Vilas, an Argentine sociologist who has lived in Nicaragua since 1980, outlined the problems the peoples of the Atlantic coast region of Nicaragua as the revolutionary (Sandinista) government has tried to install its system of rule in that region.

At first, the government tried to force the coast people into the rest of the country, according to Vilas. The region’s isolation is partly due to geography and is complicated by the contras who attack transportation as part of their struggle, said Vilas.

These groups’ cultures and the government’s policies stifled the groups’ cultures and caused dissatisfaction with the revolutionary government, according to Vilas.

Recently, the revolutionary government has acknowledged its mistakes and has taken two major steps, Vilas said. First, they are setting free coast people who are caught fighting the government. Second, they have undertaken an autonomy project. Vilas.

"The government has faced is that revolutionary theories paid no attention to ethnicity in Latin America," Vilas said. There was a reduction of the coast communities to their economic status, said Vilas. There was also a cultural reduction of the various ethnic groups. These groups “were reduced to just the symbolic aspects of their ethnicity” such as their different languages and different phenotypes, according to Vilas.

This reductionist approach was the main problem during the early years of the revolution, the problem which kept the people of the coast from relating peacefully with the government.

Many people from the coast were relocated by the government away from areas that would be the scenes of battles with the contras and into rigidly-structured towns, said Vilas.

The region is occupied by several ethnic groups, all of which are distinct from each other and not integrated into the rest of the country, according to Vilas.

Vilas said the coast people have felt caught in the middle, not being Sandinistas but not being contras either. Their neutrality has been violated by both sides, said Vilas.

The coast region “is a very large part of the country with a very small population, but with large problems caused by ethnic diversity,” said Vilas.

Possible laundry plans discussed by Senate

By DAVID T. LEE
News Staff

The Student Senate discussed possibilities for different laundry plans for men in a meeting last night.

"If you know you do not use $50 every semester (in laundry), why be forced to use it?" asked Sophomore Class President Pat Cooke.

Cooke noted that there are different meal plans, saying a similar system might be feasible for male laundry service as well. He suggested possible $50 and $30 plans in addition to the present mandatory fee of $50 per semester.

Senator Brian Holst suggested a completely optional laundry service for men.

"What I think is a contradiction is financial aid. (The administration) says they are not going to take another person's money to pay for financial aid... But people who do not use the laundry service are subsidizing other people's services," said Holst.

Holst also proposed laundry facilities in male dorms, although realizing the dorms "have not supplied them because the buildings are not equipped."

The Senate also discussed a possible stand on divestment of the University's holdings in companies in South Africa.

The debating topic will judge each debate. The decision rendered is not based on the personal views of the judge. "It's not whether the judge agrees, it's who presents the more cohesive argument," McKenna said.

Jack Lee, a senior participator in the debate, said, "I have never been involved in debate but it seemed like it would be an enjoyable thing to try. You always need a few people to get the ball rolling," said Lee.

government in Latin America," he added.

The autonomy program has taken different approaches since each of the ethnic groups of the coast is so different, said Villas. Some groups have desired the right to speak their native language when dealing with government business.

Jaejer, however, most students are "apathetic."

"Most students said they thought the administration had a good grip of what was going on," said Jaejer.

Senator John Gardner said the Senate should force the issue upon the administration and the student body, in part because many students have not educated themselves on the South African situation.

In other matters, Off-Campus Commissioner Tracey Thomas said RASTA's appeal to remain as a University organization failed.

Citing a letter from Vice-President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson, Thomas said, "They are banned this year, with a possibility they can exist with probationary status next year." RASTA must appeal again next year if they wish to become a legal group on campus.

Student Body President Mike Sweeney said the United Way campaign is slated to begin on November 3. He added "the crayons will be back in force," in a reference to their presidential campaign last year in which posters were drawn using crayons.

The Senate also reported plans to enlarge the bus stop at the main circle, because the University is the number two tourist attraction in Indiana.

The sides of the debate are chosen randomly. In other words, a participant may be debating against his personal beliefs.

"It is a growing experience to present an argument from a point of view other than your own," said McKenna. "It opens your mind to see that there is another side," McKenna said.

