ISSOG film promoted by actor today

By KAREN WEBB Assistant News Editor

Gearing up for the International Summer Special Olympic Games (ISSOG) Jim Troesh, alias "Scotty" on NBC's "Highway to Heaven," will speak at a reception today on campus introducing a film he is currently producing for the ISSOG volunteer orientation program.

Troesh, a quadraplegic, will address a group of more than 200 invited ISSOG staff members and volunteers and media personnel at the Center for Continuing Education today at 5.

According to Pat Foster, ISSOG marketing and public relations assistant, Troesh will be addressing the ISSOG Board of Directors, chairmen and members of steering committees which correspond to the six organizational divisions, and other active members and volunteers.

The volunteer orientation program for the summer games begins April 25 and will feature Troesh's movie, currently being filmed in the WNDU parking lot, Foster said.

Foster said today's reception, "It will be a sharing of good feelings. It’s one more step toward the games ... It should be quite a good feelings. It’s one more step toward the games ... It should be quite a good feelings."

The pre-orientation reception precedes a Logan Center meeting at which the names of the five athletes from the St. Joseph County area participating in the Olympics program will be announced.

Arrest of espionage suspect triggers wide security probe

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The arrest of a second Marine suspected of espionage while working as an embassy guard in Moscow has triggered a wide-ranging security probe at the embassy, the State Department announced Wednesday.

"We are treating this as a very serious breach of our security," said spokesman Charles Redman, referring to the arrest of Cpl. Arnold Bracy, 25, a former guard at the American embassy in Moscow and Vienna, where he has worked together in Moscow and Vienna.

"I urge the administration to use the coming months to move away from its failed policy of military victory as quickly as possible, and to develop the sort of bipartisan diplomatic initiative that is worthy of the United States and our proper role in the hemisphere," Kennedy said.

The FBI, which is treating this as a very serious breach of our security, also will be looking at every aspect of security at our embassy in Moscow, where he has worked together in Moscow and Vienna.

The corps said the two men worked together in Moscow from July 1965 to March 1966. Lonetree has been accused of passing to the Russians the names and photographs of American intelligence agents attached to the Moscow embassy's staff. He also has been accused of providing the Soviets with descriptions of floor plans and office assignments for the embassies in Moscow and Vienna, where he also worked as a guard.

Redman said the State Department had launched a "worst-case damage assessment so that every aspect of security at our embassy in Moscow will be investigated as a result of these two cases."

"We have no reason to believe that this is a worldwide problem," Redman added. "We have 1,400 Marines stationed at 124 ports throughout the world" and "this is the first incident of this type in our 40-year relationship with the Soviet Union," he added.

The corps said Bracy has been arrested because of evidence uncovered in the continuing probe of Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, 35, a former guard arrested in December on spying charges.

Support of contras declining in Senate

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Senate Democrats, after failing a third time to choke off a Republican-led filibuster, abandoned on Wednesday their drive to force President Reagan to fully account for all assistance flowing to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The Senate vote of 54-46 in favor of cutting off the filibuster was six votes short of the total needed to end debate. However, it provided evidence that there may be a Senate majority ready to reject new aid installments.

"The vote bodes well for halting Contra aid next fall," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the deputy Democratic leader.

"The 54 majority to stop the filibuster clearly reflects the erosion of support for the Contras," Cranston said. "It shows the growing concern over the cover-up of what happened to the money for the Contras, money that has either vanished or gone into illegal channels." "I urge the Contras, money that has either vanished or gone into illegal channels."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., was more cautious.

He had said earlier in the week he wanted to show that a "constitutional majority" of at least 51 votes could be rallied against Contra aid.

But Byrd told reporters on Wednesday that reaching that level now does not automatically mean the Senate will defeat Reagan's request for an additional $165 million for the Contras when it reaches the Senate floor this fall.

"The $165 million will have a hard time," Byrd said. "But events between now and then could affect votes - including mine."

He cited possible new disclosures or conclusions from the congressional investigations of the Iran-Contra affair as well as unexpected events in Central America.

At the same time, Byrd renewed appeals for the Reagan administration to "get behind" the peace proposals of last Costa Rican President Oscar Arias and to shift emphasis away from current policies which he said placed excessive reliance on military force.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Wednesday's vote made clear that halting the Contras is on the wall that the current installment of U.S. military aid last installment."

"But we urge the administration to use the coming months to move away from its failed policy of military victory as quickly as possible, and to develop the sort of bipartisan diplomatic initiative that is worthy of the United States and our proper role in the hemisphere," Kennedy said.

The filibuster by Contra-aid opponents prevented the Senate from voting to freeze a $40 million aid installment, originally approved two years ago, to permit time for a full accounting of all money private as well as public, which has reached the Contras.

