Frigon wins in District 1 run-off

Matt Breslin and Dave Kinkopf defeated Tom Rask and Melissa Smith in the student body president run-off election Wednesday.

"I'm ecstatic to win convincingly," said Breslin. "We feel that we will be able to go to the (University) Administration stronger," he said.

Breslin/Kinkopf ticket won with 2,225 votes (50.82 percent) while the Rask/Smith ticket received 982 votes (39.62 percent).

"The experience issue was blown out of proportion," Rask said. "We had real experience. If you look at the debates, we should have won."

"We couldn't give our side of the story because it is against University policy to print letters to the editor or Viewpoints concerning candidates. Once they (The Observer) make an endorsement people should be allowed to respond to it," he said.

Regarding The Observer's policy not to print responses to its endorsement, Breslin said, "I respect the policy of The Observer if they feel that it is fair."

In the District One Student Senate runoff Chris Frigon received 664 votes (59.38 percent) to defeat Scott Murray's 346 votes (30.32 percent).

"Since it was a run-off, I thought turn-out would be important. Keenan turned out to be a key dorm," Frigon said.

I want to commend Scott (Murray) and Jim (Nella). They did a great job organizing their races. I don't want to take anything away from them," said Frigon.

Breslin said that he wished to continue programs of student government and to expand student services. "We are looking forward to a smooth transition and to get a quick start on things," he said.

Two computers stolen from O'Shaughnessy

Two Macintosh SE computers, six hard disks and miscellaneous items were stolen from eight College of Arts and Letters offices in O'Shaughnessy Hall this past weekend.

According to the police report, the burglary occurred sometime between 4 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 23, and 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 24.

"Forced entry was used to enter the offices. We have collected all the evidence and the case is currently under investigation," said Philip Johnson, assistant director of security.

According to Roger Skurski, associate dean of the college of arts and letters, the six stolen disks contained vast amounts of information.

"One of the stolen disks holds 40 megabytes of information while the other five hold up to 26 megabytes. Each 40 megabyte disk holds up to 15 files," said Skurski.

According to a member of the philosophy department, the data on some of the stolen disks cannot be retrieved because no backup disks exist.

The campus security director, Larry Bloom, said, "Every office on the third floor of O'Shaughnessy was burglarized."

Five Macintosh computers valued at $15,000 were stolen from the computer lab on the second floor of O'Shaughnessy on Feb. 2.

Skurski said, "The University is currently embarking on a $17 million project to expand the computer network.

SOUTH BEND - Notre Dame senior and former football player Tony Brooks was charged Wednesday with two misdemeanor criminal violations in connection with a hit-and-run accident last weekend, according to court records.

Charges of driving with a suspended license and leaving the scene of an accident were filed by St. Joseph County Prosecutor Michael Barnes in the Misdemeanor and Traffic Division of Superior Court.

Both violations are Class A misdemeanors and carry maximum penalties of one year in jail and a $5,000 fine upon conviction. No date has been set for a court appearance.

Brooks, 19, of Tulsa, Okla., has remained free since city police cited him Sunday, several hours after a car driven by a South Bend man was sideswiped. Brooks was driving on a suspended Oklahoma license, said Lt. Larry Bloom.

Brooks has not been available for comment.

Police had requested a certified copy of Brooks' driving record from Oklahoma and referred questions about the suspension to the prosecutor's office, where no one was available for comment.

Bloom said the accident resulting in charges against Brooks occurred shortly after 3 a.m. on a city street when a car driven by Kevin Coleman, 39, of South Bend, was struck as a car traveling ahead of him attempted a U-turn. The auto struck Coleman's car on the right side, causing at least $1,000 damage, and fled the scene, he said.

Police matched a description of the car given by Coleman with a damaged car discovered by Notre Dame security on the campus. Notre Dame Director of Security Rex Rakow said city police found Brooks cleaning out the car when they arrived to investigate. Brooks admitted to being involved in an accident, Rakow said.

A teammate, Michael Stonebreaker, remained in good condition Wednesday at Memorial Hospital of South Bend, where he has been hospitalized five days following the accident. He is being treated for a broken leg.

IN BRIEF

Two Hoosiers were among 19 people awarded the Carnegie Medal for Heroism at ceremonies in Pittsburgh Wednesday. Karl Schreiner, 75, of Indianapolis rescued a 6-year-old boy from an attack by two pit bull terriers, while Randolph Macausky, 30, of Greensburg saved a 6-year-old girl from drowning. Schreiner stayed in to help stop the attack in Indianapolis on Oct. 3, 1988. Macausky saved the girl when her car was swept from a bridge and carried downstream in rain-swollen Salt Creek in Oldenburg, Ind., on Aug. 19, 1988. Grants totaling $47,000 were given to Wednesday's awardees and the widow of a man who died in his rescue attempt.

Editor-in-chief bids farewell to The Observer

"One generation passes away and another generation cometh but the earth abideth...all the rivers run unto the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." -Ecclesiastes

It's difficult, I suppose, for anyone to say goodbye to an organization that he or she has been closely associated with for four years. It's especially difficult when you realize that organization and its people are going to continue on without you. It can also make you think that he or she didn't make a difference.

I have enjoyed leading The Observer for the past year in what I see as a positive direction. Though things have been difficult at times, our staff has worked diligently to put out a quality newspaper for our community. Without the work of over 175 student employees, most of whom are paid miserably, The Observer would not be circulated everywhere.

