Attitude toward minorities must change, says Bailey

By MIKE O'CONNELL

Dr. Adrienne Bailey, vice president of office affairs for the New York College Board, stressed the need for a change in the academic structure of colleges to create a greater awareness of and objectivity towards minorities in a lecture Sunday night about "The Challenge to American Education" for minorities in society today.

Contemporary technology calls for quality and diversity in education, she said. "You are either part of the solution, or part of the problem," Bailey said. "The number of black students is declining rapidly in higher education because of this passive attitude towards minorities in general. It is time for a change."

All students must recognize the need for a college curriculum that includes the minority groups and their unique contributions to the history and development of human beings, said Bailey.

"Today, our growing economy requires a new outlook, special aptitudes, and an educational environment accepting of others," she said.

"The future of America lies in a work force that can think, accept, and welcome change. Without an open college atmosphere that includes well-informed, caring teachers and high academic standards, the quality of students entering the work force will be deficient."

Bailey used the example of a Stanford University case concerning the content of one of its Western culture courses required by all freshmen.

The administration and faculty have been arguing over the implications of this course as a requirement for Stanford undergraduates - namely, the implication that Western civilization is the only culture worth studying, she said.

The faculty is trying to change the name of the course to "Cultures, Values, and Ideas" and incorporate non-European culture classes which contribute to America.

"The Stanford University debate is a perfect example of the lack of objectivity in higher-level academic institutions. A core reading list that is limited to European countries is insufficient."

Also running for junior class office are Erich Staub, along with running mates Karen Creoteau, Dave Bruner and John O'Brien. Bill Fitzgerald is running with Dee Wrobleswki, Jozef Henriksen, and Jim Croteau. Anne Marie Walker heads the ticket of Jeff Heiel, Jim Kilway and Diane Lucian. Carroll resident Craig Brunmell leads the 23 tickets that campaign in elections for class offices.

Decision to run Fidelity ad re-evaluated after uproar

About four days ago I made the most serious mistake of my tenure as editor-in-chief of The Observer.

I am going to detail that mistake in this column and I think it is important to be accountable for my own decisions and not pass any guilt on to those who work for our organization.
The mistake I refer to is the advertisement for Fidelity magazine which ran in The Observer on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. After reflecting on some of the issues raised by the strong community reaction to the ad, I realize that the ad should not have run as it appeared in our paper.

I believe that the author's brand of radically conservative Catholicism led him to make assertions and connections between the death of Father Niels Rasmussen and dissent in the Church that an objective journalist would not have made. In short, I did not agree with the article's conclusions and content. Nevertheless, I thought that the author was entitled to his opinion.

When I made the decision to run the ad (the decision was not made by the editorial board), I believe that I had solid reasons for making that decision. When the ad came into the office, my initial reaction was that the ad was pretty offensive. When one of the editors asked if we should run it, however, I had to decide what the reasons for not running it would be.

That was the reasoning behind the decision. It was not an easy decision to make. In fact it was the time of a difficult decision I've made as editor-in-chief. Unfortunately, it was not the right decision.

I was wrong.

The ad was graphic in its depiction of a sensitive issue. I realize that it was sensationalist and offensive to some.

Adding to the shocking appearance of the advertisement was the fact that Rasmussen was well-liked and well-respected in this community. Many people were offended by what they perceived to be a deprecation of his memory.

Members of the community reacted to the ad vehemently. Letters were written and phone calls were made. Several expressed at me personally and had no qualms about informing me of their feelings. The facts of the ad were challenged, and The Observer's verification of those facts was called "bearsay."

Finally, some community members challenged my reasons for running the ad and countered my defense of the decision with reasoning that was obviously more sound.

After reflecting on the arguments of those who disagreed with my decision, I realize that there were several things that I did not fully consider when deciding to run the ad: the effect of the ad on Father Rasmussen's colleagues, students and friends; the possible motives behind the publisher's wanting to advertise in The Observer for the first time in almost three years; and the appearance of the ad which many found distasteful.

After a period of "editorial blandness" (as one professor termed it), The Observer has tried to open its pages to all viewpoints this year. Up to this point, I believe that we have been relatively successful. With the Fidelity ad, I believe that I went too far in trying to maintain this openness.

Although Fidelity is entitled to advertise in the paper, there were more tasteful ways to present this advertisement. Its publisher's opinion could have been conveyed in a less offensive way.

