Memorial's dedication draws fire

By JIM RILEY
Assistant News Editor

A peace group will stand by in prayerful silence during a mass dedicating the Clarke Memorial Fountain this afternoon.

The group objects to the wording on one side of the memorial. "The wording on one side of the memorial reads "Pro patria et pace," for fatherland and for peace. "It is precisely this mis-taken dedication to fatherland-nationalism that often en-mgages and rebukes peace," said a Pax Christi statement.

The group also objects to the large presence of the military among the speakers, the guests, and in the fly-over, according to Ross. "To work for peace does not mean to condemn the midst of warplanes," Ross said.

"Those are not the trappings of peace," Ross said. "They are the trappings of war," he added.

Assistant Director of Security Phil Johnson said Security had no indications of disruptive ac-

five still in running for ND president

Associated Press

Each of five potential successors to Notre Dame President Father Theodore Hesburgh remains in the running during the final month of the presidential search,trustee Arthur McKenna says.

Hesburgh, 69, has announced he plans to retire at the close of the current academic year after 35 years as president.

"The search process is very genuine and all these players are in the game," McKenna said in the autumn issue of Notre Dame Magazine.

Hesburgh looks back on 34 years

By MARK PANKOWSKI

In the waiting room of his office hang photos of him shaking hands with popes and presidents. Across the room is a cabinet, its shelves lined with awards.

Inside the office, University President Father Theodore Hesburgh settles back in his chair, surrounded by relics he's collected from some of the approximately 130 countries he's visited.

In 1962 Hesburgh announced he would retire after five more years, making May 17, 1967, the final day of the longest presidency in Notre Dame's history.

No real disappointments

Looking back over his 34 years as president, Hesburgh says he hasn't any "perceptible disappointments here.

"One always figures that one might have done better or do better given different circumstances," says Hesburgh, now 69. "But by and large I'm rather happy about what's happened.

What's happened in those 34 years is that Notre Dame's endowment has skyrocketed from $6 million to more than $550 million; its annual operating budget from $90 million to $176.6 million; and its research funding from $735,000 to $15 million.

Enrollment has risen from 4,979 to 9,600; faculty from 369 to 950 and degrees awarded from 1,212 to 2,500.

"With the help of a lot of very dedicated and talented people, I think we've emerged as one of the really great Catholic universities of the world," says Hesburgh, whose tenure is the longest among active presidents of American universities.

"I think the place gets better every year," he adds. "One way to look at it would be physically.

Institute for Peace Studies to focus on education

By ROB HENNIG
Senior Staff Reporter

Fourteen foreign fellowships and undergraduate courses will be the focus of the recently established University of Notre Dame Institute for International Peace Studies according to an advisory council which met yesterday at the Center for Continuing Education.

Yesterday's meeting of the advisory council presented and discussed the specific programs the Peace Institute intends to advance. The group includes Father Theodore Hesburgh, assistant director of public information.

The council heard presentations from George Lopez, associate professor of government and international studies on the proposed undergraduate programs; the Honorable John G. Gilgigan, institute director, on the Institute for International Peace Studies; and Robert Johannson, professor of government and international studies and member of the Institute, on the graduate programs and visiting fellows.

Advisory Council members emphasized the importance of the foreign fellowships. University President Father Theodore Hesburgh proposed that three students from the Soviet Union, People's Republic of China, the United States, and Poland receive the Nobel Peace and Japaq come to Notre Dame for a year program. The purpose of the council was to "put together a peace council that can see if they could come up with a document," and Ross said he'd like to have the Councils to the Peace Institute.

"If this group can't get along, there's no hope for the world," Hesburgh said.

"I think that having Chinese students in the United States is the key to making it (the Peace Institute) unique," said Dr. James Muller, co-founder of the Institute for International Peace Studies.

"Louie, Louie" will be heard again in Notre Dame stadium, according to band members. Director of Bands Jim Phillips told the band the controversy over the popular song was because of a misunderstanding between the band and himself. University President Father Theodore Hesburgh was not involved because of time constraints in rehearsal. "Louie, Louie" will be a show highlight this weekend but will be back after break, according to band members.

Saying goodbye to parents no longer child’s play

When I began my stay at Notre Dame in the fall of 1983, I remember thinking that my transition to college symbolized my passage into independence adulthood. I wasn’t quite sure what this passage involved—I wasn’t even sure I wanted to make it. But I recall having one certainty about the event: It would mark a true movement away from my parents.

I remember saying a quick goodbye to my parents by their car after first surreptitiously scanning the surrounding parking lot to make sure no one was watching. After all, even if I did feel that my entire sense of security was driving away in my dad’s Plymouth, I certainly couldn’t let anyone else see how childish I was being. Things would have to change.

Three years and a lot of growing up later, I can acknowledge the partial truth of my belief: my relationship with my parents has changed. But the change was not the distancing I had imagined. However, I have instead come to a deeper appreciation of my parents and an understanding of how important they are in my life.

I’m sure my relationships are not unique—they are merely reflective of a pattern that countless parents and children have gone through and countless more will experience.

I, of course, didn’t know this as I tried to nonchalantly wave goodbye that fall, but my parents with the infinite and often maddening wisdom that seems to descend on ordinary mortals the moment they have a child—did. I can imagine the wise smiles on their faces as they drove down Notre Dame Avenue—with the flu—off to college.

All parents must realize that their child’s apparent disinterest is in them only is a phase, a phase which doesn’t begin with the advent of freshmen year but with the onset of adolescence. How else could I put up with that long and exhilarating stage of being treated as if we were imbeciles?

During my high-school years my parents heard all the pathetic "Stop-teasing-me-like-a-child" arguments, usually asserted by me when I was acting particularly callously. Confronting my mom that I didn’t need a hat in 20-degree-below-zero weather seemed of global importance to me; making dad realize that all the kids my age stayed out past 12 consumed my conversations with him. Everybody else’s parents were infinitely more understanding and modern: mine were old-fashioned and narrow-minded.

It seems a universal irony of adolescent thought that growing up means growing away. By the time I reached college, I had created such a veneer of maturity that my parents—I had "won" enough of those high-school battles—that I thought leaving home and parents behind would be easy. My enlightenment came quickly.

It is said that familiarly breeds contempt and absence makes the heart grow fonder, a phrase perhaps most aptly applied to one’s discoveries during freshman year. All it took was one bout with the flu—minus mom’s constant care—and one less-than-desirable grade on a calculus test for me to realize how much I needed my parents. After all my adolescent efforts to grow up by challenging my parents’ role in my life, I finally was forced to move toward real maturity by acknowledging their importance.

My perceptions of my relationship with my parents inexplicably continued to change as I became more capable of handling my own affairs. Eventually I didn’t need to receive frequent letters—an occasional phone call would suffice. My parents were no longer the god-like providers of my childhood, or the adversaries of my teen-age years. They became simply real people whom I respect and admire.

There have been many good-byes since that first awkward one outside my new home. Perhaps the most significant of these occurred when I said good-bye to my mom and dad after last year’s Junior Parents’ Weekend. Having spent a wonderful weekend sharing my college home and life with them, it was hard to see it end. This time, though, I hugged and kissed them good-bye next to the car—not caring who noticed—and watched until their car was out of sight.

And I’m sure the same wise smiles were on their faces as they drove down Notre Dame Avenue.

Missile destroys Israeli warplane

Associated Press

Saida. Lebanon - A missile destroyed an Israeli warplane during raids on Palestinian guerrilla bases near this ancient port Thursday, the day after a bloody grenade attack in Jerusalem.

Journalists saw the plane explode after the missile struck and crashed into a valley four miles southeast of Saida, and some reporters said the wreckage still smoldered minutes later. One of the two pilots was reported taken prisoner, and the other was reported killed.

