Bush ticket distribution stirs controversy

Wrong info on distribution time leads to problems

Incorrect information on the distribution of tickets to today's lecture by Vice President George Bush has resulted in controversy around the campus.

Fliers were distributed by the Office of Student Activities on Friday, said Director of Student Activities Joseph Cassidy. The fliers said in part: "student tickets available Monday at noon at the LaFortune information desk." The information desk normally opens at noon, said Cassidy.

Starting at 8 a.m., however, 900 student tickets were distributed from the information desk in the LaFortune Student Center.

Many students registered as Republicans with Notre Dame-Saint Mary's College Republicans were notified by phone that distribution would be taking place at 8 a.m. Several student organizations, including Students for DuKakis-Bentsen and student government, did not find out the actual distribution time until late Sunday afternoon.

"Student Activities took it as if it were business as normal," said Richard Conklin, director of public relations and information. Conklin said the University and the Bush campaign advance team had agreed "from the beginning" that ticket distribution should be as early as possible.

President George Bush will be on campus today as part of the Law School's White Center for Law and Government Lecture Series. The lecture will be at 2:30 p.m. at Stepan Center. See TICKETS, page 7

The confusion surrounding Monday's distribution of tickets for Vice President George Bush's lecture today has student leaders irate.

Leaders of campus organizations representing both parties were displeased that the original time of distribution announced last Friday on Office of Student Activities fliers was incorrect and that a lack of communication existed in correcting the error.

Candidate Ward visits Psych class
By CHRIS MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Third Congressional District candidate Tom Ward made a surprise visit to Prof. Daniel Laplasy's psychology class on Monday.

Ward, a 1970 graduate of Notre Dame, emphasized his personal philosophy that "what you give is what you get" in the 20-minute speech and question and answer period during Laplasy's Child Development class.

The Democratic candidate encouraged students to make a difference in the world. "I would encourage you as you face decisions to find a way to give something," he said. "In that way, you'll get a lot back," Ward said.

Voting is one way of giving something, said Ward. "Democracy works only if the people vote. It's the minimum we can do.

Notre Dame students can have an even more direct impact by entering politics, said Ward.

"We need good leadership people like you in this room," said Ward.

Students have also played an important role in his campaign, added Ward. "It's a good place for those who are interested in politics to get started," said Ward.

Key to succeeding in politics, as in life, is the realization that "the only limitations are our own," said Ward. "There's nothing I have that you don't. You could be up here in five or ten years," Ward said.

Ward went on to address his personal political philosophy and his race against 3rd District incumbent Congressman John Hiler.

Steering will begin at 1:30 p.m. and ends at 2 p.m. Back and white signs will not be permitted outside Stepan Center, said Director of Public Relations and Information Richard Conklin. "What people do outside is fine," said Conklin.

"This has been standard procedure with all debates," said Conklin. "People do the same thing with Ford, Carter, with Reagan, with Mandel and all the other political figures on campus."

INSIDE COLUMN

Notre Dame men do their laundry in their own way

Dear Michelle Dall,

This is in response to your Oct. 6, 1988, Inside Column titled “Cleaning up your act is a dirty business.”

I must agree with several of your statements. The sight of men washing clothes is certainly pitiful. Many of our sex do resort to ploys such as calling up random girls to help us, and making such a mess in the laundry room that any female with a sense of compassion feels compelled to lend a hand.

However, the vast majority of the male sex labors through the laundry experience, doing their own laundry in their own way.

First, you must realize that the clothes you see as a girl are not the same ones I see as a guy. You see a pink blouse made of 100 percent cotton, something which would look good with that new sweater your Aunt Jill got you for Christmas last year.

I see a pink shirt. Period.

And it’s probably dirty.

As I’m sure you’ve noticed, the average Notre Dame male couldn’t match a shirt to a sweater if his life depended on it. Shirts are simply intended to be worn. Ideally the shirt is clean – or at least pressed.

This leads to our attitude regarding cleaning this hypothetical pink shirt. If it doesn’t need to match, what’s a little extra bleach matter? Logically, while means clean, therefore the more bleach the better, right?

Remember, white equals clean.

Second, it is a well-known and scientifically-proven fact that girls are born with an innate knowledge of what shrinks in what temperature water (I think I learned that in Honors Biology; I got a B+).

This is the only logical explanation for how girls know that that dirty pink shirt belongs in cold water (I think). As you admitted in your column, girls don’t do laundry at home either; that’s what moms are for. Therefore, since they couldn’t care less about a home, a genetic explanation is the only answer.

This goes to prove a third point: some girl in Notre Dame (or whenever they invented the washing machine) decided that clothes should be washed by color. Certainly no guy ever decided this. It would be much more logical to sort on another principle. Many guys, in a rebellion against the womankind, the Fab Detergent Co. has created the greatest invention of all time. Better than the automobile, better than the computer, better than the wheel: the “Fab One Shot.”

