Reggie Ho named for senior award

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Senior Staff Reporter

Reggie Ho is the winner of the Notre Dame Alumni Association's 1989 Distinguished Senior Staff Reporter Award. He is well known as the five-foot, five-inch, 135-pound place kicker for the football team. This award recognizes Ho for his service to the community and to the University, said Richard Daly, assistant director of alumni clubs. Daly said the criteria for the award is:

• Good academic standing
• Service to the surrounding community
• Service to the University

Ho is a preprofessional senior student with a 3.77 cumulative grade point average. According to a press release, Ho has participated in various community services in South Bend. He tutored for the Neighborhoood Study Program at La Casa de Amistad, he has helped raise funds for a child in need of a liver transplant, visited a hospitalized diabetic child named Reggie and later spoke to the child's elementary school class.

58 arrested in raid on McCormick's

McCormick's Coney Island, a tavern on Michigan Avenue, was raided by the State Police Friday night. A total of 58 people were arrested, according to a spokesman for the Indiana State Police. Nineteen people were arrested for possession of false identification and one for interfering with a policeman. Those arrested received citations and must appear in court, said the spokesman.

Rumors circulated that The Commons, on Eddy Street, was also raided this weekend. Neither the State Police nor the South Bend Police substan-tiated this, however. Sergeant Feirell, of the St. Joseph County police, was not available for comment.

ND fundraising at $339.7 million

By SARAH VOIGHT
Senior Staff Reporter

"Notre Dame: A Strategic Moment," a fundraiser that aims to improve the University's undergraduate program, its Catholic character, and its graduate education and research, has surpassed its $300 million dollar goal with a year and a half remaining. The campaign has currently collected $238.7 million from alumni, parents, friends of the University, and corporations. This sum represents an increase of 15 percent percent over its total at this time last fiscal year.

"The Strategic Moment Campaign" aspires to improve the undergraduate program through greater endowments of scholarships. A 60 million dollar goal for undergraduate scholarships is the largest single priority of this far reaching fundraiser. According to Director of Development Joseph Sandman, this money will be used to try to attract the brightest students in the country. The University also hopes that the additional scholarships will attract students that reflect all economic and ethnic groups. Forty million dollars have been collected so far.

The campaign also aims to preserve Notre Dame's religious orientation and Catholic heritage. For example, the campaign hopes to raise $12.5 million for the Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry.

The campaign also strives to improve the University's graduate education and research where it still has a "long way to go," said Sandman. "We need to achieve distinction as a great research university. We also need to create a more widely acknowledged graduate program."

The campaign has already fulfilled its $42 million goal for endowed professorships. Another important campaign...

Attendance has soared at the Roman Catholic cathedral in Matamoras, Mexico, as unease and superstition haunt the border valley where authorities say 15 people were ritually murdered by drug-smuggling cults. There has been a marked increase in attendance at services, communion and confession since the first 12 bodies were exhumed at Santa Elena ranch April 11. Investigators say the ranch sacrifice did not involve Satanism but a deviant form of the Afro-Cuban religion Palo Mayombe, known for using human body parts in its rituals.

A strong earthquake struck Mexico City and Acapulco on Tuesday morning, causing buildings and an armored car to shake and panic-inciting thousands of people who remembered the killer quakes of 1985. One man was electrocuted when power cables fell on him, and two women were seriously injured when they jumped in panic from the second story of a swaying building during the 8:36 a.m. quake, officials said.

An asteroid skipping over Earth at a low angle may have kicked thousands of giant boulders into orbit, creating a shower of meteorites that gradually killed off the dinosaurs 66 million years ago, a Brown University geologist says. Brown University geologist Jason Schultz's research seeks to answer a key objection to the theory that a large object struck the planet, raising a dust cloud that blocked sunlight and wiped out food sources.

