Reagan visits ND for stamp dedication

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI

"Never in our wildest dreams had we ever thought that George Gipp would be president of the United States." Gipp returned to Notre Dame on Wednesday as President Reagan relived the role he made famous in the 1940 film "Knute Rockne - All American," at the dedication ceremony for the Knute Rockne commemorative stamp.

Reagan was joined by University President Father Edward Malloy and former athlete Polly Carl, who made the glib about Gipp becoming president, in praising Rockne. Quoting lines from the film and praising Rockne's legend, Reagan's address highlighted the one and a half hour ceremony in the Joyce ACC.

"The Rockne legend stood for fair play and honor," Reagan said "It was practical; it placed a value on devastating quickness and agility and on confounding the opposition with good old American spirit and determination."

"But most of all, the Rockne policy in "militarization" has made great things happen," Reagan added. Speaking for the second time at Notre Dame since his election as president, Reagan said Rockne was a man of vision. "Rockne exemplified the American spirit if never giving up." The address also gave Reagan a chance to reminisce about young actor's dream. "It had a great entrance, an action middle, and a death scene right out of the opera," he said. "But it was more than that," he added. "I know that to many of you today, Rockne is a revered name, a symbol of greatness, and yes, a face on a stamp. But my generation, well, we actually knew the legend as it happened - we saw it unfold."

The protesters gathered by Gate 3 of the Joyce ACC. Nearby, a group of about 15 students went to see the president. It was his second visit to the campus. Story on Reagan's visit above.

300,000 new Rockne stamps sold at ND

An undetermined number of students with tickets to the Rockne stamp dedication ceremony were denied admission to the event when all of the seats in the Joyce ACC were taken.

Director of Fire Safety Jack Bland explained that nobody was admitted to the arena once all the seats available were full. "We were complying with Indiana state fire rules. We can't allow people to block exits, steps or aisles," Bland said. "We have to be able to clear the building in case of emergency.

Bland said that he did not know how many people were actually in the arena or how many people were denied admission.

According to Director of Public Relations Richard Conklin, there were more ticket holders than there were seats available because set up for the event was "a new configuration in the ACC.

Because the tickets were printed by the White House, the denominations were not known until after the event. About 10,000 students, faculty, staff and South Bend residents were turned away from the stamp dedication ceremony. About 1,500 students were turned away after lower arena seats became available.

Eddie “The Eagle” Edwards, the myopic, bespectacled ski jump star of the Winter Olympics, has recovered the lucky pair of skis that launched him to fame. The unlikely hero of the British team, who won international recognition when he finished last in the 90-meter and 70-meter jumps in Calgary, disclosed Wednesday he mislaid his favorite pair of skis after his final jump at the Games, and has only just found them. “I am taking up a spare pair just in case,” Edwards said. He also said he wanted to get down to serious business after all the ballyhoo. “It will be nice to get back to my sport. Packing up, moving on: There's a lot left yet

Kevin Becker
Editor-In-Chief

The best thing about working here for the past four years is the chance to make more good friends than I would ever have imagined I could have. Because most of the community has little idea about what goes into producing a daily newspaper, the staff members of The Observer rarely get the proper recognition for what they do. They work hard, many of them for more than 40 hours a week. They give their all (and many times their grades) to producing the best paper possible.

I guess that I will never have a better chance to say thank you to all of the staff of the paper than in this column. The hardest thing about leaving The Observer is giving up the daily contact with so many fantastic people.

But I should move on before I start to talk about dew drops of spring, etc.

At the beginning of our tenure at The Observer, this editorial board set out to accomplish many goals. We fell short of some but accomplished more. Our main goal, however, was to make this a fair and objective newspaper and an open forum for thought for our community.

What is an objective newspaper? In some instances, many people have tried to tell us what it means to be good journalists.

In the end there is no actual standard for objectivity that a newspaper can follow. We have no book in which we look when faced with a difficult decision. We listen to everyone's opinion on what it means to be objective, but as journalist George E. Reedy commented, "the problem is that (society) provides absolutely no guide as to what facts should be presented and which accusations are facts." So we make careful, well-reasoned decisions that we think are in the best interest of the community and in the fulfillment of our duty as journalists.

As far as being a forum for thought, we have tried to open up the editorial pages of the paper to the best of our ability. We have upheld the idea that everyone should be heard and that open debate will lead to a greater awareness of truth in the community.

But still we have much farther to go. The next editorial board has its work cut out for them. I hope that we are leaving the newspaper after having made some positive headway. But no matter what we have done, there is an endless road of improvement for this newspaper and this community to travel.

As Cecil Rhodes said as he breathed his last, "So little done - so much to do."

Why not dress for a different kind of success this Summer?

Phelps played key role in Rockne stamp
By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

The history behind the Rockne stamp and President Ronald Reagan's visit stretches back two years to when the stamp was first approved, according to Notre Dame head basketball coach Digger Phelps.

Phelps, a member of the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Board, saw Rockne's name on a list of proposed commemorative stamps when he was first named to the board in 1984.

"I didn't want to push it," Phelps said Wednesday. "We have thousands of proposed subjects on any topic.

"In 1986, when I was named chairman of the Sports Sub-committee, I thought about the Rockne stamp with his 100th birthday coming up," Phelps said. "Wilbur Cohen, who was President Kennedy's secretary of health, education and welfare, said I should bring it up.

"The measure passed a full vote of the board by a unanimous vote of 16-0, with a release date of March 4, 1988.

The story of the president's visit also traces back to 1986, when I was named a close friend of John Simpson to the Rockne stamp with his 100th birthday coming up," Phelps said Wednesday.

"I got a call from John Simpson in March 4 was affirmative, but the following week, they called again and I said the president had to be in Brussels for the NATO summit. They asked if it would be possible to come next week, but I said the students would be gone. They agreed to March 9.

"John Simpson sat next to me today and told me that the president was very excited to be here. It was all he talked about on the flight out, and he talked about it on the way home from Brussels," said Phelps.