And now that my job is done, I can honestly say that it is a miracle that there is a newspaper everyday with the possibility of things going wrong all the time. The people who don't take this for granted are the ones who appreciate The Observer the most.

As a staff member, I feel lucky to have been a part of The Observer this year. A wide range of newsworthy events has made it the most interesting in recent years at Notre Dame. Some of these included the National Championship football season, the Hiller-Ward Congressional debate brought by student government, and the George Bush visit and the ensuing controversy.

Recently, however, some events take away from the fun of putting out a newspaper. The deaths of Bob Satterfield, Richard Macrina and Pat McManus are a grim reminder that we have only to report the news that we don't want to read.

Regarding the future of The Observer, it's important to remember that we are the voice of the community. The Observer is the most visible link between students, faculty, administrators, family and the community at large. This link is as important as any in the Notre Dame family.

If The Observer is the link in the community, however, then it has a responsibility to serve the interests of the entire community. Because The Observer serves as the voice of the community, that voice is important. The Observer's new general board must realize the importance of that voice and the responsibility it carries.

The Observer needs more student, faculty and administrative input. In an academic year that has been labeled the "Year of Cultural Diversity," this University needs diverse input on all issues pertaining to our academic, social and cultural lives. The Observer should be the forum for these thoughts.

At the same time, our community needs a challenge. The Observer can only serve a limited function in creating an intellectual forum for diverse thought. The community at this University is uncommonly silent; the community can blame only itself for this silence.

After a year at the top, I've learned to realize that The Observer, much like our community, is not perfect and probably never will be. But striving to serve the community's interests is the ultimate goal of any newspaper. And I'm pleased with the way we've served our community this year.

Observer classifieds will be accepted from 9am-3pm M-F at the Observer offices, 314 LaFortune.

New riots break out in Venezuela

Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela- New riots broke out in the western shanties Wednesday despite martial law imposed because of two days of disturbances, and at least one person was reported killed.

Venezuelans jammed the few remaining food stores, guarded by soldiers, to stock up after two days of riots and looting over price increases in which more than 100 people have been reported killed and 800 injured.

Witnesses in outlying areas of Caracas said police exchanged gunfire with snipers and drove mobs away from stores. Other witnesses said a woman had been killed by police early Wednesday in the town of Catia as she tried to loot a store.

Radio reporters said delinquents tried to break into homes in Guarenas, 30 miles west of Caracas, while homeowners were defending themselves with guns.

President Carlos Andres Perez declared martial law late Tuesday, saying the "incredible tragedy" of the violence threatened Venezuela's "consolidation of democracy." His spokesman said people must realize the rich years of the oil boom are over.

The president also announced an agreement between industry and labor for an immediate wage increase that would raise the pay of minimum-wage workers and drive mobs away from stores.

The president also announced an agreement between industry and labor for an immediate wage increase that would raise the pay of workers earning the minimum wage by more than 50 percent.

Downtown Caracas was calm Wednesday. Most banks remained closed and those that opened let customers in one at a time. Office workers returned to work and some buses began to operate.

Tower publicly admits extramarital affair

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- John Tower made an extraordinary public admission of marital misconduct Wednesday but vowed to keep fighting for Senate confirmation as defense secretary.

President Bush continued to court Democrats in a last-ditch effort to save the appointment, and spokesman Marlin Fitzwater asserted, "We'll just keep up the good fight."

But Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell further dampened Tower's chances by declaring his opposition, even as Vice President Dan Quayle conceded the administration still lacks the votes needed for Senate approval.

The president said his appeal to senators has been, "Look, do what you've got to do, but remember fair play, remember decency and honor, and then remember also historically the concept of advise and consent where reasonable doubt is given historically to the president of the United States who after all is responsible for the executive branch of this government."

Tower said he regards his weekend vow to quit drinking as "sacred... and I can assure you I will abide by it."

Asked whether he had ever broken his wedding vows, the twice-divorced Tower said, "As a matter of fact, I have broken wedding vows. I think I am probably not alone in that connection."

Tower's second wife, Lilla Burt Cummings, alleged "marital misconduct" in court papers in the couple's divorce case.

Bush dispatched Quayle to Capitol Hill to lobby for the nomination.

"We hope the prospects improve. We don't have 50 votes yet. But we're moving in that direction," Quayle told a White House photo session.

Tower showed flashes of grit and humor as he fielded questions at the National Press Club about allegations concerning excessive drinking, womanizing and lucrative consulting fees he received from defense contractors.

Asked whether he would ask that his name be withdrawn, he replied by quoting from the last letter written by Col. William Barrett Travis, the leader of the Texans who fought and died at the Alamo: "I shall never surrender or retreat."

Republicans were trying to decide whether to seek a delay in the beginning of the debate on the nomination, which has drawn widespread opposition from Democrats.

and Conklin said Quinn has left campus. Quinn was recruited by former head coach Gerry Faust and was a reserve outside linebacker for the 1985 and 1986 seasons, according to the documents and Notre Dame football guides.

Notre Dame Sports Information Director John Heisler said Quinn was suspended from the team by Head Coach Lou Holtz in the spring of 1987 for undisclosed reasons.

