COLUMBUS, Ohio - Two California teenagers took off on a cross-country binge of fancy meals and new clothes after finding a suitcase stuffed with about $10,000 in drug money, but their spending spree attracted police, who arrested them five days later.

Raymond Salter, 13, and Marc Hairrell, 14, were picked up Sunday at Fort Columbus International Airport with nearly $5,000 and a bag containing less than a gram of cocaine.

Each was being held Wednesday on a charge of drug abuse, but Columbus Police Officer John Wise said he would probably seek dismissal of the charges so the boys could return home to Petaluma, Calif. A detention hearing set for Thursday was continued until Thursday.

"They were buying fine dinners, riding in taxis and limousines," Wise said. "They just got mixed up in something that they shouldn't have."

Wise said the boys told police they left California Nov. 26 after Hairrell found a suitcase that had been tossed out a window during a police search at a Petaluma home. It contained an estimated $8,000 in cash and a bag containing less than a gram of cocaine.

"They didn't even realize it was cocaine," Wise said. "All they saw was the $100 bills, the $50 and the $20."

He said the teen-agers flew from San Francisco to Thanksgiving Day, buying tickets under assumed names. After spending a few days in Chicago, they flew to Columbus, where Salter grew up.

The youths were arrested after police were told of two teen-agers leaving $100 tips at expensive restaurants, police said.

"They went through about $3,000," said Wise. He said the boys had $4,907 in their possession when they were arrested.

Wise said he was astonished when the boys reported the lavish spending earlier.

"It's true. Money talks, without a doubt," Wise said.

Poindexter refuses to answer Senate

WASHINGTON - President Reagan's former national security adviser refused Wednesday to give Congress details of the secret sale of weapons to Iran or the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels. Vice President George Bush conceded that the spiraling controversy has harmed the administration, saying, "The lying was made."

Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter became the second recently-departed administration official to invoke the Fifth Amendment in declining to answer questions from the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the committee, vowed that lawmakers would piece together the facts "with or without them," and other committee members said that unspecified Cabinet secretaries will be called to testify.

While Congress continued delving into the mounting crisis of the Reagan presidency, there was increasing pressure for the departure of Donald T. Regan, the president's powerful chief of staff. But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Regan has no intention of leaving and said the president "has not asked him to leave."

Reagan did not discuss possible staff changes when he spoke to businesswomen in the White House. Instead, he said he hoped the furor would not undercut support for the Contra forces fighting the Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

"We cannot let recent events distract us from the cause of those brave fighters for freedom around the world," he said. As his audience applauded, Reagan said, "Yes, you did just make my day."

Reagan could not have been as pleased with the word he received earlier in the day from key GOP congressional leaders. One participant, speaking on condition he not be identified by name, said Reagan was advised to seek changes in his administration.

Outside the White House, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said the message to Reagan was this: "there are going to be more hearings, every day there will be something new. Some other player will be involved, somebody the president never even heard of."

Bush's comments came in a speech in which he said he fully supported Reagan's decision to make secret arms sales to Iran, but knew nothing of the diversion of profits to the Contra forces. Reagan also said he knew nothing of the diversion of funds until Attorney General Edwin Meese III told him a little more than a week ago.

In voicing strong words of support for Reagan, Bush added, "There is no denying the independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's University.

Theologians meet for symposium at ND

Several Catholic and Jewish theologians met Tuesday and Wednesday at the Center for Continuing Education for a symposium entitled "Teaching and Preaching about Judaism in Christian Churches."

The symposium began Tuesday with a presentation by Eugene Fisher, executive secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' Secretariat for Catholic-Jewish Relations. Fisher spoke on "The Presentation of Jews and Judaism in Catholic Teaching and Preaching."

On Tuesday evening, Rabbi Louis Knoblock, director of the Department of Interfaith Affairs of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, gave a presentation entitled "Objects and Subjects of Faith: How We Teach Each Other."

On Wednesday morning both Fisher and Knoblock led an informal seminar on "Theological Education and Christian-Jewish Relations."

Eugene Fisher has held his present post in the Bishops' Conference since 1977, the first layman so appointed. A member of the Vatican Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews, he has lectured and published widely on relations between Christianity and Judaism.

Rabbi Knoblock, a native of Argentina, began his schooling in Buenos Aires and in 1967 received his rabbinical diploma from the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati. The follow-year he delivered the major paper representing the Jewish community at the first Latin American meeting of Catholics and Jews in Bogata, Columbia, during the visit of Pope Paul IV to that country.