When The Observer ran the story on Rasmussen's death, we made the editorial decision not to sensationalize the situation. I should have held to the same standards for the Fidelity ad.

Although I had well thought out reasons for the decision, it was neither a correct nor consistent one.

My hopes in writing this column are twofold. First, I hope you realize that the original decision was difficult and reasoned -- and not at all influenced by the insignificant monetary gain from the ad. Second, I hope you understand that I, and my successor, have learned from this mistake.

It is never my intention to offend any member of this community with my decisions. Know that I have grown from this error and that out of it has come a newspaper more aware of its place in and effect on this community.

LEAPFROGGERS TO TRY TO SET RECORD TODAY

By Patrick O'Connor

An attempt to establish the record for the largest intercollegiate leapfrog competition will be held on South Quad today at 4:30 p.m.

There is presently no record for such a competition, according to Diane Magill, student union board publicity commissioner. "We hope to establish one," she said.

The competition, which is sponsored by the SUB and the classes of 1989 and 1990, is open to all Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students and faculty. Anyone who registers today will be entered in the competition.

SUB representatives said they had no idea how many students would participate or how many to prepare for, but Magill said, "We want it to be real big."

The leapfrog competition kicks off an SUB-sponsored week of events under the name "Celebrate St. Patrick's Day a 'Wee' Bit Early," which includes a Pub Night at Theodore's and performances by an Irish music band.

Notre Dame's last attempt at a similar record took place Sept. 6, 1985, when 5,151 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students assembled on Green Field and broke the intercollegiate musical chairs record.

UNITED NATIONS - The United States, its U.N. prestige and influence already at an all-time low, faces a showdown Monday when the General Assembly convenes an emergency session to condemn U.S. efforts to close the PLO mission.

Some Arab leaders say they want to shift the next General Assembly meeting to Geneva to punish the United States for harrassing the Palestine Liberation Organization, which the United Nations recognizes.

The entire U.N. operation here, including the General Assembly, funnels $400 million to $700 million year into the U.S. and New York economies, according to the U.S. mission.

U.N. session to condemn U.S. move to close PLO mission

The 42nd General Assembly will reconvene for at least three days beginning Monday and consider two resolutions regarding the PLO mission.

One re-affirms the PLO's right to operate and calls on the United States to honor its treaty obligations, the other calls for a ruling by the International Court of Justice.

The move to shut the PLO mission comes as Secretary of State George Shultz is on a critical Middle East visit aimed at initiating Middle East peace talks and ending the 11-week Palestinian uprising in Israel's occupied territories.

State Department and United Nations lawyers say Congress' new anti-terrorist legislation, which would close the PLO's U.N. observer mission, is illegal and violates the 1947 Headquarters Agreement.

Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, legal adviser to the PLO, told the Associated Press Saturday, "We assume the United States doesn't want to be an international outlaw and will, therefore, honor its obligations."

PLO ambassador Zehdi Lahbi Terzi told the AP that the U.S. action against the PLO mission is harming Shultz' chances in the Middle East.

"The Palestinians are being killed in their own home and this is an attempt to stifle their voice in the international community. This is not a message of peace, but a requiem," he said.

'Purlie' performance

TAMMY ETTEN

Purlie Victorious was, well, somewhat victorious. The musical "Purlie," named after the lead character Purlie Victorious, portrayed in a different Broadway project. The performance was somewhat victorious. The role was originally played by Jeff Patchett, who had been freed in the 1860s, fought for freedom and got his happy ending. The performance was acted by Jeff Patchett, who had been freed in the 1860s, fought for freedom and got his happy ending.

Purlie, a newly declared black preacher man, returned to his hometown with a young girl named Lutiebelle, to reclaim an oppressive years of slavery. No exposition was made of the farm about which Maggie and Richard's presence in Falcon Crest to help Emma. Lance pursued Vickie and Eric realized they were still relevant. As a result, Purlie's long-winded, somewhat victorious. The role was originally played by Jeff Patchett, who had been freed in the 1860s, fought for freedom and got his happy ending.

outpointed, it was not Broadway material, although it did remain on the Broadway stage for over two years. The performance was brought to Saint Mary's by Daedalus Productions, a company which tours yearly with different Broadway productions. It has brought "Eva" and "Ain't Misbehavin'" to Saint Mary's in the past.

