Hare Krishnas also tricked on-campus students

Notre Dame students on-campus reportedly have been solicited by the same group of Hare Krishnas who conducted door-to-door campaigns at Campus View Apartments. Residents of Alumni, Fisher, Pangborn and Grace Halls confirmed reports of solicitations before and after October break. Notre Dame Assistant Director of Security Phil Johnson said his department received information "from a couple of halls."

The individuals claim to represent Appalachian Projects, an umbrella group of the Inter-national Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKCON), who have been distributing Notre Dame hats and stickers in exchange for donations at football games. The Observer reported last week that members of ISKCON conducted door-to-door campaigns on Campus View resi-dents before and after break.

Many of those solicited said they believed the people to be from Notre Dame Appalachia groups, but later found out they were Hare Krishnas. Solicitors opened with the line, "We're going to have to issue you a citation for having too much fun," according to Chris Dahlen, a Fisher Hall sophomore. He said the man handed him a sticker last Tuesday, but Dahlen said he was too busy to look at the sticker at the time.

As Ortega spoke, Nicaragua Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, who has been designated intermediary in pending cease-fire talks between the Sandinista forces and the Contras, was heading for Washington and was ex-pected to take part in the Friday announcement. Congressional sources said last week that Wright had declined an offer to serve as a cease-fire intermediary between the Sandinistas and the Contras because he did not have the time and felt that such a role was inappropriate for someone outside of Central America.

But meetings Wednesday and Thursday between Wright and Ortega left the impression that the speaker may have agreed to play a role.

Wright has been an influen-tial figure on the Central Amer-ican issue and the signs of cooperation between him and Ortega contrasted sharply with Reagan administration efforts to avoid diplomatic contacts with the Sandinistas.

At a news conference Thursday morning, Ortega ac-cused President Reagan of reneging on a promise Reagan was alleged to have made last August to hold direct talks with Sandinista authorities.

Cease-fire plan is 'concrete'

WASHINGTON-Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, after talks with House Speaker Jim Wright, said Thursday he has come up with a "concrete pro-posal" for achieving a cease- fire with the Contra rebels.

Ortega, here for a meeting of the Organization of American States, told reporters he will announce his plan on Friday. There were stong hints that the proposal would include a role for Wright in the efforts to reach a cease-fire, but Ortega said he could not provide details because "we're still refining all of this."

A new registration procedure for Saint Mary's students begins next week in the south lounge of Regina Hall. Before students can register for core classes and electives for the Spring semester, they must complete an advise- ment form to be signed by their ad- visors, said Sister Francesca Kennedy of the Registrar's Office. Students who arrive at registration without a com- pleted and signed form will be turned away, she said.

The new registration procedure also enters all class selections directly into a computer. Students will no longer have to stand in separate lines to obtain computer cards for each class. Each student will leave registration with a printed copy of her completed schedule.

Registration begins next Monday with the seniors. The signed advise- ment form will be stamped for admit-tance into the south lounge. At one of five computer terminals students' se- lections will be checked for openings. If available, a space in the class is then reserved. Market crash should get us to reduce the deficit

As long as you’re not an economist, it should be clear that a particular Monday during last month has spelled the end of an era.

Only a few days after Wall Street laid its second egg, it looked like some of our Mother’s very own had taken it right through the nose. I had never seen such a deathly quiet crowd of football fans as the one watching the band before the USC game. Of course, my fellow business- men and ecu majors continue to reassure me that although Wall Street has gone to the bears, all talk about an upcoming depression is a bunch of bull. But then President Reagan kept repeating “the economy is fundamentally sound” while the index fell even further—much like the Wizard of Oz saying, "Ignore that man behind the curtain."

Economists downplay Crash II because they are in the business of faith—that’s why they call the foundation of our economy a fiduciary system. True, the stock market has stabilized at a level $1 trillion poorer. To ensure this, however, Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has had to lower interest rates—all of which amounts to nothing more than another form of taxation through devaluing the dollar. The height of irony was of course that the Secretary of the Treasury had to beg the West Germans to lower their interest rates. Sooner or later, with debts soaring into space and the dollar on the verge of becoming as valuable as lira, we just better hope the Europeans are nice enough to give us a Marshall plan.

In concrete terms, of course, the crash of the stock market has ruined the economy about as little as the crash of the Challenger has actually ruined the space program. In both cases, the principal effect is psychological. Still, it doesn’t take much of a genius to figure out that this confirms that our country’s economic day of reckoning is just around the corner.

The day of the yuppy is officially over. I predict that we will see an entirely new breed, which, for lack of a better imagination, I will call the “puppy”—that is, Poor Unemployed Post Preppy.