The symposium was sponsored by the Department of Theology with funds from the Crown-Minow Endowment for Jewish Studies. The purpose of the Endowment, is to encourage exchange and understanding between Judaism and Christianity and to advance Jewish studies at Notre Dame by bringing together scholars and religious leaders for a series of lectures, dialogues and symposia for faculty members, students and the South Bend community.

"Can I see your I.D.?," the bartender will say with a cynical tone in his voice tonight. Those are the ominous words which strike fear into the hearts of all who pass through the doors of the local bars. But when the clock strikes 11:59, the bartenders will turn into圣 Mary's angels. From that moment on, the sky will turn black, and the night will be filled with the sound of bells ringing throughout the city. By the looks of the forecast, the celebration will continue through the night, with highs near 30° and lows from 15°. It seems insane to turn war into a Christmas celebration, but that's exactly what we are doing. The war on Christmas has begun, and we must stand strong against it.

But the real question is, what will happen to those of us who are over 21? Will we be left out of the celebration, or will we find a way to participate? Only time will tell. In the meantime, we can all look forward to the day when the war on Christmas comes to an end, and we can all celebrate together, regardless of our age.

Abrams Chair recently inaugurated at ND

By Sean Hickey

The inauguration of the Abrams Chair of Jewish Thought and Culture was celebrated recently, according to Michael Loux, Dean of the College of Arts and Letters.

Unlike numerous other chairs which exist at Notre Dame and provide "permanent jobs for distinguished scholars who have made dramatic marks in their respective fields," the Abrams chair "alows a new visiting faculty member to occupy the chair every year," said Loux.

The visiting faculty members, however, "must have made an important contribution to Jewish thought and culture," Loux said. "Therefore, the department in which the occupant of the Abrams Chair teaches will vary from year to year," he said.

The Abrams Chair is endowed by a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Abrams of Atlanta, Georgia. Abrams, a South Bend native, graduated from Notre Dame in 1959 and is presently president of Abrams Industries, Inc., and an active member of the Advisory Council of the University's College of Arts and Letters.

Abrams also endowed the Library Collection in Jewish and Hebrew Studies at Notre Dame. Mrs. Abrams is a member of the University's Women's Advisory Council.

Novelist Chaim Potok, author of such novels as "The Chosen," "The Promise," and most recently, "The Book of Light," was a guest speaker at the inauguration.

continued from page 1 that our credibility has been damaged by this entire episode and its aftermath." Bush said the shaping of the Iranian policy involved difficult choices and was clouded by the way in which the president's goals were executed, "specifically allegations about certain activities of the National Security Council staff. Clearly, mistakes were made."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, in France on an official trip, said Reagan received bad advice from aides advising him on a new policy toward Iran. "What he was trying to do was to open an agreement and an arrangement with people whom he had been advised were of a far different character than the people he was quite properly denouncing as being fanatical lunatics in Iran."

"I think unfortunately some of that advice has not turned out to have been accurate or correct," Weinberger said.

Meanwhile, Transportation Department documents show that a former CIA air transport company, said to have played key roles in both arms sales to Iran and shipments to the Nicaraguan rebels, flew more than 400 tons of cargo this year into an air base used by an American-manned Contra resupply operation.

Southern Air Transport of Miami reported it made 15 flights into a military airport in El Salvador. The flights coincide with creation of an air resupply wing to carry weapons to the Contra rebels - an effort that government sources said anonymously was managed by North.

While the administration awarded appointment of an independent counsel to investigate the once-secret arms sale to Iran and the funneling of profits through a Swiss bank account to Nicaraguan forces, Senate leaders appeared headed for creation of a single "supercommittee" to conduct its own probe.

Army to wait to destroy old nerve gas

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. - The Army apparently will wait an additional six months before deciding how to dispose of obsolete nerve-gas weapons stored in Kentucky, Indiana and six other states, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported Wednesday.

The official announcement of the delay should be made Friday, according to the newspaper. "We are not in a position to confirm it, but we are in a position to say (delay) is very probable," said Larry Van Hoose, administrative assistant to U.S. Rep. Larry J. Hopkins, R-Lexington.

Hopkins already has told Army officials he would resist a "potentially catastrophic and profoundly dangerous rush to judgment."

The Army's environmental impact statement, explaining its plans for disposing of the nation's stockpile of aging chemical weapons, was scheduled for release Dec. 30. It was to be followed in January by an official decision by Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr.

The timetable evidently has changed. "We have reason to believe it is being pushed back by as much as six months," said John Chambers, press secretary for Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky.

An Army spokeswoman said "we are taking a hard look at the schedule," but declined to confirm any change in plans.

