Defense experts called to develop verification system plan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The United States, moving to complete a proposed treaty eliminating medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe, summoned Senate allies nations Monday to help devise a verification system to present to the Soviets.

Representatives from Belgium, the Netherlands, France, West Germany and Italy met at the State Department to study details of proposals the United States will make to the Soviets at Geneva arms talks.

The five countries invited to the talks are those providing bases for the U.S. intermediate-range missiles that would be eliminated under the proposed treaty.

Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said the participants discussed "verification provisions of an intermediate nuclear arms treaty. These verification provisions obviously have a direct interest to the basking countries."

"Given the importance of verification we envision future meetings similar to today's, as needed," Redman said.

He said the United States was represented at the meeting by H. Allen Holmes, director of the State Department's bureau of politico-military affairs. The European delegates were identified as officials with expertise in missile deployment and other technical problems. Their names were not given.

President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev agreed in principle at their Reykjavik meeting in October to eliminate all but 150 U.S. Pershing II and Soviet SS-20s. The remaining Soviet missiles would be deployed only in the Asian part of the country and the U.S. weapons would be brought home from Europe.

Gorbachev revived Soviet proposals this month and the United States submitted most of a draft treaty for discussion at arms talks in Geneva. The Soviets have meetings of the draft were omitted, to give the Reagan administration more time to study the toughness of the measures.

Among the provisions reportedly under consideration are stringent on-site inspections that would allow each side to be certain that the opposing side has kept its agreement and to allay suspicions that the missiles have been redepolyed.

Senator removes ticket from ballot

By GREG LUCAS

Staff Reporter

The freshman election ticket composed of Dan Kramer, Mark Lavery, Patty Richards and Kim Clear was removed from the ballot yesterday because of Richards' academic standing last semester.

The members of the ticket came up before the Student Senate Monday night to ask permission to substitute another candidate in the position of treasurer and stay on the ballot.

The motion to allow the ticket to stay on the ballot was defeated by a vote of 10 to 3. A motion was then unanimously passed to refund the $62 that the candidates had spent on campaign expenses.

"The consensus of the Student Senate was that a substitution could not be made at such a late time because the ticket would have been misrepresented during the campaign," said Kramer. "The students are not elect­ing (just one person), they're electing a whole ticket," said Richards, sophomore class president.

According to Lavery, Rich­ards was informed by her counselor, who was not named, that she was ineligible to run.

The election rules, said Lavery, stated that a candidate has to be full-time graduate in good academic standing. Good academic standing is determined by the Freshmen Year of Studies.

"Ambiguities in the election rules and inconsistent govern­ing of the election caused the confusion," said Lavery, who was running for vice president.

Lavery said that he and his running mates felt the ap­praisal of Richards' counselor constituted official verification by Freshman Year of Studies.

"We weren't trying to get away with anything, but (Richards) felt that she qualified," said Lavery.

Lavery said they ticket was recognized by Om­budman before OBUD withdrew from governing the election.

"It says in the official election rules that an official list will be published by Om­budman and our names were on that list," said Lavery.

An ad hoc committee in the Judicial Board took over the governing of the election after OBUD withdrew. The commit­tee, headed by Maria Cintor, informed the freshmen candi­dates yesterday that Richards' academic standing disqualified the ticket.

Lavery said he did not feel they had been treated fairly by the Student Senate, "I do not feel that the 13 members that were present are representa­tive of the entire Student Sen­ate," he said.

"I think that it's a shame that the Student Senate would not allow next year's sophomore class to choose their own pres­ident," said Lavery.

President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev agreed in principle at their Reykjavik meeting, Iceland, summit last October to eliminate all but 150 U.S. Pershing II and Soviet SS-20s. The remain­ing Soviet missiles would be deployed only in the Asian part of the country and the U.S. weapons would be brought home from Europe.

Gorbachev revived Soviet proposals this month and the United States submitted most of a draft treaty for discussion at arms talks in Geneva. The Soviets have meetings of the draft were omitted, to give the Reagan administration more time to study the toughness of the measures.

Harvard president named '87 speaker

By MARK PANKOWSKI

Harvard University Presi­dent Derek Bok will be Notre Dame's 1987 commencement speaker.