Bush strong after Super Tuesday; Dems still close
Associated Press

Republican resistance to George Bush's bid for the White House began crumbling Wednesday as the impact of his fabulous Super Tuesday showing sank in. Democrats Michael Dukakis, Albert Gore and Jesse Jackson savored their own successes while aiming for next week's showdown in Illinois.

Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis and Sen. Gore of Tennessee agreed the nomination struggle would last until the convention next summer. But they quarreled long-distance over which one of them could attract the most voters to the Democratic banner in a campaign against the Republicans.

Bush spent the day in Houston savoring his 16-state primary sweep and the roughly 400 delegates they brought. The outlook for Illinois wasn't bad either, as Gov. James Thompson was backing the vice president and Sen. Bob Dole's own campaign polls gave Bush the lead. The vice president sounded like he was trying to nudge Dole from the race. He declined his rival's challenge to debate him in Illinois in a telegram that said the time had come to "look ahead to the issues which distinguish us from the Democrats."

"Good luck," he wrote. Dole awoke to a campaign in shambles after losing all 17 Super Tuesday states and conceded, "I've got to win Illinois to save his candidacy. The Kansas senator visited the hospital in Chicago where he was treated 40 years ago for his crippling World War II wounds, while his senior aides met to discuss wholesale staff reductions.

Dole aside, the vice president's rivals signaled they knew the game was all but over.

Dear Stanley H.,

I am writing to you as President of the Notre Dame Alumni Association to request your attention to a matter of concern to me and, I believe, to many alumni.

I am referring to the decision to dissolve the Dancin' Irish, Notre Dame's student dancing group. As a former member of this group and as a long-time supporter of Notre Dame athletics and academic programs, I must express my disappointment with this decision.

The Dancin' Irish have been an integral part of Notre Dame's campus life for many years, providing entertainment and support to a wide range of events, from sporting events to charitable fundraisers. They have always been known for their talent and dedication to their craft, and I believe their presence on the campus is sorely missed.

I understand that the group has faced financial difficulties and has struggled to maintain its standards of excellence. However, I believe that these challenges can be overcome with proper planning and resources.

I urge you to reconsider the decision to dissolve the Dancin' Irish. I believe that the group's value to Notre Dame surpasses any short-term financial considerations. Its spirit and enthusiasm are important to the Notre Dame community, and its absence will be felt by many.

I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss this matter with you further. Please do not hesitate to contact me with any questions or concerns you may have.

Sincerely,

Reagan praises Knute Rockne, Notre Dame in speech

Special to The Observer

Here are excerpts from the prepared text of President Reagan’s speech Wednesday at Notre Dame:

On the Rockne legend

Now, of course, the Rockne legend stood for fair play and honor, but, you know, it was also thoroughly American in another way. It was practical; it placed a value on devasting thoroughness and on confounding the opposition with good old American cleverness.

But, most of all, the Rockne legend stands for fair play and quickness and agility and on which all human progress is built.

On George Gipp

Anyway, I was asked whether I knew that George Gipp was no angel, that he had played in some pool games and card games in his time. And, of course, that was true and I said so.

But it was also true of George Gipp - and it is legitimately part of the legend - that he used his winnings from those games to buy food for destitute families and help other students pay their way through Notre Dame since her founding - that on or off the field, it is faith that makes the difference, it is faith that makes great things happen.

And the reason he got so sick and later died from pneumonia was because he had promised a former teammate who had become a high school coach that he would give his students some pointers. Author James Conklin called it during that training session in Chicago that an icy wind blew in across Lake Michigan and the Gipper first felt the ache and sore throat that would lead to the illness that would take his life.

You see, there were no miracle drugs in those days. And a promising young life was ended, but the point is: George Gipp couldn’t forget a friend.

On Notre Dame

And I’ve always thought that it was no mere coincidence that the legend of George Gipp and Knute Rockne emerged from this great institution of higher learning. Notre Dame is renowned, not simply because of its academic excellence, but because it stands among the winds of subjectivity for lasting values and principles that are at the heart of our civilization, and on which all human progress is built.

Notre Dame not only educates, but guides its students in the development of honesty, courage, and all the other things we call character. Rockne once wrote, "(Rockne) was truly one of the prime reasons Notre Dame became recognized as one of the premier universities in our land," said Malloy.

Regional Airport on a projection screen television.

Scenes from the movie were also shown, and Reagan, with recently installed Postmaster General Anthony Frank, unveiled a poster-size version of the stamp.

"We expect the Knute Rockne stamp to be the most popular of the commemoratives," Frank said. "We expect to sell 180 million Rockne stamps in the next two weeks, he added.

"He was more than a coach," said Krause, a tackle on the last team Rockne coached, in 1939. "He helped us with our problems; he had a way of life."

"(Rockne) was truly one of the prime reasons Notre Dame became recognized as one of the premier universities in our land," said Malloy.

The ceremony ended after Malloy presented Reagan with a plaque bearing the words to the University's alma mater "Notre Dame, Our Mother."

After Super Tuesday, Gore must widen appeal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In the next few weeks, Al Gore needs to prove what Mike Dukakis demonstrated on Super Tuesday - that he can win outside his home region, that he's not just another favorite son. And now Dukakis has something new to prove - that he can win primary after primary across the country, become the front-runner and build the momentum to clinch the Democratic nomination before the convention opens in August.

No one is conceding an inch in the next battlegrounds - the big industrial states of Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, New York and Pennsylvania.

Dukakis is the author of a new book, "Blame America First: A Case for Making the America in 1988, but not one would he win the Democratic nomination.

"If he were white, he wouldn't be in the race," said Ben Wattenberg, a scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and co-editor of Public Opinion magazine.

Wattenberg argued a black could not be elected president in America in 1988, but not one with Jackson's lack of office-holding experience nor a "blame-America-first business-bashing radical" like Jackson.