Someone may be asking, does this guy get pleasure out of repeating the obvious and being such a pessimist? Actually, no. My purpose is never to be a prophet of the dark side. I will call the “puppy”—that is, Poor Unemployed Post Preppy.

A good part of this mess has resulted because we have refused to face pain. This is the whole story of the Reagan administration. For all his promises to streamline the budget and bail us out of the stagflation already afflicting the country, Reagan simply got out a $2 trillion credit card. He had no stomach to cut popular programs like social security, as Stockman shows, and so became just another ineffective Carter. He was too nice to refuse his pork-barrelling constituents, and nice guys finish last—not only in campus romance, but in politics as well.

Maybe, hopefully, though, the crash will have a big enough impact to jolt us out of the daydream which has taken increasing hold of us. The stock market crash does mean the end of an era. If it means the end of the era of spending as if we were a religion, then it could head off a disaster even worse than a handful of speculators jumping out of windows.

It’s when people are too optimistic that I will get nervous, however. If Black Monday doesn’t convince us that we need more than a $30 billion reduction of the deficit, then I just hope we get that Marshall Plan.

Campaign visits to Gulf banned

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Democratic presidential contender Jesse Jackson will not be allowed to make a planned Thanksgiving visit to U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, the Pentagon said Thursday, unveiling a new policy.

Officials said the Pentagon will not sanction visits by presidential candidates and other public figures with official duties justify the journey, officials said.

Jackson is free to visit friendly Gulf nations for consultations with government leaders, but he will not be allowed to board Navy ships or visit U.S. forces on duty in the region, the officials added.

The policy, signed by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, was released by the Pentagon on Thursday. Several ranking officials agreed to discuss the matter on condition they not be identified.

James Zaghe, an aide to Jackson, said the candidate would proceed with the fact-finding aspects of his trip to Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Ethiopia. A major focus of the however, had been to visit U.S. troops in the region over Thanksgiving.

Jackson campaign press secretary Frank Watkins accused the Reagan administration of "sending off conflicting signals," because, he said, Jackson had received offers of cooperation from the State Department and also from Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, named by President Reagan as the new National Security adviser.

Iran vows to continue fighting

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain - Iraq claimed its warplanes hit another tanker in the Persian Gulf on Thursday and Iran responded to Arab leaders' calls for a cease-fire by vowing the war would continue until "the aggressor" Iraq is defeated.

Iraq's prime minister, Hussein Musavi, denounced an Arab League summit in Jordan as a "defeat for the Arabs, because its decisions were dictated by the United States."

Iran also announced its gunboats intercepted and searched eight unidentified "foreign" cargo ships and oil tankers in the Strait of Hormuz on Wednesday and Thursday but let them go after no Iraq-bound cargo was found aboard. Tehran's military communique said, "A foreign warship was also reconnoitered by the Iranian navy," but it reported no incident and gave no details.

Another convoy of U.S.-flagged tankers and American warships, the largest since escort operations began in July, moved up the gulf in rough seas.

The Greek owners of a supertanker under charter to Iran confirmed that Iraqi planes damaged the vessel Wednesday night, and Iran said it attacked another tanker in Iranian waters early Thursday. That would be Iraq's sixth attack on a tanker in four days, but only the raid on the Greek ship was confirmed independently.

Impact of drastic cuts in nuclear arms discussed

By NATASHA WILSON
Staff Reporter

"It is difficult to foresee the total impact of official cuts in nuclear weapons from this earth without drastic changes in the international climate," physicist Wolfgang Panofsky said Thursday.

The reason for this some-what pessimistic conclusion lies in the nature of nuclear weapons. The explosion of even a small number of nuclear weapons can create an un-speakable havoc," said Panofsky in a lecture entitled "Under What Circumstances Are Drastic Cuts in Nuclear Weapons Feasible?"

The speech, sponsored by Notre Dame's Institute for International Peace Studies, was the second in a series on "The Cost of Militarism."

Panofsky, director emeritus of the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, said the world leaders "have not analyzed the possibility of achieving success (in arms control) along the direction of traditional paths."

"Let me warn you from the outset," he told the audience, "not to expect a declaration of a clear solution." He said, however, "the level of reduction is going much further than those now on the bargaining table at Geneva."

At Reykjavik last year, Reagan and Gorbachev discussed limiting or eliminating intermediate range nuclear missiles and reducing by fifty percent central strategic forces over a five year period. Disagreement on the quota of SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative) led to the termination of the meeting.

Panofsky added many of the proposed reductions were ambiguous. The leaders promised to reduce "something" in Europe in the next ten years, he said.

Discussion has proceeded to the point that most recently Reagan and Gorbachev have agreed to meet Dec. 7 to discuss more reduction plans, Panofsky said. He said he expects negotiators to concen-trate next month on the ques-tion of verifying or policing the reductions.