"He is considered the No. 1 educator by most people's judg­ment," said University Pres­i­dent Father Theodore Hesburgh, who described Bok as his "first and only" choice to give the May 17 address.

"It is a (Bok's) personal policy not to accept degrees," said Conklin. "That he will be here to welcome, as the commencement speaker."

The commencement exer­cises will be the last presided over by Hesburgh, who is retir­ing after 35 years as president. Almost 2,500 students are candidates for degrees at the graduation ceremonies, which will begin at 2 p.m. in the ACC.

During its winter meeting, the Board of Trustees' execu­tive committee approved He­sburgh's choice of Bok, Conklin said.

"They were very enthusias­tic about him," said Hesburgh. Bok's acceptance of Notre Dame's invitation is a good sign for the University, as he rarely gives commencement addresses, Conklin said.

"(Bok) is president of what is considered the leading secular university," Conklin added. "I think his coming is a tribute to Father Hesburgh's work at Notre Dame."

110,000 invited to farewell

Some 110,000 invitations have been mailed to Univer­sity of Notre Dame alumni, parents and friends to watch the valedictory of retiring President Father Theodore M. Hesburgh on a satellite-delivered telecast May 9.

In what is believed to be the most extensive use of television by an educational institution, the hour long pro­gram will be seen at 128 sites in every state as well as Puerto Rico, Mexico and Canada. A total of 117 alumni clubs will gather at the 128 locations, mainly hotels.

The telecast, to be aired at 8 p.m. (EST) from his­toric Washington Hall on the campus will also feature the retiring executive vice pres­i­dent, Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, C.S.C.; the president­elect of the University, Rev. Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C.; Donald R. tumblough, pres­i­dent of the Coca-Cola Com­pany and chairman of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees; and Prof. William P. Sexton, vice president for University Development. A videotape retrospective on Father Hes­burgh's career, narrated by Walter Cronkite, will also be part of the telecast.

Fathers Hesburgh and Joyce have served in their positions for 35 years, longer than any of their active col­leagues. Both will step down from their positions in late October.

During the telecast, the Student Senate will adopt a motion to honor the retiring president and staff in the Center for Continuing Education, and the Senior Class is sponsor­ing a downlink at the Ath­letic and Convocation Center for all students.

This Arkansan explains origin of ‘Southern paranoia’

A new magazine called Southern began publishing last year out of my hometown of Little Rock, Arkansas. It’s a major publication, chock full of glossy full-page ads from the likes of Sears, Ford and Eastern Airlines. It’s debut issue featured a series called an Insider’s Guide to the Species which covered such toxins as “The Southern Mind,” “The Southern Body,” “The Southern Heart” and “The Southern Soul.”

If anything, the magazine demonstrates that the South sure thinks a lot about itself. The South is a region with a historic inflation complex that continues today – something Southerners can’t escape even when they try. Because of it – which contributes in a large part to what my roommate once called my “Southern paranoia.”

A person afflicted by Southern paranoia is immediately sensitive to any derogatory remarks about the region. Or he may go overboard on the Southern thing. I’ve even met Southern paradinos who’ve lived in the North and claim they’ll never go back to their origins, yet somehow they hang on to Southern accents thicker than how they used to speak. When I was nine I remember reading Charles Portis’ novel True Grit, which was set in Arkansas, and underlining all the references he made to my state. On a car trip to Florida the summer I was eight I wrote a song about Arkansas because we were leaving it for other states. When my family would go skiing in Colorado with other Arkansans we kids would call the Hogs on the slopes – that means we would yell out “Whoa, pig, sowet,” the cheer for the Razorbacks – because we were proud of our home and sensed somehow we had to defend that pride in other parts of the country.

Freshman year a friend of mine from Mich­igan heard I was from Little Rock. "You’re having some bad racial problems down there, aren’t you? I read about that high school in my history book. She shook her head hang­ing– "When are they going to let blacks into your schools?" She was speaking of Little Rock Central High, which made international news in 1957 when Governor Orval Faubus called out the National Guard to prevent integration. But ignorant comments like that perpetuate Southern paranoia. What about Jones Beach, New York? That’s a much more recent and equally repugnant example of racism. But here was this student from Michigan who had attended a practically all-white Catholic private high school reproaching me, who was a minority in my public high school that was 91 percent black, about integration.

