did occur, we want to emphasize that the vast majority of problems at Mardi Gras are self-induced or easily avoidable by exercising common sense. Urinating on a car in front of police is just one of the examples of poor common sense, a necessity in any major city and a minor provocation in a situation such as Mardi Gras. In addition, he mentions he was mugged; if you wear $300 worth of gold and use the facilities by yourself in a relatively secluded area, you are asking for trouble. Furthermore, they were arrested for crossing a police barrier, treated poorly in Central Lock-Up, and taken for a ride by a cabbie.

Many of us have spent all our lives in New Orleans, loving the city and primarily perceiving a story comparable to theirs. New Orleans hospitality is something we value and cherish, and it is in any other major city. Our hospitality comes from the people in the streets, the people we socialize with — we would expect it; we are not surprised people are not hospitable in Central Lock-Up. In closing, we would like to emphasize that Mardi Gras and New Orleans, despite its laissez-faire nature, is not different from any other major city in its need for prudence. The hardships those students incurred were in large part their own fault.

Great sport of soccer worthy of U.S. support

Dear Editor:

Finally, it’s coming close. The Soccer World Cup is just a few weeks away, and the whole world is almost at a standstill as it is gearing up for it.

Every four years, on non-leap even years, the best teams from around the world gather to compete in the Soccer World Cup, the most important sporting event on earth. Mexico could host this year’s event (the World Cup for 1990 in the United States will be in Italy) and 24 countries will compete from May 31st till June 29th.

The United States will not participate in the Cup for they were knocked out last year in the elimination rounds by Costa Rica. Some improvement needs to be made in the level of soccer in this country if it wants to compete on an international level, but this can only be done by popularizing soccer, i.e. by showing it more interest and less apathy.

Following this summer's World Cup is a first step.

A few years ago, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger used his influence to try to convince the International Soccer Federation to let the United States host this year’s World Cup. At that time, the site was still to be voted for, and a few places in South, Central and North America were candidates. The choice of Mexico came as a logical one to most people. First of all, the 1970 World Cup held there was one of the most successful ever. Their soccer stadiums are very good, the biggest of which is the Aztec Stadium in Mexico City with a capacity over 100,000. Furthermore, the television station in Mexico City is one of the biggest in the world. However, other factors weren’t favorable. One of them is the lack of popular sports enjoyment here. Although more and more people are practicing the sport, especially among the very young, soccer is just still the fifth or sixth sport, and that’s being generous! Soccer is more popular around the world than all the other sports combined, but somehow it has still some difficulties finding its way in this country.

Furthermore, what prevents soccer from becoming more popular is the little interest the TV networks seem to be showing toward this sport. The reason here seems to be of a commercial nature, for soccer does not have any time-outs or stopping of the clock which allows networks to fill a game with commercials. When broadcasting a soccer game live on TV, there is absolutely no room for commercials (except at half-time!).

Another factor that was looked into was the conflict of the Cup with some important sport events in the U.S. The baseball season is just underway and will be well covered by the networks this summer, and the first week of the Cup will coincide with the finals of the NBA World Championship.

This year, the World Cup should be a good opportunity to popularize soccer in this country. Rumors have it that NBC will carry the event, but how extensive the coverage will be remains to be seen. Soccer is too beautiful a sport to be apathetic about it, and it really is a shame that the most popular sport to the world has so little friends in the most athletic country on this planet. If you are a soccer fan, then I’m sure that you can’t wait for May 31 to come, and this article may not have told you anything new. If you’ve not, then give it a try, and chances are you’ll catch the soccer fever. And, why not, come 1994, you might even want the United States to host the World Cup?

At any rate, please give soccer a chance.

"Money Pit" is good for a few laughs

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Features Writer

Joe Jackson is a dissatisfied man. After his 1982 release, Night and Day, Jackson decided he had enough of videos and decided he would no longer make any to support his albums. On his latest release, Big World on A&M Records, Jackson has grown tired of the conventional recording techniques with their touch ups, overdubs and special effects that make the music seem overly slick and ultimately soulless.

As suggested by its title, Big World touches on international as well as domestic themes. On "The Jet Set," Jackson sings of crass American tourists. On "Forty Years" Jackson talks of the disaffection between allies since World War II, while "Tango Atlantic" concerns itself with the Argentine-Falklands conflict. On these and other cuts Jackson turns a cynical eye to the topic but mixes his social and political ar­rangements again keep the album from becoming overly bitter, just as songs like "Tonight and Forever" and "Don't Look Away" have been a welcome addition to his repertoire.

