ND may host political debate

By JIM LANG News Staff

The 2000 students who registered to vote in St. Joseph's county could play a crucial role in the upcoming 3rd District Congressional race according to Ed Jordanich, one of the Stu dent Government liaisons to the Hall President's Council. Jordanich, speaking to last night's council in Lewis Hall, said that in the last congressional race the outcome was determined by a mere 47 votes. Because of the large amount of student voters, Jordanich said, and the small amount of votes dividing the two candidates the last election, challenger Tom Ward has agreed to a debate with incumbent John Hiler on the Notre Dame campus.

Hiler is receptive to the idea, though the candidates have not yet agreed on a time or date.

If and when the debate is held, Jordanich said that students should force the candidates to address student issues, and should try to be as informed as possible about the two candidates and their stands on the issues.

In other business, Morrissey Co-President Tom King told the council about an amendment to the Student Constitution, which the council will vote on next Tuesday, regarding the absence policy of senators at the weekly senate meetings.

Formerly a Senator was reviewed for "excessive absences" from the meetings, King said, but the new policy will call for a review after a Senator has accumulated three

Shroud thought to be burial cloth of Christ could be a clever forgery

Associated Press

ROME Laboratory tests show the Shroud of Turin was made in the 14th century and could not be the burial cloth of Christ, the scientific adviser to the archbishop of Turin said he learned on Tuesday.

Professor Luigi Gonella said he has not yet seen the official report from the three laboratories that conducted the carbon-14 dating tests, but that all the leaks to the press dated it to the 14th century and "somebody let me understand that the rumors were right."

"It is quite evident somebody sold out to the press," said Gonella in an interview from his home in Turin. He refused to identify who had told him about the results of the tests at Oxford University, the University of Arizona and the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at the University of Zurich.

The shroud, 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide, bears the faint, blood-stained image of a whipped and crucified man. Some have maintained the herringbone patterned linen is the burial cloth of Christ, while others have dismissed it as a clever forgery.

The shroud was removed April 21 from the silver chest where it is kept wrapped in red silk on an altar in the cathedral in Turin.

A strip, four-tenths of an inch by 2.8 inches, was cut from the cloth and then divided into three smaller pieces for the labor-"wires, each of which got one piece, in addition to another piece of cloth of a known age.

Teaching has few bucks but many great rewards

Room 110 was empty at 8 a.m. Monday morning, but by 8:10 the students began filing in, taking their respective seats. Strangely, the students were smiling and laughing, seemingly unaffected by the early hour.

This was definitely not freshman calculus or physics, notorious for meeting at 8 a.m. in the obscene hours of the morning. The conversations in the room were not of the weekend's tailgaiting or romance, but rather of Sunday's trip to grandma's house and the latest Saturday morning cartoons.

These are the students I encountered in a first grade class at a South Bend elementary school I visited as part of an education class which is taught at Saint Mary's.

Education 311, Teaching as a Profession, the course I am taking as an elective this semester, is designed to give students first-hand, practical experience and knowledge of the field.

This first day brought back many memories of grade school. It is not the subjects we studied that I remember so well, but saying the Pledge of Allegiance, the ritualistic lunch count, smile faces on papers, words of praise, and the ever-present threat of my name on the board for not following directions.

The three short hours of my visit to the class I encountered all these things and more.

The children took great interest in the topics they were discussing. Questions were met with enthusiastically raised hands reaching for the sky, and at times accompanied by appropriate sighs, groans, and exclamations.

When a child's mother surprised the class with a recently captured praying mantis, the students were not disappointed. I have the fascination and curiosity unique to childhood. For these children their reactions matched them to most new discoveries in a fearless and open-minded manner.

Teaching is not a highly esteemed profession in our society. Most view it as a career with few rewards. Yet, my visit to the first grade class reinforced my belief in the education of young children. The rewards are often overlooked because they are not of monetary nature.

However, the satisfaction one receives in seeing a child grasp a new concept, cannot be measured. The open and trusting nature of children is a welcome change to adult world threats of cutthroat competition and false allegiances for material or personal gain.

Those with an interest in teaching should not be put off by the prospect of a lower starting salary, for teaching can provide one of the highest degrees of job satisfaction. The future of our country is dependent on raising the quality of education. There is a need for creative and motivated people who will be dedicated to making the present system more successful and workable.

Those entering the field today will most likely be involved in exciting reform movements of the educational process. It is true that teachers are underpaid. Consider the responsibilities of the teacher to not only educate, but to instill values, supply guidance, and provide encouragement. Teachers play a large role in the development of a child as an individual who will become an asset to society. For these reasons teaching should be a more highly paid profession, if for no other reason than to attract the most qualified candidates.

