Bush calls for aid to drug countries

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The drug control strategy President Bush will present next week will call for $250 million to $260 million in economic and military aid for the three principal cocaine producing countries -- Colombia, Peru and Bolivia -- an administrative source said Wednesday.

Earlier, sources had said the aid figure could hit $300 million, and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft indicated Tuesday that the figure would be even higher than that.

When asked about the reported $250 million figure for the Andean countries, Scowcroft said, "That figure, I think you can assume, has already been increased by the fact that we have given [the Peruvian government] $25 million to help fight the 'total war' declared by the drug traffickers there."

However, the $25 million is coming out of a discretionary fund available for fiscal 1989, which ends Sept. 30. The strategy covers fiscal 1990.

Scowcroft had not intended to add the $64 million onto next year's budget, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

President Bush met with his top Levantists in the drug war Tuesday at his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine, to discuss the strategy, but sources said Wednesday that the focus of the meeting was Colombia, not the strategy, and that no specific decision were made on changing plans for future aid to that country.

The fiscal year begins Oct. 1, and the options open to the United States are to extend the aid, cut funds, or reduce it.

Colombia has suffered numerous bombings by drug traffickers since Colombian President Virgilio Barco imposed emergency regulations 1 and 1/2 weeks ago that allow for the immediate resumption of extraditions of alleged drug traffickers to the United States for trial.

Moldavian leaders mollify minorities

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Leaders of Moldavia tried to placate outraged minorities Wednesday by considering a watered-down version of legislation to make Moldavian the official language in the ethnically diverse southern republic.

At the urging of President Mikhail Gorbachev, reports said, the Moldavians were leaning toward the compromise in an effort to stop strikes by ethnic Russians and others opposed to the pending language law.

Non-Moldavians were reported on strike at 200 businesses and industries in the small republic next to Romania. The official news agency Tass said rail workers in several cities joined the walkout Wednesday.

Under the original proposal, Moldovan would be the only official language. The compromise would make it the language of officials and documents, but Russian would be the everyday tongue for contact among ethnic groups.

In the restive Baltic republics, Moldova would be the only official language. The compromise would make it the language of officials and documents, but Russian would be the everyday tongue for contact among ethnic groups.

President Bush, who hasn’t had any luck fishing on his summer vacations, this year bought a newspaper Wednesday to stop running a “no-fish” logo chronicling his rod-and-reel failures. The Portland Press Herald’s graphic consists of a circle with a line drawn through a bluefish similar to the “Ghostbusters” logo. Bush, whose hook has come up empty for the past 13 days in a row, said he planned to call the newspaper’s editor. “I think they should knock off that advertisement,” he said during a presentation by the Chamber of Commerce for the Maine resort and neighboring community.

INDIANA BRIEFS

A divided Indiana Supreme Court, reversing an earlier appellate court decision, ruled Wednesday that a convicted robber should lose his parental rights. In a 3-2 decision, the court ruled that a convicted robber should lose his parental rights. The court held that the defendant, who was convicted in 1985, the welfare department filed a request to terminate the defendant’s parental rights. SMC diversifies with 2 new administrators

Special to The Observer

As part of its campus diversification program, Saint Mary's College has appointed two administrators to recruit minority students.

Patricia Washington has been named director of minority, international and non-traditional students. Washington has taught at the University of Pittsburgh. She received her doctorate and master's degree in social work degree in counseling from the University of Northern Iowa, and her bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin and the University of Pittsburgh. She received her doctorate and master's degree in social work from Pittsburgh, her master's degree in counseling from the University of Northern Iowa, and her bachelor's degree from Northeastern Illinois University.

A frequent speaker on minority issues, she is also a gerontology researcher. At Saint Mary's, Washington will develop social and academic programs for students from minority and international backgrounds and older students. She will also coordinate programs to promote the understanding and appreciation of cultural diversity in the community. Joy Vann, a former admissions counselor at Wichita State, joins the College as an assistant director of admissions. She will coordinate minority recruitment programs. Vann holds a bachelor's degree from Wichita State.

New SMC faculty members announced

Special to The Observer

New faculty members and administrators for the 1989-90 academic year at Saint Mary's College were announced recently. New faculty, listed by departments, are:

Biology: Clarence Dineen, professor emeritus, who returns to the College to teach a human anatomy laboratory, and Diane Lovin, lab instructor.

Business Administration and Economics: Lauren Strach, instructor of management; Maria Bruno, instructor in international finance; and Bartholomew J. Timm, instructor in business communications.