It was the first Israeli plane lost over Lebanon in three years. State-run Beirut radio said bombs and rockets killed four people and wounded 10 at the Hezbollah Palestinian refugee camp on the city's southeastern outskirts.

Israel's military command still had not commented hours later on the 30-minute attack on Palestinian targets or the loss of the U.S.-built Phantom F-4E. A Shiite Muslim militia commander said the two pilots bailed out and landed in an olive grove, one alive and one dead. Abu Jamil Ghaddar of the Amal militia said the survivor was captured in the grove between Stroubieh and Anour, suburbs of this city 45 miles south of Beirut.

 Guerrillas brought the Phantom down with a shoulder-fired anti-tank gun in Notre Dame stadium really a technician from WGN-TV in Chicago setting up for Saturday's game.

What's wrong with this package?

As if capturing our hero Cap'n Crunch, threatening Crunch Power and the future of crunchy breakfast wasn't enough, now the soggies have made a mess out of the Cap'n's cereal box! A cause for major unrest with breakfast eaters everywhere! Not to mention the outrage at Quaker Oats!

Authorities have noted 30 mistakes on the box you see here. And 20 of them resolve the three "Free The Cap'n" clues on special boxes of Cap'n Crunch cereal and you're on your way to being on your own brand new Honda Scooter!

...Ready, aim...

What at first appears to be a routine installation of a Soviet-made anti-tank gun in Notre Dame stadium is really a technician from WGN-TV in Chicago setting up for Saturday's game.

More than half of the facilities we see here just weren't here then.

"I mean it's hard to think of the place without an ACC, without Notre Dame Science, without a Liberal Arts building, without a library, without a football stadium. There's only one thing we don't have here now; I'm not sure what it is."

Admission of women

Besides the transfer of governance from the Congregation of Holy Cross to a mostly lay Board of Trustees in 1967, the biggest change during Hesburgh's tenure is probably the admission of women to the undergraduate program in 1972.

That change has made Notre Dame "much more like a family," says Hesburgh. He notes that many talented men that don't have to go to a Notre Dame like the idea of being at a co-educational institution.

In addition, he says, "there's a much easier-going attitude between men and women on this campus than there was when I first came back in 1953."

Turned down 'interesting jobs'

Looking back on his career, Hesburgh says there's nothing else in public service he wishes he'd done. He adds, however, "I turned down some interesting jobs because I didn't think they were compatible with being a priest or head of a Catholic university."

For example, says Hesburgh, "I turned down being the director of NASA at one point, which I would have been the first priest in the world to have done that. That was at the time we were getting ready to go to the moon with the Apollo program.

Had he not become a priest and Notre Dame president, what would he have done? "It's difficult to answer that because I never wanted to be anything but a priest," he says.

"I don't want to be anything but a priest today, and I'm delighted I became a priest. I only hope I die a priest. So I never speculated about doing something else."

2 1/2 pages of awards

The success Hesburgh's had in public service is borne out by the 2 1/2 pages of awards he's received, which take 2 1/2 pages to list.

They include the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award, as well as the St. Joan of Arc Award of the American Association of University Professors, given to Hesburgh in 1970 for his help in wading off what some Nixon administration's attempts to use federal troops to quash nationwide campus unrest in 1969.

Hesburgh, however, may be most noted for his honorary degrees, the first of which was awarded him in 1940 by the Quinns College of World Records after breaking the old record of 639 doctorsates, and now holds 110 of such degrees.

After his retirement

Once he retires in May, Hesburgh says he hopes to return to Notre Dame with Executive Vice President Father Edmund Joyce, who is retiring at the same time as himself. "I hope to come back and have an office with Father Ed in the library and do whatever I can to help the University as a utility outerfielder," says Hesburgh.

"But that will depend on the people in charge and whatever they ask me to do. I'm not going to volunteer."

In addition, Hesburgh says he'll continue working in public service. "I'm not going to resign from the human race," he says. "I plan to continue collaborating with Notre Dame's Institute for International Peace Studies, as well as the Kellogg Institute for International Studies. I also plan to work with the Ecumenical Institute at Talbot, Jerusalem, which I built in 1972 and Notre Dame continues to operate."

And yes, he says, he will take some time off just to relax. Expects Hesburgh. "It's my first sabbatical I've had since I came back in 1953."

That's the year Hesburgh returned to the University, serving as chaplain to World War II veterans on campus and an associate professor in the religion department.

A chaplain and professor

Eleven years earlier he had begun the first of three years as a Notre Dame student. He later graduated with a bachelor's degree in 1940 from Oregonian University in Rome, and a doctorate in geography in 1945 from Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. Hesburgh was ordained a priest in 1943 in Sacred Heart Church at Notre Dame. In 1946 he was appointed head of Notre Dame's religion department, and the following year University executive vice president.

Three years later, Hesburgh was named the 15th president of Notre Dame. He was 35 years old.

Trusted to name successors

Hesburgh says his successor will be named by the Board of Trustees in mid-November, and will take over for him after graduation.

"I'm sure the trustees that I would not tell them that Father 'X' or Father 'Y' should be the next president," Hesburgh says. "I simply said that the decision they have to make."

"I would answer their questions but not a question of putting forth one specific person."

The advice Hesburgh says he'd give his successor is the same advice he received when he became president. "You can't do it alone, so you need many, many talented people to help you. And they're here," says Hesburgh.

"Secondly, when you bring in talented people, you allow them elbow room to do their jobs and be sure they get credit for the good things they do.

"The last thing that I've always tried to remember is don't ever consider yourself indispensable because the cemeteries are full of indispensable people," Hesburgh says. "Somehow institutions go on."

Biggest problem facing ND

As he prepares to relinquish his post to his successor, Hesburgh says the biggest problem facing Notre Dame is keeping it "a first-rate university as well as a Catholic university."

"The second part of that is more difficult than the first because there's always a terrific weight of secularism bearing down on all American institutions. And to keep an institution like this Catholic really requires a lot of hard work and daily effort, and the collaboration of many, many people."

Once again looking back on his presidency, Hesburgh concedes he may have had one appointment during his years at Notre Dame. "I guess the only disappointment would be that maybe with more work or with more vision might have been done more."

"But I'm not going to sit back and feel good," says Hesburgh. "I did the best that I could."

"I've got to say that in the years I've been here to do what had to be done. At the same time, I probably could say I spent no putting it down, and it makes for amusement and good stories."

"I've been to New York probably 500 times and seen one play, 'Producers' but I made a book of myself," he adds. "I think on balance I probably could say I spent more than 60 percent of my time on the campus and worked a double shift there when I was here and never missed a day."

"However, I got to say that once my myth gets started there's not putting it down, and it makes for amusement and good stories."

Pope and presidents

Much of the reason for Hesburgh's travels stems from his work outside the University. He has served four popes, three as permanent envoy to the Holy See. He was a charter member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights in 1956.

Another was as ambassador to the 1979 U.N. Conference on Science and Technology for Development, which made him the first Catholic priest to serve in a formal diplomatic role for the U.S. government. Hesburgh was also the first priest to serve as a director of the Chase Manhattan Bank and a trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Also notable, Hesburgh says he has been or is now a member of about 75 boards, committees and organizations.

"You learn a lot by being on these different groups," he says. "I went on the National Science Board and I never had a class in physics. But I learned an awful lot of physics and became somewhat of an expert in the field of nuclear energy, and its possibilities and its peaceful uses."

"And I think I now understand what the warlike uses are and how to avoid them."

TODAY'S TOP QUANTITATIVE GRADUATES ARE HEADING FOR WALL STREET.

HERE'S WHY.