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - American hostage Terry Anderson, in a videotape released Monday by his kidnappers, read a statement that accused the Reagan administration of blocking his release and urged the next president to do more.

President Reagan denied interfering with efforts to free Anderson, and his chief spokesman, Martin Fitzwater, denounced the tape as "a cynical attempt" to influence the Nov. 8 election.

Copies of the 2-minute, 35-second tape were delivered to two Western news agencies in Beirut four days after Anderson, 41, marked his fourth birthday in captivity.

Statements from the propane Islamic Jihad, which holds Anderson, and his chief spokesman for the Associated Press, began the message on Tuesday, November 1, 1988. The Observer.

"On the occasion of Terry Anderson's birthday and in response to your letters, and according to his desire to send you a recorded message, we hereby enclose with this statement the recorded message on videotape," the kidnappers said.

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, began the message by identifying himself and saying the date was Oct. 30.

"Once again I'm being given a chance to speak to my family, to my friends and to the American people," he said.

Anderson said his spirits were boosted by the birthday greetings he received, "But as my fourth birthday in captivity passes and as the end of my fourth year (in captivity) approaches, I find it difficult to keep my hopes and my courage high."

"I've been very close to being released several times over the past two years. But each time it seems that the U.S. government uses its influence to stop any agreement from being made. And I don't understand this."

In Los Angeles, Reagan told reporters his administration had done everything possible to win the hostages' freedom. "I don't think that was Terry speaking," he said. "I think he had a script that was given to him."

When asked about the statement on the tape that the U.S. government interfered when the hostages were about to be released, Reagan said, "That is absolutely not true, but let me point something out. Terry Anderson is in that terrible confinement at the hands of those barbarians -- any information he has has to come from there; there is no contact with the outside world."

"We have been doing everything we can for the release of the hostages," the president said.

Senator discusses Bush ticket distribution

By FLORENTINE HOEFKER

News Staff

Student Senate again suspended its weekly agenda, this time to deal with the controversy surrounding the distribution of tickets for today's lecture by Vice President George Bush.

In an unusually long meeting Monday evening, the Senate discussed the available details surrounding the event. They agreed that blame could not yet be assigned to specific individuals, and voted on a representative statement which would clearly state their views on the event.

The senate resolution concluded that the University-sponsored lecture is supposed to be non-partisan, but has since not become such. As a result of difficulties with the ticket distribution process, the audience which has received tickets is probably not representative of the Notre Dame student body as a whole.

The resolution states that they "regret the manner in which the lack of information was taken advantage of." In it, the senate also said that they "condemn the manner in which the ticket information was disseminated."

Mike Pence, student body vice president, seemed to capture the general opinion of student government when he said, "I find it disturbing that Notre Dame students were involved with and perpetuated this event."

The senate also considered writing a press release to express the opinion of student government concerning the event, but voted against it, saying that their primary concern was for the students.

There is a grim reality of college life that you may or may not be acquainted with. Typing.

No, make that hours of typing. Precisely why you should consider a Macintosh computer.

With programs like WriteNow and Microsoft Word, you can compose, edit, move paragraphs, and change type sizes and styles with one finger. Which can come in very handy. (Especially if that's the way you type.) And that's just one example of how Macintosh helps students work smarter, quicker and more creatively.

The good news is, with Macintosh you don't have to know anything about computers to use one.

The better news is, you don't have to know anything about white out, either.

MBA Mini-Forum to be held today in the CCE

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Staff Reporter

The annual "MBA Mini-Forum" will be held today in the lower level of the Center for Continuing Education from noon until 4 p.m.

"The purpose of the Forum is to bring together as many top MBA programs from across the country in one setting," said Jeff Rice, Assistant Director of Career and Placement Services, which sponsors the event.

Rice said that representatives from thirty-four schools will be present, many from admissions offices. The University of Chicago, Wake Forest, Penn State, University of Virginia, University of Southern California, University of Texas at Austin, and Michigan State are among the prestigious programs that will have information available to students, said Rice. The table representatives will answer questions and distribute information particular to graduate programs, said Rice. "No interviews or appointments will take place. In- stead students can stay as long as they wish to gather information."

Representatives from the MBA program at Notre Dame will also be present and available to talk with interested students, said Rice. He said that this was particularly beneficial to students that are unable to get individual appointments. Students of all majors are encouraged to attend because "all types of majors enter MBA programs, not just business majors," according to Rice.

"All classes should come to the Forum so that students can begin to accumulate information and make more informed choices about their future," said Rice.

A benefit of this Forum is "to help students understand the real purpose of an MBA and what it can do for them career-wise," said Rice.

Rice said that students are also able to make contacts at the schools for the future. "The representatives are very personable and students are usually able to call and ask for the person by name at a later date."

In the past the average attendance has been 200 students, said Rice. "I feel good about the program because no where else in four hours will you have such an array of information available," said Rice.

Labor, Likud battle in Israeli election

Associated Press

JERUSALEM - Israelis vote Tuesday in an election tied to 11 months of violence that has cost the lives of more than 300 Palestinians and 10 Jews, including a rabbi's daughter and her three children killed in a weekend attack.