University honors Joyce with chair

By SEAN HICKEN Senior Staff Reporter

University President Father Theodore Hesburgh recently announced the creation of a new chair at the University in honor of Executive Vice President Father Edmund Joyce.

The chair will be occupied by Brazilian social anthropologist Roberto Augusto DaMatta, beginning in the 1987-88 academic year.

"I'm very, very pleased," said Joyce. "I never expected or anticipated this honor. It is particularly gratifying that it happened my final year after 35 years as executive vice president." "I have no reason to believe that this is a worldwide problem," Redman added. "We have 1,400 Marines stationed at 124 ports throughout the world" and "this is the first incident of this type in our 40-year relationship with the Soviet Union," he added.

"We have 1,400 Marines stationed at 124 ports throughout the world" and "this is the first incident of this type in our 40-year relationship with the Soviet Union," he added.

The chair was made possible by a donor who desires anonymity, according to Hesburgh.

Robert Antoni, a professor in social anthropology at the University of Wisconsin, will succeed Joyce.

Since 1970, DaMatta has been a professor in social anthropology of the Museu Nacional Universidade Federal in Rio de Janeiro. He received his masters and doctoral degrees from Harvard University in 1967 and 1971. His primary field is social anthropology, particularly in cultural expressions of behavior in games and secular rituals.
Drug tests: An infringement on rights of players, workers

Imagine the dilemma. As time is running out, the university’s star point guard is dribbling down the court. The score is tied. His basket would win the game for his team. He glances at the clock. He glances to the left and sees his coach. He glances to the right and sees the NCAA drug marshall. Suddenly, sinking the basket and winning the game does not seem as good as of a day in the future. Winning team’s players must face the little bottles. In this year’s NCAA basketball tournament, association officials have instituted a drug testing program which has caused perhaps the highest degree of personal embarrassment and the greatest amount of personal infringement on a citizen’s rights that has of yet occurred in such a program.

After each game, the winning team has about 10 minutes or so to celebrate and have their post-game talk. Then, as the players hit the showers, the NCAA “marshalls” begin to come into the lockerroom.

Each of the eight marshalls is assigned to a player- the five starters, the two substitutes with the most playing time, and a randomly-chosen player as a backup. As the players come out of the showers, the marshalls check their clipboards and have the staff point out which player is which. Even if they dress, uncomfortable players must endure the glances of marshalls from across the room.

The staff and the other players board the bus and return to the motel. The chosen eight are taken next for “testing”.

College tests are never easy and some players have found drug tests to be no exception. Dehydration sometimes leads to an embarrassing situation which no person should ever have to face. The players are “detained” until they give a sample. Of course, the marshalls provide distilled water and apple juice to hurry things along.

But some players still have ended up staying at the test site for hours into the morning. There also has been controversy about the penalties involved. Currently, a player who tests positive is excluded from further playoff competition, but there is no penalty for the team as a whole. They don’t have to forfeit the game. The NCAA may institute team sanctions next year.

Besides just having their pride hurt, some players may be hurting themselves physically. Because coaches are unaware of the test’s sensitivity, some coaches have forbidden players who have the flu from taking even aspirin for fear that it might cause a positive drug test reading. But in most cases, the main effect of the testing of basketball players has been public embarrassment. While no person should have to put up with this humiliation and violation of his rights, the “side-effects” of drug testing for basketball players are just short-term.

Other people, about whom we rarely hear, may be facing long-term problems because of drug testing. Government agencies and private corporations have begun to give their employees drug tests. In many cases the results of a positive test is dismissal from work. Despite the fact that the accuracy of these tests is uncertain at times, many companies use the results as a license to put a deterrent in somebody’s career path.

These people could also complain that their rights are being violated, but, in a practical sense, there is much more involved here than just a matter of principle. It is a matter of livelihood.

The NCAA testing program may have focused national attention on drug-testing, but the college basketball player who suffers embarrassment doesn’t have nearly as much to lose as the corporation employee who doesn’t use drugs but tests positive. It’s scary to think that an employee who is asked to fill a little bottle might soon be filling a cardboard box with the things he emptied from his desk.

Senate seeks access to bank records

Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Senate attorneys sought a court order Wednesday to force former Maj. Gen. Richard Secord to give them access to records of foreign bank accounts that investigators believe he controlled as part of the Iran-Contra connection.

In a U.S. District Court filing, the Senate said Secord should be held in contempt if he refuses to comply with a valid court order. The Senate authorized the step in a vote last week.

Second has cited his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination in refusing to comply with a request from the Senate investigating committee that he sign an order directing foreign banks to make available the information.