Quinn did not return to the team but remained on athletic scholarship in the 1987-88 academic year, Heisler said. He saw no playing time his freshman year under Faust and played in five games under Holtz in 1986, making four tackles, according to the football guides.

Heisler said Quinn was suspended from the university last spring for an undisclosed reason and was not permitted to return last fall. Quinn was permitted to re-enroll in January but was not on athletic scholarship, he said.

In his suit against the female student, Quinn alleged the woman made untrue, slanderous claims when she told officials he attempted to have sex against her will, and that he beat her and confined her, court documents show. The suit says Quinn met the student at a social gathering Feb. 3 on the Notre Dame campus.

No criminal charges have been filed.

Quinn did not return to the team but remained on athletic scholarship in the 1987-88 academic year, Heisler said. He saw no playing time his freshman year under Faust and played in five games under Holtz in 1986, making four tackles, according to the football guides.

Heisler said Quinn was suspended from the university last spring for an undisclosed reason and was not permitted to return last fall. Quinn was permitted to re-enroll in January but was not on athletic scholarship, he said.

In his suit against the female student, Quinn alleged the woman made untrue, slanderous claims when she told officials he attempted to have sex against her will, and that he beat her and confined her, court documents show. The suit says Quinn met the student at a social gathering Feb. 3 on the Notre Dame campus.

No criminal charges have been filed.

In the suit against Notre Dame, Quinn alleged breach of contract in that the university failed to allow him to complete his degree after signing him to an athletic scholarship. He claims the Notre Dame Sports Information Director John Heisler said Quinn was suspended from the team by Head Coach Lou Holtz in the spring of 1987 for undisclosed reasons.

station and the student body realize that the Code does not reduce cheating; the point here is simply that only the bluehairs suffer.
But still some of you might not be convinced. Those few believers argue that the administration must have their reasons to support an Honor Code that destroys unity, fosters distrust, does not reduce cheating, and harms honest students. The official goal of the Honor Code is "to increase awareness, integrity and involvement in their own education." No survey is needed to see that the Honor code does not fulfill that purpose. The authors, unfortunately, disregarded their worthwhile motives as being mere rhetoric, and opted for the image-boosting mandate which is currently in effect.

It is said that the University had to waste resources on a trial period, when the Honor Code's inevitable conclusion could have been discovered had the adimistration simply consulted the students or the faculty. Instead we have a code which is mocked as it dies out.

The only saving grace of this Honor Code is that it is fading away. I asked six sophomores about their classes, and all courses which are all supposedly under the policies of the Honor Code. Only in five of their collective 30 classes did the teacher even mention the Honor Code, and two of those were votes, in which, it was voted down. The other 23 classes were exactly as before the Honor Code was instituted.

I have said that you have yet to sign any sort of a pledge this semester but they have all turned in at least five tests or papers. A student reported that one of his teachers said, "I don't care if there is an Honor Code. I'm going to proctor this exam anyway." It is obvious from this limited, unofficial survey, that the teachers here, like the students, have no respect for this code.

With this multitude of significant, insurmountable shortcomings, it should not be clear to all that Notre Dame, the global administration, that the Honor Code does not belong here at Notre Dame.

Status of world needs attention

Dear Editor:

Time magazine declared 1988 the year of Planet Earth. In doing so they recognized the growing importance of environmental concerns in terms of social, economic and political considerations. In recent years we have been bombarded with new revelations about humanity's destruction of the environment. To name some current events: CFC's and ozone depletion, greenhouse effect, massive deforestation of the Amazon, Chernobyl, destruction of the Mississippi and polluted tap water in Granger Indiana (to bring it nearer to Notre Dame).

There is a tendency, given the enormity of the problems, to shake your head, concluding that it is all out of your control, and after all you have an exam tomorrow. However, these issues aren't likely to go away and sooner or later we will be forced to address them. At the very least we will have to pay higher costs for oil and gas, perhaps buy more taxes for toxic waste cleanup, and greater medical/insurance costs as a greater number of the populace requires medical care because of man-made environmental effects. In addition, there will most likely be enormous costs in human terms as people are adversely affected by pollution and harmful environmental policies.

Last week, an article in The Observer concerning recycling program at Rutgers University spelled out the need for a recycling program at Notre Dame. As a member of the recently formed Notre Dame Environmental Action Club I believe that an in-depth explo-ation of the recycling issue at Notre Dame with all concerned is a step in the right direction. In the coming weeks we will be researching what types of recycling at Notre Dame can be most propriate and thus, we will be actively seeking input from students, staff, and campus. But beyond the recycling policy (which is only one pertinent issue), we will be adding a wide range of environmental issues and concerns through sponsoring discussions, speakers, and educational information. Please stop by for the meetings of the Notre Dame Environmental Action Club every Tuesday at 9 p.m. in the Center for Social Concerns.

