Professor evaluates arms negotiations, summit hopes

By MICHELLE DALL

The recent arms treaty negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union could lead to a major political and psychological break-through in political relations, said Professor Robert Johansen of Notre Dame’s Institute for National Peace Studies.

"Militarily, the arms reductions are not very significant, since only about three percent of the United States and the Soviet Union’s total supply of warheads are being cut back," Johansen said.

"The reductions are politically and psychologically significant, however, because, for the first time in history, superpowers are following through on a plan to dismantle nuclear weapons. This may well be the first step to more inter-continental agreements," he said.

The current negotiations also reflect a new willingness on the part of the Soviet Union to include intrusive inspections, which would ensure that the treaty is honored. In the past, the Soviets have refused to allow on-site inspections of Russian facilities and laboratories. Johansen believes that the Soviets have recently become "tired of looking like the bad guys." He added that the Soviets have also realized that the U.S., being the more technologically advanced country, could have more to hide than they do themselves.

To date, the U.S.S.R. has made the most concessions in the arms negotiations, according to Johansen. Soviet missiles being dismantled are equipped with three nuclear warheads, while each U.S. missile typically contains one warhead. Thus, the Soviets are reducing about 90% of their warheads, while the U.S. is cutting back approximately 60%.

Johansen says he is virtually certain that the arms treaty negotiations will lead to a summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet Secretary General Gorbachev. He said that Gorbachev will probably see ARMS, page 4

Shultz, Soviets want cease-fire

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS - Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on Thursday agreed that unity can help secure a cease-fire between warring Iraq and Iran, but said nothing about a U.S.-proposed arms embargo against Iran.

President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will begin an attempt to eliminate the superpowers' short-range and medium-range nuclear missiles.

Both Shultz and Shevardnadze called their discussion on the Iran-Iraq war constructive and stressed the importance of unity on a United Nations Security Council peace plan.

We have agreement in principle that we should work to preserve unity among the permanent members of the Security Council," Shevardnadze told reporters as he left the U.S. mission to the United Nations.

The council's resolution demands that Iran and Iraq observe a cease-fire and withdraw to internationally recognized boundaries as the first step toward peace.

"Foreign Minister Shevardnadze and I have had a very constructive, worthwhile discussion of the Iran-Iraq war," Shultz said after meeting with his Soviet counterpart for more than an hour.

"We agreed on the importance of resolution 598 and its full implementation. And we both attach great importance to our evident ability to work with unity on this very important problem."

In a briefing after the Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting, State Department spokesman Charles Redman refused to say whether the divisive issue of an arms embargo would figure in the full implementation. And we both attach great importance to our evident ability to work with unity on this very important problem.

Biden has 'learned a lesson'

DES MOINES, Iowa - Democratic presidential hopeful Joe Biden professed "no bitterness, no complaints" Thursday as he began shutting down his Democratic presidential campaign.

"I'm a big boy," Biden said. "Every other time in my life when I've faced something where I've lost, I have learned a lesson from it."

Biden withdrew from the race Wednesday following disclosures that he had plagiarized parts of his campaign speeches and misrepresented his academic record.

Biden on Thursday dismissed suggestions that a rival candidate leaked the disclosures.

"Nobody did this to Joe Biden," he said. "There had to be something there for the two of us to stick together."

"I feel badly for those people in there," Biden said after a 20-minute closed-door meeting with campaign staffers and backers. "My political future is secure. I'll be back."

Accompanied by his wife, Jill, and sister, Valerie, Biden flew to Iowa to give backers a pep talk on the day after he withdrew from the Democratic presidential field. He was scheduled to fly to New Hampshire for a similar meeting with supporters there.

He described his withdrawal speech as "relatively hard to do" and acknowledged having second thoughts.

"I've never quit at anything, I'm not very good at that," Biden said. "I fought it right up to walking into that room. Halfway through I think some people might say 'And I'm going to continue to fight.'"

"And I must admit to you that was there," Biden said. "At an impromptu news conference after the meeting with Iowa workers and supporters, I took full responsibility for the missteps which doomed his campaign."

Whoever's soaping up Stonehenge is all wet

The Observer Friday, September 25, 1987

Mark McLaughlin
Projects Manager

The autumn equinox quietly passed us by a couple of days ago. The only people interested in this obscure event are astronomers and Druids. The date was September 22.