Investigators, including the presidially appointed Tower commission, say the former Air Force officer helped organize shipments of weapons to Iran and the Nicaraguan rebels, making use of Swiss bank accounts under his control.

Two members of the House committee, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was no evidence to dispute President Reagan's statement that he did not know funds were apparently being diverted from Iran arms sales to the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The two sessions took place amid unusual concern over secrecy.

Hundreds remember bishop's death

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador - Hundreds of college students shoved past police at the U.S. embassy on Tuesday and stood chanting "Yankee invader!" "Yankee go home!" - on embassy walls, burned a rag-and-paper effigy of Uncle Sam on the sidewalk and marched away, shouting other anti-U.S. slogans.

Romero was killed March 24, 1980, while saying Mass at a small hospital chapel in the capital. A lone gunman fired a single low-caliber bullet from a rifle into the Roman Catholic prelate's heart and fled.

No one was ever arrested.

The U.S. embassy is considered the symbol of U.S. support for the Salvadoran government, which has not solved the case or halted the civil war.

The students also charge that the government still is corrupt amid unusual concern about secrecy.

Justice's decision hailed as victory for women's rights

Associated Press
WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court, upholding an affirmative action plan for female workers, ruled Wednesday employers may give special preferences in hiring and promoting women to create a more balanced workforce.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices said a 1964 civil rights law banning on-the-job discrimination allows such preferential treatment. Also, employers may adopt affirmative action plans without admitting past discrimination against women.

The decision was hailed by some as a momentous victory for women's rights.

"It vindicates our historic position that sex discrimination, like race discrimination, can be remedied by the use of affirmative action measures," said Judith Lichtman, executive director of the Women's Legal Defense Fund.

As it has in a series of affirmative action cases, the court rejected the Reagan administration's position. Justice Department lawyers had argued that individual rights should not be sacrificed in the interest of "casual social engineering."

The court rejected an appeal by Paul Johnson, who was denied promotion to road dispatcher by the Santa Clara County Transportation Agency in California.

The job went to Diane Joyce, who Johnson said was less qualified than himself.

The court said Johnson, who scored two points higher than Joyce on a test, may have been illegally more qualified for the job. But the justices emphasized their ruling does not mean unqualified people will be hired or promoted.

"Sex is but one of several factors that may be taken into account in evaluating qualified applicants for a position," Justice William Brennan wrote for the court.

The court's dissenters said ruling perverts the 1964 law "into a powerful engine of racism and sexism."

Soviet media return Stalin to a place in Russian history

Associated Press

MOSCOW—From a poet’s lament to articles on World War II, the Soviet press is now trying to deal with the legacy of dictator Josef Stalin.

Stalin, who ruled the Soviet Union from 1924 until his death in 1953, was exalted as a genius during his lifetime. He became a virtual non-person in the state-controlled Soviet press after Nikita Khrushchev denounced Stalin’s “cult of personality” in 1956.

Since then, official mention of the former leader has been largely limited to his role as a generalissimo in World War II. Stalin has been lauded as the architect of the Red Army’s victory over Nazi Germany.

In past weeks, however, state-run media have printed articles questioning Stalin’s political and military judgment and verse recalling that during his rule millions of people vanished into labor camps.

The latest publications are clearly linked to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev’s campaign for openness that has prompted wider discussion of some social issues since he came to power in March 1985. But Stalin’s legacy is a more controversial subject than most since more than three decades after his death his name still evokes strong and conflicting emotions among his countrymen.

Falwell vows ‘no funeral for PTL’

Associated Press

PONT MILL, S.C. —The Rev. Jerry Falwell said Wednesday it would be impossible for the Rev. Jim Bakker to return to his scandal-wrecked evangelical empire anytime soon, while boosting his own reputation as a fundamentalist Baptist minister.

“Jim Bakker to return to his scandal-wrecked evangelical empire anytime soon, while boosting his own reputation as a fundamentalist Baptist minister.”

Falwell, who will preside here today at the first meeting of the new PTL board he formed since succeeding Bakker as chairman last week, told a civic club luncheon Wednesday in Cocoa Beach, Fla., that he had heard rumors Bakker wants to return.

“I hear rumors that he wants to return soon,” said Falwell, a fundamentalist Baptist minister who founded the Moral Majority. He told the Space Coast Tiger Bay Club that if that happened, however, “it would make our job impossible.”

He added he didn’t know how he and the new board could “deal with the credibility issue” if Bakker were to return right away.

“I’m not saying he could never return,” he said. “That’s up to God, not Jerry Falwell.”

He also said he had no desire to remain in the board of PTL beyond the time needed for “fence-mending.”

