Politicians warn against swap of Lebanese hijack suspect

Associated Press

BONN, West Germany - Prominent politicians cautioned officials Monday against swapping a Lebanese suspect in the 1985 TWA hijacking for a West German abductee in Beirut. They said a trade would inspire more terrorist attacks.

Government spokesman in Bonn played down reports that the kidnapping in Beirut of businessman Rudolf Cordes was intended to force the release of Mohammed Ali Hamadi, accused of being one of the terrorists who seized the Linia in June 1985.

A U.S. Navy diver on the plane was shot to death at Beirut airport after the jet was commandeered during a flight from Rome to Athens.

Snowstorms blamed for 30 deaths

Associated Press

A snowstorm blamed for at least 30 deaths plowed across the Midwest on Monday with more snow and ice, shutting down several Indiana counties after stranding hundreds of travelers and closing schools across the Plains states.

Western snow warnings were up for parts of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York state and Pennsylvania, and a winter storm watch was extended for all of Massachusetts.

Heavy rain along the storm's southern edge caused flooding and washed out tracks that stranded cars of a freight train in Alabama.

In the storm's wake, Oklahoma dug out after one of its worst snowstorms in decades, and New Mexico's National Guard continued hauling supplies to rural residents snow-bound by up to 50 inches of snow and 7-foot drifts.

Slippery roads and blowing and drifting snow in Indiana led officials in six counties to close roads to all but emergency vehicles Monday. Chalmers had 10 inches of snow by midday.

Travelers had to wait out the storm for open roads, churches and restaurants in Oklahoma and northernwestern Texas.

"But these Yankees aren't too pleased with Oklahoma's snow removal," said Linda Kelly, owner of a hairdresser and motel at El Reno. "I keep telling them this is the worst we've had since the 1970s and it doesn't justify the expense of buying those snow plows when we don't get snow like this." The Highway Patrol said Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and northwestern Texas.

Weather continued to close schools, shutting down several Indiana counties after stranding hundreds of travelers and closing schools across the Plains states.

In Denver, memorial services, flower plantings at a King statue in City Park and a downtown march were scheduled. "This is not a 'black' event. This is an American holiday, black and white," Gov. Arch Moore said at a ceremony in Charleston, W.Va., where participants sang "We Shall Overcome." Martin Luther King Day came less than 48 hours after blacks and whites marching in Georgia's all-white Forsyth County were pelted with rocks and tear gas by a Ku Klux Klanmen and their supporters. Mrs. King and other civil rights officials Monday said another march will be held there Saturday.

It was nearly a month after a gang of white youths in New York City attacked and beat three black men, chasing one to his death when he ran onto a road and was hit by a car. The day was a holiday for federal workers, employees of the District of Columbia and most of the 40 states that celebrated the second observance of Martin Luther King Day.

Some states honor King on his birthday, Jan. 15. Financial markets were open, but the New York Stock Exchange observed a minute of silence for the hostages, banks and government offices in some states were closed.

King, a Baptist preacher awarded the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize for his civil rights leadership, was born in 1929. He was shot to death in 1968 by a sniper on the second floor of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tenn., where he was staying while he helped lead a sanitation workers strike.

About 200 people gathered Monday at the motel.

Malloy's inauguration slated for Sept. 23

Special to The Observer

Father Edmund "Monk" Malloy will be inaugurated the 22nd president of Notre Dame on Sept. 23. University officials announced.

Malloy, 45, was selected to succeed University President Father Theodore Hesburgh at a Nov. 14 Board of Trustees' meeting last year.

Hesburgh will step down after 35 years as president.

Mother/Daughter beauty pageant demonstrates conformity at worst

It was unbelievable. Simply unbelievable. Over break some friends and I were watching TV, flipping the channels around, and we came upon a beauty pageant.

We knew something was strange right off the bat. There were all these incredibly tall, skinny women in sequined evening gowns parading around the stage - not unusual for a beauty pageant - but they were parading around in pairs, holding each other's hands.

Was it a pageant for lesbians? No way. This was to display their femininity on television. No, this spectacle was something else. It was a mother-daughter Miss America pageant, or something along those lines.

We never caught the pageant's official name. I was too busy sipping inventive at the screen.

When we tuned in, the judges were trying to choose five couples as finalists, a formidable task considering not only that each mother had exactly like her daughter, but each entry looked exactly like each other entry as well. It was to tell who was the mother and who was the daughter because none of the mothers seemed to have put on an ounce of middle-aged weight or gained a single wrinkle to mar their youthful complexities. All the mothers must have been about 16 years old when they gave birth to their daughters.

The worst part came after the five finalists were announced. Each couple gave a little talk about what they respected most about each other which, you might guess, was absolutely sincere.