Teachers deserve our utmost respect for their efforts. Most everyone has fond memories of a favorite teacher who has inspired them to demand more from themselves and to fulfill their potential. Each of us is in some way indebted to teachers in their past. After all, without them you would not be reading this column.

Lecture discusses move of Chile to democracy

By KELLEY TUTHILL

Veronica Montecinos, a Faculty Fellow from the Kellogg Institute for International Studies, spoke yesterday about the transition to democracy in Chile.

The lecture began with Montecinos making the point that, "the opposition to the military government in Chile expects to defeat General Pinochet in the coming plebiscite of October 5." Montecinos said that this would be a vital event in the transition to democracy.

"In the last few years, many government and opposition leaders in Chile have suggested that the transition to democracy should result in the building of a 'modern and stable democracy,'" said Montecinos.

For those in the government, a modern democracy consists of the "depoliticization" of politics with more of a technocratic approach to decision-making, said Montecinos.

Montecinos spoke of the importance of the economic system in the party politics since the coup. "Economists have played leading roles in the design of institutions and strategies intended to bring parties of the Center, Right, and Left together," said Montecinos.

Montecinos said that in the majority of the parties' policies there is a consensus that democratization of the economy should result in the transition to democracy in the political environment. "I would like to argue, however, that the political role of economists cannot be an indicator of more profound changes in Chilean politics," said Montecinos.

Montecinos said that technical expertise has been growing in government agencies well before the military came to power. "But Congress, and parties, especially on the Right and the Left, had lagged behind in this trend towards professionalization."

"The process of transition to democracy will force a change in the culture of politicians who have understood the contents of national production through efficient import substitution," she added.

She also insisted that, "Production should be mainly in the hands of the private sector, although with active participation by the state, and that to overcome extreme income inequality and poverty, a more active social policy is necessary."

"The importance of markets in the economy, the right of the state to adjust market signals to policy goals, the importance of integration in the international economy through the development of the export sector, and the importance of assuring the competitiveness of national production through efficient import substitution."

"Perhaps the process of transition to democracy will force a change in the culture of politicians who have understood the contents of national production through efficient import substitution," she added.

"The centrality of parties in the Chilean political system has inspired a lively debate on whether or not the party system could also make it more difficult for bureaucratic teams in government to ignore party politics."

"Speaking about party professionalism, Montecinos said that, "increased professionalism of party structures could make it more difficult for bureaucratic teams in government to ignore party politics."

"She said in conclusion, "It could also make it more difficult for political parties to concentrate on taking advantage of every setback in government policies."

Two seniors from Alumni on their way to becoming bridge masters

By Florentine Hoekler

Two Notre Dame students recently entered and won a regional bridge tournament. Yet, they say they have quite a distance to cover before they are really successful bridge players.

Matt Beuter and Fred Heidenreich, senior roommates in Alumni Hall, competed September 16-18 in Indianapolis.

As winners, they each received a plaque and both came closer to reaching the ultimate goal of bridge players: becoming "life masters."

Although Beuter and Heidenreich have been playing bridge for more than 12 years, Beuter says "we're constantly learning new things. Tournament bridge is likely the most complicated card game there is, and we can't honestly be compared to any other card game. It takes months just to play proficiently."

"Once proficiency is reached, the next step is to accumulate points by winning and, when ready, to join the American Contract Bridge League (ACBL)."

There are degrees of points which depend on the size and prestige of each tournament: national tournaments award gold points, regional tournaments award red points, sectional award silver points, and ordinary club games award black points.

To obtain the status of life master, a total of 300 points is needed, but there are provisions. Of the 300 points, 25 must be gold, 25 must be red, and 50 must be silver. The remaining 200 may be a mixture of any of the colors.

This was not the first win for Beuter and Heidenreich. "We've won before, but that was in novice games. Now we're one step up. We hope to play at the Grand National in Nashville, which is a week-long tournament."

"The two are far from being life masters: they only received 3.54 points at the regional tournament. "Becoming a life master is a long process," reported Beuter."

"Nap is apparently not as popular among Notre Dame students. Although there was a club last year, its weekly games at Alumni Hall lasted for one year and then opened. Beuter said, "No other students play tournament bridge, or we would see them. I just wish more people played."

Three graduates receive awards

The Notre Dame Alumni Association will present three of its nine annual awards to graduates of the University this fall, according to Charles Lennon, Jr., the Association's executive director.

John Gilligan, director of Notre Dame's Institute for International Peace Studies, will receive the John J. Cavanaugh Award, named after the University's 14th president, is annually given to a Notre Dame graduate for distinguished community service.