Three chained women discovered in basement

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Three nude women were found chained to a sewer pipe Wednesday in the basement of a rowhouse and police said they found body parts elsewhere in the house that may represent two bodies.

A fourth woman escaped from the house during the night and summoned police, who said the woman, aged 18 to 24, may have been chained for up to three months.

Body parts were found in the refrigerator, in the oven and in a stereo in the kitchen, police said. Homicide Sgt. Robert Snyder said officers also searched for a possible third body.

Neighbors said they had complained to police about noise and a smell of burning flesh, but police said they had no records of such complaints.

Gary Heidnik, 43, who lived in the rowhouse for about two years, was arrested and charged with rape, kidnapping and aggravated assault. No homicide charges were filed.

One of the women held in the basement said she believed two people died. "The investigation is just commencing. There are many aspects about which we do not know enough," she said.

A woman who lived in the basement, Lisa Thomas, 19, said she lost 40 to 50 pounds through the ordeal.

"I tried digging holes on the ceiling to hang us, for punishment," she said. Handcuffs were placed through loops that would suspend the women above the ground, Thomas said.

Thomas also told of sexual abuse and beatings. She said one woman fell, injured herself and later died. She said their captor carried the body away and "I think he burned it."

Expert supports wider use of chemotherapy

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Wider use of chemotherapy could save the lives each year of an additional 11,000 victims of colon and rectal cancer, the nation's second largest cancer killer, a federal cancer expert says.

Dr. Michael Friedman said information has emerged within the last year that settles the question of whether drug treatment is worthwhile after this cancer is surgically removed.

"Every operable patient with colon-rectal cancer should be considered for chem- therapy," he said.

President Reagan was operated on for colon cancer almost two years ago and did not receive chemotherapy.

"This information has taken a long time to evolve," Friedman said. "Were such a patient (as Reagan) ... present today, I think he should be considered for chemotherapy."

Friedman is chief of the Clinical Investigations Branch of the National Cancer Insti- tute. He made his recom- mendation at a meeting of the American Cancer Society that concluded Wednesday.

U.S. refuses trade deal for release of hostages

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - The wife of American hostage Alann Steen, whose captors say he is ill and may die soon, pleaded Wednesday for his release.

There was no word of a Frenchman whose captors withdrew a threat of death, then said they might kill him after all.

In the plea for her 47-year-old husband, Virginia Rose Steen said kidnappers "should release people that are sick so the person can get the best medical treatment possible. . . . I hope he would be released very soon."

Steen is held by an organization calling itself Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which said Monday he was very ill and "may die in 10 days."

It offered to trade him for 100 Arab prisoners held in Israel and demanding the United States intercede with Israel. The U.S. and Israeli governments refused the deal.

Another group, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, has renewed its threat to kill Jean-Louis Normandin, a 35-year-old French television lighting engineer kidnapped March 8, 1986.

"The organization announces that the execution of the spy, Normandin, was not postponed and was not canceled," the organization said in a statement issued Tuesday. The group is believed to consist of Shiite extremists loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

On Monday the kidnappers released a videotape in which Normandin said his abductors had decided to spare his life. They previously threatened to kill him Tuesday.

Al-Ittihad, a newspaper in the Persian Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi, quoted "well-informed diplomatic sources" as saying Syrian troops deployed in west Beirut had located Steen and the three other men kidnapped with him in January.
Injustices eliminated by people's awareness

By Mary Ann White

The coup came at a time when, among other problems, the poverty level in the Philippines was nearly 60 percent. While thousands suffered from hunger and deprivation, Ferdinand Marcos successfully silenced his opposition for almost 16 years as his wife Imelda collected her 5,000 pairs of shoes.

As part of Philippine Awareness Week, the video entitled "The February Revolution" gave an up-close perspective on the revolution. The video, filmed with hand-held cameras, depicted many scenes of the human barricades that formed to protect the rebels inside the Marcos palace. Because of these barricades, young people were unable to penetrate the crowds.

For me, these human barricades immediately conjured up images of massive chaos, camouflaged soldiers and widespread gunfire. But this revolution was different. It was not involved with Levis, Nikes, and even "alligator" shirts. In the background of the barricades were parks, shopping plazas, a Coca-Cola billboard, just like any American city.

So what relevance does this have for us? There haven't been any tanks moving across U.S. soil. We're not staring down our elections. Our elections are legitimate. There are no serious injustices on our college campuses today, or of this revolution. It is true, the "injustices" that occur on our own campuses are far from the massive human rights violations in the Philippines and other parts of the world; for this, we are grateful. But the lesson learned from the Philippines is one of great importance, for when we look deeply into this revolution, we see ordinary people who had enough courage in defending their opinions to stand up to a wall of tanks and armed soldiers.

