Man with shotgun is jailed

Notre Dame Security confirmed Tuesday that a man possessed a sawed-off shotgun was arrested on the Notre Dame campus on Lyons halls late Monday night.

Security officers identified the man as David J. Dutka, 18, of Goshen, Ind., according to a statement released Tuesday.

Dutka is being held in the Saint Joseph County jail on a possession of a sawed-off shotgun and a minor in possession of alcohol, according to Deputy Bruce Martin of the Saint Joseph County jail booking department.

Security was called at about 9:30 p.m. Monday after a gate officer noticed the "suspicious activity" of two men who had just entered campus in a car driven by Dutka, according to the statement.

The men had told the gate officer they were going to South Dining Hall. The officer, however, watched the pair drive past.

When Security officers approached Dutka in the Lyons Hall parking lot, he was standing alone next to his vehicle, the statement said. One of the officers also saw he was walking toward Monterey Hall. Dutka then got out of the car and walked to campus to drop off a hitchhiker he had picked up in Goshen, the statement said. Dutka said he seeGUNS, page 4

CLC meeting is closed to public

By MARK PANKOWSKI

Citing the need for open discussion of three parietals proposals, Student Body President Mike Switek has decided to close today's Campus Life Council meeting to the public.

"If the presence of the press or non-CLC members will prevent good conversation and hinder the chances of the resolution passing, then I feel I have to eliminate that hindrance," said Switek.

The most important thing is that we get that resolution through and I want to do anything I can do," said Switek. The CLC, which includes rectors, student representatives and administrators, will discuss three proposed changes to the parietals policy.

The proposals would extend Sunday violation hours to 12:30 a.m., push back morning violation hours to 11 a.m., and reduce the penalty for overnight parietals violations.

"I'm going to talk to the rectors at this meeting," said Switek. "More than likely future CLC meetings will be open to the public.

"I want to do anything I can do," said Switek.

The recent Vatican removal of a Catholic University theologian's teaching post would be "legitimate," according to Father Richard McBrien, chairman of the theology department.

McBrien said a move like the ban against Father Charles Curran's teaching at Catholic University, Washington, D.C., could not be repeated here because Notre Dame is independently owned and operated under a lay board of trustees and subject to state laws and rules of accreditation.

Citing Catholic University's "locus status as a Vatican-chartered American university," McBrien said Curran's removal was part motivated by his "unorthodoxy" to Vatican control.

"If (Curran) were at Notre Dame, they couldn't have gotten him at all," said McBrien. "They couldn't have committed him, they could have censored him, but he'd still be teaching.

"Curran, a critic of the Church's positions on public theological discourse and sexual morality, is characterizing his output, was informed of his removal Aug. 18 in a letter signed by the head of the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

"They decided that although Catholic theologians, including those at Notre Dame, are tentatively subject to canonical mandate, nobody knows the precise meaning and application of the concept.

"Who gives the mandate? Who has to have the mandate? Is there any kind of appeal process?" asked McBrien, saying the Vatican's removal "fails to answer these and other relevant questions.

McBrien, widely quoted in the national media on the issue, said Curran's removal could become the "right wing" of the Church wars Catholic universities to be "like a Catholic seminary" rather than maintain standards of academic freedom.

"Can an institution be Catholic and a university at the same time?" he asked. "That's what's at issue here.

"Producing national leadership to University President Father Theodore Hesburgh," he said Catholic universities had proven the compatibility of Catholicism and academic integrity.

"You can't have a true university that's subject to the control of people outside it, especially non-academic people," McBrien said. "You can't do that and still have a Catholic university."

He said Curran's removal "effectively undermined any claim that Catholic University see CURRAN, page 4

A unanimous vote of approval was given to a proposal concerning parietals changes in parietals at last night's President's Council meeting.

The proposal, presented by Senate Committee on Parietals Chairman Brian Holst, recommended that the current du Lac policy that would extend Sunday violation hours 12:30 a.m. and push back morning violation to 11 a.m.

The proposal will be presented at the Campus Life Council today. The council will then need the approval of Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson for it to become official policy.

"Extending visitation to 12:30 on Sunday evenings makes parietals more consistent with morals," Holst said, noting that many dorms celebrate Sunday mass late in the evening.