Boston Harbor is getting cleaner, but state officials say that’s in spite of foot-dragging by the man who made it famous. George Bush. Bush sailed in during the presidential campaign last September and accused Gov. Michael Dukakis of neglecting an important environmental issue in his own state. Now, the governor and his environmental aides are wondering when President Bush will put his money where his mouth was. They want the $9 million recommended for the harbor cleanup by Congress but deleted from Bush’s budget.

The government should reopen an investigation into the deaths of more than 750 bottlenose dolphins on the Atlantic Coast to determine whether pollutants weakened their immune systems, say two New Jersey congressmen. The most likely cause of the dolphins’ deaths was fish tainted by a naturally occurring neurotoxin, known as brevetoxin, found in red tide algae swept north from the Gulf of Mexico, said a report released jointly last week by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Office of Naval Research and Marine Mammal Commission. But it also said brevetoxin was found in tissue samples from only eight of 17 beached dolphins tested.

The errant underwater robot Jason was raised from the deep on Monday, breathing new life into a $7 million international satellite science project whose submersible star had unceremoniously sunk. The 7-foot-long, remote-control robot will be used in the future to determine whether pollutants weakened their immune systems, say two New Jersey congressmen. Bookstore referees are a necessary control

An Tostal ’89 drew to a close yesterday in traditional fashion, with the Bookstore finalists being played before a standing room only crowd at the LaFortune parking lot. All the ingredients of a basketball game of major proportions were present as the finalists in the mens and womens tourneys met: great players showing off their incredible skills, fans cheering loudly for their favorite team, and referees being verbally assailed by the crowd on a continuous basis.

As a referee with three years of Non-Varsity Athletics and Bookstore basketball experience, I can attest to one fact without any hesitation: the majority of Notre Dame students who compete on the basketball court do so with the ultimate respect being the admired and respect of the basketball crazy student body.

With such fame and glory on the line during each game, and a single loss resulting in elimination from that year’s quest, tensions and tempers tend to run high during these contests. At times, the tension is so great that a single action—such as a errant elbow or a forceful bump to the head—can provoke the extreme passion of a mini-riot on Stepan last week which attracted everyone’s attention. In all of these games is the job of the referee to keep the game and the players tempers under control.

Often, it is hard to determine where to draw the line between “letting them play” and keeping the game under control. One example of this was the mini-riot on Stepan last week which attracted everyone’s attention. In all of these games is the job of the referee to keep the game and the players tempers under control.

This year’s women’s tournament proved to be no different as the teams arrived in the Sweet Sixteen where the tournament really began. The two teams played with great intensity.

When I look back on the games I refereed as part of this tournament, one stands out particularly in my mind. The only way to describe this contest was as a war, where the teams banged and bumped and pushed until only one was left standing.

Matching two of the top seeds, this truly was a game that no one deserved to lose. I did not start out working that particular game, but as the game progressed and began to get a little bit physically physical I was asked by the bookstore commiss of the day to switch to that court. The intensity of that game, which stretched into overtime, seemed like an eternity as the players pushed themselves to their maximum capabilities. Needless to say, I made several calls up ended as the winning point when the player fouled converted from the foul line.

As almost any referee in Bookstore would probably tell you, that’s the last place you’d like to see a game end. While the losing players felt that they were the victims of a “lousy foul,” I stood by the call and felt the same way now. I do have sympathy for them, seeing as how they had to go through the game with 6 one of the different referees that were shuffled through their game for one reason or another. While both teams were equal to this adversity, I believe that it should not have ended up this way. When a referee has to be taken from another game for the sole reason of trying to control excessively physical play and prevent injuries, I think this is a little off the shelf. Sometimes you miss what seems to be obvious to the crowd and other times you want to swallow your whistle. No one has perfect control over his recap on his operation.

Kerby, in his statement to the senate on April 13, said that if the senate disbanded, it would make "absolutely no difference" in the current status of the lack of faculty input in University policy.

Senator Mohamed Gad-el-Hak agreed with Kerby, saying that if the senate had been disbanded, it would have accomplished very little.

Gad-el-Hak commented that "the motion to disband the senate was, in my opinion, a bit premature. There is no clear alternative to this particular mode of organization."