There's a new career option for today's quantitative graduates. It's not in academia. It's not in Corporate America. It's not in the Silicon Valley.

It's on Wall Street.

Today, Wall Street "quants" are literally shaping the future of high finance. They're developing a new generation of investment products, pioneering new ways to improve profitability, and creating new opportunities for investors and issuers. And for their quantitative creativity, they're being recognized with qualitative rewards. With challenge, responsibility and recognition.

Yet you might be surprised to learn that many of Wall Street's most successful "quants" have no prior experience in finance or economics. They come from backgrounds in math, physics, engineering, operations research, computer science, and other quantitative disciplines.

If forging the way into new frontiers sounds exciting to you, Salomon Brothers Inc. has the opportunity you seek. A major investment banking and market-making firm, we're Wall Street's leading employer of "quant" graduates. And since our research and technology management departments are the most respected in the industry, you'll be working with some of the top talent in your field.

Want to learn more about the challenge of working with a Wall Street leader in one of today's most rewarding quantitative careers? Join us at the Salomon Brothers presentation scheduled for your campus. And see how far your future can go.

"Mikey" to eat Life cereal again

Associated Press

NEW YORK—After 15 years, "Mikey," the finicky toddler who wouldn't eat anything, is back touting Life cereal.

Mikey, a.k.a. John Gilchrist, 18, was the star of a 1971 commercial in which he was the silent guinea pig for two older brothers who wouldn't take a chance on Life, a cereal that was supposed to be good for them.

"They were pretty sure Mikey wouldn't like it, but Mikey dug in, and the brothers explained. He likes it! Hey Mikey!"

In the new commercial, Gilchrist has some lines, to show he has since learned to talk, he said.

The older brothers in the commercial were Gilchrist's real-life brothers Michael, now 21, and Tommy, 23. The commercial is one of hundreds in which he and his six brothers and sisters have filmed in the past 16 years. Gilchrist said.

"You don't have to be talented" to make commercials, Gilchrist said, but "it can be tough. With a little hard work it can be done by anyone."

Gilchrist attributed the family's early success to their "chubby cheeks, all-American look."

He doesn't know how much money he makes. "My parents handle all the financial part."

Ridiculous, you say? Unenforceable? That's what my friends back east say when I tell them about partisanship. Think again. The "test case" for North Carolina's new law was met with astounding success. Convicted by a jury for selling two magazines - which another jury deemed "racy but not obscene" to a 14-year-old police officer at the bookstore where she worked. Twenty-one-year-old Sherri An-derson was the beneficiary of two three-year jail sentences imposed to six months of probation. einzelgänger. The law seems to be working alarmingly well. Why would anyone embark on such a crusade, such an obvious assault on the first amendment? According to religi-ous crusaders, it is mostly because the atheistic ideology being perpetrated by secular humanists must be combated. These typical anti-Christians espouse such outragous ideals as a belief in feminism, the abolishment of corporal punishment in day-care centers, and more radical sex education as if we have not to go to the extreme in order to hold the American People in fear of being charged with a felony. Reagan's personal goal interfered in Iceland

Dear Editor:

Well, the chill of Iceland has now spread over the entire globe. The Soviets went into the talks looking to make a deal, and Ronald Reagan killed the entire summit with a single comment. I refer to his personal goal of arms control. But, as his refusal to make a notable concession has today, Iceland is a loss to a lot of her international posi-tives. I am delighted and disheartened by Reagan's latest display of ignorance. His refusal to make a notable concession has today, Iceland is a loss to a lot of her interna-tional prestige. I only pray that the Soviets are patient and will return someday to a bargaining table.

Dear Editor:

Over the past year I have watched the construction of the new Clark Memorial with interest. Initially, I wondered what it was going to look like. Now, I wonder what it means. It seems clear that in the design of the Memorial is embodied a definite view about the place of war in our world.

One reasonable analysts of the design of the Memorial, it seems, would be as follows: The tall structure symbolizes peace. Its central location sug-gests that the Memorial has at its core a symbolic observance of the peace. However, it seems clear that the four sets of columns symbol-ize war. They are imposing, fortress-like structures and the names of the three wars commemorated are written on three of them. It does not take much imagina­tion to deduce the meaning of the Memorial if these two symbols are ac-curately described.

The Memorial seems to represent the belief that peace must be founded on the possibility of war. The columns are ori­ented in a defensive configuration. War, then, is a defensive stance. Whether or not we want to recognize the fact that war is an essential component of peace. But, one must ask, does this make sense? Any "peace" that is dependent on the possibility of war is not true peace. Rather, such a "peace" would be no more accurately described as a war-like terror. True peace, it seems, must be built on something other than fear of war. Something like a commitment to treat one's fellow man with both love and justice.

The Memorial, then, makes an impor­tant statement of the predicament of the modern world. We live in a world in which peace, but is rather in a condition of fear. Today's "peace" is built on the balance of nuclear weapons between the superpowers. Much like the four sets of columns in the Memorial, nuclear mis-siles stand to insure that the balance of terror continues, that "peace" is preserved.

I wonder whether to call the Clark Memorial a War Memorial or a Peace Memorial. I have a hard time. It would be more accurately described as a Peace Memorial for reasons which should be clear from above. At the same time, the Memorial is committed to a condition which, although.

The Irish Guard, ND's colorful football tradition

By ANDREA LAFRENIERE
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

An aura of mystery surrounds the towering ten who lead the way to the stadium on football Saturdays. Onlookers stand in awe of the shako-topped marchers shielding the Notre Dame Marching Band.

Though they are ordinary students during the week, on football Saturdays the members of the Irish Guard become symbols of the University.

From the moment they don their finery, these men embody the Notre Dame spirit, and their serious expressions suggest the attitude with which they undertake their duties.

"Being a member of the Guard is a very serious thing when it comes to game dates," remarks Pat Kruczek, one of four rookies named to this year's Guard.

"Once we put on our shakos, we're not just any group of men," Kleine says.

Kleine focuses on 'the little things'

Kleine believes in working on the little things, and feels that the entire team must continue to do so.

"We want to win," he says. "We have to master the little things - I hate to keep saying this, but it's what it is. All it takes is one or two of them to beat you."

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

One of the more recognizable figures on the Irish football squad this season is senior defensive tackle Wally Kleine.

He is easily spotted on the field in his 6-9 frame, towering above offensive linemen as well as his own teammates.

He also is a very quotable player off the field, delivering lines in his Texas drawl which make for prime feature-story material.

Kleine is a definite pro prospect because of his size and strength, as also his instruction by respected coaches such as Joe Yonto, Poge Fazio and, of course, Lou Holtz.

All of this makes good press for Kleine and the team. But the real value of Kleine is not one of his more recognizable traits. It is his leadership both on and off the field which he prefers to keep low-key.

"My style of play is to lead by example," says Kleine. "It is not necessarily jumpin', hootin' and a holier-than-thou attitude with which they undertake their duties.

"We have guys who do that, and that's fine - we need guys who do that. But I'm not one of those." Kleine has controlled the defensive line, recording 32 tackles (17 solo) and sacking the quarterback three times for 23 yards in losses. He ranks behind only captain Mike Kovaleski in tackles.

But his leadership on the field does not end after the game. Realizing that the 'little things' have been hurting the Irish recently, Kleine has tried to set the example of working hard on the basics in practice.

"I try to focus on the little things," he says. "Coach (Joe) Yonto helps me emphasize and put into action things like staying low, keep my shoulders out, keep charging forward.

"Being 6-9, you're at a disadvantage being so tall. While at the same time you have a definite advantage, the little guys, like the ones from Air Force, come so low, and I'm a foot taller than some of those guys."