‘Blanket of soot’ may be raising temps around North Pole, government study says

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A warm blanket of soot may be raising temperatures around the North Pole by absorbing newly arriving sunlight as well as light reflected from the icecap below, government scientists reported Wednesday.

"One pollution plume we encountered on a flight over the icecap off Barrow, Alaska, last March was the equivalent of five of six large power plants putting all their effluents in a single plume," said Dr. Russell Schnell of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The pollution "was about 100 miles wide and 1,000 feet deep, and when we first flew into it we thought we had flown into the plume of a volcanic eruption. We didn't believe the instruments on the aircraft," Schnell said in a statement.

The NOAA report was based on a five-nation study of the haze that has been observed over the Arctic region in the last three decades. This haze layer has been reported as much as 18,000 feet thick and scientists have expressed concern about its warming the Arctic climate, although they remain unsure of the exact effects as yet.

There have been reports of a reduction in the amount of pack ice in the Arctic in recent years, although direct evidence has not yet tied this to the pollution layer.

The average surface temperature of the Earth has risen slightly in recent years, probably a result of the so-called greenhouse effect in which the increasing polluted atmosphere traps more heat from the sun. The Arctic pollution probably moves north from industrial and chemical complexes in eastern Europe and Asia, NOAA said. Examinations of air flow and a chemical analysis of the pollution indicate that some of the soot traveled as much as 4,000 miles, Schnell reported.

Another participant in the study, Tony Hansen of the University of California's Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, said that at times the Arctic pollution exceeded levels measured over the Atlantic Ocean off the coast of New Jersey. Hansen said on one test flight carbon soot in the Arctic region was measured at 700 nanograms per cubic meter, while the highest concentrations found in the New England studies last January were 500 nanograms per cubic meter. A nanogram is about one-billionth of the weight of a typical paper clip. A cubic meter is a little more than a cubic yard of air.

The pollution was about 100 miles wide and 1,000 feet deep, and when we first flew into it we thought we had flown into the plume of a volcanic eruption. We didn't believe the instruments on the aircraft," Schnell said in a statement.

‘Nuclear winter’ test scrubbed after crash

Associated Press

SAN DIMAS, Calif. - A long-awaited experimental brush fire to study whether smoke and dust from an atomic war would trigger a "nuclear winter" was scrubbed Wednesday after a helicopter crashed while igniting a test burn.

The pilot escaped serious injury, but the accident left in doubt when the $750,000 experiment would be performed.

Gordon Rowley, fuels management officer for the U.S. Forest Service and the official with the final say on the burn, said the fire would be rescheduled for Friday at the earliest. If it does not take place by Dec. 15 or 16, it will probably have to be delayed until June because of difficulty in assembling the needed firefighting aircraft under favorable weather conditions, he said.

Two of the planes that were to have observed the burn promptly left the area to watch another, smaller controlled burn Wednesday near San Diego, said Bernie Zak, scientist with Sandia National Laboratory in New Mexico.

"It's very disappointing," said Joel Levine, a chemist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "No other experiment will answer the questions we were planning to address. I think everyone's disappointed.

The chopper was dumping thickened gasoline to start a 5-acre preliminary burn around 10 a.m. when the cable suspending the torch from the helicopter hit the mountainside, causing the helicopter to break away and go down the hill, scattering debris down the canyon afterward.

"He went through the smoke, and at the very top of the ridge he tumbled over and went down the hill, disintegrating," Turr said.

Helicopter pilot Gary Lineberry, 46, of Valencia suffered "some minor abrasions on his forehead," said chief nurse Pat Tthus of Presbyterian Hospital in Glendora.

"On his way down the canyon, he said he saw the Bell 200 helicopter was badly damaged. The tail rotor dug into the ground, breaking in two, he said. A piece of the rotor flew off and hit the door of a nearby Forest Service fire truck carrying several people, but none of them were hurt.

About 200 scientists and firefighters had gathered near Johnstone Peak, 30 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, to observe the off-delayed burn. The controlled fire, which was to have consumed 300 to 400 acres, had been expected to create a 10,000-foot-tall smoke plume for study, said Philip Riggan, the U.S. Forest Service's scientist-in-charge of the experiment.

ND speech and debate team made ‘marked improvement’ this year

Members of the inexperienced Notre Dame Speech and Debate team made a ‘marked improvement’ this year, winning prizes in four tournaments, said Frank Guliuzza, Director of Forensics.

“At this point last year, they hadn’t won anything. This year we’ve won eighteen trophies and awards,” Guliuzza said.

Guliuzza added that he is pleased by his team’s success, especially because of their youth and inexperience at the college level. “They are a very young team with a lot of potential,” he said. “I think they could be a really strong group if they work hard. The only thing that would hold them back would be lack of effort.”