"Moments to disband the senate and to reorganize the faculty grew out of frustrations over the faculty's lack of meaningful role in University governance," said Gad-el-Hak.

The other alternative, according to Kerby, is to unionize the faculty.

The senate plans to receive a proposal on May 2, submitted by Senator Philip Quinn, which suggests that the senate "prospectively undertake a preliminary investigation of the prospects for faculty unionization and to give the faculty a greater say in University matters. "We're not talking about rule," said Kerby, "just representation."

"I see an advantage in broader representation and participation (in University policy) with the faculty," said Kerby.

The administration has refused to comment on the issue of the possible unionization of the faculty.

University President Father Edward Malloy, C.S.C., and Vice President Father William Beauchamp, C.S.C., both declined to comment on the issue. Beauchamp said only that the issue "concerns the faculty."

University Provost Timothy O'Meara said that the administration has not discussed the issue of faculty unionization and that it has "no opinion" yet on it.

priority is to upgrade physical facilities. The goal has already been set and surpassed in this area. This money has helped to fund the law school addition, renovations in La Fortune and North Dining Hall, and the construction of Siegfried and Knott.

Sandman said, "the response of generosity has surpassed even our high expectations. This reflects how enthusiastically our alumni, friends, and parents endorse the mission of the University. They want Notre Dame to be a great research university without compromisig its Catholic character and undergraduate program."

Sandman explains the significance of the campaign's title. "This is a strategic time in Notre Dame's history. A 35 year old reign of the old administration has come to a close. Notre Dame is on the threshold of becoming a great research university by building on the accomplishments of Hesburgh and Joyce."

"There is a tremendous enthusiasm about the new leadership. We think that the success of the campaign is largely a function of people's confidence that Malloy and Beauchamp will continue the progress begun in this area," said Sandman.

"The Strategic Moment Campaign" spans five years from 1985 to 1990. The University launches a new fundraiser every ten years. The last Campaign for Notre Dame ran from 1975 until 1980 and surpassed its $130 million dollar goal by $50 million.

THE STORY OF THE IRISH CLADDAGH

The Irish Claddagh story began in the 10th Century when Richard Joyce, a native of Galway was captured by Algerian Cosairs while on his way to the West Indies. He was sold on a slave to a wealthy Moorish Goldsmith who taught him in the craft. His master took a great liking to him and offered him his freedom which Richard very happily accepted.

He returned to his native county and settled down in the ancient village of Claddagh, just outside Galway city, where he designed and made the first Claddagh.

The design of the Irish Claddagh is simple, but yet unique: The Hand Signifies Friendship, The Crown Loyalty, And The Heart Love.

The Irish Claddagh, because of its tradition and design grows daily in popularity and is being used internationally as a token of great friendship and love.

Students show lack of geographic savvy

INDIANAPOLIS—Reversing the poor geographic knowledge of Indiana students will require a change in the way teachers are trained and in the makeup of the public school curriculum, experts say.

"It's going to take a couple of generations before you turn this around. We need people back on track, to realize what geography is and that it can be interesting," said Frederick Bein, chairman of the geography department at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis.

In 1987, 38% from 3 to 7 percent of the state's high school students took world geography, estimated Mary Fortney, a consultant for social studies in the department's Center for School Improvement.

But only a little more than half of the state's high schools offer world geography. It's no wonder study after study has shown student knowledge of geography to be dismal. A 1960 study of 2,211 Indiana college students found that 41 percent couldn't find the capital of the United States and 19 percent could not locate the Pacific Ocean.

A 30-member task force appointed by the Indiana Department of Education is studying ways to change that. Recommendations are due this summer.

"Those few years of service left a reminder that is still very much alive," said the pope, speaking in French from a raised cement-and-red-brick altar. "She is a model for the faithful today."

This year Emil Hofman, dean of the French War of Studies, John Goldrick, associate vice president for residence life, a rector from a male dorm and a female dorm, and a faculty member also served on the committee, said Daly.