Stonehenge, of course, is another story. Astronomers and Druids like it, but so does everyone else. Students seem to be very interested in the fountain, judging from the numbers who use it for filler on a sunbathing platform or a quick shower.

Will someone please explain why soap keeps appearing in the fountain?

As a Druid (yes, I'll admit it), I have divine access to the plans for Notre Dame's version of Stonehenge. There is a filtering system underground. There is a holding tank somewhere underneath the grass of the Fieldhouse Mall. Nowhere in the plans, however, is a soap insertion valve.

So where is the soap coming from?

Could there be soap mines or soap trees or soap bugs or something like that eating its way into the pipes? I don't know if I have grown, made, or captured so I am admittedly reaching a little bit. But no, those water pipes are not made of paper. They are metal and I don't know of any living creature that can chomp through 1/4-inch copper.

Perhaps it's not really soap. Maybe the pipeline between North and South Dining Hall through which leftover food is pumped was accidentally connected up with the fountain. Think about it - our stomachs can handle hydrochloric acid, but they have unfavorable reactions to dining hall food. What chance does granite have? I don't think those limestone pillars and granite flooring could stand up to whatever is in leftover dining hall food.

And perhaps there's no connection between the continual soap in the fountain and the sudden green color that appeared in the reflecting pool of the Hesburgh Library. I can't think of any reason the two should be connected except that I can't explain either one.

Denting the soap is going on in the Radiation Lab! I remember about two years ago some construction made me curious, and a huge hole on the north side of the building, and then after a couple of months went by they filled it all back up. Maybe they were making some modifications in the steam tunnel pipes. Maybe there's a Top Secret Fusion Reactor or some of those frozen alien bodies in the building and the government is pumping all the shitage into the campus monuments and lakes. That would explain why all those dead fish appear in St. Mary's Lake every spring, too.

I see in the Personal ads that the New York Mets are being called "Pond Scum" by what I presume are unintelligent or perhaps jealous Cardinal fans. Perhaps the soap is really the Mets resting up between three-game series at Pittsburgh and Montreal. I don't know why they'd choose to stay here, though, what with the unfavorable press and all.

Actually, though, I bet it's one of those student pranks. You know, take two bottles of concentrated Tide, pour them in the fountain, ha ha. "Gee, Beaver, maybe it'll make a three foot high foam mountain like what happened to Cindy on the Brady Bunch once. He he!" Give me a break. Once is funny. Twice is pushing it. Four times! And every time it happens, someone has to go turn off the fountain and those poor achlees have to scrub the whole damn thing down and attempt to get all the soap out.

And if it keeps happening, we all know that one day it will be turned off for good. Many of us know what Stonehenge is like without water. Maintenance turns off the interior lights and turns on those white fluorescent things that were borrowed from the Washington Monument. Stonehenge will look like a landing spot for extraterrestrials. Perhaps - beyond the soap mines or soap trees or soap bugs or something like that eating its way into the pipes. I don't know if I have grown, made, or captured so I am admittingly reaching a little bit. But no, those water pipes are not made of paper. They are metal and I don't know of any living creature that can chomp through 1/4-inch copper.

Mention Notre Dame football to nearly any gridiron-crazy alumnus and your typical response will be something like this: "Ah, the Fighting Irish. Think of the tradition.

The Knute Rockne years

PETE SKIKO

Only Rockne's name could overshadow those of George Gipp and the Four Horsemen during the years 1918-1920. He coached five teams to undefeated seasons and won Notre Dame's first bowl game, the 1924 Rose Bowl, 19-10 over Stanford.

Many have heard of the locker room speech Rockne gave his players, encouraging his boys to "win one for the Gipper." The story of that famous line revolves around George Gipp, the prolific running back of the Irish.

In the middle of the 1920 football season, Gipp contracted strep throat and died from complications of the disease, of which little was known early in the 20th century. Knute Rockne was at Gipp's bedside when the young running back uttered his last wish. "When things are wrong and the breaks are against you, tell them to go in there with all they've got and win just one for the Gipper."

