Vote on parietals proposal slated for next CLC meeting

By MARILYN BENICH Assistant Student Editor

A vote for the proposal concerning changes in parietals was set aside at a closed meeting of the Campus Life Council on Wednesday.

The CLC, which includes rectors, student representatives and administrators, discussed three proposed changes to the parietals policy.

The proposals would extend Sunday violation hours from 12 a.m. to 12:30 a.m., and morning violation hours from 11 a.m. to 10 a.m., as well as reduce the penalty for overnight violations.

According to Don Montanero, student Body President, the proposals were set aside for discussion at the next meeting, which will come some time after fall break.

"There is a lot of stuff to work out with the semantics in the proposals before the next meeting," Montanero said.

If the proposals are passed at the next CLC meeting, they would then need to be approved by Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson in order to become official policy.

"The feeling of the council is that there is a better chance of the proposals being passed by Tyson if they are backed by a comprehensive survey of all the hall staff," Montanero said.

"We need to do more research and refine the proposals. We have to speak with all of the hall staffs about changing the parietals concerning the penalty for overnight violations," Student Body President Mike Switch said.

"They (the rectors and faculty) didn't shut any doors on us. They encouraged us to look-out the phrasing which would lead one to believe that they're heading in the same direction that we are," Montanero said.

According to Switch, "We're all heading in the same direction." Brian Viz, student senator for district 1, said, "I'm disappointed with the CLC meeting. It appears the students and the administration have two different conceptions of what the severity of the offense for parietal violations are. We didn't come to any consensus."

"It came down to a discussion of semantics but that was not the main problem at the meeting. The semantics do not matter," Viz said.

"The meeting was good and it was frustrating. On the first two proposals, things looked pretty positive. On the last issue, as a student, it was pretty frustrating," said Steve Viz, student senator for district 4.

"We spent a lot of time on the semantics on the third issue. Now we (students on the CLC) felt that the overnight parietal violation is not as serious as sex and drug violations as it is portrayed in du Lac as of now," Viz said.

According to Viz, the next CLC meeting was closed to the public because Switch decided there was a need for parietals, page 6

System of import quotas, licenses proposed by economics professor

By ROB JENNING Senior Staff Reporter

John Culbertson, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin, criticized present trade policies and called for a new comprehensive system of import quotas and licenses in a lecture given last night in the Fitzgibbons Auditorium.

Culbertson, speaking on the topic, "The Trade Thrust to America," said present trade policies are harmful. He said it is delusional to pretend that universal free trade exists or is ever going to exist. Speaking before an audience of approximately 125, Culbertson added, "Most nations do not practice it and are not going to practice it.

According to Culbertson, the effect of the United States practice of free trade while other nations do not reciprocate is a one-sided movement of benefits.

"If the trade problem is not taken care of, action on other matters will be useless," he said.

Culbertson said that trade policies should be based upon a balanced trade, benefiting both nations involved and not creating political side-effects.

"The United States needs to limit its market by setting quotas on imports from other nations then selling the import licenses that effectuate the quotas," he said.

According to Culbertson, a system of quotas and import licenses would reduce the trade deficit. Trade would then be both balanced and mutually beneficial.

After speaking, Culbertson said that if this system is ever going to exist, the United States must "not practice it and are not going to practice it.

"We're making political side-effects," he said.

As a result of the new proposals, things looked pretty positive. As the students and the administration have two different consensus."

ND Security purchases machines to test breath

By MIRIAM HILL Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame Security has purchased breath testing equipment to use in law enforcement and educational programs, according to Director of Security Rex Ralow.

Security officers will use handheld machines called Alco-Sensors to give breath tests to people they suspect of drunk driving. The Indiana Department of Highways awarded the Security Department a $600 federal grant in September to purchase the Alco-Sensors.

Ralow said he did not expect an increase in the number of drunk driving arrests on campus as a result of the new equipment's use.

"We won't be out patrolling for drunk drivers any more than we ever did," he said.