"Once we put on our shakos, we're not just any group of men," Kleine says.

allowed to smile. This puts us in the proper frame of mind."

Kruczek, a senior from Alexandria, Ind., explains what he and fellow Guard members symbolize.

"One of our primary duties is simply to be representatives of Notre Dame," he says. "The Guard is a big thing with alumni who look to us to uphold the University traditions and embellish the things Notre Dame stands for."

In addition to assuming solemn expressions, part of the Irish Guard's game day ritual includes dressing in traditional attire. Donning the Guardman's outfit, including kilt, doublet, spats and shoes, often takes the members one and a half hours. Once attired, the Guard is inspected by former Guardsmen who have returned to the University for the weekend.

"It's a great honor to wear the uniform," comments John Kennedy, a senior and fourth-year Guardsman from Glen Mills, Penn., who says there is a certain thrill that comes with being a part of the Guard.

"There are a lot of good things about being a member, but game day is definitely the best thing," he said. "It's great to wear the uniform, march in front of the band and represent the University."

Kennedy, this year's Irish Guard Captain, had an input in the selection of the Guardsmen earlier this fall. Along with James Phillips, director of the Marching Band, and Fr. George Walschen, C.S.C., director of the Notre Dame Jazz Band, Kennedy chose the Guardsmen on the basis of marching ability, enthusiasm and appearance.

In addition to Kruczek, Tom Desmond, a junior from Troy, Mich., Brian McDonald, a sophomore from Southport, Conn., and John McGillin, a freshman from Sinking Spring, Penn., were named as first-year Guardsmen. Juniors John Livingston, of Bay Shore, N.Y., and Paul Reuvers, of Faribault, Minn., are both second-year Guard members.

Third-year veterans include senior Dan O'Brien, of Glenview, Ill., and juniors Nick Connors, of Leesburg, Va., and Sean Munster, of Chicago, Ill.

All ten members share a camaraderie that comes from working hard together and playing hard together.

The group practices its routines with the marching band on Green Field weeknights for two hours and on Cartier Field for one hour on home football Saturdays.

The time the Guard spends socializing together has created a bondedness among its members that probably cannot be found in any other group on campus, according to Kruczek.

"The Irish Guard is probably the closest thing there is to a fraternity on campus," he said. "We share a real closeness."

Kennedy also notes the fellowship among the Guardsmen.

"We're serious, but we're also social," he said. "The Guard is a great bunch of guys."

That the members of the Irish Guard capture the true Notre Dame spirit is apparent from the moment they step off on game days, marching past Washington Hall all the way to the stadium, putting on a pre-game performance that delights all.

The guard performs routines like the above to entertain Irish fans before the game and during halftime.

Chanting "Go Irish," alumni and fans magically appear overnight at Green Field to celebrate such an auspicious occasion as Notre Dame football with pre-game festivities - the tailgaters.

"You can’t beat this kind of stuff on a Saturday afternoon," agreed Lenny Zappia, class of 1983.

"I never got to tailgate because I was an Irish Guard. I enjoy it because I like seeing friends who graduated with me," said Dave Delahaney '83.

"A lot more women!" exclaimed Patrick Kerrigan, a lawyer and a 1971 graduate.

"When we went here the adults tailgated. We did not have access to cars so we did our partying in the dorms."

"It’s good that the under-graduate students have a place where they can vent their energy without worrying about being harassed by the South Bend Police," stated Scott Zwingley, a 1983 graduate and an MBA student.

Despite all its traditions, excitement and the various opinions the alumni hold, tailgaters have become a concern to the University and the neighboring community.

While the students are concerned with the strict rules and penalties, Notre Dame Security is busy carrying out new plans to minimize the usual and the unusual incidents that arise during every home football weekend.

"If you can’t tailgate then you lose much of the camaraderie of the ball game. Tailgaters are one of the places the alumni get to mix with the students," said Mike Kelly, class of 1983.

"The event is more than a football game. It is supposed to be a relaxed, enjoyable atmosphere," agreed Director of Security, Rex J. Rakow. "It is, however, the responsibility of the fans that they don’t infringe on rights of others."

Rakow emphasized the importance of good judgment as well as the observance of the Parking Lot Rules. Rule no. 4 of the seven rules is targeted especially towards those who plan to tailgate and drink, said Rakow. "Abuse of the rights of others as a result of the use of intoxicating beverages will not be tolerated in the parking lots or on any University grounds."

"We have 30 extra people to deal with such problems and safety and security of the patrons," said Rakow. "The different approach this year is that the security is working in pairs this year. It gives extra pairs of eyes and ears in the parking lots."

Phillip Glass' hypnotic opera about the nuclear age

feature's writer

Some of the finest music being composed today lies hidden and unnoticed behind the enigmatic mask of modern minimization. Philip Glass stands at the forefront of this new movement by challenging previous harmonic and rhythmic approaches to musical structure. The opera "Einstein On The Beach," (1976) music by Glass, staging by Robert Wilson, illustrates a certain obsession which Glass has for hypnotic and complex rhythmic textures - the hallmark of his work.

His work creates an effect distinctively its own. He combines many elements including choirs, electronic synthesizers, unconventional instruments and spoken words to get his special sound.

Glass ideas concerning music are far and space and time are largely new to post-13th century listening. Using the system upon which pop, jazz and rock were all based, Glass is attempting to evoke fresh experiences by questioning this traditional order.

All music creates a certain space which we play out the expression of its ideas. The use of rhythm as a primary means of expressing ourselves, exploring musical space is the essential characteristic which sets Glass' work apart from popular music in general.

Most western music depends on a consistent spatial-temporal structure. This regular framework serves as a foundation for the linear progression of the melody - usually the dominant element in western music. The melody builds up tension until the climax releases the energy and settles into resolution. The contrast against the steady beat allows one to best perceive the melodic variations which are responsible for creating the feeling.

Glass, on the other hand, links harmonic structure directly to rhythmic structure, allowing rhythm to dominate and guide the overall shape of the piece. Rhythm is the main variable, not melody. In his music for the opera "Einstein On The Beach," Glass uses this idea of rhythm over melody to create a hypnotizing, intricate musical landscape.

These compositional innovations stem from quite a formulation of classical training. Beginning his studies at The Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, MD, Glass entered the University of Chicago at the age of 15.

Between 1957 and 1961 he was a full-time student at Juilliard, and after graduation received a grant from the Ford Foundation to be a composer-in-residence with the Pittsburgh Public School System. In 1964, Glass was awarded a Fulbright grant for study in Paris.

One of his earliest compositions, a rhythmic piece called One Plus One (1968) illustrates the essence of all his musical compositions. The idea behind the piece is that Glass begins with two simple rhythmic units which lend themselves to all manner of combination. This idea of additive rhythm provides the basis for the music of "Einstein."

The title itself refers to a novel by Nevil Shute about the people of Australia left untouched by World War III but ultimately doomed by the radioactive fallout. By placing Einstein himself on the beach, walking with the Australians for the wind to bring the end, Glass gives us a clear image of a man facing the reality of his actions.

The opera itself consists of four main scenes, each of which has corresponding thematic music. Trains are symbolic in the first scene of the toy trains Einstein played with as a child and later used to illustrate his theory of relativity. Next, a trial scene seems to suggest Einstein as a self-proclaimed criminal, referring to the destructive powers which he and modern science have helped to unleash. A spaciousness in the third scene seems to extend his theories towards a future of time transcendence.

Einstein music is in Einstein's world, the importance of any one element depends upon the point of view of the observer. The feeling of Glass' work changes as the listener focuses attention on one or another of its aspects. In this way Glass includes that observer in the creative process. Within the limits that Glass has determined for us, we are free to interpret, to wander within a new world of sound.