Sunday's firebomb attack on a bus that killed 27-year-old schoolteacher Rachel Weiss and her children was expected to boost the chances of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the conservative Likud bloc, who advocates tougher measures against the Arab uprising in the occupied lands.

"There's no question it will help Likud," said Daniel Elazar, a political analyst of the Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs. "For most voters, this will only reconfirm their beliefs, but for those voters sitting on the fence something like this could push them off to the right."

Ze'ev Eitan, a political analyst at Tel Aviv University's Jaffa Center for Strategic Studies, said: "in this election, that could be the difference between a clear victory by one party or a tie."

Polls taken before the attack and published Monday in the newspaper Maariv either gave Likud the edge or indicated a dead heat similar to the one that forced Likud and the center-left Labor Party into a "national unity" coalition in 1984. Four different polls indicated Labor, led by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, and its left-wing partners would win 45-55 of the Knesset's 120 seats, with Likud and its allies getting 56-65.

300 Rice student tickets are needed for mentally disabled

By CINDY PETRITES
News Staff

Students representing the Logan Center Council for the Retarded and the LaPorte County Sheltered Workshop have joined forces to allow developmentally disabled children and adults to attend the Rice football game this weekend.

To raise their goal of 300 student tickets, the students have launched an ad campaign and are manning booths in the dining halls to make students aware of their efforts and motivate them to contribute. "It's something the kids really look forward to," said senior Karen Maier, co-leader of the Logan Center Council for the Retarded.

The Council, composed of Notre Dame and St. Mary's students who organize weekly activities with the retarded community of South Bend has been collecting student tickets for the last few years to allow Logan Center clients the chance to attend one Notre Dame home football game a year.

"It's almost a tradition now," said Maier, noting their success in past years.

"This is the first year they have joined forces with the LaPorte County Sheltered Workshop representatives in a unified appeal to the Notre Dame student population. "It's a chance to do something for the less fortunate, to give someone else the time of their lives. It's an easy sacrifice to make, and it has to make you feel good," said Sue Cunningham, Special Projects Coordinator for the CSC and representative for the LaPorte County Sheltered Workshop.

The last time developmentally disabled clients at the Michigan City-located workshop attended a Notre Dame football game was the ND vs. Air Force game two years ago.

"It was a big event in their lives. You should have seen them, coming off the buses with the biggest smiles, clutching their lunchbags."

That year 70 developmentally disabled adults made the hour-long bus trek from Michigan City to cheer Notre Dame on to a 31-3 victory over the Air Force Falcons.

Maier hopes the campaign will enjoy even greater success this year thanks to the new system of issuing individual tickets instead of ticket books. In past years ticket donating students had to rely on the Council to return their ticket books after the game. The new system makes contributing their tickets risk-free for the students and much less hassle for the collectors.

Rice isn't the biggest game for most students. But, said Maier, of these individuals who make it a point to sing the Notre Dame fight song every Saturday, "it is to them."

Electoral ’88: C
Dukakis vows to seek progressive change

So, you thought Ronald Reagan could not be president again? Then think again. George Bush will make your worst nightmares come true—only worse. In November the American people have the chance to reverse the reaction of the past eight years by electing Michael Dukakis and John B. Quayle. If George Bush and J. Danforth Quayle are elected, the trends of the Reagan-Bush era will not only continue but also get worse.

Karl Kronenberger
Thomas Darin

Dukakis represents a trend away from catering to the rich and neglecting the poor in this country.

A Bush-Quayle victory would continue the Reagan-Bush trends of malignant neglect of America’s workers. An estimated 12 million Americans lost jobs since 1981. As a result of plant-closings and layoffs. For those laid off, there is only a 62 percent chance of finding another job within a year. Seventy-four percent of the new jobs created in our economy during the 1980s pay less than $7,600 a year—35 percent less than a poverty level income for a family of four. The Reagan-Bush era, 45 percent of job growth has been in the two lowest—paying industries. Bush is not on the side of the American workers. Every year since 1981 the Bush administration has made cuts in already inadequate child care programs and offered no new ways for working and poor people to afford care. Bush opposed recent legislation requiring 40 days notice of plant closings to workers. And the administration cut funds for employment and training programs by 70 percent since it entered office in 1979. While Bush recently flip-flopped on the minimum wage—Womeque in 1977, its value has declined 31 percent in real value.

The Bush agenda and the Quayle record signal what they will do to workers, the unemployed and the poor. They oppose the national health care bill. They oppose the federal government “unloading” housing stocks, and they call for sufficient social housing funds and many of these do you think will provide health care? It also must be noted that the Reagan-Bush administration has repeatedly tried to dismantle Medicare and replace it with a voucher plan. They also cut $20 billion from Social Security and tried to push through $3,196 $20 billion in Social Security taxes, mixed housing production, and federal rental assistance.