The results of Alco-Sensor tests are not accepted as evidence in court. Anyone whose blood alcohol level registered above the legal limit, therefore, would be taken to the South Bend Police Department for a breathalyzer test, Ralow said.

In addition to campus roads, Notre Dame Security has jurisdiction on roads adjacent to campus, including U.S. 21, Angala Avenue, Juniper and Douglas roads.

Although the Alco-Sensors will be used for law enforcement, their primary use will be educational. Ralow said. In order to teach students about drunk driving, he said, Security officers will be stationed in campus parking lots one night per weekend and will offer students their cars the chance to take a breath test.

Students are free to turn down the test and those who participate will not be asked to identify themselves, Ralow said.

Students whose blood alcohol levels are above the legal limit of 0.1 percent will not be turned over to campus or local authorities, Ralow said.

Security will not use the Alco-Sensors at raids of off-campus parties and bars.

Food for thought: Jim Muensterman of Evansville, Ind., says that a person can't stomach a brain sandwich, it's all in the mind. Every day, the owner of the Hilltop Inn serves up hot-from-the-skillet brain sandwiches, a popular alternative to ham and eggs for locals. Muensterman prides himself on using fresh beef brains, carefully cleaned of their membranes and mixed with a batter of eggs and self-rising flour. "Then you've got to cook 'em so they're crisp on the outside, but still moist on the inside," Muensterman says.

Drug testing may impinge on our privacy and civil rights

President Reagan recently signed a far-reaching executive order calling for the mandatory testing of federal workers for evidence of illegal drug use. Under the Reagan plan, all government employees whose work is considered to be important to national security or to the protection of public health and safety will be required to submit urine specimens for chemical analysis.

No one is sure just how many of the approximately 2.8 million civilians on the federal payroll will be ordered to routinely fill specimen jars as part of their job requirements. Programs of voluntary testing have already being instituted in those offices which do not clearly fall within the domain of national security or public safety. This evidence suggests that a considerable portion of the U.S. population, under orders, will soon be standing in line with a warm jar of liquid in their hands.

Federal workers will not be the first to be screened for illegal drug use. Already airline pilots, athletes, military personnel, police officers, and top business executives accept specimen cups as a routine part of career services.

The CAREER and Placement Services now maintains a list of major companies recruiting here on campus that require pre-employment drug tests. The precedent set by the Reagan decision is sure to be followed by large corporations, state and local governments, and many other large scale organizations.

In the sports world, drug testing is accepted as the key to greater public responsibility and a winning record. Mandatory testing has become the policy of both professional and collegiate teams all across the country, including those here at Notre Dame.

Not many people have objectively addressed this sort of confrontation into athletes personal lives. Supposedly the interests of the team take precedence over the privacy of the individuals. It seems almost a given that the examination of an athlete's urine falls within the bounds of the team doc's jurisdiction. After all, if the team's game goes, if an athlete really objected to the principle of drug testing, he would simply prefer to play sports, he or she could always quit the team.

But the same reasoning that justifies drug testing for athletes could be used to institute the tests for the general population as well. Clearly if the Athletic Department finds that urinalysis enhances its competitiveness, improves its competitive performance, and helps it to enforce discipline among problem athletes, it is only a matter of time before the Admissions Office and the Office of Student Affairs get the same ideas. Frankly, the prospect of filing specimen cups for any administrative reason, whether on a regular or random basis, is not only frightening. It's disgusting.

For centuries western societies have recognized the privacy of certain personal acts as the immutable right of the individual. The Reagan administration's decision to begin urine testing on a massive scale represents a major inconvenience with which all of us are going to have to learn to live. Apart from the indignity of being ordered to urinate for some official inspector, we will be losing a large measure of civil rights and privacy as well.

In the business world, proponents of drug testing usually justify their position with claims of increased productivity and greater public safety. We are led to believe that urinalysis will weed out those acting irresponsibly on the job. This argument is flawed in that a positive return on a drug test offers no proof that an employee has been high on the job or has in any way mismanaged his or her official responsibilities.