In Arkansas we have a saying: “Thank God for Mississippi.” And we often mean it half facetiously. Without the state of Mississippi, our neighbor to the east, Arkansas would be dead last in every demographic category worth brag­ging about and dead first in every category worth laughing about – laughing, that is, if it’s not your state that has to worry about the prob­lem. We are usually only first in things like killer tornadoes. On paper, the state cuts a tragi­comic figure. But the rest of the country sees only the woful statistics; it doesn’t see the state’s beautiful lakes and mountains and the rich delta farmland where the blues were born. The rest of the country laughs where Arkansas and all Southerners – have immense pride, and therefore we become paranoid.

This about this next time you make fun of someone’s Southern accent.
The gods may be crazy, but so is spending the whole day in the Holy library. Jane Ricciardi and friend take a break from midterm

Women riot when male strip show is cancelled

Associated Press

MONROEVILLE, Pa. - About 600 women who paid $10 each to watch a male strip show turned into an angry mob when the performance was canceled, officials say.

"They just went ape," said Public Safety Director John Danzilli.

Women hurled bottles from the bar, and one woman was injured when she fell trying to hit a doorman at the Ritz nightrich, at the Monroeville Howard Johnson's, Danzilli said.

He estimated damage in the Saturday night melee at $500 in broken glass and chairs.

According to Danzilli, the promoter of the Manhattan Revue canceled the strip show after club operator Al Monzo refused to pay him in cash.

The promoter "told him there was going to be a riot. He went on stage and told those women the show was canceled," Danzilli said. "He said 'If you want your money back, you can sue Al Monzo. That's what we're going to do.'"

State troopers and police from five departments were called in to restore order.
2 teens charged with fatally stabbing priests

Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. - Two teenagers have been charged in the stabbing deaths of two inner-city Roman Catholic priests who were slain 12 days and less than a mile apart. One of the young men confessed, police said Monday.

The deaths had prompted warnings that priests should not let strangers into their homes.

Homicide Chief Richard T. Donovan said robbery was the motive in the slayings of the Rev. A. Joseph Eisonneti, 55, in the rectory at St. Bartholomew's Church on Feb. 24, and of Monsignor David P. Herlihy, 74, in the rectory at St. Matthew's Church. Herlihy's body was found early Sunday.

Associated Press

KAPAN, Nepal - Tibetan Buddhist lamas are seeking an auspicious date to enthrone a 2-year-old Spanish boy they believe is the reincarnation of the leader of a major monastery.

The Buddhist parents of Ozel 1za Torres brought him to India last month and are planning to take him to the Kapan monastery, where he is to take the seat of the late high lama Tsubten Yeshe.

But disciples in the monastery 10 miles northeast of Katmandu said they didn't know whether the ceremony will take place here or in Dharamsala.

The Kapan monastery operates the Mount Everest School for Buddhist Studies, where 70 young monks and 60 visitors from all over the world are undergoing training.

Before leaving Spain, Torres told the Madrid newspaper Diario 16 she did not know if her son would ever return to Spain. She said her biggest problem with him is having "a son and a master at the same time."

Ozone chemicals linked to ‘epidemic’ of cancer

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Prompt international action is needed against widely used ozone-destroying chemicals that are indirectly causing skin cancers at an almost epidemic pace, scientists warned a House hearing Monday.

"At the current rate, about one in seven Americans will develop (some form of) this disease during their lifetime," said Dr. Darrel Rigel, a research physician from New York University Medical Center.

"The rate of skin cancer in the United States is increasing at a near epidemic pace," Rigel told an Energy and Commerce health and environment subcommittee hearing on depletion of the Earth's stratospheric ozone layer.

He said physicians believe the major cause of skin cancer is the ultraviolet rays of the sun, which are filtered by stratospheric ozone. Other witnesses said that while there is still scientific uncertainty, it appears that the ozone layer is being destroyed by chemicals such as chlorofluorocarbons.