Rockne told his squad that moving speech just before a game with Army, at Yankee Stadium in 1928. The Irish had lost two of their first three games in 1928, Rockne's worst year as a head coach. A murderous schedule faced the Irish after they needed a win to gain some momentum. The Irish lined up at the 20-yard line as time ran out.

Rockne's teams never had a losing season and in 20 games. He was Rockne's most versatile player - he punted, passed and ran with the best in the country, and is considered by many to be the greatest all-around player in college football history. (Jim Simpson)

Southall adjusts to change

Nobody has to tell Corny Southall how much things can change. He is an expert on the subject.

Notre Dame's starting free safety has made his share of adjustments, including a daily switch from his off-field personality to his on-field personality, and two position changes in the last two years.

Positioning the normally quiet Southall at free safety, where he must call out the defensive signals as the opponents line up, presents a clash in style.

"Normally, I tend to keep to myself," says the junior management major. "I like that. I'm a quiet person most of the time. I like to watch a good movie and just do anything relaxing.

"I don't like people being in my business and I don't tend to get into other people's business."

"When I go to football practice, I have to be a leader," he continues. "I have to call the signals and I have to set an example by doing things well. If I don't concentrate and work hard, no one's going to listen to any yelling or screaming."

Secondary Coach Terry Forbes says that Southall makes the change very easily. "He hasn't had a problem," says Forbes. "He was put into the role and he just goes out and does whatever he has to do to fulfill it."

But becoming a bit more vocal to fit his free safety slot this year doesn't compare to switches Southall has already had to make.

Southall was an honorable mention Adidas/Scholastic Coach prep All-America selection for his talents as a running back and defensive back. When he was recruited, most schools wanted him to play defense. Most, but not all.

"Every school that recruited me, except Notre Dame and a few others, wanted me for defensive back," says the 6-1, 186-pound Southall. "But Notre Dame said they would give me a shot at running back and we would see how it went."

That was what Southall wanted to hear. He had 60 tackles and six interceptions as a senior at Rush-Henrietta Sperry High School near Rochester, N.Y. But he also rushed for 986 yards and nine touchdowns, including a season high of 241 yards on 17 carries, which convinced him to give offense, and Notre Dame, a shot.

"When you're a senior in high school," explains Southall, "you're being recruited by major colleges and universities.
Strickland: PU’s superman

By DOUG GRIFFITHS
Purdue Exponent

Purdue middle linebacker Fred Strickland is the Super-  man of the Purdue defense.

Off the field it is his “mild- mannered” approach that is noticeable, but his on the field “tough as steel” antics have earned him the respect of his teammates and opponents.

“I think he’s a lot more ag­gressive on the field,” Boiler defensive coordinator and linebacker coach Phil Bennett says. “He’s a mild- mannered type of kid (off the field) with me. But when he gets on the field, he has not just a fierce attitude. He is a hitter, unafraid to stick his face in the ball.”

In contrast to Bennett’s comments, Strickland says he tries to stay the same person off and on the field.

“I try to get the team to react in certain situations,” he says. “I try to calm them down in pressure situations. I joke around with them, try to talk them down. Even off the field when I’m around my friends I try to kid around and have a good time.

“I like to just sit around and listen to rap music and hang out. This season I want to be by myself more than I have in years past.”

Although Strickland likes to relax in his spare time, he was anxious to get started this fall with football. His eligibility to return for a senior year was not until the first day of fall classes (Aug. 24) because of academic problems. Since he missed the first part of fall practice, he has had to play catch-up — and it hasn’t been easy.

“I did get him back and it hurt him a lot,” Bennett says. “I think he’s getting better, but he’s still not where I’d want him to be at this point.”

Redshirt of spring prac­tice, Strickland says his early absence did not hurt him in learning the new defense, but it did in the conditioning aspect.

“Tink that my technique may have been affected slightly, but I think that the only thing that hurt me was the conditioning,” he says.

Even though he got a late start, he hasn’t seemed to af­fect his play on the field. As a second-team all Big Ten selection in 1986, Strickland led the Boilers and ranked second in the conference in tackles - for the second-straight season. Currently Strickland has 21 tackles (19 unassisted) and has caused a fumble and recovered it. He needs 11 solos to become Strickland’s tackling presence.