"If Jackson were white, I think he'd be president," said Howard University political science professor Ronald Walters, who was Jackson's deputy campaign manager in 1984 and is the author of a new book, "Black Presidential Politics in America."

Walters said Jackson's experience in the civil rights movement is more than equivalent to service in legislative halls and he has a electrifying quality that cannot be discounted.

"Charisma - say what you will, it still counts in politics," he said. "Just ask Ronald Reagan."

Network polls said Jackson won between 8 and 10 percent of the white vote in the South on Super Tuesday - twice as much as four years ago.

Jackson won 2.5 million of the 9.4 million votes cast Tuesday - more than anyone else.

Despite his showing, the conventional wisdom has been that whites won't vote for a black candidate in sufficient numbers to elect a black president. Jackson's performance has reopened the debate about whether a race-based barrier actually exists.

Jackson himself has acknowledged the handicap. In campaign speeches, he has cited an apocalyptic conversation between two hard-hit farmers in Iowa. One said to the other, "Jackson's message and politics, "But..."

Declared Jackson: "I want those people to move from 'but' to 'therefore.'"

Some surveys show 15 to 20 percent of the population would reject any black on racial grounds.

Telephone repairmen surprised by lion

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - A brown lion surprised a telephone repair crew that arrived at an Indianapolis home to repair a downed line.

"It was just a big old 225-pound puddy tat," said Danny Carper, 51, an Indiana Bell cable repair supervisor in South Bend.

Carper was among eight telephone company volunteers who came to Indianapolis from South Bend last weekend to help restore service after last Thursday's ice storm.

He said some crew members discovered a downed telephone line in an alley last Sunday and climbed over a fence to investigate.

"They wrote on their work report, 'Lion in yard. No way,' " he said.

Dear Editor:

A mere hour ago I had the privilege of standing in line anxiously waiting probably my only opportunity to see the President of the United States, Ronald Reagan. As I reached the front of the line, I, along with two hundred or so other students, was told that all seats were filled and no one else was to be allowed in. I returned to my room with others who, like myself, voiced their disappointment in the apparent lack of organization for such a great event.

I, like other students, had gone to the trouble of obtaining a ticket for the Rockne Memorial Stamp Commemoration at which time we were told that the first thing they were to do is stand in line. Twenty minutes later it was announced that the President was in the arena and this was a great chance to hear the President of the United States in person, and this was a great chance to witness the President of the United States, namely Ronald Reagan. As I reached the front of the line that door that all seats were filled instead of being forced to wait inside for twenty minutes only to be told to go home? Answers must be given and explanations must be made. Most of you spent the afternoon getting the rare opportunity to hear the President of the United States, the most important man in America, comes to Notre Dame.

Dear Editor:

I have just returned from the Knute Rockne Stamp Dedication, and there are a few issues I would like to discuss. To begin, it is not every day that the President of the United States, the most important man in America, comes to Notre Dame. Many people, many people included, have never seen the President of the United States, and this was a great chance to do so. I believe, and I'm sure I'm not alone in this view, that the administration should have canceled classes, or at least the ones in the afternoon. But, as is obvious, they did not thereby giving me the impression that they feel a day's classes are more important than watching our President honor马拉·亨森 than watching our President honor马拉·亨森. As is obvious, they did not, thereby preventing many more tickets than the arena would hold.

Ticket excesses a true fiasco

Lisa M. Gabany, Lewis Hall
March 9, 1988

Dear Editor:

I arrived at the Joyce ACC at 11:35. That was twenty full minutes before the arrangement was to be seated. Many people after I did, and likewise, they did not get in. We were all forced to stand in the lobby and struggle to hear the processions through only slightly held doors. If anyone in charge had any intelligence, they would have set up television monitors in the lobby to still allow everyone to watch.

Nerwhance was in charge, I think he deserves a raise. Not only were too many tickets given out, but groups not associated with the University, namely Saint Mary's College students and South Bend residents, were allowed into the ceremony while many Notre Dame students could not get in. This is our University, and this ceremony was for one of our University's greats. Saint Mary's is not part of this University, and therefore should not have been allowed to attend until every Notre Dame student who wished to attend was seated. As for South Bend residents, they are even less affiliated with the University than Saint Mary's College is, and their participation was even more ludicrous. The incident that was due to the two groups left one hundred or so Notre Dame students in the cold.

Furthermore, during the course of the ceremony, the crowd of disgruntled students dwindled down to a mere fifty (yes, I counted). But we were still not allowed into the arena because it would be impossible to hear a break! How twenty people added to a large conference can cause a significant increase in danger is beyond me!

And finally, I would also like to thank the small group of girls in the lobby who refused to keep their fat traps shut while the rest of us strained to hear President Reagan. Thanks for being so considerate!

AIDS issue hurt by homophobia

Dear Editor:

Words cannot express my bitter dissatisfaction upon refusal of admittance to the Knute Rockne Stamp Dedication. Because too many tickets were issued, those who arrived around 12:00 because of mid-terms and classes were not permitted to witness the ceremony.

Blind rage was my first reaction when I discovered that lack of organization and stupidity prevented me from attending. As a student at Notre Dame, I expect to be accorded with the privileges of my position. If only a limited number of seats were available, tickets should have been distributed to Notre Dame students and faculty and not residents of South Bend or students at Saint Mary's. For those who did witness the ceremony, it is difficult to understand the overwhelming resentment of those that did not.

AIDS testing centers don't test for AIDS

Testing centers don't test for AIDS. They test for the presence of antibodies to the HIV virus believed to be the cause of AIDS. If a person tests positive, it means that the person has been exposed to the virus; it does not mean that he or she has the disease or will necessarily develop it. An anonymous testing center has no record of each patient's identity, and thus cannot report an antibody-positive person's name to the state or to anyone else. At reputable testing centers, all persons are counseled regarding their antibody status and the importance of avoiding further risk activity.

