Soviet leader could be ousted: defector

By ROB BENNING

The highest ranking Soviet official ever to defect to the West said he would not be surprised if Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would be removed as head of the Soviet Union.

Speaking to a capacity crowd at Washington Hall, Arkady Shevchenko indicated he would "not say that Gorbachev was as solid as one can believe. I think Gorbachev's relations with the Soviet army are rather shaky," Shevchenko continued. "It's a tradition of the Soviet leaders not to tell the world that there are disagreements.

He indicated that the Soviet military has a 15- to 20-year plan, in which there is a major modernization program. "If one of two or three crucial decisions have to be taken whether there will be a new cycle of Soviet development of weapon systems and that will be a moment when military may request quite a lot of things," Shevchenko said.

"If he would like to improve the civilian sector of the Soviet economy, he might have a problem with the Soviet military," Shevchenko said.

Shevchenko said Gorbachev was the first Soviet leader born after 1917, making him a full product of the Soviet system. As such, "We should not harbor any illusions that Gorbachev is really a change agent. Shevchenko is in intent really in charge of the Soviet Union," Shevchenko said.

He continued, "Gorbachev is a true communist. We should not forget about this. He is a man who believes in the future of the Soviet Union."

HPC discusses dorm changes and Holy Cross program

Reasons for the conversion of Howard Hall and life as a Holy Cross associate in Chile were among the topics discussed at Tuesday night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting, which featured speakers Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson and Holy Cross Associates Lou Nanni and Kim Krasevac.

"Tyson gave his rationale for the issues raised (by the Howard incident)," said Carroll Hall President Tim Salmon.

"He said he didn't even think about girls going over to Howard 20 minutes after reading the letter (to measure rooms)," said Salmon. "When asked why (Carroll, Holy Cross and Howard) were chosen, Tyson said (University President) Father Heubusch wanted intra-campus dorms for the girls," said Salmon.

According to Salmon, Tyson said the board considered all issues when the board made the decision. Salmon said Tyson told him the new women's dorms are being constructed next to the Pasquerillas because "it's cheaper for architectural costs," adding, "Father Heubusch chooses where the buildings go; that's why Howard, Holy Cross and Carroll were chosen."

Nanni and Krasevac were introduced by HPC Co-Chairman Joanie Cahill. "The reason we wanted them to come here is because you are leaders and you can tell others what the Holy Cross Associates program is all about," Nanni said.

Krasevac said some of their experiences with Notre Dame in 1984, proud residents which they worked and shared with Notre Dame in 1984, proud residents.

Birth leave recommendation approved by Faculty Senate

By JOHN FLORY
Staff Reporter

The Faculty Senate on Feb. 3 passed a parental leave recommendation calling for a semester-long leave, with at least half pay, for male and female faculty members previous to an adoption or birth.

The recommendation will now be passed along to the Academic Council and if approved, to Provost Timothy O'Meara for final approval, according to Vice President for Business Affairs James Mason.

According to faculty sena- member and Associate Professor of philosophy Tom Flint, expectant female fac-ulty members are currently given only four weeks leave, except for medical reasons, and male faculty members are not provided for under current policy.

Flint said he sees three problems with the current policy. It discourages faculty members from having children, does not draw female professors to the University, and does not agree with Notre Dame's Christian stance on family values, he said.

The proposed new policy is actually a package of four options according to Flint. The first two provide for maternity leave. Under the see BIRTH, page 4

Kidnappers try to deal with Israel

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Mos- lem kidnappers were re- ported trying to strike a deal with Israel on Tuesday that would free 400 Arab prisoners in exchange for three Americans and an Indian held in Beirut and a captured Is- raeli airman.

The Christian-run Voice of Lebanon and the Moslem-run Voice of the Nation radio sta- tions quoted "reports from Washington and other capita- lats" as saying the captors might be working through the Red Cross for an exchange.

In Geneva, the Interna- tional Committee of the Red Cross denied involvement in any negotiations.

Prime Minister Vishak Shamir of Israel said his gov- ernment would be willing to consider a direct request for negotiations, but added that no such request must be made.

Israeli officials say Wash- ington has not asked Israel to meet demands by the kidnap group, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, to release 400 prisoners in ex- change for the lives of the four educators it holds.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwatters told reporters in Washington, "Our terrorism policy remains the same, and if Israel ever reiterates once again that we will not ransom hostages nor will we encourage other countries to do so."

A report called the Revolu- tionary Justice Organization renewed a threat Tuesday to harm hostages if the United States takes military action.

"The retaliation will be very cruel," it said in a statement delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news agency.

It holds American hostages Joseph James Ciccioppo, 36, of Valley Forge, Pa., acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut, and Ed- ward Austin Tracy, 29, a writer who formerly lived in Burlington, Vt., and Jean-Louis Normandin, 35, a French television engineer. One hostage did gain his freedom in Beirut on Tues- day. Police said Jack Seikaly, an American who has lived in Beirut for a year, was freed unharmed, not saying what he signed a "peace statement."

"I don't wish harm to the hostages," said Seikaly, uncle of Syracuse University basket- ball star Rony Seikaly, told reporters at his home in Mos- lem west Beirut: "I'm fine."

Georgetown proves not all Catholic universities alike

There's Notre Dame and Saint Mary's and then there's Georgetown University. Some might say a Catholic university is a Catholic university is a Catholic university. Call the SMCs, with the Domers, the Hoyas because this preconception, my friends, is not so.

If you have ever studied diplomacy in Intro to Chemistry 101, then the great disparity between the two Notre Dame/Saint Mary's campuses and the university overlookong the Potomac serves as a fitting illustration of this theory. Living in the Georgetown campus has been a summer for three months awakened me to the various definitions of a "Catholic university" can connote. At least in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community for three years, I was taken aback with the liberality that seemed to hang like a fog above the Hoyas' turf.

For example, the Georgetown student government, once a stagnated group, pushed forward on the steps of the administration building. The thought of stepping a beer under the radiance of the Golden Dome made me laugh as I tossed it out as merely a momentary brain cramp. A stronger eye-opener came upon experiencing the Georgetown University Pab, where the differing policies administered by Georgetown and Notre Dame/Saint Mary's became more apparent. With the legal drinking age set at 19 in the District of Columbia, most second semester theology students were served alcohol in this establishment (which is located in the basement of their administration building). The protected Notre Dame/Saint Mary's environment, which adamantly opposes all Catholic ideals through administering rigid standards like the alcohol policy runs a collision course with the alcohol freedom permitted by Georgetown, also a "Catholic" institution.