Traces of marijuana and cocaine appear in the urine for days and even weeks after the psychological effect of the drug has worn off. Such tests reveal who has been breaking the law but not who is negligent on the job. The issue then becomes one of criminal prosecution and not business efficiency. And as a matter of due process, mandatory drug testing seems to be very much in violation of the Constitutional privilege to be free of search and seizure without probable cause.

Drug testing may be the topic on tonight's Campus Perspectives talkshow from 10 to 11 on WVTM-AM 640. Host Lymie Strand will interview seniors and freshmen about "The Gift of Giving." Kara Trowbridge and Brian McCarthy on their views of Notre Dame Life. Listeners may call 239-6400 with questions and comments.

Bernard Kalb resigns post

"I believe a matter of personal conscience. He will be succeeded by his deputy, Charles Redman. Kalb, 64, held the job for nearly two years after a long career with New York Times, CBS and NBC. He said his choice was "whether to allow myself to be absorbed in the ranks of silence, whether to vanish into unimpugned acquiescence, or to enter a modest dissent."

Asked about Kalb’s resignation, President Reagan said late Wednesday, "No one on our side has been lying to anyone."
Female emotions lead judgements

By MARY-SARAH REARDON

Are women capable of making sound moral decisions, or are they too sentimental to look at moral problems objectively? Leslie Griffin, assistant professor of theology at Notre Dame, raised this question at a lecture on "Women and Morality" Wednesday afternoon in Stapleton Lounge at Saint Mary's.

Philosophers have often represented women as too emotional to make objective decisions. Griffin told the mostly-female audience of 100 Aristotle, St. Thomas Aquinas, and Sigmund Freud, for example, all believed that women have trouble making moral decisions because they are less rational than men, Griffin said.

Freud stated this belief most simply when he said, "Women are more influenced in judgments by their feelings." Freud may be long dead but his opinion about women is still widely held. Griffin said.

Griffin said she agrees with Freud, and that the main difference between men and women is that women use more emotion in their judgements.

Because men have dominated philosophy for so long, moral standards of morality have been accepted as the correct behavior. Griffin said she believes that women have different standards of morality than men; therefore, if judged according to the male standards, women do appear inferior from a moral standpoint. This use of emotion is not necessarily wrong, according to Griffin. Just different.

Griffin used two modern philosophers, Laurence Kohlberg and Carol Gilligan, to demonstrate her point that men and women make moral decisions differently. Kohlberg put moral judgement into six stages of development. The sixth, or ultimate stage to reach in his scale is justice, the ability to judge objectively.

Gilligan, a modern feminist who wrote in "A Different Voice," believes this scale is unfair because it does not apply to women. Instead, Gilligan set up her own scale, to which the woman passes through three stages. In the first stage the woman is often selfish, and she looks out mainly for herself. In the second stage she feels so much responsibility to others that she neglects herself. In the third and final stage the woman finds a good balance of the two. She can balance her responsibility to herself and to others.

Griffin's lecture was the fourth of a series of lectures on "Issues Facing Women In The Church" given weekly at Saint Mary's.

Culbertson criticized the Reagan Administration's attempts to reduce the trade deficit by decreasing the value of the dollar. “A reduction in the value of the dollar reduces our standard of living,” he said.

Culbertson said, “We need to limit our imports and of course we need to do it in an intelligent way.” He characterized present protectionist efforts as “too little too late.” He added a long-term commitment is necessary if American industry is going to benefit and jobs are going to be saved.

Culbertson received his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Michigan. He is an economist with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and consultant to the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, the Subcommittee on International Finance of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Culbertson is the ninth speaker in the Joseph P. Molony Memorial Lecture series sponsored annually by the Notre Dame Economics Department and the United Steelworkers of America.

Molony, who has previously lectured at Notre Dame, was a vice-president of the United Steelworkers union.

As everybody knows, the Soviet Union kidnapped one Nicholas Daniloff, an American journalist, and accused him of being a spy. This is not a good sign for those of us headed to Moscow for Fall Break. Well, as all of us good, red-blooded Americans know, Daniloff was just an innocent American who happened to be carrying a brief-case full of Soviet maps marked secret. The United States traded a convicted Soviet spy, Gennadi Zakharov, for the release of Daniloff.