Overall this album ranks with some of Jackson's best work. The songs are well-written and strongly performed. Jackson has long been acknowledged as a top-notch songwriter and arranger, and Big World only adds to his reputation. The main complaint with Big World is that it's 15 cuts only take up three album sides. Side four is black. After listening to three sides, it's a wonder Jackson didn't write more songs. As it is, Big World leaves this listener asking for more.

Calgary shocks Oilers, 3-2; Blues take Leafs

ST. LOUIS - Left wing Kevin LaValle scored a perfect feed from behind the net and jammed the puck between Ken Wregget's pads. Going into the game, LaValle had scored one goal against Minnesota in the opening round, and one assist.

The Blues, who were third in the Norris during the season, will begin playoffs and second overall. In fashioning the best record in hockey during the regular season, the Oilers had established an air of invincibility entering the playoffs. But that was shattered by the Flames, who wound three games of Northlands Coliseum in the seven-game series. Calgary won only one of eight games against the Oilers during the season and had not won here over five regular seasons.

In eliminating the Oilers, the Flames pulled off the biggest shocker in a series of surprises in this NHL post-season tournament and advanced to the Campbell Conference final against the St. Louis Blues, starting Friday night in Calgary.

The Blues clinched the Norris Division championship with a 2-1 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs last night.

Berezan, a left wing, was credited with the winning goal at 5:14 of the final period when Edmonton rookie defenceman Steve Smith attempted a clearing pass from the side of the Oilers' net and inadvertently bounced the puck off goaltender Grant Fuhr's skate and into the net. Berezan, the last Flame to touch the puck, was given the goal, his first in this year's playoffs and second overall.

In fashioning the best record in hockey during the regular season, the Oilers had established an air of invincibility entering the playoffs. But that was shattered by the Flames, who wound three games of Northlands Coliseum in the seven-game series. Calgary won only one of eight games against the Oilers during the season and had not won here over five regular seasons.

Clemens strikes out 20 to gain Majors record

Associated Press

BOSTON - It took another pitcher to let Roger Clemens know that he was flirting with history as the Boston Red Sox right-hander neared a major league record 20 strikeouts.

"He told me I needed two strikeouts and to go out and get it," Clemens said of teammate Al Nipper's comments entering the ninth inning of Boston's 3-1 victory Tuesday night over the Seattle Mariners. "That entire inning was all adrenaline. I was just out there throwing," Clemens said.

It was a power-pitching performance that left Nipper in awe.

"I'd love to throw as hard as he did tonight. That was something nobody has ever seen," Nipper said. "That was the greatest game I ever saw anyone pitch. We're all going to Atlanta tomorrow and get our arms operated on."

Nipper was referring to the arthroscopic surgery Clemens underwent in Columbus, Ga., last Aug. 30 to repair torn cartilage in his right shoulder.

But it's something Clemens says is history.

"All of the injury is behind me. I'm tired of hearing about that. All I know is what the record book says."

But Clemens' record performance was not limited to the nine-inning feat.

He fanned eight consecutive batters from the fourth into the sixth innings to tie the American League mark accomplished twice by Ryan with the Angels and once by Ron Davis while he was with the New York Yankees.

The 20 strikeouts also snapped the previous high of 16 by one pitcher at Fenway Park set by Jack Harshman of the Chicago White Sox on July 25, 1954.

All the statistics and names are not wasted on Clemens.

"To be mentioned in the same breath with all the great pitchers who have played this game, I have no words for that," he said. "I'm just happy there's someone up there looking over me."

Praise and big numbers had been projected for Clemens ever since he was the winning pitcher for the University of Texas in the 1983 NCAA championship.

But Clemens' record perplexed him on July 25.

Dominick J. “Nappy” Napolitano, who for 50 years worked with Notre Dame’s boxing program, died yesterday in a South Bend hospital. He was 78. Napolitano headed the school’s Bengal Bouts program, a charitable boxing event for students started in 1923 by football coach Knute Rockne. Napolitano began working with the program as a student in 1931. He later worked full time in the school’s physical education department and retired in 1980 as director of non-varsity athletics. More than 10,000 students have participated in the Bengal Bouts, which donated $300,000 to Holy Cross missions. — The Observer

Purdue hands Notre Dame 7-2 loss taking early victories in singles play

By PETE GEGEN

On Tuesday, early losses in the singles matches doomed the Irish tennis team as it dropped a 7-2 decision to Purdue. Only number-six player Joe Nelligan was able to manage a victory in singles action, a 6-1, 6-2 win over Kirk McKafer.