“With those kind of sta­tistics, Bennett says “Fred has the possibility to be one of the best or the best linebacker that has ever been through here. He’s in­telligent and a good hitter. He runs well, and he’s in­tense about what he does.”

Boiler head coach Fred Akers says Strickland is one on the top linebackers around. He could play linebacker for anyone.

“Playing on both sides of the ball in high school (tailback, fullback and out­side linebacker) Strickland says he chose to play the linebacker position because of the opportunities it could present him.”

“Tink the hitting the most,” he says. “I try to get a solid hit on a running back or quarterback or even a lineman. I like letting him know I’m not just here to be friendly. I like running the ball a lot, but I just felt playing the defense (would) make me have a longer football career.”

“If a pro career comes around, I’d like to get a shot at it,” he says. “And if not, then I’ll finish school and go on and get my degree.”

in the United States and they tell you you can play running back in college, you get spoiled.

“Tink starting ‘yeah, I can play running back, and junior and senior year I can run for the team.’ All those kinds of things going through your mind because you’re young and you don’t know what college is all about. Southall backed up Allen Pinkett, Hiawatha Francisco and Ray Carter as a freshman and junior in high school. Then came his first position change. With new Head Coach Lou Holtz coming in, Southall was switched to strong safety.

“At first it was a shock,” he recalls. “I had been playing of­fense all through spring ball. Then coming into camp, they switched me all of a sudden to defense and that shocked me.”

Forbes says the coaching staff saw an area of need, and found Southall to be the most likely candidate for the switch.

“We really had a need in the secondary,” says Forbes. “We felt that it would give Corny the best opportunity to play and it would plug us up for a whole season.”

As it turned out, it was a great boost for Notre Dame, and for Corny individually.

So last season, Southall handled the ball in some games, and George Streeter at strong safety, making four tackles against LOU in his longest stint.

Last spring, he had another surprise when Steve Lawrence and James Bobb left the free safety posi­tion. One big reason, Southall was called upon to change his course.

“It was another adjustment for me,” Southall says. “I knew the whole offensive scheme (freshman year) so learning the defense was something that would be hard. I believe I’m going to do my job.”

a team from Carnegie Tech beat the Irish at home for the first time in 23 years. In 1965, both of Notre Dame’s losses were shutout -20 to Army (in front of 65,000 at Yankee Stadium) and 17-6 at Nebraska. That marked the only time one of Rockefeller’s best had been shut out twice in the same year.

Nor, for the most part, Notre Dame football flourished during the Rocky years. His teams produced some of the All-Americans. Four of these went down in history, largely because of a passage in the New York Herald-Tribune written by then little-known sportswriter named Grantland Rice.

“Outlined against a blue, gray October sky the Four Horsemen rode again. In drill­ in line of scrimmage they are known as: Tommy, Johnny, Peg, and Elmer. Layden,” Rice begins.

None of the four was taller than six feet and none weighed more than 162 pounds. Yet in the 36 games in which they played as a unit for the Irish, they only lost twice - both to Ne­braska. Theirs was the back­field of the 1924 Rose Bowl win, and their reputation spread across the country in no time. All four have been inducted to the National Football Founda­tion Hall of Fame, and all four have found their place in Irish legend.

The aura of Knute Rockne ext­ends beyond the football field to his position as a ca­lum from Notre Dame, de­signed his players’ equipment and uniforms, and served as the athletic direc­tor, business manager, ticket­taker, distributor, coach and equipment manager. But he will be remembered as one of the foremost innovators of the game and perhaps the greatest coach of all time.

A sturdy foundation could not have been laid down for the most successful program in college football.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. - When intrastate rivals Purdue and Notre Dame hook up Saturday at Ross-Ade Stadium, the Boiler band should play "Happy Birthday" instead of "Hail Purdue." Both schools celebrate their football centennials this season. Pittingly, both teams find themselves in similar situations.

Fred Akers is in his first year as head coach of the Boilermakers. After a 10-year career at Texas where he coached the Longhorns to a combined 86-31-2 mark, Akers became Purdue's 31st head coach. Boiler fans look for him to restore his squad to national prominence - a similar situation to Irish head coach Lou Holtz.