Again, each entry said exactly the same thing as each other entry. The mother's sentimental and genuine words about her daughter were intoned like the loudspeakers as the daughter's glamourous personality posed for pose. Each and every mother assumed the same solemn, measured tone with just a touch of emotion, calculated to display some sort of American ideal of motherly wisdom when describing what a joy her daughter has been to her and how extremely proud she is of her child.

Then the daughter stepped back to allow the mother the spotlight as the daughter's words were intoned to the audience. Each and every daughter spoke as if she were choked by emotion and on the verge of tears when talking about how much respect she has for her terrible mother.

It was so fake I couldn't stand it.

Then came the really hard part for the finalists. They had to answer a question! Each pair was interviewed personally by the emcees, who explained that the contestants were given the question two weeks in advance in order to prepare for this very moment. The question? What is unique about your relationship with your mother/daughter. I think I would need two weeks to think about that, too.

The worst part about the pageant though was what it says about American society and its conformity complex. The pageant says that American women should be 6 feet tall and weigh 90 pounds. It says the ideal mother-daughter relationship smells like roses, devoid of conflict or jealousy and full of mutual respect and understanding. The pageant displayed an American tendency to mold reality into what it conceives should reign in the world, like painting the faces of the dead with makeup for an open-casket - a denial of what's natural in life.

What's natural in life is that mothers are different from daughters. They are older and consequently have different perspectives and needs. There do exist conflicts. A daughter is often a mirror of a mother, and a mother inevitably must sometimes feel a sense of personal loss when she sees her child living a life different from daughters. They are older and consequently have different perspectives and needs.

But not according to the mother-daughter Miss America pageant. In their version of reality, mothers stay young forever and daughters adhere to them for their guidance and wisdom. Sounds like a good deal to me. I'm game.

But I'm not sure I can convince my own mother to get a face lift and lose 30 pounds before next year's contest. And I know I can't grow 6 inches in a year. But I guess we'll have to face the facts. Otherwise, I'll just be too embarrassed at the pageant next year.
Senate agrees to plan alcohol awareness week

BY CHRIS JULKA

The student senate agreed to sponsor an upcoming alcohol awareness week in a meeting in Hayes Healy last night. The observer Wednesday, January 24.

The event will start this Saturday and continue through Wednesday of next week, according to Vince Willis, general manager of the local branch of BACCHUS, a nationwide organization urging responsible drinking.

The program will begin with a training session on Saturday and Sunday, aimed at the freshmen. The activity is planned to take place at 10 p.m. in Stanford, Keenan and Walah halls on Monday, in Zahn and Alumni halls on Tuesday, and in Planner Hall and "hopefully," LaFortune on Wednesday, said Willis.

Willis said the volunteers over the age of twenty-one will be allowed to raise their blood-alcohol content to or above 0.1 percent, the level at which one is legally intoxicated in the state of Indiana. Campus security and state police will monitor the volunteers, possibly while conducting field tests and presenting slides, according to Willis.

German government awaited U.S. documents pledging that the defendant would not face a death sentence.

Such a promise is necessary in extradition cases under terms of a 1978 U.S.-West German treaty. U.S. officials said Sunday they would provide the promise and speed up the paper work. Schmid said the U.S. documents would be sent to a Frankfurt court for a ruling on whether the terms of the 1978 extradition treaty had been fulfilled.

"First we have to get the documents, then we have to wait for the court's decision," he told reporters. "Only then can we legally extradite him."

"When we do get the documents, then it can go very fast. It is in our interest to do it as fast as possible. We are under obligation to fulfill the terms of the treaty between the U.S. and the West German government as quickly as possible."

The day before Hamadi's arrest in Frankfurt, Italian authorities picked up Bashir al-Khodr, also Lebanese, at the Milan airport. Italian newspapers have quoted officials in Rome as saying the cases are related.

caused a rash of accidents in Ohio, and at least two highways were closed by overturned or jackknifed tractor-trailer rigs.

The storm cut off electricity to estimated 11,000 customers Sunday in the Tulsa area and 17 crews from Kansas, Missouri and Louisiana helped Public Service Co. of Oklahoma restore power, said PSO spokesman Jim Goss.

Heavy snow collapsed roofs of some homes and businesses in Oklahoma City, where Sunday's 8.3 inches in 24 hours was the third heaviest on record. The National Guard helped take generators, heaters and blankets to a state prison and several nursing homes.

Will Rogers World Airport at Oklahoma City reopened Monday, with only one runway, after a day out of service, canceling about 200 flights.

Capacity crowd hears feminist criticism talk

By ROB HENNING
Senior Staff Reporter

Feminist criticism can be divided into two separate factions, each with its own assumptions and strategies, according to a lecture by Sandra Gilbert and Susan Gubar Monday night.