"I felt also the proposal is concerned with lessening the penalties of parietals violations. He emphasized that the Senate committee "maintains that breaking parietals is still a serious violation." but considers the penalty of suspension for overnight parietals violations unecessary.

The senate committee is seeking an amendment to du Lac, Holst said. "The proposed change lessens the possibility of suspension for a first-time offender, but still gives the University the prerogative to suspend an offender who already has a record of parietals violations or who repeatedly disregards regulations concerning parietals," said Holst.

In another business, Judicial Council member Maria Cintor announced that anyone accused of a University offense can contact her for help and advice. Cintor said she has University permission to attend hearings, but cannot contact accused students. Students accused of a University offense, Cintor said, must get in touch with her if they want advice.

HPC Chairman Joanne Cattell said all ballots were presented at a special HPC meeting Monday and was also accused of a University offense, Cintor said, must get in touch with her if they want advice.

More children have been shot to death in Detroit so far this year than in all of 1985, according to police records.

"The reason we're seeing more kids killed or wounded is because there's a greater utilization of scene and subscenes in the drug business," said Executive Deputy Police Chief James Warner. "There's an awful lot of shootings going on out there; that's a result of drug trafficking and disputes over turf from which to deal drugs." -Bannon said. -Associated Press

Intelligence service is vital to the safety of United States

When people think of the CIA, many different images pop into their minds. Some imagine a foreign espionage gathering, while others picture spies wearing dark glasses and trench coats chasing Russian spooks. Others see the CIA operating on the front lines of the battlefield for freedom, protecting the United States government.

The CIA, or Central Intelligence Agency, is no different from its Russian counterpart, the KGB. They believe that the development of sophisticated spy satellites that can provide for the well being of this society. An example was a recent last week that intelligence agencies had uncovered several terrorist plots to be carried out here in the United States. I sincerely believe that the United States government is doing everything it can to protect the United States. -The Observer

Another good example of CIA service is the development of sophisticated spy satellites that can monitor Soviet compliance with nuclear arms treaties. In past years when the CIA was recruiting on campus, protesters had tried to prevent this "morally corrupt" organization from interviewing at a Catholic university. I would argue that these protesters have done a disservice to their country. Notre Dame is an ideal place for the recruitment of future CIA employees. Unlike other universities, Notre Dame puts a premium on ingraining a moral character in its students. Values taught at Notre Dame are what the CIA needs.

Although I am not sure the CIA is for me, I hope other ND students decide to pursue a career with that agency and take with them some of the values instilled here at Notre Dame. Our future safety may rest on these students and the intelligence they gather.

American crash survivor held by Sandinista government officials

Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua - An American who survived when Sandinista soldiers shot down a cargo plane said Tuesday he is an aviation specialist who boarded the C-123 in El Salvador, and was captured in the jungle a day after the plane crashed.

Nicaraguan officials have claimed Eugene Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., is an American military adviser serving in El Salvador and the transport shot down Sunday in southern Nicaragua was carrying weapons and ammunition to U.S.-backed Contra rebels fighting the leftist Sandinistas.

Sandinista army Lt. Col. Roberto Calderon said in Managua that Hasenfus and two Americans who died on the plane carried identification associating them with the U.S. military advisory group in El Salvador. However, officials in Washington denied connection between Hasenfus and the U.S. government.

It was not clear from the American's brief remarks to reporters Tuesday whether he was a military man or a civilian.

Calderon also said Sandinista officials were considering whether to put Hasenfus on trial and whether to return the American victims' bodies to their families.

Hasenfus, unhurried and wearing muddied denim clothing, was led onto a stage at the Government Press Center in Managua after being flown by helicopter Tuesday from the crash site.

"My name is Gene Hasenfus. I come from Marinette, Wis. I was captured yesterday in southern Nicaragua. Thank you," he said in a shaky voice. He was led away after 20 seconds, and reporters could not question him.

Hasenfus also was allowed to speak to local journalists briefly in San Carlos, a port on Lake Nicaragua near the crash site. He said the plane began its journey in Miami, picked him up in El Salvador, then took a Nicaraguan aboard in Honduras and entered Nicaraguan air space from Costa Rica at a site known as La Isla on the San Juan River.