Champ clears up boxing motives

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to Michael Schadek's article regarding the Notre Dame Bengal Bouts (The Observer, Feb. 28). Mr. Schadek stated that the motive of the bouts was to "beat the hell out of each other," and "leave the competition lying on the floor." I have been af­ filiated with the boxing club for four years and have been a member of the boxing club's membership in the past. The judges of the Bouts are based on a scoring system, where scores are the most points won in each match. I always take offense when someone says that we are trying to "beat the hell out of each other," especially when it is some­ one who knows nothing about our pro­ gram. Mr. Schadek knows nothing about the camaraderie we all share in the boxing club. We all train together and are great friends. He makes grand gestures about boxing motives and is great friends. He makes grand

Support of Contras promotes brutality

Dear Editor:

Some failed policies long outlive their usefulness and just refuse to die. Kevin Smant's column (The Observer, Feb. 24), in which he criticizes the evan­ gelistic efforts of Christian groups, single­handedly promotes brutality and the spreading of faith is a task for all

Dear Editor:

I wholeheartedly agree with Father William Williams' comments on the subject of spreading faith. It is a task for all, and we should all do our part to help spread the Gospel to everyone we can. This is not just a religious matter, it is a moral one as well. The world needs to hear the message of love and compassion that Jesus taught us. We must all work together to make this world a better place.

Spreading faith is a task for all

Dear Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to the "Letter to a Lonely God" article by Father Robert Griffin (The Observer, Feb. 25), in which he criticizes the evan­ gelistic efforts of Christian groups, spe­ cifically denouncing the group known as Jews for Jesus. Mr. Griffin's attempt to define a group is incorrect. The group is not a missionary group, and I do not think he is trying to force him to accept a particular set of views. He seems to be trying to determine the reasons for his actions, and I believe that this is a valid approach. However, I do not think that it is fair to criticize a group based on one or two statements.

Honor code survey found misleading

Dear Editor:

I found the article on the honor code survey (The Observer, Feb. 22, 1989), and the remarks of Associate Provost Father Oliver Williams misleading. The article reports that 800 surveys were sent out to students, and 717 students voiced their approval of the honor code. The way I figure it, that is a mere 44.9% of the students who policed the code. And, of those 717 students, only 11% are actually living up to the code. The survey does not demonstrate that such support is there.

It is not an honor code should be for students, and as such should be run and supervised by students, not imposed in some top-down, authoritarian way:

Mr. Griffin is correct in his assertion that the honor code will never work. The code needs to be enforced by students, and not by a group of people who are not knowledgeable about the code. The code is not working because it is not enforced by the students who are supposed to be enforcing it. The code needs to be enforced by the students, and not by the administration. The administration is not capable of enforcing the code, and it is not in the best interest of the students to have the administration enforce the code.

The importance of a Christian to know Christ to someone who has never heard the Gospel is not to educate, it is a way of education. The distinction is a fine one, but until that distinction is realized by those who are spreading faith, it is not possible to educate.

The article on the honor code survey in this newspaper, and the remarks of Father Williams are both misleading. The survey does not demonstrate that such support is there, and the code is not working because it is not enforced by the students who are supposed to be enforcing it. The code needs to be enforced by the students, and not by the administration.
Power of Wonderstuff

accent writer

I saw Wonderstuff in London a year and a half ago. The group killed Big Country, who was opening, but I couldn't find any records of it.

So I was pretty interested when I found one of its U.S. releases. It's called The Eight Legged Groove Machine, and it proves that Wonderstuff is one of the best bands to come out of England since The Smiths. Those wanting proof of Wonderstuff's angry power pop stance need to look no further than the song titles—"No For The 13th Time," "Unbearable," and "Poison." The sound suggests an unholy marriage of the melody and the punk's Let's Act with the guitar attack and energy of The Jam. Most of the band's material comes from railing against the materialism of our day. In "It's Yer Money I'm After, Baby," the members whisper: "Forget your heart, it's your bank I want to break." The first single off the album is "Give Give Give Me More More More."

The CD gives you four extra tracks, including the soon-to-be-classic, "Astley In The Nose," which calls for Ruck Astley's death. The shining "Rae The Day" is the successful slow song that just adds to the anger of the rest of the album.

The evidence on Eight Legged Groove Machine seems to point to Wonderstuff as the first great British band of the '90s. Keep an eye on it.

The success of British Wonderstuff is spreading with the help of Eight Legged Groove Machine.

Columnist looks at Common Sense

A: The Observer staff once again underestimates the common man. I want to thank Beth Healy, the features editor, and all the other feature editors who preceded her, for their kindness to me as a columnist.

I have many dreams of achieving greatness; but now that I'm older, I've always been dependent on the kindness of strangers; some of them were editors-in-chief who I rarely saw. I'm grateful for their tolerance, whoever they are; but I'm especially grateful to features editors like Beth, who, often by their editing, helped me put my best foot forward.

Wandering to survive, I would probably be wise to keep the peace, instead of setting myself as a target for the fast lane in the Mines; but maybe this is the year I should start living dangerously. I just can't imagine living down the hall from me in Stanford, brought me the latest edition of Common Sense, Notre Dame's independent weekly, which, to my regret, I don't often see, though I always enjoy finding out where the bodies are buried.

"Isn't it wonderful?" Ken kept chortling. "Isn't it brill..." I haven't heard the publication produced on this campus!"

I finally told him: "Considering the great talent of the writers who appear regularly, Common Sense is probably the most immature publication in sight. I can accept, if you want me to, the major premise on which the paper is based: namely that Notre Dame is a priest-ridden institution which propagates all the typically Catholic hangups in a hypocritical way. But why should brilliant people turn themselves into Johnny-and-Joanie-One-Note, and die, us, so month after month?"

