ND hosts Hiler-Ward congressional debate

By REGIS COCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

The candidates for Indiana's 3rd Congressional District went head to head Thursday night in the Joyce ACC in the first student-run congressional debate ever held at Notre Dame.

Incumbent Rep. John Hiler and Democrat Tom Ward responded to questions from a six-member student panel on issues ranging from the economy to education.

Hiler said he hoped the debate would bring out some of the differences between his opponent and himself. The one-hour meeting did just that, giving the audience a look at the positions of both candidates.

The Republican Hiler drew heavily on his support from home in his remarks, while the Democrat Ward criticized the incumbent's con- gestion.

The candidates also disagreed on issues of crime and defense spending and education. Hiler accused Ward of ignorance of the issues.

Hiler stressed the importance of economic growth during his terms in Congress in providing jobs, improving the education system and building a strong national defense. But Ward criticized the economic policies of the Reagan administration, calling the increasing federal budget deficit a "terrible legacy" he was "not proud of."

"Over the last eight years we've made a number of decisions that have helped restore the voice of our economy," Hiler said. "I've been happy to be in Congress the last eight years and cast some of those tough votes and make some of those tough decisions that are responsible for the dramatic improvement in the economy."

The government's toughest job in the next two years will be bringing the deficit under control, Ward said. "When we look at priorities, I know where mine are and I know where I want to make the cuts and I know where things need to be supported and put." Ward stressed the need for cuts in defense spending, calling the "'excess and waste' a tremendous waste of U.S. dol-ars."

"I see it as very important that we invest money in education, and that making dollars available to students who don't have the wherewithal to go to school," said Ward, a Notre Dame graduate.

Asked what he would do to remedy skyrocketing tuition costs for students like those at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, Hiler said there are two ways funds can work for students.

"I think one of the highest priorities of the secretaries of education is to do an in-depth study of what is driving the costside of the equation of higher education," he said. "I've continue to have that price inflation, in a generation or two students are going to be able to afford it."

ND off-campus students robbed

By MATT GALLAGHER
Senior Staff Reporter

A home occupied by four off-campus students was broken into October 15, and the thieves escaped with an undetermined amount of cash and property.

According to Lt. Kilgore of the Northeastern police department, the residence was occupied by four residents of the Northeast home, a resident of the Northeastern neighborhood, who said she and a housemate, Michelle Hickey, were home asleep when the break-in occurred at about 2:39 a.m.

"We woke up when we heard our dog barking," Swetz said. "All the residents want to investigate, Swetz said, "We heard at least two voices downstairs, and it sounded like they were rummaging through the kitchen."

The two residents then proceeded to call the South Bend Police Department, who arrived at the house within five minutes, according to Swetz. The police dispatcher had the remains remain on the telephone until the officers arrived.

Swetz said the intruders apparently kicked in the plexiglass cover over a basement window to gain entry to the house. The robbers took at least $100 in cash, a radio and several pieces of jewelry of an undetermined value.

When police arrived on the scene, the intruders had already left. Swetz said she and her housemates heard her voice and fled.

According to Lt. Kilgore of the South Bend Police Department, the intruders made off with $75 in cash, a table lamp and a bottle of rum. The lamp and broken bottle were later found near the home. Currently, police have no suspects in the case.

Swetz said she and her housemates plan to increase the security of the house.

"We've boarded up the broken window and added several locks," Swetz said.

Swetz said she and her housemates have contacted several of her student neighbors to form a neighborhood watch group.

She also said she believed her house was a target for crime. "We're in a bad location, we're girls, and we're basically easy targets."

7 alumni, 2 ND students assaulted

By SARA MARLEY
Senior Staff Reporter

A recent fight on the 600 block of Corby Boulevard has left several alumni injured and some off-campus students worried about neighborhood relations.

According to Seniors Kevin Camblin and Craig Simon, the fight began when seven alumni were attacked on Oct. 15 around 11:30 p.m. while leaving the students' house on South Street.

Simon said one alumni was stabbed in the arm and required stitches. Another was beaten in the face and broke his jaw, according to Simon.

The alumni were walking to their cars in the S and N Mini-Mart on South Bend Avenue. "There were five of us and two girls walking to their cars. They were attacked out of nowhere by twenty blacks, aged fifteen to eighteen or nineteen, using baseball bats and brass knuckles," said Simon.

Simon and Camblin responded to the commotion. "We drew the crowd to ourselfs and said to the alumni ("we were able to get into their cars and go to the hospital," Simon said.

"Our neighbors from across the street were helping us to break it up," Simon said.

"After the cops left, a shot was fired," Simon said. "At that point, we just got everyone inside," he said.

According to Simon, the police returned to the scene and the crowd dispersed.

Neither Simon nor Camblin was seriously injured, and neither filed a police report. Four other reports were filed by alumni.

Two arrests were made in the incident. Eric Gilbert, 24, of Chicago was arrested for public intoxication and resisting law enforcement. Eric Rul-fin, 27, of South Bend was arrested for public intoxication and disorderly conduct.

"It is more than likely that the incident was precipitated by alcohol," said Lieutenant Richard Kilgore of the South Bend Police Department.

Simon reported there had been "no retaliation" from the attackers, but housemates Mike Flynn and Mike Nolan did receive crank phone calls after October 15. "Someone would call and hang up," Flynn said, adding that he felt the calls were made in an attempt to find out if the students were at home.

"Now we don't know what to expect. We don't know if this is an isolated incident or if this will make the situation worse," Simon said.

"We thought about moving out, but we didn't want to run out on our landlord or the other students who live in the neighborough," said Simon.

The students have scheduled a meeting with Phil Johnson,

 Miami fan is still fuming over alleged 'fumble'

 No, I'm not digging into Lou Holtz' -The Observer

 This letter, from a man named King — from Miami, was sent to The Observer. The ruling scrawled in red marker across the top of the page: DO YOU HAVE THE "CLASS" TO PRINT THIS LETTER Mr. Holtz, I have waited three days to write this letter to be able to write a reasoned letter.

 Maybe, King, you should have waited three weeks.

 I watched the game on television from beginning to end, and it is clear from what I saw at the time and from the films and the newspaper stories that the officials badly mishandled the ruling on the supposed fumble at the 1-yard line late in the fourth quarter.

 I don't remember that particular play, King. It is clear to any unbiased observer such as I..... Yeah, right...

 ...that the runner's knee had touched the ground before the ball came loose from his grasp. That being the case, the ruling should have been "first down" for Miami at the 1-yard line. That is what Coach Jimmy Johnson was indicating on the sideline.

 With a first down at the one yard line, there is no doubt that the University of Miami would have scored, either on a short screen, or at least kicked a field goal.

 In that case, King (may I call you King?), I guess there would have been no reason to play the down. Why not just have the players walked off the field and get on with the rest of the game?

 But that's okay, King, as the letter gets written. Good.

 If you and the University of Notre Dame have any of the "class" that you say the University of Miami lacks, you will voluntarily forfeit the game, since you clearly did not defeat Miami without the help of the officials.

 This is the guy who called himself an unbiased observer.

 If you are still convinced that Notre Dame defeated the University of Miami honestly without any illegal assistance from incompetent or biased officials...

 Are you simply suggesting some sort of conspiracy against your Hurricanes?

 ...you will seek a re-match and re-play the game at whatever time and place that Notre Dame's bowl is willing to host the event.

 Sorry, King, we may be playing for a national championship that day.

 Otherwise, if there is no good-faith effort on your part to correct this gross injustice, the 1-yard line in the Orange Bowl will be a massacre, with the "fighting Irish" being pounded into the dirt and becoming fertilizer, producing a good turf for future Hurricane games.

 Remember this guy claimed to be writing a "reasoned letter" and, of course, is unbiased. He apopens your attention and anticipates your prompt announcement that Notre Dame is forfeiting the game in the right of good sportsmanship.