As usual, Daedalus productions spared no expense in promoting the most suitable costuming and sets. The audience members didn't doubt that they were on a post-Southern plantation about 30 years ago. Although some weaknesses in the storyline, the audience seemed to enjoy the performance.

"Purlie" was victorious because it was able to raise serious issues in a non-confrontational way. It was set before the civil rights era of the 60s, but the questions it raised are still relevant.

At one point in the play, one of the characters asked about the definition of freedom. They had been freed in the 1860s, so why couldn't they get out from under the tyrannical reign of their white landowner?

Another asked what was worth fighting for. If they fought for freedom and got slavery, what else was "worth it?" Women? Money?

As most stories, "Purlie" also had its happy ending. The white tyrannical landowner met his death and his workers obtained their freedom and lived happily ever after.

Editor's Note: The following is the first of two works received from a 1987 Southern Progress graduate well-known for her concern with Central American affairs. This description describes her views of the situation in El Salvador.

The year 1988 brings a new year of repression and suffering to the people of El Salvador. This year, as it has for the last seven years, has brought more of the same for the estimated seven million who make up the electorate. In El Salvador--has had two people recently returned refugees from where the new recruits were waiting, some looked no older than 15 and all seemed to have been issued "Irma," one mother I talked with for a while on the way out, told me that she didn't have much hope for getting her son out because he had no connections in the army, the two generally understood methods of keeping a boy out of the army are a lot of upper class teenagers riding the buses because they have their families have the "resources," or the connections to keep them out--I have told me as much.

Hardly an example of democracy, this system has the poor fighting and losing their lives to protect the interests and security of the tiny minority who control nearly everything in this country, often having to turn against their own families. Perhaps the most appalling thing that has happened here recently was the attack on the refugee camp, San Jose Pinula, just outside the capital. The camp is a shelter for displaced people who have fled the terror and suffering in other parts of the country--a community of mostly women and children. On Saturday, Jan. 16, more than 200 soldiers, their faces painted black and armed with guns, entered the camp with a list of 12 to 15 names of supposed guerrillas and "sympathizers" that they wanted to take out. They searched the entire camp, but when they tried to force people out, even when open, the people gathered around them in a strong large enough to prevent the soldiers from entering.

The next day, however, at approximately 9 p.m. soldiers surrounded the camp and began machine gunning into the camp. The firing went on for three hours and several small bombs were thrown inside as well. One man who was sitting up in a bed fighting with the soldiers cut into the stomach. No one else was hurt, but a few days ago when I went to visit the camp I was shown a bullet hole in a tree which I was shown the bullet hole in the trees and the tinfoil roofs of the buildings where they live and then a few large holes in the roofs from the bombs. The people are all extremely frightened now and are sleeping together in large groups for security, not less repression the people are living in.

In this kind of a repressive atmosphere that prevails in "democratic" El Salvador these days, in the country that, according to Duarte, has fully compiled with the spirit and letter of Esquiroz: While almost all the attention of the peace plan is being focused on Nicaragua, the civil war in El Salvador is generally assumed in the U.S., mostly because of the severe lack of information in the press, that the poor fighting and losing their lives to protect the interests and security of the tiny minority who control nearly everything in this country and particularly the army, the two generally understood methods of keeping a boy out of the army are a lot of upper class teenagers riding the buses because they have their families have the "resources," or the connections to keep them out--I have told me as much.

guest column

Although the new year is only three weeks old, the suffering has already taken its toll. One of the new repatriation sites--a group of recently returned refugees from Honduras--has had two people captured recently. Two weeks old, the suffering has already begun. The army, the churches allowed to bring in any food, because the military claims it is food for the FREN. The people are threatened with violence or death if they speak or do anything. The massacre of two workers has been outside the army barracks in Usulutan, last week who sing to be the few fighters in the little town. The firing went on for nearly all directions out into the countryside and are not even allow the people to pass in most cases. In this manner, the military is silencing the people, keeping them from telling the truth to the rest of the world, the suffering and the less repression the people are living in.

Dear Editor:

With so many others, I have been both stricken and roused by the cleverly crude Fidelity advertisement which appeared in the local press.

It was so effective in its appeal that it would seem, unwittingly, to be against the Observer’s decision to run this ad. The graphics and the profusion of letters you have already received are testimony to the effectiveness of the ad.

I, for one, do not think that this is the best way to advertise the Fidelity Magazine. In that ad, the Fidelity company makes what is, to me, an immoral offer: it promises to pay $21,000 during the next ten years.