While the absence of an alcohol policy at Georgetown opens the widest disparity between the two "Catholic" atmospheres, other differences also exist. While the lack of co-ed dorms at Notre Dame/Saint Mary's is bone interesting, the presence of them at Georgetown is an obvious distinction. And not too surprisingly, Georgetown continues to maintain its Catholic label without a system of parietals. The selling of "Playboy" magazine in their campus bookstore, however, serves as the ultimate icing on the cake.

Examining the extremes taken on the spectrum of Catholic institutions begs an answer to the question: Just what basic qualities make a university Catholic? It certainly is not the presence or the lack of parietals, or of an alcohol policy, or of co-ed dorms.

Network anticipates May meeting of ND trustees
By JOE MARKEY

The Anti-Apartheid Network has gained a second wind as anticipation mounts concerning the May meeting of Notre Dame’s Board of Trustees, according to the group’s chairperson, Margaret Rose.
“A lot of people were discouraged with the Board’s decision to postpone their assessment of divestment, but now they realize the need to make their voices heard again,” Rose said.
In November, the Board decided to completely reassess the University’s investment policy, and vote on it during its May meeting. According to Rose, the group is hopeful for a positive outcome at the May meeting.
A growing number of students seem to be realizing the importance of the issue, Rose said. Almost 100 signed their names to the group at the recent Social Concerns Festival at the Center for Social Concerns, she added.

Money for care center to be raised by Feb. phone-a-thon
By GREG LUCAS
Staff Reporter
A phone-a-thon will take place from Feb. 16-20 and 23-27 to raise money for the Women’s Care Center according to Dan Groody, chairman of the program.
Groody said the Notre Dame-Saint Mary’s Right-to-Life group will sponsor the event, which donated all of the money raised to the Women’s Care Center, for the third straight year. “In years past we’ve raised anywhere from $30,000 to $50,000,” said Groody.

The Women’s Care Center is a pro-life pregnancy help center dedicated to assisting women with problem pregnancies by offering free pregnancy testing, crisis counseling, and referrals to other social service organizations, according to literature from the center, Groody said.
The Center, established in 1983 as an outgrowth of the Notre Dame-Saint Mary’s Right-to-Life organization, serves about 125 women each month, according to Groody.
“So many people need the Care Center that they are trying to extend it to or even two new cars,” he added.

“The phone-a-thon is an attempt to provide an alternative for abortion and at the same time raise money for the women who need the services of the care center,” Groody said.

“I think I’d like to reach $30,000, if we can get over $30,000 it would be good,” Groody said.
Approximately 7,000 potential donors were sent letters containing information about the Women’s Care Center and a note from Lou Holtz, the honorary chairperson.

Also important to the fundraising effort are student donations. “In years past, just in collection alone we were able to raise $3,000,” said Groody.
Father Hesburgh, University president, has agreed to contribute $1,000 from an administration fund for every $3,000 earned through student donations, Groody said.

Reagan won't order aides to testify

Associated Press
WASHINGTON - President Reagan has refused to order former aides John Poindexter and Oliver North to appear before the board Reagan named to review the National Security Council's role in the Iran-Contra affair, the White House said Tuesday night.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said presidential counsel Peter Wallison told former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, that command- ing appearances by Poindexter and North before the panel would compel the pair "to testify against themselves."

Tower had written Reagan on Feb. 6 saying the president should use his authority as commander-in-chief to order Poindexter, a vice admiral, and North, a Marine lieutenant colonel, to testify to the three-member panel. Both Poindexter and North have returned to active military duty.

Fitzwater disclosed the refusal to order Poindexter and North after the White House made available to members of the Tower commission a series of typewritten transcripts of notes that Reagan kept on meetings involving the secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran.

In his letter to Tower, dated Feb. 6, Wallison said that both North and Poindexter "have a constitutional obligation to provide protection against self-incrimination un- der Article 31 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice."

Fitzwater said in a statement. Poindexter resigned and North was fired last Nov. 29, the same day that Attorney General Edwin Meese revealed on national television that millions of dollars in profits from the sales of U.S. weapons to Iran had been diverted to the Nicaraguan rebels known as Contras.

Subsequently, both North and Poindexter returned to active-duty roles in the military, and both refused to testify before congressional commit- tees, invoking their Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination.

Fitzwater said that in reject- ing Tower's request to produce Poindexter and North, "the White House counsel relied upon a written opinion from the general counsel of the Depart- ment of Defense, who con- firmed earlier oral advice on this matter when similar issues were raised in December."

In his reply to Tower, Wal- lison noted that Reagan recently had "made clear his desire that both Poindexter and North cooperate fully with ongoing inquiries, consistent with their rights."

The presidential counsel also reminded Tower that Reagan had proposed last month that the Senate Intelligence Com- mittee grant limited use immuni- ty to Poindexter and North "so the facts would be known without precluding prosecution based on other evidence."

Meanwhile, Reagan met with Wallison and with David Ab- shire, his special counsel on the Iran-Contra matter, in prepara- tion for a question-and-answer session the president is scheduled to have Wednesday with members of the panel.

NICOSIA, Cyprus - Ayatollah Ruhalibollah Khomeini declared Tuesday that Iran's long conflict with Iraq is a holy crusade and his fundamentalist regime will make "war until victory." The 86-year-old Shite Moslem patriarch delivered his first public speech in nearly three months on the eve of the eighth anniversary of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's fall from power.

There have been rumors that Khomeini is in poor health, but his voice was strong and steady during the 17-minute address broadcast by Tehran Radio. His remarks also were reported by the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Khomeini said Iran was battling for a "divine cause" in the war, which began in September 1980 with an invasion by Iraq. "Families and children are now being killed and this is hard for us and brings pressure for a war, which began in September," Khomeini said.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted him as saying at an anniversary ceremony in Tehran.

"Iran is interested in assuring the security of the region in cooperation with all Persian Gulf countries," said Khomeini since Nov. 20, when President Ali Khamenei widened the war and seeks to expand "brotherly relations with its neighbors."

"Almost every day Iran is bit, and many children, youngsters, old men and ordinary people see their homes fall in on them, but as soon as they clamber from the rubble they weep the need for us to make war until victory," Khomeini said.

