Dorm choice not on reply cards

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

Starting with next fall's freshman class, the card system in place to indicate their choice to attend the University will no longer include a place to state their first and second choices for residence halls, said Evelyn Reinebold, director of student residences.

Reinebold said that having a place to express a preference on the card gave incoming freshmen the impression that they would receive their first or second choice.

"We have gotten some really vivid letters because freshmen were not given their first or second choice," she added.

The policy had freshmen being placed into a dorm on the basis of when the confirmation card was received, she explained.

Those returning the card earlier usually received their preference, while those who sent their cards later were less likely to get their choice.

"We decided that it might eliminate a lot of hard feelings if we took that first and second choice factor off the card," Reinebold said.

The new policy doesn't mean incoming freshmen won't have a place where they live, she noted.

Report criticizes president

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The congressional Iran-Contra report paints a picture of a Reagan administration at odds with the law and the Constitution, but minority Republicans dismissed it Tuesday as a partisan indictment of the president that ignores foreign policy questions raised by the affair.

The report, which President Reagan flirted with constitutional crisis by creating a White House task force on the Iran-Contra affair, did not condone or tolerate.

"They still can tell us what hall they prefer, and it's indicated on the card," that for special requests please contact the housing office by May 1," she said. "But we've also added we do not guarantee that (freshmen) will be assigned to their hall preference.

"I really expect to get enough letters to indicate real strong preferences," Reinebold added.

With the old policy, some dorms had too many requests for the number of openings available, she noted.

"There were ... many people that had it set in their mind that that was their choice and that was what they were going to get," Reinebold said.

"It may sound like we're taking something away from them," she continued, "but I really don't feel that we are. We just, I hope, eliminating a problem in their thinking that they will get their first or second choice.

Many universities do not even give a choice in housing matters, but Notre Dame does what it can to place people in their preferred halls, she said.

Rosenthal speaks about importance of integrity

By MICHAEL DUNCAN
News Staff

Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal stressed his support for students maintaining a high standard of integrity in Notre Dame inter-collegian athletics when he addressed the fellowship of Christian Athletes last night in Stanford's 24-hour lounge.

Rosenthal, formerly the Chairman of St. Joseph Bank, likened his effort to ensure integrity in the athletic department with his past efforts to enforce honesty among the bank's tellers.

"We have no way to guarantee that the teller won't make a mistake, but a process can be provided that will help ensure that it won't occur." On the same day, there is no way we can insure that the individual, whether it's a coach or player, won't break any (rules). However, we can create an atmosphere where violations are not condoned or tolerated.

NCAA rules. He expressed discontent that the "philosophy of being good isn't as important as following a very narrow prescription, the rules." He cited, as an example, Digger Phelps' inability to drive a few team members to a funeral because of NCAA rules.

The U.S.-Soviet treaty on intermediate-range nuclear weapons will be ready for President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to sign in Washington next month, both sides seem to believe. A Kremlin negotiator said that work on the 120-page document was in the final stage and should be done by Nov. 23. He said that snags developed in the arms control talks when the Americans raised what he called "artificial issues" about verification provisions to be included in the treaty, but that they will probably be resolved before the summit.

University President Emeritus Father Theodore Hesburgh was one of the first to realize that Notre Dame's research programs need improvement. His last years as president were marked by vigorous attempts to improve Notre Dame's graduate programs. In his footsteps, President Father Edward "Mooch" Malloy has pledged continued improvement of the University's research programs.

Top research programs, however, come too often at the expense of undergraduate programs, as professors are taken away from their students. Notre Dame professors interact closely with students, teaching them values that form the moral base for "the University's strong leadership on issues of world peace and social justice," the article said in its only reference to Notre Dame.

Close interaction with professors helps make Notre Dame a home for students, not just a college. It also helps develop individuals who will benefit society, not just the work force.

Research improvements at the University may one day pay off, and a news magazine may one day rank the University as a top 25 research institution.

In the meantime, Notre Dame will have to settle for an average research program, a tradition close-knit students and faculty and a top 10 football team.

I'm not complaining.