Mr. Julka apologizes for his lack of compassion and his homophobia. He needn't bother—these are unforgivable anyway. He should, though, apologize for his ignorance about AIDS, and for daring to write a column broadcasting it to the campus population. Although you may not know it, AIDS can kill you. Let us pray that all of us continue to become better informed about this disease.

Dear Editor:
I am writing in response to the March 4 article describing Ronald Reagan’s visit to Notre Dame. I am appalled that the University has chosen to publicize this event in such a manner. As a Notre Dame student, I feel it is important for the university to stop promoting this visit as a significant event.

Over 300 letters have been sent to the editor and some were published in the newspaper. The university has silenced these voices by not publishing the letters.

I believe the university has failed to consider the opinions of the students who are not happy with the visit. I am writing this letter to express my concern and request that the university reconsider its decision to promote Ronald Reagan’s visit.

Letters to a Lonely God

In the first chronicle, "The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe," we meet Peter, Susan, Lucy, and Edmund, siblings who first enter Narnia through a back door of a very old wardrobe. Narnia is a land of the imagination belonging to children which you get to by magic.

Edmund from paying the price of his sin, undergoes a deliverance from death and heals with Narnians as their resurrected Lord.

In the third chronicle, Asian describes Narnia as a country of the young, Lucy, about to return to England with the other children, asks, "Will you tell us where you can process to Narnia again?"

"Dearies," said Asian, very gently, "you and your brother will never come back to Narnia. You are too old, and too, must begin to close yourself to your own world now."

"I don't have the same name," sobbed Lucy. "It's you. We don't meet at the party where can you meet me by that name?"

"That you shall meet me, dear one," said Asian. "Are-you there too, sir?"

"I am," said Asian. "But there I have another name. You must learn to know me by that other name."

The reason for this was why you were brought to Narnia, that by knowing me here for a while, you may know me better there.

Asian brings the children of Adam to Narnia to undergo adventures which expose them to dangers helpful in making them grow up.

"Erect to you and the childeren, the children mature gracefully in their royal vocation through the doubts, the challenges, of the "Chronicles" are not sentimental tales about an enchanted place far away.

Fencers get set for NCAAs'

Done. It looks like, of course, NCAAs sports under close scrutiny, only three teams with fencing is unimportant as they enter season play.

The regular season's surprises have provided mixed results for both the men's and women's teams. The defending NCAAs championship winner appeared without difficulty against starter Dave Hume. The men's team, on the other hand, finished fourth at the NCAAs last year but have seen a few pleasant surprises come about through the efforts of our young players.

"I feel as confident today as I did two years ago when the (men's) team was won," said DeCicco. "Both the men and the women have a very good chance of making a big splash at the NCAAs this year."

Top competitors on the women's side are co-captain and All-American Molly Sullivan and junior Anne Baxa, winner of last week's NCAAs Midwest Regional. Both participated in last year's NCAAs tournament.

The men will send six qualifiers, two in each of three weapons. The foil participants of senior Yehuda Kovesz and freshman Phil Learney will be one of the strongest weapons for the Irish men. In saber, it will be undefeated freshman Leon Nowskejksi and second-year man Danny Yu. The epee squad will feature juniors Ted Fay and Todd Grimes.

The coaches know that the both teams are within reach of a national championship.

"Training is one thing," said DeCicco, "but last year's experience helps us, too."
SMC swim team ends year
Belles finish with trip to National Championships

By KRISTINE GREGORY

The Saint Mary’s women’s swim team ended its season on April 26 with respectable relay finishes at the NAIA National Championship in Orlando, Fla.

The 200 medley relay team of Lori Swedish, Clair Druley, Lynne Olivieri and Meghan Rafferty recorded its best time of the season, good enough for a 17th-place finish. This was one position away from being named Honorary All-Americans. The ninth to 18th place finishers receive the honorary All-American title, while the top eight finishers are named All-Americans.

“I was very pleased with the way the girls swam,” said first-year Belles coach Dennis Cooper. “Every single time was a season best by at least one second. Everyone swam very well.”

A 19th place finish was recorded in the 400 medley relay by Swedish, Druley, Olivieri and Rafferty. The relay team knocked four seconds off of its previous best time.

The 200 free relay team of Kristen Gruber, Mary Malina, Olivieri and Rafferty recorded a 21st place finish, as did the 400 free relay team of Sara Maurer, Malina, Olivieri and Rafferty. The latter beat its previous best time by nine seconds to achieve this finish.

The top individual contender was senior Meghan Rafferty, who recorded a solid 22nd-place finish in the 100 backstroke and swam three seconds off her personal best time.

“At the beginning of the season we geared ourselves toward Nationals,” said Cooper. “I was very pleased because we peaked there, which looks very promising for next season.”

Belles tennis team tops Toledo; freshmen play key roles in win

By HEATHER ATKINSON

Starting its spring season off with a bang, the Saint Mary’s tennis team defeated the University of Toledo Rockets 6-3 at the Angela Athletic Facility last weekend.

The Belles’ win over the Division I school, coming off a highly successful fall season, left Saint Mary’s coach Debbie Laverie understandably pleased.

“This was a great way to start off the season,” said Head Coach Debbie Laverie. “Toledo is a Division I program and has always beaten us in the past. Last time we lost 9-0. This time we went in and worked real hard and just wanted it more than the other team did.”

Only three courts were available at the Angela Facility, resulting in a very long day where the matches were more like endurance contests. Saint Mary’s was able to use that situation as a home court advantage. Since the Belles were in better condition than Toledo’s players, Saint Mary’s came out victorious in many of the three-set matches.

Freshman Sarah Mayer was one player to come back and win in three sets. In her first collegiate spring match, Mayer lost in the second set and rebounded to win the third and defeat her opponent 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

Mary Turk, also a freshman, won in straight sets. Both sets were close, but Turk came through with a 6-4, 6-4 victory in the first spring season match of her collegiate career.