All members of the winning floor in Grace Hall who attend at least one debate will be taken out to dinner in the Faculty Dining Room of South Dining Hall. McKenna said, "To encourage people to come we are having a free drawing at each debate for food vouchers at Sarge's food service."

Others have emphasized re-unification of families disrupted by relocation or have desired economic improvement.

The government has recently taken a few major actions toward autonomy, said Villas. They have officially recognized the Nicaraguan people as a multi-cultural one, and have officially declared the languages of the various ethnic groups to be official languages of Nicaragua.

Pope, religious leaders pledge to work for world peace

Associated Press

ASSISI, Italy - Bearing olive branches and offering prayers, Pope John Paul II and other leaders of great world religions, from Moslems and Jews to fire-worshipping Zoroastrians, solemnly pledged yesterday to work for peace.

The pope, summing up the resolve of his religious colleagues, urged world leaders to fashion "strategies of peace with courage and vision." The Dalai Lama, exiled Buddhist god-king of Tibet, called the historic gathering in Assisi, hilltown birthplace of St. Francis, a recognition of the "indispensable spiritual dimension" in efforts to end war. And the efforts had an immediate, if temporary, impact in far corners of a war-torn globe.

Warning parties in a dozen countries, including Nicaragua, El Salvador and Cambodia, acceded to the pope's appeal that combatants lay down their arms for 24 hours yesterday. The cease-fire broke down in Lebanon, however, and minor violations were reported elsewhere.

In at least a dozen other conflicts, meanwhile, from the Iran-Iraq border to Northern Ireland, wars dragged on heedless of the papal plea.

The 180 participants at the prayer meeting represented 32 denominations and groups from Christendom as well as American Indians, African animists, Japanese Shintoists, Buddhists, Hindus, Sikhs, Jains and Bahais.

The denominations' adherents number 3.5 billion people, or 70 percent of the world's population.

In a moving climax to the day's events, the participants, remnant in attire of a dozen colors, gathered on the steps of the basilica of St. Francis and raised olive branches in a commitment "to make peace a central aim of our prayer and action."

In his final address, the pope warned that the choice facing humanity is "true peace or catastrophic war."

"Either we learn to walk together in peace and harmony, or we drift apart and ruin ourselves and others," he said.

The Dalai Lama told reporters, "The significance of today's gathering must be found in its symbolism. We stressed the importance of prayer and reflection and the indispensable spiritual dimension in building peace."

But a Moslem from the Ivory Coast, Ahmed Tidjani, cautioned that many of the participants, unlike the pope, lacked the power to translate "the spirit and meaning of Assisi" into concrete action.

Making Urban Plunge changes outlook on life

In January of 1982, during Christmas break of my junior year at Notre Dame, I made an Urban Plunge. Now, almost five years later, I have the job of coordinating the Urban Plunge program. The story of how I went from participant to coordinator might shed some light on the impact the Urban Plunge can have on a student's life.

Dan Keusal

Along with eight other NDSCMC students, I made my plunge in Washington, D.C. About 45 minutes from where I had grown up in the Maryland suburbs. Guided by a priest named Father John Harrfman who lived and worked among the poor, we saw parts of the nation's capital that are not included in any of the tours most visitors take part in: the D.C. City Jail, the House of Refuge for homeless and battered women, the Columbia Road Health Clinic.

We spent one morning running the Zachauens Soup Kitchen, the Plunge activity I remember most vividly. Some of the people who ate there that morning kept to themselves, not talking to anyone. Others were friendly and talkative, glad to have an audience for their stories and jokes. All of them were hungry. That night, when the nine of us gathered to discuss the day's experiences, my friend Mike pulled from his wallet a few wrinkled, stuck-together papers. "An old woman at the soup kitchen gave these to me today," he said. "She wanted to do something to thank me for helping her. They are worthless, really, but they were her only possessions. She treasured them. So will I."

The Urban Plunge was an eye-opening experience for me, but it wasn’t enough. When I returned to campus for the spring semester, I still had unanswered questions, and an unfulfilled desire to see more, to do more. I had no idea at the time where those questions and that desire would lead me.

Within a few weeks, I had applied for, and been granted, the chance to do a Summer Service Project, which would allow me to live and work in inner-city Chicago.