Rigel said the estimated number of melanoma - the skin cancer type most often fatal - has risen fivefold in the last seven years, making it the fastest rising type of cancer, except lung cancer, in women.

He said five years ago New York University researchers estimated that one in 250 Americans would develop malignant melanoma during their lifetimes and projected an increase to one in 150 by the year 2060. He said five years ago New York University researchers estimated that one in 250 Americans would develop malignant melanoma during their lifetimes and projected an increase to one in 150 by the year 2060.

"The recent surge in skin cancer rates, Rigel said, has forced revisions - the lifetime risk is now in 135; the year-2000 projection is in 90; and for 2035, it is one in three.

He told the subcommittee that not only is the skin cancer rate rising, the disease is also found in people of increasingly younger age.

"Five years ago, it was unusual to see persons under the age of 40 with skin cancer," Rigel said. "Now we will often see persons in their 20s with this disease." He said although many factors have been linked to skin cancer, "the generally accepted most important factor is exposure to ultraviolet light. One would expect skin cancer rates to increase as the ozone thins."

And that, other witnesses warned, is exactly what is happening around the world, both in the much-publicized ozone hole appearing several months a year over the Antarctic but also to a lesser extent in warmer latitudes.

They said that although the exact cause is not scientifically proven, the situation probably stems from emissions of ozone-destroying chlorofluorocarbons, which are used as aerosol spray propellants, refrigerants and industrial solvents and in some foam packaging.

"There is now compelling observational evidence that the chemical composition of the atmosphere is changing at a rapid rate on a global scale," said Dr. Robert T. Watson, acting manager for upper atmospheric research at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A dinghy containing salvage workers is dwarfed by the stern and propellers of the capsized ferry Herald of Free Enterprise, off the Belgian coast at Zeebrugge Sunday. The ferry capsized Friday evening, with officials estimating the death toll at 130 lives. See related story below.

Relatives of ferry victims gather to offer prayer service in Belgium

Associated Press

ZEERBRUGGE, Belgium Survivors and victims' relatives joined in an ecumenical prayer service Monday for those who died when water rushed through a British ferry three days earlier and turned it on its side.

Salvage crews prepared to right the partially submerged vessel so scores of bodies could be recovered from inside. The Herald of Free Enterprise, which capsized Friday night while leaving Zeebrugge harbor for Dover, rests starboard-side up on a sandbar.

More than 130 people are thought to have died in the shipwreck.

Vilhem Vannesta, governor of West Flanders province, said one more survivor had been located - someone who escaped the disaster but did not report to authorities immediately.

That left 81 people still missing and presumed dead. Vannesta said 400 people survived and 53 bodies had been recovered.

Paul Ellis, spokesman for the Townsend Thoresen line that owns the ship, announced a plan, beginning Monday night, to return bodies to Britain by ferry. Most of the dead were British.

Transport Minister John Moore of Britain said Monday in Parliament that a public inquiry will be conducted into the disaster and the government will donate 1 million pounds ($1.6 million) to the survivors and families of the dead.

Belgian officials said a panel of maritime law experts had begun an investigation.

"All of the survivors, including the crew, have been questioned," said Philippe van Bale, spokesman for investigating magistrate Arthur Deoen.

Ship's boatswain Marc Stanley was reported to have said the accident was his fault because he left the front loading doors open, but Van Bale said he "denied under questioning he ever made that statement." Stanley returned to Britain on Sunday night.

Preliminary identification was done at the naval base adjacent to the harbor. More relatives arrived Monday to identify their kin.

Officials said relatives had identified 34 bodies. Police Chief Roger de Bree said the others would be moved to a hospital for further identification.

If all 81 missing are declared dead, the final toll would be 134, by far the worst accident of modern times on the ferry runs between Britain and the continent.

At St. Donaas, a small, neo-Gothic brick church 400 yards from the temporary morgue, about 50 relatives and survivors held a 20-minute service.

"It was very simple. But there were deep emotions," said Richard Third, Anglican bishop of Dover. "The service was very moving."

He and Roger Vanghellette, Roman Catholic bishop of Bruges, led the service.