This is a cleverly cruel offer that unfortunately is also dishonest. It is not fair to the people to promise them something that cannot be delivered to them.

But even more disturbing, I think, is the fact that this ad is being run by a company that is well known for its deceptive practices. It is not surprising that the people are reaction to this ad with such anger.

Once again, I would like to express my disapproval of this type of advertising. I believe that it is important to have a responsible and ethical approach to marketing.

Sincerely,

Michelle Zinace

Paper should use discretion

Dear Editor:

We write this letter in reference to an ad that appeared in the Feb. 23 and 24 issues of The Observer. The ad in question solicited subscriptions to Fidelity magazine. Fidelity magazine is a publication that has violently exploited members of the Saint Mary’s and Notre Dame communities in the past. In particular, we address the advertisement published last year which slandered Saint Mary’s students and faculty by violating the personal rights of a former student.

We are appalled at The Observer’s decision to run this ad. The graphics and the profusion of letters you have already received are testimony to the effectiveness of the ad.

What is disturbing is that Fidelity does not use the word “serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s” to choose to do business with such a violent and un-Christian organization? Has money replaced the Catholic values instilled in us by these two respected institutions?

Observer should show decency

Dear Editor:

We write with sadness the advertisement in Feb. 23’s Observer for Fidelity Magazine. In that ad, the circumstances surrounding the untimely death of one of our colleagues are used to generate subscriptions to the publication in question.

Nothing that Fidelity does to humiliate its own publisher would surprise us, but the Observer need not sacrifice its own sense of decency by accepting advertisements of such manifest insensitivity.

We urge you in the future to demonstrate greater respect for both the living and the dead than you did in the ad about the utilization of the Fidelity advertisement.

"I'm just in a slump right now, so my second song is really good. It's my last chance to get a ticket once a year and right now it's something I have to get myself out of."-Connor, who missed three jumpers and had three turnovers as he walked to the doorway with 1:21 left. "The spectators were really cheering for me. I surprised the Irish, they just couldn't get the production that we needed out of our starting lineup."

"It seemed like no one was interested," said Connor. "They played it my way for us."

We just can't execute what we wanted in practice and we had little breakdowns which really cost us at some critical points."

Joe Fredrick continued his strong offensive performance with 19 points, and he represented the only outside threat for the Irish all game. David Rivers added 18 points, but he also had to get points from the outside and finished with 7-18 shooting.

"They kept a man up top because they didn't want David to go wild," said Fredrick, who shot for 9-for-15 from the field. "We just missed too many chances and we have to work on those kinds of opportunities."

Outside the game, it became an inside problem as the game wore on. The Irish, looking to玫瑰 to Gary Voece, especially when Will Perdue got into foul trouble, found it too easy to get the ball inside and Voece was noticed absent.

Voece finished with 14 points, but midway through the second half, the Irish began to break his stride in the game and when the perimeter players tried to get the ball in to Voece, a sagging Vanderbilt defense came up with three key steals that bumped the Vanderbilt lead up to 14 points.

Notre Dame managed to shoot just 44 percent in the second half and were able to trim the 10-second half turnovers.

"We just couldn't get another player besides Fredrick wired to shoot from outside and that's going to be the key for us," noted Phelps. "We've got to find somebody to turn on the shooting and that obviously didn't happen for us."

If Noone wins a title this year and in 1989, he will be just the fifth person in history to win four titles.

Tim “TH” Hartigan, the other defending title-holder, also won a second-round TKO, stopping past Mike “Slimey” Rigney in the lightweight division.

“He didn’t come after me, and the coach told me to just straighten it out, and I threw straight rights.”

David ’Sugar’ Cane and Vance ’Pretty Boy’ Buckland, both of whom lost in the finals last year, also had imposing quarterfinal performances.

Buckland managed to get the quickest TKO of the day, stopping Miguel ’Pinoy’ Ladao in the middleweight division.

Belles drop finale 56-25

BY HEATHER ATKINSON

The Saint Mary’s basketball team lost its final game of the season to Aquinas 56-25. The Belles finished the season with an 11-11 record.

Aquinas came into the contest ranked among the top twenty teams in the NAIA. The Saint Mary’s defense kept the competition’s scoring to a minimum, but the Belles’ poor shooting lead to their defeat. They shot only 25 percent in the first half.

“We played excellent defense,” said Head Coach Marvin Wood. “We just couldn’t get our offense going or get the ball to drop.”