The Harvard University Physicians Task Force on Hunger estimates that 20 million people in the U.S. go hungry for some period of time each month—12 million of them children. The incidence of poverty in our nation, the infant mortality rate, is higher than that of 17 industrialized countries. To address this problem this is the effectively proven Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC). WIC has been successfully used in highly vulnerable new financial and regulatory strategies for dealing with expiration constraints. To address the housing shortage, he proposes a National Partnership for Affordable Housing with tax credits, mixed housing production, and federal rental assistance.

Bush’s administration to effectively support human rights, but has been taken domestic and international and compromised values and American’s own causes. Bus Vice President 1969 and then the administration Ayalaath Khameen evidence that the Reaga in 1980 cut a deal with Chad with the release of the hostages held until after the er in the U.S.
George Bush may say he is fighting terrorism, but he allowed Panamanian General Manuel Noriega—a known drug dealer since 1972, a terrorist, and a murderer himself—to conduct business as usual with our government. Bush also supports the Central American military commander Enrique Ber- nardez who was quoted, "We will see more sabotage, maybe attacks on Sandinista personalities, and why not terrorism?" To Ferdinand Marcos, one of the most oppressive abusers of human rights, Bush gave praise for "his adherence to democratic principles and the democratic process."

Bush is also connected with CIA senior specialists who led a domestic propaganda operation to manipulate the media, the Congress, and public opinion to support administration policies. Ethics and democracy will not be meaningless words to Dukakis.

Dukakis will lead a trend toward progressive change in America, one with an emphasis on the victims of the economic violence in the last eight years. The priority will be shifted from protecting the rich to protecting the poor. Foreign policy will be conducted with a respect for self-determination, not negotiation through strength and terror. Dukakis will work within the law instead of above the law. For there to be progressive change in the U.S., there must be climate for climate change. Such a climate will exist under Dukakis as leader of this country.

The lure of drugs and gangs in our nation’s schools is eroding the education of the very people who need it the most: the lower classes.

George Bush’s understanding of the vital importance of family issues is evidenced in his promise to use his "family values" speech at the Republican convention in New Orleans. "It is family that communicates to our children—the twenty-first century—our culture, our religious faith, our traditions and our history."

George Bush has outlined programs intended to curb the trends which are causing the destruction of the family. A "toddler" tax credit program has been proposed that will aid poor mothers in finding proper child care to help the development of their children. Bush will strongly encourage states to promote child care programs that will allow teenage mothers to continue their education by remaining in school, thus allowing them the opportunity for a better life. George Bush will remove disincentives to grandparents caring for their grandchildren by repealing the earnings limitations for social security.

The Governor of Massachusetts is quick to point out his ethnic heritage, but his dealings with Rev. Jesse Jackson show that he does not really understand the needs of minorities.

Civil rights have always been a concern of George Bush. The Vice President’s promise to nominate a Hispanic on the Cabinet may sound patronizing, but it exemplifies his understanding of a minority’s commitment in the upper levels of government. The Governor of Massachusetts is quick to point to his ethnic heritage, but his dealings with Rev. Jesse Jackson show that he does not really understand the needs of minorities.

George Bush’s experience with drug prevention and his hard stance on crime will aid in purging two of the greatest plagues of families and the nation. The Governor of Massachusetts is not even the support of the police force of Boston.

The traditional family, the one that class families having two parents in- ling by the wayside. In the past, the family served to educate and to in- still values in our children. However, the pandemic teenage drug abuse, gang violence, terrorism, and illiteracy points to a loss of values and direction in American youth.

The loss, which has been most prevalent in the past 20 years, has weakened the economic and social bases of our country.

Not so long ago divorce, single parenthood and unwed mothers were exceptions to the norm. People today still think that these situations are anomalies, but statistics say otherwise.

Most of the marriages performed this year will end in divorce. The United States possesses the highest rate of divorce in the world.

Three-fifths of the children born this year will spend at least part of their childhood in a single-parent family.

One-fifth of all children born in the United States last year were born to unwed mothers; the figure for minorities is even higher.

These figures should be cause for alarm to anyone who cares about the future of our nation.

The lure of drugs and gangs in our nation’s schools is eroding the education of the very people who need it the most: the lower classes.

The middle class is by no means immune to the problems brought about by the destruction of the family. With a large number of middle class families in the workforce, children are often left to be raised by friends, relatives, or daycare facilities. There is a definite loss of values and of culture when children are left unattended. Parents are forced to work only an hour and a half per day. Our public schools and child care facilities cannot begin to compete for this loss of parental care.

The 1986 presidential campaign has been deluged with images of Ronald Reagan and the future of our country. The American voter must determine which candidate is best able to help move the American family in the right direction. I feel that George Bush and the Republican Party are willing to make a firm and sincere commitment to bring the family back from ruin.