Apparently the Soviet Union can kidnap any American citizen and hold him hostage until the United States releases a Soviet spy. Obviously the USIS has stumbled upon something here. What is really mystifying here is that Reagan and his "no compromise" attitude toward foreign affairs has fallen apart in what amounts to an act of terrorism by the Soviet Union.

Can you imagine the frustration and anger of the families that have close relations being held hostage in Lebanon? It almost appears that they have been forgotten. When Daniloff gets kidnapped for bribery purposes it is a national crisis. It should be. However, the lives of those being held hostage are no less important than Daniloff's. The families and the hostages are being betrayed by their own government. Where is the public outrage? How now after being used by the Soviet Union to achieve their purpose, Reagan is going to meet Gorbachev to discuss arms control. My pulse is tingling already. I wonder how long those two met the major stumbling block. Not involved for instance the story of the two most powerful men in the world.

Excuse me for being cynical, but recent events and previous meetings between the two superpowers have left a bad taste in my mouth. Both men will sit down and discuss the enormous amount of nuclear weaponry their countries possess. Then they will agree to a minimal reduction (if any) and set a date for the next meeting. What we have are two men who have shown no honest commitment to nuclear disarmament. Instead we have a president who is interested in leaving a mark in the history books and a General Secretary who is attempting to gain an advantage in the propaganda war.

What is the net result of all of the activity of the past month? The United States has started a dangerous policy of trading spies for innocent Americans. Secondly, the present administration must have alienated any of those who are concerned with how American citizens are being held hostage in Lebanon. The neglect shown to those innocent Americans is frightening.

About the only result of the upcoming meeting is an assured boom in Lebanon's tourism. They picked a good time. I hear it is the slow season in Reykjavik. Will anything of any significance happen in Iceland? Probably not, unless the two ladies appear. As for me, I have a good feeling that Crockett and Tubbs will overtake the Edwings.

Women priests offer advantages to Church

No one has ever given me a single theological reason why women should not be allowed to become priests. At best, the reasons why they should not be allowed are based totally on tradition, not on anything rooted in doctrine.

Christ Julka

in plain english

It is that men are better bell the Eucharist, because they are somehow intrinsically more "holy" than women? if anything, it could be argued that the opposite is true, at least in terms of orthodoxy: polls show, for instance, that more women oppose abortion than do men.

Does the reason women cannot become priests today lie in the historical fact that Jesus did not make any women his priests? This does not have to mean anything: Jesus never said it did. At most, one can only validly attribute his decision to either pure ignorance or an immanent role in the society of that time. Not only, for instance did Jesus appoint no women to the original apostolic college of twelve, but he never appointed any women to be priests? Of course not. If it had, Father Hesburgh and most of the members of the Holy Cross order would be out of a job, and instead of being the "Home of the Fighting Irish," Notre Dame would have to be called the "Home of the Fighting Jews."

If no one wants historical precedence, look at Mother Theresa today. If certain prejudices are worried that the clergy might somehow become ruined if women were allowed to become priests, one might ask if the clergy can really become that much worse with women than it already is with only men.

Some of the most diehard conservative, fundamentalist Christian sects allow women to become priests. Why can't the Church would demonstrate dramatically that it is not just a gentleman's social club, as many claim, but a genuine Church of God, which takes its commitments from God so seriously that it is willing to constantly re-evaluate those traditions which merely happen to be comfortable at the time to see if they are indeed in accord with what God has revealed to us. Appointment women to the priesthood would be an acknowledgment of the indispensable role which women have played and continue to play in the Church. And it would enable the Church to say that it does not make its pronouncements against abortion and adultery simply because it is a man's Church, as many groups manipulating as the representatives of the majority of women would say.