Julie Radke led the scoring for Saint Mary’s with only six points, shooting 2-for-13 from the field.

Despite their poor shooting percentage, the Belles had one of their best rebounding efforts of their season. As a team they pulled down 37 boards. Individually, the top rebounders were Linda Garrett with seven, Donna Wolf with six and Jenny Hart with five.

“We did an excellent job rebounding, but the entire group had difficulty,” Wood said. “It was just a poor shooting night.”

The Belles had a considerably stronger schedule this year. They added four new teams to the list of competition Loyola, Michigan, Pitt and Aquinas. Saint Mary’s lost all four of these games which affected their record for the season’s end.

“We didn’t make the playoffs,” Wood said. “We were in line for them until the last two games, but with six games in all, we had a good year.”

Alex Wilson field lives up to high expectations

By MIKE SULLIVAN

As promised by Irish head coach Joe Judge, this past weekend's Alex Wilson Invitational proved to be fast -- very fast.

With schools such as Pittsburg, Georgetown and Eastern Michigan sending only their top teams in hopes of qualifying them for the NCAA Championships, one could only expect fast-paced basketball to be posted, and they were. The tough competition helped fuel the Ga. Tech electricity.

Sophomore Pat Kearns got the Irish off the move early by winning the 5000 meters going away. Kearns started in front of the pack and never fell past fourth place. He regained the lead with four laps remaining and crossed the finish line two tenths of a second ahead of the second-place finisher. Kearns finished in 14:41:30.

Sophomore Glenn Watson turned in an outstanding time of 7:29:29 for first in the 5000 meter hurdles. Also having a good day for the Irish were Thad Harris, John Cole and Jeff Smith. Cole, a high jumper, placed first with a jump of six feet, eight inches, while Smith captured first in the long jump with a leap of 23 feet, 11 one-half inches.

Perede picked up his fourth personal with 15:19 left to play on the game. The Irish had trailed by eight at halfway, but Gary Voice put them to 47-42 with the resulting free throws. But the 'Dores went on a 15-6 tear with their big man on the bench and upped their lead to 62-48 with 6:18 to play. The Irish called two timeouts in the stretch but couldn't stem the tide. Goheen hit twice during the stretch. The Irish were their own enemy committing two turnovers at the end of the Commodore streak.

David Rivers personally put on a 5-0 scoring spurt, hitting a jumper at the baseline and three free throws to cut the margin to 62-53 with 4:41 to play. That's when Perede reentered the game. He quickly made his presence known, feeding Goheen on the first of two successive backcourt cuts. The Irish still had a chance to pull it out at the end, as Vanderbril, a good free-throw shooting team, began coming up short. Notre Dame closed to 74-68 with 30 seconds left, but couldn't hit the shots to put them over the top.

"We really played well tonight, except for knocking down three-pointers in the game," Newton said of his now 18-7 club. "We had a lot of people contributing, and it's a big win for us."

Rivers had 18 and Voice 14 points and 11 rebounds for Notre Dame, now 17-4. The Irish have the week off before facing Marquette at home Saturday afternoon.

Irish netters sweep Bowling Green, Cincy

By GEORGE TRAVERS
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team improved its record to 8-4 this weekend with impressive wins over Cincinnati and Bowling Green. The Irish crushed both schools 9-0 in Saturday's matches.

After a week of exhausting matches in which Notre Dame was labeled definite underdogs, it was nice for the Irish to be favorites again. In the first match against the University of Cincinnati, coach Bob Bayliss opted to rest his number one singles player, Brian Kalbas, saving him for Bowling Green. Freshman Ryan Wenger moved to the top spot and showed poise as he won in three sets over Cliff Beaster.

In action against Cincinnati, captain Dan Walsh protected his perfect singles record as he shut out Jeff Moorman 6-0, 6-0. Junior Dave Reiter, who is coming off a layoff because of a foot injury, defeated Clay Lewis 6-2, 6-2.

Paul Dags crushed Cincin­ nati's Joe Brown in number-four singles 6-1, 6-2. Irish freshmen David Kuhlman and Paul Odland both won in straight sets over Cliff Beaster.

In doubles action the Irish took all three matches from the Bearcats. Coach Bayliss let some of the reserves gain some experience. Sean O'Brien and Arnell Gallanosa beat the Cincinnati tandem of Reiter and Moorman in straight sets.