Chemistry and Physics: Roger Hulme, visiting associate professor of chemistry; James R. Powell, visiting assistant professor of chemistry; and Brother Joseph Godfrey, CSL, in physics.

Communication and Theatre: F. Leslie Baird, visiting assistant professor of theatre; and Kenny Kreiman, visiting assistant professor of dance.

Humanistic Studies: Philip Hicks, assistant professor.

Nursing: Carolyn Kaiser and Barbara Kemper, lecturers in psychiatric nursing.

Philosophy: Andrew Cutrufello, visiting assistant professor.

New to the Counihan-Leighton Library is Linda Doverser, reference librarian. New administrators for the coming year are:

Patricia A. Washington, director of minority, international and non-traditional student life; R. William Cause of dance.

Humanistic Studies: Philip Hicks, assistant professor.

Nursing: Carolyn Kaiser and Barbara Kemper, lecturers in psychiatric nursing.

Philosophy: Andrew Cutrufello, visiting assistant professor.

Bush's plan to reduce acid rain would cost 5.5 billion

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush's proposed legislation to reduce acid rain will cost more than $5.5 billion a year and force electric rate increases of at least 5 percent to 10 percent in many states, the utility industry claimed Wednesday, calling the costs excessive and unnecessary.

The industry estimates were about a third more than projected by the Bush administration, but officials at the Environmental Protection Agency characterized them as not far out of line from administration estimates when various factors are taken into consideration. "We're heartened that their numbers are coming out so close to ours," said Nancy Kete, senior analyst in the EPA's office of air radiation.

She said the EPA has estimated industry costs would be about $4 billion a year when full compliance with the proposed acid rain controls goes into effect in 2000.

The acid rain curbs are included in legislation before Congress tightening federal air pollution laws. The Bush proposal calls for cutting sulfur dioxide emissions — the chief source of acid rain — by 10 million tons a year, mostly from coal-burning power plants.

The report by the Edison Electric Institute projects industry costs as high as $120 billion as a result of having to install pollution control equipment and make other adjustments to meet the emission curbs required by the legislation.

Under some scenarios, costs could jump to as much as $7.1 billion a year after the year 2000, said the industry report, although acknowledging that was a "high-cost" scenario that envisions failure of the administration's proposed emissions credit trading scheme and broad reliance by utilities on expensive "scrubber" technology instead of fuel switching.

The EPA's Kete said that the agency continues to believe that utilities will rely less than the industry believes on expensive technology, opt more for switching from high-sulfur to low-sulfur coal, and make the emissions credit system work. All of these factors would bring the industry estimates in line with the EPA cost estimates, she said.

According to the industry study, about 85 percent of the increased costs of complying with the proposed emission curbs would be borne by 15 states in the eastern half of the country, where utilities rely heavily on high-sulfur coal to meet their generating needs.

Utilities in Indiana, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Tennessee together will face 44 percent of the annual costs nationwide, the industry group said.

The industry study estimated that the higher costs would result in sharp increases in some electric rates with average rate increases more than 10 percent in six states and at least 5 percent in another 19 states. Thirty-six of the 100 major utilities will have to impose rate increases of at least 10 percent, the industry group maintained.

The industry report said the sharpest rate increases of between 10.8 percent to 17.3 percent were expected in Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Ohio, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Ms. Kete said the EPA has estimated average rate increases as a result of the additional pollution control requirements at about 2 percent with the highest increases in the 5 percent to 6 percent range.

William Rosengberg, the EPA's assistant administrator for air and radiation, called the industry cost estimates "similar" to those produced by his agency, but said they should be viewed in the context of an industry that has current revenues of $150 billion a year.

At a news conference, industry officials said the industry costs could be reduced by as much as 30 percent if the proposed legislation were changed to give utilities greater flexibility.

MURDER, RAPE CONVICT EXECUTED WEDNESDAY

Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — A man convicted of the 1977 rape and murder of a 61-year-old woman was executed Wednesday night in Virginia’s electric chair.

Alton Waye, 34, was pronounced dead at 11:05 p.m. after receiving two 55-second jolts of nearly 2,500 volts of electricity, said Department of Corrections spokesman Wayne Farrar.

“I would express that what in about to take place is a murder,” Waye said in a final statement. “I don’t hate anyone. I forgive everyone involved.”

Waye went to the U.S. Supreme Court earlier Wednesday seeking a stay of execution, but the high court refused by a 7-2 vote to postpone the execution and to consider his case on appeal.

Waye, a former textile worker, also was denied a last-minute appeal by the high court last month seeking a stay of execution.