Nicaraguan plan called an attempt to defeat Contras

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Nicaraguan government's cease-fire proposal is little more than a disguised attempt to help the Sandinista army achieve victory over the U.S.-backed Contras, a top State Department official said Tuesday.

The official said the proposal, unveiled here last week by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, "is the type of thing a conquering commander would issue as terms of surrender to a defeated foe."

The official spoke to a group of reporters on the condition that he not be identified by name.

Later Tuesday, House Speaker Jim Wright and Secretary of State George Shultz made an unusual appearance before television cameras to try to settle what Shultz called "a little rift" over the speaker's embroilment in the Central American peace process.

"The important thing is to look ahead and focus on things we agree on, insofar as our Central American policy is concerned," said Shultz, after coming to Capitol Hill for a hastily arranged meeting with Wright.

Sharp differences over U.S. policy and tactics in Central America remained between Wright and the administration, but the meeting appeared designed to quiet the public clash which officials feared was distracting attention from substantive peace talks in Central America.

Under Ortega's proposal, any Contras who lay down their arms and accept a government offer of amnesty may retain the political life of the nation "with full enjoyment of rights."

The government asked rebels to move to any of three cease-fire zones where their safety would be guaranteed once the 30-day truce goes into effect on Dec. 5. Humanitarian aid could be sent to the Contras, but military resupply would be forbidden.

Ortega has made clear he sees his offer as a proposal and not an ultimatum.

The plan has been hailed by Wright, D-Texas, as another step in the "progression toward peace" even though some "rough areas" need to be smoothed over.

A cease-fire is a key element of the Central American peace plan approved by Ortega and four other regional presidents last August. The plan was to have been implemented on Nov. 5, but the deadline has since been deferred until January.

The State Department official's critical assessment of the proposal was similar to that of the Contras.

Shoppers beware of dangerous toys

WASHINGTON - The fuzzy white moose tended to smile, and his bells jingled, as the head of the government's product safety agency held him up Tuesday with a warning that such friendly-looking toys pose hidden dangers to the toy wary.

The loosely attached bells on the moose can easily come loose and might choke a child, Terrence Scanlon, chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, noted at his agency's annual toy safety briefing.

The moose was one of millions of toys kept out of stores by federal officials, along with a toy train that had 300 times the legal amount of lead in its paint and a rattle with a long handle that could choke an infant, Scanlon said.

Recalls covering some 2.9 million children's products - mostly toys - were announced during the 1986 fiscal year, Scanlon said. In addition, he said, 2.2 million unsafe toys were stopped at ports of entry by commission and Customs Service officials.

But still, 25 children died last year in accidents involving toys and more than 100,000 were hurt seriously enough to require hospital care, Scanlon said.

Commissioner Anne Graham stressed the danger of three items - two of which she noted are toys at all, even though they are often used by children.

One of the most dangerous is the all-terrain vehicle, the popular three-and four-wheel motorized cycle popular for off-road use.

Hundreds of deaths and hundreds of thousands of injuries have been blamed on these machines, she pointed out. The commission has urged that the vehicles not be sold to youngsters and that smaller versions of the machines intended for youths no longer be made, but consideration of a recall has been stalled by the Justice Department.

Second on her danger list was lawn darts, used to toss at a large ring in a game similar to horseshoes. Children struck by them have been injured and killed. "Lawn darts are not toys for children. Parents should not allow children to play with lawn darts," said Commissioner Carol Dawson.

One of the most popular but least safe toys, she said, is Mr. Potato Head. A Kansas farm boy may become charity, but, she pointed out, "his mouth--which now looks a lot like a mustache--into a smile makes consideration of a recall even more stalled by the Justice Department."

About 40 million Mr. Potato Heads have been sold since the Playskool toy was introduced 35 years ago, complete with stick-on eyes, ears, a nose, a mouth--and a pipe.

Now that he's kicked the habit, Playskool officials are thinking about reshaping the mouth--which now looks a lot like a mustard--into a smile for the estimated 1 million toys manufactured each year.

First lady Nancy Reagan sent "heartiest congratulations" to Head. "By kicking the habit, Mr. Potato Head will not only improve his health, but will serve as a good example to young people who need to learn the importance of maintaining good health habits," Mrs. Reagan said in a message read by Koop.