Guliuzza said he hopes to help qualify students for the National Individual Events Tournament and help the team.

Report says thyroid pills can relieve PMS

Associated Press

BOSTON - Thyroid hormone pills can relieve premenstrual syndrome for many women whose symptoms appear to be linked with sluggish thyroid glands, suggests a new, preliminary report.

The study found often-mild thyroid deficiencies in 94 percent of the victims of premenstrual syndrome who were tested. Those who took thyroid pills reported complete relief from the symptoms of PMS.

However, several experts said they doubt that underactive thyroids is what’s known as hypothyroidism - contribute to premenstrual syndrome for most victims of the common disorder.

The apparent link between the thyroid gland and premenstrual syndrome was discovered by Dr. Nora D. Brayshaw of the Biopsychiatry Center in Watchung, N.J. The results of her preliminary experiments were published as a letter in Thursday’s New England Journal of Medicine.

In an interview, she said she has found more than 300 women “where the correlation is absolutely profound” between premenstrual syndrome and underactive thyroids, and said she has used thyroid pills routinely to treat them.

“I am so sure I know it works that when it doesn’t, I’ve been able to find a problem,” such as drinking or drugs, that interferes with the thyroid supplements, Brayshaw said.

Brayshaw said low thyroid function may not actually cause PMS. Instead, the two problems could be the result of some broader underlying hormonal disorder. But she said she believes virtually everyone with premenstrual syndrome has thyroid deficiencies.

Buying personal clock cannot solve bell dilemma

Don't panic! This cranky epistle is about an entirely new subject. The new subject does not pose real heavy ethical, moral or practical questions. All the titles sanded in the dome need not divide the church. The new subject is bells. Just bells. Hang in, while a narrator herein narrates a tale.

Bob Kerby

In early September, having noticed that the class bells were not ringing, I started calling this office and that to ask that the bells be turned on. I phone every September because the bells never work when the University first convenes. In years past, the various people I called - clerks, secretaries, administrative assistants, and one associate dean - often explained that administrators don't like the bells; they forgot to turn them on. I then reminded them that teaching is, after all, one of the minor peripheral functions of this institution, whether administrators liked it or not. Usually, those whom I surprised with this revelation got the bells turned on, bye and bye.

This September, my fifth telephone call turned up a secretary who told me that "someone" in the dome had decided to turn the bells off in the dome this year. That was a new excuse. So I called the registrar in charge of all the University's bells. His name was Seth Perry. Seth owns a 12-hour set of bells, rings them from 5:30 am to 7:17 pm. They quit at 2:15. After 3 pm, true, all the bells went berserk, ringing damn near every minute on the half-hour, but at least until 2:15 they worked like they were supposed to work, starting and ending classes on schedule. That was progress, if not yet perfect.

So again I called the assistant registrar about the bells. So did lots of other folks. Some complained about missing bells. Some complained about berserk bells. The assistant registrar said he'd fix it. He even prepared to summon first-class professional bell fixers from the professional bell-fixers' guild.

Then - the Monday before fall break somebody told the assistant registrar that, last spring, the clique that makes decisions hereabout had decided never to ring the class bells again. Needless to say, this high-powered policy decision had not been published, or announced, or explained! And needless to say, this high-powered decision was made by clowns who don't teach.

Now, this is important. In order to get this decision, nobody had ever told the assistant registrar. But the dome seems unable to tell anybody else what is going on, one must now wonder about the quality of coordination within the dome itself. What is going on, one must now wonder about the quality of coordination within the dome itself.

Was anybody told about this decision? Should anybody have told the assistant registrar that all his bells were to be turned off last spring? I proposed an instant solution: why not put clocks in classrooms? The Great Republic has been mass producing wall clocks both for IHRA, so the technology should be adequate by now. At first, the proposal met some obsta­cles. First, the assistant registrar told me that classrooms already had clocks. That surprised me because no matter how hard I looked, I could not find any clocks in the classrooms I was teaching in. Second, the assistant registrar offered to buck my inquiries to a coordinator in charge of clocks. Can the coordinator really make policy decisions, queried I? No, said the assistant registrar, but she can listen real well. I didn't really want somebody to listen real well. I wanted somebody who could start and stop classes on time. So I told the assistant registrar, who had promised to fix everything 'way back in September' to get a clock into my classroom. Like now!

A couple more weeks passed. Still, no clock. So, one day, I went to G. L. Perry's five-and-dime and purchased a Graham Howard-driven quartz wall clock, plus all the fixings, for $13.31. The batteries would need changing, now and then, but I figured that would give an unemployed assistant registrar in charge of bells something to do.