Ken is a burgeoning intellectual whom I admire and respect for his grade-point average; but sometimes he reminds me of the fisher-king wandering through the wasteland in search of the Holy Grail, and not finding it. "How can you say that?" he raged. "Compared to Common Sense, The Observer, The Scholastic, and the Notre Dame Magazine are trash." That kid knows The Observer is my lifeline to survival, but he doesn't mind breaking an old priest's heart.

I said: "Would you be willing to send an issue of Common Sense, labelled as ND's finest publication, to the faculties of the law school to which you are applying? Would you really want to send it home to your mother?"

God bless the lad! He could have said that he wouldn't want to mail "Letters To A Lone Groove Machine fan" around the country, either. He was too kind to do that, though I'm sure he thought of it.

I said: "H.L. Mencken was once asked: 'If you find so much that is unworthy of reverence in America, then why do you live here?' Mencken's reply was: 'Why do men go to zones?' Is that why some of our resident cynics stay here: because they are entertained by Notre Dame as a Catholic joke?"

In the February issue of Common Sense, an alumnus of the University who is also a faculty wife tells us: "The dirty little secret which men and women hide from themselves is that men as a species have never liked women or much wished them well... Feminists have written reams trying to uncover the reasons why men elect to lord it over women, instead of befriending them. Perhaps the answer to this great historical teaser is simply an awful, original jest I was only depressed, Womb envy, a male-classmate called it..."

You wonder why editors put stuff in magazines that belongs in toilets?

Couldn't we also ask why men also lord it over other men weaker than themselves? The answer, probably, is that males belong to a rotten, bullying gender. Sometimes, attempting to accommodate themselves to their women-folk, they castrate themselves psychologically, to pay for their sins of sex. Neutering is an effective way of slowing down machoism that's gone out of control but I doubt that neutering has ever brought peace to the home.

As you can see, I have no trouble in accepting her opinions, but is this exchange of droopy ideas all I really want to say to the delightful Ann Pettifer? Are the complaints in her column all she wants to say to me? Doesn't she know she may be giving hell to the males species, for their share in the original sin of womb envy, will never lead them to a thousand points of light, or to a gentler, kinder America? An ad on page eight of Common Sense asks: "Have you read Christopher Hill's Defend Our Corporate Defenders? Were you challenged? Outraged? Interested? Edified? It makes you only depressed, like Holden Caulfield finding the four-letter words on walls where children could see them. The children will survive the obscenities. You wonder what happens to graffiti artists who leave messages in toilets. You wonder why editors put stuff in magazines that belong in toilets.

A beloved professor emeritus of theology wrote a letter to Common Sense, and a priest in graduate studies wrote an article: both promising controversial pronouncement. In my early years with The Observer, I wrote a number of articles about gay liberation. Eventually I found out that the "homophobes" aren't the gay persons enemy, because "homophobes" can't withstand destruction, but older gays do, and have.

Dr. Stoery is one of Notre Dame's all-time great teachers, during the '70s, he was practically the father-confessor of the anti-war movement. In his current ministry to gays, I wonder if he's helping students by continuing his argument that many hard-shelled gays don't believe themselves. I think the world of Bill Storey. At one time, when we were classmates, respected, and trusted him more than I did some of the priests who were my lifelong friends. From the sadness I feel when I read his pieces in Common Sense, I know that I care deeply about him still. Doesn't he know he may be hurting gays more than he's helping them?

Many years ago, a Holy Cross priest named McNally said: "Griffin, it's barely possible that you're a charismatic figure, but there's not a doubt in the world that you're also a big pain in the ass..."

Notre Dame is a precious jewel in the diadem of Catholic education; but it is also a sacred place. The cathedral of Catholic nerves. Assailing its pristine in print may make the Ann Pettifers shut up, but it is likely to talk us about their negligibilities. Maybe the Ann Pettifers could put some space in Common Sense to breathe.

Believe it or not, it took courage for me to write all this. I am too little a grace under pressure to survive the trouble I've caused myself.
Johnson's agent speaks out

Associated Press

TORONTO—Ben Johnson's track coach testified Wednesday that the Canadian sprinter on to steroids in 1981 because they were "worth a million" in com- petition and everyone else was doing it.

Charlie Francis told a Canadian inquiry into drugs and steroids that he first approached Johnson that summer about steroids, but he "was not sure of the advantages." That fall, Francis said, Johnson "decided he had to go on." If he wanted to win, it's pretty clear that steroids are a more tonal level of sports," Francis said.

"I think he understood that his competitors were on them," Johnson, who lost his Olympic 100-meter gold medal and world record after testing positive for steroids, has maintained that he never knowingly used drugs to en- hance his performance. Francis's only previous statement since the Olympics was that the sprinter's urine test may have been sabotaged.

Francis said he told Johnson on a steroid program in 1981, the drug was not administered by his personal physician, Dr. Jamie Astaphan. Asked if he saw the coach inject Johnson with steroids, Francis replied, "On occasion, yes."

Astaphan, who has promised to travel to Johnson's home in the Caribbean to tes- tify, has denied he gave the drug to Johnson.

In hour after hour of detailed testimony on the use of anabolic steroids and growth hormones, Francis said that an early stage main- speaker Angella Isaak-Josanjohn and Johnson were "on a growth hormone."

Francis said that top-level in- ternational competition is virtually impossible without steroids.