Speaking before a packed library auditorium with a closed-circuit television hook-up in the library lounge to accompany the overflow crowd, Gilbert and Gubar said that feminist criticism "is very much a product of the central intellectual currents that have shaped modern western thought even while we also believe that such criticism inevitably seeks to disrupt the very traditions that have formed it."

According to Gilbert, the categories of the mirror and the lamp detail the modes of inquiry of most feminist theorists.

The mirror is used as a symbol of a primarily empirical viewpoint on feminist criticism. Critics supporting this view, said Gilbert, "define the function of criticism at the present time as the mirroring - the transcription - of a knowable history constituted by real authors, real readers, and objectively verifiable cultural conditions.

The other school of feminist criticism, the lamp, seeks to maintain the romantic energy of the artist's subjectivity. "In the words of these thinkers, the self-generated brilliance of the heroic poet can be said to serve as a paradigm for the critic's expressive autonomy as well as for rebellious impulses that have been repressed but not erased by patriarchal culture," said Gilbert.

This view of criticism, the lamp, metamorphoses into a vamp because its impulses are associated with the alienated, the dispossessed, and the marginalized - all of which can be represented by "the feminine."

Sandra Gilbert is professor of English at Princeton University and Susan Gubar is professor of English at Indiana University.

The lecture, titled, "The Mirror and the Vamp: Reflections on Feminist Criticism," was sponsored by the College of Arts and Letters and the department of English.

Notre-Dame values lead to foundation of group

Five of the ten American founders of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War (IPPNW) - the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize winner - were Notre Dame graduates. Is this chance, or is there something about Notre Dame which led us, and is likely to lead future graduates, to make a special contribution toward decreasing the threat of nuclear war?

James Muller

During my years at Notre Dame (1961 to 1965) the nuclear threat was not a topic of study but Notre Dame nurtured two values which I believe led me and my colleagues to work for IPPNW when the challenge presented itself. First, as Notre Dame graduates we expected to perform public service, in addition to working for our families and careers. Second, the Christian value of hope, strengthened during my years by the arrival of Ara Parseghian, gave us the feeling that no problem was too big to be solved. The Notre Dame of 1965 also gave me an excellent start on the Russian language.

It was not until my second year at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine that the nuclear threat became a personal reality. The lectures of Dr. Jerome Frank, my experience with burned patients in the emergency room, and my selection as the first medical exchange student to the Soviet Union, together with my Notre Dame background, left me convinced that a major purpose of my life would be to work against the nuclear arms race.

As the Soviet nuclear missiles rolled past my Red Square, I thought of the ways in which Soviets and Americans could work together in medicine to defuse the nuclear threats. When I returned home I found few were overtly concerned with the nuclear threat. By 1978, I was married, the father of three children and beginning my career as an academic cardiologist when President Carter began advocating the MX missile and George Bush and Ronald Reagan began talking about winning a nuclear war. I approached a teacher of mine, Dr. Bernard Lown, with the thoughts that we should attempt to hold a conference with our Soviet medical colleagues to present a unified medically-based assessment of the facts about nuclear war. Dr. Lown wrote to his personal friend, Dr. Eugene Chazov, the chief physician for the Soviet leadership. When Dr. Chazov and his colleagues agreed to the details of our proposal in December of 1980, we felt the movement of historic importance could begin, if we took the proper steps. I recall praying in a hospital chapel that we be given the strength to fulfill our enormous mission, and driving Father Berhens for his help (in that order).

During the next four years the movement grew in size from three Soviet and three American physicians to over three thousand physicians from over twenty countries. From presentation of the medical facts led government leaders to state that nuclear war could not be won (although nuclear strategists continue to plan for a limited nuclear war) and strengthened the public demand for an end to the arms race (although it continues unabated). After IPPNW advocated the positions, the USsr supported a nuclear freeze, adopted a non-first-use policy and initiated a unilateral 18 month halt of all nuclear explosions.

In 1981 I left my position as Secretary of IPPNW. I was exhausted, my family had sacrificed greatly for the cause and I was about to lose my position at the Harvard Medical School because of failure to publish. No tired Notre Dame graduate has ever been happier than I to be replaced by a fresh, talented and dedicated Notre Dame teammate. Dr. John Pastore, who continues as Secretary of IPPNW brought enormous skills and his colleagues agreed to the details of IPPNW's proposal in December of 1980, we felt the movement of historic importance could begin, if we took the proper steps. I recall praying in a hospital chapel that we be given the strength to fulfill our enormous mission, and driving Father Berhens for his help (in that order).

The primary accomplishment of IPPNW was to awaken the world to the problem of nuclear war. As a moun­taineer sees the full task ahead after climbing a foothill, it has become apparent to me that the solution to the problem requires more than adoption of a specific treaty, more than a reduction of arsenals and more than improvement in US-USsr relations. Nuclear weapons leave no option other than the eventual abolition of war with development of a world order in which law governs relations between nations.