 Sincerely, King —

 Okay King, here's the deal. Notre Dame will forfeit the game to Miami which then in turn will forfeit the game back to the Irish in a classy gesture in response to the first-half "incompetence" that would have been called a fumble had the officials not given Miami "illegal assistance from incompetent or biased officials" when Irish defender Frank Stams hit Miami quarterback Steve Walsh on the Miami 37-yard line.

 And forfeit the game to Michigan, also because of officiating.

 This is getting ridiculous.

 Fans of the Miami football team, like King, had the chance to show they had class and could lose gracefully. Jimmy Johnson could have followed the example of his players, especially Walsh, who credited the Irish with playing well and said it was "a great game between two great teams."

 Instead, Coach Johnson whined about the fumble call for a week. No class.

 But that's okay, King (and Johnson), because the Irish are looking forward to giving you another chance to be graceful losers—next year at the Orange Bowl on Nov. 25.

Aawd: Israeli-Palestinian conflict may be solved by non-violence

By FLORENTINE HOELKER

Now violence is the only way the opposing factions in the Gaza strip can come to any type of agreement, according to Dr. Mubarak Aawd, the founder and director of the Palestinian Center for Nonviolence.

Aawd spoke about "Nonviolence in Action" in a lecture at the Notre Dame Law School Thursday. Aawd detailed conditions in the West Bank in Gaza, where Israeli forces have occupied the territory for a number of years. He said that, despite the terrible restrictions imposed upon Palestinians by Israel, "there have been changes in the Palestinian concept of peace."

"Many suppose that an understanding of the Middle East either gives people a headache or promotes the response that the situation is unsolvable. I feel strongly that there is a solution to the problem," Aawd said.

The solution, which Aawd believes has been gathering support from the Palestinians, is nonviolence. He has written articles directed at the Palestinians which list ways to oppose the Israeli occupation. Aawd said he believes actions such as writing "P.L.O." on Israeli currency, rejecting any mail not written in Arabic and being proud of filling Israeli jails will effectively demonstrate that the occupation is wrong.

"A change in the social conditions of the Palestinian people" is beginning, he said. "We have stopped being afraid, and we now are becoming proud and feel strong about ourselves. We now realize that the Israelis are also afraid." As a result of this realization, the Palestinians have sent a challenge to Israel—a challenge of peace. This challenge will only be met when both factions learn to accept one another, according to Aawd.

Aawd said much progress would be made if the United States peacefully supported both sides, instead of providing military aid to Israel. "Neither of us is the good guy; neither of us is the bad guy. Both Israelis and Palestinians need peace."

"Believe me," Aawd said. "If there were peace in the Middle East, America would benefit."
24 hour shelter for homeless scheduled to open on Dec. 1

By MICHAEL WELLS
Staff Reporter

The downtown homeless shelter, where several Notre Dame students and faculty members volunteer their services every year, will open again for the winter on November 1, according to Law School Dean David Link.

Link said a new 24 hour center for the homeless is still being readied in a refurbished building on Michigan Street, but should be open by December 1. Link, along with J. D’Arcy Chiesi, associate director for the Center for Pastoral and Social Ministry, is one of the directors of COPOSH, a newly formed coordinating group for homeless services. COPOSH, which stands for the Council of Providers of Services to the Homeless, is largely responsible for the establishment of the new center, according to Link.

"The original motivation of COPOSH was to provide more services than simply sheltering the homeless," said Link. "We're trying to get all these organizations who are doing something for the homeless into one organization."

Link described the soon-to-be-opened center: "more than a shelter." The new building, Link said, will include a drop-in center, food services, emergency clothing and counseling services. "Do we just put these people in a building," said Link, "or do we give them somewhere to go with dignity?"

While the new shelter itself will continue to be run by the United Religious Community, other help agencies will also assist in carrying out the related services. "This is not going to replace anything except the old Maranatha shelter," said Link, referring to other community services provided by the COPOSH member agencies.

The United Religious Community has run the shelter for the past five years in the basement of the Maranatha Temple. Fifteen local agencies are participating in COPOSH, said Link. "We've found a great spirit of cooperation among service providers," he said.

Another thing that makes this project different is the University's ownership and refurbishing of the building which will house the new center, according to Link.

Link said Father Malloy has referred to the University's involvement as a "social justice investment."

He said the University's involvement was neither a pure charity effort nor a profit-making venture. "They're the owners of the building. That relieves all these other charitable organizations of great expense," said Link. In addition, he indicated that Father Malloy may have taken an interest because of traditionally high participation in past years. "This is unique, in that he sees a lot of student involvement," said Link.

According to Link, Notre Dame will provide about half of the volunteers who will work at the shelter. He added, "We will need to increase our number of student volunteers. One of the big changes is that this will be open most of the day, and it will be open year round."

Summing up the intent of the new COPOSH effort, Link said, "We're really talking about something that people get back on their feet."

Flynt says his threat was 'only a joke'

LOS ANGELES—A $1 million check Hustler publisher Larry Flynt gave a Soldier of Fortune magazine and former publisher and Nixonian and former TV guide publisher and lawyer said Thursday.

Flynt said his threat was "a joke," said Flynt's attorney, Alan Isaacman. "Back in November 1983, Larry Flynt had a dinner party and gave a Soldier of Fortune a check at the party, said Flynt. Isaacman said the case was thrown out. The check was written out of the court record, he said.

Sheriff's Capt. Robert Grimm said Wednesday there was no evidence the alleged plot went further. But Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block said Wednesday he took the matter seriously, although no charges had been filed.

Kozol speaks on homelessness

By SARAH VOIGT
News Staff

Jonathan Kozol, author of several books on adult illiteracy and the homeless, gave a lecture Thursday entitled "At the mercy of America: the homeless and their children." Kozol cited widespread ignorance about the plight of the homeless and cuts in federal aid as reasons for the half million homeless children in America.

"We've always had homelessness in America, but never this flood of family homelessness. Not since the Great Depression have there been so many homeless children in America," Kozol said.

Kozol said rents in low income housing have skyrocketed in all the major cities in recent years, resulting in an increased number of homeless Americans. In addition, he said, two million jobs per year have been eliminated since 1980. Most of these jobs were in the suffering steel, auto and textile industries.

"With rents up and wages down, the White House picked this decade to cut benefits," Kozol said. Although the need for aid has increased, federal funding for housing projects has decreased, according to Kozol.

In what Kozol refers to as "possibly the single greatest domestic budget cut of the Reagan administration," yearly funding to provide low cost housing has decreased from a high of 32 billion dollars in 1979 to an all time low of 7 billion dollars today.

"In New York City today, the waiting list for public housing is 18 years. 12 years in Boston and 20 years in Miami. The administration has stopped building public housing. Yet the president tells us that the homeless are 'homeless, you might say, by choice,'" said Kozol.

For the past three years, Kozol has lived and worked in the Martinique Hotel, one of the 60 shelters for the homeless in New York City. The Martinique houses 2,000 destitute people, 1,400 of which are children.

Kozol focused much of his lecture on impoverished children.

"Sometimes I wish they (the homeless children) would march into the lobbies of elegant hotels and make it impossible for them to enjoy their pleasures. At least if these kids could strike out in this way, they wouldn't strike at themselves," Kozol said.

Kozol links extreme poverty to the drug problems endemic to the homeless shelters. He refers to their widespread drug and alcoholic abuse as "a disguised form of suicide."

According to Kozol, the tragedy of homelessness transcend the partisan issue.

"Homeless children need Americans of all political positions to hear their words," Kozol said.

"Someday, we're told, there will be physicians for these children, food for their families, mercy for their mothers. Someday, somewhere, someplace—but not now. These children that are alive right now will not profit from the blessings of another decade, from the kindness of another congress or the mercy of another head of state," Kozol said.

"That's the pity; that's the urgency. They will have no second chance to live their childhoods... This is an irreversible theft. The loss is incalculable, the crime unspeakable," he said.