Just as I was about to mount my clock, a Seth Perry type-clocks ap­peared in my classroom. The truth is, I saw it, it was running about 25 minutes slower than the rest of the clocks. Next time, it was only 6:32 minutes late. The third time, I climbed on a chair to reset, despite my decrepitude, and general blubbery infirmity. At least I got the time right.

Debates exemplify the spirit of education

Dear Editor:

Just as students often moan about their classes being dull, they often hear faculty mumbling and grumbling about the lack of interest Notre Dame students supposedly show concerning current events, intellectual matters and, in general, anything other than romance, sports and grades. In this context, I find the news of a series of debates organized and conducted by Grace Hall students, under the direction of Assistant Dean Seth Perry, to be most encouraging.

I wanted first of all, to heartily congrat­ulate these students and McKenna for their work. I am pleased, very pleased, to know that these students of Grace Hall, outside of their classes, are taking the time to debate and learn about top­ics such as the role of women in the Church, gun control, immigration legisla­tion and public school sex education. McKenna and the students involved are, in my opinion, setting a very fine example for members of other dorms; I hope to see the idea catching on at other dorms and participation in such debates to ring class bells again. Need­less to say, this high-powered policy decision had not been published, or announced, or explained! And needless to say, this high-powered decision was made by clowns who don't teach.

I look forward to seeing the debates continue in the future.

Women's peace group remember Parks' ride

Dear Editor:

We are gathering together to ed­ucate ourselves and our friends and the community at large concerning the civil rights movement in Birmingham. The civil rights movement began in the 1950's and 1960's to give opportunities for all Americans to hold up the ideas of the American dream.

The example set by Grace provides a fine model of self-education (students educating other students, students educating each other in a setting that does not require faculty lecturing and students memoring) that may, in the future, be just as important for intellec­tual moral development as any of the classes that we teach here.

I propose that we wish to join in together with Rosa Parks to celebrate our anniver­sary. On Dec. 3, 1960, this courageous woman defined an unjust law by refusing to give up her seat on a city bus to a white passenger. This act sparked riots, strikes and a court battle which resulted in the desegregation of Montgomery busses. We wish to honor the "Mother of the Modern Civil Rights Movement." We would like for the community to grow in the power of our common sis­terhood, to lead us to an understanding of our responsibilities in the world today, and to the action we must take accordingly. "This was the beginning of an invitation proposed last year at this time in this same column, an in­vitation to join a group of students con­cerned with social justice: Women United for Justice and Peace. We began our efforts with a celebration of Rosa Parks Day. Since then we have engaged in many activities and our numbers have grown.

Quote of the day

"God bless us every one!" said Tiny Tim, the last of all."
Thanksgiving food drive fed many needy families

Dear Editor:

What wasn’t expected was that a watching the celebration AFTER the as expected during any break in the seconds, prayers were recited, close losses relived, the "phantom money" can Studies major.

I asked him to take a look back and into the future word to word to describe his first season.

"There isn’t a single word to describe. I don’t think I could in a single word. No word really comes up unless it would be frustrating, and I don’t think frustrating would be a proper word. If I thought for a minute, I think a single word would be the foundation. And what would the word be for first season?"

There was a long pause, and he finally answered, "rebound" with a definite mischievous grin.

Preemption of final kick shows network’s priority

It was the perfect commercial, an advertiser’s dream. It had everything—an oh, so seductive product, sleek, shiny backgrounds that made everything look good, and a combination of make-up and music that made you forget about your troubles.

CBS, with a little help, provided a captive audience. Nary a soul, glued to the tube and teetering on the edge of their seats, left during the time-out.

Who could ask for anything more? Thousands of viewers had turned on and tuned in to CBS in order to see Notre Dame battle University of Southern California.

When it came down to those final two seconds, viewers were recited, closing losses reeled, the "phantom touch-down" recalled.

Viewers all around the country held their breath and waited for The Kick. As expected during any break in the action, CBS broke for a commercial.

What wasn’t expected was that a permanent proposal would ever come from the CBS. CBS’s job was to provide entertainment and no matter what crazed "aficionados" say, football is just that. The kind of game that you watch with any commercial break or game is a form of entertainment. The death-grip on a beer can, the knots in your stomach, the percentages, possible miracles, and performances to date that run through your mind are all part of the game, as is the wild celebration afterwards.

CBS failed to do its job. Miserably.

In choosing to be peddlers before producers CBS disapproved its viewers, and may even have lost a few. Hopefully, there are some fans who are so thoroughly disgusted with the choice of "money" above all else that they have vowed never to watch CBS again.