A helicopter recently got a parking ticket. Army recruiters regularly land helicopters on the Embry Riddle Aeronautical University campus when they come to recruit students. But they went too far the last time they visited. It seems their chopper took up several precious parking spots in an already overcrowded lot. Campus police officers didn't care who the machine belonged to and slapped a ticket on it for violating parking regulations.

Iraq raids nuclear plant; Iran says 11 were killed

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain - Iraqi warplanes raided an Iranian nuclear power plant Tuesday, killing 11 people, and an Iranian nuclear official claimed the attack could lead to another Chernobyl, Iranian news reports said.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, moni- tored in Cyprus, quoted energy official Reza Amrollahi as saying the plant contained nu- clear material.

He said the raid might lead to "the same transfrontier ra- dioactive release and radiological consequences as the Chernobyl nuclear acci- dent," IRNA said.

Iran did not announce that it had bombed the plant and there was no independent confirma- tion of the attack. Iraq has RAIDED the plant at least five times since 1984.

Amrollahi, president of Iran's Atomic Energy Organi- zation, sent an "urgent protest note" to Hans Blix, director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, Austria, IRNA re- ported.

He asked Blix to rush a team of experts to the scene to mon- itor the effects of the raid, the agency said.

IRNA reported the air strike on the nuclear plant and ac- cused Iraq of "violating "interna- tional conventions."

The 7-year-old war has recently heated up, with Iran threatening a major assault on Iraq.

Education suffers in required courses

Dear Editor:

Lately I have begun to think about the value of various courses, especially the University’s required courses. The University apparently believes that courses in philosophy, theology, English, and other required areas of study will improve the life and mind of the student. Personally, I could not be more in favor of a broad education. Yet, after taking some of these requirements, I must express my displeasure.

Consider for a moment the following analysis: The average student takes 10 courses per year. If you divide the price of tuition among these courses, each course costs approximately $80. Obviously there are other needs that draw from the money generated by tuition, but this is not the issue. Rather, it is important to realize that, for each student, in each course, several hundreds of dollars are spent and additional money is spent on books.

Understanding this, I wonder how many students believe their money is well spent. I am not asking if a particular course was interesting, but I merely want to know is the student is better off as a person. This need not even be as a result of the subject matter, but because of the experience attained in the course.

Perhaps my viewpoint is best supported by proposing an alternate system for the University. Suppose, at the moment the University merely established a list of studies required for a degree. The student could fulfill these requirements by University courses, independent study, or some other alternative. How many students can honestly say their money was best spent on the course they selected? Would not many students prefer to buy several books, read and study on their own, and perhaps hire a private tutor? All of this, and maybe more, could be spent for the cost of one course at this time.

Perhaps, though, this question should ultimately be left up to the professor. As a teacher of a course commonly taken as a requirement, some reflection is necessary. While it is impossible to please everyone all the time, it should not be so difficult for the professor to make the claim that his students will be better off and that their money was definitely well spent.

Discourse on Method
'New' courses strange yet practical

It's registration time on campus again, time to sign up for the classes you'll be taking next semester. Next semester at this time things won't be quite the same. That's because the administration, in keeping with its usual benevolent and paternal stance, has been looking out for your best interests, and they've decided to introduce some new classes for the 1988 fall semester.

Kris Murphy

Altered

These new classes will be more relevant to the life of the college student, and their purpose will be to give the student a deeper insight into his or her role in the Notre Dame family. What follows is a sample of these new and more relevant courses.

Sociology 549: Introduction to Confusion

The purpose of this class is to lead the student to a better understanding of the role of confusion in his or her life. Students will be asked to explain concepts that are way over their heads and then forced to write papers on them. Grades will then be given, but not explained. Teachers will answer questions unless they don't feel like it, and the class will be held in a different room every day. Anyone who complains will be shot. Required texts include Edward's classic "The Agony of Defeat: Having Your Fake ID Taken Away" and the recently published "No Officer, That's How I Looked Before Plastic Surgery." PLS 290: Introduction to Mellowness