Soviet release only a few political prisoners

WASHINGTON—The expressed intention of the Soviet Union to release all political prisoners by the end of the year may refer only to a small group of people, perhaps as few as 20, the State Department said Thursday.

Spokesman Charles Redman said the two superpowers continue to disagree on the definition of exactly what constitutes a political prisoner.

He said Moscow insists the term fits only those actually charged with political offenses, while Washington says it also should include those jailed on "trumped-up charges."

"We've long pressed for the release of Soviet political prisoners," Redman told reporters. "The Soviets finally accept that there are such prisoners, but we continue to disagree on a definition." He said Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told U.S. officials during a visit to the United States last month that there were only about 40 such prisoners, all of whom had been convicted for violations of the political and religious articles of the Soviet criminal code.

But Redman said U.S. officials have raised the Soviets the names of some 200 prisoners, including those jailed or fabricated charges.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told reporters in Moscow on Wednesday that he had been assured in talks with Soviet officials that all political prisoners would be released within 10 weeks.

However, the Foreign Ministry spokesman, Gennady Gerasimov, refused to confirm or deny that a release of political prisoners is imminent, saying there are only about two dozen such prisoners.

Bush maintains lead over Dukakis

George Bush pocketed a labor endorsement Thursday and said his drive for the White House was "all about creating jobs and opportunity." Underdog Michael Dukakis lost his GOP rival of airing negative campaign commercials to "divert attention" from Reagan-Bush administration failures.

The pollsters' daily tidings were good once again for Bush, who was reported leading 5 percent to 42 percent in a nationwide survey taken for NBC and the Wall Street Journal. New polls also showed a tight race in New York, one of the country's most Democratic bastions.

Dukakis made his way toward Harry Truman's home town of Independence, Mo., likening himself to the "feisty little guy" who won the White House four decades ago in a similar upset. "Harry Truman was a fighter, and so am I," he said.

In a 14-minute live interview on the CBS "Evening News," Dukakis said again and again he wants to put the government on the "side of average Americans."

The Democrat also conceded that Bush commercials depicting him as weak on crime, creating jobs and the values he wants to put the government on the "side of average Americans."

Bush continued his week-long emphasis on economic issues as he made his way down the Pacific Coast from Washington to California. Along the way he accused Dukakis of trying to "fan the flames of protectionism" in comments on trade and of "trying to scare the American people by putting Japanese flags on these American commercials of his."

Bush won the endorsement of the 50,000-member Marine Engineers Beneficial Association at a rally interrupted by protesters. Four were hustled away, including one whose one was Bloodhound. Bush paused in his speech long enough to remind them of the right to dissent, a pleasant gesture that prevailed at the end of the Carter administration.

"This election is all about jobs and opportunity," he said, promising to keep the economic expansion alive.

US embassy in Moscow is bugged and must be rebuilt

Associated Press

WASHINGTON-President Reagan recommended Thursday that the new U.S. embassy in Moscow be razed and rebuilt from the ground up because it is riddled with listening devices that cannot be removed.

Reagan told reporters the United States has "no choice" in the matter "because there's no way to rid it of the many listening devices that were built into it."

"We're going to start and have an American-built one," Reagan said of the embassy.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said Reagan will urge Congress to permit the virtually completed embassy to be demolished and reconstructed with American-made components to be shipped from the United States and stored in Moscow warehouses under the tightest possible security. He said the building will not be assembled by U.S. workers taken to Moscow for that purpose.

The Soviets will not be permitted to move into their newly built embassy in Washington until the United States can occupy its facilities in Moscow, Redman said.

He said that tearing down the existing structure and building a new one under high security conditions will involve "a very elaborate and costly process."

"Obviously we're talking years," Redman said.

But he said the final cost cannot now be estimated because entirely new engineering and architectural plans will have to be drawn up.

He said Reagan's proposed demolition and reconstruction plan was recommended by Secretary of State George Shultz following several reviews of the project by U.S. experts.

"This option offers the best overall solution to the problem," Redman said.

He said the rebuilt eight-story embassy will occupy the same site but will be different than the one recommended for demolition. The new structure will incorporate features "to take into account what we have learned" about Soviet eavesdropping capabilities, he said.

"Every precaution will be taken to assure the security of the process," Redman said.

House members raise $14.4 million for campaigns

Associated Press

WASHINGTON--The 58 House members facing no major party challenge to re-election have raised $14.4 million for their campaigns, and nearly half of them will be entitled to keep any unspent money when they retire, a nearly half of them will be entitled to keep any unspent money when they retire, a private study said Friday.

The list includes such House leaders as Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Reps. Claude Pepper, D-Fla.; John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

Forty-one of the 58 unopposed lawmakers are Democrats, who control the House, according to the study compiled by the watchdog group Congress Watch. The $14.4 million includes $7.3 million from political action committees.

"That these PACs feel compelled to contribute to lawmakers who have no opponent shows that what's being sought are the winners among compatible candidates or good government," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, the parent organization of Congress Watch.

The legislators or their aides who were questioned defended the fund raising, arguing that campaign funds must be collected before they know whether they will have an election opponent.

"If you had a crystal ball, you wouldn't enter into one of these fund-raising strategies," said Cliff Gibbons, who is campaign finance manager for his father, Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla.

Congress Watch said the elder Gibbons has raised $399,527 from PACs, second highest total among the unopposed incumbents, and $501,341 overall, the third highest mark after Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, and Dingell. Gibbons is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee subcommittee on trade.

PACs are formed by corporations, labor unions and other interest groups to funnel money to candidates, with incumbents the long-favored recipients. For the 1986 elections, according to Federal Election Commission records, PACs sent 80 percent of their contributions to lawmakers seeking re-election.

Testing service plans new exam to assess teachers

Associated Press

NEW YORK—The Educational Testing Service unveiled plans Thursday for a comprehensive new teacher licensing exam, including computer simulations of classroom situations, to help states weed out incompetents.

"There is a widespread and growing concern about the preparedness and effectiveness of beginning teachers, and we believe that breakthroughs in research and technology make possible a new kind of assessment that will provide greater assistance, fairness and accuracy," said ETS president Gregory Anrig.

He expressed hope that the new exam would help put to rest recurring charges by teacher unions and others that existing teacher tests don't accurately assess classroom skills and are unfair to minorities.

Jane Usdan, a spokeswoman for the American Federation of Teachers, called the new test "a step in the right direction. We have said we need to test teachers differently, not only on what they know but on what they can do."

The exam is designed as a licensing tool for beginning teachers and is not intended to assess veteran teachers, Anrig stressed.

Prototypes of the exam, as yet unnamed, will be field tested in 1990, and a final version is expected to be ready in 1992, according to the Lawrenceville, N.J.-based testing service.

The test eventually is expected to replace the National Teacher Exam, a paper-and-pencil multiple choice test taken by some 200,000 teaching candidates a year and administered by ETS. That test, which costs from $35 to $50 depending on how many parts of it a state requires, was first offered in 1939 and is part of the teacher licensing program in 30 states.

Unlike current teacher exams, the new test is designed to be taken at three stages of a would-be teacher's training. The first part would use a computer to test reading, math and writing skills during or after the second year of undergraduate study.

The second test would assess grasp of subject matter and teaching principles following completion of teacher training.

Beginning teachers would take a third test to evaluate how well they perform in actual classrooms once they have had some supervised teaching experience. It would include observation of teaching performance and computer simulations of classroom situations.

"The evaluation may extend over a period of time for a prospective teacher, giving states a much better sense of professional development," said Carol Dwyer, an ETS senior development leader who created the new test. "The method also allows the student to find out early whether he or she meets the prerequisites needed to teach while there is still time to improve or make other career plans."

closing, citing areas such as drug abuse, child care and education as areas he will work to improve.

Ward ended with a last stab at his opponent and stressed his own campaign as "people-oriented." "When it came time for people items, this man's (pointing to Hiler) vote was cut, cut, cut. My priorities are put the people first. Let's make sure we put people before corporate profits."