Retired Marine Brig. Gen. Vincente "Benn" Blaz will receive the Rev. William Corby Award during halftime ceremonies of the October 22 Notre Dame-Air Force football game. General Blaz, the first native of Guam to become a regular officer in the armed forces of the United States, has served on U.S. negotiating teams at Helsinki and Geneva. The Corby Award, named for the University president who distinguished himself during the battle of Gettysburg as chaplain to the Union Army's Irish Brigade, is given annually to a graduate who has done exemplary service in this country's armed forces.

Kat Finkbeiner followed and tried to prevent him from leaving the room. Coursey said, but when they scuffled, Finkbeiner was shot in the hand and mouth. Wilson got by Finkbeiner and opened fire in a classroom, wounding five students and killing Shelli Bradley, Coursey said.

After emptying his pistol, Wilson dropped it. Finkbeiner told him to raise his hands and made him stay in place until a police officer arrived, the chief said.

Those who know Finkbeiner said her action came as no surprise, said Gay McHugh, principal at Lakeview Elementary School, where Finkbeiner also teaches.

When she heard a physical education teacher had helped stop the gunman, "I knew immediately it had to be her. She is always willing to go that extra mile," McHugh said.

Penny Dean, who used to teach at Oakland, said Finkbeiner "thinks about others before herself."

Dean said Finkbeiner "really cares about people. Everything she does she does with gusto."

Finkbeiner was in fair condition Tuesday at Self Memorial Hospital and has not yet talked with police, said spokesman Dan Branyon. A second teacher was in good condition.

City Recorder Ted Windham denied bond Tuesday for Wilson, and retired state Supreme Court Justice Bruce Littlejohn, acting as a special judge, ordered Wilson to undergo psychiatric examination.

Relations said Wilson, 19, had been in and out of a hospital psychiatric ward.

Coursey said Tuesday that Wilson was charged with murder and other charges were being drawn up to be served after the psychological evaluation. Solicitor Townes Jones said his office will consider the death penalty.

Superintendent Watson said he knew of no connection between the gunman and the school.

"I don't know if we'll ever have a motive," Coursey said.

Wilson's father, James Wilson, said his son is a hyperactive recluse who had been admitted to Self Memorial's psychotic ward three or four times in the past eight months.
Fundraising starts for United Way

Rev. E. William Beauchamp, executive assistant to the President and general campaign chairman of the St. Joseph County United Way, announced Tuesday that the St. Joseph County United Way’s 1988 goal is a record-setting $1,405,000. Beauchamp’s remarks were made at the United Way Kick-off Luncheon held in the Monogram Room at the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

“We need to stress that it’s our campaign,” Beauchamp said. “The United Way is so much a part of our lives and so much a part of the community. Notre Dame is a part of that community,” said Beauchamp.

University President Edward A. Malloy added that Notre Dame’s involvement with the United Way fundraising campaign reaffirms the sense of Notre Dame’s commitment for the well being of the South Bend Community.

“We have an awful lot to give and we are necessary to each other,” The United Way is about helping people and there is no better way to describe a university’s goal than to help people,” said Malloy.

The campaign will directly involve the students, faculty, and administrators at the University. Dr. Emil T. Hofman heads the faculty staff fundraising committee and Melissa Smith will direct the efforts of students.

Funds raised from the local United Way campaign will serve 36 local agencies and more than 2,000 volunteers.

In addition to posters and flyers, Adworks can also supply caps, hats, t-shirts and other novelty items for dorm social events or SYR.”

Junior class Matt Breslin said that Class of ’80 boxer shorts are on sale in the Junior Class Office, and that dorm reps will also be selling them in the dorms.

Ind. man held for murder of woman

CARMEL, Ind. - A Carmel man was jailed on a charge of murder Tuesday after leading authorities to the nude and battered body of a woman who had been missing three days.

William Wallace, 26, was being held without bail Tuesday night in the Hamilton County Jail in Noblesville after being arraigned in the afternoon.

Dr. Michael Clark, pathologist for the Marion County coroner's office, said the victim, Carla Auda, 21, had been asphyxiated. She was last seen leaving a bowling alley Friday night.

The bowling alley, Woodland Bowl, is about 10 miles down 96th Street from body was found early Tuesday along the White River on the Hamilton-Marion county line.

Deputy Marion County Coroner Jack Lyday said the body was face-down under three logs and that grass had been pulled up and scattered on the logs to help conceal it.

Wounds on the victim's face suggested she had been beaten, he said. The body could have been there since Friday night, he added.

The victim's clothing was found in a tree about 15 feet away, Lyday said.

Sgt. Mitch Russell of the Hamilton County sheriff's department said investigators recovered a Burger King uniform of the kind Auda was wearing when she disappeared Friday night.

In an attempt to strengthen the security aspects on the SMC campus, the Student Task Force and Notre Dame need be applauded for their cooperative response to the petition. I especially like to thank Fr. Tyson and Mr. Rakow of Notre Dame, Sr. Karol Jackowski and Mr. Mclaughlin.