Athletics vs. academics in the ND spotlight

By Bob Kerby

In November, a graduate student used Viewpoint to argue the startling proposition that athletics is more important than uni­ duty at Notre Dame, to the detriment of the University's academic aspirations. As a member of this scholarly family, I totally support his argument. As a Faculty Senator, one of the select but few authorities over the democratic process— I hasten, at a les­ seniority professorial pace, to rally the community in defense of its true vocation.

How can anyone believe that Notre Dame undervalues academics? Did not Notre Dame, just a short while ago, dedicate itself totally and wholeheartedly to its mission? And was that mission not the education of the commitment to teaching in the service of the Church and the nation?

A lecture thronged by so many undergraduates that no faculty had to be invited to pad the ad­ dence? Can anyone imagine that academics play second fiddle to anything else?

Belief and unsubstantiated opinion are not the staff of scholarship. Only hard knowledge counts. To that end, I have undertaken to quantify Notre Dame's relative rankings of academics and athletes. This study employs the most up-to-date evidence, data published just a few months ago in the official ND Alumni Association’s latest official ND book, a coffee-table-sized picture tome called "Notre Dame: A Sense of Place." My method has been to count the pictures, categorizing those germane to the issue by content and theme. These calculations exclude the photographs irrelevant to this study's topic—the Church, the Grotto, panoramic views of the campus, life as seen in the dorms and suites—as well as the zero pictures devoted to non-scholar activities of the student body. The result is a photographic inventory of the University's intellectual life, while only 36 academic pictures, demonstrate the thesis advanced to wit, ND is not even a university's intellectual life, while only 36 academic photos show the scholar was gazing at the book, even though there are

Speeds could top 225 mph at Indy

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS – With a new surface, stronger engines and better chassis, a lap averaging 225 mph is no longer inconceivable at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Defending champion Rick Mears, an oval-track specialist, is favored to win his fourth Indy and may top his track record of 290.433 mph. Mears tested his Penske PC-18 with a Chevrolet V-8 engine on the newly paved IMS oval in March. Even in 35-degree weather, Mears topped 217 mph.

He concedes 225 is within reach.

"I don’t think it’s out of the question,” he said. “It depends on the weather and how the popoff valves are working, as far as the boost. Last year, I think the valves were a little bit strong and they may tame them down a bit this year.

“But I think the gains in the cars, the new track surface and Goodyear's new tires, if we had some decent conditions, I think 225 is a possibility.

Practice for the 73rd Indianapolis 500-mile race begins. The first weekend of qualifications is scheduled for May 13-15. The green flag will fly before the 31-car field at 11 a.m. May 29.

Mears won the CART opener in Phoenix on another oval track.

Roger Penske’s PC-17 cars, designed by Nigel Bennett, were the class of the field last year. Penske teammates Mears, Danny Sullivan and Al Unser occupied the front row of the lineup and led 192 of the 200 laps on race day.

strack to a 3-1 lead with an assist to John Bergmann and a jumper from outside. Scott scored only three more points in the first half, but he owned the second stanza. He hit shots to tie the game at 12-12, 14-14 and 15-15. His long-range jumper gave Malicious Prostitution a lead, and with the score tied at 19-19, Scott made no doubt who was in charge.

Scott gave Rice a lesson in finding the open man when he three a bullet to a wide-open John Bergmann for a 30-19 lead. He finished the game, double-teamed, shooting a long-range jumper that could have brought rain. Instead, it hit nothing but net.

For Scott, it was a fitting show in the mid-1980s, like Celtic teams that dominated in the mid-1980s, Malicious Prostitution received contributions from everyone.

Pete Van Dyke was Robert Parish inside, blocking shots and grabbing rebounds with his business-as-usual attitude. John Bergmann was Kevin McHale, complementing Scott with four points and aiding Van Dyke on the boards.