Mass rallies are planned Wednesday to mark the anniversary of the dissolution of Parliament on Feb. 11, 1979, less than two weeks after Khomeini's triumphal return from exile. The Shah had left the country in January.

Tuesday's speech was the first public address by Khomeini since Nov. 29, when he condemned Iranian officials who wanted contact with the United States, a reference to the Iran-Contra arms deal.

Khomeini said he suffered at least one stroke late last year and was being out of daily affairs because of bad health. Speculation arose especially on Sunday because President Ali Khamenei read a speech for Khomeini while the patriarch sat in silence.

Before Khomeini spoke on Tuesday, President Khamenei said Iran does not want to widen the war and seeks to expand "brotherly relations with its neighbors."

"This is open to the entire Saint Mary's community. This means that professors can purchase a raffle ticket as well as students," Cook said.

Each ticket is sold for $10 each, and Saint Mary's students can purchase any amount of tickets. "Everything was paid for today. We need to sell 175 tickets in order to break even," Cook said. She added student government "might get the money off of this."

Teresa Harrison, vice president of Augusta Hall, commented on student participation in the event. "People in Augusta are really excited," said Eunice Tornetta, entertainment commission, added. "They feel that getting people are getting together to buy the raffles."

Cook said publicity for the events will be on campus and in Augusta Hall from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Haaggar Hall Center, and tickets can be bought at 7 p.m. in Lemans Hall.

"There, the next day was Mertha, my student whom I had grown to love and care for, crying because she'd lost her 32-year-old mother, the little stability that she had in her life," Nanni said. "I thought, 'dammit, this isn't right, it hurt but it also struck me as not right.'"

Nanni said he taught English to sixth and eighth grade children in the poor school. He spoke on the lack of adequate health services and shared an experience in which the mother of one of his students died of impure medicines.

"What can we do as a Notre Dame community? There's a lot we can do. I wouldn't put our expectations too high," Nanni said. "Let's say there's a thousand who are completely indifferent, turn their head the other way, there's always one or two or three that give and give and give and those are the people that I think who have the strongest impact on society."

"One person can have a bigger impact than a thousand indifferent."
The Beach Boys touring bus got a rinsing off Tuesday in the parking lot of the football stadium. The group will celebrate their 25th anniversary next month. Story on page 12.

Soviets free 140 political prisoners

Associated Press

MOSCOW - The government has freed about 140 imprisoned dissidents, is considering paroling about 180 more, and has begun reviewing the criminal code with the idea of softening some provisions, a Soviet spokesman said Tuesday.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said the government would like to see "fewer people behind bars and behind barred wire."

He made no mention, however, of an amnesty for those sentenced under laws prohibiting "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

Soviet dissidents have estimated at least 1,500 political prisoners remain in Soviet labor camps, prisons or internal exile.

Besides the Kremlin's avowed desire to reduce the prison camp population, the government may also be trying to deflect Western criticism of the Soviet human rights record. The issue has hampered better trade and political relations with the West.

The Soviets plan a weekend forum on peace and disarmament to be attended by political, business, cultural and religious figures from Western countries. They also are trying to win agreement at the Vienna conference on European security for a human rights conference in Moscow this spring.

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Reagan administration hopes the Soviet government "will follow up these recent moves with the release of more political prisoners and prisoners of conscience who unjustly remain in confinement or exile without imposing any requirements that they recall their previous activities and limit future activities in support of human rights."

By late Tuesday night, the release of dissidents had not been reported to the Soviet public. The English-language service of the Tass news agency carried a report on Gerasimov's comments, but the report was not sent by the agency's Russian-language service. No mention of the release of dissidents was made.

Correction

The Student Senate article in Tuesday's Observer incorrectly reported how a gay rights proposal was settled. The proposal was defeated by an 8 to 7 margin, and Student Body President Mike Swiek did not vote.

the recent openness in the Soviet Union has been very limited. "To begin with, there is no openness in foreign policy," he said.

"This openness does not concern the army," Shevchenko continued, "the privileges of the elite are not being discussed."

"There cannot be any kind of real openness if all media, newspaper, television and everything will continue to belong to the government, controlled by the government and the censorship by the government will continue," he concluded.

Shevchenko said the United States should keep its options open in dealing with the Soviet Union. At the same time, "we have to negotiate, have to deal, with the Soviet Union because we have to live on the same planet," he said. "I think we have to pursue arms negotiations now because it's a good opportunity."

Shevchenko said last year's Reykjavik summit between Reagan and Gorbachev was counterproductive because the Soviet Union linked future progress on arms control to a ban on the Strategic Defense Initiative. Yet, "The Soviet program started in the late 1960s, and by the early 1980s they were going on full speed," he said.

On the larger question of Soviet-American relations in general, Shevchenko said, "We have to win the minds of the Soviet Union."

"With the revolution of telecommunications and everything, we have perhaps some chances to break the Iron Curtain on telecommunications," said Shevchenko.

"It is for us very important to understand the true nature of the new Gorbachev leadership, its dynamics ... as well as prospects for domestic reform," he said.
McFarlane tried to kill self, concludes investigation

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An investigation concluded that former presidential adviser Robert McFarlane attempted suicide, a police source said Tuesday, while authorities officially stated only that there was no evidence of foul play in McFarlane’s Violet viewpoint.

"There's not going to be any ruling that it was an attempted suicide. We are satisfied that there was no crime and there's only that there was no evidence presented," said Harry Geeraedt, spokesman for the Montgomery County Police in suburban Maryland.

But a source close to the investigation, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the police had determined McFarlane's ingestion of 25 to 30 tablets of Valium, a tranquilizer, was an attempt to take his own life.

The source also confirmed that police had found that McFarlane, President Reagan's former national security adviser, had written a note to his wife Jonda carried to the hospital. However, police did not know the contents of the note, the source said.

Geeraedt said he knew nothing of the note, and McFarlane's attorney Peter Morgan declined comment on the matter.

The 49-year-old McFarlane, who associates said has recently been in severe pain with a back ailment, was rushed to the hospital Monday morning, shortly before he was to testify to the presidetnial commission set up to investigate the National Security Council's role in the Iran arms-sale crisis.

He was listed in good condition Tuesday at Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland, and was visited by his wife, hospital spokes­man Lt. Russ Sanford. He said McFarlane was not receiving telephone calls.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan had not tried to contact his former aide, but that the pres­ident and first lady Nancy Reagan planned to telephone Mrs. McFarlane. He said McFarlane would likely call McFarlane "when it is appro­priate."