These middle class "rebels" were not all that different from each of us. Not only were their appearance and sentiments similar, but most likely, they held many of the same sentiments that we do. They were probably comfortable in their middle-class lifestyles. But by standing in solidarity with the oppressed of their nation, they put their reputations, and more importantly, their lives in question.

Here at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame, we are free to speak out on any issue whether it is the suspension of the Scholastic or disdain of the Dancin' Dancehurt. We do not lay down our lives when voicing our opinions, however, too often we do not utilize this opportunity in its fullest capacity.

Recently, with the furor over the decision to convert Howard Hall into a women's dorm, many students did voice their discontent. We can all understand the University's need for more women's dorms; however, most agree that the administration's treatment of the situation was far from appropriate. The University told Howard residents of its decision only two weeks before Christmas. Students that planned to stay abroad this semester were given only two weeks to search for housing for next year. Other residents must find space in one of the other dorms or off-campus. Still, the number of students who seriously questioned the administration's small in comparison to those who found a month's supply of jokes in the situation. Making light of a situation is one way of coping with it, but does it remove from the reality of paying exorbitant tuitions. Still, few students voice their discontent over the system. The power in the Philippines came from the voice of the people who came out by the hundreds of thousands in opposition. Imagine the power if, across the nation, students stood together to oppose the government's unjust system of financial aid that has failed to compensate for the skyrocketing costs of a college education.

The Philippines questioned their authority in a radical, but non-violent, fashion. We must become more aware of the subtle injustices that occur around these campuses and start taking them more seriously. Perhaps then, more people will begin questioning those that are responsible for these injustices just as the "rebels" did last year in the Philippines.

Hickey is responsive to students' requests

Dear Editor:

On the Thursday before break, I met with William Hickey, director of University Food Service, to discuss proposals regarding weekend guest meal passes, the alleviation of the mass influx of students to North Dining Hall during finals, and extended breakfast times among other things. I also brought him suggestions on the renovation of North Dining Hall which is slated to take place the next two summers.

I want to take this opportunity to publicly thank Hickey for his receptiveness, sincerity concern and his quick action on the implementation of several of the proposals. For instance, before I even finished my arguments for weekend guest meal passes, Hickey was on the phone to his secretary asking her to call the printer and have 500 "Weekender Meal Passes" found by a 16-minute videotape retrospective on Father Hesburgh's career narrated by Walter Cronkite, will start at 8 p.m. (EST) and is expected to last about one hour.

Recenty, William Hickey and also Debra Lemke, manager of North Dining Hall, presented some suggestions such as installing heater/cool air blowers in the door ways, and he assured me he would talk to the architect about them. I can assure you that North Dining Hall is going to be a much better place.

Thank you William Hickey and also Debra Lemke, manager of North Dining Hall, for considering on many of the suggested improvements.

We really appreciate it.

Students have chance to view Hesburgh finale

Dear Editor,

The mailing by the St. Joseph Valley Notre Dame Club of invitations to all local alumni to attend a Century Center downlinking of Father Hesburgh's valedictory telecast May 9 is being greeted with much excitement by many in calls to University Relations Office, inquiring about campus downlink sites.

There will be two campus sites where faculty, students and staff are invited to see a program "A Notre Dame Moment" without charge. As part of "Senior Week," the seniors will be supporting a downlink of the satellite-delivered telecast in the ACC, and all students are invited. Faculty and staff and their spouses are invited to a downlink in the Center for Continuing Education.

The program, which will also include a 16-minute videotape retrospective on Father Hesburgh's career narrated by Walter Cronkite, will start at 8 p.m. (EST) and is expected to last about one hour.

Nye: coaching crew and LaFortune to success

Richard Westenberg

Notre Dame is a place filled with people of unique background, experiences and interests. One such person is Mr. Chris Nye, who has the distinction of being the first crew coach of the crew team and the program manager for the AFROTC detachment at Notre Dame.

In 1977, he enrolled at Notre Dame and has been involved in the university selected the firm to do the renovation. Nye has served as the program manager (chief architect) for this project and been involved in all stages of its completion from the design of the building's work down to the choice of colors and furniture in the building.

A renovation, according to Nye, is always more difficult than new construction, because it is hard to anticipate what will be found once work has begun. For example, a discrepancy between the reported depth of the sewer main and what was actually found made it necessary to completely change the building's plumbing system within the course of four days.

In addition, Nye said that the construction of the university's expenditure of 4.6 million dollars to refurbish and add to LaFortune because of the trouble in recent years regarding student use of the building.