To show that I am not simply a voice crying in the barren wilderness but have something concrete and practical in mind, I would like to make the following proposal. If Notre Dame has the boldness to spurn the Vatican on the issue of abortion by having Father Hesburgh get the chummy with Mario Cuomo, a political supporter of abortion, and feels free to contradict the Vatican on the issue of abortion and homosexuality, and atheist, by reappointing a gay atheist as a theology professor for graduate students, why can't it take a single, simple initiative with regard to admitting women to the priesthood? The condemnation of abortion, homosexuality, and atheism contradicts the very doctrine of the Catholic Church; allowing women to become priests, on the other hand, would be simply to break with a tradition, for which no one can give a single theological reason why it exists in the first place.

It is that men are better bell the Eucharist, because they are somehow intrinsically more "holy" than women? if anything, it could be argued that the opposite is true, at least in terms of orthodoxy: polls show, for instance, that more women oppose abortion than do men.

Does the reason women cannot become priests today lie in the historical fact that Jesus did not make any women his priests? This does not have to mean anything: Jesus never said it did. At most, one can only validly attribute his decision to either pure ignorance or an immanent role in the society of that time. Not only, for instance did Jesus appoint no women to the original apostolic college of twelve, but he never appointed any women to be priests? Of course not. If it had, Father Hesburgh and most of the members of the Holy Cross order would be out of a job, and instead of being the "Home of the Fighting Irish," Notre Dame would have to be called the "Home of the Fighting Jews."

If no one wants historical precedence, look at Mother Theresa today. If certain prejudices are worried that the clergy might somehow become ruined if women were allowed to become priests, one might ask if the clergy can really become that much worse with women than it already is with only men.

Some of the most diehard conservative, fundamentalist Christian sects allow women to become priests. Why can't the Church would demonstrate dramatically that it is not just a gentleman's social club, as many claim, but a genuine Church of God, which takes its commitments from God so seriously that it is willing to constantly re-evaluate those traditions which merely happen to be comfortable at the time to see if they are indeed in accord with what God has revealed to us. Appointment women to the priesthood would be an acknowledgment of the indispensable role which women have played and continue to play in the Church. And it would enable the Church to say that it does not make its pronouncements against abortion and adultery simply because it is a man's Church, as many groups manipulating as the representatives of the majority of women would say.

To show that I am not simply a voice crying in the barren wilderness but have something concrete and practical in mind, I would like to make the following proposal. If Notre Dame has the boldness to spurn the Vatican on the issue of abortion by having Father Hesburgh get the chummy with Mario Cuomo, a political supporter of abortion, and feels free to contradict the Vatican on the issue of abortion and homosexuality, and atheist, by reappointing a gay atheist as a theology professor for graduate students, why can't it take a single, simple initiative with regard to admitting women to the priesthood? The condemnation of abortion, homosexuality, and atheism contradicts the very doctrine of the Catholic Church; allowing women to become priests, on the other hand, would be simply to break with a tradition, for which no one can give a single theological reason why it exists in the first place.

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame in the summer. The news is reported in a way that is completely independent of the editorial Board. Comments, letters and the inside Column present the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.
For the first time in almost 25 years two members of the Circle K Club from a single university have been elected to international positions. Junior Scott Bearby was appointed the club’s International Secretary and senior Scott Bicha was appointed an International Trustee.

Circle K is the largest, collective service and leadership development organization in corporations. The club’s main objectives this year is to assist at the Special Olympics International Games which will be held on the Notre Dame campus next summer. The Club hopes to help through fund raising and volunteer work.

Both Bearby and Bicha’s careers as international officers began when they were elected to their positions during the annual international convention which was held in Boston this year. The convention itself serves to vote on proposed programs, award club members for their services and to elect new officers.

‘Anyone can join to develop themselves and serve others.’

Circle K performs on the local, state (district) and International levels. As international officers, Bearby and Bicha are each responsible for monitoring three club districts from their international office in Indianapolis.

Circle K is the collegiate level of the high school Key Club and works in conjunction with the Kiwanis Club. Bearby first became involved with the Key Club in high school when he became a state officer and now international secretary. A natural progression,” said Bearby.