Fitzwater said the White House "had no inside information or medical information" to comment on the reported suicide attempt.

Mrs. McFarlane, mean­while, issued a terse statement saying, "Bob and the children and I appreciate enormously the great love and support that we are getting from friends and neighbors alike."

Teens charged after racial attack

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Three teens­agers were charged with murder and nine others with lesser crimes in a racial attack in which a white mob chased and beat three black men, one of whom died from injuries and traffic was killed by a car.

The suspects, ages 16 to 18, surrendered Tuesday morn­ing to police in the New York City borough of Queens, where the attack took place Dec. 20.

The 12 defendants, accom­panied to state Supreme Court by parents and lawyers, were arraigned before Justice Alfred Lerner. All pleaded in­nocent.

Two of the three youths charged with murder Tues­day had previously faced the same charge until a judge dropped it for lack of tes­timony by the survivors of the attack.

Those charged with murder again were Jon Lester, 17, of the South Ozone Beach, and Scott Kern, 17, of How­ard Beach. The other youth charged with murder was Robert Riley, who was described by prosecution­er Charles Ryes as the only defendant who cooperated in the investi­gation.

The judge agreed to Ryes' request that Riley be released on his own recognizance. Bail was denied for Kern, Lexter, already imprisoned on a weapons charge, was remanded to Rikers Island prison.

The third youth charged in the original investigation, Jason Ladone, 16, was charged with second-degree manslaughter. His bail was set at $50,000.

The other charges against the teen-agers included at­tempted murder, assault, riot, inciting to riot, larceny, conspiracy and criminal facilita­tion.

Although he noted that all the suspects had roots in the community and many had no criminal records, Ryes asked the judge to take into account the seriousness of the charges and sought bails ranc­ing from $190,000 to $25,000 for those charged only with the riot counts.

In each case, defense lawyers argued their clients had voluntarily surrendered and would be available for any court appearances.

But Lerner, calling the in­cident "an American tragedy," set high bails in all cases.

Koop favors TV ads for condoms

Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Surgeon General Everett Koop told a House panel on Tuesday that he favors advertising condoms on network television because the national health threat posed by AIDS “overwhelms other considerations.”

Koop said that such advertising should promote disease prevention rather than sexual activity and that, properly presented, it would provide a valuable health service.

The surgeon general, designated the Reagan administration’s lead administrator on AIDS, did not state his position on advertising in his prepared testimony but expressed strong support for it in response to questions from members of the Health and Environment Subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

“The threat of AIDS is so great that it overwhelms other considerations, and advertising, I think therefore, is necessary in reference to condoms and would have a positive public health value,” Koop said.

He acknowledged that condoms do not provide 100 percent protection against the disease sexually, and by population analysts in recent years, have a particular appeal because so much pornography contains sexual themes.

“You could make a good case that if television networks do indeed peddle all the attractive parts of sex, then they should be willing to also peddle something that might prevent the transmission of sexually acquired disease,” responded Koop.

“But I think even without that relationship, the threat is so great to the people of this country that, of itself, the public health message and the preventative aspects of AIDS that would accompany condom advertising speak for themselves.”

Representatives of the three major commercial networks-NBC, CBS and ABC said at the hearing that they do not carry condom advertisements because network officials believe they would be offensive to the viewers of many affiliate stations.

They noted that local stations are free to carry such ads on their own and that condoms are being advertised locally in 11 television markets. Moreover, they said the networks are keeping an open mind on whether to accept such ads for national distribution.

Some women get abortions if not happy with child’s sex

Associated Press
NEW YORK - Some pregnant women are using genetic tests to find out the sex of their fetuses and are getting abortions if it is not the gender they want, a practice made easier by a new kind of test, experts say.

The practice is rare and testing professionals said they discourage it as unethical or a poor use for tests intended to uncover serious genetic defects.

While many women seeking such tests come from cultures that put a premium on having boys, others want a girl, testing experts said in recent interviews.

In one case, a 36-year-old mother of two boys got an abortion when she found out her fetus was male, said Marie Barr, coordinator of the prenatal diagnosis clinic at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia.

If unintentionally pregnant, a woman in her 30s or 40s with three boys may wish to continue the pregnancy only if she knows the baby will be a girl, said Laird Jackson, director of medical genetics at the university.

The tests are generally performed if a woman has a family history of genetic disease or is 35 or older, because maternal age increases the risk of genetic defects.

The standard test, called amniocentesis, is performed when the fetus is about 16 weeks old. A newer test not as widely used, called chorionic villus sampling or CVS, can be performed as early as nine weeks, allowing for earlier abortions.

Of 2,500 women who have gone through CVS procedures at Thomas Jefferson University in about three years, perhaps 10 have gotten abortions because of the sex of the fetus, said Jackson.
Aquino receives praise for maintaining peace

Although upheaval and violence still rock the Philippines, some good things are happening there. President Corazon Aquino has proven herself a woman of peace, and in the face of an edgy group of leftist insurgents and a dissatisfied right, she has generally maintained a position consistent with her revolutionary, democratic ideals.

Ken Kollman
on politics

On the whole, Aquino deserves passing remarks for her job in running a revolutionary government, and in that business, passing marks are rare indeed. The new constitution, from all indications approved by nearly 80 percent of the population in a plebiscite, stands as a remarkable sign of assurance in this lady who consistently stuns her extremist enemies.

One can hardly blame those who criticize her. From the left, she steps far short of a bloody communist revolution, instead choosing to negotiate, shake hands, and greet rebel leaders in her palace. The Communist guerrillas undoubtedly seek a share of power, if not a complete leadership role. But Aquino, of course, is not about to hand over even a share of power, and rightly so. So what does she do? She opens negotiations,(arranges cease fire, and holds total control on the military's urge to pursue the guerrillas in combat. This is hardly what good revolutions are made of.

The right criticizes Aquino for many of the same reasons. Dealing with communists on any level other than outright revolution can be disastrous. A leader with the conscientious strength of Aquino deserves our praise, but also our support.

Heightened awareness of justice is petitioned

Theatrical tragedy, as most of us have been taught in an English class at some point in our academic careers, typically involves a character of high esteem brought down not by vice, but by some weakness or error in judgment. Usually this flaw surfaces as the character's quest to gain power, wisdom or money ends with horrifying results. As part of the foundation of our literary heritage, these tragedies were staged on Greek amphitheaters, later in the Globe theater, and today in theaters around the world.