Journalists were barred, but one who managed to get inside said some relatives broke down. He said a woman collapsed to the floor, sobbing, and was helped out by Red Cross workers.
The purpose of "Dialogue on Education" is to raise constructive discussion on the meaning of university education today and its role in society. This column is the first in a series on this topic. The committee for "Dialogue on Education" invites all students, staff, and faculty to contribute to this dialogue by expressing their views on the questions posed in this column and on other issues related to university education and society today.

Is college education nothing more than glorified vocational-technical training? Is it indeed more about a better career and higher income? Has the American dream been reduced to a career and higher income? Has the American farming and the situation among migrant farm workers; and the temporary problems which we must recognize threat of their being used as pawns in the geopolitical power struggle; and the ap- parent meaninglessness of life that society and campus play in the educational experience? How many of us are involved?

We have the Center for Social Concerns. How many students, faculty, and staff make use of it? How many of us are aware of the programs and organizations operating from the CSC? Are we involved?

What is the role of student organizations in promoting a well-rounded college experience? What part do the Peace Institute, the Kellogg Institute, the Center for the Study of Contemporary Society, and the various institutes and departments on campus play in the educational experience? How many of us take advantage of these resources?

How do the various departments encourage a fostered open-mindedness, critical-inquisitiveness and reflection on social issues?

These are some of the questions that need to be raised if we are to begin a realistic appraisal of the larger issues and our role as a university community in confronting these issues. The authors of the Carnegie Foundation report state that "what we need today is a constructive debate about the meaning of the undergraduate college and a willingness to make this part of the educational enterprise a more vital, more enriching institution.

Such a debate needs to happen right here at the University. We need to ex-amine our role in society, not only at Notre Dame. What are the signs of hope for the future? Where is the po-tential for our playing a more dynamic role in creating a more human world? How much, and how do we get in-volved?

Indeed, are we nothing more than a glorified vocational-technical institute, or do we have an obligation to become open-minded, well-informed, and critical citizens of the world?

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

During the regular season, the Notre Dame men's swim team took some big strides with balance and depth to compile a 10-4 record. But in the post-season, depth is not as important as power, and the Irish placed ninth out of 10 teams in the three-day Midwest Invitational at Chicago on Saturday.

"We feel we swim very well, and we were really pleased," said Coach Tim Welsh. "A championship measures power more than depth. We're still knocking on the door of being one of the top finishers in this meet. And with our balance, as we improve, the whole team improves. Little by little, we're closing in."

Top individual finishers for the Irish include freshman Ed Veome (sixth in both one-meter and three-meter diving), freshman Bill Jackoboice (sixth in 50-yard freestyle), freshman Rich Zell (eighth in one-meter diving), senior Stephen Coffer (ninth in 400-yard individual medley) and senior Chris Green (12th in 200-yard individual medley).

"In a championship meet it's a completely different format," said Welsh. "It's not a meet during the season with the University of Illinois-Chicago, and we beat them on balance and depth. In the championship meet, the University of Illinois-Chicago placed third and beat us on power. Our goal is to be both powerful and deep so we can do everything."

Welsh was still pleased with the performance of the swimmers.

"We're not happy to be ninth, but we are happy with the individual performances and the improvement," he said. "We know the future is now faster than we are. We are looking for improvement and faster times, and we got that. Whatever the team score was, it was. We know we're improving, and we think we're not far from being in the center of this mix."

Notre Dame will host next season's Midwest Invitations at the Rolfs Aquatic Center.

Irish tennis splits pair in Madison, continues to improve consistency

The Notre Dame women's tennis team continues to improve and build consistency as it split a pair of meets over the weekend in Madison, Wisconsin.

Mary's swim team swam in the championship meet, the University of Wisconsin, and sophomore Mary Bishop, and sophomores Peggy Halloran, and junior Meghan Rafferty, finished with a time of 3:27.57, moving up four places to take 20th.

The 200-yard medley relay team of Jacknuss, senior Margarett Mannion, junior Mary Beth Hogan, and sophomores Jenny MacDoughall took 23rd place with a time of 2:10.93.

Rafferty, Mannion, junior Jennifer Veselik and Tierney finished 22nd in the 400-yard medley relay with a time of 4:43.35.