Bearby counsels three districts: Pacific, Northwest (Alaska, Washington, Oregon, North Idaho, British Columbia and the Yukon), Missouri and Arkansas and West Virginia. Since fall marks the travelling season for the International members, Bearby spends his weekends visiting his districts to keep the members informed of International programs and supervise the club’s activities. In October, he was invited to Washington to visit part of the Northwest district.

As International Secretary, Bearby is the student representative for budget and finance. He helps to develop guidelines for the upcoming year and works with the high school Key Clubs. Bearby feels Circle K is a very active and independent club on campus. "We either succeed or fall on our own," he said.

This year he is working on the "Fests 1987" project hoping to initiate 1,987 more members to bring the membership close to 12,000. Bearby is also helping to revise the club’s constitution to meet 1980’s standards.

“I’m going through an exciting time and can see the improvements,” said Bearby. "You can develop your own leadership skills by giving to the community and campus.”

Like Bearby, Bicha became involved in Circle K through the Key Club. He was further inspired to join the organization when he attended a district convention in Spokane, Washington.

“I decided then that I really wanted to get involved,” said Bicha. He currently serves as one of the nine trustees on the international board.

One of Bicha’s goals this year is to make a larger impact on the college campus.

“If you were involved in the Key Club,” said Bicha, “Circle K is a good way to get involved in a college club because you already have knowledge of how the club functions. Anyone can join to develop themselves and serve others.” The Circle K Club meets every Wednesday in St. Ed’s Hall in the lounge.

Through Circle K, Bicha said he is learning leadership skills, public speaking and working with peers.

“I’m learning more through Circle K than from any book because I’m living the education rather than reading about it,” said Bicha.

Scott Bearby is the new international secretary for Circle K.

Scott Bicha was appointed the new international trustee.
The Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theater began its 1986-87 season last night with a delightfully entertaining production of Beth Henley's Pulitzer Prize winning comedy, 'Crimes of the Heart.'

Henley's play, a comedy, was brought to life by a small but extremely exuberant cast of actors. Not a moment abashed. From the very opening scene of 'Crimes' the audience was catapulted into the not-so-tranquil lives of the three Magrath sisters. Babe, played by Jeanie O'Hall, Meg, played by Holly Becker, and Lenny, played by Jenny Rode.

Babe, the youngest of these three southern-belle sisters has just shot her husband, Senacor Zachery Botrelle, as the play opens. She has been bailed out of jail and is returning to her childhood home which is currently occupied by her plain and practical older sister, Lenny. The wild and rebellious middle sister, Meg, is also returning home after unsuccessful years spent trying to make a name for herself in Hollywood. The girls hire lawyer Barrette Lloyd, played by Duane Refranco, an old boyfriend of Meg's who managed to acquire a limp during dubious circumstances involving Meg and a hurricane. As if this all weren't enough, the sisters are also continually haunted by the memory of their mother who hung herself and the family cat simultaneously and by a pushy grandfather who is (finally!) dying in the hospital.'

'The Notre Dame Counseling Center offers a broad spectrum of services and is one of the ideas they came up with. The University Counseling Center was chosen. Utz feels that the new name is a more correct appraisal of the services offered by the center and that it is specifically for the Notre Dame family. The problems include such things as deep depression, alcohol and advice on inter-personal and family relationships. Many people have realized the center's value as is evident from Utz's full schedule of appointments. Even so, Utz was quick to note that the center is not usually thought of as a viable option by many students.

Whether the agency's image, with help from the name change, is being perceived from a better educated viewpoint is not yet discernable. 'I think more and more students are seeing us as a positive resource and in this respect the name change is consistent with our philosophy,' said Utz. The center has also undergone some other, purely physical changes during the past year. Alcohol counselor Peggy Cronin retired and three others left for other opportunities, leaving the staff somewhat short-handed.

'I think we brought in a really high-powered staff,' said Utz. 'The staff change was not planned but just became necessary for various reasons. I am very delighted with our team and I think the new people are going to fit in well.'

The center also has begun a Doctoral Internship Program in conjunction with the Oak Lawn Mental Health Facility in Elkhart. The program allows prospective clinical and applied psychologists who wish to work in a university environment to intern at Notre Dame for three days a week. On the other two days, the interns work at Oak Lawn while finishing their doctorate dissertation.