As mentioned previously, Nye enjoys a dual relationship with the University. For the past eight years, he has been associated with his firm to Notre Dame and has been involved with much of the building renovation done on campus, including the work done in Breen-Phipps, Pangborn, Sorin, and Washington Halls, to name a few.

In June of 1983, work began on the renovation and addition to LaFortune Student Center. Nye's firm of Cole Associates had done a previous renovation job in LaFortune, and the university selected the firm to do the work resulting in the center's present changes and improvements. Nye has served as the program manager (chief architect) for this project and has been involved in all stages of its completion from the design of the work down to the choice of colors and furniture in the building.

For the past eight years, he has been associated with his firm to Notre Dame and has been involved with much of the building renovation done on campus, including the work done in Breen-Phipps, Pangborn, Sorin, and Washington Halls, to name a few.

In June of 1983, work began on the renovation and addition to LaFortune Student Center. Nye's firm of Cole Associates had done a previous renovation job in LaFortune, and the University selected the firm to do the work resulting in the center's present changes and improvements. Nye has served as the program manager (chief architect) for this project and has been involved in all stages of its completion from the design of the work down to the choice of colors and furniture in the building.

Negotiations in progress for umpires

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major league baseball teams were reportedly lining up substitute umpires should the regulars strike at the beginning of the season. "What I did was alert the clubs that negotiations are in progress, they're not yet resolved and, with the season coming up, they had to find out who is available and who isn't," American League President Bobby Brown was reported to say in today's editions of The New York Times.

A national League spokesman said the league had "not sent a bulletin" to the clubs and that he did not have any more information. The league's May 1 deadline for naming umpires has passed.

The major league umpires contract has expired and negotiations have made little progress thus far. The umpires have not threatened a walkout.
Clemens continues hold out

Associated Press

SPRING, Texas - Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens said Wednesday he remained resolute in his 19-day contract holdout and accused Red Sox management of trying to use him as an example for the rest of the league.

"I want them to recognize what I did on the field last year and they are not doing that," Clemens said during a news conference at his agents' office.

"I knew that they were going to use me as the example for the rest of the league. I knew that," he said.

Clemens has since lowered his demands to $900,000 for one year but the Red Sox have offered him a $500,000 base salary and $300,000 in incentive clauses.

Akers: Texas charges 'minor'

Associated Press

DALLAS - Former University of Texas football coach Fred Akers has described allegations by the NCAA committee on Infractions against the Longhorns program as minor.

Akers moved to Purdue as head coach last December after being fired following his one year as Texas' coach. He said he still believes Texas always has conducted its football program properly.

"I tend to agree with DeLoss Dodds (UT athletic director) that all of these are minor allegations," Akers said. "These are an accumulation of small things over a long period that could happen almost anywhere you have a major program."

He said violations by the school Monday in a report included cash loans to players never exceeding more than $200 at a time, ticket scalping, free legal and dental services, free meals and excessive recruiting contacts.

Akers said eight former and present members of the athletic department, including himself, have been notified by the NCAA of potential violations.

"The 62 violations released by the school Monday in a report included cash loans to players never exceeding more than $200 at a time, ticket scalping, free legal and dental services, free meals and excessive recruiting contacts."

Akers said the NCAA committee on Infractions had found no serious violations.

"We're not doing anything that is major," Akers said. "The only thing that's being brought out is the by-products of what the Red Sox have done with him during the holdout."

The Red Sox Monday night quoted Clemens in saying "I'm going in with the attitude I want to win it all, not just be here," and said senior forward Armon Gilliam. "It's a heck of an accomplishment to be here. We knew we had the potential to be here. We just didn't know if we'd reach that potential."

"The chemistry was there," Gilliam added. "The chemistry was there."

No. 1-seeded UNLV arrives in New Orleans hoping to take it all

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Members of the No. 1-ranked Nevada Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels flew to New Orleans Wednesday for an afternoon practice, a night on the town and Saturday's meeting with Indiana in the semifinals of the Final Four.

"For you Runnin' Rebels on board, I want you to give Bobby Knight something to whine about," the captain of the American Airlines flight carrying the Rebels said as the plane landed in Dallas for a changeover.

"The Rebels, 37-1, meet the third-ranked Hoosiers, 28-4, in the second game of Saturday's semifinals.

"The chemistry was there," Gilliam added. "The chemistry was there."

"I don't know how to react at this point, but I'll probably begin to feel it when we get into the flow of things," Baisnigh said. He predicted Indiana would be "very tough," adding "we're going to have to be at the top of our game to beat them."

Coach Jerry Tarkanian, who preceded the team to New Orleans Tuesday night told boosters earlier in the day he "never thought about the Final Four until last week. Then it dawned on me, we're only two games away."