Waye was executed Wednesday night on Virginia’s death row for the rape and murder of 61-year-old Willie Mae Scott of Prince George, Va.

Amnesty International has said Waye should not be executed because he is borderline mentally retarded. Baliles has received 638 letters opposing the execution, largely due to a letter campaign urged by the human rights group.

Baliles, in letters Wednesday to Waye’s attorneys, said he had reviewed Waye’s case and “I am not persuaded that the governor’s power of executive clemency should be exercised in this matter.”

Waye received commutation of the bread and juice Wednesday night from a boyhood schoolmate, the Rev. William Bell, and the Revs. Russ Ford and A.C. Epps.

John Coble, operations officer at the state Penitentiary, said Waye was baptized Tuesday night. “He said to the people, ‘I am blessed,'” Coble said.

“He’s relying on his religious faith at this time,” Coble said. “But we have some problems regarding his case.”

Coble said that the state’s attorney general’s office has given the Office of National Drug Control Policy a draft strategy that would have proposed an administration source said Wednesday.

In addition, a proposed $25 million National Drug Intelligence Center and combine all the elements of drug enforcement Administration and the FBI, was eliminated from the strategy due to a last-minute bid by the Treasury Department.

Enforcement Administration and the FBI, was eliminated from the strategy due to a last-minute bid by the Treasury Department.

“Justice said, ‘Wait a minute. Let’s step back and do this right,” said the source.

Justice, Notre Dame style

Since becoming an adult on my 18th birthday, I have twice had the privilege of being an active participant in the United States Justice system. Once in 1987 and again in 1989, I was requested to serve as a prospective juror for a criminal trial.

Also since my 18th birthday, I have experienced firsthand the operation of the University of Notre Dame’s justice system through the operation of the Office of Student Affairs. Unfortunately, in this instance I was on the receiving end of the legal system.

From these two separate sets of experiences and from talking extensively with others who have had business with Student Affairs, I have been able to view the operation of the University of Notre Dame’s justice system through the operation of the Office of Student Affairs. Unfortunately, in this instance I was on the receiving end of the legal system.

Within these two different institutions, a few questions come to mind regarding the differences between the two organizations.

The U.S. Constitution grants that all men and women are created equal and entitled to certain inalienable rights. Included within these rights are several which deal specifically with the rights of the accused in a criminal proceeding. The right to a trial by a jury of one’s peers, to face one’s accuser, to counsel, and to a public hearing are examples of such rights and can be seen daily in the courthouses of America.

Further, it is explicitly stated that a separation of powers and responsibilities exists within the environment of the courthouse. A judge cannot act as a representative of either party involved, nor can either the defendant or the prosecutor act as judge or jury. The accuser, the one being accused, and the judge and jury are all separate entities responsible for separate functions. The founding fathers considered these rights sufficiently important to guarantee them to all people, regardless of cost in time and money.

At Notre Dame, however, the prosecutor is also the judge. In this sense, there appears to exist a case of the fox guarding the henhouse.

Does Notre Dame offer the accused on campus this same valuable protection? My experience and the experience of others with whom I have spoken with puts into question the presence of many of these rights in the theory and practice of Student Affairs. A trial on this campus does not include the requirement of a jury, whether it be of one’s peers or otherwise. The right to face one’s accuser is not guaranteed, nor is the right to view all evidence against one included. An individual does have a right to counsel, but the counsel chosen by the accused must fit within stringent guidelines set by Student Affairs.

The largest and most grievous difference between the Office of Student Affairs and the United States justice system is in the separation of powers. The representatives of Student Affairs act as prosecutor, judge, and jury. The potential for a conflict of interest between the differing functions of Student Affairs brings into question the overall soundness of the system. For example, who is responsible to protect the accused from an overeager prosecutor? In a U.S. court, the judge would carry out such a function. At Notre Dame, however, the prosecutor is also the judge. In this sense, there appears to exist a case of the fox guarding the henhouse.

Why is it that the University of Notre Dame does not deem it necessary to include within its functions the inalienable rights that our country has determined to be necessary? The rights of the accused are an important aspect of all legal systems. It would seem that for this University to have a method of distributing justice that is objective and fair, these shortcomings would have to be addressed. At the very least, the separation of the powers of judge, jury, and prosecutor from one office would add a sufficient degree of objectivity to make most processes fair.

Student government welcomes students back to campus

Dear Editor:

Welcome back to all returning students and a special welcome to all freshmen and transfers. We are the two guys that you elected to serve you in student government this year as Student Body President and Vice President. Well, we do not plan to let you down. Already, we have been very busy in our new roles as student leaders and we are very enthused about the opportunities that lie ahead.