So far, it hasn't been to encouraging for the Boilers, who stand 0-1-1 on the season. They lost at Washington, 28-10, before opening at home last week against what figured to be an easy game against Louisville. But it wasn't that easy. After rallying from a 14-3 deficit to take a 22-14 lead in the fourth quarter, the Boiler fans watched in dismay as the Cardinals came back to gain a 26-22 victory.

"times we've been down there, either. In both games we lost at Washington, with Chris Kolinski at strong safety and Derrick Nelson at right corner, start. Washington, with Chris Chandler, and Louisville have strafed the Boilers for 466 yards. Perhaps the most telling stat on the Purdue defense comes on third-down conversions. Of 21 attempts against them, the Boilers allowed 17, for a conversion rate of 81 percent. Perhaps the most telling stat on the Purdue defense comes on third-down conversions. "The question for the Irish defense is how healthy will it be? Defensive linemen Jeff Kunz and Ted Fitzgerald and backup linemen Greg Andryski and Brad Schumacher have all missed time this week. Should they be unable to play, that would leave a total of five starters, including cornerback Brandy Wells, out.

The Irish defense has only allowed two touchdowns in as many games and has come up with 11 take-aways. If the Irish continue their opportunistic ways, it could be a long day for Purdue.

MERCURY, Nev. - A nuclear weapons test rocked the desert and shook buildings 16 miles away in Las Vegas as peace protesters joined striking workers who had vowed to shut down the nation's testing program.

Energy Department officials said Thursday's test was successful because the radiation produced from the blast was contained in the ground.

The test, code-named Lockney, was detonated without incident, according to Energy Department spokeswoman Barbara Yoerg.

This announced test, Tahoka on Aug. 13, registered 5.7. Lockney was the 12th announced shot at the test site this year. Not all tests are announced for security reasons.

Some 50 union pickets and a handful of anti-nuclear protesters who gathered on a road near the site's main gate site were unable to feel the blast, 45 air miles away. An anti-nuclear protester monitored the blast on a citizens' band radio.

The blast caused only a shudder at the test site control point, 28 miles from ground zero, according to Ms. Yoerg. It was felt more distinctly in Las Vegas, where managers of high-rise buildings had been warned not to have workers in precarious positions at the time of detonation.

The test was conducted as more than a third of the 8,300 employees at the sprawling test site continued to observe picket lines set up by striking Culinary Union workers and bus drivers. The workers had vowed to stop the government's testing program.

Many of the union members honoring picket lines are steel workers, mine workers, laborers and Teamsters who are involved in preparing shafts and tunnels in which the tests are conducted.

Energy Department officials, who are charged with conducting the nation's nuclear testing program, have said that a strike by the union workers would slow work at the site but only a prolonged strike could affect testing.

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame. It provides a unique perspective on campus life and issues.
I was told at lunch recently: Notre Dame has nearly $50,000,000 worth of buildings on the drawing board, to go up in the next five years. Whether guesswork or fact, the statement sounded like one of those good newswag news announcements. I'm happy to hear of the University's growth, as long as one is smart enough to keep an eye on any newswag news. My first reaction to the University's growth announcements, however, would be a little more guarded. Whether because Notre Dame is still an expanding force, or because, as has been said, the Church of the Province of Notre Dame is still a pagan nation, I'm not sure. But I do want to keep a close eye on the University's growth. I'm happy to hear of the University's growth, as long as one is smart enough to keep an eye on any newswag news announcements. Letters to a Lonely God this is; could Notre Dame, in its search for greatness, be in danger of losing its Catholic soul? Kipling wrote the "Recessional" as a reminder to the British Empire, celebrating its glory: "The tumult and the shouting dies...". Whether Notre Dame is, too, a more modest affair than anything celebrated so far, I'm not sure. But I do want to keep a close eye on the University's growth. NFL strikers are turning to violence

One player was arrested for throwing an egg at a non-union replacement Thursday as trouble on NFL picket lines flared again with bottle-throwing and window-smashing. While insults and epithets filled the air at most picket lines set up on the third day of the strike by the NFL players Association, some of the striking Los Angeles Rams, Indianapolis Colts, New England Patriots and Philadelphia Eagles carried things farther.

Charles Martin, who was waived by the Green Bay Packers earlier this week and then picked up by the Houston Oilers, was arrested in Green Bay for throwing an egg at a car that apparently belonged to a replacement player.