Mary Ann White

Today, however, one can witness a tragedy of a different sort without going to the theater. Unfortunately, the stage no longer belongs to the world of acting, but to that of real life. The media often presents a stage in the streets of Manila, Chile, Johannesburg, and sometimes even Chicago or South Bend. But the stage is also set in laboratories around the world as we push to improve our technology and in corporate offices where executives strike to increase profits at any expense. Though we cannot deny the numerous benefits of the majority of today's technological advancements, dramatic tragedy teaches us to know our limitations, which would seem to apply to the world of science.

Even on our own campuses, the concerns over getting the best paying job, going to the right party and being seen with the right people shows that quite often, we partake in this tragedy too. True, we cannot fault a person for not taking action on issues of injustice if he or she is unaware of their existence. But this is our character flaw: the basic lack of awareness concerning the issues of social justice today. No one will dispute that it is difficult for most students to find huge amounts of time to dedicate to a cause. And so often, it is easiest to brush off the issues by using the usual, "What can one person do to help?" line.

The longer we let our ignorance of the issues persist, however, the longer we unknowingly contribute to these tragedies.

Recently, I participated in the Urban Plunge program offered to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students over Christmas break. Like so many people, I was totally unaware of the number of injustices that the poor suffer every day in cities across America. Though I am far from a complete grasp of the issues, the Plunge showed me the incredible number of organizations that are working to improve the situation for the poor.

Here at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, the opportunities for involvement in similar organizations exist right at our fingertips. The Center for Social Concerns and Saint Mary's Campus Ministry and Justice Education Departments offer countless ways to make us more aware of peace and justice issues. Whether through participation in different organizations, lectures, movies or publications, these groups are there to help us. No one is asking that we completely give up our social lives and other interests for each cause, but we must become more aware of the issues at hand.

Most theatrical tragedies take place in five acts. For the real life tragedies taking place today, we do not know what "act" we are in. But as a society, we must act soon while we still have time to prevent the outcome that most theatrical tragedies have. In the words of Archbishop Bernard Law of Boston, "What good would life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness be if we become victims of our own technological brilliance if the life we our mother Earth is extinguished?"

Quote of the day

“If you are constantly being mistreated, you're cooperating with the treatment.”

I am prompted to write this column as the Lewis Hall representative for Late Night Olympics. I was approached by Security/Police to help to represent our dormitories at the ACC this year. They wanted someone to help them prepare for the event. The only thing I knew was that it had some connection with the Olympics, but I had never been personally involved in Special Olympics, I saw my participation in Late Night Olympics as an indirect involvement.

Sheila Horox guest column

By now, most of you are aware that this event is being held at the ACC this year. The Olympics is being held at the ACC. That will be donated to the Special Olympics. The proceeds that we raise have been organized by the ACC and will be donated to the Special Olympics Foundation. In other words, our participation in this event gives students a chance to get to know people within their own dorms but also the dorms or dorms they’ve paired up with as well. This night is a social opportunity, something we at Notre Dame are often in desperate need of. Now that the event draws near I am able to look back in retrospect and appreciate the efforts of so many individuals, those at NVA and each of the dorm representatives. My first impression changed on every door at Lewis (keep in mind we do have the largest dorms’ dorms) and my voice was lost somewhere in the process. The amount we raise this year was almost $3000. But only when faced with a blanket sheet of paper before me, could I really begin to appreciate the efforts of those that were behind the scenes. And made sure they were willing to do so much more, but our mere participation in the Olympics is an indirect embodiment.

My intentions in writing this article are to make everyone aware of this im- portant night and also urge everyone to get involved, whether it be by participating in several of the Olympic events or by stopping in and checking out the games. The most important thing to remember is that the event is raising money for the Special Olympics. It is a very worthy cause, and I guarantee you’ll have a great time.

Shenanigans

MAUREEN RYAN features writer

Shenanigans... the name may be misleading. To some it recalls the word used by a grammar school teacher to describe one's behavior in fourth grade art class. Others think of it as a leprechaun's idea of a good time. At Notre Dame, however, the name represents a group of 25 dedicated performers who hope to make themselves recognized and remembered as a long lasting tradition.

Shenanigans is a student formed, student directed singing and dancing ensemble that began only five years ago. It consists of 10 female members, 10 male members, and five accompanists. The club is run by the members themselves under the direction of its president of the Glee Club. The qualifications for a position in the club relies on an individual's singing talent and acting ability. To continue his participation in the club, a member hopes to keep busy and continue to perform for new audiences in new locations. Most of all the group wants to maintain the tradition, and allow the University to discover that Shenanigans is a very talented and worthwhile club.

The club, Shenanigans is a serious one, very special. It is rewarding to describe one's behavior in front of an audience and be given to those who attend the performance. The members of the Glee Club, as well as singing in Morrissey's vocal group, and acting as vice president of the Glee Club. Shenanigans is a group that is creative and has a good time. At Notre Dame, Shenanigans has been a member of Shenanigans since his freshman year, as well as in Morrissey's vocal group, and acting as vice president of the Glee Club. Grontham and he work together in creating the routines for their performances. "I choose and teach the music, while Julie makes up dance routines to go along with it" The "teaching" includes practice sessions three hours a week for two hours rehearsing various numbers from medleys of music ranging from the Big Band era to Disney tunes.

All of the responsibilities into their own hands and actually prefer this freedom over that of a hired full time director. "We all feel we are creative enough to depend on each other to run our group," Grantham explained.

Granthan's sister, Jenny, thought up the idea for such a club in 1982. Since her sister's graduation, Julie has been working to give the group a highly recognized well respected image to continue after she leaves Shenanigans. Her brother Jim, presently in Rome, previously was involved in the ensemble and should continue his participation in the club next year.

Although family interest is common, each individual must earn his or her own position. The 20 members chosen this year had to compete against as many as 70 others trying out, recall after recall, until the final selections were made.

The qualifications for a position in the club relies on an individual's singing talent and acting ability. To continue his participation in the club, a member hopes to keep busy and continue to perform for new audiences in new locations. They are serious about their role, regardless of their name.

After 16 years of engaging in a dangerous search for a cargo ship, Matthewson is now trying to make contact with the men who on September 17, 1965, brought the gold and silver treasures that the ship yielded to the world. The treasure was scattered over 20 miles from Key West, Fla. The treasure estimated to be worth $400 was scattered over seven miles on the bottom of the ocean until it was discovered by two divers. Those who wish to participate should contact me through the Department of Anthropology.