"In terms of the University, having this internship is a great thing," Utz noted. "We may be able to get approval from the American Psychological Association this year which would recognize us as a first-rate service facility and a training agency.

The Irish have never faced Ohio, members of the MAC conference, so Gelman isn't sure what to make of his game plan.

"I don't underestimate anyone," said Gelman. "We've got to play to the best of our ability. That's what we'll do all season and that's what we'll continue to do."

A win over Ohio would give the Irish momentum against Purdue. The match with the Boilermakers is expected to be very close, but the Irish have an excellent opportunity of evening up their record.

Boston wins wild one with Angels to even AL series

Associated Press

BOSTON - Dwight Evans' fifth-inning popup fell for a tie-breaking double and the Boston Red Sox won the battle of bad hops, blunders and bizarre plays to beat the California Angels 9-2 yesterday to even the American League playoffs at one game apiece.

Every ball seemed like an adventure in Fenway Park last night. Afternoon sun and the swirling wind, and Evans' lucky double in the fifth put them ahead 3-2. The Red Sox broke the game open with three runs in the seventh, helped by three errors, and three more runs in the eighth, capped by Jim Rice's two-run home run, to gain a split at home in the first two games of the best-of-seven series.

Game 3 is scheduled for tomorrow night in Anaheim, site of the next three meetings.

The Red Sox bunched seven hits in the first two innings, including a leadoff triple by Wade Boggs and a following double by Marty Barrett, who had three hits, but managed only a 2-0 lead. Then, as the shadows crept across the infield, the Angels began creeping back into the game and they eventually tied it in the fifth on Wally Joyner's home run, the first ever in a playoff game. At the bottom of the fifth, with two outs and Bill Buckner on first base, Don Baylor drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch from starter and loser Kirk McCaskill that barely missed outside.

Evans, hitless in the series, followed with a high pop fly behind second base, Shortstop Dick Schofield and second baseman Bobby Grich converged on it, both taking turns looking at the ball and each other. At the last moment, Grich lunged backwards for the ball, but it dropped for a two-base hit that brought in Buckner to score.

The lack that enabled Boston to take the lead stayed with them in the top of the sixth. With one out, Grich singled and took second on Schofield's single off starter and winner Bruce Hurst. Bob Boone, the Angels' best career hitter against Hurst, lined a single to left and Rice came up throwing. Grich rounded third in full stride, but suddenly stepped as third baseman Boggs cut off the throw. Boggs then threw to shortstop Spike Owen, nailing Grich as he scrambled back the base.

Grich sprang to his feet, screaming at third base coach Moose Stubing. Grich threw his hands up in the air before slamming his helmet to the ground.

Mellow, not yellow
Spence fights his way to ND, top

A mellow competitor. Somehow, there shouldn't be such a thing, but to deny that such a thing exists would eliminate the presence of Mark Spence from the secondary of the Irish football team. It would also deprive Notre Dame of one of its biggest success stories.

You see, it takes a lot of extraordinary circumstances to make a competitor mellow, and Spence has been through a lot of them. Chester High School, his alma mater. Old St. X, his last out giving Scott at least one strikeout in each inning.

The Astros loaded the bases with one out in the ninth for New York's final hit. He stole second and moved to third when Mookie Wilson hit a hard groundball that Davis made a diving stop on and threw to Scott covering for the out. Ray Knight struck out for the last out, giving Scott at least one strikeout in each inning.

The Astros loaded the bases with one out after Davis' homer, but Gooden wriggled out of further trouble despite being wild with the fastball.

Kevin Bass doubled into the right field corner, and Jose Cruz Jr. singled to shallow center field. Gooden then walked Alan Ashby on a 3-2 count, and the Astros had the bases loaded.

Gooden struck out Scott for the inning's second out, and Billy Hatcher grounded into a forceout at third. That ended the inning, one that could have been much more lucrative for the Astros.

The Astros wasted three baserunners again in the fourth, and they saw chances to score go by the wayside in the fifth and sixth innings against Gooden.