He added they should also consider ways to extend verification of "third party weapons," those based on the soil of U.S. allies.

"The physicist contends that much of the current negotiation is too political in nature and often fails to consider the human lives involved."

A fifty percent reduction of all nuclear weapons by the superpowers "would be relatively insignificant." "If you woke up tomorrow and found out that the total number of nuclear weapons had been reduced by a factor of two, the world would hardly have changed. The potential for human suffering would be the same."
Cut may increase abortions, deaths

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The planned cutoff of U.S. money for international planned parenthood programs could result in 1,200 maternal deaths and 69,000 additional abortions worldwide over the next three years, according to a study released Thursday.

The study by University of Michigan researchers also concluded that the cutoff would lead to an additional 311,000 live births over three years.

The $23 million annual funding for Family Planning International Assistance is scheduled to end Jan. 1, the group’s U.S. parent organization, Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said Thursday.

The Agency for International Development, which does not renew the funding because the group has rejected a demand that it obey a Reagan administration policy that would end all funding for organizations that include abortion counseling.

This cutoff will have a direct affect on human beings and on morality, said Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood.

Rather than reducing abortions, it will lead to 69,000 more of them, as well as increases in maternal deaths and unplanned births, she said, citing a study done for her group.

An AID spokesman said later Thursday “the premise of the study appears to be based on assumptions that (a) family planning funds will be reduced and (b) if Planned Parenthood does not provide the services no one else will. Both are wrong. Family planning funding has not been reduced and other organizations are ready to pick up any slack that may occur as a result of Planned Parenthood taking itself out of the program.”

“This administration strongly supports family planning. It does oppose abortion. Planned Parenthood is trying to run a fight over abortion into a fight over family planning,” said the spokesman, who declined to be identified.

“This is an administration that’s out to defend the left and, boy, Planned Parenthood is the pei’t they’re wanted on their wall for years,” commented Sharon Camp, vice president of the private Population Crisis Committee.

Already other administration cuts in population programs, based on abortion policies in other nations, have had an impact on family planning around the world, she said.

Summit schedule announced

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is expected to arrive in Washington late in the day on Dec. 7, hold three days of working meetings with President Reagan beginning Dec. 8 and depart on Dec. 10, the White House said Thursday.

Giving a preliminary schedule for the Reagan-Gorbachev summit, spokesman Martin Fitzwater said, “The Soviet team indicated some amusement at the stories of an extended stay and did not give any indication that would be the case.”

Several published reports earlier this week said Gorbachev was seriously considering staying longer.

Fitzwater said Gorbachev wants to hold a press conference before leaving but that the time and location have not been determined.

The spokesman said it was not clear yet if Reagan would see Gorbachev on Dec. 7, a Monday. The formal welcoming ceremony might be delayed until Dec. 8, a Tuesday, he added.

“Generally speaking, there will be working sessions each day, beginning Tuesday, Dec. 8,” Fitzwater said. He said it was envisioned that the meetings would take place at the White House.

A state dinner for Gorbachev likely will be scheduled Tuesday night at the White House, followed by a reciprocal dinner given by Gorbachev for Reagan the next night.

Helm changes mind: Kennedy would be fine Justice

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Anthony Kennedy won words of support from former opponent Jesse Helms Tuesday in a day of White House peacemaking sessions free of the bitterness that followed President Reagan's previous two nominations.

"I think he'll make a fine member of the Supreme Court," Helms, R-N.C., an outspoken member of the Senate's conservative wing, told reporters after meeting separately with Reagan and with the federal appellate judge. However, a spokeswoman said Helms wouldn't make a decision until after confirmation hearings.

Late last month, after the Senate voted down Reagan nominee Robert Bork, Kennedy was considered the front-runner for the court vacancy. Helms said there was no way he would support a Kennedy nomination and other conservatives also indicated displeasure.

Reagan then nominated Douglas Ginsburg, who withdrew last weekend after admitting past marijuana use.

The president also met with Democrat Joseph Biden, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, as Kennedy made courtesy calls on senators, many of whom have reacted favorably but cautiously to the nomination.

The Judiciary Committee's top-ranking Republican, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, also took part in the White House meetings. He told reporters conservatives would back Kennedy, adding, "You're not going to get anybody who will please everybody."

Capitol Hill, during a meeting with Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole and other GOP senators, Kennedy, 63, said, "I like this; it's been wonderful!"

"If anyone has a chance to be confirmed, he does," Thurmond said of Kennedy before the White House meeting. He urged confirmation by Christmas, but Biden indicated there would be no vote before the Senate returns early next year from its year-end recess.

Reagan, in introducing Kennedy at the White House on Wednesday, adopted an apologetic tone in regard to the contentious previous nominations and praised his new nominee as a "courageous, tough but fair jurist."