According to Hasenfus, the Nicaraguan was one of three men killed in the crash. Nicaraguan army officers who accompanied Hasenfus said the other two men killed were Americans they identified as Wal­lace Blaine Sawyer Jr. and Bill Cooper. Their hometowns were not available.

Calderon said initially that all three dead men were Americans, but Calderon later said one was of "Latin origin."

The bodies were said to be in bad condition and still at the crash site in a remote jungle area north of the San Juan River.

American planes and helicopters had difficulty in reaching because of poor wea­ther.

Calderon, chief of the military district where the plane was shot down, quoted Hasenfus as saying Sunday's flight had been his fourth Contra supply flight since July.

Calderon said Hasenfus' job in the supply flight was to kick bundles of supplies out of the plane. The C-123 is an older model aircraft that was used by Ministry secretary-general, said on ABC's "Good Morning America" program Tuesday that the plane was on "a CIA opera­tion with CIA operatives."

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Phen­son said in Washington: "The guy doesn't work for us and CIA is not involved. There are con­gressional restrictions on assist­ance to the Contras and we do not break those restrictions." widely during the Vietnam War.

Calderon claimed documents found in the downed transport plane were in the victims' bodies identified Cooper and Sawyer as members of the U.S. military ad­visory group in El Salvador.

Openness must be stressed in student leader actions

The Campus Life Council will be meeting this afternoon in the Center for Continuing Education building to discuss three parlantes proposals. The doors will be closed.

Student Body President Mike Switek has announced his decision to close the meeting to the public.

The council includes students, rectors and administrators. According to Switek, some members of the council might feel restrained if the meeting were open to the public. He said this action will improve the chances for free discussion on this controversial topic.

The benefits of this action do not outweigh the public’s right to know.

Past student government administrations have taken similar approaches when faced with controversial matters. Closing the doors to the public has led only to a loss of support from the student body. Students want accountability for the policies their leaders pursue. This cannot be done unless the meetings are open for public review.

At this meeting, the CLC could make a decision that would substantially affect hall life. Students have the right to be present.

The spirit of openness which has characterized Switek and Student Body Vice President Don Montanaro’s political careers is jeopardized by this action.

The Observer believes Switek and Montanaro are sincere in attempting to demonstrate their openness to students, both leaders moved their desks outside on the quad Monday; however, keeping their meetings open to the public would be a much more effective demonstration of their openness.

Hungry and students benefitted from Rasta

Dear Editor:

As a proud graduate of Notre Dame, I was upset upon hearing of the decision to cancel the Rally Against Starvation (RASTA) as a student group. Two years ago, I founded RASTA along with a close friend of mine, Santiago O’Donnell. The group became much more than another charity organization working for African food relief. Through a series of campus lectures, movies, and educational activities which focused upon African history and culture as well as upon the tragic famine, RASTA generated a cultural and spiritual awareness of the relationship between U.S. citizens and the less fortunate people in famine-stricken Africa.

RASTA’s main event, the Spring Reggae Festival, was also a cultural affair which helped raise the consciousness level of the Notre Dame community. Throughout the concert, the crowd was reminded of the need to continue supporting African relief programs. A large slide show featured the main act contained graphic shots of famine victims mixed in with shots of healthy residents from around the world. During the intermission, RASTA members participated in a bread-breaking ceremony on stage in an effort to remind the audience of the real purpose of the concert.

The concert itself raised over $4,000 for African famine relief. Last year’s RASTA concert also successfully raised thousands of dollars for the victims of famine in Africa. It is unfortunate that such a valuable organization has become the victim of the administration’s decision-making process. While I was aware of illegal alcohol consumption at the first RASTA concert, it was not as great then, for example, the level of alcohol consumption at the 1984 Mock Convention. The Mock Convention, however, has not been canceled as a student event. In addition, as co-founder of RASTA, I helped organize an extensive student security force which actively maintained order during the concert. We were aware of the need to follow University regulations and we did our best to promote order at the concert.