Jim Flynn was Sunday's Denisa Johnson, quiet but effective and not afraid to take the charge. Joe Sternberg, the only non-law student on the team, starred as Danny Ainge, grabbing a loose ball at 19-19 to set up Malicious Prostitution's last two baskets.

As Flynn popped the champagne after the game, Van Dyke stood close by and reflected on the Celtic image initiated by Adwork's. "We were hoping to get a showdown with them," he said. That chance came Sunday, and the Celtics hung another banner.

New computer lab opens on campus

By BRADLEY GALKO
Staff Reporter

The new computer lab in the architecture building contains newer, faster computers and graphical output devices that are better suited for advanced applications in such fields as architecture, science, and engineering, according to Donald Spicer, associate provost for University Computing.

The new lab contains 16 IBM PS/2 model 70's with color monitors, two Hewlett-Packard laser printers, and two Prinewing Zeta plotters which produce color output from Computer Aided Design (CAD) software, according to Lisa Berg, manager of support and user services for University computing.

Spicer coordinated the implementation of the lab.

"The equipment is more advanced than the equipment in our other labs," said Berg explaining that the computers in the architecture lab are faster and can handle software that computers in other labs on campus needed to reduce workload.

"The primary purpose is to compliment the other labs (already) have," said Spicer. "Berg added that the lab is "used toward other applications" other than the straight word processing and spreadsheet applications of other labs on campus.

"It's networked," said Spicer, and has a monitor and a CD-ROM which can be used for instructional purposes, which is one of the primary goals of installing the lab, he said. "Berg added, "faculty and students can use the lab to bolster their research." The lab is also a high-end lab for the campus.

We needed an advanced application lab that they (architecture) had the space.

"It's for use by the architecture department," said Berg, "but it's also just a high-end lab for the campus. We put together a facility that we believe will compliment the labs we have," said -- p.:r.n. Berg.

"The lab is "geared toward other students," said -- p.:r.n. Berg. "Berg added, "but it's also just a lab that's designed for research. It's a facility where students can use it from any computer on campus.""...

Kohl for reduction of missiles

Associated Press

DEIDESHEIM, West Germany--Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain failed to persuade Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Sunday to drop his demand that superpowers begin talks soon on curbing short-range nuclear missiles.

The two leaders, trying to reach a compromise on a stalemate that has split the NATO alliance, described their talks as frank and intensive. Kohl defended West Germany's allegiance to NATO, but he and Mrs. Thatcher admitted they could not solve the crisis.

"We still have quite a lot of work to do," Kohl told reporters during a news conference with Mrs. Thatcher after an afternoon of talks.

Kohl said he was optimistic the disagreement could be resolved before a North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit in Brussels on May 29-30. Kohl's visit to the Rhinefeld-Palatinate town of Deidesheim was aimed at persuading Kohl to drop his government's insistence that the superpowers begin talks on curbing the short-range nuclear weapons.

Kohl's call has placed him in a battle of wills with Mrs. Thatcher's President Bush. Washington and London reject the early negotiations.

Manning named 'Ugly Man'

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Senior Staff Reporter

Sophomore Mark Manning won the 1989 Upsilon Man on Campus Award with a total of $710.24 raised in monetary votes.

A total of $376.52 was raised in this annual quest to find the ugliest man at Notre Dame, with the money benefitting the American Cancer Society, said Michelle Peick. Nine male students, two professors, one rec- tor and a female student all received votes.

Manning had students collecting money to door in campus dorms. "I would like to thank the guys in 10B Flanner, the girls in Siegfried and the guys in Sorin who helped me," said Manning. Beside door to door campaigning, Manning put signs up outside both dining halls and around campus in an effort to "get my name around.

Manning and his campaign crew started making signs on Monday and started to collect on Tuesday. They raised $600 in three days, said Manning.

According to Manning, the money, which was raised primarily through the Flanner and Sorin dorms, was used to help cancer patients. Most of the money was in pennies, there was $137 in bills, said Manning. He said that the money raised for the donations was in pennies.