Funeral for battered child attended by hundreds

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Elizabeth Steinberg's natural mother and hundreds of strangers Thursday mourned the death of the 6-year-old who was found beaten in her adoptive parents' apartment, a death a rabbi said he hoped would save the lives of other children.

"We kick ourselves. Why couldn't we see, why couldn't we tell?" Rabbi Dennis Math asked at a funeral attended by more than 1,000 people paid her respects at Elizabeth's coffin.

"We must risk being wrong, embarrassed, or even evoking a neighbor's anger when we feel a child is being harmed," said Math, who conducted a joint service with a Catholic priest. "May Lisa's death help to save the lives of other children. Then her life will be sanctified."

The child's natural mother, Michelle Launders, saw her newborn daughter for only a moment Thursday morning at the Green Village apartment.

"We attended by hundreds...we stumbled out of bed Thursday morning to register limited courses to the casket of the girl whose death outraged the city. The coffin was surrounded with small individual bouquets from visitors as well as larger floral arrangements.

"One Mourners, many weeping openly, fled past the white steel casket in a steady stream Thursday morning at the Bedden Funeral Home.

Trade gap eases, market rallies

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The nation's trade deficit eased to $14.1 billion in September, the government reported Thursday in statistics that suggested the U.S. import-export picture was brightening even before the stock market crash.

The report, marking the lowest trade shortfall in four months, touched off a rally in the financial markets.

The Commerce Department said the merchandise trade deficit eased to $14.1 billion in September from the $15.7 billion level of August.

The Dow Jones industrial average surged 69 points by early afternoon while the dollar, which had sunk to new 40-year lows earlier in the week, rallied strongly in New York, rising more than 1 yen in value to 136.35 yen. It also was sharply higher against European currencies.

Although much of the trade improvement came from a decline in oil imports, imports of manufactured goods also fell while exports of U.S.-made products rose sharply.

Economists took this as a sign that the long-awaited turnaround in trade accounts from a declining dollar may have finally begun, and that it started weeks before the Oct. 19 stock market collapse.

"Two and a half years after the dollar peaked, we are finally seeing an effect on both imports and exports," said Robert Wescott, chief economist for Alphametrics, a Philadelphia forecasting service.

Last month's disappointing report on the August trade deficit, which showed a smaller-than-anticipated improvement from the $16.5 billion shortfall in July, has been widely cited as one of the factors that helped trigger the stock market collapse.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the new figures were "especially encouraging" because they included a gain in the export of manufactured goods. "These numbers should be received well," he said.

The student will then move on to the second row of computers where the completed schedule is officially entered, printed out and handed to the student.

The new procedure applies only to Saint Mary's students. There will be no change for Notre Dame students who wish to take classes at Saint Mary's.

"I'm not sure the student should take responsibility," said he would support a plan to divide the expense. "If we are going to take responsibility, as a group, it should take responsibility," said Viz. "It should be equally divided."

Student Body Vice President Laurie Bink said she also would support a plan to divide the expense. "My feeling is that someone has to pay for it," she said. There is no way to single out those directly responsible, she said.

There may be some trouble, however, getting the student senate to agree to a plan, Bink said. "There have been some questions as to whether or not the whole student body should be responsible or not," she said. "There could be some controversy about it in the senate."

Junior Class President Ellen Nichols said she would support such a plan. "It's really important that juniors help pay," Nichols said.

No matter how the bill is divided it's all going to come from the student body, Viz said. It will all come from the $50 student activity fee all students pay, he said. This fee finances all student government, he added.
Senior recalls four years of home games

Saturday will be the last time I watch a Notre Dame home football game as a student. Sigh.

Gee, four football seasons do go by pretty quickly. It seems like yesterday that I was standing in Notre Dame Stadium watching the Irish trample gloriously over hapless Colorado. (Even though the Purdue game was officially a home game, I do not consider traveling down to Indianapolis the same as walking across campus to the stadium.)

Standing in the rain for three consecutive games last year, watching the Irish drop games to Miami, Air Force and South Carolina, and to the girls who said it was their stadium. (I will gladly show you my ticket stub.) Later that same year the gloom would change to cheer as Notre Dame walloped Penn State 44-7. And the stam­ pede onto the field at the gun to tear down the north goal post. The other goal post was saved from a similar fate by literally an arm of law enforcement officials.

This year my seat is in row 22, seat 8, and to the girls who said it was their seat, I will gladly show you my ticket (and watching this year's freshmen doing the same thing I did when I sat in their section.)

And next year I'll probably come back for a game, but it will not be the same. Once you become the peculiar social class known as "alumni" standing in Notre Dame Stadium to watch the Irish somehow changes. (Did you notice that most of them sit, not stand like we, throughout the game. For me the habit will be hard to break.)