Notre Dame's Shaun Sparkman and Jim Kilway also won in straight sets. John Sordi and Xavier Serrono grabbed the final win for the Irish.

Saturday afternoon the Irish took on Bowling Green, a team Notre Dame beat last year 6-3. The Irish played a perfect match as they went on to defeat the Falcons 9-0. Bowling Green failed to win a set in any of the matches. Notre Dame dominated the Falcons in every aspect of the game.

In number one singles Kalbas crushed Ken Bruce of Bowling Green 6-1, 6-0. The other Irish singles winners were Wenger, Walsh, Reiter, Dags and Kuhlman.

In the top doubles match Kalbas and Wenger rolled over Peter Ellisworth and Ken Bruce 6-0, 6-2. The other Irish doubles wins came from Odland and Kuhlman and O'Brien and Gallanosa.

Overall, these matches provided a needed break for the Irish squad. One of the most positive aspects of the weekend action was the play of Dave Reiter. Reiter must play the rest of the season with a painful foot injury. But he played excellently in both matches and doesn't expect the injury to hamper his play.

"I'm pretty sore today, but it wasn't bad on the court," Reiter said. "If I make any sharp cuts I could aggravate the injury, so I have to be careful. I may have an operation over the summer but it won't slow me down now."

The Irish next take to the court Friday against Marquette.

USOC seeks financial help

Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta - In the wake of one of the United States' worst Winter Olympics, American athletes are looking dubiously at George Steinbrener's plans to fix the mess.

The New York Yankees boss won't find it as easy as firing a manager or swinging a trade, they say, and he might even have his priorities backward.

One area where he may be able to help, everyone agrees, is in finance. Money can't buy love, happiness or Italy's Alberto Tomba, but a lot more hard cash can go a long way to ending America's Olympic woes.

Officials and athletes say it will take millions and a wholly revamped training program to put U.S. olympic athletes on the same level with their top rivals. There is considerable debate, though, about how the money can be raised, how it should be spent and whether the United States ought to put as much emphasis on winning in the Olympics as the leading medalists - the Soviet Union and East Germany.

However, by any measure the U.S. team had a feeble showing this year and everyone feels the time has come to act.

No American team in the Winter Olympics ever won fewer medals relative to the total number awarded. Of the 138 medals available, Americans won six. In the first Winter Games in 1924, Americans won four of the 43 medals awarded. In 1928, they won six of 41; in 1936 four of 51; in 1960 six of 102.

No U.S. alpine skier won a medal. Only twice before, in 1956 and 1968, were Americans snowed out on the slopes since the current type of downhill and slalom began in 1948.

The U.S. hockey team failed to reach the medal round for the second consecutive Olympics and wound up seventh.

ND hockey sweeps series, eyes upcoming ACHA playoffs

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame hockey team finished its season by doing what they’ve been accustomed to: doing all year—winning a weekend series.

Unfortunately, it came one weekend late.

After having their slight playoff hopes dashed at the hands of Michigan-Dearborn last weekend, the Irish went back strong by taking both ends of a home-and-home series with Lake Forest, and raising their regular season record to 25-4-2. Notre Dame won, 6-1, at Lake Forest on Friday night, and returned to the friendly confines of the JACC Saturday to win, 4-2.

Notre Dame head coach Ric Schafer was pleased with the way his squad rebounded from last weekend’s tough road trip.

“We talked about it before (Friday’s) game,” said Schafer, in his first year as head coach of the Irish. “We knew that we had no shot at the playoffs anymore and that we could either roll over or finish strong.”

“The mark of a good hockey team is not how they play after they’ve won a game, but how they bounce back after a tough loss. We bounced back real well.”

But according to Schafer, the Irish victories epitomized both ends of the spectrum as far as intensity is concerned.

“Friday night’s game was easily one of our best efforts this year,” said Schafer. “We finally played nearly 60 minutes of a hockey game. We’re at our best when everybody contributes equally well—and when there aren’t really any standout but everyone performs consistently. (Mike) McNeill played great, but that’s consistent for him.”

McNeill got the Irish on the right track Friday when he scored 10 seconds into the game. The goal sparked an intense effort by the Irish, who left the ice, after two more early goals by Tom Mooney and Pat Foley, with a 3-0 first-period lead.

The Foresters picked up a goal early in the second period to make it 3-1, but Lance Patton’s power play goal with a minute to go in the period kept the margin at a comfortable three goals. Two Irish third-period goals sealed the road victory.