Perhaps that’s an unrealistic decidion and one that will soon be forgotten, but the short-sighted decision that prompted it will be remembered. For a long time I’ll be saying, "Porsche, there most definitely IS a substitute!"

It is Nov. 15, 11:30 p.m., and the night is warm and muggy. Over 5,000 miles away, Notre Dame has just lost in the final minutes to Penn State, 24-19. My housemate, Tom, and I have spent the last agonizing hour hunched over his short wave radio listening to the game being broadcast over Voice of America. The reception was weak and garbled reminding me just how far away I am from home.

President, World Hunger Coalition

Mark Driscoll

The members of the World Hunger Coalition would like to extend their thanks to everyone who made Thanksgiving Giving a success. Without the cooperation of the rector’s and liturgical colleagues, the food collection would not have been taken up in the dorms, so we’d like to thank them for their involvement. We would also like to thank the wonderful staff of University Ministry who put in their Saturday morning donating $200 from Sacred Heart’s Sunday collection towards our cause.

Most of all, we thank the very generous student body who donated more than $700. With this money we were able to buy 22 baskets of food for needy families in South Bend.

These baskets included bread, milk, oranges, potatoes, yams, cranberry sauce, stuffing, pumpkin pie and a turkey for every family. The rest of the money went to St. Augustine’s Soup Kitchen and to Hope Rescue Mission, two local organizations that feed the hungry and homeless.

Many people were able to celebrate Thanksgiving because of Notre Dame’s incredibly caring response to this proj-

A down-to-earth yet heaven-grounded strength, joy, and love seem the marks of Sister Madeleva's personality and her accent.

Sister Madeleva (1867-1964) was also a leader during her time. As a poet, she distinguished herself with her intellectual and religious poetry.

Sister Madeleva's tradition is that of religious poets. These are of two kinds: "the poets of doctrine," such as John Keble, John Henry Newman, Father Faber, Aubrey Devere, and "the poets of personal experience" such as Coventry Patmore, Christina Rossetti, Gerard Hopkins, Lionel Johnson, Francis Thompson, and Alice Meynell.

Most of Sister Madeleva's poetry is in the personal experience tradition. Sometimes, her rhythms echo the subtle syntax and rhythm of the best of this group as in these lines from an elegy to a "Young Girl":

"in this first immortal hour
Your young years, which like pebbles
didst upcur
In promise exquisite, unford, unburied
To perfect, heaven-blown, and forever nameless flower.

This review has been an attempt to "place" Sister Madeleva as a poet. Perhaps it would have been better to cite the many poems with St. Mary's College focus or significance. As Sister Eva Mary Hooker says in her Preface these poems are in a special way sent to the "Saint Mary's community of students, teachers, parents, and friends." Surely I should have cited more of Sister Madeleva's own poems. Her harness-maker father gave her a habit of craftsmanship as well as a love of poetry. Whether she writes of her namesake Mary of Magdala unshirring her hair and soul or of "Penelope" weeping and unraveling the robe of memory, her art finds rhythms to catch these symbolic actions and give them their own meaning.

Saint Mary’s used a team effort Tuesday night in the home opener against Judson College, to pull off its third straight victory.

"In my three years of coaching at Saint Mary’s, the team has not had any kind of win streak," said Coach Marvin Wood.

Several tide scores throughout most of the first half gave the impression of a close game. But the Belles got back on a field goal take the 17-15 tie. A burst of five unanswered baskets in a row by Saint Mary’s took a 22-15 lead by a point spread for the rest of the half. When the two teams headed for the locker room, the Belles were on top by a score of 27-22.

The second half brought a larger gap between the teams. Saint Mary’s contributed as much as 18 points in the beginning of the half. They maintained the lead throughout the entire game. The last but not until then point that Judson came within eleven points. But that was as close as the Belles allowed them as the final seconds ticked off the clock.

"The contributions by the front line helped our game," said Wood. "Both returnees and freshmen are working well on the court. I used all those who suited for the game." Participation standards on the offense were Julie Radke, Tammye Raye, Kris Tolieteria, and Stephanie Duke. Each of these players reached double figures in points. Duke leading with 15 points. Tammye Raye contributed 11 assists along with 14 points while sister Julie and Pan-"tom-" had added 19 and 12 points respectively.

Defensively Duke and Anne Gallagher controlled the boards with eight and seven rebounds.

The team has set a goal of 15 turnovers a game, and with only three in the first half, that is good," stated Wood. "This was also our first game in six weeks with only one practice in between.