Number-one singles player Dan Walsh, recovering from a back injury, lost a 7-6, 6-1 decision to Kevin Gregory.

"Loosing the first set hurt him psychologically and also increased the stiffness in his back," noted Notre Dame head coach Tom McNeil. "He just wasn't in the match after that."

After losses in the number-three and number-five spots, Purdue was close to wrapping up the contest even before the doubles matches were played.

"I was most surprised about losing at the three and five spots," said Fallon. "That is usually the strong part of the lineup."

The number-two singles match was a battle between the finest play of Notre Dame's Brian Kalbacs and the power game of Purdue's Jim Gray. Gray relied on a strong serve and his play at the net, which Kalbacs countered with several excellent returns and top-spin lobs.

With Kalbacs up 5-4 in the third set, several disputed line calls resulted in the insertion of linesmen into the game. Gray evened the set at 5-5, and then proceeded to take the next two games and the match.

As this match concluded, Purdue's Jim Shumaker was up 4-1 in the number-three match against Notre Dame's Tony Cahill. Cahill tried to rally, but Shumaker took the game and Purdue took the match by virtue of the 5-1 score.

In doubles action, Walsh/Paul Daga lost to Gregory/Grey, 6-4, 6-1, as did the lone Ireland/Robert Pearcy/Andre Hacker, 6-3, 7-6, and Cahill/Nelligan fell to McKafer/Findley, 6-3, 6-2.

Today the team travels to Indianapolis to take on Butler in a dual match that was rescheduled due to a weather delay. Then on Sunday the team travels to University of Michigan, to take on Eastern Michigan in the final dual match of the season.

The Irish are 2-1 in the three-set match against their opponents this season and 1-1 in the five-set match. The number-three singles match is the only one the Irish would lose.

"If we lose the number-three singles match," said Julia Merkel, "I would make (running) more team members to the table."

"It was probably his best performance so far at Notre Dame. It took a lot of guts to run with the pain," said Ananchorn Jim Tyler further explained the race.

"We knew coming in that we had a shot at winning," he said. "It was a really rainy windy, that day, but he handled it very well. Everyone said, for most of the race so we had to break the wind."

Van Wie continued on the importance of the Drake Relays for the team.

"We had really tried to peak this season for the Nationals," he said.

"Once we hit that, though, there was a little let down. We had to get ourselves up for the Drake Relays, which Notre Dame hadn't won in 21 years. It was great to hit both those peaks in the same year."

McNeil, Nelligan, Tyler, and Van Peary also claimed fifth place in the distance medley relay. In other events, the sprint medley team of Peary, Phil Gilmore, Tony Ragunas, and Tom Warth came in fourth, and the 4 x 1600 Relay team of Ron Markezich, Rick Mulvey, Shane O'Tafferly, and Kirby Kinghorn finished 9th out of a 48-team field.

Saturday, the Midwest Catholic Championships will place at 10 a.m. on the Carter Field Monogram Track. The Irish will go against competitors including Marquette, DePaul, Detroit, Aquinas and Maryville. Five other Irish runners will also represent the University of Notre Dame for the National Invitational because Piane is dividing the squad, the meet will be more difficult for the team that remains.

"I'd like to see five guys away," he said. "Taking five guys away will make it that much closer."

Women's cross country might get varsity team status at next meeting

Lately the decline in revenue from televised football games has been felt at the club sport level as well. The number-one women's soccer team, which achieved All-America status at the NCAA indoor championships, is comprised of Tyler, Rob Nobles, Jeff Van Wie, and John McNeil.

"I would make (running) more team members to the table," said Julia Merkel. "I would make (running) more team members to the table."

Baseball drops two

Special to the Observer

Notre Dame baseball team dropped both ends of a doubleheader yesterday to the Broncos of Western Michigan, dropping a 5-4 decision in the opener and the nightcap, 8-7, at Kalamazoo, Mich. The Irish are now 20-25 on the season.

Pat Pravato went two-three with two runs scored and Pat O'Brien two-for-two with one RBI and a stolen base to pace the Irish.

"We need seven women's sports and we are up to six," said Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corbett. "The number is growing at Notre Dame, and we are going to continue to grow."

Irish cross country head coach Joe Piane agrees with the club if they do move to the varsity level, it would be good to combine it with the men's team.

"If it does go varsity, I would like to have it," he said. "It would be better for coordinating the (cross country) program."

Piane also noted that the men's team already runs in four co-ed meets, so finding competition for the women would not be a problem. The women in the club are excited about the chance of moving to the varsity level.