It's sort of like Rodney Dangerfield, we don't get respect," said Lambert. "But the program is in its infancy and the only way to get respect is to beat people."

If the Irish continue their winning ways, especially on the road for the next two weeks, don't expect Lambert and his players to open a Comedy Store in search of respect. They'll get that, and a possible post-season tournament bid, from their play on the court.

First, however, they must face the task at hand. The Irish will head south this weekend to face Louisville and Kentucky with hopes of keeping their winning streak rolling.

Volleyball team makes it 7 in a row with quick victory over Illinois St.

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

The statistics are impressive, against the second consecutive victories, three consecutive matches without losing a single game, and a 13-4 record, it was next to meet that rake. The team has a strong sense of confidence, and the team is known for its efforts.

"The program is improving and there is no doubt that the girls are improving," says Lambert. "I love their enthusiasm and their intensity in approaching practices and matches."

Yet in the same breath, Lambert admits that there is still work to be done. If the Irish are to succeed in the next stretch of the schedule, "We need to work on all aspects of our game," he says. "We're not where we've got to be to do the things we need to do."

The task ahead is an imposing one. The Irish are now in the midst of eight consecutive matches on the road, five during the second week of October. So far, this challenge got off to a great start on Tuesday evening as the Irish defeated the Marquette. A 1-0 Irish victory.

"Lambert was happy with his team's performance in that game," Scott said. "We passed very well and blocked the stiff left side extremely well," said Lambert. "But our weakest point is transition. We need to get the switch from offense to defense and defense to offense quickly. If we do that, we'll be in good shape."

If you can't tell, Lambert is not content with just beating Illinois State, the 7th-ranked team in the Midwest pre-season poll, and winning seven straight matches. He has got loyals in mind, in the Boston area in particular. "Notre Dame in the volleyball world," said Lambert.

"Nobody knows who we are."

Women's tennis team overcomes Marquette

By SHEILA HOROX
Sports Writer

Prior to Tuesday's match with Marquette, the Notre Dame women's tennis team was still looking for its first victory in dual competition. An 0-3 record, however, was not enough to discourage the Irish, who promptly went to Milwaukee and defeated the War­riors, 6-3.

The Irish took five of six singles matches and one doubles match. While it is the usual procedure to play singles matches first, Marquette requested and was granted permission to play doubles first in an attempt to speed up the overall play. Despite being down 2-1, therefore, as the Irish began singles action, Notre Dame head coach Michele Geffman still was not worried. "I wasn't concerned after the doubles because I knew we had a strong singles line up," Geffman said. "We knew we had a good team, we were simply making the most of our chances, and having numerous scoring chances."

Houston takes the ‘Shootout’ win as great Scott out-powers Gooden

Associated Press

HOUSTON - Mike Scott, who led the major leagues in strikeouts with 306, needed only two against Gooden, the major-league leader (the Panthers have registered 211 sacks), to combine to beat San Diego 13-0 in Game 1 of the 1986 National League playoffs.

Glen Davis' home run leading off the second inning was all Scott, who led the major leagues in strikeouts with 306, needed. Gooden, the major league strikeouts leader the past two seasons, gave up seven hits and three walks in 5 2-3 innings while working in and out of trouble.

"It's tough to get consistency, though," said Scott. "But I've got a good team and I'm playing well, and I'm glad to have this opportunity to play," said Andrysiak. "We need to get something going and I hope I'm the right person. The most important thing is to get the win.

"Andrysiak, this is a chance at least to get off the rollercoaster ride he's been on for the past two seasons. Last year he played in nine games, leading his number-two unit to scoring drives in several, piloting the team to its consecutive "bungs of USC and Navy and even directing the team to its only scoring drive in the finale at Miami. Yet Notre Dame head coach Gary Faust always returned to the vastly-experienced Beuerlein as his starter.

"It's very hard to get consistency, though, alter­nating in and out with another quarterback. But I'm always there with another opportunity to play," said Andrysiak. "This might be week-to-week, or depending on my performance."