This course will attempt to mellow out everyone involved. At the beginning of the semester class will meet twice a week, and a relatively laid back discussion will ensue. A paper will be assigned and a test will be taken, but neither will be collected. Near midterm, class meetings will be cut back to once a week and discussions will slow down, centering mainly on questions such as "What's for dinner?" and "Que Pasó?". By the end of the semester students will be encouraged to stay home and lie on the carpet. Required texts include "Are You Mellow Or Just Dead?" Prerequisite: PLS 190. Modern American Laziness

English 430: Literature of Nastiness

Really nasty books by really cruel authors will constitute the majority of this course's material. Classics such as "I'm OK, You're a Nerd (Scumbag)", "G.relu, Look at Them Slobbering Over Each Other," and "We Are That One" will be read and discussed. Students will be encouraged to express their opinions through physical violence, and insults will be graded according to how hard the insulted person cries. Papers will be assigned and then read in front of the class and laughed at.

Sociology 100: Introduction to Alcoholism

This course is open only to freshmen and will attempt to teach the little buggers how to handle their liquor. Topics such as "The Beer Run," "Introduction to Rhed Drinks" and "Passing Out: Where and When To Do It" will be addressed in the course of the semester. Obnoxiousness will be tolerated and even encouraged, so freshmen have nothing to worry about. A field trip off campus is scheduled in the semester for those who have made enough progress to find their way home after the party.

Criminology 300: Intermediate Police Brutality

Members of the South Bend Police Force have been so kind to donate their time to the University in an effort to better relations with the student body. Topics will include "scull buss- tin" and "butt kickin'" as just plain yeller and screamin' and why these methods are so effective in breaking up student parties. The importance of savage dogs and breathalyzerers will also be examined. The eternal question "Don't the South Bend Police have anything better to do?" will not be asked under any circumstances.

Psychology 580: Applied Snottiness

This is a graduate course for students who have demonstrated their ability to be spoiled, stuck-up, snobby, and generally obnoxious in regard to other people and the world in general. Intensive labs will be held to promote bragging about how much money you have and being totally apathetic about anyone but yourself. Everyone will get A's, because if they don't, they'll moan to their parents and the University will lose important donations. Enrollment limited to those who moan and rag the loudest.

History 440: Stress Seminar

The purpose of this course will be to totally freak out everyone involved. It's that simple. If you think you worry a lot now, sign up for this class and realize how good you had it. We won't even tell you what the class is about. That should give you something to think about. For all you know it could be an EQ course. And guess what? We're going to make it required! Prerequisites: History 201: Spaz Seminar.

Regulations, expenses and ads all part of running food sales

by RENEE GAU and JUDY CASE
Business Writers

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of three articles on food sales operations in six women's and six men's dorms. Where many people think of food sales they think of a good excuse for a study break, a place to socialize with friends and to satisfy their late night munchies. Most people do not realize, however, that behind the food counter is a genuine business enterprise, the product of many arduous hours given by managers and employees. And, as with any business, they keep inventories, pay bills, do advertising and handling and special events, earn revenue and face numerous regulations.

The regulations spring from a history of problems surrounding food sales. About five years ago, said Michael McCauslin, director of Environmental Health and Safety, the sanitation found many plumbing and electrical problems in a number of the dorms. "For example, would use a single ice maker for housing and the dorms have freezers, ovens) without the ability to manage equipment and space."

In 1982, a Regulation was passed to prevent such things as selling candy and champagne in the dorms. The dorm Hall Food Sales, sees it as an educational entrepreneurial experience. "It is a learning experience, how a large-scale business situation by funding and the dorms have taken steps to improve this."

"Managers do not have "ultimate" responsibilities like real business managers. They have the freedom to make mistakes, learn from them and still be assured of a continuing business. Also, unlike a fully organized enterprise, dorm food sales honor neither very simplified business contracts or verbal contracts and none the like."

"Food sales is a very small scale business but it is easy to see from running it how a large-scale business would be."

According to a source close to Anheuser-Busch, the company is planning on scaling back the use of prestigious brewing company."This may also be waning."

* Looks like we'll be seeing less of Spuds MacKenzie in the future.

Critics have attacked Anheuser-Busch for selling Spuds shirts, posters and stuffed dolls. The critics maintain that the profits made by selling these products Anheuser-Busch is promoting beer drinking to children.