About 750 attended the debate, which culminated a Notre Dame-Saint Mary's student government push to increase political awareness on campus, said Student Body President Tom Doyle.

"By and large it was students who attended. That was the whole goal," Doyle said. "I think it's a tremendous credit to the students who set it up."

The six-member panel included: Mike Bolles of WWFI-AM; Bill Hawkins, SUB's ideas and issues commissioner; Steven Horst of the Graduate Student Union; Katherine Kol ler of Saint Mary's student government and Chris Murphy, editor of The Observer.

Mike Keegan, student government's executive coordinator of political, cultural and social concerns, moderated the debate.

The event was sponsored by both student governments, College Democrats, College Republicans, Student Union Board, the Graduate Student Union, WWFI-AM and The Observer.

Doyle said, "A lot of student groups with different agendas put them aside for the sake of this event and that's the beauty of it," he said. "I think it's a tremendous credit to the students who set it up."
United Way seeks aid

Dear Editor:

The students of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame create and envelop themselves within a small community, seeking personal growth and enriching their lives. As a small community, it is easy to see that we are all blessed with many gifts, and part of our growth stems from sharing those gifts with others.

In the first week of October, United Way of St. Joseph County turned to Saint Mary's and Notre Dame for support. It is important that as students we recognize the larger community of which we are also a part.

Less than a week, United Way served over 70,000 people through 36 agencies in St. Joseph County. Their service truly reflects a state of compassion and good-will which would not be possible without the people concerned with health and social needs, people who are willing to care for and embrace the less fortunate. Our efforts are directed toward such agencies as the American Red Cross, Catholic Social Services, Goodwill, Logans, and many others who are warmly appreciative.

This year, I hope that as a whole, we may extend ourselves to the call of our larger community. The campaign for Saint Mary's ends Nov. 14, and Nov. 17 for Notre Dame. See your section representative to make a gift. Their names may be found in your residence through your residence assistant.

"United way is more than a great way to give, it's the best way to care." Let us continue to share our gifts with others.

Weekend Wheels provides safety

Dear Editor:

We are not writing this article to try to shock you with statistics as to why you should not drink and drive. You all have heard the horror stories, and even worse, you have lived them. However, like so many other things in life, most people have the attitude that the tragedy will never happen to them.

Dukakis stance shows deception

Dear Editor:

The second presidential debate on Oct. 13 between Michael Dukakis and George Bush, was important for the American people for many reasons. It was especially remarkable for being one of the few occasions that Dukakis candidate acknowledged the issue of abortion. Prompted by a reporter's question, Dukakis replied to Bush's position of favoring a ban on abortion except in cases of rape, incest, and danger to the mother's life: "Isn't the real question that we have to answer, not Mr. Dukakis' exceptions we have to make, because the vice president himself is prepared to make exceptions? It's who makes the decision."

"Who makes this very difficult, very wrenching decision? And I think it has to be the woman, in the exercise of her conscience and religious beliefs, that makes the decision."

I must confess that, even though I believe in the right to life of unborn children, I was momentarily paralyzed by this statement. Perhaps many people accepted this argument as reasonable. However, after some thought, I have discovered why this statement is paralyzing. The question the governor puts to himself and then answers is meaningless. You cannot directly refute Dukakis' answer to the question he posed because the asking of the question, and our willingness to be asked the question, requires that we swallow a big, fat assumption. Who should make this decision? Who says there has to be a decision? Let us look at Dukakis wants us to accept without any discussion or debate.

Every decision results from a freedom. The freedom in this case is to kill a baby whose only crime is that it now happens to be living in his or her mother's womb. Therefore, to give any thought to the question requires that you believe in a freedom to kill a certain class of living human individuals. The challenge is, upon analysis, circular, illogical and absurd, to anyone that believes that freedom may have limits. Upon examination the logic evaporates. Dukakis tries to persuade, but makes everybody think about his opinion. By doing this he avoids asking any meaningful questions; he avoids even making a substantive discussion.

This quote is a good example of the subversion which has been practiced by political figures who speak on abortion and women's rights. Is the deception unintended, or purposeful? I believe that Dukakis is not alone in not giving this issue the full meaning, the relevant questions to the American people. The "dreaded" answers would just make things difficult, expensive and inconvenient. Surely, any just solution to this problem will be implied by the answers would be complicated, and point to considerable change. Really, Mr. Dukakis might make American folks just aren't ready for that responsibility, that decision, and that freedom. It's better to avoid the central issues of abortion all together.

Dukakis' stance by any factual figures, like the illogical statement of Mr. Dukakis, can be very powerful in persuading people to condone abortion. But the language itself is sublime, grave deception.

Keith Richards

Keith Richards, one of rock-n-roll's original rebels, seems to have matured and come into his own with his first solo effort, Talk is Cheap. This album, released last week, reveals a confident and powerful artist who, until recently, pledged never to leave the Rolling Stones to do solo work.

Talk is Cheap provided a desperately needed creative outlet for Richards during the time the Stones were forced to take a back seat to Mick Jagger's ill-fated solo wanderings. Calvin and Hobbes

The anger and desertion Richards felt towards Jagger are apparent in the song "You Don't Move Me." Keith blatantly attacks Mick with lines such as "Now you wanna throw the dice. You already crapped out twice."

Though "You Don't Move Me" provides an interesting look into the complex Jagger-Richards relationship, this album does much more than fan the fire of the ever-burning argument between Mick and Keith. It provides Richards with freedom to explore a wide variety of musical styles.

Talk is Cheap opens with a strange, but very successful wander into the world of funk. Richards combines his vocals and guitar with some of James Brown's band to come up with the hot and jumpy "Big Enough." The resulting mixture is good enough to get you up and dancing.

"Make No Mistake," this album's best track, has Keith's eerie vocals working together with the peaceful and soft voice of Sarah Dash. The Memphis Horns, Robert Cray's horn section, provide a strong backbone for the singers' slow but passionate vocal interplay.

Richards also takes a fun jaunt down nostalgia row with the Rockabilly tune "I Could Have Shook You Up." Janine Johnson's light and happy piano solos combine with Keith's love of 50s style rock-n-roll to make this song work well. Another highlight, "Locked Away," explores the age-old dilemma of malefemale relationships. This song, with its acoustic guitar and violin, paints a moody and contemplative, almost psychotic, picture of a man in love.

Though Richards explores new musical styles on Talk is Cheap, he did not attempt to abandon the sound he has perfected during 25 years with the Rolling Stones. Songs like "Take It So Hard," "Struggle," and the riveting "It Means A Lot" remind us that Richards has been, and remains, the musical backbone of one of rock-n-roll's greatest bands.

This album is not, however, a Rolling Stones album. It is a strong, well-rounded solo effort by a musician in limbo. Talk is Cheap has assured the musical world that there is no quitting yet. Though Keith Richards was forced to take a back seat to the Stones, the Stones are forced to look at Keith Richards.

Johnson changes jobs in ND Stadium

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Anthony Johnson has spent more than his share of Saturdays at Notre Dame Stadium. The South Bend native spent his weekends staggering for the Adams High School football team and working as a messenger to shore up his amateur home games. But Johnson never thought he someday would be coming to the Stadium as one of Notre Dame's top running backs.

"I didn't think I'd play for a major college team," said the junior fullback. "I was surprised when I was contacted by teams. I was surprised that I could play for them."

Once he signed with Notre Dame, not many people, including Johnson himself, figured he would see much playing time early. But Johnson played the most minutes of any freshman during the first half of the season and has grown to be an integral part of the Irish offensive backfield.

"It surprised me greatly," said Johnson of his freshman season. "What he was the second-leading Irish rusher with 349 yards on 86 carries. "I expect to contribute on the kicking game or perhaps just in practice."

Irish running backs coach Jim Strong understands why Johnson has played so far above original expectations.