Don Keusal graduated from Notre Dame in 1983 with a B.A. in Theology. He currently coordinates Justice and Peace Programs at the Center for Social Concerns.

Quote of the day

"I know that you, like students all over the world, are troubled by the problems that weigh on society around you and on the world as a whole... It is a challenge... but do it in the light of Christ... Make Jesus always a part of your dedication to the well-being of your fellow human beings."

The Little House in the Big Woods of Saint Mary's Campus.

Sister Madeleva's immediate superintendent.

Riedinger House served for many years as the Model House of the home economics department, and as such it received quite a glowing critique in the Holy Cross Courier, the magazine of Saint Mary's College, in February of 1939.

"It stands west of the ballroom in Le Mans, and almost directly north of Holy Cross Hall...The interior is designed on small scale in keeping with the youthful occupants, for the senior home economics majors live in the house, and manage it on a supervised basis. The hall is floored with Metoeve slate, practical and artistic. Opposite a lift-top under a mirror are two lovely old colored Holbein prints. In the powder room back of the stairway, Staffordshire paper, glazed chin and ruffled net add a note of interest."

Because the home economics department no longer exists at Saint Mary's, the House is used now by alumnae of Saint Mary's according to the guidelines established October 1, 1976 by former President John Duggan. Before then, Riedinger House served as the home of Father McGrath during his term as President of the college, from 1966 through 1970.

The House may now be used for overnight accommodations for official guests of the college, for example Regents, Alumnae Board Members and guest speakers. The House may not be used for overnight accommodations for any individual's personal guests.

The House may also be used for formal receptions for small groups of alumnae, students, faculty members and administration if and when the Club House or Stapleton Lounge are either unavailable or inappropriate.

Space in the two-story house is limited. Only 25 people would be comfortable for cocktails, and only eight could be seated for dinner. The House has only three bedrooms, each with double beds, so sleeping quarters are limited to five people.

Today the nearest neighbor to the house is the Saint Mary's Security hut, although the house bears about as much of a resemblance to each other as the Notre Dame dome and the Le Mans tower. Most Saint Mary's students, however, know more about the Security hut than they do about the 47-year old Riedinger House.

"The chateau would serve as our rest stops from city to city," said McGuire. The city of Tours was their first stop. The two were spending the night with a French family known to McGuire. The Sabat family - owners of Tours' most exclusive patisserie (bakery) and celebrated caterers, were cousins to the French family McGuire lived with in Angers.

The Sabats were extremely hospitable to the travelers and welcomed them with open arms. "They were just fantastic," said Reilly. They let us keys for the house and pastries in the morning. They were very giving and open people.

Saturday's destination was the city of Blois. Coincidentally, Monsieur Sabat was catering a party in Blois the same night, to which he invited McGuire and Reilly. They graciously and eagerly accepted.

This however, was not going to be any old banquet, for Chateau Blois was where the evenings festivities were being held. Chateau Blois, incidentally, was the home of Francois I and his bride Catherine de Medici during the sixteenth century. The view from the Chateau was magnificent," said Reilly. "The flaming red, pink and orange sun setting over the Loire River."

"The feast began. Given a private room complete with a waiters, the two were wined and dined. "We were walled on hand and foot," said McGuire. A bottle of wine and a platter of pastries was the first course of the five course meal they received. The students stuffed themselves with chicken, ham, vegetables, salad, cheese, and dessert. Dessert, of course, consisted of Sabat's renowned pastries. Reilly and McGuire could only marvel at the evening. "I imagined ourselves as French royalty," said Reilly. "I was back in the 17th century with the queen's court, until I looked down at my clothes."

The hour and a half feast was followed by a light and sound show which mapped out the history of the castle. "This evening was definitely the highlight of the trip," said Reilly.

Unfortunately their trip had to come to an end. They cycled back to Angers and took in the breathtaking scenery of the Loire Valley which consists mostly of farmland and grape vineyards. McGuire and Reilly's trip was an experience they will never forget, which provided them with memories that are more real than any movie could ever be.

Mets' fans rock Shea

Associated Press

NEW YORK - An ecstatic crowd at Shea Stadium cele­brated the Mets' second World Series title in a rousing fashion last night although mounted police kept the carousers from taking the field.