Fly far, the best way to understand the ideas of Glass is by listening to his music. Einstein On The Beach is available at the audio reference center on the second floor of Memorial Library. The hours for the center are 8:45 a.m. to 10:45 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 1 p.m. to 10:45 p.m. on Sunday.

Chris Beamor broke her leg and sued the University for liability, thus spawning some of the precautions and rules. According to Rakow the court in this case demanded the provision of more security. She first gained acclaim for her spectacular one-woman show on Broadway. Then, seemingly from nowhere, she wowed audiences as Celie, the abused and tortured woman in Stephen Spielberg’s adaptation of “The Color Purple.” Now she’s back on the big screen with “Jumpin’ Jack Flash” attempting to combine her strong dramatic skills with her comic antics. In this vehicle, however, the two ingredients do not always mix well.

In her area keep their desks relatively clean of any memorabilia of the outside world. Doolittle likes to keep small toys on top of her terminal, including a rubber Pokey with which she often plays. Her apartment is also indicative of her character. Spy novels litter the floor as well as wierd, eccentric novelties like the six-foot long toothbrush she uses to scare a visitor.

In her endeavor to keep her job from getting too mundane, Doolittle resorts to holding conversations through her computer, with operators in other parts of the world. One day a message comes through on her terminal from a person named Jumpin’ Jack Flash. Jack, as she calls him, is a CIA agent who enlists her to help him escape from an Eastern Block country. As the investigative, curious type, Doolittle takes the assignment because she is not exactly normal with which she often plays. Thus, the movie is made and produced for markets in the United States.

Nonetheless, when she is given the chance to truly act in her best comedic style, she comes through with a presence that one can’t help but laugh and want more. Her emotional scenes are also quite good at times, though she is once again fighting the script.

Doolittle, up to this point, has seen some successful films, but the movie ‘Jumpin’ Jack Flash' could have gone a long way with a stronger script. As it now stands the movie isn’t a gas. gas. gas at all.

“In Jumpin’ Jack Flash” is now showing at the Town and Country Theater.

The Church teaches that the Church will judge you on your conscience. You could be numbered among the walking dead. The saints on earth, still climbing, Jacob’s ladder, can lose touch with God in those dark nights of the soul when it is all too easy to be unaware of the crises which he describes as being put in our way to let us discover the way to salvation. In the tides of life, the preacher of Ecclesiastes noted: “God sees to it that men fear Him” and early death are His servants. Every religious tradition has its special way of acknowledging the uncertainty of prosperity and survival.

A strong Christian faith trusts the Master of the universe has given us with a lick and a promise, along with directions to pie in the sky by-and-bye. We would be ingratitude to the good earth under our feet. All of it, the air, the moon, and the firmament, works together as a chorus declaring the glory of God.

Our brave students get very angry about the defense of the truth. What truth does any Christian know that justifies his abuse, in search of profit, of another person? Before shouting anyone down, you should look at yourself, to control the fever which could make me behave like a bully. Gentleness may not always be possible or desirable, but anger, used as an excuse for ranting and raving, may soon be telling lies.

Arguments, in which injustice and unfairness are clearer than the logic, are not a service to God. Doodle theologian goes on here as a game played by amateurs, some of whom don’t care enough about theology to do the homework which is necessary if they want their letters and articles to make sense.

If we want to go to the Holy Land to see the places where Christ walked and who he healed, we would have to invent Him. Quite a number of people don’t have God; or having Him, they give Him up when they see the suffering which the universe tolerates.

also provides the Falcons with strength and quickness on the line. All four line backers for Air Force - Brady Glick, Mak, Jeff Weathers, and J.J. Jones - are seniors. As a unit, the Falcons hold opponents to 77.7 yards per game rushing, and less than 2.5 yards per carry. Last week, they held Navy's Chuck Smith, who came into the Air Force game the nation's top rusher averaging 150 yards a game, to only 40 yards in 17 carries.

If there is a weakness, it lies in the Air Force secondary. But even that is deceptive. While the Falcons have given up 245.2 yards per game through the air, that statistic has to be put in the context of the pass-happy Western Athletic Conference.

The secondary and pass rush are solid. Senior cornerbacks Tom Rotello and Mike Tollever anchor a defensive backfield that has intercepted 11 passes so far this season. Rotello, who is the all-time interception leader at Air Force, has five of that total, and has also broken up five more.

"People just aren't going to sit there and pick them apart throwing the ball nor are they going to be able to maintain the ball on a consistent basis running because they run an awful lot of different defenses," says Holtz.

"They never make a mental error. Defensively they aren't going to give up a lot of points, and they haven't."

Look for some changes offensively for the Irish, mainly caused by injuries. Sophomore starting tailback Mark Green, who suffered a severe thigh bruise against Pitt, will be replaced by 6-1, 220-pound freshman Anthony Johnson. Braxston Banks (6-2, 208), yet another freshman, should see more time at fullback behind starter Pernell Taylor. It is doubtful whether Tom Rotello
Green, who leads the Irish with 186 yards rushing, will see any action Saturday.

The big issue, as always, will be at quarterback. Steve Beuerlein will get the starting nod for Notre Dame against Air Force, his concussion against Alabama keeping him out of only three offensive series last week against Pitt.

"At the present time, Steve Beuerlein gets us the best plays in the most opportune times and is the most consistent doing that," says Holtz.

"My style of play is to lead by example . . . not necessarily jumpin', hootin' and hollerin'."

Waltie Kleine (96) "My style of play is to lead by example . . . not necessarily jumpin', hootin' and hollerin'."

The repetitive nature of the problems is making Kleine's role slightly more difficult. After the Michigan State contest, Kleine acknowledged that the frustration was mounting. But to deal with it, he just blocks it out of his mind.

"We still have to focus on the future, and not dwell on the past," he says.

Kleine is definitely the leader in this respect. With only three home games left in his Notre Dame career, he is not about to let the team slack off.

"I want to make it count," he says. "I think all of our seniors do. That's why you'll see an attitude on this team that were not giving up."

Blame is another issue Kleine has addressed. He thinks it is crazy for Holtz to take the blame for the losses. The players have been coached very well -its the mental breakdowns that have caused the problems.

"If we did things exactly the way they coached us. like staying in our lanes, staying low, wrap up on tackles," he says, "I think we'd be in a better position right now."

Kleine's experiences this season should help as he looks beyond Notre Dame. Armed with a degree in ALPA and graduate work towards his MBA, he is prepared for other challenges if a pro career does not work out. But with his size, strength, and leadership ability, the NFL appears to be in his future.

"I have dreams about being a professional player," he says, "But I don't worry about that at all. I've got plenty to worry about right now."

"And I feel like if I play well, and do my best here, the rest will take care of itself."

Air Force grounds Notre Dame

Falcon ground game rolls by Irish

By MARTY STRASSEN
Assistant Sports Editor

If any game truly typified the Air Force Academy's dominance over Notre Dame in the last four meetings of the two teams, it was the 1984 contest at Notre Dame Stadium.

But to call that 21-7 Irish loss a 'context' would be to incorrectly imply that Notre Dame put up a fight. That was not the case, as Head Coach Gerry Faust suffered his third consecutive loss to the Falcons and their powerful wishbone offense.

The Irish, led by second-string quarterback Scott Grooms (Steve Beuerlein was injured), fumbled the ball five times in the first half. Four of those fumbles resulted from mishandled snaps from center, and three of them were on first down - preventing the offense from getting anything going.

The Falcons, meanwhile, were running all over the Notre Dame defense. Quarterback Bert Weiss had to air up the ball to the tune of a 47-yard touchdown pass in the first half. Weiss, who had 110 yards passing, also kicked a 24-yard field goal in the third quarter to stretch the lead to 17-0.