But before I pull on the ugly paisley pants of a Notre Dame graduate, I think back to the four seasons I have experienced.

It was a short time afterwards that our Mike back at Notre Dame or to help us through our pain. The former could never be realized. He was so young, so full of life had on others. He was so special, so close to the use of alcohol as possible and out your lives. In this way you will make your mark in forever.

Our comfort is knowing how much Mike loved living and the positive affect short life had on others. He was so happy at Notre Dame with his friends, studies, music and sports. We are proud to be a member of the Notre Dame family. For this reason, it hurts us deeply to have Mike referred to as a tragedy. His essence was the opposite. It's a typical day for Irish flanker Tim Brown. Between classes and practice, it's time for his daily version of Meet the Press.

"I've got an interview every day," Brown says as he enters the office of Notre Dame associate sports information director, John Heisler. "I've got one of these about once a week."

"One of these" is a teleconfERENCE arranged to relieve some of the burden and demands on his time. As he settles in behind Heisler's desk, he laughs as Heisler scribbles down the names of 14 reporters who've called. Most of them this week are from Alabama,
but reporters from Columbus,
Ga., Detroit, Chicago and Fort Wayne, Ind., are also on the line. Another reporter sits in the office to listen. Knowing the demands on Brown's time, he figures this is the best way to get an interview.

It seems that these days,
everybody wants to talk to Tim Brown - the leading candidate to win this year's Heisman Trophy. Through eight games this season, Brown has wrecked up 1,415 yards of all-purpose yardage, including a career-high 294 last week against Boston College. It was a performance which more than likely engraved his name on the Heisman. His average 176.9 yards per game ranks second in the nation behind
Eric Wilkerson of Kent State, who is averaging 199.6.
Brown's total would be higher if some returns and receptions (178-yarder against Air Force, 11-yarder against

USC hadn't been called back. On the phone, someone asks if the threat of a penalty is in the back of his mind when making a return. Or even if he would prefer his blockers not to block. "That's normally what I would like to do, but it's almost impossible to do," he said. "On kickoff returns you have to have people blocking for you because they have so much time to get down there that they can really zero in on you. Where on punt returns they're there so quick that you can get by them.

"The problem with our returns is we have a lot of people in a position where they clip people. Then I'm back throwing moves on people and going directions I'm really not supposed to be going, it doesn't make things any better."

Just Brown's presence in a game is enough to alter it. Teams, mostly notably USC, won't kick to him. They'd rather give the Irish the ball at where they clip people. Then continued from page 1

Brown explains. "I've never seen because of the oppos- sions reluctance to see him do anything.

"The possibility of me scoring from anywhere on the field is a threat for the defense." Brown tells someone that sometimes it puts them -jump on their backs." Brown says. "I usually let the guys do it. You believe it or not, I can't handle anything. Bobby's a good kid. He's a nice kid. We got along real well." Brown answers. "They had a return trip, they showed me a whole film of him because they said I reminded them of him. I've heard that I'm primarily the same kind of athlete as him, with quickness and things like that. But that was 15 years ago and it's hard to tell." What about Alabama's Heis- man candidate Johnny Rodgers?

"Booby Humphrey," Brown immediately replies. "I met him this summer in Phoenix. He's a nice kid. We got along real well. He's a good guy, and he's hell of a backball. Our defense is scheming to stop him. There's been a few things said that they don't want him to come in here, have a good game and knock me out of the race."

But then the miracle began. Several minutes later, Montana threw to Haines for the game-tying touchdown. Devine again went for two, and the offense with 28 seconds left. The Reporter who was sitting in thanks him for his time, but Brown isn't done yet. A crew from Cable News Net- work is waiting in a room down the hall.

Bowl record low 20 degrees and Notre Dame was just as cold in the early going on New Year's Day. After boiling out to a 12-0 lead, the Irish were completely stymied by the Houston defense until midway through the fourth quarter. The Cougars scored 34 unanswered points to lead 34-12, and the Irish looked like they would end their Cotton Bowl winning streak at one.

But then the miracle began. To start was has been called by the head a couple of times and things like that, just was all right.

"I didn't even know what a Heisman Trophy was really when I was a junior in high school. My only goal was to reach college. That's all I wanted to do was to get there. I made it."

Eventually, the reporters ran out questions after 35 minutes. The Reporter who was sitting in thanks him for his time, but Brown isn't done yet. A crew from Cable News Net- work is waiting in a room down the hall.