When Jesse Orosco struck out Dave Henderson and the center field, crowd registered 11:26 p.m., scores of New York City police officers on and off horseback protected the front of the stadium to prevent a recurrence of the pandemonium that occurred after the Mets won the National League East championship on Sept. 17.

One fan made it to second base, but police apprehended him there.

Meanwhile, more than 55,000 fans poured in. Fireworks sounded throughout the stadium.

Game 7 featured the noisiest crowd of the series. Starting pitcher Ron Darling had complained after the first game that the rain had been replaced by fat cats who had the clout to obtain tickets - but Monday night, Shea shook.

Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez delivered the first two RBIs in the sixth inning of Game 7 of the World Series last night. Hernandez also added a sacrificed fly in leading New York to an 8- victory and the Series title.
Volleyball upsets regionally-ranked Buckeyes

By RICK RIETBROCK
Sports Writer

Notre Dame volleyball coach Art Lambert said they may be mopping the floor of the ACC Pit before yesterday's practice. His team spent its October break mopping up four out of five opponents to finish its eight-game road trip with a 6-2 record.

Lambert was mopping the floor to remove the three-point line that the men's basketball team had put down for practice. He said he hoped the road trip had added something to the team.

"I think we're a better team because of the trip," he said.

"I think you improve on the road by eating at a different place, sleeping in a different bed. It forces you to forget to get together a little bit as a team."

The Irish began the trip with a big win over Ohio State, who was ranked in the top ten in the region, by scores of 21-15, 16-15, 15-9, Ohio State was the big game, in Lambert's view, and he said he was glad to get it.

"The team played extremely well against Ohio State," he said. "I was real pleased with our effort and the outcome."

Notre Dame went on to post a win against Georgetown, 15-1, 15-6, 16-15, 15-6, but then fell to Duke, 15-8, 7-15, 9-15, 11-15. Lambert said that the team did not have one of its best performances in that match.

"I'm really disappointed with the loss and the girls are really disappointed, too," he said. "I'm sure a lot of girls would like to have that match back again, but of course we can't play it over."

"We just have to try not to make those errors again."

The team finished the trip with wins over North Carolina State (15-10, 15-7, 15-12), Virginia (15-11, 15-7, 15-1), and the Irish now stand at 18-6 and Lambert said he was reasonably pleased with the team's overall performance.

"Everyone played well at times, and everyone had her moments," he said. "As long as we don't repeat some of the mistakes we made."

Notre Dame now begins to embark on the more difficult half of its schedule by playing host to Bradley on Wednesday before hitting the road again to face Northern Illinois and Marquette this weekend.

Boggs, Bosox disappointed, not ashamed

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Wade Boggs' face said it all.

As the New York Mets celebrated their World Series championship on the field at Shea Stadium, the American League batting champion sat in the dugout and cried.

The 8-5 loss to the Mets in Game 7 last night left the Boston Red Sox hurt and disappointed, but not ashamed, they said.

"There's nothing to be sorry about, it was a great Series," Boston first baseman Bill Buckner said.

"We gave it a good shot, but those guys hit when they had to," slugger Jim Rice said.

"It hurts, coming so close, but we never gave up," Boston reliever Bob Stanley said.
Improvement on horizon for Sailing Club

Although the Notre Dame Sailing Club has not fared as well as usual in regular season regattas, the Irish are still confident of advancing to the prestigious Timmie Angstrom Regatta.

Notre Dame will compete in a regatta at Toledo this weekend that includes Michigan, Michigan State, and Purdue, among others. The Timmie Angstrom Regatta is held in the Chicago Yacht Club over Thanksgiving break, will include about 20 of the best teams throughout the country.

"We did well in the Area A's this past three years," said Club President Tony Fink. "The powerhouse in the Midwest this year, Notre Dame's making sure not to look past the Area A's this year."

"The rest of the schools have really improved incredibly this year," said Fink. "Schools like Northwestern and Hope College were never big threats. Now they're are.

A spot in the Timmie Angstrom Regatta would also give the Irish a chance to accomplish one of their major goals for the season.

The Mets continued from page 12 six innings and gave up three runs on seven hits in Game 5 of the American League playoffs.

The Red Sox won that game 7-4, and were only one hit away from sweeping the series on the road. But they couldn't make it all the way back.