We both were out here at school this summer trying to get a head start for the year. Over the summer, we worked on a variety of different projects. With the cooperation of Mr. Mason in Business Affairs, Fr. Tyson in Student Affairs, and Colonel Woods in Support Services, we were able to provide some input into the changes on the "Mod Quad" and lobby to construct a new, better volleyball pit on the quad.

At the end of summer, we sponsored planning sessions for the National Association of Student Affairs Officers at Catholic Colleges and Universities, an organization that we would like to originate at Notre Dame. Ten representatives from various colleges attended and the weekend was very productive. We plan to be in touch with more schools this fall in order to organize a regional meeting and eventually to have a national meeting at Notre Dame next semester.

We have also worked with the administration on the new recycling program within the University. Part of the student initiative, support, and manpower will be channeled through student government.

We helped to sponsor a panel discussion on the recent trip to China in June. On Sunday, we sponsored a bus from the airport and the train station free of fare for all returning students. We plan to provide this service again at breaks. Finally, we will be distributing the Blue and Gold Pages, the guide to on and off-campus living at Notre Dame. It has all the information you could possibly want to know. One will be going to each room and off-campus students can pick them up in the student government offices next week. Take advantage of these services and others that will be provided through the course of the year.

Toward the end of last school year, Freshman and Transfer Orientation Chairpersons were selected-- Sue Hatch, Vic DeFrancis, and Kevin Keane. Through student government, they worked diligently throughout the summer to provide an enjoyable and valuable welcome to the new members of our community.

We want you to know that we are always looking for new, exciting people to be a part of student government. If you are interested in becoming a part of student government, please stop by our offices on the second floor of LaVernese. One of us is around most of the time. Also, if you just have an idea that you want to blow off on us, don’t hesitate to stop by. We want to be accessible to you as possible. Best of luck to you this year.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'Becoming number one is easier than remaining number one.'

Senator Bill Bradley
"Show me that smile again." So goes the first line from the theme song of "Growing Pains," a witty and highly-rated situation comedy. Given the success of that program, the producers and network executives decided to show that smile again (and hopefully make some bucks again) by creating a spin-off. The result: "Just the Ten of Us."

The "Growing Pains" spin-off presents itself Fridays at 8:30 p.m. on ABC. The show centers on the move of Coach Lubbock (Bill Kirchenbauer) and his family from New York to California. How all 10 of the Lubbocks fit into the vehicle shown during the opening credits isn't explained, but, somehow, they all do. Now it's time for them to begin their new lives in the social wasteland that is California. "Ten" is a spin-off in name only. It resembles its "parent" show only in the fact that both mothers have blonde hair. All the zany, crazy humor and spontaneous lines of "Growing Pains" were lost somewhere on the move from New York to California—probably Iowa. In any event, the show seems to have forgotten the one element that differentiates a drama from a comedy: humor.

The situations on "Just the Ten of Us" are simply rewritten versions of other sitcom plots. Bluntly, the plotlines are predictable. In one episode, Cindy (Jamie Luvoret, the typically clumsy daughter, wants to become a radio talk-show host. "Do you have any idea how embarrassing it is to have everyone trying to be your friend just because you're incredibly gorgeous?" Cindy asks. When she tells her brother she wants a radio job, he asks, "Are you selling 'em or fixing 'em?" Of course, the twist is that Wendy (Brooke Theiss) thinks Cindy only gets the job because Coach knows the man who runs the station. The show is interesting, though, and keeps the viewers' attention. Perhaps it would better qualify as a half-hour "slice of life" feature. Nonetheless, it fails to satisfy its stated genre, sitcom, by not providing humor.

The title indicates another fatal flaw in the show's construction: "Just the TEN of Us." Wouldn't five have been enough? Or three? A half-hour show can hardly handle five characters, let alone ten. Each episode features Mom, Dad, and a child or two—with the remaining children popping in just to say a line here and there. As a result, the audience never gets to know the Lubbocks and their individual personalities. (Maybe this is done deliberately to hide that fact so few of them actually have personalities!)

"Just the Ten of Us" has a definite dilemma. The best way to improve the show would be to rid it of several characters; however, the presence of eight children is the base of the show's premise. Perhaps the older children could go off to college or get their own apartment and, by doing so, start another show. No matter what happens, the writers need to make the show funny.