In his second day of tes- timony he cautioned against believing any claims from top-
Judge rules to proceed with sports agents case

CHICAGO—A federal judge Wednesday gave the final go-ahead to the trial of two sports agents accused of using payoffs and threats to get college athletes to sign contracts with them.

After rejecting a defense attorney's request to have Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom tried separately, U.S. district Judge George Marovich ordered jury selection to begin.

"There will be only one trial and it will involve both defendants," Marovich said. The government contends the two New York-based agents offered dozens of college athletes money, cars, clothes, concert tickets and trips in exchange for signed agreements giving them exclusive rights to the athletes in professional contract negotiations.

Walters, 58, and Bloom, 29, have both pleaded innocent to charges against the two agents.

Walters, 58, and Bloom, 29, have both pleaded innocent to charges against the two agents.

The judge cautioned attorneys that he would forbid testimony and questioning that was irrelevant to the criminal charges against the two agents. "I am only going to allow evidence in this courtroom that is relevant in this courtroom," he said to the attorneys. A letter from Irish basketball

Dear Notre Dame Student Body:

This weekend, as you're well aware, is the start of spring break. Most of you will be fortunate enough to take a week off and head home, to the mountains to ski or to the beaches to roast. But this weekend is also very important for the basketball team. We'll be playing Louisville on Saturday afternoon in the Joyce Center, and we need the students' help. If you can, stick around. We'd like your vocal support Saturday as we continue to battle for an NCAA tournament bid. Not everyone is leaving before the game, so if you have tickets, give them away to someone that's going to be on campus.

Still need vocal student support to help knock off the Cardinals. We're sure that everyone's left will find a television Saturday afternoon to watch the game, and we want to let you know that we appreciate your support this season. We've traveled across the country, and it seems like the arenas are always packed and people are always cheering extra hard against Notre Dame, but even then they can't match our student body.

If you're in town, then come to the game. If you're in town and don't have a ticket, check around and find one. If you're leaving town, then find someone that needs a ticket. Let's just keep the tradition alive since Saturday afternoon and have a wild student section.

A week after this year's spring break, the Irish men's and women's fencing teams will know their competitors in this year's NCAA tournament.

But first they must compete in this weekend's Great Lakes Championship and the Midwest Regional Championship next weekend.

The Great Lakes, to be held at the Wayne State campus in Detroit, will feature the top three fencers in each weapon from several Midwest schools.

Qualifiers will travel the following weekend to the Midwest Regionals to be held at the University of Chicago.

"I think it's conceivable that we could end up with more finalists this year at the NCAAs than anyone," said head coach DeCicco. "Coming out of this weekend, I'll be anxious to see how high a seed we could end up with more finalists this year at the NCAAs than anyone," said head coach DeCicco. "Coming out of this weekend, I'll be anxious to see how high a seed we could end up with more finalists this year at the NCAAs than anyone," said head coach DeCicco.

The Irish will send Derek Holeman (10-2), Yehuda Leary (16-0), and Phil Leary (22-3). All three have legitimate chances of battling their way to the Midwest Regional.

The sabre team will present a strong compliment of fencers as well. Sophomore Leonard Nowosielski (24-4) posted his second undefeated record in as many years at Notre Dame. Classmate David Kirby (17-1) will join Nowosielski along with freshman Ed Baguer (30-4). Baguer, who is coming off a recent hamstring injury, should be at least at 75 percent strength. Senior undefeated sabreman Tim Collins (16-0) will have to sit out the tournament due to an ankle injury which he suffered several weeks ago.

"I don't see anyone challenging us in sabre," said DeCicco. "I think that we have the best sabre team in the Midwest."

The epee team will consist of senior captain Ted Fay (33-2), last year's NCAA silver medalist Todd Griffee (39-8), and freshman Englishman David Calderhead (31-10). Both Fay and Griffee have extensive tournament experience, while Calderhead boasts an impressive first year record.

The women's foil team is coming off an excellent regular season in which they suffered only one loss at the hands of Ohio State while also defeating the defending national champions from Wayne State twice this year.

Senior captain Janice Hynes (38-8) will be joined by freshman Heidi Pipper (30-5), senior Kristin Kralicek (27-6) and sophomore Lynn Kadri (38-8).

The women as well have a very strong field, and will seek to recapture the nation title which they won two years ago.

"It was a lot easier to beat Wayne State this year with Lynn Kadri stated DeCicco. "In order to beat the top schools in the nation, you have to get that one bout from the number four spot. It's very, very critical."

This weekend will also feature the Big Ten tournament for those schools. Qualifiers from that competition will join the Great Lakes qualifiers in the Midwest Regionals next weekend. At the end of this month, the Midwest qualifiers will travel to the Northwestern University, the site of this year's NCAA tournament.

Women's basketball faces tough challenge in Loyola

By FRANK PASTOR

Sports Writer

A rematch with Midwestern Collegiate Conference-leading Loyola that could determine the number-one seed in the first-ever MCC Women's Basketball Tournament highlights the final week of regular-season play for Notre Dame.

The Irish (10-2 in the MCC, 16-9 overall) square off against Loyola tonight at 7:30 and then play Butler at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Joyce ACC to cap another fine MCC season. Loyola (11-1 in the MCC) and Notre Dame locked up the top two spots in the tournament field with victories last Saturday. The Irish's 69-56 victory over Xavier in Cincinnati was the 200th overall win for the Notre Dame women's hoops program.