Tarkanian last took a team to the Final Four in Atlanta 10 years ago, where it lost in the semifinals to North Carolina 84-83.

"This has been a special team from day one," Tarkanian told the boosters.

"I told them they could stay out until 1 a.m. but they're negotiating for 2," Tarkanian laughed, "and they're such a great bunch of kids I'll probably give in."

Bookies support Rebels - as fans

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. - Las Vegas bookmakers have turned cheerleaders with their hometown team in the NCAA final Four, despite the possible loss of millions of dollars in bets on the championship game.

Bookmakers are unabashedly rooting for the Nevada-Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels, seemingly glad to swallow the lost bets in the name of community pride. UNLV plays Indiana University on Saturday.

"It would do more for the town for them to win than for us to take a few lousy bets on the game," said Keith Glantz, sports book manager at the Palace Station.

Nevada gaming regulations forbid betting on amateur teams located within the state, meaning UNLV's advancement to the Final Four will cost sports books bets on one of Saturday's two games and possibly the championship game itself.

That doesn't seem to bother most bookmakers, who say the lost bets will be more than made up for by increased national attention for the city. "I'm tickled pink we've got a team that well represents our community," said Mel Exber, owner of the Las Vegas Club. "I've talked to a lot of custom­ers around here. Nobody's complaining."

Betting on the NCAA championship game generally ranks in the top five major betting events of the year, trailing the World Series and Super Bowl in betting volume among continuing events.

But bookmakers say the mere fact a lot of money is bet on a game doesn't necessarily mean they will win much money.

"A lot of people think it's going to be extremely costly to sports books but I don't think so," said Sonny Reizner, who runs the Castaways sports book. "First of all, it's only one ball­game. And you can win or lose the game."

Reizner said bookmakers operate on a 4.5 percent profit margin if they pick the game correctly and adjust bets ac­cordingly. If they don't, they can lose money on a game regardless of how much money is bet.

"We're not necessarily going to lose any revenue," agreed Glantz. "And, if they allowed betting on UNLV we could take a bath because the people in this town will bet the Rebels no matter what the point spread is."

Glantz said most bookmakers he has talked with around the city are rooting for UNLV. He said he was trying to get tickets for himself to go to the games in New Orleans. "The town would rather see them win than take a bet on them," said Glantz. "It's our team. We don't have a pro team here and the town goes crazy over the Rebels."

The Hoosier fans hold rally in Bloomington square

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Indiana University basketball fans rallied to roast their disapproval Wednesday of an NCAA rule that effectively banned from the radio the playing of two songs celebrating the Hoosier basketball team.

"And any song done by any station anywhere should be able to compliment a team going to the Final Four," disc jockey Gary Harper told a lunchtime crowd of about 250 at Monument Circle in downtown Indianapolis.

Harper's station, WEAG-FM, and two other Indiana stations pulled the songs "Bobby Knight Bop" and "Stevie, Shoot A Three-Pointer" from the air at the request of IU officials Tuesday.

Applications are now being accepted for the following positions at Theodore's until Friday, April 3rd:

- General Manager
- Programming Director
- Promotions Director
- Reservations Manager
- Catering Manager

The songs, written by staff members of the stations, mention the names of several members of the Indiana basketball team that will compete in the Final Four this weekend in New Orleans.

IU sports promotion director Chuck Crabbs said the university asked that the songs be withdrawn because an NCAA rule forbids the use of a player's name in a commercial venture. Any player so named could be ruled ineligible for Final Four competition, Crabbs said.

The issue is not whether (a player) gets any benefit but whether his name is being used," Rick Evrard, director of NCAA legislative services, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday. "A student athlete cannot use their name, their picture, or their reputation to promote a commercial product."

INDIANAPOLIS - Indiana University fans rallied to roast their disapproval Wednesday of an NCAA rule that effectively banned from the radio the playing of two songs celebrating the Hoosier basketball team.

The issue of commercial exploitation, however, is a tougher issue for Hesburgh. He says that in the case of a private school, where students (in 1964) pay 65 percent of the cost of running the school, "any contribution looks good, even an athletic one."

But before you can even ask about the danger of making athletics a growing revenue-generator for the school, Hesburgh points out that Notre Dame has declined to participate in a bowl game since 1925 despite the financial rewards because of the time that is taken away from the athletes' studies.

Of course this position changed in 1970 when Notre Dame went to the Cotton Bowl, but for 45 years this philosophy held. Thus Hesburgh concludes his article again with the principle of athletics and education. If the focus is kept on four things—the student, the integrity of the institution, football as just a game and education through athletics, then this principle can be followed, he says.