To the general values of commitment an hope which we experienced 20 years ago, the Notre Dame of 1987 adds the reasonable hope that one degree of confidence about the new world order which it required. It was not a coincidence that the five of us who attended Notre Dame some years ago helped found IPPNW, nor will it be by chance that some of you who attended Notre Dame in the eventual solution of the nuclear dilemma.

Dr. James Muller is a Notre Dame graduate and Co-Founder of IPPNW.

Some professors show excellence in teaching

Dear Editor

I am intrigued by Jeff Woode's letter to the Observer in which he voiced his disillusionment with the quality of some Notre Dame faculty. Being a freshman I have only had the opportunity to live on campus for one semester, but during this short time my experience has been widely different.

Three of my courses are taught by full professors. In two of these, German 110 and Chemistry, the classes are no bigger than the size of a typical high school class. Not many colleges could claim that about their freshman classes.

Granted, being a full professor does not make one a great teacher, but my professors inject an enthusiasm to their classes which, in my opinion, has a definite effect on their students' level of motivation. Even my Freshman Seminar teacher, almost a doctorate himself, keeps his class lively and interesting, something not easy to maintain for 75 minutes each class.

I am convinced that Woode has come across a few "weak links" in his stay to date. He apparently has minimized his bad experiences here - I merely offer that not everybody believes the University is " lax in its concern for our education."

If my classes thus far are any indication of the many students I will be facing this semester, I anticipate a challenging and rewarding course of studies under the Dome.

Fact should establish alcohol policy's guilt

Dear Editor

In response to Kevin Trautner and Sean O'Brien's letter concerning the alcohol policy I must say with some regret that people who can easily blame drunk driving fatalities are caused by drunk drivers themselves. The key word here is ignorance. Give me, as well as the rest of this university, cold hard facts to show that the alcohol policy is to blame and I'm sure the administration will change it. But until you've completed your study I'll speculate that driving fatalities are caused by more ignorance than by anything else.

I don't necessarily agree with the alcohol policy. I had two years of non-policy fun, but from the looks of things (i.e., "freshmen and seniors, the freshmen and juniors, they have no valid reference point to make such accusations."

I've survived three years without it.

What O'Brien and Trautner, as well as others that gripe and moan, must realize is that conscious decisions are made by people to drink and drive even, at times, under altered states of mind. Yet, those decisions are made, these people are responsible for them. Obvi­ously, O'Brien and Trautner are not aware of the problem, for if they were, their letter would have more thought in it.

“The Great Diaper Race”
Reception Following Presentation in Center Dining Area

Open to All Notre Dame Students
You live where? Uncommon student campus residences

Tired of small rooms? Does the heat of summer and spring just get to you? Then perhaps you should do what several Notre Dame students have already done: get a job. This year, four students are living in the Center for Continuing Education, and three are living at the Fire Station. Sound odd? It really isn’t.

This year Tim Gianotti, Scott Cassidy, Marc Bergen and graduate student Tom Sluby are living in the CCE. In exchange for a room, these students do various tasks that the center needs performed, such as answering phones to running errands in town. Bergen points out that sometimes there is nothing to do but homework and watch television. Not a bad job at all.

Most of the students found out about the job through friends. Gianotti was asked to work in the center by friends and a sign that read “Easy Job, Free Room and Board, little or no work.” Gianotti enjoys the privacy that accompanies the building. Whenever lonely, Bergen simply visits a friend at another dorm. The students work anywhere from nine to twelve hours a week, and work every other weekend. This leaves plenty of time for studying and partying.

In addition to the CCE, the fire station also serves as the home of three students. John Amarante, Tony Haske and Mike McGowan live there this year. These three students have a more interesting job. They have to fight fires with the other firemen at the station. Like those at the CCE, they get a room in exchange for their services. McGowan explains that they also get $2700.00 credited to their account. This money is often used for food, but can be used for tuition or anything else that the student chooses.

The men work approximately ten days each month. The shifts run from about 5:00 pm to 8:00 am the next morning. During that time the men must be ready to put out fires if the alarm goes off. They only work one night on weekends which leaves plenty of free time open on the “off” night. Also, many of the guys switch hours if they have plans.

Tony Haske studies in his room at the fire station.

Medievalist spotlights Paris students

Special to The Observer

Early Hungarian ties to the West are revealed in a new book by a University of Notre Dame medievalist who explores the life of Hungarian students and masters at the University of Paris during the late 15th and early 16th Centuries.