Mayer and Turk both contributed to the Belles’ two victories in the doubles category. Mayer teamed up with Charlene Stajko, defeating their competition 6-2, 6-2. The duo of Turk and Jane Schnell won with scores of 6-3, 6-0.

“The big difference this time was that we put the emphasis on playing aggressively. We won a lot of our points at the net,” said Laverie. “Our number one players always play well, but I was really pleased with the performances of the number two and three players. They have shown great improvement.”

The next match for the Belles will be on March 26 at home against Wheaton College.

Hardin-Simmons’ Irish have made strides to recover from a late season shooting slump. Junior Mark Stevenson is 10-of-13 in the last two outings (6-of-6 against Marquette), while senior Gary Vose and sophomore Keith Robinson have picked up the pace inside to pound the ball at opponents in the paint.

“We want to have eight or nine people playing well,” said Phelps, in his 17th season at the helm for Notre Dame. “I think we’ve got Mark Stevenson and Jamere Jackson back where they need to be. We just needed to come back and shoot the ball well in these last few games, and we did that against Marquette and Hardin-Simmons.”

I’ve been sports editor for two years, and it’s been more fun that anyone could imagine. Now the horn is sounding, and the game is over. I’d like to thank a lot of people, more than I can here. First thanks to all the coaches, players and administrators who ever took a few minutes out for an interview.

I’d also like to thank the people in the Sports Information Department – Roger Valdiseri, John Heisler, ’Spook’ Daves, Rick Ohren and all the student assistants. After traveling all around the country to different school, you guys are the people the best at what they do.

Finally, my staff. Without all of you, this paper wouldn’t get out. Thanks to you all.

And, yes, it is sometimes better to just go fishing.

McGwire hits monster clout

Associated Press

Mark McGwire hit two home runs, including a towering three-run shot to center field in the ninth inning, as Oakland defeated the San Francisco Giants 7-5 Wednesday in exhibition play. McGwire's first homer, a solo shot off Mike Krukow, came in the second inning. The three-run homer came off Craig Lefferts and cleared a 30-foot fence in straightaway center field, 430 feet from home.

"The public address announcer said he's never seen anyone hit a ball over that fence, and he's been here 21 years," Giants Manager Roger Craig said of McGwire's long homer. "He not only hit it long, he hit it straight down the middle of the fairway."

McGwire now has four exhibition homers, all in the last three games.

Twins 10, Tigers 7

Randy Bush started Minnesota's four-run third inning with a double, and the defending World Series champion Twins defeated Detroit. Jack Morris, the first of four Tiger pitchers, gave up six runs on nine hits in the three innings he worked.

Twins 6, Royals 5

Sal Butera's bases-loaded walk off Luis Aquino snapped a ninth-inning tie, and the Twins split squad beat Kansas City. Tom Brunansky hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning to give the Twins a 4-1 lead.

Red Sox 2, White Sox 1

Jeff Sellers and Ed Lynch each pitched three shutout innings, and five Boston pitchers combined on a four-hitter as the Red Sox beat Chicago.

Braves 6, Expos 2

Gerald Perry drove in two runs with a double in Atlanta's three-run fifth inning, and Rick Mahler pitched three scoreless innings as the Braves won their third in a row.

Astros 4, Expos 1

Rafael Ramirez hit an RBI triple in Houston's two-run sixth inning, leading the Astros to a 4-1 victory over the Expos split squad.

Cubs 1, Angels 0

Rick Sutcliffe allowed five hits in five scoreless innings, combining with three other pitchers on a seven-hit shutout.

Yankees 10, Rangers 3

Jose Cruz hit his first homer of the spring season, leading the New York Yankees to a 10-3 victory over Texas. Mike Pagliarulo also homered.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3

Darren Daulton's two-run triple helped Philadelphia rally from a 1-0 deficit to a 4-3 victory with four runs in the fourth inning against Pittsburgh.

Dodgers 6, Reds 5

Dave Anderson's RBI single capped a two-run eighth inning that carried unbeaten Los Angeles to a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati.

Strawberry starts fuss

MIAMI - The New York Mets held a closed-door meeting Wednesday and reached an uneasy truce with Darryl Strawberry, a day after he blamed Manager Davey Johnson and some teammates for the club's problems last year.

"I don't think anybody likes to have derogatory things said about them," said Johnson, Strawberry's prime target. "But I don't want to drag this out and make it any bigger than it is."

The storm started Tuesday when an advance copy of Esquire magazine's April issue appeared in the Mets' clubhouse, containing a story about Strawberry.

In the interview, he said Gary Carter and Keith Hernandez "quit" last season and he had some uncomplimentary comments about teammates Wally Backman and Len Dykstra.

Of Johnson, he said, "I always wonder how many games this team would have won if Whitey was managing," a reference to St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

The Mets failed to repeat as World Series champions last year when they were beset by injuries and off-field problems.

NIU swamps Irish

Special to the Observer

Gina Stubs and Carol Owens combined to score 56 points, leading Northern Illinois to a 96-74 thrashing of the Notre Dame women's basketball team Wednesday night at DeKalb, Ill.

The Lady Huskies' leading scorer, Lisi Pong (20.8 ppg), left the game with a knee injury midway through the first half. NIU led 29-19 at that point.

But Stubs and Owens simply picked up the slack to help give the Lady Huskies a 47-28 halftime advantage.

Notre Dame was hurt more by its injuries. Sarah Liebseher went out with a twisted ankle when 15:49 was left in the second half. She is expected to miss Saturday's game at Dayton.

A total of 50 fouls were called during the game, but NIU took fuller advantage of its opportunities. The Lady Huskies shot 29 of 38 from the line, while the Irish were 17 of 29. Heidi Buneck fouled out of the game with 11:45 left in the contest.

Sandby Botham led the Irish with a season-high 21 points. Her career high is a 28-point performance last year against Northern Illinois.

The Irish fell to 19-3 with the loss. Northern Illinois evened its record at 14-14.