In individual events Rafferty placed 32nd in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 1:19.67 while Mannion and Tierney finished 32nd and 32nd in the 100-yard breaststroke with times of 1:27.06 and 1:18.12 respectively.

The Irish indoor track team ran to an impressive, though not totally satisfying, 17th-place finish at the IC4A Indoor Championships at Cambridge, Mass.

The meet was won by Penn State, followed by Villanova, George Mason and Georgetown.

Four members did all the scoring for Notre Dame. Freshman Glenn Watson placed fourth in the 55-meter high hurdles with a time of 7.44, and sophomore Ron Markezich placed sixth in the shot put with a toss of 52-8 short. Piane. “Consider IC4A’s, so the future is looking bright.”

Irish baseball squad heads for San Antonio after three tough losses

The Notre Dame baseball team opened the season with three losses to In-Indiana last weekend when they head south for spring breaks to Texas.

The Irish opened their season with the three defeats despite strong pitching performances from each staff member. "It is very difficult to start out 0-3," said Notre Dame head coach Larry Gallo. "We could have won three games this week, but we didn’t, and that’s all that counts. Indiana is a very good team but we are a very good team, too."

"I was pleased with the way all our pitchers threw this weekend," expected Gallo. "Brian Piotrowicz. He pitched a great game Sunday by 25-0. We didn’t score any runs for him, but he threw as hard as anybody I’ve seen as a freshman."

The Irish fell behind early in the weekend’s first game on Saturday as the Hoosiers took a 3-0 lead into the top of the eighth. Notre Dame’s Steve Skupien and Pat Pauvester started a rally with a double and triple, respectively, and Dan Pettier, Chris Flynn and Scott Rogers punched consecutive singles to tie the score at 5-5.

The Irish could not hold on to the lead, however, as Anderson scored run in the bottom half of the inning to take a 4-3 victory. Boths of Sunday’s doubleheader featured pitching duels, but again the Hoosiers came out on top. Notre Dame’s Kevin Cennah and Indiana’s Scott Zimmerman turned in complete games, yielding only five hits each. The second game tied 1-1 in the top of the seventh when 1B first baseman Tim Hutson, a freshman, and the Irish baseball team, but that certainly isn’t getting Gallo down.

"Those three losses are over and done with," said Gallo. "We've got a great game this week. It’s a good baseball game. It’ll be an interesting game." The three losses are on the books to stay for the Notre Dame baseball team, but Gallo said that certainly isn’t getting Gallo down.

"I'd walk to Texas right now if it meant we could play tomorrow, and I think I'd have 25 guys with me."
Robinson is chosen unanimously in 86-87 AP All-America selections

NEW YORK - David Robinson, the 7-foot-1 center who has been responsible for Navy's sudden success over the past three seasons, is the only unanimous selection on the 1986-87 Associated Press college basketball All-America team announced Monday.

Mid. Tenn. St. films cause Phelps problems

Wrestlers place fourth at Regionals

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

It finally happened.

After enduring a regular season where everything that could possibly go wrong somehow in a familiar, it's because the Irish Notre Dame wrestling team actually had a weekend where everything worked out as well as possible.

"Our goal was to try to get three people through," said Head Coach Fran McCann. "The guys who did well really prepared for it and really came to wrestle. It's late in the season, and guys are tired, but I really think, deep down, who wants it more. Desire plays an important role."

Notre Dame got more good news when it was announced that it would be the site for next year's NCAA Western Regionals. This year's host school, sixth-ranked Northern Iowa, won the regional team competition.

At first it looked like the Irish would have a tough time qualifying three wrestlers for nationals. Two of the team's top individuals, Geneser and 145-pound sophomore Pat Boyd, were coming off late-season injuries that had sidelined them for about two weeks.

"Boyd would have made it (to nationals), but his injury really restricted him, said McCann. "(Andy) Radenbaugh would have been the number-one seed if he had been able to compete. With Boyd and Radenbaugh hurt, our goal was to get three people, and we did."