According to a source close to Anheuser-Busch, the company is planning on scaling back the use of prestigious brewing company. Busch Light beer. This decision is not completely due to Spuds's criticism however. Anheuser-Busch also believes that the dog's appeal may also be waning.

The Last Word- Charlie York, a bond trader with Salomon Brothers, commenting on getting a job in the securities industry: "I'll be honest with you. There's the pre-October 19th Market and the post-October 19th Market, and you have to be realistic about your chances in this business right now." I guess this means that these writers will be wearing name tags and will be uttering, "Would you like fries with that?" at their jobs next year.

Ohio State searches for coach

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio - No sooner had it been announced that Earl Bruce had been fired as head football coach at Ohio State than the speculation began over a successor.

But, in light of the controversy swirling around Bruce's resignation of Athletic Director Rick Bay in protest—Edward Jennings—and the subsequent firing by university President and the OSU football coach Glen Mason. Mason took over the Kent State program in the spring of 1986, upon the sudden death of Coach Dick Scenick. He took a 3-8 team in 1985 to a 5-6 record and conference crown.

The top contender could be 37-year-old Kent State University coach Glen Mason. Mason took over the Kent State program in the spring of 1986, upon the sudden death of Coach Dick Scenick. He took a 3-8 team in 1985 to a 5-6 record and conference crown.

The controversy continues at Ohio State University in the wake of the firing of athletic director Earle Bruce and the resignation of athletic director Rick Bay. Meanwhile, the Buckeyes are looking for a new coach.

NEW YORK - George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays became the first member of a Canadian team to win the American League Most Valuable Player award Tuesday, beating Alan Trammell of the Detroit Tigers in the voting.

Bell, also the first Dominican to be named MVP, beat the Tigers' shortstop by 21 points, getting 332 points to Trammell's 311 in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

For winning, Bell will receive a $50,000 bonus from the Blue Jays. The organization's base salary for 1987 was $125,000.

Two association members in each of the 14 AL cities were eligible to vote. Bell received 16 first-place votes and Trammell 12.

Minnesota outfielder Kirby Puckett was third in the voting with 201 points, followed by Boston's Dwight Evans and Milwaukee's Paul Molitor.

Bell's outstanding season was somewhat tarnished by a damaging slump in the final weeks of the season as Toronto battled Detroit for first place in the AL East.

He struggled through a 2-26 finish as the Tigers swept the Blue Jays in the final three games to win the division.

Bell, who is not always cooperative with the media, hit .308 with 47 home runs, a league-leading 134 runs batted in, 111 runs scored, the latter three setting club records. He also had a .665 slugging percentage and 16 game-winning RBIs.

He started a season-long battle with Oakland rookie Mark McGwire for the AL home run title before McGwire finished with 49. "He's got a bad shoulder from carrying the rest of the ball club all summer," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said of Bell after the Tigers beat the Blue Jays 1-0 on the final day of the season.

Trammell moved to the No. 4 spot in the lineup during spring training, after the defection of free agent Lance Parrish. Trammell responded by hitting a career-high .343 with 28 home runs, 105 runs batted in and 146 RBI.

He was the first Tiger since Al Kaline in 1965 to have 200 hits and 100 RBIs.

There were no excuses from Bell after the Tigers swept the final three games from Toronto in Detroit.

"They gave me the pitches to hit. I missed them," he said. Since becoming a full-time player with Toronto in 1984, Bell has averaged .296 with 33 homers and 116 RBI.

He was drafted by the Tigers in 1980 from the Philadelphia Phillies organization with a stress fracture in his left shoulder.

Toronto's AL East championship year of 1985 also was spoiled by a 4-3 loss to the Tigers in the World Series.

He got notice to the league of his power when, in consecutive games, he hit home runs twice over the left field roof at Comiskey Park in Chicago—the first player to accomplish that feat—and also into the center-field bleachers for 455 foot away.

He also showed his temper on "brush-back" pitches when he charged the mound in Boston after a close pitch by Bruce Kison and delivered a drop kick.