Manning said that he ran because he "truly committed to the Cancer Society." He said that running for UMC is a "true tradition" and that last year a sophomore from the section was the UMC. Manning added that he will not run next year so that another sophomore from the section can run.

Manning said he was presented with a tee-shirt at recess on Friday. On Saturday he said he led the mud charity to the pits. Manning stated that he was tossed into the mud pits once he arrived.

Junior Daniel Yu raised $201.17 for charity, to be second in the UMC. He said that he didn't have much help, only three or four people helped him raise money. He raised more than 80% of the money alone,

"Yu said he started campaigning Sunday night for the contest. He said he ran for UMC just for the "honor of being the ugliest guy around." He also said that raising money for charity is good.

"Yu said he distributed flyers around campus with this book that said, "With a dog-book picture like this he must be ugly." He said that he will not run again next year but "to come this close is an honor in itself.

Stam said this is the second year that he came in third place. For about a year Stam has been campaigning for UMOC. He said he placed a jar for donations from students after glee club and choral but, said Stam, "it was not quite enough."

Stam wanted to cut his hair in a UCTT joe on the quad as a public act of ugliness, but he had public performances around the time of the voting. Next year Stam said he wants to win.

Other people who received votes but were not mentioned in the graphic won: Mike Passe, Dr. Charles Kulpa and members of Flanner Hall.

Bush honors 200 years of the U.S. presidency

Associated Press

NEW YORK—President Bush on Sunday retraced the inaugural steps of another president named George who took the oath two centuries ago that cemented him in history as “the father of our country.”

Participating in celebrations of the 200th anniversary of George Washington’s inauguration as the first U.S. president, Bush said his forerunner “established a precedent for 40 presidents to follow.”

“It was Washington’s vision, his balance, his integrity, that made the presidency possible,” Bush told a gathering outside the historic Federal Hall where Washington was sworn in on April 30, 1789.

The 41st president reflected on the “awesome prospect” that faced Washington on that day.

“How unlikely it must have seemed then, that we might become United States. How uncertain, that a republic could be born out of the wilderness of competing interests,” Bush said.

But George Washington defined and shaped this office.

Bush said Washington “created a living, functioning government” based on the Constitution. “He brought together men of genius—a team of giants, with strong and competing views. He harnessed and directed their energies.”

Bush spoke of Washington’s “living, functioning government” based on the Constitution. “He brought together men of genius—a team of giants, with strong and competing views. He harnessed and directed their energies.”

Bush included a enactment of the historic Federal Hall steps.

The ceremony ended with a rain of brightly colored confetti and fresh-cut flowers cascading from office towers onto the crowd.

Speaking to a crowd of several thousand people from behind a glass wall on the Federal Hall steps, Bush seemed not to notice a handful of protesters who waved signs reading “We demand health care,” and chanted “106 and nothing done, what about AIDS?”

Bush spoke of Washington’s dedication to service and repeated his own often-stated call for Americans to follow that calling today.

“One day we seek a new engagement of the lives of others, believing that success is not measured by the sum of our possessions, our positions, or by the good we do for others,” he said.

Bush and his wife Barbara, joined by their daughter Doro LeBlond and Bush’s brother Jonathan Bush, began their day in New York with church services at St. Paul’s Chapel, where Washington attended services on his Inauguration Day.

The score was first announced as 11-9, Adworks, but the individual stats totaled 10 points for Malicious Prostitution instead of the nine that were included on the running score. Adworks didn't protest the change, apparently unaware the error had been made.

"Was it really a mistake?" Derrick Johnson wondered after the game.

Adworks has displayed a propensity to struggle early in tournament games only to bounce on their opponents' second-half miscues, setting their fine transition game in motion. And for a while in the second half Sunday, it looked like Adworks would do the same against Malicious Prostitution.

Adworks added to their lead immediately following the intermission when Derek Brown tipped in a missed shot for a 12-9 lead. However, Scott brought his team back to tie the game at 12, 14 and 15 and delivered a message to Adworks - they would not run away with this game.