While Ronald Reagan has brought economic prosperity, jobs, peace, and world respect, his attempts to restore the family have failed. Sadly, I think that and that is where the family has suffered the most. Under Secretary of Education William Bennett, the public schools have improved, but there remains much work to be done. Unfortunately, the average teacher’s salary has decreased by 20 percent in the small yet significant progress which has been made over the past eight years in the area of family issues has been overshadowed by the various scandals which have rocked the Reagan administration.

George Bush is not Ronald Reagan. George Bush did not like Ronald Reagan eight years ago, and I still doubt they are the best of friends. Bush has done his job, a loyal advisor, and he has done well. George Bush, however, rises far above his former boss on the issues of family and values.

Britain Through the Nag's Head

The usual Sunday lunch-time ritual of walking down the road to the pub is tinged with extra excitement by the fruits of several months of hard work and special care. The first round of drinks is ordered, and the hot tip for the 2.35 horse-race at Kempton Park.

I discovered the charms of having a local pub through Sunningdale's Nag's Head. I was drawn into the open friendliness, and soon found myself rushing through the rituals of the week, anxiously awaiting my Sunday junti to the place that I had dubbed the most hospitable in England.

Physically, it would never win any "House Beautiful" awards, but to me it would lose some of its atmosphere if Jean and Albert, the proprietors, ever found the time and inclination to fix the paper on the ceiling, parts of which are held in place with strips of cellulose, or to give the nicotine-stained walls a fresh coat of paint in their original shade of off-white.

After my first few visits, the faded, plush upholstery on the bar stools and chairs and the glasses, unused and undusted for years, ceased to appear worn, and simply added to the character of the place.

The England portrayed through the glossy picture postcards of the Changing of the Guard and the whispered rumours about the stability of the Prince and Princess of Wales' marriage has little in common with the one I experience through these weekly excursions. Both are reflections of England's past and present, yet it is through these people that I feel I am truly experiencing what it means to be a "Brit."

Headaches of the past week pale into insignificance in the company of the regulars as we exchange the customary friendly banter. For the time being, I could want nothing more from life than my pint of craft as I lean back in my favourite seat, listening with half an ear to the talk of this week's special at the fishmonger's on the side of me and a heated debate over this weekend's edition of the Racing Post on the other.

To top it all off, after two straight years of embarrassment, my family has finally succeeded in winning the unique distinction of calling ourselves the champion onion growers of Sunningdale, Royal Berkshire, England. If nothing else, this elevated status affords us the privilege of holding our heads high in the pub until next year.

Although not currently enrolled in an overseas program, Alison Cocks is a citizen of both the United States and Britain and has lived overseas for a number of years. This is the first in a series of articles relating her experiences in Europe.

London’s Driving Me Crazy!

Strains from “The Flight of the Bumblebee” drummed in my mind like background music as The Maniac Behind The Wheel ripped his Big Bad Bus from lane to lane, took corners at excessive speeds with millimeters to spare, and had a harrowing habit of driving up onto the sidewalk to get out of the way.

Not to knock the driver’s amazing skill. Squeezing that mobile monstrosity through traffic is definitely an art, and he was a master. Thank goodness the windshield was the size of a movie screen, and we didn’t miss a single swipe. Our asthmatic shutter- fingered the brake and gaped as we caught our breath with every turn of the wheel.

“Wicky! Wicky!” the driver cried to three people who had the unfortunate luck of being caught on the street as our bus barrelled around the corner. They hesitated, horrified, IN THE MIDDLE OF THE ROAD. “Be your sleeping in bed? You’ll get killed that way!” he shouted at them. But did we slow up? Not the backwards bus from Hades.

All too soon I was in the uncomfortable position of being one of those poor pedestrians without the American Automatic Right-of-Way. Glancing to the left to check for oncoming traffic, I stepped out into the street, only to be vehemently beeped at by a taxi cab driving Pell mell straight for me from the other direction, with no hint of mercy in its brake pads. In fact, the driver floored it with the full intention of giving me a crash course in pedestrian “p’s” and “q’s.” Silly me forgot that here, oncoming traffic “oncomes” from the right.

Even if you do look the right way, and that oncoming car seems a mile away, never think that you can beat it across that intersection.

When you dash into the street, you make the opening move of the British driver’s favorite game: Flatten the Fool. When you break into a run, his face breaks into an eerie sneer as he accelerates with glee to nothing short of the speed of sound. At this point, you can be sure he won’t break at all, and your only course of action is to break into a cold sweat and dive for the nearest manhole.

Travel in London has indeed been hazardous, for while there is so much to see, to walk down the street with eyes turned upwards rather than fixed on the demon double-decker bus-bent-on-destruction could prove “bloody awful.”

And, sitting with the “Keep Britain Tidy” campaign, there are little green men on many corners of London that live in the cross-walk lights and help pedestrians avoid making a mess of themselves. Yet even these aids have not been enough to keep us from dragging each other out of the path of the villainous Vauxhalls and mean Mercedes. About the only thing we haven’t been in danger of being hit by are the Royal Mail trucks.