Last year, I returned to Notre Dame to attend the second annual RASTA festival. While I did notice alcohol being confiscated, and properly, once it was not as prevalent than that at the Mock Convention or other student events such as pep rallies and SYR’s. While I understand that illegal drugs were allegedly confiscated at last year’s concert, these were surely isolated occurrences. Neither I nor anyone else in my group of friends witnessed the use of drugs in Stepan Center. Even if students were caught with illegal drugs and/or alcohol, wouldn’t the prudent reaction have been to subject those individuals to disciplinary action instead of cancelling the entire event? The decision to cancel RASTA seems especially unfair in light of less serious measures, if any, taken against the Mock Convention, pep rallies, and SYR’s where University regulations were and continue to be broken.

When I founded RASTA, I did so with the intention that the group would exhibit the moral and spiritual ideals that make Notre Dame a great University. By the time I graduated, RASTA had grown to encompass dozens of students committed to the cause of ending hunger by promoting global justice. Hundreds of Ethiopian children benefited from the money raised, and a movement had begun at Notre Dame which would have continued to graduate students dedicated to the very values upon which Notre Dame was founded. The students lost a group which fostered an awareness that we have a moral obligation to aid those in need.

The biggest losers, however, are the famine victims in Africa who will receive less food aid this year. While famine victims frequently fall victim to the process of institutionalized political decision-making exhibited by national governments and global institutions, I hope the Notre Dame community would be more sensitive to the cries of the needy in Africa.

Reflection groups help seniors evaluate years

Dear Editor:

For many students here at Notre Dame, college life is coming to an end. New pressures and new options seem to loom before themselves at every turn. Amid this flurry of questions is an opportunity to step back and look at where we’ve come and where we are going.

Senior reflection groups consist of twelve students and a faculty host who gather once a month starting after spring break. Each meeting, a few members are in charge of preparing a meal for the group and leading a discussion on any of a number of topics, ranging from careers and family to life under the Dome.

"With all the competition around here, people tend to overlook the deeper responsibilities of themselves," said Mary Ann Roemer, the CSS coordinator of Senior Reflection Groups. "There’s not enough coming together in a non-academic atmosphere on this campus." Tony Haske, a member from last year, recalls, "It was a great way to get to know people that you never got a chance to meet."

I think what made our group so successful," said Mini Graham, another former member, "was that the people were so diverse. It made for great conversation. Everyone had their own opinion, including Professor Chevel Fallon and his wife. We all respected each other, but at the same time, we had some really good arguments.

The Senior Reflection Groups are as successful as the members want them to be. "It’s a great opportunity," says Roemer, "but it takes commitment. They’ll get out what they put in.

Second semester senior year is a period of many emotions, and over the years, many seniors have taken advantage of this opportunity. "The timing was perfect," says Graham. "Not only was it a nice break just to get away for while, I think in many cases it was even therapeutic."

It is a typical Sunday afternoon for me: calling home, making a quick snack, and reflecting in the hot sun (about 60 degrees Fahrenheit) from a street in front of my side lunching with her friend Leonarda, whose advice for my upset stomach has me outside drinking some kind of bitter herb tea instead of joining them for lunch. You see, last Tuesday I had a carrot and onion soup (my specialty) which, unbeknownst to me, had gone bad by last night when I reheated my huge bowl of it. At 6:00 this morning, my stomach revolted the proposition. I told this story only to demonstrate how it is that we Chileans Associate get sick. Contrary to popular thinking, Chilean food is “Latin American” and therefore is inherently dangerous. Many times, our ailments are simply the price we pay for stupidity.

University must focus on alcohol awareness

Dear Editor,

I recently returned to the campus for the Notre Dame football game and was very surprised by the direction the University was heading. I believe in the “Notre Dame” family and the extent to which the University has the moral obligation to set standards for the Catholic community and the world, but the key is the setting of standards by each member of the commu­nity. The duty of a moral member of a community is to individually uphold the standards set by others as well as those set by the community. To do so, Gib Gallius means to ensure the University approaches alcohol in a positive way, by virtue of its alcohol policies, and that it upholds the moral obligation to positive change in the world. The moral member of the community understands that alcohol free environments in the University’s facilities are a moral duty, not only for the University to deal with, but for the student to deal with as well. What is good in one environment can negatively impact the environment of others. The University must not only have policies that encourage the reduction of alcohol consumption, but those policies must be accompanied by consistent enforcement. The University of Notre Dame, by its policies, is not fulfilling its moral obligation to prevent alcohol consumption on campus.