Devine announced that he would retire at the end of the 1980 season and he made his last year one of his best as the Irish compiled a 9-1-1 record and Top Ten status throughout the season. But once again, USC roared on Notre Dame's parade when the 17th-ranked Trojans upset the Irish, then number two, 20-3, in Los An- geles. The Irish couldn't recover in the Sugar Bowl, where they met No.1-ranked Georgia. Although Notre Dame outgained the Bulldogs 228-127, they fell, 17-10.

Devine finished his Notre Dame coaching stint with a 53- 16-1 mark (.764), and a place in hallowed hall of great Notre Dame coaches.

Brown taking on Boston College Vincent Murray. "I think blocking is a lot of fun," the multi-talented Brown says of the less than glamorous task.

Of course, Brown gave his mother some reasons for worry while he was growing up in Dal- las.

"Well we play football a little differently down there," Brown explains. "We played tackle in the street, the rules were that you only got hit if you ran on the sidelines. That way we kept everybody in the middle of the field. We had such things as car timeouts when the cars came by. It was fun. It was dangerous at times, but that was part of it. Mom didn't like that, either. I came home with bumps on

With the end of Notre Dame's home schedule comes the onset of the big three, the part of the season that everyone has been looking forward to, yet still having nightmares about.

The first of the dangerous trio, Ala­bama (11th AP, 10th UPI), comes into Notre Dame Stadium Saturday (2:45 EST) in full stride. The Crimson Tide has notched victories at Penn State and against Tennessee. Last week, the Tide added the most impressive win to the list by trouncing LSU 22-10. That win left Irish head coach Lou Holtz very impressed.

"I think Alabama right now is playing like one of the top five teams in the country," he said. "They really have momentum going and they're playing very well."

These two teams have met only five times, but those few games have in­cluded games legends are made of, in­cluding two Notre Dame wins over a re­ranked Alabama squads in the '72 Sugar Bowl and the '75 Orange Bowl. But last year's meeting was not a classic. Alabama's Greg Richardson returned a punt 66 yards for a touch­down and Albert Bell took in a Mike Shula pass and raced in for a 52-yard score to spark the 38-10 Tide victory.

The Irish were dominated in that game more than at any other time last season.

New Alabama head coach Bill Curry, who replaced Ray Perkins, has his team that has allowed an average of just 4.6 yards per game. Yet last year's meeting was not a classic. Timothy Dalton's debut as masterpsy James Bond. In an effort to conform to today's film, Ophuls uses his continental flair for cinematic opulence in presenting this story of a passionate woman who reveals her lifelong love for the concert pianist (played by Louis Jourdan) who had fathered her child years before, but who cannot now even remember her name.

Expo Roma unveiled

LISA YOUNG

The Observer / Paul Olschager

Fourth-year architecture students unveiled their Expo Roma '87 last Friday afternoon at the Architecture Building. The exposition is a collection of Masters Thesis produced by the 1986-87 Rome Studies Program.

The unveiling was accompanied by a reception hosted by the fourth year class. Chicago architects, "NO" alumni, faculty and students were invited to the event, which included a slide-show presentation highlighting various sites and scenes of Italy and Europe.

Fourth-year students were on hand to guide visitors through the exhibition, as well as answer questions about the displays, the Rome Studies Program and the Architecture Program.

"The unveiling was a tremendous celebration," said student curator, "and it was an opportunity for people to see what Expo Roma is about, what architecture is like, and what our students are involved in.""Lisa Young, Architecture major Patrick Perrella Architecture majors traditionally spend their third year studying in Rome. Approximately 30 students participated in last year's program.

The program, a combination of study and travel, emphasizes the study of the historical context, the study of the historical context, the study of the historical context.

The idea behind Expo Roma was to showcase student awareness of the architecture program at Notre Dame. The five-year program is a part of the study of architecture and design, and includes courses such as Building Technology, Architectural History and Structural Design.

The Rome Studies Program is comprised of four major components: Design, Architectural and Urban Studies, Directed Studies and Field Trips. Four field trips throughout the Italian peninsula gave students opportunity to record impressions and analyses in their required sketchbooks.

Design projects are a major part of the student work and are evaluated at the conclusion of the program. Projects include an Analy­sis of Urban Spaces in Rome, a Consideration of Urban Development in Italy, an Archaeological Library, an Urban Development Zone and a Foreign Academic.

The Architecture Program is housed in a three-story building located behind Howard Hall. The Architecture Building contains classrooms, offices and study areas. A large atrium serves as a meeting place for students, with a primary open studio space for design work required of the program.

According to co-coordinator Steve Morita the event took about six weeks to organize, although most of the work was done in the two weeks after October Break. Said Morita, "Every year the Expo is becoming more formal, more elaborate, which also means a lot more time."

"The event is getting better every year," said Carreira.

"I was surprised to find out," said Friend, "that the entire class took part in putting the event together. Rene said, "I'm going to put a committee together. It's really a class effort—it's bringing our class together."