When Notre Dame keeper Kelly and Debbie Ho as being bright McCrystal blocked a Xavier remarkable tournament. penalty shot with no time left. State was ranked in the top of its first varsity season. Schmidt thought that Xavier second half against the goal was scored. may have been offsides when the tournament. The idea was to stop a counterattack of its own. Schmidt decided on a tactical change, switching to a one-on-one strategy and taking out the sweeper. The premise was to stop up the Dayton offense and free the Irish front line to generate a counterattack of its own. It had the opposite effect.

"They jumped on us pretty quick," said Schmidt. "We've never allowed more than two goals a game all season and it was a new experience for us. We didn't know how to react. We didn't play to our potential."

Schmidt said the difference between the two teams was a matter of experience. "Dayton has played a lot of good Division 1 teams," said Schmidt. "In our first year, we lack that experience against top talent. We are definitely going to upgrade our schedule next year. We've learned a lot.

Against Xavier, Notre Dame played a more evenly matched game, but was unable to pull out a victory. "I thought we should have won," said Schmidt.

Xavier scored early in the match by Joey Sosak back to tie it up for the Irish, scoring her team's only goal of the tournament.

The game went into overtime when Notre Dame keeper Kelly Muchting blocked a Xavier penalty shot with no time left. The Irish proved unable to cede the momentum into overtime, however, and lost the match on what Schmidt termed a questionable goal. Schmidt thought that Xavier may have been offside when the goal was scored.

"We played better in the second half against Xavier," he said. "But we were still tentative after Dayton. We started to play our type of game. It was just a case of missed opportunities."

Schmidt cited the play of K. Sullivan, Kelly Harratty and Debbie Ho as being bright spots in its second round unremarkable tournament. "It was a valuable experience and it will show up for us down the road," he said.

Notre Dame will take its 13-1 record to Michigan State on Friday to play the final game of its first varsity season. "Three weeks ago, Michigan State was ranked in the top 20," said Schmidt. "How well we do all depends on our state of mind."

Women's C.C. places second in MCC meet

The Notre Dame women's cross country team finished second at the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships, losing out by first place by only two points.

Going into the meet, the Irish runners knew that Dayton was the team to beat. They came close, but the final score showed that Dayton had the winning edge, 30-32. Notre Dame took four spots in the top ten, led by Lucy Nussair, who took second with a time of 18:32, proving once again that she can be counted on to finish high for the team. Captain Theresa Rice was six seconds behind Nussair in third, and Linda Filar was seventh. Rounding out the scoring for the Irish were Terese Lemanski (eighth) and Kevalene Ryan (eleventh).

Dayton's Laura Schweitzer led the way for her team by placing first, recording a time of 17:57 on the 5,000 meter course in Chicago. Her teammates finished fourth, fifth, sixth and fourteenth, en route to a slim victory over the Irish. "I told the team before the race that this would be a dual meet between us and Dayton," Coach Tim Connolly said. "To be honest, we should have beaten them."

Rice said that while the team was disappointed by the close loss, they could still hold their heads up. "No one has anything to be ashamed of," she said. "We ran well, but Dayton is a good team."

Following Dayton and Notre Dame in the standings were Detroit, Butler and Loyola. Evanville and Xavier finished sixth and seventh, respectively. There were seven teams, red nine as originally anticipated.

There was some controversy at the beginning of the race. During the first 100 meters, there was a pile-up, and three Notre Dame runners fell. The officials didn't call the start back. "That really hurt us," said Connolly. "Linda Filar and Terese Lemanski were two of the runners who fell and they might have done better. I think that Linda could have been in the top five." Connolly was happy with the performances of the first two runners for the Irish, which he offered as a positive aspect of the disappointing second place finish.
Former split end Terrell finds home in secondary

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

Pat Terrell has worn many hats during his football career. A quarterback and receiver in high school, Terrell has jumped from one side of scrimmage to the other three times since arriving at Notre Dame. A receiver-turned-defensive back-turned-receiver again, the 6-0 junior was switched to the secondary once again last spring and has found his niche, earning a starting spot at free safety in the last four games.

"I was a little hesitant about making another change this late in my career," said Terrell. "But coaches really can see talent where its best, and I guess if I hadn't made that change from quarterback to receiver in high school I would never be here.

"Coach Holtz told me we needed help in the secondary as far as depth is concerned," continued Terrell, "and I'm a team-oriented person so I was ready to do that."

Terrell was ready, too, when Miami's Steve Walsh threw the ball his way on Oct. 15. In his second defensive start, Terrell intercepted a second-quarter pass and returned it 60 yards for a touchdown, then knocked away Walsh's conversion pass in the game's waning moments to seal an Irish 31-30 upset.

"I was fortunate to have a great game," said Terrell, "but now you just have to put that out of your mind. It was a confidence-builder for me. I felt comfortable out there. That's all it takes to be a good football player--to know what you're doing and have confidence in what you're doing.

"We tried to not look ahead to Miami before we played them," continued the Grace Hall junior, "and we're trying to not look back at that game now. I'm sure I'll go home and break out the tape after the season is over."