"Sometimes you go across the country for prospects, then all of a sudden here's a homegrown product," said Strong. "Since he was a local player, the recruiters knew everything about him, like when he may have had a bad game or an average game. When you go away to recruit, the coach tells you how good his player is and you shows you a film of his best game against weak opposition.

"It's like your wife," Strong continued. "You know all her good qualities and bad points, too. With someone you date, you may go out with her once in a month and think she's great."

Johnson tied Pernell Taylor for reaching the endzone. The 6-foot, 225-pounder led the team with 11 touchdowns last season. During a junior season that has been beset by injury problems, Johnson demonstrated his return to form last Saturday with another one of his trademark touchdowns. He broke an Air Force tackle at the last possible moment and burst to the endzone for 12-yard score.

"You look at the Air Force game and there were two linebackers trying to tackle him, and the next thing you know, he pops out and scores," said Strong. "When Anthony Johnson's healthy, he's as good an inside runner as there probably is in college football. It's hard for one man to tackle him."

The Irish now have a penchant for giving Johnson the ball when they are near the goal line or in short-yardage situations, but he takes the role in stride.

"I attribute that (the touchdowns) to the other people on the team," said Johnson. "I'm just in the right place at the right time."

Johnson had to miss all the preseason scrimmages this fall because of a sprained ankle. He was able to play the season opener against Michigan, but regrasped the ankle early in the Michigan State game and was kept out of action until the team's fourth game against Stanford.

Since coming back, Johnson has scored touchdowns against Stanford, Pittsburgh and Air Force. He has gained 182 yards on 47 carries while sharing time at fullback with classmate Brian Blankenship. The two fullbacks have mostly run inside, setting up the outside game for tailbacks Mark Green and Tony Brooks.

"We help each other out a lot," Johnson said of the rotating backfield. "Who plays is based on who's tired, who's capable of playing, who's hurt and who's not."

"I'm hoping that Johnson attention Johnson is getting on the football field now, he was just as imposing anywhere but the University of Notre Dame."

Lyght shining in secondary

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

When he needed to make the biggest decision of his life, Todd Lyght knew whom to ask for advice.

Most high school football players make their own decision about which college to attend. But Lyght isn't just another football player.

Lyght, an Adidas/Scholastic All-American from Michigan, was recruited by such collegiate powerhouse as Michigan, UCLA, USC and Notre Dame. That decision (three of those four schools are competing for a national title this year) became too much for Lyght to make on his own. He turned to his family for help and he is grateful that their response was the right one.

"I'm very close to my family," Lyght said. "Everyone thought the best decision would be to come to Notre Dame. If I listen to them, I can't go wrong."

And Lyght, the starting field cornerback for the Irish defense, has done little wrong on the field this season. Lyght and the Irish have been impressive, and the triumvirate could be as solid as any in the country.

"If somebody goes down the person behind him can step in and do the job," Lyght said. "We have a lot more depth this year."

About the only criticism directed at Lyght is that neither he nor Smagal has an interception in seven outings. In reality, though, that may be more of a compliment than a criticism.

"We hear that every day," Lyght said of the lack of interceptions. "What happens is that we have a guy covered so well they don't throw it, or if they do throw, there's a weakness in the coverage."

The emergence of defensive superiority has not been as easy for Lyght as it may seem. The 6-1 sophomore from Flint, Mich., came to Notre Dame as a flanker. At that spot as a high school senior, he caught 38 passes for 877 yards and nine touchdowns. Lyght also played defensive back for Luke M. Powers High School, intercepting 14 passes.

At first glance, Notre Dame’s upcoming game with the Navy Midshipmen on Saturday has the makings of a rout. And even if you stare at it for a while longer, the bulk of the excitement at the Naval Academy is probably going to be centered around whether or not the Irish cover the 34 points they’re favored by.

But, never one to look ahead, Head Coach Lou Holtz chooses to look at the worst-case scenario.

“The Naval Academy is a well-disciplined team,” said Holtz. “They’re very similar to the Air Force Academy in that they run out of the wishbone, but they’re much bigger on offense and defense than the Air Force Academy. They have two fine quarterbacks and statistically, over the whole year, they’re rather impressive.”

“Last week Navy lost to Pitt by a decided margin (52-6), but Pitt had to punt six times, had two turnovers and scored on a lot of big plays. We’re not necessarily a big-play type of football team. You never know what to expect when you go on the road, but I do think our players will be ready to play well and play hard.”

A few additional points might lend more credence to the expectation of an Irish rout.

• The Midshipmen are 3-4 on the year, but they have not defeated a Division IA school since 1986. Their three wins came against Idaho, James Madison, Delaware and Yale. Navy has lost to Temple (28-17), Mississippi (42-35), Air Force (34-24), and Pitt.

• Notre Dame and Navy will weather the longest and most intense inter-service rivalry in the country when they square off Saturday, and in the 61 games played between the two, the Irish have won 51.

• Notre Dame and Navy will be playing against the longest and strongest defensive line in the country, with such players as senior end Clay Hofacre, who is considered one of the best linemen in the east.

The Irish defense is coming off of several impressive showings, most recently the limitation of Air Force’s vaunted wishbone attack to only 13 points (and 214 total yards) in a 37-13 win. And although Miami QB Steve Walsh had a career-best day passing against Notre Dame, the Irish defense yielded only 57 yards on the ground and forced seven turnovers against the Hurricane attack. Walsh and company had 33 successful runs for 175 yards and their only touchdown.

The Midshipmen have only 169 rushing yards and 12 touchdowns on the season, with the majority coming against Air Force in a 35-6 halftime lead and going on to win 38-21 over South Carolina.

“Last year the Irish scored the first six times they had the ball, building a 35-6 halftime lead and going on to win 56-13 over Navy. This year, Notre Dame is 7-0 and ranked No. 2 in the country in both AP and UPI national polls. The Irish have more victories over Navy than any other team in Notre Dame history.”

This year, Notre Dame is 7-0 and ranked No. 2 in the country in both AP and UPI national polls. The Irish have more victories over Navy than any other team in Notre Dame history.

But if you’re going to look at trends, in fairness to the Midshipmen, the last time Navy had a season ranked No. 2 in the nation it won 38-21 over South Carolina back in 1964. And Navy went 4-6-1 that year.

Just a thought.

Gary McIntosh at quarterback in place of Allen Grizzard, who was the team’s leading rusher out of the wishbone offense. Grizzard will move to flanker against the Irish and McIntosh should again get the starting nod.

McIntosh is 22-of-62 for 319 yards and two touchdowns on the year, while rushing for 193 yards and four touchdowns on 61 carries.

In the Navy backfield, the wishbone alignment includes senior halfback Luther Archer (49 rushes for 258 yards and a touchdown), junior halfback James Bradley (54 for 364, three TDs), and senior fullback Bert Pangrazio (42 for 151, one TD). Sophomore fullback Deric Sims also will see action.

The top Middie receiver is senior flanker Carl Jordan (21 catches for 169 yards and 4 TDs). Junior Shane Smith will handle the split end duties, and Grizzard (two catches for 35 yards last week against Pitt) will supplement the receiving corps.

On the defensive line, tackles Mike Kircher and senior Tim Holford lead a young but improved Navy front. Holford is the only returning regular in the Middies’ offensive line, but also is considered one of the best linemen in the east.

The Irish defense is coming off of several impressive showings, most recently the limitation of Air Force’s vaunted wishbone attack to only 13 points (and 214 total yards) in a 37-13 win. Walsh and company had 33 successful runs for 175 yards and their only touchdown.

Freshman Arnold Ale is again expected to compete with Flash Gordon and Andre Jones for playing time at tailback and Anthony Johnson gets the nod at fullback. Braxston Banks’ knee is still ailing and he is not yet 100 percent.

Bert Pangrazio (coming straight ahead) was a walk-on leftbacker before making the switch to fullback for the Midshipmen, where he now carries the ball out of the Navy wishbone attack. Pangrazio was named the most improved Middle in spring practice.