He had been hit by a pitch in the second inning on September 12, the last of 10 he had taken the season before. The Blue Jays had three windows to the sky and three windows to the ground.

They got the pick of the litter—Royals' shortstop by 21 points, followed by Boston's Dwight Evans and Milwaukee's Paul Molitor.

It appears there will be no deal between the Orange and Cotton bowl games regarding the Notre Dame-Miami winner and loser. The folks in Dallas want Notre Dame, nobody else, to bring in bucks and TV ratings. TV ratings are all the more important this year as the Cotton and Fiesta Bowls go head-to-head at 12:30 on January 1 with CBS and NBC, respectively.

So Miami has a chance to play for the national championship again, against the Nebraska-Oklahoma winner.

While the odds will say the Hurricanes should win, the oddsmakers cannot estimate the magnitude of two more important numbers. 58 and 7.

The first number is the score Miami ran up to crush Notre Dame in Gerry Faust's last game as head coach. The second number is all the struggling Irish offense could muster in that game. But the 1987 offense does not struggle - it knows how to move the football. And the 1987 defense does not let anybody run up the score, even in a friendly card game.

If the Alabama game was emotional, the Miami game should be twice that. Not only does Notre Dame have a chance to kill Miami's hopes for a national championship, it can keep hope for an eighth national title alive with a win. If that is not incentive enough, nothing could be.

Over half of this football team and student body was here for the embarrassment of the 1985 debacle. We remember. And so does a certain CBS commentator who led the Irish to two national championships in ten years. His tenure is referred to as the Era of Ara. And his words on that infamous day in Miami two years ago now look like those of a prophet. No matter what bowl Notre Dame plays in on New Year's Day, no matter what title is at stake, Ara Parseghian was right when he said:

"From these ashes, a phoenix will rise."
Top talent found in Midwest

Associated Press

CHICAGO - If the NCAA basketball championship, won by Bob Knight's Indiana Hoosiers last season, is to remain in the Midwest, there are plenty of candidates, including the Hoosiers themselves.

Indiana, Purdue, Michigan, Iowa and Illinois will be scrambling for the championship in the physical and powerful Big Ten, and Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma figure to be the big guys in the Big Eight.

Bradley is clearly the class in the sprawling Missouri Valley Conference, and DePaul and Notre Dame are the top independents in the Great Plains.

Knight has captured three NCAA titles but never two in a row. If the Hoosiers can repeat, it would be the first time in the NCAA since UCLA's streak of seven titles ended after the 1973 campaign.

Knight has Dean Garrett, Galloway and Keith Smart return. But Knight will be without Steve Alford and Loyd Thomas.

"You don't replace an Alford with another player," said Knight. "Loyd Thomas is the right kind of what Thomas did. The look of our team will be different from what it was. The style will be different offensively and defensively."

That normally would give the other Big Ten coaches head-ache reasons. But most of them have a cure and there is plenty of talent, which is one of the reasons the Big Ten is one of the tougher leagues in the country.

Purdue has four starters returning in Troy Lewis, Todd Mitchell, Mel McCants and Everett Stephens; Michigan could have the top guard in the country in Gary Grant; Iowa returns five lettermen including Roy Marble; and Illinois has a new coach in Ken Carpenter.

Three returning starters but one is David Rivers, who could be the best point guard in the country. Rivers led the Irish with a 15.7 average along with 163 assists and 45 steals.

Maryland slipped to 16-13 last season and the Terrapins might have difficulty matching the loss of Winston Garland. But this will be a quicker, faster team headed by guard Rod Strickland and Kevin Edwards.

Notre Dame has three returning starters but lost Derrick Sanders; and Tulsa will bank heavily on Tracy Moore and Don Royster.

But they could have trouble staying in second place. Iowa and Illinois will be scram-bling for the championship in the Midwest, and Ohio State and Kansas State carry no title hopes. Wisconsin has found its 13-15 record set by a group of freshmen. Coach Don Donkor of Dayton will try to improve on his team but Dallas Canegys is gone and that leaves a big hole.

The ball is right where the fans want to see it, in the hands of Irish guard David Rivers. He and the rest of the Notre Dame basketball team are among the best on the talented midwest basketball scene.