The Observer is the independent newspaper present the views of their authors. In actuality these student bodies have expanded to a greater and more exciting reality. That is, between the two Notre Dame students for the November elections.

Since then, the campus community has been buzzing with excitement. The people of the campus have been debating who to vote for and who is the better candidate for the upcoming presidential election. However, the most important thing that has been discussed is the quality of student housing, and local politicians take notice of our concerns. For the first time in many years, we have the ability to make a difference in the environment in which we live.

In addition to invitations that SUB and student government will extend to the local candidates, a voter information campaign will begin in October. This program will seek to inform students about who is running for the various offices and what that candidate, in the end, hopes to achieve.

The time has come for the South Bend community to take students seriously. The way to do that is for students to speak loudly, and with one unified voice on election day.

Dear Editor:

I realize Mom and Dad have taught all of you basic safety precautions, but I hope now that they will follow their advice a little closer. For the large group of people who will be traveling to large cities next year, such basic rules as not walking alone past 9 p.m., and never entering a deserted street, might just save your life. Remember also, that South Bend is not exactly Dial-a-Cab, as getting lost in the South Bronx that always blankets the Notre Dame campus during the autumn weekends. Therefore, when I'm off campus, I always have a backup plan, and I know. Good luck to all of you, and remember, your life is the most precious thing you control.

TREATY WITH GOVERNMENT

Dear Editor:

Although I got to know Judith only recently, there was a kind of romance with her. Born was our intention from the class of '88, Judith Anne Wrapp.

Although I got to know Judith only during the last few months, she was a unique personality which left a lasting impression on you immediately. She was witty and attractive, but most of all she was devoted. Devoted to a heart. She was devoted to a heart. She was devoted to a heart. She was devoted to a heart. She was devoted to a heart.

She died on the streets of Brooklyn.

I saw her tarpaulin covered body, lifeless, on the television news. It was then that I realized how fragile and precious life really is. At about the same time I decided to write this piece as a tribute to Judith's memory, and in the hope that such a horrid situation will never befall any of you.

I realize Mom and Dad have taught all of you basic safety precautions, but I hope now that they will follow their advice a little closer. For the large group of people who will be traveling to large cities next year, such basic rules as not walking alone past 9 p.m., and never entering a deserted street, might just save your life. Remember also, that South Bend is not exactly Dial-a-Cab, as getting lost in the South Bronx that always blankets the Notre Dame campus during the autumn weekends. Therefore, when I'm off campus, I always have a backup plan, and I know. Good luck to all of you, and remember, your life is the most precious thing you control.

WSND a sound alternative for music lovers

HAO TRAN

For most of us at Notre Dame, classical music is not first on our list of listening favorites. Consequently, the University FM station which broadcasts from the clocktower of O'Shaughnessy Hall began several decades ago. It airs from 7 a.m. until 2 a.m. The channel's listening radius encompasses about 50 miles, which means it attracts audiences in three different states. Students and a few volunteers from the Michiana area run the station. Tara Creedon, the student manager of WSND, said, "The station's primary goal this year is to make students aware of where we are and what we have to offer them." What WSND has to offer is not only abundant but also unique and diverse.

Primarily classical music is played during the day from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m. Three special shows add a little spice to the day programming. They are called Daybreak from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m.; Meridian from 12 p.m. to 3 p.m.; and Tafelmusik from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. A Jazz show is featured on every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 10 p.m. until midnight. This show varies from classic to contemporary jazz. The Monday show highlights audience requests which may be called in at 239-7342.

"Definitely one of our most innovative and exciting features is the Nocturne Nightflight. We hope to bring in a lot of University listeners through this show," says Jim Mendenhall, a DJ and head of the WSND news staff. The Nocturne Nightflight features a variety of music alternatives including progressive, reggae, classic rock, cutting edge and new age music depending on the DJ's preference.

WSND also has much to offer in the way of news. Regular newscasts are aired at 7:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., and 5:30 p.m. A special news show called the McNeil-Lehrer NewsHour features a current topic each day at 7 p.m.

New musical organization sounds clear as a bell

COLLEEN GANNON

Starting a new organization at Notre Dame is not an easy task to perform. Senior Paul Wagauspack could attest to the validity of this statement. Wagauspack tried to form a Notre Dame handbell choir two years ago, but he was unable to put it all together. It was not until this year that the handbell choir established itself as a permanent Notre Dame activity.

Handbell choirs originated in Europe, where they systematically rang large power bells. Instead of practicing and disturbing the entire town, they used handbells to practice without disturbing anyone. The bells ranged from the size of a basketball to the size of a tea cup.