Wood said he was also pleased with periods of good play which included crisp pass- and accurate shooting. With the help of total team contribution, the Belles traveled to the Saints Heights Invitational Dec. 5-6 when they will face Nazareth College.

Pacers win; Tisdale stars

INDIANAPOLIS - Wayman Tisdale scored 23 points as the other Pacers scored in double figures and Justin Jackson starred in the fourth quarter to defeat the Washington Bullets 116-103 in NBA action last night.

Indiana broke an 83-81 tie at the start of the fourth quarter with a 10-0 run led by Tisdale, who had 12 points in that period. The Bullets were within 101 at 97 on a free throw by Terry Cagle with 4:07 to play.

This season, Beuerlien completed 151 of 259 total offensive attempts (850) and total offensive yards (6,527). Kovaleski led the squad with 88 tackles. Kovaleski, this season’s captain, was named the team’s Defensive Most Valuable Player. Kovaleski led the squad with 88 tackles.

Banks was named the Outstanding Lineman Award by the Moose Krause Chapter of the Moose Foundation and Hall of Fame. This was the first year of this award. Banks made 57 tackles at the defensive end position after switching from linebacker this season.

Jackson earned the Notre Dame club of St. Joseph Valley’s Scholar-Athlete Award. Jackson has 3.0 grade point average in accounting and caught a career-high 31 passes for 592 yards and two scores this season.

“We do our part to do it,” said Jackson. “We know what we have to do.”

Irish Items - Several Irish seniors will play in post-season all-star games. Beuerlein, John Carney, Steve Lawrence, Troy Wilson and Wally Klimes will play in the Blue-Grey game. Kovaleski will play in the Japan Bowl, while Banks will take part in the East-West Shrine game. Shawn Heffern is the final player named so far to participate in post-season play. He will compete in the Hula Bowl. The Faculty Board in Charge of Athletics met Tuesday but did not decide the fate of several players applying for extra years of eligibility because of seasons marred with injuries. According to Associate Sports Information Director John Heuser, because of the large number of players applying, it’s a matter of the board getting all the reports from the trainers and doctors. At least 16 players are applying for extra years.

Wilson won’t appeal; denies shot was cheap

LAKE FOREST, Ill. - Chicago Bears linebacker Otis Wilson said yesterday he will not appeal his one-game suspension for Sunday’s injury to Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Louis Lipps.

“I just want to get back to football, get ready for the playoffs and get this thing behind me,” Wilson told a news conference at the club’s north suburban headquarters.

Bears President Michael McCaskey said the penalty, announced Tuesday by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, might have been less severe had the incident not come so close on the heels of Green Bay nose tackle Charles Martin’s body slam of Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon a week earlier.

If it was just this one incident, it probably would have just been a money fine,” McCaskey said. “I think the commissioner wanted to send a clear message and, being that we are the Super Bowl champions, we became the vehicle for sending that clear message.”

Wilson and McCaskey both said Wilson did not intend to hurt Lipps, who left the game with a concussion.

Women swimmers count on depth this weekend and...

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

Final exams for the Notre Dame women’s swim team will begin Friday as the Irish travel on Mankato State and continue as they host the Irish Invitational Meet on Saturday. Both events will be held at Rolf’s Aquatic Center in the ACC. Coach Tim Welsh says there are two main objectives for this weekend. The first is to get experience in a two day meet.

“We’ll swim the two meets like one two-day meet,” says Welsh. The championship meet in the spring is a three day event, so the squad will be gaining valuable experience in competing in extended meets.

The second objective is to turn in a good performance before exams, particularly at the Irish Invitational.

“Teams swim better preparing for the last weekend,” says Welsh. “We see this as a final exam in swimming, to see what we’ve achieved and learned so far.”

Welsh says his Irish team looks better “on paper” than the Mankato State swimmers.

“It looks like we have more overall depth, but you can never tell how a team will perform,” he says. Welsh added that while the visitors may have an edge in the diving events, Notre Dame has more distance freestyle depth.

“The race for first in each event will be good,” says Welsh, but he added that he expects his team to take the victory at the dual meet.

The Irish Invitational is a newly created meet designed to be a companion to the Notre Dame Relays.

“The invite has more of an individual focus than the Relays,” says Welsh. “We feel it is important to swim all the events in a championship program before exams.”

Notre Dame will be hosting the teams from Saint Mary’s, the University of Illinois at Chicago, and the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee.