Everyone is looking for a return to summer, especially the citizens of South Bend and surrounding counties. The Beach Boys provided that warm feeling tonight, just as they have been providing it for the last 25 years, ever since their first sun and surf album came out in 1961.

Originally billed as the Pendleton's, Kenny and the Cadets, or Carl and the Passions, they played their first concert as the Beach Boys on Dec. 31, 1960. The group was started by three brothers, Carl, Dennis, and Brian Wilson (the mastermind behind the band's ethereal harmonies.) Mike Love, lead singer and a cousin to the Wilson's, and Alan Jardine, a friend of the family, have also been with the group since its foundation.

Changes have been made in the band lineup through the years. Bruce Johnston, vocalist and keyboardist, has been with the group since 1965. And 1983 marked the untimely death of Dennis Wilson, the only member of the Harthorne, Ca. band who actually did surf. Unknown to many, Glen Campbell, the rhinestone cowboy himself, spent 12 months as a boy of the beach. The group has also suffered setbacks. Including the nervous breakdown of the then 22-year-old producer and writer of the most popular Beach Boys songs, Brian Wilson. He has been under psychiatric care on and off ever since. Rumors fly about a grand piano being placed in a giant sandbox in his living room.

But this is all history, you say. What have these boys of summer been doing lately? For example, "Good Vibrations," their last No. 1 hit, is almost 20 years old. Why aren't the Beach Boys, If you'll pardon the pun, washed up?

Although the group made the list of 80-year-old crowd at the ACC wait for almost an hour to lively crew.

With Love at the helm, the Beach Boys provided wave after wave of hits from past decades, including the classics "Dance," "Surfin' Safari," "Surf City," and "Wouldn't It Be Nice." Carl Wilson, lead guitarist for the group, sang the ballad "God Only Knows (What I'd Be Without You)," the Muzak version of which was played while the crowd filed out of the Convocation Center, no doubt giving us food for thought.

One of the most interesting things to watch at this concert was the difference in audience atmosphere. Mike Love dedicated "Barbara Ann" with the band, and the audience, and even John Stamos and Joan Jett, who had rejoined everyone on stage. The show ended with a rousing version of "Fun, Fun, Fun." It had been fun. The Beach Boys had given the SB audience exactly what they came for.

The newspapers have run special sections devoted to the Super Bowl this week. The pubs and liquor stores have been making a big deal about the game, too. Huge posters and Budweiser displays fill up all the store window displays. This fine, imported beer is on special here; a case will only set you back 12 pounds sterling or about $16.

We found some American football fans last week as we waited for a bus. They heard us talking and knew we were lost. They offered help and asked if we were Americans. One remarked, "You probably don't even watch British football."

"Tell us admitted. Fumbling for a reply we added, "You probably don't follow American football."

"Yes we do," they proclaimed, "We'll be watching the Superbowl on Sunday."

We asked who they'd be rooting for. They didn't really say; they only added, "We love the Chicago Bears."

"I am Refrigerator Perry," said one of them.

We have traveled through five time zones only to find still more Bears fans. At least they spoke with a British accent.

The final outcome of the Radio-2 poll? Fifty-three percent for the Giants, and 47 percent for the Broncos. Maybe the British know more about our American pastime than we think.

Iowa's Bill Alford takes shot at ball tradition.

Associated Press

Alford's impending takeover of the all-time Hoosier scoring mark and a preview of upcoming Big Ten action appears on this page.

"He obviously played too early for me to enjoy watching him or know anything about him as a player," says Alford, who likely will pass Schlundt's school record of 2,192 career points Wednesday night. "I just know what my dad's told me. But I think he still obviously played too much. He obviously played too much to be consistent over a long season, can't dampen."

Big 10 action heats up to chagrin of coaches

Associated Press

CHICAGO - If Iowa Coach Tom Davis is a little apprehensive about the Big Ten basketball race in the approaching two weeks, who can blame him?

"Every time you look up there's a nationally ranked team starring you in the face," Davis said Tuesday at the Big Ten's weekly telephone press conference.

The No. 4-ranked Hawkeyes take on No. 7 Purdue Thursday night, and on Saturday 11th-ranked Illinois invades Iowa City. The following week, Iowa goes to Ohio State and to No. 2 Indiana.

"It's a demanding stretch," said Davis, "I don't know what would compare with it. Those are four tough clubs and then we play the Michigan's after that. "There's not much breathing room. We all have to face it and that's an indication of how strong the Big Ten is." Some clubs could finish near the bottom in this league and finish on top in some others, said Davis, who is in his first year in the Big Ten after coaching stints at Lafayette, Boston College and Stanford.

"Going down the stretch the we have to play hard, take each game individually and not look ahead," said Davis. "We can't emphasize any one thing. Iowa might not be at full strength even if Bill Jones and Kevin Gamble recover from injuries. Jones has an Achilles injury and the flu and has missed practice. Gamble also has missed practices because of a deep thigh bruise.

But if any team is prepared for such eventualities, it should be the Hawkeyes because of Davis' theory of playing everybody early in the season.

"Injuries and foul trouble are not as much of a shock," said Davis. "I look to use my bench early in the season. It gives you consistency and others feel ready to step in."

In Purdue and Illinois, the Hawkeyes will be facing teams they have defeated on the road. They roared back from a 22-point deficit at Champaign to trip Illinois 91-88 in overtime, and followed that with a 70-67 triumph at Purdue.

But neither coaches Gene Keady of Purdue nor Lou Henson of Illinois figure revenge will be a factor in their games at Iowa.

"We don't talk about those things," said Keady. "We have to come up with a better defense. Iowa's rebounding and press concern us. We have to be consistent for 40 minutes. They rely on spurts and they can score 15 or 20 points in a minute of minutes if you're not careful."

Illinois' immediate problem is not Iowa. The Illini must play at Minnesota on Thursday before going to Iowa and might get caught looking ahead.
Final playoff spot brings tight race as P.E., Farley, Lyons roll along

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

A very strong Pasquerilla East team continues to dominate women's interhall basketball this season, but that has not curbed the intensity of play as several teams fight for remaining playoff spots.
P.E. is 6-4 with just three games remaining, followed in the standings by Lyons and Farley A, both 5-1. Barren a severe letdown by one of those leaders, several teams will battle for the fourth and final playoff spot.