Loyola can sew up the regular season title by beating the Irish tonight. A Notre Dame victory, on the other hand, would leave both teams with identical conference records going into their final regular season games.

Evansville, Detroit and Dayton remain in contention for the final two spots in the tournament. Evansville and Detroit look to be the frontrunners with 7-6 conference records. Dayton currently holds a 6-7 conference mark.

Butler is in seventh place in the MCC with a 3-9 record but is the only team to have beaten Loyola in conference play.

Three sophomores will have to continue their strong play this weekend if Notre Dame is to come away with a pair of wins.

Irish point guard Karen Robison has been on an assist tear of late, averaging 7.2 assists over the past five games. She has dished out 5.6 assists per game this season.

Kris Davis, who scored a career-high 22 points last Saturday against Xavier, leads the Irish in steals from her low post position. The sophomore forward has 67 steals in 25 games this year for an average of 2.7 per game.

Guards Sara Liebscher and Robinson are currently tied for the lead in freethrow percentage with a .836 mark. Liebscher has converted 56 of 67 attempts, while Robinson has made good on 61 of 73 foul shots.

Irish netters to compete with several California schools

By CHRIS COONEY
Sports Writer

While the typical Notre Dame schedule will be spending spring break relaxing and avoiding any activity that even remotely resembles work, the Notre Dame women's tennis team will battle five squads that should challenge it with a style of play very different than what the Irish usually face.

The Irish travel to California next week where they will meet some of the tougher additions to their improved schedule. The teams all tend to attack with an aggressive tempo and more net play than most Midwestern schools are used to seeing. That variety and the overall strength of the squads caused Irish head coach Michele Gelfman to decide to add these schools to this year's timetable.

"All the teams have good programs," said Gelfman, "and they are always known for having excellent players."

California schools usually have a variety of different types of match play that we normally see," said Gelfman.

Swimmers face intercollegiates
By MARY GARINO
Sports Writer

Last week the women's swim team placed fifth in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships, and this weekend the men's team will get its turn in the same meet.

This will be the 15th annual Eastern Intercollegiate for men's teams, and the second year that Notre Dame has participated. The Irish will be racing against several quality teams including St. Bonaventure, the defending champion, and Cleveland State, the host school, both of which Notre Dame has faced earlier this year.

Head Coach Tim Welsh anticipates that the Irish will finish somewhere in the middle of the pack of ten teams, but the priority for the team will be performance, not winning.

"We want to see that anyone who swims well will score," Welsh said. "If we swim our best, then the points will come, and whatever comes after that will be fine."

One of the goals for the Irish is to break as many University records as possible at the meet. It's also a chance for the team to evaluate their season.

"Championship meet are a culmination of everything we've been working on all season," Welsh said. "It demonstrates how good we've become."

The Irish will take 18 swimmers to participate in the championships, including five seniors who will be racing for the last time for Notre Dame. This will be Welsh's first graduating class.

Several NCAA qualifiers are expected to be produced at the meet, and although the Irish are not expected to qualify anyone, Welsh emphasized that the standards for the NCAA meet are very high.

"We're a couple of years away from national standards," Welsh said. "But we have something to aspire to."

Notre Dame faces Louisville and DePaul over break

By THERESA KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

In the 1980s, the Louisville Cardinals have been known as a team that may start slow, but always finishes strong.

On Saturday, the Notre Dame men's basketball team will try to turn that around.

Head Coach Denny Crum's teams have been in the NCAA Final Four times during the past decade, winning the championship twice.

Digger Phelps and his team need to win, and keep winning over spring break, to make the NCAA's Final this year.

"Every game is important to us," Phelps said. "The trend has been to send two independents in the tournament. We hope that continues. DePaul is a very good team that deserves to go. I think each school would like to see the other go."

Louisville, however, is not the late-season team it usually is and has lost five of their eight games, including their last two.

Wednesday's shocking home loss to Cincinnati sends the Cardinals into the Joyce ACC looking for a major win in a big way.

The Cardinals are keeping with the style they have set for themselves.

"We're 18-6 and still the best in the country," said DePaul head coach Joey Meyer. "If we win now, we are set. If we lose, it's a blockout."

"LaPhonso and Keith really established themselves early," said Irish guard Joe Fredrick, whose 19 points were well below his 17.2 scoring average.

"I think we boxed out pretty well tonight, and that was the key," Phelps said.

"DePaul actually out-rebounded the Irish 20-19 in the second half but continually had trouble getting second shots."

"The Blue Demons only re-bound 12 shots during the entire game."

ND beats DePaul, tops independents
By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor
What Notre Dame's 18th victory lacked in beauty, it made up for in significance.
The Irish claimed their stake as the nation's top independent and took a giant step toward gaining an NCAA tournament bid with Wednesday's 67-60 victory over rival DePaul at the Joyce ACC.
"I certainly wasn't an artistic achievement," said DePaul coach Joey Meyer, whose Blue Demons fell to 18-11 and hurt their own chances of gaining a bid. "I don't think either team played the kind of game they're capable of playing." IRISH

Irish coach Digger Phelps called Thursday's game a must-win situation, and his 18-6 squad did the job with aggressive, switching defense and a slow tempo. DePaul shot a dismal 39.7 percent from the field. The Irish hit only 41.1 percent of their shots, but managed to pound the ball inside and score 26 free throws, hitting 19.