Responsibilities in pulling off the event included the organization of the hundreds of display, publicity and invitations and the details of the kick-off reception. Each of the 32 students whose work was displayed was responsible for bringing together and labeling their work. The group as­sembled the night before the opening and set up the dis­play.

The exposition continues in display on the lobby of the archi­tecture building through Saturday afternoon. Building hours are from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Students and campus guests are invited to visit the exhibit tomorrow before the event concludes.

On Monday, the exhibit will be moved to LaFortune, where it will be on display through December 19.

My father taught me many things, but he was always em­barrassed to say that he loved me. I have a vivid recollection of him. One day in the fall of 1945, he put me on the train at the 39th Street station and I was off to college. "I hope he would have enjoyed having me as his son," I thought.

Tonight I realized that if just once, while I was going through the motions of study, he put his arm around me, and said, 'You're my son,' I would have done well, but even if you do poorly, you're still my boy, and I love you,' he would have been as helpful to me as a moral mirror. With that thought, I finished the column and wrote for the first time in years like great black oven.

Yeas like black ovens;
I was starting this week to be described as a conservative in a letter written to the Observer. There is nothing dis­honorable about being a conserv­ative - the image I have of myself as a liberal with staunch Catholic parents. I am much more conservative than my father was when I was green in judgment.

I was smarter today than I was a year ago. Perhaps" the genuine conservatives con­sidered me to be a toof-of-the­life, the spirit of the age, the black oxen, with rather run-of-the-mill con­servatism. I darenay they were right. "The years like great black ovens, and it's old enough to be a father or a grandfather to half the campus? Should a fa­ther spend his time arguing with the undergraduates like a jilted law partner? Shouldn't he have times when he's off-duty, or when his big speech of the day is: 'Children, you are old enough to know right from wrong, good from bad, sh­from Shinnola. All I have to say is: take care of yourselves, and be kind to the geeks bearing gifts.'"

"W.C. Fields is credited with the line: 'I never knew a man who drew me to drink, and I never wrote to thank her.' Recent­ly a woman had almost anything to say. My father should have told me that I could drink, but maybe would have, if we were drinking buddies. She said what she wanted to say without anesthetizing me first; that's all. I'm now: I'm never going to have a drink, but I have a taste of what we did."

I was a汇地 drinking for a year to do," says Rafael Cardona, a fourth-year student whose work is included in the exhibition.

"The Expo is a taste of what we did for nine months of our life."

The idea behind Expo Roma was to showcase student awareness of the architecture program at Notre Dame. The five-year program is a part of the study of architecture and design, and includes courses such as Building Technology, Architectural History and Structural Design.

"The expo is an oppor­tunity for people to see what the (Rome Studies) program is like and what architecture is like," said student curator, "and it is an expression of each person who participated in the program."

"Also displayed are students' projects, which were presented as a re­quirement of the program. Stu­dents explained that the sketchbooks are a 'personal log of thoughts, recorded through visual expression.'"

Project presentations included the following: a design project by John Talboys, a watercolor by Stephen Gotthelf, and a watercolor by the student whose work was included in the exposition.

Beefcake cuttin’ and struttin’

By RICK RIETBROCK
Assistant Sports Editor

Look out University Hairystylists. Heads up Varsity Shop. Watch out Rocco’s. There’ll be a new king in town this weekend in the world of hair styling.

Brutus ’The Barber’ Beefcake will be at the Joyce ACC Sunday, scissors in hand, as part of a big World Wrestling Federation card.

Beefcake will team with George ‘The Animal’ Steele to face The New Dream Team of Greg ‘The Hammer’ Valentine and Dino Bravo, managed by Luscious Johnny V.

Beefcake was formerly a member of the original Dream Team (along with Valentine). The Beefcake-Valentine combination held the WWF tag-team titles until WrestleMania II, when they were defeated by the British Bulldogs.

Since that time, the Dream Team slowly declined. Beefcake maintains that Valentine and Johnny V were cramping his style.

“We were the champs for almost a year and we scheduled more title defenses than any team in history,” said ‘The Barber’ Tuesday from a pay phone in a Fort Lauderdale shopping mall. “Then the ego started taking over and jealousy really took over. I started getting more and more popular and Valentine and Johnny V just couldn’t handle it. I got to the point where they were just holding me back.”

The finishing touch occurred at WrestleMania III. The Dream Team faced the Rougeau Brothers and beat them illegally. An argument ensued and Valentine and Johnny V left the ring without Beefcake. Bravo, who was also managed by Johnny V at the time, then became Valentine’s partner.

‘The Barber’ still has a beef with his former mates, especially with the man who has replaced him.