Quarterback Tony Rice is 43-of-84 for 719 yards, six touchdowns and five interceptions. Perhaps just as important is his 78 rushes for 470 yards and seven touchdowns.

The deep threats of Walters and Raghib “Rocket” Ismail have caught a combined 18 passes for 402 yards and three touchdowns.

Mike Heidt will man the center spot, while co-captain Andy Heck and Dean Brown will start at tackles. Junior guard Tim Grunhard is still feeling the effects of an ankle injury and might not see action this weekend to give the ankle time to heal. In that event, Tim Ryan would be moved to right guard and either Mike Brennan or Winston Sandri would take over at left guard.

Navy’s defensive strength is against the pass, where it ranks sixth in the country, yielding only 123 yards a game through the air. That is also the amount the Irish have averaged passing through seven games.

The Middle secondary includes Scott Carson and Jim Chaffold at the corners while Rodney Brown and Bob Weissenfelds hold down the safety slots. But the Irish probably will do most of their moving on the ground against a young defensive line and linebacking corps.

Expect another grind ‘em out Irish effort with a lot of effective off-tackle running plays. The larger Notre Dame offensive and defensive lines should wear down their game but outmatched Middle counterparts.

"We didn't have too much depth at defensive back," Lyght said. "I did whatever helped the team. Now, I like defense a lot better than off to give the kicks out."

Lyght played in all 12 games last year, starting at free safety against Pittsburgh, Rice 7 7 and FUMBLES-LOST 10-7.

Much of the credit for the performance of the secondary goes to first-year coach Chuck Heeter. The practices are more intense this year, he said, and to Lyght the Irish have a new found intensity under Heeter. Lyght shows that intensity both on and off of the field. Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz has taken notice of his play, after the Stanford game, and Lyght was a fine defensive back as he's been around.

"I'm pleased that he thinks he has that ability, even playing without a long way to go," Lyght said. "It's just another little things, footprint, drop, really wide receiver and the quarterback.

Lyght is the youngest of three children, the son of an athlete, athletic director and athletic trainer. His father, William, played at assistant coach "Irish" at the time.

"We played with him every day," Lyght said. "I'm not just another football player."

NATE FITZGERALD

The title of U2's new album, Rattle and Hum, may strike fear into those Domers who haven't been able to sleep recently because their radiators rattle all night long.

Have no fear, Rattle and Hum is not as strange as its title suggests, yet it will be a definite challenge to U2's audience, considering its stylistic divergence from past albums.

A large portion of Rattle and Hum results from U2's venture into the American roots of rock, blues, and gospel music that took place during The Joshua Tree tour and the filming of "U2 Rattle and Hum," the accompanying movie that opens November 4.

Penetrating live covers of the Beatles' "Helter Skelter," and Bob Dylan's "All Along the Watchtower" initial U2's hat-tipping to the founders of rock.

Later, there is "Angel of Harlem" a catchy tune written in honor of Billie Holiday, complete with saxophone and trumped by the Memphis Horns. This tribute continues with "When Love Comes to Town," a bluesy tangent that Bono wrote for B.B. King which also features a performance by King. For John Lennon, there is the peculiarly raptorial "God Part II," a rebuttal to Albert Goldman's negative biography of Lennon. This song's message is strong with lyrics like "I don't believe in excess success is to give... I believe in love," but musically this tune is hard to swallow, even for the loyal fan. "Love Rescue Me," co-written by Bob Dylan, is another of the less exciting pieces on the album with its slow, country sound.

The six live songs on the album come across powerfully, allowing Bono to voice the band's political message outside lyrical confines. In the anti-apartheid "Silver and Gold," Bono describes a man "who is ready to take up arms against his oppressor, a man who has lost faith in the peacemakers of the West while they argue and fail to support a man like Bishop Tutu..." During "Bullet the Blue Sky," a song denouncing U.S. policy in El Salvador, Bono says, "...I can't tell the difference between ABC News, 'Hillstreet Blues,' and a preacher...stealing money from the sick and the old. Well the God I believe in isn't short of cash mister."

The live version of "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For," which features a Harlem Choir, will be initially disappointing to those expecting the same version they saw during the Joshua Tree tour. Nonetheless, this version has all of U2's emotion and energy and holds some definite appeal in its gospel rhythm.

Some of the new studio songs that resemble the established U2 sound are "Desire," the first release from the album, "Hawkmoon 269," "Heartland," a welcome return to the surreal sound of The Unforgettable Fire, and "All I Want Is You," a love song that builds with a string accompaniment to finish the album.

As with The Joshua Tree, the lyrics on Rattle and Hum are somewhat redundant, but for fans who want more poison rain, angels, devils, and fire, there is plenty of it.

One disappointing aspect of Rattle and Hum is the small number of live songs from The Joshua Tree tour. Still, U2 brought forth a new stock of impressive songs. Maybe the movie will include more of a taste of the live U2.
The blessed laughter of Jesus

Jesus dropped by the Vatican the other night to give the Pope his report card as Vicar of the Church on earth. John Paul got an A-plus in Faith and Morals, but only a B in Commandment keeping. "I don't understand," the Pontiff said. "Where did I go wrong?"

"Examine your own conscience," the Lord replied, "and let it be your accuser. Can you honestly say that you loved Jimmy Swaggart as you love yourself? I mean, did you turn the other cheek when he said you were a sinner? Remember about being a Samaritan."

"But sometimes instead of 'no' all you said was 'a-bye, a-bye,'" Jesus continued, "so the Lord was seeing the face of this good old man. He didn't want to hurt him. As a good-will gesture, He tore up the report card he had brought."

Jesus continued, in a deliberate understatement: "Calvary, of course, was no laughing matter, but the nightmare of Calvary could never have happened if the Jews and Romans hadn't forgotten how to laugh. If you're able to laugh at yourself in a wholesome way, you aren't apt to get proud and spiteful toward other people, and feel that you have a right to put them on trial, and kill them.

"The irony of the situation was that the jeering crowd came to Calvary thinking the joke was on the Jew they crucified. But He was the only one there so in touch with His grace-filled humanity that He could have laughed if He'd wanted to, though He was in no mood to get off one-liners. The old Scotman, with his wee bit of a joke, 'What a way to spend Easter,' delivered the shortest, finest Good Friday homily I've ever heard."

John Paul II, searching for words, finally said: "One of the questions Christians ask is: 'Did He ever laugh?' The Gospels don't tell us if He laughed. Did you go to the mountains to laugh, as You were going up to pray, afraid, as Chesterton suggested, that Your mirth would be misconstrued?"

Jesus, laughing, answered: "The world was made out of laughter and joy, out of the happiness in the heart of My Father. Rabbis studying the Torah could point out the jokes, puns and word-play that Yahweh left like a signpost in His inspired books for His scholars to discover. Gloom entered the world when I came. The Puritans elevated gloom to a religious art form, and Catholics elevated suffering which accompanies gloom into a holy lifestyle."

Taking the hand that was heavy with the weight of the Fisherman's ring, Jesus said to the Pope: "But you, poor Vicar, struggling with the unhappiness this age lays upon you—please get a sign made for your desk, and put it next to the other sign that says 'The Buck Stops Here.' The new sign should read 'What A Way To Spend Easter!' Remember, it's not a Polish joke, but a Scots joke, reminding you that God made Scots because he loves to laugh."

Now, at the Vatican, John Paul II makes the cardinals tell him a joke a day. They say he prefers humor to prayer, scandalous though it sounds. John Paul answers: "Humor is prayer, if it reminds you that Easter is not necessarily a bed of roses."

Father Robert Griffin
Letters to a Lonely God

love yourself? I mean, did you turn the other cheek when he said you were a phony? When Oral Roberts pushed the panic button, did you offer to lend him money? Remember about being a Good Samaritan."

Jesus continued, "No one promised it would be a cinch to be the Pope."