The book, “The University of Paris and its Hungarian Students and Masters During the Reign of Louis X and Francis I” is by Prof. Atsik L. Gabriel, director emeritus of the Medieval Institute at the University. Hungarian subjects studying at the University of Paris were part of the English-German nation, the term “nation,” signifying the tribe or clan to which an individual belonged. The foreign students in this nation came from northern and central Europe, as well as from England, Scotland and Ireland. Relying on unpublished material on the English-German nation, Gabriel reconstructs the intellectual contacts of Hungarians with outstanding German, English, Dutch, Scotch and Irish scholars. Some Hungarians were elected to high offices in the nation, and they even inserted themselves into the official calendar used by the nation, originally written in the 14th Century.

Using casual information written by officials of the nation between the lines of financial accounts, Gabriel outlines the political and historical events of the time, including the plagues of 1501-1502 and 1522 to which Hungarian students were exposed during their studies in Paris. Gabriel also shows that Hungarian students went on to enroll at other famous European universities, such as Cracow, Padua and Vienna, after leaving Paris.

Professor Gabriel

The job was discovered through friends and a sign that read “Easy Job, Free Room and Board, little or no work.” Amarante says the job is a great opportunity to meet new people, especially since most of the firemen are from South Bend. The job provides a different perspective than a dormitory job. The rooms, says McGowan, are quite larger, bigger than dorm singles. Because he’s very tall, McGowan appreciates the fact that the beds are seven feet long instead of the shorter dorm beds. There is a community bathroom with showers, but the only ones who regularly use it are the three students. This means no waiting in the mornings. The guys all agree that their social lives are great. McGowan is in a five-year program and the only ones who regularly use it are the three students. This means no waiting in the mornings. The guys are very close. They simply call a friend at another dorm. There is also a great sense of trust. Haske says that the full-time firemen go out of their way to help and accommodate the students. Everyone gets along. Rooms are rarely locked and there’s always a friend to talk to.

Does the fire alarm ever go off? Amarante says the alarm sounds much more often than people would guess. McGowan was surprised to discover that there are very few pranks. The alarms, however, are often false. Dust and strong winds can set off some detectors. Haske says that about 90% of all calls are false alarms, usually due to fire detectors. Sometimes, however, the fires are serious. Amarante helped to fight the Groto fire. McGowan fought the fire at the auction near the ACC. It’s a dangerous job, but someone has to do it.

Both the CCE and the Fire Station provide excellent opportunities to meet new people and make some money. The rooms are much more luxurious and have a real atmosphere of dormitories and a good social life can be maintained. Such a job is definitely worth looking into.

my starters. Seniors Cindy Vickers and Vipol Thong have some solid experience behind them and Brenda Leiser entered our second year with after compiling a 24-3 mark as a freshman. I think we are looking very strong for this season.

Despite all the encouraging signs, both coaches realize that the Irish fencers must get past some top-notch opponents in tournaments before next bouts for both the men and women take place this Saturday at Madison, Wis., where the Irish will take on Wisconsin- Milwaukee, Minnesota and Lawrence with hopes of keeping those winning streaks alive.

"For both the men and women, Wisconsin seems to be the toughest opponent we will see this weekend," DeCicco says. "The other teams our young, but that does not mean anything. We still have to work hard in training, and the experience we gain will help us.

The talent is there as well as the coaching and the depth. All we need is a little luck in the next two meets. We will keep together and DeCicco and Aurial may both be coming back to the sidelines with NCAA titles in March.

Coach of Bill Anderson, the team already had its first taste of competition at a tournament, in Wisconsin, over Thanksgiving break.

In the club division of the Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association, the Irish will have a home-and-home series with league rivals Mic' Ams, Michigan State, SMC at Niles, and Northern Illinois, next weekend.

The Irish will also face top-ranked University of Illinois, Wake Forest, Ball State, Ohio State, and IUPUI-Fort Wayne over the course of the season.

With a new combination of switch hitters, three starters moved out Northwesterns, 61-52, but were unable to catch Minnesota, 8-63, for second place.

While the men's team had top performances, the women's team had mixed results. Its record fell to 16-10 after a close 3-2 loss to Jordan, Sunday, the first of the Irish, for the spring season. The Irish will take on Northwestern, Minnesota and Lawrence the next three weekends.

This year's Bengal Bouts are scheduled for March 4, 4 and 6 at the Stemen Center.

In the 50-yard freestyle, the Irish took the first three places led by Jim Dowd. The men's diving squad, led by Ke Veome, edged the University of Toronto, 363-320, for first place.

Registration for this spring's Bengal Bouts will continue from the end of this week to the beginning of next week. Students should sign up in the main gymnasium room to the hockey rink at the ACC.

Over 100 people have signed up so far and, the Boxing Club is hoping to see at least that many people compete in the springtime charity event for the Holy Cross missions.