Freshman forward LaBrosse Ellis and junior Keith Singleton did the job with their hustle, both players losing in the playoffs, Interhall basketball title last time. The Irish claimed their stake in the final minutes, but fell just short of ending the season. Terence Greene and Brundy left and rounded out the scoring with a dunk at the buzzer. "Even though we didn't shoot the fouls like we wanted to down the stretch, we didn't lose our composure," Phelps said. "We did an excellent job of stopping their transition tonight."

Freshman David Booth, a 6-7 forward, outshone seniors Keith Greene and Brundy with 23 points off the DePaul bench.

Notre Dame scored the last 10 points of the game, gaining an eight-point lead. The game ended with a DePaul four point foul, which gave the Irish a 59-55 win.

Both coaches said the game was still under way when the 2:10 mark was reached. "They made really good opportunities down the stretch, allowing DePaul to threaten one more time," said Wagenblast. "But after DePaul climbed to within four points at 64-60, Stanly Johnson put in a basket that would have sliced it to one.

Irish coach Tom Singleton hit a free throw with 12 seconds left and rounded out the scoring with a dunk at the buzzer.

The score remained close for 14 minutes, but Purdue rallied during the final four minutes to gain the lead. The Pacers outscored the Irish 14-6 during the final four minutes to take a 10-6 lead into half time.

Both coaches said they were undermanned but happy with the effort. "We stressed all week that rebounding was key, and we didn't do the job." Both teams came into the game with strong rebound margins, with Notre Dame at plus-9.8 and DePaul at plus-4.9.

Bellas lose to Purdue-Calumet in NAIA tourney
By HEATHER ATKINSON
Sports Writer
The Saint Mary's basketball team failed to "make good choices," said Terence Greene, under Purdue University-Calumet, according to Head Coach Mike Wagenblast. "The opening round of the NAIA District tournament Tuesday and was defeated 68-63.

Freshman Catherine Rovitch got the Belles fired up with a break-away basket from the tip-off. Travelling calls caused Saint Mary's to turn over the ball several times in the first 10 minutes, but throughout the first half its strong defense caused forced, sloppy shots that resulted in Purdue turnovers. The game remained close for the entire half with the lead changing hands several times. At the half the teams were tied up 32-32.

Purdue broke the tie with the first minute of play. This basket was answered with a three-pointer by Dawn Brohman to put Saint Mary's on top again. However, improved defense by the Lakers caused the Belles to make rushed passes and sloppy shots that resulted in more turnovers. Purdue rallied during the first seven minutes and gained an eight-point lead. The Lakers' fast breaks and overall quickness broke Saint Mary's defense and they were able to make their shots.

During the final four minutes of the game, including the two teams took turns leading the ballgame. With 19 seconds remaining, the score was tied 63-63 and the Belles had captured possession of the ball from a missed field goal by the Lakers. After a time-out, they ran the clock down but with three seconds left a foul by a Saint Mary's player sent Purdue's Vicky Baker to the free throw line. Baker made both attempts and won the game as Saint Mary's lost 50-50. "We got a bit off before the clock ran out. Junior Julie Radke was the leading scorer with 13 points, followed by Dawn Brohman with 12. Radke also had nine assists. Amy Boeckman and Linda Garrett led with nine and seven, respectively. "They just got some good bounces and took advantage of them. We wanted to do except win the game," said Wagenblast.

The Irish managed to outrebound DePaul by three boards (21-18), but the Irish took advantage of the physical inside play by shooting 13-of-15 from the foul line.

Morrissey beats Fisher in IH finals
By DAVE McMAMON
Sports Writer
After three straight years of losing in the playoffs, Morrissey finally captured the men's Interhall basketball title last night with a 54-52 double overtime victory over Fisher.

The Manor took an early 8-4 lead before ending the first half at 10-10. Fisher jumped to a 18-15 lead midway through the second quarter and attempted to slow down the pace, but Morrissey's Derrick Johnson and Rod Culver had other ideas, fastbreaking with perfection on an 8-0 run. The Green Wave retaliated with five unanswered points including a three point play to go into halftime with the score tied at 22.

Todd Wagenblast was three-for-three from the three-point line in the third quarter to propel Fisher to a 38-34 lead. Wagenblast nailed another three in the fourth before Morrissey tied it at 46. Tom Veltz put the Manor up 48-46 with 24 seconds left in regulation, but a two shot foul allowed the Green Wave to tie Wagenblast found nothing but net on both shots, sending the game into the first overtime.

Johnson put in a shot from the paint and Fisher's Paul Mullin scored with 1:02 remaining for the only points of the first overtime. A flick of the light switch caused a temporary delay in the action, but the teams refused to slow down. Going into the second overtime at 30-30, Morrissey jumped to a 54-50 advantage with the help of buckets by Kevin Kyes and Johnson. The Green Wave, which finishes the season 11-2, stuck to their game plan but fell just short of ending the season on a high note. "We did every thing we wanted to do except win the game," said Wagenblast.

Morrissey, despite playing in a gym that was unfavorable to its style of play, never let up. About 100 fans managed to cram into gym two of the Joyce ACC, which offered little space around the court.