The Irish finished the game with 117 yards passing and only 90 yards on the ground. And for the third time in as many years, the Air Force had flown through the Gerry Faust- weperked Notre Dame football team and blown it away.
The Game
vs.

By TERRY LYNNCH
Sports Writer

Notre Dame vs. Air Force. It sure conjures up some great memories in Irish football history.

Maybe you remember last year, when the Falcons' Terry Maki broke through the Irish line late in the fourth quarter to block a John Carney field goal attempt, and Maki's teammate, A.J. Scott, picked up the ball and running 77 yards for the winning touchdown. Maybe you remember all 13 penalties against the Irish, most of which addressing penalties on the Irish offense from their end zone.

If you have a really good memory, you might recall the crowd at Falcon Stadium in Colorado Springs and that the game was on national television, providing the Falcons with exposure never seen before in their history.

However, and rather sadly, it is only the Irish football master who can remember the last time the Irish came away from the Air Force game with a victory. With last year's victory over the Irish, the Falcons are on the verge of joining the ranks of only two other teams who have managed to beat the Irish five years in a row. Mic­ higan State (1959-63) and Southern Cal (1978-82) are the only other Irish oppo­ nents to accomplish that feat.

If your memory is kind, you might re­ member the good-old days when Air Force was an annual patsy on Notre Dame's schedule and would quickly slip away to defeat. That happened the first 11 times Notre Dame and Air Force played.

No one team contrasts the recent Irish misfortune more with football than does Air Force, Where Notre Dame is slow, Air Force is quick. Where Notre Dame self­ destructs. Air Force executes flawlessly. When Notre Dame fails to take advantage of its opponent's mistakes. Air Force is exceptionally opportunistic.

Lou Holtz is familiar with Irish problems in his first matchup with the Falcons. "Looking ahead to Air Force is never a very pleasant thing," says Holtz. "The Air Force football team has little things the right way. It is talented, and also plays with exceptional poise. (It) really does the things you have to do to win.

Will the fact that the Irish haven't beaten the Falcons in four years be a motivating factor this Saturday?

Each week the Observer sports staff, a random student picked by the sports editor and some well-known figure in the Notre Dame community predict the outcome of the week's major college football games. Records are compiled as to how each person does against the spread. In other words, it isn't enough to pick the winner of a given game. The person must pick the winner and give the underdog points. Directing the ground attack for Air Force will be junior quarterback Jim Totnallo (17-36 passing for 346 yards, two TDs, and three INTs). The 5-11, 176-pound Tomalo, who stepped in at quarterback after the lone Air Force loss against Wyoming, was inserted mainly for his ability to execute the option consistently. He has guided the Falcons to three straight wins.

When Tomalo hands off, the ball will go to a host of Air Force backs from the same "slow-but-gritty" cookie cutter that haunted the Irish in the last three meetings. Seniors Pat Evans (114 carries for 458 yds., 5 TDs) at fullback and Mark Munalo (72 for 346 yds., 5 TDs) at left halfback lead the Falcon running game, but by no means can they be keyed on to stop the varied Falcon attack. Senior right halfback Johnny Smith and his back­ up, sophomore Albert Bookler, join Evans and Munalo in averaging over four yards per carry.

Senior wide receiver Tyrone Jeffcoat (11 catches for 211 yds., one TD) leads Fal­ con receiving corps, but look for Munalo (eight for 122 yds.) and Smith (six for 88 yds.) to come out of the backfield in third down passing situations.

On defense, the Irish will try to bounce back after allowing the Pitt offense to roll up 510 yards passing, 100 yards over the Irish defense's average. However, they held Pitt to only 23 yards rushing and that should figure to be more important against the wishbone.

"One of the problems you have with the wishbone is the more you know about it, the less chances you have to defend it," says Holtz, who has been known to use the wishbone on some of his op­ ponents in the past.

"You cannot defend the wishbone on the blackboard. You can only defend it with execution and your people whipping some people's blocks." Brandy Wells has joined Mike Haywood on the sidelines for the rest of the season, depleting the already-thin Irish defense. Defensive tackle Jeff Runse suffered a con­ cussion against Pitt and will probably not play much this week. Robert Banks, recovering from a hamstring pull he suf­ fered against Alabama, should return to the lineup.

No one team contrasts the recent Irish misfortune more with football than does Air Force, Where Notre Dame is slow, Air Force is quick. Where Notre Dame self­ destructs. Air Force executes flawlessly. When Notre Dame fails to take advantage of its opponent's mistakes. Air Force is exceptionally opportunistic.

Group must appreciate the culture it promotes

I am writing in response to the "Banned Group Looking at Options" article that appeared in the Tuesday, October 14, 1986 issue of The Observer. In the article, former co-leader Sean Evers defined two goals of the organization.

Esther Ivory

guest column

The first goal, to "aid starving people," is the most publicized goal of the organization. This purpose is even reflected in the name of the group, Rally Against Starvation (RASTA). The group is to be commended for undertaking this task.

However, I have a problem with the second goal Evers mentioned: "promote the culture of Africa." Since when did this become a goal of Rally Against Starvation? I have difficulty getting behind this goal, as the article seems to suggest. It appears that Evers is stretching the capabilities of Rally Against Starvation when he asserts that one of the group's goals is also to "promote the culture of Africa." Don't misunderstand, I am not saying that the two goals can't be achieved by an organization. But I am still disturbed by the group's goals, approach and perspective on the goal to "promote the culture of Africa." Rally Against Starvation is aware of the African Art Show which was sponsored by Rally Against Starvation last year. But the concept behind the Art Show seems unrelated to the other activities, which consisted mainly of discussing the implications of the group's assertion.

Before I go any further, a clarification is necessary. What is it that Rally Against Starvation is attempting to promote a culture which its members do not truly understand? How can the group "promote the culture of Africa" without some knowledge of African culture? Thus, the vital question: Is Rally Against Starvation promoting the "culture of Africa" or is it promoting what it THINKS is the "culture of Africa"?

Many African groups are working to get the word out that the "promote Africa" movement is misleading. “African people feel that the word ‘Africa’ is being misused,” said George Mubeza, President of the African Cultural Association.

Do not misunderstand, I am not saying that the group's goals are bad, but I do feel that the group should be more careful in how they define what they are trying to promote. As the group continues to develop, I hope that they will take the time to educate themselves about Africa and the issues that affect it.

Notre Dame powers past Tri-State behind the "morssaborg lineup"

By STEVE NEGARAGE Sports Writer
Playing its first game in almost two weeks after three rainouts, the Notre Dame baseball team defeated Tri-State, 13-3, Friday to raise its fall record to 4-1.

The Irish spotted Tri-State an early lead after two innings of the first game in the home half of the first inning behind Chris Flynn's home run. Flynn's blast scored Pat Roque and Newell Hays.

"The guys may have been taking Tri-State a little lightly, but after they hit the three-run homer, our guys realized they couldn't just throw their gloves out there to win," said Head Coach Larry Galli.

Dempel settled down and allowed no more runs in the next two innings. He was relieved by the two freshman phenoms, Brian Pilottowicz and Mike Coffey. Pilottowicz allowed one earned run over four innings to record the win, and Coffey got the save on an unearned run in three innings.

Dame took the lead for good in the second inning with an RBI double by Peavey and an RBI single by Flynn to increase the score to 5-3.

The Irish broke open a close 5-game in the seventh inning when Dame scored four runs behind stout baselines by catchers Pat O'Brien and Craig Pavlina, and run-scoring hits by Gary Dempel, Jim Johnson, and Casey Moore.

"We played so many people it was like a scrimmage," said Gal­­li. "We got to see five or six younger players and a lot of different combinations. We used a smorgasbord lineup."