Currently, the handbell choir has 25 bells giving it two octaves. When Wagauspack began organizing the choir, the University had two octaves of Dutch bells, but these bells are not good for choir use. Last year, the choir had to borrow bells from a local church. Over this past summer, the choir managed to sell the old Dutch bells and to purchase two octaves of American Schulmerich bells. The choir is hoping to get a third octave next semester and to eventually have a total of five octaves. Unfortunately, the bells are very expensive. The two octaves the choir obtained cost $2,200.

The handbell choir performs at a variety of weekend Masses at Sacred Heart Church and at special Masses, such as this year's opening Mass. The choir will also be performing around the Notre Dame campus during the Christmas season. The choir is currently made up of ten members ranging from freshmen to seniors. Steve Warner, the Director of Liturgical Music, has been very supportive of the handbell choir from the start. Warner helps the choir with paperwork and booking their performances.

The choir usually holds two practices a week in which Wagauspack leads the choir. Senior Claire Harbeck said, "Paul is very patient. He has an ear for music, and he is able to pick up the choir's mistakes and correct them."

Harbeck had never played handbells before joining the choir last year. She found it very easy to learn to play the handbells with her strong musical background. She feels rhythm and the ability to read music are essential in learning to play the handbells.

In tune with the station's innovative musical Nocturne Nightflight is a news commentary show called Ideas and Issues. This show, compiled totally by students on the news staff, features major events at Notre Dame and the surrounding area. The feature consists of an interview and two news summaries. Tentatively, panel discussions and international news will be included in the commentary. WSND is another University sponsored facility which is not fully utilized by the student body. But with this year's attempts to make the students more aware of the station, that situation is subject to change.

SMC tennis wins, runs record to 7-0

By JANE SHEA
SMC Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's tennis team breezed by Tri-State University Monday, continuing its undefeated season. The Belles' record now stands at 7-0.

"Tri-State has just returned to the district after a five-year absence," said Head Coach Deb Laverie.

In singles, the Belles lost only two games. Charlene Szajko, a senior, led the team with her exceptional play. Szajko, who played in the number one position, easily won her match 6-1, 6-0.

"We hope to dominate the Districts," said Laverie. "That is what is fueling us to keep concentrating and working."

Jennifer Block and Sarah Mayer have also been playing well and both won their singles matches 6-0, 6-0.

"We should beat Taylor University," said Laverie. "Our team is looking very good and working hard."

The Belles play at Taylor Friday.

Taylor, others to return

Associated Press

NEW YORK - All-Pros Lawrence Taylor and Bruce Smith and three other players who were suspended for 30 days when they failed NFL drug tests during the preseason were reinstated by the league Tuesday. NFL spokesman Joe Browne said that Taylor, the star linebacker of the New York Giants, and Buffalo Bills defensive end Smith were reinstated along with linebacker Emanuel King and cornerback Daryl Smith of the Cincinnati Bengals and receiver John Taylor of the San Francisco 49ers.

All five players were on their teams' non-football illness list and missed the first four games this season. Taylor's suspension was due to end Tuesday, while the other four were allowed to return a few days early "as an accommodation to the players and their teams," Browne said. All of them were eligible to play this weekend once the suspensions were lifted.

The respective teams can ask the league for a one-game roster exemption for the reinstated players. The players will "continue to receive appropriate counseling and treatment, and reinstatement is on the condition of their totally refraining from further violations of the NFL substance abuse policy," Browne said.
Soviets stunned USA 82-76

Associated Press

SEOUl. The U.S. basketball team lost the second game in its glorious Olympic history Tuesday, bowing to the Soviets 82-76 in a grudge match that has brewed for 16 years and three seconds.

The U.S. went into its semi-final game against the Soviets trying to avenge the only loss on its 85-1 Olympic record, but now the best the Americans can do is a bronze medal while the Soviets go for gold.

In 1972 at Munich, America met the Soviet Union for the gold medal, and, after the final three seconds were played twice because of referee error and a scoreboard malfunction, the Soviets won 51-50.

So angered was the U.S. team that it refused to accept the silver medal.

"Every day Russian people and Russian journalists and TV talk about historic three seconds in Munich," said Alexander Goremisky, who is coaching his sixth Olympics for the Soviets. "This is a good story, and I like it to be same here."

Steve Lewis led a 1-2-3 sweep of the 400 meters, just one-hundredth of a second off the 20-year-old Olympic record and three more boxers advanced to the semifinals, assured of at least a bronze medal.

Lewis won the 400-meter gold in 43.87 seconds, and favored teammate Butch Reynolds, who holds the world record of 43.29, was second in 43.90. Another American, Danny Everett, took the bronze in 44.09. Lewis' time was just .01 seconds off the Olympic mark by Lee Evans of the United States in Mexico City in 1968.