"It was a tough series," said Fink. "We were looking to come back strong." But the Red Sox proved too much for the Irish.

"The Red Sox have a great team," said Fink. "They're one of the best teams throughout the country.

The Mets led 6-3, and they were on their way.

The Mets started poorly in the seventh game as Dwight Evans hit two consecutive homers in the second inning and Boston jumped to a 3-0 lead off Ron Darling. The Mets finally got to Hurst in the sixth inning. Hurst was 0-3 with three runs, two on Hernandez's bases-loaded single.

Hurst had retired 11 in a row and had allowed one hit when the Mets sent up pinch-hitter Lee Mazzioli, who singled and scored the tying run in the eighth inning of Game 6. Mazzioli singled with one out, and Wilson followed with a single that sent Mazzioli to second. Hurst went to the mound and Darrius Miller took one strike, then hit a slicing line drive into left-center. It was an easy out.

Hurst, meanwhile, came out for a pinch hitter in the seventh. He worked six innings, giving up three runs on four hits. The winner of Game 1, Hurst, went the distance and a 1-4 record. He had pitched in two World Series games with a 1.12 earned run average, but he was out of this one in the fourth inning after giving up three Red Sox runs in the second.

Mets' Knight plays hero, named MVP

Associated Press
NEW YORK — Ray Knight, the man the New York Mets didn’t want, turned out to be the one they needed the most, and was named most valuable player of the World Series last night.
Knight, who batted .391 with nine hits in 23 at-bats, hit the seventh-inning home run that broke a 3-3 tie and sparked the Mets to an 8-5 victory over Boston in the seventh game.
Knight was being fitted for goalline horns in Game 6 after his throwing error gave Boston a lead that could have ended the series.
Knight said, "I was 0-for-4 and struck out in my last three at-bats." He hit the seventh-inning home run because of the error.
Knight said, "Just goes to show you, if you keep fighting, anything can happen."

The UConn match was the first of a two-game road trip for the Irish over fall break.
"Last Thursday, Notre Dame finished the road trip with a 3-0 victory over St. John’s."

Despite the two-week layoff prior to the UConn game, Notre Dame got off to a strong start.
Winger Pat Szanto scored off a feed from Steffeni last night. They are the Irish scorers. McCourt has 34 points and McCourt moved from wingback to sweeper for both games.

Wingback "Tiger" McCourt, who had 11 receptions for 241 yards, also scored on an 11-yard run and was named most valuable player of the game.

The victory gave New York 6-2 mark and put the Giants in the playoffs.

"I didn’t think I’d have time to turn and shoot. But when the ball went in, it was just a great feeling."

Even more amazing is the fact that Murphy stayed in the lineup. McCourt’s goal at the 63:24 mark moved him into a tie for McCourt is the nation of all NCAA Division 1 leading scorers. McCourt has 34 points on 16 goals and six assists. The Huskies tied it 10 minutes later on a shot from outside the penalty area.

"They were pounding us," said Graci. "We didn’t get much of an attack going. I wasn’t sure how we would respond to the goal."

The Irish did not fold rather, they sent the game into overtime.

In the second overtime period Notre Dame had a corner kick. Murphy boomed it to Guignon, who sent a shot wide to the right of the goal. But Murphy was in the ball’s path, and deflected it into the net with the back of his heel.

It was a spontaneous type of thing," said Murphy. "I didn’t think I’d have time to turn and shoot. But when the ball went in, it was just a great feeling."

"In the first overtime period of Saturday morning, Steve Lowrey played for the University of Connecticut, 2-1, over fall break. Pete Geneg details the action beginning on page 12.

Mets top Red Sox to take World Series title

Knight’s home run ignites climactic Mets' comeback

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Ray Knight ignited a three-run rally in the seventh inning with a home run, clinching another New York comeback and sending the Mets to their second World Series championship with a 6-3 victory last night over the Boston Red Sox.

The Mets scored three runs in the sixth inning, two on a single by Keith Hernandez, to chase two-game Series winner Bruce Hurst and tie the score 3-3. Then Knight led off the seventh with a homer to left-center that started the Mets to their first World Series title since 1969.

Hernandez capped the inning with a sacrifice fly for a 6-3 lead.