Another individual standout in the Big Eight is Jeff Grayer of Iowa State, while at Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubby has Harvey Grant and Rickey Grace back plus a bunch of talented junior college transf-ers. Kansas State could be a fac- tor in the race with Mitch Richard, Nebraska, Oklahoma State and Colorado will be also-rans.

Hersey Hawkins returns at Bradley with his 27.2 scoring average along with four other starters. In all, Coach Stan Albeck has 11 lettermen return-ing and the race in the Missouri Valley Conference should be for second place.

Wichita State, Illinois State and Tulsa figure to be in the race for the runner-up spot. Wichita State has three returning starters but lost Derrick Sanders; and Tulsa will bank heavily on Tracy Moore and Don Royster.

Southern Illinois, Missouri has three returning starters but lost Derrick Sanders; and Tulsa will bank heavily on Tracy Moore and Don Royster.

DePaul has four starters re-turning from Joey Meyer's 28-3 team but Dallas Canegys is gone and that leaves a big hole.

But this will be a quicker, faster team headed by guard Rod Strickland and Kevin Ed-wards.

Marquette slipped to 16-13 last season and the Warriors might have difficulty matching that mark; Oral Roberts has a "new" coach in Ken Trickey, who guided an Tulsa in the early 1970s; and Akron will rebuild around Shawn Roberts.

Dayton will have a strong 15-15 record set by a group of freshmen. Coach Don Donkor of Dayton will try to improve on his team but Dallas Canegys is gone and that leaves a big hole.

If you don't replace an Alford from that approach. We will be different offensively and defen-sively."

Volleyball team falls to W. Michigan

Special to the Observer

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team suffered its ninth loss of the season at the hands of the Western Michigan Broncos last night.

The Irish were victorious in three games, 15-3, 15-5, 15-3, against thedepended Michigan, which is currently ranked 15th in the nation.

Seven of Notre Dame's nine losses have come against teams ranked in the top 25 in the nation. With 29 victories and nine losses, the Irish will have a difficult time making the NCAA tournament.

Maureen Sheed led the Irish with 15 kills and 14 digs. Zenate Bennett contributed 12 kills and 18 digs, and Jill Bichach added 15 digs.

Notre Dame was without the services of Amy White, who did not make the trip to Western Michigan because of illness.

This weekend, the team will come under the lights against North Star opponents during the regular season.

Pony Express rides again

Outlined against a blue-gray November sky, the Pony Express rode again.

In frontier days, that form of communication across the land delivered important messages to men and women of the wilderness. But Pony Express riding is back and it has reappeared as the Notre Dame backfield, delivering an important message to Irish opponents, pollsters, and even the omnipresent bowl representatives.

Notre Dame is for real.

Grandstand seats have put it differently when he made another Irish backfield, the Four Horsemen, a household name with his immortal words over sixty years ago, but you get the idea.

No more pussyfooting around. No more having to prove themselves. No more unqualified high national rankings.

The Irish football team that beat up on Alabama last Saturday deserves to be where it is—en route to a New Year's Day bowl game and still in the chase for an unprecedented eighth national championship.

Alabama is not a bad football team. Saturday, they were not a bad football team. Then who did the Tide get taken to the cleaners? Because Notre Dame was an awesome football team in the first half, a top team is supposed to be better.

They blocked like a top team is supposed to. They kicked like a top team is supposed to. And they ran like a few other football teams in this country can. No wonder Alabama left Green with envy and Crimson with embarrassment.

Brian Lailback Mark Green made the Tide his third consecutive victim of 100-yard games on Saturday with 149 yards rushing, including a spectacular 74-yard dash. Not to be outdone, freshman quarterback Rater had a 75-yard romp late in the game. The Pony Express effort of these two, Tony Rice, Tony Brooks, Braxton Banks and Tim Brown has given the Irish an average of 350 yards on the ground in the last five games for 75% of their total yards.

Any mention of Notre Dame's success running this year is blantly incomplete without recognizing what may be the best offensive line in the country.

Fifth-year seniors Chuck Lanza, Byron Spruell, Tom Rehder and Tom Ferguson are there one day. The Irish are unbeaten and the week after.