Three more U.S. boxers, meanwhile advanced into the semifinals, where they are assured of at least a bronze medal. The United States has eight of its 12 boxers still in action, including six in the semifinals.

Those advancing Wednesday morning were Kennedy McKinney of Killeen, Texas, and Kenneth Gould of Rockford, Ill., and Ray Mercer of Jacksonville, Fla.

McKinney scored a 5-0 victory over Stephen Wmewa of Kenya in the 119-pound division, and Gould was a unanimous winner over Joni Nyman of Finland at 147 pounds. Mercer knocked out Italian Luigi Gaudiano and stopped him in the first round of their 201-pound fight.

Olympic gold in record time. Johnson's use of stanozolol symbolizes the universality of steroids in athletics. A related story is at right.

Johnson scandal is 'tip of the iceberg'

Associated Press

SEOUl. Ben Johnson is gone, but his shadow will forever remain a dark Olympic monument to the use of drugs in sports.

Johnson's dramatic disqualification, perhaps the biggest embarrassment in Olympic history, hung heavy over the Games Wednesday, shifting attention from remarkable individual performances to a shocking drug scandal.

Johnson was stripped of the gold medal and his world record time of 9.99 seconds for the 100-meter dash after his urine sample revealed traces of the anabolic steroid stanozolol.

"The sport is getting wild with so many people on drugs and those not on drugs are trying to keep up with those on it. It's very difficult to keep up," said American Calvin Smith, who moved up to take the bronze in the 100.

And Dr. Arne Ljungqvist, head of the IAAF's medical commission, said the problem might stretch well beyond the Canadian sprinter.

"We only test the top international athletes in the top international competitions," he said. "We must consider this is the tip of the iceberg."

Drew Harrison, Canadian rowing coach, said: "So much sponsors' money is involved. So much depends on the highest performance, that a small percentage of people will always try and do it the easy way, away with it. Money always talks."

The Johnson revelation rocked the Games, which until then had been celebrating multimedals sweeps by athletes like swimmers Kristin Otto of East Germany and Matt Biondi of the United States.

Johnson's gold medal went, instead, to rival Carl Lewis, who finished second in the 100-meter race, and it belatedly gave Lewis' hopes of duplicating his 1984 four gold-medal sweep. Lewis already has the long jump gold and was going for more in the 200 and 400-meter relay.

Lewis appeared at a church service Tuesday night and was upbeat, repeating a story about a dream his mother had the night before he lost to Johnson.

"My mother had a dream... abut my (late) father. He said everything would be all right. And today, it was."

Johnson's positive test remained on the minds of athletes long after the Canadian sprinter fled the Games in disgrace, flying first to New York then to his home in Toronto.

Roger Kingdom, the U.S. gold medalist in the 110-meter hurdles, did not see drugs as a widespread problem, but did question the testing procedure.

"The little only said a screw cap on," he said. "It was not sealed. . In Los Angeles and at the trials, the bottle was sealed so there could be no tampering with it. Here, you could unscrew it yourself. The kind of bottle they had made it possible for tampering to take place.

It should also be made clear that the kinds of drugs people use in sports are performance-enhancing drugs, so it is different from cocaine or heroin," Kingdom said it was frustrating for a "clean" athlete to compete against one on drugs.

"You work hard to get in shape and then someone goes out and does it the easy way," he said.

The Irish maintained their composure in game four and won as much by strategy as by skill, jumping off to a 6-1 lead before Northwestern fought back the way back to a 6-4 tie.

Notre Dame then traded points with Northwestern before pulling away to win the game 15-10 and ensure Lamberth his birthday victory.

"We can feel ourselves coming together," said Irish assistant coach Patti Hagemeier. "Our passes are improving and we're hoping we can really score big."
Future of ACHA cloudy as Kent State hockey cut

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

The future of the American Collegiate Hockey Association has yet to be determined following Kent State's one-year suspension, conference commissioner Brian Boulac stated Monday.

Kent State's program was suspended for a year following an alleged hazing incident earlier this month. That leaves just three teams—Notre Dame, Michigan-Dearith and Lake Forest—in the conference.

"I'm in the process of contacting Dearborn and Lake Forest, and we'll discuss with them the future of the conference," said Boulac, who also serves as Notre Dame's assistant athletic director and women's softball coach. "As for the future of the conference, we have to take a look at what direction all three schools want to go with their hockey programs."

Kent State University president Michael Schmitz announced the suspension last Thursday after an investigation concerning an off-campus event on Sept. 14, "especially a situation involved 12 members of Kent State's hockey team taking five freshmen players to the basement of an off-campus house, where the freshmen had their hair cut in a Mohawk style and were forced to drink a mixture of rum and beer."

One of the freshmen had an allergic reaction to the alcohol and eventually was taken to an area hospital, where he was submitted for observation before being released.