Ohio State Stuns Purdue

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Jerry Francis scored 14 points, including six in an 11-2 spurt that turned a close game into a rout, as the 19th-ranked Buckeyes rolled 80-49 in a Big Ten Conference game Wednesday night.

The victory, which moved Ohio State to 16-10 overall and 9-8 in the Big Ten, was the Buckeyes' fourth straight over a ranked conference opponent. Purdue, which clinched the Big Ten title last week, fell to 20-7 and 12-5. The Buckeyes hit 42-72 from the field and 22-31 from behind the arc.

Temple 68, URI 63

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. - Tim Perry's three-point play with 3:44 left turned back a Rhode Island comeback and won the Atlantic 10 tournament title Wednesday night.

Temple, 29-1, won its 15th straight game and third conference crown in eight years. Rhode Island fell to 26-6 after being seeded No. 1, but was limited to 37 first-half points. The Owls took a 16-point lead, 47-31, with 17:44 left in the game when Perry hit a pair of free throws. But Temple went cold over the next 11 minutes as Rhode Island fired back. Macon and Rhode Island's reserves, led by Xavier, led by player of the game.

Rhode Island's John Anderson hit a 15-foot jumper with 1:13 left to cut the Owls' lead to 61-58 but was limited to 37 points. His career high was a 28-point performance late in the season.

NEW JUNIOR FACULTY IN MATERIALS SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING

Dr. Krishna Chaudhary, joined the Materials Science and Engineering Department in August and is receiving a Ph.D. degree from Stevens Institute and is currently an associate professor at Brookhaven National Laboratory. Dr. Chaudhary's interests in the science of surfaces and interfaces are currently applicable to the materials technologies in thin films used in electronic devices. By probing solids in their most fundamental form, he has developed new technology which is now being fabricated one atom layer at a time. The research described at the forefront of a science fiction-like materials breakthrough. Other activities include the design and set-up of a sophisticated processing system that will produce unique thin films of materials using plasma. Superconducting Ceramics will be studied to improve the first material processed, no doubt.

Dr. Alan Pelton, a graduate of South Dakota School of Mines and the University of California, Berkeley joined the Materials Science and Engineering Department in August. He is studying the materials sciences and is providing him with a unique background in glasses, and high strength alloys. The use of an electron microscope allows him to see more detail than ever before. The resulting images can lead to a better understanding of the atomic structure.
NCAA hosts have quite a task

By RICK RIETBROCK and MARTA STRASER
Assistant Sports Editors

Many call the NCAA basketball tournament the most exciting sporting event of the year. The Notre Dame Athletic Department, for the second time in four years, is realizing the tournament also can be the most complicated event of the year, as it prepares to host the first and second rounds of the 1988 tournament next Thursday and Saturday.

"We even went out to Seattle for a seminar on how to run it, even though we had already been through it once," said tournament Manager and Notre Dame Associate Athletic Director Joe O'Brien.

Notre Dame hosted the first and second rounds in 1985, when a David Rivers turnover in the final minute led to an early exit by the Irish and a North Carolina victory. But although the Notre Dame basketball wagon train rolls into Chicago this year, the University itself was victorious in impressing the NCAA enough to host the event again this year.

"We were ready to start planning as soon as we finished in 1985," O'Brien noted. "We were ready to jump in this year. It was a very exciting moment for us, and we showed the NCAA that we could do a good job for them in the future."

And what a job it is. O'Brien and Roger Valdiserri, also a tournament Manager and Notre Dame Associate Athletic Director, have been working on the event since Notre Dame's bid to host it was granted by the NCAA in January of 1987.

The co-managers have divided a number of responsibilities among many members of the Athletic Department, and with good reason. Some of their tasks include arranging motel accommodations for teams, members of the media and officials, distributing tickets, reserving practice times, arranging for security, allowing for the distribution of programs and souvenirs, setting up press conferences and a variety of other jobs that the television cameras never pick up.

"A lot of it has to be done before you put it in a bid," explained John Heisler, Associate Sports Information Director and Tournament Media Coordinator. Notre Dame entered its bid in August of 1986.

"You have to submit a whole budget by that time, in terms of what it's going to cost you to put on a tournament," Heisler continued. "So you've got to have a pretty good game plan to start with. We certainly have an advantage in that we've done it before. We know what it takes to get it done."

The 1985 tournament brought in a revenue of approximately $350,000 and cost Notre Dame $59,000 to run, O'Brien said. Of the remaining $300,000, Notre Dame was allowed to keep 20 percent, or $60,000, O'Brien added. The rest was returned to the NCAA.

Notre Dame will keep 20 percent again this year. The expenses will be nearly the same, O'Brien said, and add that he thinks the event will bring in about $360,000 this time around.

One difficult aspect of hosting the tournament is to keep the local fans happy. Notre Dame season ticket holders were sent ticket order forms in advance this year, according to Ticket Manager Mike Bobinski. They were guaranteed seats, but not the same seats they have for Notre Dame games. After that sale (in which the local area is sold out), tickets were made available to the general public.

"It's really not our event, it's the NCAA's event and they impose a lot of guidelines on us," said Bobinski. "We lose a lot of the lower seats because of the extra media and because all the teams will most likely bring their bands along.

When the team bids go out each year, Friday, the eight school's Monday will be playing at the Joyce ACC will receive pre-made booklets with information about their arrangements, O'Brien said. Then a different kind of work begins.

"As soon as we find out who's coming here," says Bobinski, "we have to find out if they will be able to use all their allotment. Each team is allotted 250 tickets. If not, those tickets are available to the public.

O'Brien said responsibility for the Athletic Department this year in NCAA drug testing, which was not done in the 1985 tournament.

Trainer Jim Russ will act as the Drug Testing Coordinator during the tournament. He will set up equipment away from the lockerroom facilities, which will be assisted by NCAA officials to test certain athletes.