When I returned to the campus, I picked up an Observer and read an ad by the students of two dorms on campus plead­ing the administration to discuss some judgment involving two resident assistants. This was a signal, taking out ads to request discussion implies lack of commu­nication. Then I discussed the incident with several students. Each student had a slightly different story, but all had knowledge of the incident and were more than willing to discuss it with me. We discussed various topics, including alcohol and other topics. People tend to blow steam in the face of uncertainty and all come to all the same conclusions: many were, quite honestly, not referring to the alcohol in the social settings, but rather to the alcohol to the alcohol on the campus or rowdy students at the game. What was wrong was what was not there. “Louie, Louie,” a guest column by John Farley, provides further insight into the issue.

John Farley
guest column

Those of you with reasonably decent memories may recall that the band performed “Louie Louie” at the Michigan game. Louie Louie is a well-known song and a moral problem that those songs promote. The real world does not always agree that they promote, but it does promote serve the greater good and the prevention of alcohol use. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good and the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good.

Last Saturday’s victory over Purdue was rather satisfying. Unfortunately, this sit­uation will only remain at rest if the University must focus on alcohol awareness.

Banning “Louie, Louie” is only the beginning

There are several problems created by the banning of “Louie, Louie.” First of all, it may cause the band to carefully evaluate their setlist in the future. For example, “Tequila” promote or con­tribute to the consumption of alcohol? Does “Runaround Sue” support sexual promis­cuity? Is the “1812 Overture” an anthem for war or a celebration of peace? John Farley, the editor of the Notre Dame Observer, provides further insight into the issue.

Hope flourishes despite continuing violence

It is a typical Sunday afternoon for me: calling home, making a quick snack, and reflecting in the hot sun (about 60 degrees Fahrenheit) from a street in front of my side lunching with her friend Leonarda, whose advice for my upset stomach has me outside drinking some kind of bitter herb tea instead of joining them for lunch. You see, last Tuesday I had a carrot and onion soup (my specialty) which, unbeknownst to me, had gone bad by last night when I reheated my huge bowl of it. At 6:00 this morning, my stomach revolted the proposition. I told this story only to demonstrate how it is that we Chileans Associate get sick. Contrary to popular thinking, Chilean food is “Latin American” and therefore is inherently dangerous. Many times, our ailments are simply the price we pay for stupidity.

“It was the best of times, It was the worst of times,” wrote Charles Dickens in his classic novel, A Tale of Two Cities. It was the epoch of incredulity, there was no hope, no expectation, it was the epoch of miracles, it was the epoch of velocity, it was the epoch of hypocrisy, it was the epoch of issues, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the epoch of miracles, it was the epoch of velocity, it was the epoch of hypocrisy, it was the epoch of issues, it was the epoch of velocity, it was the epoch of hypocrisy, it was the epoch of issues. University must focus on alcohol awareness

Dear Editor,

I recently returned to the campus for the Notre Dame football game and was very surprised by the direction the University was heading. I believe in the “Notre Dame” family and the extent to which the University has the moral obligation to set standards for the Catholic community and the world, but the key is the setting of standards by each member of the commu­nity. The duty of a moral member of a community is to individually uphold the standards set by others as well as those set by the community. To do so, Gib Gallius means to ensure the University approaches alcohol in a positive way, by virtue of its alcohol policies, and that it upholds the moral obligation to positive change in the world. The moral member of the community understands that alcohol free environments in the University’s facilities are a moral duty, not only for the University to deal with, but for the student to deal with as well. What is good in one environment can negatively impact the environment of others. The University must not only have policies that encourage the reduction of alcohol consumption, but those policies must be accompanied by consistent enforcement. The University of Notre Dame, by its policies, is not fulfilling its moral obligation to prevent alcohol consumption on campus.