"The party was not an official university function... not authorized or known by any university officials or hockey team staff," Dearith police chief John Peach.

Criminal charges have been filed by the city police department against the 12 team members. Five were charged with underage consumption, and two for furnishing an intoxicating liquor to minors (both first-degree misdemeanors). The other five players were charged with hazing, a fourth-degree misdemeanor. The players will appear in court Tuesday. "Based on the information provided to me, I do not believe that this program is an acceptable representative of our university or our athletic program in general," Schwartz said in his official statement. "Consequently, I have suspended the program for a year and will review the future of it at a later date."

Kent State joined the ACHA with the league's inception two years ago. In the 1986-87 season, the Golden Flashes finished second in the conference with a 7-5 regular season ACHA record. Last season, Kent State failed to win a conference game and slumped to an 11-26-5 overall mark.

In the meantime, the ACHA, which thrived on its balanced competition two years ago, became essentially a two-team conference during the 1987-88 season. Michigan-Dearith won the regular-season title, and Notre Dame won the post-season conference tournament. All of Lake Forest's conference wins came against Kent State, as the Foresters posted an 0-4-1 record against Notre Dame and Dearborn.

The conference was established on June 4, 1986, under the notion that each of the member schools shared similar philosophies educationally, athletically and financially. At the time, Notre Dame was not offering hockey scholarships, but that position has since changed. Starting this season, Notre Dame is offering 10 hockey scholarships in the next four years.

Dearborn also has shown signs of wanting to upgrade its program, but as a NAIA school, that would involve a restructuring of its entire athletic department. Lake Forest currently competes at the Division III level.

Further complicating matters for the ACHA, the 1988-89 post-season tournament is scheduled to be held at Kent State on March 4-5.

"We've got three teams, and we know the top two suitable teams are, or at least we think we know," said Notre Dame co-ach Ric Schafer, who guided his team to a best-ever 27-4-2 record last season. "The weekend of the tournament is the weekend of spring break. It wouldn't matter to me if it's carried off or not. I'd just as soon go recruiting."

Notre Dame has games scheduled against Kent State on Nov. 4-5 and Feb. 17-18. Schafer indicated that it would not be much of a problem adjusting his team's schedule.

"It may mean an extra game with Merrimack, which we wouldn't mind, and it may mean two extra games with Dearborn," the second-year Irish coach said.

Swim teams practice at Rockne as Rolls undergoes construction

By ROB PIERCE

"A four-and-a-half million dollar hole in the ground..." That was how senior swimmer Bill Schmitz describes the current state of the Rollfs Aquatic Center at the JACC. An erosion in the construction has left it unused to share a limited pool time at Rockne Memorial, which includes practicing from 11 p.m. to 1 a.m. every other week.

"The effect on our schedule has been dramatic," says Irish head coach Tim Welsh, "but the Rocknek has been wonderful. Everyone worked together to make the best of a difficult situation."

However, some still fear adverse effects when the swimmers finally are able to return to Rockne. "It could have an effect," predicts junior sprinter Kathleen Quick, "especially on those swimming longer distances. They need more pool time to build up endurance."

"The Rockne is like swimming in a bathtub," said senior back-stroker Eric Bohen. "The depth of the pools is different, and that may cause a problem for the freshmen who have not competed at Rolls when they fly turn around the wall."

Practicing into the early morning has already become a drudgery for some team members.

"The late hours hurt the body schedule," claims Schmitz. "After practice, the pulse rate is up and it sometimes takes two hours to wind down and fall asleep."

But with no other alternatives, the team has made the best of the situation. And the wait is almost over.

"We should open sometime next week," said Stark. "The first home meet is not until the Notre Dame Relays on November 4th."

ND volleyball gets back on track vs. Wildcats

By MOLLY MAHONEY Special to the Tribune

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team did its best to give Irish head coach Art Lambert a happy birthday last night and in the process, a heart attack as well. But as the Northwestern and Northwestern fans had fans, and coaches, on the two teams engaged in a hard-fought seesaw battle last night, but it was the Irish who emerged victorious in four games, 15-2, 15-8, 15-13 and 15-10 to bring their record up to 6-2.

"I always enjoy a win, whether it's on my birthday or not," said Lambert. "But this is a good win over a good Northwestern team that has been a consistently good team in the Big East." Sophomore outside hitter Colleen Wagner was the catalyst, coming off the bench to tally 17 kills and 14 digs, to help fight off the scrappy Wildcats and bring the series record between the two teams to 2-2.

Seniors Janette Bennett and Mary Kate Walker led the balanced Irish attack contributing 15 and 13 kills, respectively. Walker chilled the net and recorded a team-high nine blocks. The seniors from Lawrence, Kan., helped preserve her ranking as the nation's fourth-leading player in block average, according to last week's national statistics. Senior right side hitter Maureen Shea continued her consistent play by tallying 10 kills, eight blocks and 24 digs and playing steadily throughout the four-game match.