Welsh expects a competitive, exciting meet. The Irish competed against UI-C at the Notre Dame Relays, and the opponent has improved since then. UI-C is coming off an excellent meet against Northern Illinois. The UW-Milwaukee team won last year’s Notre Dame Relays.

so will Irish men

By KEVIN MccORMACK
Sports Writer

No, it’s not the last week of the semester yet, but Notre Dame Head Men’s Swimming Coach Tim Welsh will be giving out grades to his swimmers this weekend when the Irish take on Mankato State and then swim in the Irish Invitational on Saturday.

“This weekend’s meets will be similar to the importance of a first semester final exam,” says Welsh, “This is the first time this season we have adjusted our training for a particular meet. It will be the summation of all the fall training and I’ll be grading each performance.”

According to Welsh, the Irish are in pretty good shape and should be well-prepared for the rough weekend ahead.

“The whole team is ahead of where we were last year. We’ve trained more and we’re in better shape overall as a program.”

Most recently, the hottest Irish swimmer has been sophomore Eric Bodham, who has excelled in the backstroke events. Against Ferris State, he swam a blazing 2:01.77, good enough for a Ferris St. pool record. He also leads off the 400-yard medley, combined with breaststroker Brian Vogel, butterflyer Mark Jensen, and freestyler Chris Petrello.

Overall, however, Welsh points out that there are no real superstars on the team and that the Irish will rely heavily on depth in all events to succeed throughout the season.

As far as this weekend goes, Mankato St. is “sort of an unknown” as Welsh phrases it.

“From prior results this season, we should win the meet,” he says. “The key will be to establish control early in the medley relay and the 1,000 freestyle.”

The Mankato St. meet is slated for a 6 p.m. start Friday night.

The Irish Invitational will be composed of two Saturday sessions, one at 11 a.m., and the other at 3 p.m.

country.”

The tournament will run throughout the night on Friday and for the entire day on Saturday.

“We didn’t get finished the first night last year till 1 a.m. and start out on Saturday at 10 a.m., and the finals are at 7 p.m. It’s a demanding tournament.” says McCann.

Notre Dame wrestlers are looking forward to the challenge.

“Coach McCann said if we want to be the best, we got to wrestle the best. It will only improve us both mentally and with our technique,” says 142-pound sophomore Pat Boyd.

“If we want to go to nationals, we’ll see a lot of these guys later on, and we’ll be used to the competition.”

Starting for the Irish the weekend will be 118-pound freshman Andy Radebaugh, 136-pound senior Greg Fleming, Durso, Boyd, junior Ron Wistien at 150 pounds, 158-pound junior Dan Carrigan, Geneser at 167 pounds, and senior Dave Helmer at 190 pounds.

After the Las Vegas Invitational, the Irish will return home for a match at the ACC Pit next Wednesday against Wisconsin Parkside.

Irish looking for season’s first win; Royal is sidelined for three weeks

By DENNIS CORRIGAN

When the Notre Dame basketball team took to the floor tonight to seek its first win of the season after a close loss to Illinois, it will be seeking the same result the Big Red of Cornell that is.

The Big Red's two losses came at the Sun Met classic in Fresno, Calif. The Big Red threw a scare into host Fresno State, losing in double overtime, 65-62. But in the consolation game, Pan American handled the Big Red with ease, handing Cornell its second loss in two top-20 matches, 6-2. Cornell may be just what the Irish need.

After losses to two top-20 teams, 6-2, Cornell may be just what the Irish need.

Fresno, Calif. The Big Red of Cornell that is.

A realistic glance at the Bears: St. Louis style

In this newspaper's quest to provide sports coverage that is of interest to the Notre Dame students, I now present my first annual look at the players and the Chicago Bears.

First of all, I believe that, since I am not from Chicago (and I don’t pretend to be every Sunday), I have watched the Bears closely in the Ditka era. Ditka has a habit of making the headlines.

And I have watched the Bears closely in the Ditka era. Ditka has a habit of making the headlines.

All the Bears need to do between here and their next game is make sure they don’t want to challenge the Cardinals.

Besides that, Ditka has put up with all the ballyhoo about his quarterbacks.

The Chicago Tribune ran a story in which the lead paragraph said “There’s life after McMahon.”

It was a time for looking back and looking forward at last night’s 67th annual Notre Dame football banquet.

The Banquet was attended by 130 people, and 59 players received monograms for their play this season.

Brown received the team's Most Valuable Player Award from the National Monogram Club as voted by his teammates.

Brown finished the season ranked third in the nation in all-purpose yards per game with 174.1 a contest which also established a school record. The 64 junior is a consensus first-team All-American and his performance this season has made him one of the leading candidates in next year’s Heisman Trophy race.

Terry, a four-year starter, was voted the team’s Most Valuable Offensive Player, finishing 13th in the nation in passing efficiency.