"'Thy will be done, Lord," answered John Paul in a sincere voice. "But what about some of your other teachings? I often look at all the hearths I could change, if I were allowed to say 'yes' sometimes instead of 'no' all the time, I think things would be easier, even for You, suffering wherever Your children are unhappy."

"You should tell them from Me that Rome wasn't built in a day." He meant that if the Church could change overnight, it wouldn't be the Church; because the Church is in God's hands, and God isn't in a hurry.

"Sometimes, when I'm riding in the popemobile, seeing how torn apart the world is, seeing the hungry children in a Third World country, I stop to give the people my blessing; but that doesn't change anything. Later, I'll say Mass for them, of course, to show how human He is, in addition to being God."

"Once," Jesus said, "when I was being all things to all men, I spent some time with the street people in London. I met an old Scotsman who had been in jail. I asked him what he had done. He answered Me evasively, thinking I was an out-of-work preacher: 'It was an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth.' meaning he had committed a crime of violence. Reading his face, I could tell that his anger was passed; and in his heart, he was at peace with himself."

"He said: 'After coming back from being incarcerated, do you know what I noticed, guv'nor? I noticed that people have forgotten how to laugh.' After telling Me two or three times how much the world needs laughter, he asked: 'Do you know what Our Lord's last words from the Cross were?' I said I didn't know what the words were, but I wanted to hear his version. 'Then he told Me: 'As He was seeing the view from the Cross, Our Lord said: 'Last week, was I asked to tell you face-to-face: is this any way to run the Church?'"

When Jesus saw tears in the face of this good old man, He loved him too much to want a way to spend reminding you that God made Scots because he loves to laugh."

midfield, although there are some good players and I certainly think they will play hard," said Corrigan. "The game surely will be a good learning experience for them."

With six players returning who played in six or more games last year, the Irish defense likely will anchor the team throughout the year. The defense is led by senior tri-captain O'Connor and Spencer, who both started last spring.

O'Connor will start the Hopkins game alongside senior Brendan Cabhill and junior Mike Stephens, who has returned from France to further extend an already talented unit.

Spencer, meanwhile, will enter the game with the defensive-midfield unit, which is inserted in place of the regular middle line in defensive situations. Joining Spencer in the line will be sophomore defenders Evan McInaney and sophomore midfielder Pete Gillin.

Senior Warren Sanger and sophomore Dave Barnard will provide defensive experience off the bench for the Irish.

"We have some good depth on defense and are much farther along defensively than offensively right now," Corrigan said. "If you want to be a good team in any sport, you have to play good defense and I want to see how well we handle them. A good defensive effort could build confidence for the whole year."

Junior Jeff Glazier will start in the goal for the Irish.

"He has great seniors playing in front of him (on defense), and the goalies is really like a quarterback and, no matter what year he is, he has to take control," Corrigan said.

John Hopkins will bring a team comprised of high school All-Americans and numerous NCAA All-Americans. Senior Dave Petrimala, an imposing 6'3" 190 pound two-time All-American defender, is "probably the best defenseman in the country," according to Corrigan.

Other Bluejay players to watch include junior All-American goalie Quint Kessich, sophomore attackman Matt Panetta, and the Kelly midfielders—senior captain Brendan and junior Greg Kelly, who is not related to Brendan, scored five goals in John Hopkins' recent 14-5 win in a scrimmage against the University of Maryland-Baltimore County.

Hopkins coach Don Zimmerman has won three national titles ('84, '86, and '87) while compiling a 37-4 record in his five years as Bluejays coach.

A former player for Hopkins, Zimmerman also has coached at North Carolina and was an assistant last year for the United States World Games team.
Irish look to get back on track
Loyola, injuries to test cross country team at MCC meet

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

It's time for the men's cross country team to reestablish its position as a national power when it competes in the Midwest Collegiate Conference Championships today in Chicago.

In the words of junior runner Tom O'Rourke, it's time to "put up or shut up." The Irish, who finished seventh in the country last year at the NCAA Championships, have encountered many difficulties in their drive to repeat or even top last year's performance.

In the last two weeks, the Irish have suffered a defeat at Southern California and have lost their number-three runner, junior Mike O'Connor, to a leg injury.

The MCC Championships are looming big in the minds of the runners, due to their recent disappointments. "The MCC's are especially important now," said fifth-year senior captain Dan Garrett. "After we ran so badly at USC, we have to get our confidence up or we won't do anything at districts."

The MCC Championships will precede the NCAA District IV meet by two weeks, with the latter being the qualifying race for the NCAA Championships. The team hopes to improve its running in anticipation of the District IV meet, which is the most competitive district in the country and which lead-coach Joe Piane has called a "hel­lacious district."

The MCC's, which will be hosted by Loyola (Ill.), will take place in Montrose Park in Chicago. Loyola and Notre Dame are expected to be the main competitors, but other strong teams such as Butler, Detroit and Marquette also will be attending.

Earlier this year, Notre Dame won the National Catholic meet held on its home course, with Loyola finishing second. Now, a new meet will take place on Loyola's home course, and the Irish will be without O'Connor.

Suddenly, a new rivalry with Loyola has emerged. "(The rivalry) has become really big in the last two to three years," said Head Coach Joe Piane. "Loyola's front three runners will be very good. Based upon how banged up we are and how they (Loyola) ran at the National Catholic, they should be the team to beat."

One of the problems with the team lately is that the Irish have not run aggressively. It let USC take the initiative in Southern California and the Irish really got back into the race. Being aggressive, getting out of the deadwood and getting in front from the gun are the keys to running well at this meet," said Piane. "The runners must also run more as a team, and in large part how we do will depend on our fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh runners."

The team looks ready for the challenge. Its workouts this week have been strong, and runners such as Ryan Cahill and Tom O'Rourke have trained especially well, according to Garrett.

"We're working out with a little more aggressiveness," said Garrett. "We're just pumped up for the race. We really want to do well and prove that we can run better than we have been."

Last year, Notre Dame's Drive to Cure Paralysis was the second most successful tournament in the country, raising over $6,300 for the Buonaconti Fund. Our #1 fundraising team, Big Bill's Team, was only dollars short of a free trip to the Sugar Bowl.

This year we want to blow this project out of the water and be the number one school in the nation. Help Non-Varsity Athletics set a precedent that hundreds of other schools will look up to.

Danny Gordon (6) and the Notre Dame soccer team will travel to Miami this weekend for the Florida International Gatorade Classic. The Irish, 11-3-2, left on Thursday for Miami, where they will play Penn State and Boston University.

Both teams sport excellent records entering the competition. Boston University has been ranked as high as 16th in the nation and is looking for its third tournament berth in four years.

It's that type of competition which Irish coach Dennis Grace feels could help his team in the long run.

"Those (tough, non-region) games can only help us," said Grace.

Unfortunately, the Irish did not take advantage of two similar opportunities last week with losses to College of Charleston and Rutgers. Now, Notre Dame's back is against the wall. One win is a must, with two wins almost a necessity.

State College, Grace could have a surprise for his weekend opponents. In last week's matches, a man-to-man attack proved successful in both second halves, and Grace may experiment with a full 90 minutes of pressure.

"We pulled our sweeper," noted Grace of the strategy move. "We decided to put our athleticism against theirs, and we really took it to them."

The Irish will face both Penn State and Boston University during this tournament.

The Tigers, although they sound more threatening than mere Cornhuskers, have not always lived up to the veracity that characterizes their mascots. LSU has been plagued by inconsistencies this year—a problem which has overshadowed much of the team's success—but the Tigers still have been strong contenders nationally. "LSU has been ranked in and out of the top 20 over the season," said Lambert. "They are second or third in the Southern region and can't be taken lightly!"

The Irish will go after Nebraska and LSU with their big gun, senior middle blocker Mary Kay Waller. Waller leads the team in kills with 208 for a .264 hitting percentage and also has accumulated a team-high 119 total blocks. It still is questionable whether senior outside hitter Zanette Bennett will help Wal­ler provide their usual one-two punch for the Irish offense because she is still fighting an illness.