This year's Bengal Bouts are scheduled for March 1, 4 and 6 at the Stemen Center.

In the 50-yard freestyle, the Irish took the first three places led by Jim Dowd. The men's diving squad, led by Ke Veome, edged the University of Toronto, 363-320, for first place.

The snowball almost lost moment as Notre Dame faced off against Northwestern and Minnesota, Sunday. Handicapped by the Irish scored 300 points in 120-90 victory.

Missaglia again took first in the 100-yard backstroke with a personal best of 10:15.05, accompanied by Chris Green with a second place tile of 10:22.70.

Registration for this spring's Bengal Bouts will continue from the end of this week to the beginning of next week. Students should sign up in the main gymnasium room to the hockey rink at the ACC.

Over 100 people have signed up so far and, the Boxing Club is hoping to see at least that many people compete in the springtime charity event for the Holy Cross missions.

"We'd like to have 100 finish the program," said Boxing Club President, Thomas Newell. "Usually about one-third of them will train through competition, but not fight or don't end up in the Bouts."

Undefeated Hawkeyes take number-one spot in AP Poll

UNLV falls to fourth slot after 89-88 loss to Oklahoma

Associated Press
Iowa replaced Nevada-Las Vegas, one-point losers at Oklahoma this weekend, as the No. 1 team in The Associated Press college basketball poll, ending the Runnin' Rebels' six-week run as the top-ranked team.

Iowa, 16-0, took the No. 1 ranking for the first time in its history as the Hawkeyes received 34 first-place votes and 1,263 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

The Hawkeyes edged North Carolina for the No. 1 spot as the Tar Heels, 15-1, received 28 first-place votes and 1,252 points. Indiana, 14-1, was third with 1,133 points, while Nevada-Las Vegas, which got three first-place votes, had 1,080 points.

Iowa's only game last week was its impressive 91-88 over Texas, 12-2, fell from fourth slot to fifth.

The game was not without its drama. Iowa's Bill Jones (14) had plenty to be smiling about. His free throws tied the game at 65 on a 70-67 victory. Jones also had plenty of reason to be happy. His 14 points, shooting eight of 12 from the field, led the Hawkeyes to their second victory in the Top Ten this season.

Oklahoma, 13-3, was seventh in the Top Ten with 656 points, 16 more than Illinois, 13-3, in the Top Ten.

Last week's Second Ten was Temple, Clemson, St. John's, Duke, Alabama, Oklahoma, North Carolina State, Pittsburgh, Navy and Kansas.

Iowa comeback tops Purdue

Associated Press

Iowa's Bill Jones (14) had plenty to be smiling about. His Hawkeyes jumped to the top spot in the AP Poll and toppled Purdue, 76-67 last night to remain undefeated.

Iowa's comeback against Purdue came in the Big Ten, which also had No. 9 Illinois, 13-3, in the Top Ten.

The Hawkeyes moved to 17-0 and 5-0 in the conference despite playing most of the game without their leading scorer, Roy Marble, who injured his eye when he was hit by a pass with 8:19 left in the first half and did not return.

Purdue fell to 14-2 and 4-1 in the conference as it went scoreless for more than four minutes down the stretch. The Boilermakers, who led 48-40 with 17:48 to go when Troy Lewis made a pair of free throws, tied the game at 65 on a Melvin McCants jumper with 4:48 to play.

Notre Dame Communication and Theatre Film Series

Tuesday and Friday at the Snite, the spring film series has two great films

Tuesday, January 27 at 7:30 pm

Carefree (1938) BW, 80 min.

Directed by Mark Sandrich, USA

Mastapic Ginger Rodgers goes to psychiatric Fred Astaire in this wacky musical comedy with outstanding Irvin Berlin songs. The film is inflected by the screwball comedy she wants her field goal percentage. "I'm taking enough shots, I'd just like to make more." Schwartz is averaging 4.3 points and 14.3 minutes of playing time per game. She has two outstanding games in Notre Dame losses to UCLA and DePauw. On Jan. 5 against the Bruins, she scored 17 points, shooting eight of 12 from the field. She also had seven rebounds and had three steals.

Last Sunday against the Blue Demons, Schwartz was six for 14 from the field and two for two from the free throw line, totaling 14 points. She had seven rebounds, all in just 20 minutes of play.

Naval Academy, McConkey flew helicopters for four years before being allowed to leave the service because he suffered from seasickness. In 1983, he tried out with the New York Yankees, but he signed with the Minnesota Twins to complete his five-year commitment and the team paid him $1,800. Since coming back, McConkey has again become a fan favorite. Wearing his emotions on his sleeve, he sprains the length of the field, throwing his fist in the air to stir up the crowd before each home game. Quarterback Phil Simms has ribbed McConkey about his new-found attention and tackle Brad Benson says jokingly that McConkey has been difficult to be around.