"There could be a lot more to go on the highlight film for the 8-0 Irish by the time this season is over. Notre Dame jumped into the top spot in the AP college football poll yesterday following UCLA's loss last weekend.

"It's a great place (No. 1) to be," smiled Terrell, "but we know that it really doesn't matter too much until the end of the season. Our job is to just keep winning, and the polls and bowls will take care of themselves.

"As far as being No. 1 during the season is concerned," continued Terrell, "in some ways it works against a team rather than working for it because it makes every game even more difficult. Everybody wants a piece of the so-called No. 1 team in the nation."

Terrell came to Notre Dame out of Lakewood High School in St. Petersburg, Fla., surrounded by the Florida football triumvirate of Florida State, Florida and Miami. After leaving the warmth of home to head for a chilly South Bend in mid-January, he, like many, was impressed with the people, not weather.

"It was cold and I was from Florida. I had been looking at those three schools," recalled Terrell. "I thought personally that I would get stuck in the state, but there's nothing wrong with that--they're all good programs.

"But I came up here," continued Terrell, "and liked how everything was the academics and athletics combined. I know you hear that from so many people but you see it's really true after visiting other schools. Reggie Ward and Timmy Brown were my hosts when I visited. I just found that we players here were more compatible with me rather than another place where I may have to change to fit in."

As the starting split end for five games last season Terrell played alongside Brown but caught only two passes--for a total of 63 yards.

"I was the other receiver," said Terrell. "I would see a lot of passes going over my head. It was frustrating at first but when you have the best player in the nation on your team, you've got to get him the ball."

"The football is not the only thing going over Terrell's head that he notices--he is a self-proclaimed 'action freak.'"

"When I was a wide receiver, that was probably one of my problems," continued Terrell. "I dropped a lot of passes because the airport planes fly right over the practice field all the time and I probably looked at the planes instead of the ball."

"I like to fly," continued Terrell. "I go up in Cesna 172s with friends of my Dad over the summer. I don't have my license yet though--I'm working on it."

The pilots license will have to wait for a while though. Terrell is having enough high-flying fun of his own, denying opponents aerial efforts for the top-ranked Irish.

neared the top of the Hopkins restraining box, where he was quickly stuck by a Bluesjays defender. As he was falling back toward the Capitals, he scooped the ball to his left and into the stick of fellow sophomore Mark Bruce. Bruce then fed the ball across the crease to an open Brian McHugh, who beat Hopkins goalie Ian Robbs for the score.

Freshman Mike Sullivan added the final goal for the Irish, who will continue lifting drills until January, when they will resume practicing for the spring season. The Irish will be competing for the NCAA West ern bid with Air Force, Ohio State and Michigan State, who lost 16-4 to Hopkins Sunday.

Zimmerman said his team's trip was done to improve lacrosse in the Midwest and to give Hopkins players a glance at another school with a rich sports tradition.

"We love to see lacrosse become established here in the Midwest because of its great schools," Zimmerman said. "And it was great to see the beautiful campus and tradition out here. I've always heard of the Golden Dome and seen football games on tv., but that football stadium was nothing like I imagined."

Notre Dame is ranked No. 1
UCLA's loss puts Irish at top spot for first time since '81

Associated Press

For the first time since 1981, the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame are on top of the college football world.

And since Monday's Associated Press poll finds Southern California right behind Notre Dame, it sets up what would be the 24th meeting between No. 1 and No. 2 in the AP's 28-year history, between Notre Dame and Southern Cal. The teams meet Oct. 16 at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Before that can happen, however, Notre Dame, 8-0, must defeat Rice on Saturday and Penn State on Nov. 19 while Southern Cal, 7-0, has to beat California, Arizona State and UCLA, the former No. 1 team, which slipped to sixth in the world Saturday's No. 4 upset at the hands of Washington State.

Notre Dame, a 22-7 winner over Navy, received 44 of 58 first-place votes and 1,146 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters. The Irish had been second behind UCLA the past two weeks. Southern Cal, a 41-20 winner over Oregon State, received 11 first-place votes and 1,997 points in climbing from third place to second.

Since the AP poll began in 1936, Notre Dame has won seven national championships, more than any other school. But the Irish haven't won a national championship since 1977 and were last ranked No. 1 after opposite seasons with a 37-9 victory over LSU. Notre Dame lost to Michigan 52-7 the following week and hasn't been higher than fourth until two weeks ago.

Notre Dame became the fourth team to be ranked No. 1 in three seasons. Florida State was No. 1 in the preseason poll but lost its opener to Michigan State. Miami became No. 1 for six weeks before losing at Notre Dame 31-30. UCLA was No. 1 for two weeks.

Although the Top Ten in this week's poll are the same 10 teams as last week, there was considerable shuffling.

Miami's defending national champions moved from fourth place to third with one first-place vote and 1,041 points following a 53-14 win against South Florida. Minnesota moved from fifth to fourth with 979 points. Nebraska dropped from seventh to fourth by routing Arizona State 49-21.