But the Irish still can look to senior Maureen Shea, who has 131 kills thus far as well as 56 total blocks.

Notre Dame will need good passing and ability to get their offensive arsenal into full swing and lately have been getting both from senior Whitney Shevman and freshman Julie Bremner.

Defensively, Bremner has 213 digs to lead the Irish. Shewman has 209 to follow Bremner in that category. Bremner also has been the key to making a smooth transition from defense to offense. She has given Irish hitters 1476 assists thus far for an impressive assist percentage of .549. "I think we got back on track with the win over Ohio State," said Lambert. "We just need to put it together, and keep it together, to win some games."

"Thou shall not pass!" could be Army’s motto this season. Since Coach Jim Young instilled the wishbone offense in 1984, the Cadets are 6-0 when they throw six passes or less, 31-4 when they throw nine times or less. When they put the ball in the air more than nine times, their record is a sorry 3-14-1.

To paraphrase an old gag, Army is first in war, first in peace and last among the nation’s 104 Division I-A teams in passing offense. In seven games, of which they have won six, the Cadets have thrown just 39 passes and completed 16 for an average of 56 yards a game. But they are third in rushing with a 377-yard average.

Rutgers, which beat Michigan State and Penn State, was Army’s latest victim, falling 34-24 last Saturday. With Air Force, Vanderbil, Boston College and Navy left, a 10-1 season is certainly possible. "Army has a certain element of discipline simply by the nature of their institution," Rutgers coach Dick Anderson said. "The wishbone, I think, is tailored to their temperament, tailored to their institutions, because it involves an extreme amount of discipline. I think they play it exceptionally well. "They’re not very big up front offensive or defensively, and yet they come after you very tough, very tough."

Coach Bob Ricca of St. John’s (N.Y.) University has seen both sides of the NCAA’s new conversion rule which allows the defensive team to score two points.

Earlier in the season, with the score tied 24-4, the Redmen blocked an extra point attempt by Iona and ran it all the way for two points and a 26-4 victory.

Last Saturday, C.W. Post scored a touchdown to pull within 21-20 and lined up for an extra point that could have tied the score. But they are third in the lines.

Since the game, with the score tied 24-4, the Redmen blocked a second point attempt by Iona and ran it all the way for two points and a 26-4 victory.

Instead of a 21-21 tie, Post led 28-21 on a 31-yard field goal by John Kirk at 289-1124. -The Observer

As of Saturday’s game, McInerney is one of the few both sides of the NCAA’s new conversion rule which allows the defensive team to score two points.

Although we do not have a designated play for a blocked extra point, we do have a play called ‘Red-Red’ for botched field goals where the ball recoverer throws to the tight end. Coach Tom Marshall said, ‘I give Tim a lot of credit. He had the wherewithal to regroup and make a great play.’

McInerney is better known as a three-time All-American lacrosse player and playing collegiate football for the first time.

In addition, he is a defensive back who ranked among the Division III leaders with seven interceptions in five games.

Schafer. "It (five forwards) contributes to our offensive po­ tential, but it’s potentially dis­ astrous too, and we paid dearly for that. It’s a bad lesson, and we don’t want it to happen again.”

The first 500 people to enter Saturday’s game will receive plastic goalie-keeper’s masks in a promotional event sponsored by Travel-More.

ND lacrosse hosts Johns Hopkins tonight

By PETE LAFLEUR

The excitement and anticipation surrounding the Notre Dame lacrosse game tonight against John Hopkins University can be seen in something as simple as door prizes. The prizes to be awarded according to program numbers and the face-off will include Notre Dame lacrosse sticks and sweatshirts, two giant pizzas from the Penn State football game and a pizza a month for a year from Godfather’s Pizza.

But every fan who attends this eventful game should be awarded by the play of Notre Dame and John Hopkins, who many refer to as “the Notre Dame of college lacrosse.” Although the official NCAA season does not begin until the spring, first-year Notre Dame coach Kevin Corrigan said the Irish will be “doing everything we can to win the game.” Faceoff will be 6:30 p.m. at Edw ard J. “Moose” Krause Stadium or the Loftus Center, depending on the weather.

Kevin O’Connor, a senior, and Doug Spencer with an experienced defense and a very young midfield will lead the Irish attack. O’Connor led the team in scoring last season with 33 goals and 25 assists, and he is the fifth leading scorer in Irish history. Additionally, O’Connor’s records for total points in a game (nine) and assists in a game (seven). “John is an outstanding individual and will be very important to our success this year,” said Corrigan. “He hasn’t practiced much this summer, but he makes good decisions on the field and we need him in practice to make the team better.”

Playing alongside O’Connor will be juniors Brian McHugh and Rob Lynn. McHugh, the team’s strongest player, was second in scoring last season and one of the team leaders in ground balls. Lynn, who has been a pleasant surprise, will be making his first start after seeing limited action last spring.

Lynn will be starting for fellow junior Dave Carey, who is nursing an ankle injury. Corrigan said Carey still should be able to contribute.

The Irish midfield warrants the greatest concern with 16 of last year’s midfielders lost to graduation, injury, cuts and retirement. Most significant of the loss of last year’s tri-captains, the composed first midfield line. This year’s line contains no seniors and only one junior, but we have an offensive threat.”

Quigley will be starting alongside sophomore John Finn, who is one of six returning seniors and freshmen. Chris Nelson. The second midfield line has an all-freshman look with Brian Burke, Mark Sullivan, and Doug Murray.

“We are awfully young at this point,” said Quigley.

In honor of the grandfather of Notre Dame men’s tennis, Notre Dame hosts the Tom Fallon Notre Dame Invitational this weekend at the Eck Tennis Pavilion.

“I thought you had to be dead to have a tournament named after you and I’m not quite there yet,” said Fallon, who coached both the tennis and wrestling teams at Notre Dame.

Fallon, the winningest coach in Irish history, coached the men’s team for 31 years (1962-1993). Fallon posted a 317-200 during his reign. He also established the Irish wrestling program and coached that team for 15 years.

“It is a very great honor for me,” said Fallon who was inducted into the Collegiate Tennis Hall of Fame this past August.

“It will be a homecoming of sorts, since I know some of the opposing coaches and players.”

Current Irish coach Bob Bayliss has this to say about Fallon.

For the first time in seven years, the Irish face off against the No. 6 Nebraska and Lousiana State over the weekend. Mary Kay Waller (left) leads the Irish in both kills and blocks.

Cornhuskers might not be the most intimidating once they are up in the score, which will be 0-0 as the Nebraska team enters its first home weekend series tonight hoping to keep last Tuesday’s home opener in the past.

After a 4-2 victory over the Irish, Nebraska buried the Irish 6-3 last Tuesday in what Notre Dame coach Ric Schafer termed “a collectively poor performance.”

The Irish will need to be in much better form if they are to challenge the Rochester Institute of Technology this weekend. Faceoff is 7:30 p.m. for both Friday and Saturday’s games at the Joyce ACC.

“Time is our hockey team to make amends,” said Schafer. “I think it (Tuesday) was just a bad night. Now it’s one of the best games over, and we can go from there.”

“Better play is ahead of us.”

RIT, a Division III school, opened its first season under coach Buddy Powers this weekend. The Tigers return 17 players from last year’s 15-1 team.

“Reve of the better Division III teams in the country year in and year out,” said RIT.

May be ‘raising Arizona’ over New Year’s

It might be too early to call the Irish football team Fiesta Bowl bound, but I think I’m going to the travel agency soon to check the price of a plane ticket to Tempe, Ariz.

A number of things could happen between now and the Fiesta Bowl opener on Jan. 2: the Irish play in it, Miami will not. Sorry, Jimmy.

One great thing about the Fiesta Bowl is that if the Irish play in it, Miami will not. Sorry, Jimmy.

The Pac-10 and Big Ten have announced that the teams will not play each other for the first time since the Pac-10 lost its occasional title game.