“I am not permanently teaming with George ‘The Animal’ Steele,” he said. “I’m my own man and I like to do things in my style. I just saw The New Dream Team was signed to wrestle so I had to find somebody who would help me do a number on them. I have no respect for them whatsoever.”

‘Bravo’s a jerk - lots of muscle and no brain. He’s got a bad attitude. I don’t like the way he treats kids. I like to do a lot of work with handicapped kids and visit a lot of hospitals. He has no heart for kids.”

Since his break from Valentine, Beefcake, now in his 11th year of professional wrestling, adopted the nickname ‘The Barber.’ That is also a result of WrestleMania III.

“After Roddy Piper beat Adrian Adonis, I went in to clip his hair because he had taken a chunk out of mine a few weeks earlier,” said Beefcake. “Then I did it again in a match in April and the crowd went crazy. I made it a practice to end with a sleeper and then cut my victim’s hair, give him a little extra color on the side (with spray paint) and even a nice style job.”

“No doubt there’s going to be some cuttin’ and struttin’ this Sunday.”

Three WWF titles are also on the line Sunday. The Honkey Tonk Man will defend his Intercontinental belt against Randy ‘The Man’ Savage, the World Tag-Team Champions Strike Force will face The Islanders in a cage match and The Sensational Sherry will defend her Ladies’ title against Debbie Combs.

Other matches include the One Man Gang against the Junkyard Dog and Sam Houston against Cowboy Bob Orton.

Crimson Tide rolls into Rolfs

By ROSE PIETRZAK
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's and women's swim teams will test their strength in the first home meet of the season against a strong Alabama team today at 4 p.m. in the Rolfs Aquatic Center.

Competing against Alabama for the first time in intercollegiate swimming, the men take their 32-member team up against last year's 16th-ranked Crimson Tide. Meanwhile, the inexperienced women's team will begin its season versus a young, but strong Alabama women's team.

Alabama head coach Don Suzanne Poch Gambril, head coach of the 1984 United States swim team and $1 four-time assistant coach, and his team will give the Irish a run for their money.

One of the powerhouse on the Notre Dame schedule, Alabama should prove to be a learning experience for the team. "What we're looking at here is an awesome Alabama team," says Irish head coach Tim Welsh. "The men's team has been ranked in the top 10 in the NCAA ten times since 1974 and the women's team has been ranked five of the past six seasons. This is a quality team coming up here, and we'll have to make sure we meet that high caliber. This meet will prepare us for a field of excellent swimming teams at the National Catholic, and give us an idea of where we need to consolidate our efforts and improve."

Although the challenge will be an obstacle for the Irish, the meet with Alabama will measure the talent, strength and durability of the squad. Win or lose, the team will have had the chance to compete against one of the best. "This meet is not going to be measured by which team wins, but by the amount of energy and excitement that comes out of it," says Welsh. "This meet exists because Alabama wants to be part of the Notre Dame experience, it is not the only objective to determine the faster team. It is important that Notre Dame is well-prepared and disciplined for the meet, and we have the advantage of racing against the clock and not only the opponent."

The Notre Dame swim team faces national-power Alabama this weekend. Rose Pietrzak previews the meet at right.

Stanford, Dillon live up to billing

By TIM SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Entering the playoffs, they had to be considered the favorites. But who could blame them if they did? The Irish will play host Marquette (currently 4-17), with the teams no one is looking forward to that. But no one is looking past to that.

The Irish will play in the Joyce ACC Pit. The keys to the game? "Defensively, we know what they are going to run this time."

The weekend's action is important to the Irish because, against the teams no one is looking past, all the matches are so important. A win on the road against one of the top 20 teams in the nation would look good to the tournament selection committee.

The options are not as bright as they once were," said Lambert. "But lots of things can happen and you'll probably hear something like this: "Talk to any Farley or Breen-Phillips resident and you'll probably hear something like that."

The Irish will play host Marquette in the Joyce ACC Pit. The keys to the game? "Defensively, it's important that we play well this weekend," said Head Coach Art Lambert, "particularly because of Tuesday." (Tuesday is when the Irish traveled to Western Michigan."

"They have not been doing well," said Lambert. "They have not been doing well."

"More of a challenge to Lambert's team will be Michigan State." The weekend's action is important to the Irish because, despite some recent problems, the team is still fighting for an opportunity to win a unprecedented four-consecutive title. "If we do not play well, we may be dejected fourth-consecutive title," said Lambert.

"We have some good people," said Lambert. "I'm surprised they're not doing better. They have a good coach. They are much better than their record shows." Although Lambert says the Irish will have no endurance problems with playing two matches on Friday, he does have some concern about his team's level of play.

"We have a tendency to play at our opponent's level. We need to play at our level of ability, not theirs," he said.