Sgt. William Parins said Martin, a defensive lineman, was taken into custody for throwing the egg. Martin said it was an accident and that he just dropped the egg, Parins said.

Martin was charged with disorderly conduct and released on $90 bond, according to Lt. Larry Gilie of the Green Bay police department.

Last season, Martin was suspended for two games by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle for slamming Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon to the turf.

In one of several examples of NFL picket line violence, Kansas City Chiefs' linebacker Dino Hackett pulls up fellow Chief Jack Del Rio, who thought scout Otis Taylor had brought a replacement player across the picket line. A story detailing the violence on the picket lines appears at left.

In the NFL East, Lance Johnson's bases-loaded grounder scored Willie McGee with St. Louis' second run of the ninth inning, leading the Cards to a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh.

That boosted the Cardinals' first-place margin over the New York Mets to 3 1/2 games, as the Mets dropped a 5-4 decision to Montreal. The Expos are four games back.

In the AL East, the Toronto Blue Jays extended their lead to 1 1/2 games as they downed second-place Detroit by a 4-3 score in the first of a four-game series between the two clubs. The Blue Jays lost All-Star shortstop Tony Fernandez for the season, however, as Bill Madlock collided with Fernandez while running outside of the basepath.

The varsity basketball programs, men's and women's, will be holding their annual softball games Sunday, September 27, at 1:30 p.m. The games will be played at Moreau Field and all students are encouraged to come and support the basketball programs. -The Observer

Irish soccer takes to road

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team put its perfect 8-0 record on the line this weekend at the Wright State Tournament in Dayton, Ohio. Wright State and Boston College will be looking to topple the Irish from the undefeated ranks, and Head Coach Dennis Grace knows that the pressure mounts with each Notre Dame win.

"It's not as if we're going to collapse after our first loss," said the fourth-year veteran coach of the Irish. "But I know the guys on the team have a very positive attitude toward the whole thing. The emphasis isn't on going undefeated - it's on playing our best from game to game."

One-third of the way through the season, Grace has seen his team reach number 20 in the ISAA Collegiate Coaches Poll and an 18th ranking in Soccer America. Grace says his team is completely unphased by the rankings.

"I tell the guys we're ranked and they say, 'Great, Coach - how are the wife and kids?"' said Grace. "Sure it's nice to get some recognition, but rankings don't mean a thing. Rankings aren't going to beat Wright State or Bowling Green." Grace certainly doesn't look past either of this week's opponents.

"Wright State is an important game because they're in our region," added Grace. "We'd like to remain high in the region standings. And Boston College always has a good team."

Cunningham service ace and five kills by Wagner stifled any hopes the Braves had of taking the game.

Cunningham and Walter led the team in kills with eight each and Walter contributed six blocks to help the Irish control the frontline. Collins turned in a strong performance as setter, recording 43 assists and leading the play on the floor.

Notre Dame now prepares to face a tough Bowling Green team on the road this weekend, looking to iron out any of last night's weaknesses.

"We were not putting the ball down on the outside," said Lambert. "We had some problems with defense and bad ball control so we've got to eliminate that:" The return of Walter to the lineup and continued strong play from the team as a whole will be the key to an Irish victory over a Bowling Green team just recently knocked out of the Midwest Regional Poll.
Rice, ND set sights on Catholic meet today

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

For Theresa Rice, two years make all the difference in the world.

As a freshman, she attended Saint Mary's and was a member of the women's track team. Then she changed her major, transferred to Notre Dame, and decided to give cross country a shot for the first time in her running career.

The results were startling.

No one really knew Rice, but now the junior is the leading runner for the Irish going into the National Catholic Championships today at 3 p.m. at Burke Memorial Golf Course. The dramatic turn of events has left Rice surprised, to say the least.

"I was just trying to make the varsity last year," Rice said. "I decided to run to get in shape for track. It's been gradual. All the work I've been doing has been helping." Rice, a co-captain along with Julia Merkel, finished first in the Detroit Invitational and took fifth in the Purdue Triangular, but the big test comes this weekend against some of the top teams in the country. "I'm excited about the opportunity to race these teams because some are nationally ranked," Rice said. "I think we have a good shot to be in the top five - everyone running as they should run. We'll do substantially better than last year (eighth)."