"What about today? Money is definitely the issue in college athletics, and Notre Dame has changed its position on bowl games.

But aside from this and a few other anachronisms, Hesburgh gave his opinion a few weeks ago on his 65-year-old testament to college athletics.

"I would still write the same thing today," he said.
Baltimore Orioles manager Cal Ripken Sr. (right) made the unkindest cut of all yesterday, sending his son Billy to the club's minor league team in Rochester.

Ripken sends son Billy to minors

Associated Press

MIAMI—Cal Ripken Sr., the stoic manager of the Baltimore Orioles, does not let emotions interfere with his job. Just ask Billy Ripken, a son of the first-year skipper and one of 14 players sent back to the minor leagues.

"There was no father-son to it," the 22-year-old second baseman said. "He said five words to me: 'we are sending you out.'"

The manager said there was more to it than that, but insisted that the individual meetings with all 14 players do not tug at his heartstrings.

"I told Billy the same thing I've been telling kids for years," the father-manager said. "We're doing what's best for him and the team."

"Sure, it's a disappointment when you get sent down from a major league club," he said. "But then you realize that it's best that you go out and play ... put on a uniform and go to work."

Asked how he handled a similar situation as a player, the senior Ripken, a former minor league catcher said: "I was never in a big league camp, so I was never sent out. I was released."

Manager Ripken, of course, still has one son on his roster, shortstop Cal Jr.

Billy Ripken, in his first full season at second base, was promoted to the Class AA southern League last season after hitting .286 at Charlotte. He was optioned Monday to Rochester of the Class AAA International League.

Ripken said all the players sent out in Baltimore's first roster trimming of the spring Monday had handled themselves well in camp.

"When you see that," he said, "it's difficult to send them out. But, by the same token, we want them out playing. They've got to get ready for their season. It isn't the end of the world."

In addition to Billy Ripken, who is considered perhaps a year away from the major leagues, several other highly-regarded prospects were among the first cuts.

They included second baseman Pete Stanicek and third baseman Craig Worthington, who were sent to the minor league camp for reassignment, and pitcher Jeff Ballard, who was optioned to Rochester.

After the tournament, the team was offered a chance to play at Bay Hill Country Club, the course owned by PGA legend Arnold Palmer. Playing from the pro tees, all players shot an eighty or less, proving to Coach O'Sullivan that the strong performance in the tournament was far from a fluke and truly demonstrated the potential of this team.

Yesterday the team held an 18-hole meet with Lewis University at Burke Memorial and defeated the visiting linksters, 287 to 397. Medalist for the Irish was sophomore Pat Mohan, firing a 73. The other scores for the Irish were: Dick Connelly (74) Doug Giorgio (78), and team captain Chris Bona (76). Next on the agenda for the Irish is the Eastern Kentucky Invitational this weekend. This tournament will see a truly huge field as all the teams of the Big Ten and Mid-American Conferences will be in attendance as well as all the major independents in the Midwest.

In the spring, however, long and hard work is a little different from what it will be in the fall. Holtz does not plan to practice more than three times about one week during the spring workouts, and has not yet set a date for an initial scrimmage.

Hesburgh wrote article in Sports Illustrated's first year

Note: This story was originally intended for the Hesburgh special issue of The Observer, but due to space limitations, it was withheld from the issue.

Though University President Father Theodore Hesburgh usually refers all athletic matters to his partner, Executive Vice President Father Edmund Joyce, Hesburgh is still held in high regard when it comes to college athletics. Joyce is president of the Notre Dame-Michigan football sport, and just four days ago he was quoted on the issue of SMU's probe.

Hesburgh wrote article in Sports Illustrated's first year

"He has always looked up to," says Donald J. Barr, publisher of Sports Illustrated and class of '37 alumnus. "He has let athletes be a total part of the school, rather than the other way around with basketball and football dominating. His opinion is always worth seeking."

While Hesburgh has been a good source for reporters, it is not widely known that as President of Notre Dame, he once turned down a writer who attempted to write a book about athletics at Notre Dame for Sports Illustrated.

The article was entitled "The True Spirit of Notre Dame," and it appeared in the Sept. 27, 1964 issue of SI, the seventh issue that the magazine ever published. The table of contents tells the reader to turn page 16 to read about "the most famous football university in the nation," with Hesburgh explaining "how we try to do it at Notre Dame.

"I, however, to say that this, but he is not an expert on the collegiate athletic scene, rather has "listened to a number of experts" and has come up with his own ideas. He develops the theme which can best be summarized as "the athlete is first a student." In one of my favorite quotes, Hesburgh says, "If you do not mean that they should all be Phi Beta Kappas or physics majors, but neither should they be subnormal students majoring in ping-pong."