Garrett leads the way as cross country team hits the road

By KELLY TOWSEND
Sports Writer

Over Fall Break the Notre Dame cross country team will take to the road. Friday the Irish travel to Terre Haute for the Indiana Inter-Collegiate Meet along with teams from every end of Indiana. Then, next week, they journey to Houston for a tri-meet with Houston and Rice along with teams from every end of the country.

"I'm taking control of the team and forcing them to run in a group," Garrett, (Mike) O'Connor, and Ron/Markelch are the strength of the team, Dan is improving and will give good races this week," Garrett did not run last season due to a hip injury, but is confidently working. He is a team runner and has a very optimistic outlook towards the meets coming up.

"We've improved a lot in the past two weeks," says Garrett. "In practice we've been running together more. Once we put it together as a team, we will surprise people."

Not only has the team been improving, but Garrett's personal performances have been, as Garrett puts it, "up to par".

Co-captain Rick Malveaux says of Dan, "He has made a remarkable comeback from his injury and is improving every week. In practice Dan sets the pace for the group and we follow."

This confident team attitude will be needed today against Indiana University, one of the top teams in the division. After today, the Irish could be just the confidence booster needed for next week's meet with Houston and Rice. "Indiana University has a good team," said Plane, "and it would be great to place three men in the top ten. Of the six consistent runners, the top three will probably be Dan, Mike and Ron. Coeds and injuries are taking their toll. Only now is the team getting healthy." Plane also believes that the team will have their hands full next week against Rice. Along with Rice, ranked in the top five in the nation, the Irish will be running against a strong Houston squad.

"The boys like to compete," said Plane. "All they need to do is learn to run well as a team and this needs to start today."
Two big meets ahead for women

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's cross country team, coming off its best performance of the year at the 1986 Southern Michigan Roadrunner Invitational, is preparing for two important meets over fall break.

The Irish will race in the Indiana Inter-Collegiate Meet Friday in Terre Haute and the North Star Conference meet in Milwaukee a week from Saturday.

As has been the case all season, team captain Julia Merkel led the Irish as they defeated 11 teams to win the invitational last Saturday at Southern Michigan.

Merkel finished second, only four seconds off the lead with a time of 18:10.

Merkel has been the top runner for the women's team all season. The Notre Dame women's cross country during her sophomore year.

A junior from Burke, Virginia, Merkel began running its best performance of the year when speaking or training and competition, "there's a definite difference between varsity and club level training and competition," says Merkel. "We train three hours a day as opposed to an hour, or an hour and a half last year."

Merkel says her goal is to make nationals, either this year or next. She adds that her progress this year is "20 seconds faster and three weeks ahead of schedule" over the goals she set at the beginning of the season.

A team leader is important to every young team, and Merkel leads by example, working hard and consistently improving on previous times. The hard work and competitiveness rubs off on every team member. The Improvements are visible throughout the team.

"One of the seven varsity runners ran the best races of their careers," said a proud Coach Dan Ryan after the Roadrunner Invitational.

Ryan noted the time gap of 1:27 between the Irish first and fifth finishers and the 30 second gap between numbers two and five as the best the team has run in competition this year.

The Irish, with 46 points, beat some tough competition last week. Second place finisher Ferris State (54 points) is a top-ten Division II team, and Macomb College, ranked third among junior colleges nationally, finished third at Southeast Michigan with 82 points.

"The Irish should do pretty well at State," says Merkel. "The conference is tough to tell, but we can probably be in the top three."

Zahm beats Hogs in Interhall FB

By KEVIN MCCORMACK
Sports Writer

The Interhall football regular season wound down to its conclusion the past two days at Carrier Field, with several teams up-staging and spoiling the playoff hopes of others.

In the Leahy division, the game of the week was Zahm against Holy Cross because the winner would be in the playoffs. After it was all said and done, the Zahmbles defeated the Hogs in a thriller 10-7.

The Hogs had the ball first, but were stopped by a hungry Zahm defense. As soon as Zahm got the ball, they drove down the field with a mixed selection of play calling, culminating in a 35-yard run. After Zahm scored on its first possession, the rest of the first half was a defensive struggle and ended in a 7-0 Zahm lead.

The Hogs came out firing and drove down to Zahm’s five to begin the second half, until a fumble ended the Holy Cross threat. Holy Cross pulled to within one, late in the third quarter on a 10-yard around the end play for a touchdown, but missed the extra point.

A 42-yard field goal by Andy Richardson set the stage for Holy Cross’ last opportunity to win. The Hogs drove down the field again, but were constantly being pressured by the Zahm defense which got a key sack on the drive. Time ran out with the Hogs on the Zahm 5-yard line, ending in heartbreak for Holy Cross and jubilation for the Zahmbles.

In other Leahy action, Pangborn beat Cavanaugh 14-0 and Stanford crushed hapless Alumni, 17-0.

In the Rockne division, Sorin was surprised by Carroll in a 0-0 tie by the Vermin, while Fisher defeated St. Ed’s 12-0.

In the Parseghian division, Grace fell Off-Campus 0-0 while the Maristoes of Montgomery handed Planner its second loss of the season 13-0.

The Navy relaxed its rules on ob­ligation in McCallum’s case, al­lowing him to play for the Los Angeles Raiders, where he’s now filling in for the injured Marcus Allen. If the other services follow the Navy’s lead, look for a few more of the so-called “blue-chippers” to head for West Point, Annapolis or Colorado Springs. That’s if they can handle the 4 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. daily schedule of McCallum.

But in the meantime, the games for the Commander-In-Chief’s trophy are now more than just a chance for military men to bet on and earn bragging rights. They’ve actually become pretty good ball games.

Women's football playoffs are set

By KATHY BERRY
Sports Writer

The final four in the Women's Interhall Football playoffs were decided Tuesday night as Breen-Phillips subdued Lyons, 26-6, and Pasquerilla East shut out Pasquerilla West, 14-0. This sets up a rematch of last year's championship game.

Lyons was penalized by several tackling calls which stopped them in the first half. Right before the half Lyons quarterback Robin O'Laughlin had two chances to score in the first half as it drove down to the fifteen and the twenty, but it couldn't put anything into the endzone.

In the second half, P.E.'s Annie Shreish intercepted P.W.'s pass to put them on the forty-yard line. On fourth down and twelve, Colleen Donnally connected with Mia Faust for a thirty-yard touchdown. With the two-point conversion, P.E.'s Lynch at quarterback for Lyons, B.P. came up by twelve.

Other In the other semi-final match, Johnson ran five yards for the touchdown. Mary's College ran it back for a sixty-five yard pass off. It's what B.P. used for its first score. B. P. came up against Lyons. B.P. and P.E., both with records of 6-1, are pitted against each other in the other semi-final match.

Flags were difficult to grab and passes fell short as temperatures dropped in the thirties Tuesday night. The run was quite effective and that's what B.P. used for three of its four touchdowns against Lyons. B.P.'s Margaret Johnson ran five yards for the first touchdown of the game. B.P. fumbled on the two point conversion and it was 6-0.

In the second half with Karen Lynch at quarterback for Lyons, tailback Robin McHugh ran forty yards for its first score. B.P. came back and clinched the win with a thirty-yard touchdown run by Caroline Burke and a scoring pass play to Amy Tweder. B.P. made one two-point conversion to win by the score of 26-6. "I think that was their most well-played game so far," said Danny Deboer, B.P.'s coach. "I think we're peaking now and we're ready for the playoffs."