Rice had a good time of 18:51 last season and already has improved that to 18:49 this year. She gives much of her credit to Coach Dan Ryan. "He's a really good coach," she said. "He gives you a lot of self-confidence. He sets higher goals than most of us would think about."

Ryan, though, is quick to return the compliment. "She's solidly established herself as the top runner," he said. "She's really blossomed this past year. She made a smooth transition from NAIA to Division I."

Still, Ryan has his ups and downs. "Villanova is the favorite to win the meet," he said. "I think we have a good shot to be in the top five, but most teams, regardless of how they do, are going to perform well. I'm still confident we'll do well. Wendy is at 90 percent. Her ankle is taped, but she has no pain."

Villanova is the favorite to repeat as champion of the men's team, but should be challenged by DePaul, St. Thomas, Holy Cross, Detroit and the Irish.

"I'm shooting for the top five," Ryan said. "I think that's a reasonable goal."

ND returns home, sweeps past Braves

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame volleyball team battled sporadic communication breakdowns and occasional inconsistencies last night but was still able to win easily over Bradley in three straight games, 15-7, 15-5 and 15-8.

The Irish dominated the match by keeping Bradley on the run while also directing their attack but struggled at times to sustain their momentum.

"We played well at spots and poorly at others," said Head Coach Art Lambert. "We just made way too many unforced errors."

The victory is Notre Dame's sixth consecutive win and brings the Irish to 10-2 on the year.

The Braves became the 14th home victim for the Irish who have not lost a game at home since September 16 last year against Western Michigan.

Notre Dame was able to jump out to a 7-2 lead in the first game and never looked back as four consecutive kills by sophomore outside hitter Kathy Cunningham and the strong net play of junior Mary Kay Waller, who see IRISH, page 9

The Notre Dame volleyball team extended its winning streak to seven in a 15-7, 15-5, 15-8 triumph over the Bradley Braves. Molly Mahoney details the game at left.

Freshman on a roll

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

Irish women's tennis coach Michele Gelfman has a couple of good reasons to feel confident about her team heading into this weekend's Irish Invitational.

Reason One: The Irish have played like a group to be reckoned with this fall, cruising Northern Illinois and Marquette in dual matches, and surprising several Lady Hoosiers at the Midwest Invitational last weekend at Bloomington, Ind.

Reason Two: Number one seeded freshman Ce Ce Cahill.

Of course, reason two has been largely responsible for causing reason one.

"You really need to have a solid number one player, and it's tough for a freshman to do it," Gelfman said. "But she's done an outstanding job."

Exactly what Cahill has done is steamroll past her Northern Illinois opponents in both singles and doubles, then win the title in her singles flight at the Midwest Invite, leaving three nationally ranked Indiana players in her wake. A case of the flu kept Cahill from competing against Marquette.

"Early in the season, we had not had any competition before Bloomington to evaluate her success," said Gelfman. "Now I can say the sky's the limit for her, and for the team the sky's the limit."

There was no reason to believe that Cahill would be intimidated by nationally-ranked opponents. Having practiced an average of two hours a day since she was 10 years old, the 5-foot dynamo from Hinsdale, Ill., was ranked 90th among the country among 18-year-olds as of last December.

"In my family, we all started playing at the same time," said Cahill. "Ever since I started playing, my goal was to go to nationals, then to go higher in nationals. I was striving to do better, and it was fun traveling to tournaments."

"Considering we'd only had one meet before Bloomington, I wasn't really thinking results, and that's probably why I did so well. Brenda Hecker, the girl I played in the finals, is from the Forest South," Cahill added.

"I arrived and I was ready to go right away...I was just looking to the game, and then I was like, 'Oh my God, this is nationals.'"

"I realized the coach and the girls on the team," Cahill said. "Overall, the experience was worth it, worth the hard work."

There's little use in giving the other team bulletin statements that just get the other team lathered up. What he probably means:

"They're a deceptive team. They only lost to the St. Vitas Danes by two touchdowns and only because of a bad call and a few turnovers. They'll be a tough opponent, and we're not taking them lightly."

What he probably means:

"Come on, how can you waste my time with a question like that? We could send our cheerleaders down there and still cover the 86-point spread. With luck, I should be on the links within two hours."