Senior Whitney Shewman was the defensive player of the game, recording an incredible 29 digs for the match and adding to the Irish offensive onslaught with nine kills.

The victory marks the first time the Irish have bent, but not broken under the pressure of a talented opponent and kept their intensity constant. "We played well in spots," said Lambert, "but the key to the win was committing less errors than they did. They folded their tent in the fourth (game)—something that has been our pattern in the past—and we took advantage of it."

The first game set the tone for the entire match, as the Irish and Wildcats scratched and clawed their way through long volleys and side outs to painstakingly score each point. Neither team could maintain its momentum long enough to make a long scoring run, and neither team kept the Irish from getting any closer than a tie, which they did at 3-3, 7-7, 11-11 and 12-12 before succumbing to the Wildcats in the first game 15-12.

The Irish came out ready for game two behind the blocking of Walker and the powerful armswing of Bennett and Wagner, who came into the match in the first game as a substitute for fellow sophomore Tracey Shelley.

Notre Dame led the entire game, steadily accumulating points behind a strong team effort that displayed the team's most fluid game of match en route to a 15-8 win.

Game three was not quite as easy. It was a game that seemed to have more side outs on both sides than normal, but the Irish played never-say-die volleyball until the last point of the game. A balanced attack that featured a flurry of kills from Bennett, Shea and Wagner and a strong blocking tandem of Mary Kate Walker and any number of players, including setter Julie Bremmer (five blocks),

Men's soccer trips BG, women beat Chicago

Special to the Observer

The Irish extended their season-long unbeaten string to 16 games (9-0-1) and crept into this week's national ISAA top twenty poll at number 20.

Against the Falcons (4-4-0), the Irish had a chance to get one goal early to take control of the game on a penalty kick from John Guignon. The senior trio of Lynch, Stankiewicz and 32:17.

The senior trio of Lynch, Stankiewicz and Brian Lyons made five saves to eight for the Falcons' Mickey Loesch. Notre Dame had nine corner kicks to Bowling Green's three.

Although Notre Dame's win was not considered in this week's polling, the Irish moved to number 13 in the Soccer America poll as well as cracking the ISAA national top twenty. The Irish are next in action on Friday night at home against Detroit, a Midwestern Conference foe.

Elsewhere, the Notre Dame women's soccer team recorded its fifth consecutive shutout last night, beating the University of Chicago, 2-0.

Goals by K. T. Sullivan and Mimi Suba were the difference makers last night in the Irish's 2-0 victory over Bowling Green.

The Irish, now 7-2, next face St. Mary's at Notre Dame on Friday afternoon, and will then return home until Oct. 8.

One look at the Chicago Tribune headline told all that was wrong in sports. The fastest man in the world used drugs.

Here was a hard-working student and a hard-working placekicker who was polite, down-to-earth, intelligent and wanted to spend his life helping other people.

Oh yeah, and he was probably mentioned in every newspaper in the country on September 11 after kicking four field goals, the last of which put the winning points on the board for the Irish in their season opener.

The world is a different place now, three weeks later, for Reggie Ho. Or is it?

The bright lights of TV cameras have been incessant. But they don't blind Ho, who is still, like he was on that goal, a top prep school student and an "average guy."

But for an average guy, he sure is stirring up a lot of excitement. The reasons are simple. He accounted for 19 of Notre Dame's first 25 points on the season. He works hard. He is excessively polite. He is a model student.

And he looks a little different on the field. "One person I know gave me a theory on why all this is happening," says Ho. "He said that everyone who becomes famous has some sort of gimmick to catch it. But it was probably his fault. That reaction is consistent with the persona of Reggie Ho, who is himself the model of consistency. Don't lie. He too much credit and don't avoid the blame. Practice every day, sun, rain or snow. Go to the library after practice. Line up for a kick the same way every time. And take any opportunity to say how honored you are to be playing for the same school as Knute Rockne, George Gipp, seven Heisman Trophy winners, Tim Grunhard and Pete Graham.

He's not acting. He means it. Though his polite attempts to distract attention from himself are refreshing in an age when so many athletes think they have something coming to them solely because they are athletes. It is ironic that the same guy who will probably need a pedestal to accept post-season accolades is the first to avoid the pedestal society is giving him right now.

But Reggie Ho knows his roles—kick field goals and study hard. He has shown that he will help Notre Dame win and the second will help him become a doctor.

"Instead of hearing 'Hey, that's Reggie Ho, the kicker,' I'd like to hear 'Hey that's Reggie Ho, Kevin Thomas' roomate.' He just never stops.