The Associated Press indicated its agreement to Irish safety George Streeter's "We're number one" proclamation Monday. The Irish were ranked first in the latest AP poll, one spot ahead of future opponent Southern California.

Powerful Johns Hopkins squad buries ND lacrosse 22-3

A sellout crowd of 6,000 was not enough to inspire the Notre Dame lacrosse team, as the Irish fell to perennial power Johns Hopkins 22-3 Friday night at the Loftus All-Sports Center.

Sophomore attackman Matt Panetta led the Bluejays, who outshot the Irish 50-5, with three goals and two assists. Freshman Jeff Wills and junior Jay Clarke added three goals each, and freshman Drew Burns scored a goal and four assists.

But the most striking fact of the Hopkins point barrage was the balanced scoring. No Bluejays player scored more than three goals and 15 different players combined for the 22 goals.

"One of the things I told our players before the game was that Hopkins takes advantage of your mistakes, and that's really why they had that kind of (scoring) balance," said Irish coach Kevin Corrigan.

Despite an inspired performance by Notre Dame's junior goalie Jeff Glazier, Hopkins used a controlled passing game and a stingy defense to dominate in all possession aspects of the game. The Bluejays won 23 of 29 faceoffs and cleared the ball out of their zone on all 22 attempts. Hopkins also led Notre Dame in ground balls 45-36 and successfully stopped 15 of Notre Dame's 32 clears.

"I was pleased with how we played," said Hopkins coach Don Donohue. "I did a lot of things right, the attack was playing well, and we really put pressure on their goalie."

"But 11 want to give him (Glazier) some credit because we took some shots that I thought were good and he was able to turn them back," Corrigan said.

"I think we may have put Hopkins on too high a pedestal and didn't think in the first half you could see we were in this game," said Floyd. "We were throwing passes away-I threw at least eight or nine times away-and that really hurt us."

"I feel like I only did half my job," he continued. "I had a lot of saves but the other half of my job is controlling the ball and getting it up to the attack. Sometimes I just had trouble keeping the ball in my stick."

A young Irish midfield - comprised of five freshmen, three sophomores, and one junior - had problems as expected in controlling the ball for the Irish as they fell behind 13-1 at halftime. According to Corrigan, the Irish were unable to get the proper movement needed for good shots.

"Their close defense is outstanding and they just didn't let us control the ball in the first half," Corrigan said. "We weren't able to get any offensive success to build on and when the ball did come down we couldn't get it settled with the attack."

One positive aspect for the Irish was the physical play of many players. Sophomore midfielder John Capano had several crowd-pleasing hits while sophomore defenseman Eamon "Clifford" McNamara briefly knocked Hopkins All-American defenseman Dave Pietramala out of the game.

Capano, who scored in the first quarter to give the Irish their last goal, started the second goal in what was possibly the biggest play in a frustrating game for the Irish. After weaving through several players, Capano sees LACROSSE, page 14

Soccer team bounces back
Irish whip Penn St., Boston Univ. in Gatorade Classic

The Notre Dame soccer team more than made up for lost ground at the Florida International-Gatorade Classic this weekend, pounding Penn State 5-1 and Boston University 5-3 to win the title.

Rebounding from a mid-October slump, the Irish improved their overall record to 14-3-1 with the two victories.

"We did what we've always done, the ball bounced our way," said Notre Dame coach Dennis Grace.

In the first round match against Penn State, Randy Morris scored on a rare assist by Kenny Neylon to give the Irish a 1-0 lead. The Nittany Lions tied it on a penalty kick, but second half goals by Joe Sternberg and Mark Crowe, first of the season, put Notre Dame ahead for good.

In Saturday's game, Boston University, the top-ranked team in the New England region, took an early 1-0 lead, but Bruce "Tiger" McCray scored on an assist from Pat Murphy at 42:22, and Morris tallied a minute later just before the end of the half.

"In the second half, Morris put the finishing touches on his first career hat trick with assists from Joe Sternberg, his 100th and 101st career points at Notre Dame. Murphy added a goal to complete the scoring."

These two victories have resurrected Notre Dame's NCAA tournament bid hopes. The team's schedule for the final week is such that, unlike last season, it has a very big hand in determining if it gets the bid.

"If we don't do well, then we'll go home with no complaints," said Grace. "If we do well, then I think the selection committee has to give us a hard look. We still don't get the respect we feel we've earned."

The schedule has the final home match against Wisconsin-Green Bay Wednesday at 1 p.m. at the Midwest Collegiate Conference Tournament at St. Louis this weekend. Notre Dame probably will be the third seed in the tourney, meaning that it will likely need to beat both No. 4 Saint Louis (a 2-0 winner over No. 16 Akron) and No. 19 Evansville (a 1-0 winner over No. 3 Indiana) to win the tournament.

Notre Dame returns to the No. 4 position in this week's Great Lakes region poll. Evansville is first, followed by Indiana and Akron.