"We went to the city (New York) the other night for an interview," said Benson. "Now McConkey is a helicopter pilot. He's still the same old guy, but he's flying for the Navy and he can't sit backwards in a limousine because he's going to get sick."

"We expect Annie to shoot over zones for us and also pull down her share of rebounds," said Simms. Schwartz chose Notre Dame because of the academics, the location (a three hour drive from her Ann Arbor home), the size, and the basketball program.

"I'm not surprised by the level of play," Schwartz says. "The team's new start is not due to any lack of effort.

"We're playing hard and doing the right things," says Schwartz. "We can put it all together, but we've not won one good win to get started." Schwartz, DiStanislao and Simms have worked hard and will try to improve the Irish record as they host Cleveland State tonight at 9:30 pm in the Convocation Center.

"Cleveland State is a team that is going to try to press and run on us," says DiStanislao.

The Irish take on the Vikings tonight at 7:30 at the ACC.

be bursitis, and that would be good, but they haven't ruled out an infection," said McCann.

In last Friday's meet against Ohio State, the Irish lost, 33-6, dropping their record in dual meets to 1-4. Notre Dame had to forfeit 24 points to the Buckeyes because injuries forced several Irish wrestlers out of the meet, and Ohio State's other nine points came on three one-point losses suffered by Notre Dame.

"I think they expected Ohio State to be better than they were. We respected them too much. We didn't win the close matches because we didn't hustle like we should have," said McCann. "I think we as coaches might have more confidence in our wrestlers than they do."

Stars & Stripes clinches chance to win the Cup

FREMANTLE, Australia - A ripped sail couldn't stop Dennis Conner from sewing up another trip to the America's Cup finals as he steered Stars & Stripes to a one-minute, 29-second victory Monday over once unbeatable New Zealand.

The Kiwis had won 27 of their first 38 races and 28 straight before they ran up against Conner, the world's most experienced 12-meter skipper. In the best-of-seven Challenger finals that ended Monday, the U.S. boat whipped them 4-1.

"Thirteen years beat 13 months experience," said New Zealand's 25-year-old skipper, Chris Dickson, who was in his first America's Cup campaign. "New Zealand fouls - a poor spinnaker change on the fifth leg and contact with a buoy at the end of the seventh leg of the eight-leg course - were damaging.

That last problem cost Dickson 30 seconds as the rules required him to reround the buoy. Conner's lead, down to nine seconds before New Zealand hit the buoy, was up to 39 seconds after it went around it again.

Stars & Stripes, strong going into the wind, pulled away on the final leg, a windward beat, as the breeze packed a powerful 28-knot wail.

Irish fencing teams face living up to last year's president

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's and women's fencing squad may feel like they have a lot to prove this season.

The men's team enters the 1987 season trying to defend the NCAA title it captured last year. And the women's squad, headed by NCAA individual champion Molly Sullivan, may have revenge on its mind as it will try to improve on its second place finish in the tournament. Irish eyes should keep a watchful eye on both squads because of the look of things, the '87 season spells continued success.

"We lost some very talented fencers on the men's roster," said Head Coach Mike DeCicco. "There's no doubt that they will be difficult to replace, but I still think we will be in the running for the NCAA title again. We have a nice blend of experience and youth on the squad and I'm excited to see how the season unfolds." Their head coach, Yves Auriol, relays the same confidence in his squad. "We enter this season with a chance of winning it all. I think we have more depth than last year, more good depth, and that's what it takes to have a championship team." Certainly after this weekend's action, both coaches seemed to be right on track with their teams' assessments. The Irish squads dominated Stanford on Friday, registering wins of 22-5 for the men and 15-3 for the women. That upped each team's remarkable winning streaks to 54 and 24 respectively.

As has been the tradition with DeCicco's teams, the foilists lead the way for the Irish. DeCicco was especially pleased to see rookie fencers Derek Holeman, Joel Clark, and Colin Gumbs register their first Notre Dame wins. Retaining All-Americans Charles Higgs-Couthard and Yehuda Kovacs also came away with perfect slates on Friday. "I expect Higgs-Couthard and Kovacs to win bouts," DeCicco says. "But I have to admit, seeing those freshmen win their first bouts was very impressive. The foil team is going to be our strength this season."

If the foilists falter by chance, DeCicco need only turn to his Co-President Jerry Lehman to pick up the slack. Led by senior Kevin DeCicco, the men's sabre squad posted a combined 7-2 mark last weekend. Stouffer Auriol posted a 3-0 record, and junior Geoff Ross went 2-0 in his first time on the strip in almost two years after missing the '86 season with a broken leg. Sophomore Tim Collins split a pair of bouts in the number-three slot and freshman Danny Yu won his first bout as an Irish fencer.