Even P.E. will be tested in the upcoming weeks as it will face a very important matchup with Farley A. Other teams P.E. has yet to play include Breen-Phillips B (1-5) and Farley B (0-6). P.E. has momentum, however, as it comes off an impressive 38-27 beating of a tough Breen-Phillips A team (4-2) Sunday.

Farley A, meanwhile, also showed its strength Sunday, beating 3-3 Lewis A, 37-31. This game saw Lewis take the lead in the first half, with Farley hanging in and approaching to within two points at halftime.

Farley then came out strong in the second half, taking the lead and never looking back.

"We were really unorganized," said Farley captain Marilu Almeida of her team's slow start. "Then we put it together and played a lot better in the second half."

The win by Almeida's squad gave Farley A a clean sweep over Lewis Hall this season, coming one week after Farley's victory over Lewis B (2-3). Led by Mary Borowski and Almeida, Farley hopes to break the Pasquerilla East win streak on February 23, when the two leaders are scheduled to meet.

Those teams also will be watching a 5-1 Lyons squad which has scored victories in its last two games, one over Walsh and one over Farley B. The team's only loss this year, in fact, was a 45-32 setback to P.E. early in the season.

The Walsh team is 1-3, but it may be a better team than its record shows.

"We've been losing the close games," said senior captain Patty Mileski, whose team can still pull off a winning record with five games left to play.

Walsh was forced to forfeit to Lyons Sunday due to a lack of players and was victimized by the tough P.E. team the week before.

"We played P.E. really close through the third quarter," Mileski said. "But we lost our intensity and fell apart."

Walsh will get a chance to improve its record Thursday when it faces Badin.

Smith aims for No. 600 tonight at NC

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. - North Carolina basketball head coach Dean Smith is willing to leave it to others to determine the significance his approaching 600 coaching victory.

As he sees it, "it just means that I've coached for a long time."

The Tar Heels held off Virginia last Sunday for Smith's 599th triumph. Wake Forest comes into the Dean E. Smith Center Wednesday night with the possibility of becoming a part of history.

Bill Guthridge, Smith's top assistant for 20 seasons, says it is his boss' style to avoid all the attention he draws.

"He doesn't like to talk about himself," Guthridge said. "We would rather the credit go to the players."

Smith, 55, will add one more entry to his list of achievements with a victory in the building named last February in his honor. No. 600 will move him past former Oregon State coach Amory Gill as the 10th winningest Division I coach of all time.

Starting the year, Smith's record of 579-171 gave him a winning percentage of .782, fourth on the all-time list. With a 30-2 record through Sunday's action, he now has captured 30 victories or more in 17 straight seasons. His only losing season in 35 years was his first, an 8-9 mark in 1961.

After that first season, Smith was hung in effigy for failing to produce a winner. Now, in the eyes of his fans, he could coach forever.

"This is a great university and he likes to represent it," Guthridge said.

It took UCLA coach John Wooden 29 seasons to capture his 667 victories and DePaul's Ray Meyer coached for 42 to reach 724. If Smith stays on the job through the 1990s, he will even have a shot at Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, who has 875 victories.
Sophomore guard Michael Smith may not see much playing time behind star guard David Rivers, but his contributions to Notre Dame are not hard to figure. Pete Skiko features the patient role player from South Bend in his story at right.

It's just a matter of time. That's a familiar refrain heard by players who stand in the shadow of nationally-recognized teammates. The frustration of constantly hearing those words from yourself and coaches can be hard to handle, especially when everybody knows you've got talent.

But Michael Smith knows that his time is rapidly approaching. And he's not the only one. Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps understands that while David Rivers stirs his team's cauldron in the wings is a comforting thought. "As an athlete, obviously Michael lives in David's shadow to a certain extent," said Phelps, now in his 16th year at the Irish helm. "But honestly, people don't realize that with the quickness and intensity with which he plays, Smith has the potential to be one of the best defensive guards in the country."

That's a strong statement to make about a reserve guard, but it's obvious that Phelps believes it. Smith, a 6-3, 165-pound sophomore out of South Bend, won the Indiana state meet as a junior at LaSalle High School. His defensive quickness and pressing ability have enabled him to see playing time at Notre Dame. Any further improvement of his fine ballhandling and offensive skills should land him more regular time in the future.

"Michael has to concentrate on shutting people down on defense," said Phelps, "because he is more than capable of doing so. We've used him when we've pressed because of his great quickness and as he continues to run our system and improve the way he handles the ball, his skills should become increasingly valuable to us over the next couple of years."

Smith played small forward in high school, and his point guard has not been without its difficulties. But Smith loves to run, and his role thus far suits that preference. "Even as a forward in high school," said Smith, who has seen action in 15 of Notre Dame's 20 games thus far this year, "I was used to running the floor. Sure, I think that the team this year has the potential to be a running team, but the team this year didn't warrant our style. We had to slow things down more." "Of course I'd like to see more of doing better, and I'm sure that I will in the future, but right now it's just a matter of taking advantage of the time I do get and then playing well in those situations. I enjoy playing on the team. If I improve the things I need to improve, I'm sure I'll see more action." Smith sees an upswing in team unity this year over last, and feels that the squad can go far if that attitude prevails. "There is a lot more of a team concept this year," said Smith. "That's probably because we realized that we had a good year last year and should have gone farther than we did. We know we can play this year. Coach Phelps is a big part of that."

"Digger expects a lot out of everybody and he has certain ways in which he gets the most out of the guys on the team. Sure, every now and then he'll get on you, but he does it because he knows you're capable."

Phelps sees a good future for Smith, one which will probably extend far beyond the basketball court. "I love his personality," said Phelps. "He's a great kid who works hard and will get his chance. Believe me, he'll help us out a lot before it's over."

Conner, Cup enjoy parade

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The America's Cup and the skipper who recaptured it for the United States got a ticker tape parade Tuesday up Fifth Avenue, passing not far from the club that was home to the trophy for 132 years.

Dennis Conner, who lost the cup to Australians in the New York Yacht Club's 1983 defense with the vessel Liberty, won it back at the helm of Stars & Stripes last week while sailing for the San Diego Yacht Club.
The following is a partial list of recruits who have verbally committed to Notre Dame and are expected to sign a national letter of intent today:

day, some scouts were citing this year's recruiting batch as "one of Notre Dame's best ever." Holtz virtually sealed that honor with the addition yesterday of two of the country's most-storied blue-chippers.