Geneser was able to rebound from his knee injury to win the 167-pound competition. He defeated last year's champion, Scott Diveney of Drake, 3-2, in the finals. Geneser had just undergone arthroscopic surgery on his knee a week earlier.

"It showed a lot of courage on Chris's part, since his knee was scoped last Friday," said McCann. "To come back and wrestle that like a show of a lot of courage and determination."

Durso qualified by placing second in the 134-pound category. He won his first three matches before losing to Joe Gribben, 8-7, of Northern Iowa in the finals.

While Geneser and Durso entered the regionals with respective records of 28-4 and 23-4, Wisconsin's chances of qualifying did not appear to be as strong with an 18-12 record.

Wisniewski was able to qualify by winning his semi-final match, 3-2, over Jim Schmitz of Marquette. Schmitz had previously beaten Wisniewski, 13-6, in last month's National Catholic Tournament.

Wisniewski eventually lost in the finals, 15-8, to Northern Iowa's Pat Hogan, and finished second in the first round of the NCAA Tournament Thursday afternoon.

The Irish coaching staff has a large volume of tapes of teams from around the country, but the Blue Raiders are not one of them. The Raiders, who play in the Ohio Valley Conference, did not receive much television exposure, and consequently Phelps and his staff had no video to watch in order to develop a Blue Raider style of play.

If this situation sounds familiar, it's because the Irish staff had no tape of Arkansas-Little Rock heading into last year's NCAA Tournament.

"There's nothing much to say about Middle Tennessee," said Phelps at a press conference at noon Monday. "We don't have any tapes of the Blue Raiders from December, but still were trying to locate more recent video. All this made preparations difficult at best."

"We have to leave (Tuesday) night because our practice time is at one in Charlotte," said Phelps. "I feel sorry for our fans. They'll be able to do now is over our stuff without knowing what to expect or what to see or what to do. That's one thing I don't like to do because I've been able to prepare this team for every game. As I look at it right now, there's nothing to do."

"We'll just do what we've been doing as far as offenses - our main stuff, our zone stuff, our man to man center, averages 14.5 points and nine rebounds a contest. Randy Henry, a 6-9 forward center, averages 13.6. The third member of the Blue Raiders is Duane Bayhurn. Washington has dished out 37 assists this season while scoring 10.4 points per game. PE pulls out overtime victory over BP in IH championship

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

It was the stuff championship games are made of.

Pasquerilla East and Breen-Phillips battled for the women's Interhall championship Sunday night, and P.E. captured the crown with a hard-fought 38-32 overtime victory.

"We did what we had to do fundamentally," said B-P coach Jeff Peters. "We kept them from getting the ball inside and didn't get out-rebounded. We just couldn't get the baskets we needed."

"It was obviously a tough game," said winning coach Chris Perneck. "It was a solid team effort all the way." Breen-Phillips ran off the first six points of the game, including a three-point play by Ann Curoe. Turnovers hurt Pasquerilla East early, as it was unable to get a shot off until three minutes had elapsed in the first quarter.

Kathleen McDavid got P.E. on the board with a free throw, and her teammates followed with a run of six points to take a 7-4 lead. Another Curoe basket gave the lead back to B-P, and free throw by Caroline Burke closed out the first-quarter scoring with B-P leading 8-7.

Lauren Romeo started the second-quarter scoring for P.E., tying the game at nine. The teams traded baskets throughout the second and third quarters, with Burke and Cynthia Guicken hitting for Breen-Phillips and Coleen Donnelly leading the way for Pasquerilla East, which held a 30-28 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

A basket off a rebound by Kellie Duane provided the first two, but five straight points by P.E. extended its lead to 36-30. Donnelly's two free throws for B-P, but Donnelly's eight points and four assists won it again with time running out.

But B-P was not finished.

Guicken's basket and a job to it by Curoe brought B-P within two, 30-28, with 1:45 to play. P.E. had the ball and the lead, and took a quick shot which was off the rim.

Curoe grabbed the rebound for B-P, and was later fouled at the other end. Under pressure, Curoe sank both free-throw attempts to keep the game at 32-30, and B-P, with only six seconds left.

Flesty of action but no scores clinched the championship, and the teams took a 30-30 score into the three-minute overtime.