Testing this year will be even more complicated than in last year's tournament, Heisler said.

"Last year, everybody knew they were going to be tested after the first round games," Heisler explained. "This year, the NCAA is not going to announce it in advance. We've just got to be ready."

Lax starts year in Colorado
Western swing includes important date with Air Force

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

While the majority of Notre Dame students will be enjoying their spring Break skiing in the Florida sun, skiing in the Rocky Mountains, or spending time visiting hometown friends, the Notre Dame lacrosse team will be opening its season in a four-game road swing through Colorado.
The Irish will face the Colorado School of Mines, Colorado College, the Air Force Academy and the University of Colorado. Notre Dame has never played Air Force before. That game will take on further significance because at the end of the season the Irish and the Falcons should be in contention for the NCAA Tournament's Western bid.
That fact is not lost on Irish coach Rich O'Leary. In his fifth year as the Irish coach, O'Leary sees the four-game trip as a crucial determinant for the success of the season. The Irish will attempt to improve on last year's 7-5 record.

"I'd like us to come back from the spring trip to Colorado at least, and possibly four, games," said O'Leary. "I'd like to come back having beat Air Force."

O'Leary expressed the hope that a win against the Falcons would propel the Irish on to later success. "I think we will go into Ohio State and Michigan State, who are also early favorites to win the West, and that the victory would particularly aid the progress of this year's squad."

The reserved bid was employed last season in order to give the traditionally weaker "Western" teams adequate representation in the tournament, which is usually dominated by Eastern schools. O'Leary said that victories against the Buckeyes and Spartans could mean winning the Great Lakes Lacrosse Association and, combined with a victory over Air Force, would make Notre Dame "the representa­ tive to the NCAA's."

O'Leary's hopes are sup­ ported by his assessment of the team's progress thus far. He said last Sunday's scrimmage with Michigan State and two months of practice have been encouraging. He added that the team can depend on senior tri­ caps Tom Lanahan, Art Brady, and John McNicholas to provide the leadership that is needed on the rather young team.

Against Michigan State our style of play was very aggres­ sive and we passed the ball very well," said O'Leary. "We consistently came up with very good plays and put a lot of pres­ sure on their defense. It was a team effort."

O'Leary praised the out­ standing play in the scrim­ mage from "people we ex­ pected to do well," particularly the tri-captains and attackman John O'Meara and Jeff Shay. He also said that junior middle Dave Kidder is playing well and that sophomore middie Mike Quigley "is looking better and could be a starter soon."

The most surprising play of the scrimmage may have come from three freshman middies (Pete Gillen, Mark Brady, and John Capano) who "all played very well," according to O'Leary.
The Notre Dame defense suffered a setback against Mich­ igan State when sophomore Jeff Salamon suffered a knee injury which required surgery. It is doubtful he will return this season.

Junior Kevin O'Connor "seems to be leading the defense now," according to O'Leary, while senior Randy McDonald and junior Doug Spencer also remain defensive keys.

Senior Matt McQuillan has returned from academic in­ eligibility to begin his third season as the starting goalie. McQuillan did not play against the Spartans because of a prior commit­ ment, but O'Leary said that McQuillan's backup, soph­ omore Jeff Glazer, had "a very good game in goal. He's im­ proved tremendously from last year."

Practicing in the Laos All­ Sports Center has particularly aided the progress of this year's squad.

"We met early as a team and decided we would put more time into practice, and the in­ door facility has made a big dif­ ference," said O'Leary. "It has allowed us to play aggressively and very hard from the begin­ ning and has helped us play bet­ ter as a team."

The lineup is just about set, with freshmen Barry Biddle and Nick Esasky anchoring the in­ field at first and third and Bo DiCarlo at catcher. Young Barry Larkin is the everyday shortstop and Jeff Treadway is sensing experience at second with 6-foot-4-inch Dave Concepcion in a platoon.

Center fielder Eric Davis was the best player in baseball for the first half of last season and now Rose needs a full year from the talented young man.

Reds tired of being bridesmaids

Associated Press

PLANT CITY, Fla. - The Cincinnati Bridesmaids have had enough of trying to catch the bride's bouquet.

For three straight years, the Bridesmaids have finished second in the National League West, beaten out in order by Los Angeles, Houston and San Francisco.

The Cincinnati hopes this is its year.

Reds Manager Pete Rose has a club that is just about set and most importantly, has a new look and, he says, a better­ looking pitching staff.

"We hope it's better," Rose said. "We think it's better. We've got some good, young arms."

There is a distinct shortage of that commodity in baseball these days. So far, right, the Bridesmaids could be in business.

The rotation is headed by Danny Jackson, imported from Kansas City in a winter trade, and Tim Brong, a former 20-game winner who won half that number last season and even spent some time in the minors.

Behind them are Dennis Rasmussen, who won 13 games for the New York Yankees and Cin­ cinnati last season, and last season, and last season, and John Robinson, coming off arthro­ scopic elbow surgery.

The bullpen looks like the Guy Hoffman. Or he could be Jose Rijo, acquired from Oakland in the Dave Parker trade, or he could even be Mario Soto, once the ace of this staff and trying to come back after two years worth of shoulder troubles.

The bullpen is solid with John Franco, who won eight games and saved 32 others last year, and Rob Murphy and Frank Williams, who appeared in 87 and 85 games respectively.

Besides Rijo, the Brides­maids also acquired another pitcher, Tim Buss, in the trade. More important­ ly, they opened up a lineup spot for some young talent that has been waiting for a chance to play.

The lineup is just about set, with veterans Buddy Bell and Nick Esasky anchoring the in­ field at first and third and Bo DiCarlo at catcher. Young Barry Larkin is the everyday shortstop and Jeff Treadway shares second with 6-foot-4-inch Dave Concepcion in a platoon.

Center fielder Eric Davis was the best player in baseball for the first half of last season and now Rose needs a full year from the talented young man.