When I returned to the campus, I picked up an Observer and read an ad by the students of two dorms on campus plead­ing the administration to discuss some judgment involving two resident assistants. This was a signal, taking out ads to request discussion implies lack of commu­nication. Then I discussed the incident with several students. Each student had a slightly different story, but all had knowledge of the incident and were more than willing to discuss it with me. We discussed various topics, including alcohol and other topics. People tend to blow steam in the face of uncertainty and all come to all the same conclusions: many were, quite honestly, not referring to the alcohol in the social settings, but rather to the alcohol to the alcohol on the campus or rowdy students at the game. What was wrong was what was not there. “Louie, Louie,” a guest column by John Farley, provides further insight into the issue.

Those of you with reasonably decent memories may recall that the band performed “Louie Louie” at the Michigan game. Louie Louie is a well-known song and a moral problem that those songs promote. The real world does not always agree that they promote, but it does promote serve the greater good and the prevention of alcohol use. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good and the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good. The real world does not always agree that the prevention of alcohol use is the greater good.

Last Saturday’s victory over Purdue was rather satisfying. Unfortunately, this sit­uation will only remain at rest if the University must focus on alcohol awareness.

Students have more to celebrate this week than the end of the first round of exams as Notre Dame hosts the first annual Multicultural Fall Festival.

The campus-wide event with the theme "Around the World in Seven Days," is a dream come true for Adele Lanan, assistant director for the Office of Student Affairs. Lanan came up with the idea for the celebration last year, after reading several articles and attending conferences dealing with multiculturalism; especially on a campus like Notre Dame with its diversity of countries is very important, greater campus unity.

"The driving force that made this dream a reality is the efforts abroad. The support of the many opportunities for learning and sharing cultural backgrounds. The Multicultural Festival serves the purpose of celebrating the uniqueness of our own students." Lisa Boykin, one of the student organizers, emphasized this goal as well. "If this celebration could convey just one message, it would be the tremendous contribution that multiculturalism provides. This aspect of Notre Dame truly enhances our community and makes it the special place that it is. One does not need to travel abroad to discover the things that have been right here all along."

middlefield Fat Nash, who headed it. Nash was stopped by Brussels. The goal came at the 62:24 mark. The Irish of 64-22 mark. McCourt responded with the tying goal with just under 10 minutes to go in the second half. Morris took a pass right wing and centered it chest-high. McCourt, who was left unmarked in front of the goal, headed the ball into the side of the net. For McCourt, it was his 13th goal of the season.

McCourt's trio went into overtime, and both showed signs of exhaustion. The Irish also had too little keeping possession of the ball for the first 13-minute team in the nation.

"We were fatigued a little bit," said Grace. "We couldn't contain them. We were too panicky to contain. Each side exchanged calls on offense, but neither could get a shot off due to the defensive periods. Notre Dame had the better chances, but McCourt's goalkeeper was efficient. Lanza uses talent and leadership to help Notre Dame line

Senior Chuck Lanza, the starting center for the Irish, has been a key ingredient in the Notre Dame offensive line.

"Chuck is a very strong player with great determination," says head coach Digger Phelps. "He is an asset to the defense."

Lanza, a 6-3, 255-pound senior from Germantown, Tennessee, has earned monograms for second place.

Notre Dame ties Zips in soccer showdown

By PETE GEGEN Assistant Sports Editor

Behind a solid team effort, the Notre Dame soccer team tied 13th-ranked Akron, 1-1, yesterday.

The tie represents the biggest accomplishment for the team this season since the season-opening 1-0 victory over Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

"I'm happy with the way the game went," Assistant Coach Dennis Grace. "Akron is a brilliant team."

Akron was coming off a big victory over Indiana on Monday, which moved them to second in the Great Lakes rankings.

The Zips victory left the Broncos with a depleted unit yesterday. With only two extra players available, Akron started the game with some sluggish play. "They came out dragging in the first ten minutes," said Irish stopper John Guignon. "We were dragging too, but once we saw they were down, we started to pick it up."

At that point, the Irish were never intimidated by the Zips, marking them closely on defense in the first half.

Both teams had several good scoring opportunities in the first half, but neither team could score. Notre Dame's best chance came on a volley by forward Bruce Tigges, but it was saved by Zips keeper David Zippke.

"Potroko kept the pressure on in the second half with several offensive attacks. One centering pass was deflected just wide of the goal by an Akron defender."