In the war of the Pasquerillas, P.E.'s Packers scored on their first possession on a pass from Colleen Donnally to Colleen O'Connor. P.W.'s Kathy Moran broke up the conversion attempt to make it 6-0. P.W.'s "Field Wave" had two chances to score in the first half as it drove down to the fifteen and the twenty, but it couldn't put anything into the endzone.

In the second half, P.E.'s Annie Shreish intercepted P.W.'s pass to put them on the forty-yard line. On fourth down and twelve, Colleen Donnally connected with Mia Faust for a thirty-yard touchdown. With the two-point conversion, P.E.'s Lynch at quarterback for Lyons, B.P. came up by twelve.

"I'm happy with the way they've played this season," P.E.'s coach Jeff Morgan said about his team. "I think they showed a lot of poise in their games against Farley and Lewis. I'm looking forward to good playoffs."

Novice Tournament features close fights

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame Boxing Club ended its fall season Wednesday with the annual Novice Tournament. In the first bout, Jaime Bellette came away with a unanimous decision against Ruben Mintel.

At 150 pounds, Dave Halems lost a tough decision to Joe Dieterle. Eric Bender inched by John Gordon with a split decision.

The fight between John Albertini and Tim O'Laughlin at 150 pounds was stopped in the second round because of injury. Tim Calahan battled with Steve Dempsey to win a unanimous decision.

At 160 pounds, Bill Handley traded leather with Mark Deller and came away with the closest of decisions.

Tom Stahl slid past a game Jay DeCraaf to gain the victory. The final fight of the afternoon saw Jay Sheehan beat Jim Mason in a split decision.

TIME FOR BIG UN!

is Coming! October 31st

Mark Williams

Gary Larson
The path of football at the Academies

The Air Force is coming, the Air Force is coming. For the Irish, that really does mean war. By now, no one needs to be reminded of four year's worth of the Irish follies against Air Force. Four years of being beaten by a flock of Falcons that refuses to fly.

But Air Force's success last late is part of a larger picture, the rebirth of Academy football.

In games gone by, the service academies, especially Army and Navy, were football powers. In 1913, for example, Notre Dame was a small unknown which went east to play mighty Army. Instead, the Irish, led by the passing combination of Gus Dorlas to Knute Rockne, whipped the Cadets, 35-13. And no one forgets the now famous 0-0 tie in 1946.

Dennis Corrigan
Sports Editor

Army continued to be a power until into the 1950's. winning back-to-back national titles in 1944 and 1945. In 1945, Mr. Inside, Felix "Doc" Blanchard won the Heisman Trophy. And Mr. Outside, Glenn Davis won it the following year.

But after 1958, the year Pete Dawkins won the Heisman, Army retreated from the national scene.

The Naval Academy story is much the same. While never as strong as Army, the Midshipmen did finish second to the Cadets in 1945 and in the first bowl game (1945). Then a year ago-to-be-senior named Roger Staubach walked away with the Heisman. "At least in Texas," 38-6. In the Cotton Bowl, thereby finishing second in the race for the national championship, but then Navy sunk from the polls and national prominence.

The Air Force Academy has a slightly different story. The Falcons didn't take wing until the 1956 season, but just two years later, they were 9-2-0 and in the Cotton Bowl earning a 4-0 tie with TCU and a number-six ranking. The Falcons appeared in the Gator Bowl in 1963 and the Sugar Bowl in 1970. But then Air Force flew from prominence.

The Academy story is much like the Sevens. Vietnam and the the anti-military sentiment which followed contributed to this as well as the recruiting difficulties that are unique to the Academies. It's hard to sell the average high school all-American to come to one of the academies. Playing football and even spend four years in the service when a lot of high school athletes are thinking college then pros.

But starting in 1978, something happened. The service academies became competitive again. That year, George Weidt and his Midshipmen finished 8-3 and beat BYU in the Holiday Bowl. Navy went to two more bowls in 1989 and 1991, losing both. The Middies had a top-quality running back in Eddie Meyers and now have Chuck Smith, one of the leading rushers in the nation this season. But since that 1981 season, the Naval Academy hasn't been too successful but in 1982, the Air Force landed.

That year, the Falcons made their first of four appearances in post-season play, beating Vanderbilt in the Hall of Fame Bowl, 36-26. The Falcons next made consecutive successful appearances in the Independence Bowl before beating Texas in last year's Bluebonnet Bowl. Those were the only two teams to win consecutive bowl games (UCLA is the other).

Playing Air Force with its "Tidehome" is no longer the better one on anyone's season.

Army, too, has a post-season winning streak of its own. After years of losing, the Cadets made it to the now decertified Cherry Bowl, where they edged Michigan State, 10-6. It was the first bowl game in Army's long history. Last season, Army finished second in the nation in rushing with its own version of the wide receiver and split end. That season, the Cadets downed Illinois, 31-29. In the Peach Bowl.

Irish continue difficult road trip

By RICK REBROCK
Sports Writer

October break will not feature much of a respite for the Notre Dame volleyball team as it takes on four tough opposition on the road. The team is off to its best start in history, 14-5, and already has started the road trip with two wins in three tries.

Head Coach Art Lambert says he is hoping this trip will be a step toward improving Notre Dame's reputation.

"The Ohio State game is pivotal for us to gain credibility," he says. "They are ranked in the top 10. It's our region." After Ohio State, the Irish will take on Duke, North Carolina State and Virginia.

The Irish coach says he would have been happy to know he would be 14-5 at this stage if asked at the beginning of the year, but he thinks the record could have been even better.

"I had hoped to be where we are," he says. "But we could be even better. We've made some critical mistakes at crucial times, or we'd be better.

"This team is starting to realize just how good they can be. I feel good about the team because of the effort," he continues. "It's a far different, far better team than last year."

Lambert emphasizes that the second half of the schedule is tougher than the first, but he remains optimistic.

"This is a very difficult road swing, but we are capable of beating every team. This is the kind of trip where a team develops, with back-to-back games against hard-nosed opponents."

ND soccer has a tough task ahead

By PETE GEGGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame soccer team leaves today on what is perhaps its most critical series of games in its history.

Sunday, the Irish will face Connecticut at Storm, Conn. Though the Huskies have just recently fallen out of the Top-20, they are always tough in their home stadium.

Next Friday the team will face Penn State at University Park, Pa. A noted "tournament team," the Nittany Lions also have just fallen from the Top-20, largely because of their 1-0 loss to Akron.

These two games will be an excellent test for the 9-5-1 Irish, who have not played a game since last week's tie against Akron. Head Coach Dennis Grace believes the rest has made his team hungry to play.

"The people came back (from a three-day break) ready to play," says Grace. "I liken it to pre-season—they are in that kind of shape."

Even more importantly, the future of the program could be affected by the team's play next week. Five recruits plan to attend these games, and a strong showing by Notre Dame would give Grace more leverage in recruiting.

Notre Dame needs continued offensive production from Bruce McCourt (13 goals, 6 assists), Randy Morris (5 goals, 8 assists), and Joe Stenberg (8 goals, 5 assists). The defense may experiment with a double-stopper alignment, recently installed to allow both John Guignon and Pat McCleanan a chance to play in the midfield.

Even with victories, the Irish chances of post-season play are just about nil because of four losses in their own region.

"I wish it could have been this year," says Morris. "But now were playing for next year and the year after that."

IRISH ITEMS
Co-captain Steve Lowrey is expected to play after suffering a strained knee in the Akron contest. Also returning from injuries are co-captain Jim Flynn and keeper Kevin Maio. Wingback Tom Pernstelner is out with back spasms. The Irish have won every game that McCourt has scored in...Grace's wife Carolyn continues the program could be affected by the team's play next week. Anthony Johnson (22) will make his first start at tallback for the Irish Saturday in place of the injured Mark Green. Details on Saturday's game appear in the Irish Extra.