Irish beat Goshen, end skid

By STEVE MEGARGEE

Three Notre Dame pitchers combined to hurl a one-hitter, as the Irish blanked Goshen College 10-0 Thursday at Jake Kline Field to end their five-game losing streak.

Erik Madsen started and allowed no hit in his five-inning stint. Madsen fanned the first Irish batter--Tim Hubson--and then retired the next nine Irish batters, striking out four. Madsen was relieved by Kevin Kerns, who came on in the seventh and was perfect in his one inning of work.

"Madsen had been inconsistent, and he needed to show me that he could throw strikes," said first-year Irish coach Pat Murphy. "I was really happy that we were finally getting innings out of him here in Goshen.

"Madsen's groundout retired Sass, but Dave Yawman's fly ball was dropped by Warrior outfielder Sam Glick. The error by Glick, who had just entered the game at the start of the inning, allowed Lund and Mosher to score. The Irish broke the game open in the fifth, scoring six runs to take an 8-0 lead. Tim Hubson had the big hit of the inning, hitting down the right field line to score Mike Coak and Dan Peltier. The triple gave Hubson a team-leading 15 runs batted in for the season.

Moshier and Terry Andrysiak also played big roles in the rally. Moshier singled, then advanced to second when the ball went through the Goshen outfielder's legs. Hubson and Lund scored on the play. Two batters later, Kevin Kerns came on in the seventh, allowing just a bunt single by Mark Gerber. Kerns came on in the seventh and was perfect in his one inning of work.

"Madsen had been inconsistent, and he needed to show me that he could throw strikes," said first-year Irish coach Pat Murphy. "I was really happy that we were finally getting innings out of him here in Goshen.

With the Irish pitchers toying with Goshen's batters, Notre Dame (2-5) also had a little trouble at the plate in the early going. The Irish left four men on base in the first three innings.

"With it being a cold day, I think the weather had something to do with the hitting," said Murphy. "We were a little tight at first."

Notre Dame broke the scoreless tie in the fourth inning without the benefit of a hit. Darren Miller, replacing Goshen starter Tom Bennett, walked James Sass and Ed Lund to lead off the inning.

Mike Moshier's grounder retired Sass, but Dave Yawman's fly ball was dropped by Warrior outfielder Sam Glick. The error by Glick, who had just entered the game at the start of the inning, scored Lund and Moshier. The Irish broke the game open in the fifth, scoring six runs to take an 8-0 lead. ND meets Dayton in finale
Basketball team aims for 20-win season, NCAA berth

To a lot of Spring Break-bound students, Dayton is a connecting point for flights to southern hotspots.

To the Notre Dame basketball team, it's a chance to stay hot and secure a connection to the NCAA Tournament in its season finale.

The Irish head to Dayton this Saturday (2:15 EST, Dayton Arena) seeking their fifth straight 20-win season and fourth straight NCAA bid.

"We've got a chance to win 20 games and that's one of our goals each year," said Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps. "I'm sure our players understand what's out there. This is a chance for us to grab the No. 1 seed, and finish 20-8 with eight wins in our last nine games."

The Flyers have had a little trouble getting out of the ground this season, entering the contest with a 13-17 record. Head Coach Don Donohoe's team is coming off a nip-and-tuck battle with Miami (Fla.) which Notre Dame pulled out, 90-89. The Flyers had five players in double digits for the game, led by 6-9 junior Steve Pettman, who poured in 30 points. Anthony Corbit, a 6-7 sophomore swingman, paces Dayton's attack with 16.1 points and 6.3 rebounds per outing. Negele Knight, a 6-2 sophomore guard, averages 14.6 points a game while Pettman chips in 12.5 points and 6.7 rebounds.

Despite the Flyers' lackluster record, this series which Notre Dame leads 18-9 has consistently featured tight contests. Like 1987 when Marquette, Dayton joins Notre Dame as one of the four 'Great Independents' of the Midwest.

With NCAA Tournament bids just four days away, many selection committee members decide, or guess, who was invited to the dance and where they were dancing.

It's difficult because you have to ensure two teams from the same conference can't meet until a regional final. Four hours after we started, we thought we finally had it -- until we were forecasting how the tournament would go and had Illinois playing Purdue in a regional semifinal.

A lot of the seeds had to be juggled in order to keep teams away from each other as well as keep teams home in the first and second round. Yes, keep them home. Face it, the committee has never kicked a team off its home court, and they probably aren't going to do it again.

A large part of our decisions on seedings was based on the NCAA strength of schedule rating (Notre Dame's is 36 of 260) and Sagarin power ratings, which have been remarkably accurate the last few years.

So here it is, our choices for the NCAA Tournament:

Here are the Tournament pairings (we think)

With one or two exceptions, we have only one team from each region. And the one team we have from each region is either Notre Dame, Boston College, Villanova, or Kentucky.

Western Regional (finals at Seattle)
at Los Angeles
• No. 1 Arizona vs. No. 16 Lehigh
• No. 8 LSU vs. No. 9 Maryland
• No. 5 Loyola, Calif. vs. No. 14 California
• No. 4 UNLV vs. No. 13 Ohio State

at Salt Lake City
• No. 6 Vanderbilt vs. No. 11 Seton Hall
• No. 3 Duke vs. No. 14 Utah
• No. 7 Missouri vs. No. 16 SMU
• No. 2 Pittsburgh vs. No. 15 Boise State

Southeast Regional (finals at Atlanta)
at Cincinnati
• No. 1 Purdue vs. No. 16 Southern
• No. 8 Auburn vs. No. 9 Louisville
• No. 5 Xavier (Ohio) vs. No. 12 Murray St.
• No. 4 Georgetown vs. No. 13 Arkansas Little Rock

at Atlantic City
• No. 6 Georgia Tech vs. No. 11 Rhode Island
• No. 3 BYU vs. No. 14 N.C. Charlotte
• No. 7 Arkansas vs. No. 19 Iowa St.