Running back Tony Brooks, a 6-1, 215-pounder out of Tulsa, Okla., and tight end Frank Jacobs, a 6-3, 225-pounder who hails from Newport, Ky, both verbally agreed to attend Notre Dame next fall. Brooks, considered to be the No. 1 runner in Oklahoma, turned down offers from the Oklahoma Sooners to play for Holtz, while Jacobs, an almost unanimous choice as the top tight end prospect in the country, finally refused offers from Penn State and Kentuckly.

These two players join an impressive list of other prep players who have verbally committed to attend Notre Dame. Ricky Walters, a running back from Harrisburg, Pa, coveted by Notre Dame and many other college powers, announced last week his intention to commit to Notre Dame, following other highly-touted recruits such as quarterback Kent Graham (Wheaton, Ill.), defensive end Andre Jones (Huntington Beach, Calif.) and offensive lineman Scott Kowalkowski (Orchard Lakes, Mich.).

Notre Dame's recruiting base, meanwhile, can truly be said to be national, with players coming from all over the continent. One prep running back, running back Lincoln Coleman, hails from the same area in Dallas, Tex., as that of current Irish star Tim Brown, while wide receiver Brian Dowler, a prep star from Florida, is the son of former Green Bay Packer star, Boyd Dowler.

Distinguished Student Award

Once again the Notre Dame Alumni Association will be accepting nominations from February 10 to February 28 for their annual Distinguished Student Award. The Distinguished Student Award was created to honor an outstanding senior student at the University based on the following criteria:

1. Service to Notre Dame
2. Service to the Community
3. Good Academic standing

Applications can be obtained at the Alumni Association office on the 2nd floor of the Administration Building, University Ministry offices - Badin Hall and Memorial Library and the Center for Social Concerns.

Nominations must be submitted to the Alumni Association by February 28.

Lynn, could I talk to you for a sec? I don't plan to be much of any thing, but...

It's... It's about your weight. If you keep on eating like you have been, you're gonna explode. It's scary.

Don't worry about it! The little ginger telled me that it's normal to gain 12 pounds during the first year. It's called the Freshman 15.

Lynn, it's the "Freshman 15." Oh, God. You're kidding.

Irish hope to forget tough defeat as they prepare for Detroit on road

The Notre Dame women's basketball team will be looking to rebound from a tough weekend loss to Miami (Fla.) when it heads to Detroit, Mich., tonight to face the University of Detroit.

The 62-61 Irish loss to Miami on Saturday afternoon was the result of a scrappy Hurricanes' full-court press. And Notre Dame head coach Mary DiStanislao had several accolades for Pack, who spends most of her time roaming the paint against larger opponents.

The Lady Titans' top returning scorer is Cassandra Pack, a 5-9 senior who averaged 18.5 points per contest last season. DiStanislao had several ac­ collades for Pack, who spends most of her time roaming the paint against larger opponents.

Signing day brings prizes to Holtz, ND

Today is an official day of rest for the nation's college football coaches. After months of travelling around the country, searching out high school talent and making recruiting pitches, today is the day coaches can finally sit back and start dreaming about na­tion­al championships.

Because today is the first day high school recruits can offi­cially sign a letter-of-intent to play college football at the school of their choice.

And from all indications, Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz can settle in for a long winter's nap secure in the knowledge that his first real recruiting class under the Golden Dome is also one of the best in the nation.

Holtz filled all 30 scholar­ships which Notre Dame had to offer this year with quality players, and to the astonish­ment of most analysts, he plugged the exact holes which he must needed to fill. While even prior to yester­see RECRUTIS, page 18

No Better Action around than in NBA

Last Sunday's NBA All-Star Game was filled with suc­cess stories.

Tom Chambers, the hometown hero, won the game's MVP after being named to the team as an afterthought. Julius Erving played marvelously in his last mid-season classic. And top off it, the game went into overtime, with Rolando Blackman hitting two free throws with no time remaining to force the extra period.

It is rather fitting that the NBA be blessed with such a momentous showcase. After all, the league itself is quite a success story.

The NBA used to suffer from poor attendance, lack of depth in its teams and a lack of general excitement. Today, what Larry Bird and Magic Johnson started in terms of building fan interest, Michael Jordan has elevated to an­other level. And with the addition of the marginal fans Jordan brings in, the NBA is more popular than ever. In fact, now some people can even swallow the notion that the players actually play defense.

It's so popular now that the All-Star Game has become an all-weekend event, not just one day as it was in the old days. The Legends Game, the 3-Point Shootout and the Slam­Dunk Championship keep the fans' attention for six hours on the day before the game, and then, if anyone has any energy left, the game arrives on Sunday. Whew. The demands of being popular. I guess.

But the All-Star Game is only a reflection of the overall strength of the league. Boston and Los Angeles still have no company in champions' circle, but the gap is not nearly as wide as it was just a few years ago. In years past, fans from Milwaukee, Detroit, Atlanta, Houston and Dallas could just sigh when the Ces a center Lakers were picked in preseason predictions. Only Philadelphia fans could feel away with a distantful chorlue or guffaw. My, how things have changed.

In case you couldn't tell by his level of play, Kareem Abdul Jabbar is within earshot of 40 years old. (Hint: if you don't believe me, try to remember the last time he had a full head of hair.) And also if you haven't noticed, the Lakers don't have anything that could resemble a center ready to take his place. That means one of two things: one, the Lakers will trade for a center soon, or two, the Lakers will fall a notch in the scale of the mighty when Kareem retires. He says it will be next year. Of course, he also said it would be last year.

The Boston Celtics are not the dominating team they were even last year, either. Remember that season Bill Walton had last year, where he was healthy the whole year? Most people are beginning to think the writers of "Dallas" created that dream too. Don't expect this dream to come back three times and become a reality though, because Walton's healthy seasons are all in the scrap­books. So are the Celtics' dominating ones. A team with no bench help past its eighth player cannot be a permanent kingpin, even though Larry Bird will keep them close.

But who will catch these two? Perhaps no one this year, but it gets more difficult for them every year.

If you throw out the Los Angeles Clippers, who are petitioning for membership in the Continental Basketball Association every time they take the court, every team can say it has a shot at the playoffs because of the NBA's ridiculous playoff system that doesn't separate the men from the mice, it separates the living from the dead.