Saturday’s game, however, was perhaps not the clinic that Friday’s might have been.

“No, it wasn’t picturesque,” remarked Schafer after the 4-2 win. “The sun was shining, it was a nice warm day, we didn’t get back (from Lake Forest) until late Friday night, a lot of factors came into play. Let’s just say we played well enough to win. We played about half as well as we did the night before, but, thankfully, so did Lake Forest.”

Saturday’s game was perhaps not the clinic that Friday’s might have been.

Again it was the senior captain, McNeill, playing in his last home game for the Irish, who opened the scoring. His power play goal halfway through the first period put the Irish on the scoreboard first. Bob Bilton made the score 2-0 on a pretty assist from Bob Herber.

Lake Forest threatened to make it a close game when they scored the final goal of the first period. But Thomas Smith answered early in the second and the Irish defense made the 3-1 lead stand up until Herber scored to put the game out of reach midway through the third. Lake Forest scored with five minutes left to provide the final margin of victory.

The Irish go back to Dearborn to participate in the ACHA tournament next weekend. In the first round, Notre Dame faces Lake Forest again, and with a win, will probably advance to play the host, Michigan-Dearborn.

Of the four Irish games this year, have come at the hands of the Wolves.

“Winning the tournament, especially by beating Michigan-Dearborn, would be a pretty good way to redeem ourselves for losing last weekend’s series to them,” said Schafer. “That would be a real happy ending for a season that’s been a great season.”

Held Buneck goes up for two of her team-high 22 points in the Notre Dame’s heartbreaking loss to DePaul Sunday in women’s basketball. Theresa Kelly has the details of the game beginning on the next page.

LIP SYNC CONTEST at Theodore’s
Vandy turns back Notre Dame 75-66

Depth, surprises offset Irish plan

By DENNIS CORRIGAN

It had been said that Vanderbilt's A.J. Panczak had signed with the team that played against Notre Dame. And the Commodores had played against the Irish and lost the war against the Comadores to make the most of a Joyce ACC.

The Irish got the ball to Heidi Bunek to make the most of a Joyce ACC. and the Commodores picked up the slack as they sailed past the Irish 75-66 Saturday night.

"That's what we wanted to do," Phelps said afterward. "The three-point shots obviously didn't bother us. Bunek was on the bench for most of the game half and we didn't take advantage of those situations. I don't think we did the things that we talked about. We wanted to shoot them and we didn't go inside enough.

"We weren't getting mileage from some veterans. Beside Joe Freek (who had a game-high 19 points), we weren't getting another player wired to shoot the ball. We're just not shooting enough.

"We didn't lose the game because Mary Gavin missed a free-throw," McGraw continued. "We still had a chance. Heidi got a hand on the ball, and then we were supposed to foul on the rebound, but nobody moved. Maybe the pressure got to us then."

"Morgan's lay-in at 1:25 was her only two-point basket of the afternoon. The 5-foot guard nailed six of eight three-pointers, but the Commodores were cold from behind the arc.

"We weren't doing anything on offense," McGraw said. "We wanted to go right at the basket. It was still a good play by Mary to get to the free-throw line."

The Irish were up by two with 1:25 to go when Irish-killer Bunek was wired to get a breakaway basket.

"We were a little tentative on offense," McGraw said. "We worked all week on guarding Morgan on the outside, and we didn't do a good job early, so she hurt us.

This was not just another game for the Irish. The loss practically dashes all hopes of an NCAA bid and puts the Irish in the same boat as North Star Conference with two to go. The tough lost also had the final home contest for Irish seniors Gavin, Sandy Botham and Kathy Barron.

The game was very physical with DePaul trying to over- come the height advantage of the Irish and Notre Dame working to slow down the quicker Demons.

It was a very physical game," McGraw said. "We had a little trouble getting into our offense, but once we realized that they (the referees) lay in was wire to call anything, we got in the game."

The loss hurts," said Bot- ham of her last home game at Notre Dame. "I felt good going in. We played a good game as a team, but they were physical, and they played dirty. We let them get a little bit with that kind of play.

"But it's always been a rivalry. We know coming into it that it will be rough, but once you're out on the court, it's hard sometimes to stay cool." Heidi Bunek led the Irish with 22 points and 11 boards, while DePaul added 12 points. The Irish shot 54 percent from the field, but when crunch time...