The chink in the armor for the Irish may be with the inexperienced epee team. Senior captain Tim Vaughan fended off the enemy in the opener, and Colin Gumbs registered his second place finish in the 200-yard freestyle. First and second place finishes were notched by Eric Bohdan and Stephen Cofrey in the 330-yard backstroke dual and by Charles Stuckert and Bernie Niehaus in the 200-yard breaststroke.

The Irish finished off the meet with another one-two punch, this time in the 100-yard freestyle relay. Both four-man squads passed the old Rolfs Aquatic Center record of 1:28.30 with times of 1:26.34 and 1:28.17.

Coach Tim Welsh was impressed by the excellent performances. "We had a very convincing win," said Welsh. "The performances showed our team depth. With such a large team, we keep coming at them."

Wrestling faces Athletes in Action

By STEVE MEGARGEE

Tuning up for a weekend date with national powerhouse Nebraska, the Notre Dame wrestling team is taking a shuffled lineup into an exhibition match with Athletes in Action (CAA) at 7 p.m. in the ACC Pit.

A Chairman-appointed group of former college wrestlers, Athletes in Action travels all over the United States and the world, competing against teams across the globe. "They've all post graduated, and they were really great college wrestlers, so it'll be pretty tough," said Head Coach Fran McCann. "They've been to Czechoslovakia, Poland, West Germany, and they wrestle the finest competition. I look at it as just some good competition for the kids."

While Athletes in Action can use experience as a strong point, the Irish will be featuring several not-so-familiar faces in tonight's match. With sophomore-starters Jerry Durso and Chris Geneser still out with ailing weight classes so Notre Dame will only have to forfeit one match in the meet. Senior Carl Hildinger, a three-time monogram winner at 118 pounds who has not seen much action this year, will start at 138 pounds. Irish Crimson Sheets at 158 pounds, and Mike Crounse will start at heavyweight, marking the first time all year Notre Dame has been able to compete in the heavyweight match.

"It all depends on whether our kids are intimidated by the maturity of Athletes in Action. We have a lot of inexperience. If we're not intimidated, we can hold our own with them," said McCann. "They're constantly on the road, so we might be better conditioned."

McCann hopes to have Durso and Geneser back by Saturday, the day the Irish take on Nebraska. Durso is out because of his injured left shoulder and Geneser is having problems with his knee.

"It's just a day to day thing with Durso's shoulder. The last report on Geneser is it might take two years."

On Sunday, the Notre Dame men's swim team completed a three-day meet schedule with a three win, one loss record. Using their team depth, the Irish kept fresh swimmers in most of the events.

But the women's team, despite strong individual efforts, only managed to win one of their four meets.

The streak for the men began Friday night with a victory over Northern Illinois, 148-109. Lead by a strong group of free-style swimmers, the Irish were able to take an early lead over the Huskies. Mike Messaglia and Roland Hartzell took first place in the 200-yard breaststroke.

On Saturday, the Irish kept fresh swimmers in most of the events. Auriol relays the same expectations to the women's side, Auriol says. "I am especially encouraged when I look at who I have on hand to replace the roster if I need to substitute for our women's track club

An important member of the strong front line of the Notre Dame women's basketball team, as well as an important part of the team's future, is freshman Anne Schwartz.

A 6-3 forward from Gabriel Richard High School in Ann Arbor, Mich., Schwartz has started five games for the 3-10 Irish, but has been coming off the bench for Head Coach Mary DiStasian. Schwartz's high school team was undefeated during her senior season as she averaged 21 points and 14 rebounds per game. She also blocked 65 shots and shot 51 percent from the floor.

"The Irish scouts looked at us when we recruited Anne was her ability to shoot from the perimeter and her rebounding instincts," says DiStasian.

Outside shooting, rebounding make Schwartz' future bright

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

Anne Schwartz has started five games thus far in her freshman season. Her shooting has improved and her rebounding has stayed the same. However, her biggest improvement has been her ability to create and take the ball to the hoop.

"We have about 23 people this year. Last year toward the end of the season we traveled with five or six," said Lehman.

Having just finished its first meet in Michigan last weekend, the Women's Track Club will participate in an invitational at Eastern Michigan this weekend that will include teams from Texas, Michigan and Villanova.

The unusually large number of people involved in the club this season gives this year's team good reason for optimism.

"We have about 23 people this year. Last year toward the end of the season we traveled with five or six," said Lehman.

While the Irish have traditionally had a fair amount of distance runners, this year's squad, with the help of country coach Dan Ryan, has athletes to compete in other areas as well. We have people for field events and some middle-distance people and sprinters along with the long distance people we usually have from the cross country team," said Lehman. "They look good right now. People just need to stick with it."