The game, which featured 11 lead changes, see-sawed back and forth for the next several minutes until the 19-19 deadlock. Enter Scott, who first dashed off to a 20-19 lead, and then sealed the victory with a jumper from the left side.

"I didn't know Joe Scott was that potent," said Johnson. "He just came through in the clutch for us." Johnson, who led Adworks with eight points, was tied with Scott with five first-half buckets and was considered by many as the odds-on favorite for MVP. But once Adworks fell behind, the focus shifted to Scott, and Johnson had to settle for first-team All-Bookstore honors.

"I would rather have won the tournament," said Johnson, "but being named to the first-team was nice also.

The crowd, which was anything but bashful in its support for Malicious Prostitution, was to play a big factor in the outcome. During a first-half free-throws attempts by Adworks' John "Booger" Buscher, the crowd rose to its feet and cheered as though it were calling for goal-line heroes from the Irish defense. Buscher's shot fell short of the rim.

The road to the final wasn't easy for Malicious Prostitution, who first had to get by Murphy's Bar before turning its attention to Adworks. Scott was the catalyst in that one as well, popping in 11 baskets in his team's 21-19 semifinal win over Murphy's.

Malicious Prostitution had an easier time of it in its quartefinal match with No. 1 in Team, rolling to a 21-12 victory. D'U's center Pete Van Dyke connected on eight-of-13 shots from inside the paint to pace the winners.

Adworks discovered how difficult it is to repeat when every upset-minded team in the tournament is gunning for you in their two games prior to Sunday's final.

Point guard Keys scored five points and Johnson and Tony Rice each chipped in four as Adworks outlasted Coach's 21-19 in their semifinal game. Buscher keyed Adworks in their 21-18 win over Killer Bees with seven baskets, many coming on his trademark bank shot from the left wing.

In other weekend action, Coach's overcame a halftime deficit and Sean Connor's nine points to beat Minahoonies 21-15 in one quarterfinal game, and Murphy's Bar rode Kevin Warren's 16-of-16 shooting to a 21-19 win over Fugitive Guys Finale, also on Friday.

The other awards:

Redwine. "They hit the ball well in certain situations but not the best in the conference."

Notre Dame also fell behind in Sunday's game, but had no problems coming back. After spotting the Musketeers a 3-2 lead in the first, the Irish scored twice in their half of the inning to take the lead away from the home team. As an Irish sophomore, Redwine has taken over the starting shortstop position, which was previously held by the graduating senior Ed Lund. Redwine is expected to help Notre Dame win the Big East Conference this year.}

The Irish went on to win the game with a 7-5 final score, marking the end of a brilliant future. The change of scenery did not adversely affect the Irish as they recorded their fourth shutout of the season during Illinois St., 8-0, again not playing the doubles because it would extend the Irish, in fact the match included two three set affairs and four deuce sets.

"I was pleased with the way we played," said Kalazonos Coach George Acher. "I was really happy that it was close. Notre Dame's consistency has really improved, they hit fewer unforced errors and they sustained their concentration a lot longer than we did. I was also impressed with their sportsmanship and the fact that they were all gentlemen on the court.

In the nightcap, the Irish were forced to take the match into the Eck Pavilion because of the unpredictable weather. The change of scenery did not affect the Irish as they recorded their fourth shutout of the season during Illinois St., 8-0, again not playing the doubles because it would extend the Irish, in fact the match included two three set affairs and four deuce sets.

"I was walking up to shake his hand," said Reiter. "I thought it was great and it felt incredible to come back."

As for senior team captain Brian Kalbas, the Carmel, IN resident earned his fifth and final singles win for Notre Dame by humbling Mark Grether, 6-4, 6-3, 6-0, as the Irish career has come to an end. His on the court. He was named Notre Dame's first full-time assistant coach for the 1989-1990 season.