 Akron caught the Irish napping on the transition game, and turned it into the first goal of the game. Midfielder Derek Gaffney lofted a centering pass to forward John Guignon heads a ball in soccer action earlier this year. The Irish tied the 13th-ranked Akron Zips 1-1 yesterday. Pete Gegen details the action in his story at left.

John Guignon for four runs in the second inning last night to beat the Red Sox 9-2 in the first game of the American League playoffs.

Clemens, pitching for the first time since being struck on the right elbow by a line drive last week, could not find his rhythm early on the circle. 00 degree night.

Brian Dowling drove in four runs for the Angels who scored more runs against Clemens than came out throwing hard with eight runs, seven earned, in 7 2-13 innings. He pounded him for 10 hits and eight runs, seven earned, in 7 1-3 innings. All traffic.

Witt, meanwhile, flirted with the first no-hitter in playoff history, holding the Red Sox hitless for 5-2-3 innings before Wade Boggs beat out an infield chop for a single. The hit broke a string of 16 straight batters retired by Witt after walking Boggs, the major league batting champion, leading off the first.

When Boggs got his hit, however, Witt and the Angels had the game in control and they coasted the rest of the way in the opener of the best-of-seven series. Game 2 was scheduled for 3:05 P.M. EDT today.

Clemens, the most dominant pitcher in baseball this season, entered with a 24-4 record including a 3-0 mark against the Angels, came out throwing hard with fastballs exceeding 95 mph. He escaped a two-on, two-out jam in the first inning by retiring Doug DeCinces on a fly to center-field wall, and opened the second by easily striking out Rob Wilfong and Dick Schofield.

But then Clemens, averaging just over two walks per game this season, suddenly ran into trouble. He walked Rob Boone on a 3-1 pitch and narrowly missed a full-count delivery to Gary Pettis.

Rob Rietbrock

Rietbrock follows with a line single up the middle and rookie Wally Joyner, who had doubled in the first inning, sliced an RBI double into the left-field corner that made it 2-0.

After Clemens threw ball one to Brian Downing, Red Sox pitching coach Bill Fischer walked hurried to the mound to talk with him. As soon as the visit was over and Sammy Stewart began warming up, Downing lined a two-run single into the left-field corner.

By the time Clemens finished walking out Reggie Jackson, he had thrown 45 pitches in the inning and had been rocked for four runs in an inning for only the second time this season.

The Irishrecord should not be our biggest worry

Irish Items

Yes, I know that Notre Dame is 1-3. And I know they have not won a road game since the season-ending win over USC in 1984.

I know that with three Top-20 opponents remaining on the schedule, it will be tough to finish the season with more wins than losses. But I do not think it is time to panic. Not by a long shot.

Head Coach Lou Holtz began the season by saying his team should win more than they lose in this four-game stretch, so far. The Irish have not won a road game since the Miami game. Midfielder Derek Gaffney lofted a centering pass to

So you see, it is not time to panic. The Irish are a good team, considered throughout the country by opponents as a formidable foe. They have been known to make other teams work for the wins they pull off.

The Irish have the offense that can make the big play occasionally, and can establish a ground game sometimes. To improve, they must be able to do both. The special teams have also been inconsistent, with the place-kicking unit's performance and Tim Brown's fumbled kickoff return serving as illustrations.

In short, the Irish have considerable ground to make up in all facets of the game. But the team's strength is there. The main thing needed is time for the various parts to come together.

The upcoming stretch of opponents, Pittsburgh, Air Force, Navy and SMU, are a notch below the teams that have beaten the Irish so far. The Irish figure to win more than they lose in this four-game stretch, and in the process put together some of the pieces that are there now but not meshing correctly.

Worry about the possibility of another season filled with the obnoxious Chicago Bears, and would yet, another off-season filled with Bears players faces plastered on every product that hits the market.

Be troubled with the new instant replay rule in the NFL, and how a good idea is being ruined because referees have trouble using walkie-talkies, some things they should have mastered by the third grade.

Worry that, in some strange way, Donald Trump because the Irish are going to be led by Doug Flutie will have a job.

Worry about the possibility of the least exciting baseball season in quite some time ending with a World Series between the Houston Astros and California Angels but I guess it would only be fitting.

Be afraid that someday George Steinbrenner will get a job in the National Football League, sign some real people, instead of just saying bad things about the people he pays millions."