The Mets still had one last obstacle to overcome as the Red Sox rallied for two runs in the eighth and had the tying run on second base with one out.

But Jesse Orosco came out of the bullpen and got Rich Gedman on a fly to short, struck out Dave Henderson and got pinch hitter Don Baylor to ground out to short.

Darryl Strawberry led off the eighth with a homer off Boston reliever Al Nipper. Orosco, batting for only the fourth time this season, singled in Knight with the eighth New York run.

Winners of major league-leading 108 games during the season, the big question about the Mets was how they would hold up under pressure. They had never been tested.

But they won their third National League pennant in a tense six-game playoff with Houston, culminating in the longest postseason game in history, a 6-5, 16-inning victory in the Astrodome.

Then, after losing the first two games of the World Series at home, they became only the second team in World Series history to come back to win. The only other team to do it was last year’s Kansas City Royals.

The Red Sox came back with Hurst on three days’ rest, taking advantage of a rainout of Game 7 on Sunday night. It was a gamble because Red Sox Manager John McNamara had said Hurst didn’t pitch well on three days’ rest. In his only other appearance this season on three days’ rest, he worked

Notre Dame ends Air Force jinx with basic running attack

By MARTY STRASSEN
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz will not concede that any Irish victory is an easy one, but picking up his second win at the Georgia Dome last night against Air Force was a welcome return, giving Notre Dame the lead for good.

"We had a lot of big plays from a lot of different people," Holtz said. "I felt that our defense just kept us in the ballgame the whole way, and we felt we had enough points to win by the end of the third quarter."

Notre Dame scored all 31 points in the first three quarters, after falling behind on a Chris Blasy field goal with 55 seconds to go in the opening period.

But then Notre Dame began to run ... and run ... and run.

Junior flanker Tim Brown caught the ensuing kickoff on the Irish 5-yard line in the right corner, and broke back toward the middle. While Air Force’s defense bit on a fake, Brown broke one feeble attempt at a tackle at his own 15 and promptly bursted up the middle for a 66-yard touchdown return, giving Notre Dame the lead for good.

"When I cut back to the middle, there wasn’t anyone there," Brown said. "I was just looking at the goal line and I felt one guy hit my leg. It was just off to the races from there."

"We’ve been coming close (to breaking one) in the last couple of weeks and we finally got one. I really needed this. I’m starting to settle down and play the kind of ball I know I can play," Brown said.

The Falcons used the wishbone offense to average better than 20 rushing yards a game heading into the contest, but it was clear from the outset that Notre Dame’s defense was up to the challenge on this day.

Vicious hits by linebacker Cedric Figaro and strong safety George Streeter (replacing the injured Brandy Wells) caused Air Force fumbles in the first half, both of which were pounced on by Figaro.

"Today we came out and attacked them," Figaro said. "Before the past two years, we played more of a show play defense, which I felt hurt us. Today we didn’t wait for them - we went out and attacked." Streeter, in addition to causing a fumble, tied Mike Kovalinski with eight tackles on the day, including three for losses, and also broke up two passes.

Air Force settled for only 186 rushing yards to Notre Dame’s 257, and completed only five passes despite trailing for most of the game. Junior quarterback Jim Tomallo, usually a threat on the ground, was held to just 12 net yards rushing.

Back-up signal-caller Dee Davis was intercepted late in the fourth quarter by Irish free safety Steve Lawrence, adding to the Falcon turnover total. That made Holtz’ strategy quite simple run.

Senior quarterback Steve Beuerlein led an Irish version of the wishbone on an "in-your-face" touchdown drive with

ND soccer scores ‘biggest win ever’

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

In a game described by Irish head coach Dennis Grace as "the biggest win ever in the history of Notre Dame soccer," the Irish defeated the University of Connecticut, 2-1, in overtime.

A crowd of 4,300 witnessed the Huskies’ first loss at home since Oct. 24, 1984, when they lost to Penn State, 2-1. Notre Dame also ended UConn’s eight game winning streak.

"We had very good team defense," said Grace. "We had an excellent work rate, our team was good. It’s amazing what you can get done when you play together. Togetherness is what’s making this team good."

Irish forward-midfielder Pat Murphy scored the winning goal in overtime on an assist from Johnny Guignon.