"It really hasn't hit me yet that this is my last match," said Kalbas. "It seems like I am going to be around next year playing but I'm not. But when it hits me it is going to be sad but you have to move on."}

All things considered, the 1988-1989 Irish could not have asked for a better year. The team faced its most challenging schedule in history and bet- tered last season 17-13 record. Notre Dame beat six teams that had to last year as well as knocking off nationally ranked North Carolina, Ohio State and Murray St.

CAMPUS BANDS: sign up to play next year.

Short meeting tonight at 6:30 pm.
-SUB office 2nd floor.
Scott was star, but...
When Bookstore Basketball XVIII began, Joe Scott was not a familiar name. That was not surprising in a tournament with names like Tony Rice, Lou Holtz, Jim Dolan and Andy Heck. A day after the tournament has ended, try to find someone who doesn’t know him. Like a lottery winner, Scott probably now has friends he never knew he had.

In 1984, Scott helped Princeton to the NCAA Tournament. Sunday afternoon, he led Malicious Prostitution to the tournament final. Adworks was whipped for an unseemly number of first-half fouls, sending their opponent to the line earlier than any of its predecessors.

Malicious Prostitution used this momentum to its advantage in derailing Adworks’ quest to repeat as Bookstore title. Scott's 11 points, all to the delight of an upset-hungry crowd.

Trailing 19-18, Malicious Prostitution pulled the rug out from under Adworks' title drive by rallying to score three consecutive baskets to stake its claim to the championship in a tournament that began nearly a month ago with 672 teams vying to become No. 1. Down the stretch, Malicious Prostitution looked to the hot Scott, whose jump shot never strayed from its intended path to the hoop. Scott was clearly the deciding factor in the game and was rewarded for his outstanding play with the tournament MVP award.

"It was just one of those games," said Scott, a law student who played his collegiate ball at Princeton. "At the end of the game, someone had to step up and make the shots."

A scoring controversy erupted prior to the start of the second half when Malicious Prostitution received a point it never scored. The point was awarded to Scott.

Derrick Johnson hit a jumper from the right wing to stake Adworks to an 11-9 halftime lead, but the score went down in the books as 11-10 in favor of the defending champs.

the law students’ plainness and traditional style of play. In warmups Sunday, Adwork’s put on a dunking exhibition, while Malicious Prostitution calmly shot layups. The contrast was striking.

You can’t keep a good team down forever.

And the Notre Dame baseball team learned Sunday that you can’t do it to a bad team either.

After winning three straight from Xavier this weekend at Jake Kine Field, the Irish fell to Midwest Collegiate Conference foe Xavier in the last of a four-game series.

Xavier (14-33, 6-10 in the MCC East) won the second game of Sunday’s doubleheader 6-2 to salvage one win in the four-game series with the Irish.

Notre Dame had beaten Xavier 12 times in a row, dating back to 1987, before Sunday.

"We beat Notre Dame regularly a few years back when we were veterans and they were young," said Xavier coach Larry Redwine. "Now it’s their turn."

Notre Dame (35-12, 11-3 in the MCC East) swept Saturday’s doubleheader 5-0 and 11-6, then took Sunday’s first game 8-6. Not one of the six Xavier players to score in Sunday’s final game reached base on a hit. Instead, the Musketeers took advantage of five walks, five sacrifices and one hit batter to score six runs on six hits.

Irish starter Brian Conway (2-3) allowed just three hits in 1.3 innings, but the Irish left 11 men on base and could not catch up after falling behind 3-1 in the second inning.

Redwine did not get much help from the Irish bullpen.

Mike Coffey allowed two runs in 1.23 innings of work, allowing Xavier to extend its lead from 4-2 to 6-2 in the late innings.

"I’m concerned about our bullpen," said Irish coach Pat Murphy. "Mike Coffey hasn’t been pitching well for about two weeks. He’s had mechanical problems, and maybe we pushed him too much."

"It’s nice to see you’re concerned when we’re 35-12. Redwine could only wish the same thing. His team, which lost 17 games in a row earlier this year, had David down for a losing streak with Sunday’s win.

"Notre Dame’s the premier team in the conference," said