"Just the Ten of Us" is the perfect example of a spin-off for the sake of a spin-off and for no other reason. Coach Lubbock was never an interesting enough character on "Growing Pains" to ever support his own show—and, unfortunately, that's blatantly obvious now. "Just the Ten of Us" is just plain dull.

"Lethal Weapon 2" a smash among all the summer's sequels

The sequel smoothly continues right where "Lethal Weapon" left off, and furthers the hilarious relationship of Detectives Martin Riggs (Mel Gibson) and Roger Murtaugh (Danny Glover.) Their latest assignment involves the protective custody -- "baby-sitting" according to Riggs -- of a witness who, the partners find out, was involved with the drug ring they are trying to break. Riggs and Murtaugh are only supposed to be protecting the witness, but end up diving (literally) right into a full-fledged chase. The movie combines an incredible amount of action with an equal amount of comedy. It is an excellent combination that works very well.

As seen in "Lethal Weapon," the personalities and styles of Riggs and Murtaugh are two extremes, and the sequel plays on their contrasting styles. Riggs is spontaneous and has no qualms or reservations about anything regarding his work, while Murtaugh is the family man who likes to play it conservatively by the book. Even though they have worked together for three years, they are still constantly at each others throats.

What is especially commendable about "Lethal Weapon 2" is how the individual characters are developed without taking away from the comedy and action. The audience learns more about the death of Riggs' wife, and becomes further involved with the personal relationship of the detectives. The few serious scenes are handled very well -- they are not so serious as to bring down the movie, and they are not too light as to become trite.

Riggs and Murtaugh, though they are the main characters, do not dominate the movie. The accountant they are protecting, Leo Getz (Joe Pesci), adds many laughs. He ends up tagging along on the detectives' chases and busts, and thinks the whole situation is the most exciting thing he's ever experienced. He is oblivious to the fact that there are people who want him dead. Consequently, he drives his protectors up a wall, and sends the audience into waves of laughter.

It is obvious that the producers cut no corners in the production of "Lethal Weapon 2." The stunts and special effects are another shining aspect of the film, especially the destruction of a Hollywood Hills house on stilts which is simply spectacular.

"Lethal Weapon 2" one sequel that meets and exceeds the standards set by the original movie. If a sequel has to be seen, let it be this one.
U.S., Soviet win most gold

Associated Press

DUSIBURG, West German Roger Kingston won the gold medal in the 110-meter hurdles Wednesday at the World University Games, but cold weather and stiffness prevents the two-time Olympic champ from challenging his own world record. Americans also won three gold medals in relays on the final day of the Games, tying them with the Soviet Union for the lead with six.

"I was very stiff this morning and I was concerned about that," Kingston said. "I just didn't have enough." Kingston won easily, but his time of 13.26 was well outside his two-week-old world record of 12.92.

"I wanted to break it again," he said. "I felt pretty good yesterday. (In the heats) I was hitting quite a few hurdles and today we had the wind in front of us, which is good because I ran well against the wind. But I just wasn't able to break the record."

Kingdom held a slight lead at the first hurdle and continued pulling away despite hitting hard against the sixth hurdle. He led by 10 feet ahead of Emiliano Vallo of Cuba at the finish line.

"I tried to stay under control until the end, particularly at the last hurdle," Kingdom said.

Vallo was timed in 13.52, while the bronze medal went to Florian Schwartoff of West Germany in 13.63. The U.S. women's 400-meter relay team of Michelle Finn, Anita Howard, Lamonda Miller and Esther Just took the title with a meet-record time of 42.40, breaking the mark of 42.82 set in 1980 by another U.S. team.

Walker Watkins, Michael Dees, Andre Cason and Michael Marsh teamed to power the U.S. men's 400-meter relay team to the gold medal with a time of 38.58.

The U.S. women's 1,500-meter relay medal for the Americans was won by Celea Mondie, Natasha Kaiser, Jearl Miles and Terri Henry.

Jamaica prevented a U.S. sweep of the relays by winning the men's 1,500-meterers in 3:02.38. The Americans were second in 3:02.75.

The Americans got another silver from Michael Stalcup in the men's shot put. His toss of 67-9 3/4 was second to Lars Nilsson of Norway, who won the gold with a throw of 67-9 3/4.

Another world record-holder also won despite being sub-par.

Javier Sotomayor of Cuba took the gold in the men's high jump by clearing seven feet, eight inches, four inches below his world record. He failed three times at 7-11 1/4, which would have been a meet record.

While training I here developed I problem with my left knee, I said today. "I just didn't have enough, why I can do nothing to be going well for me this year."

Kingdom's winning time was 1:58.77, while Rudolf Povarskyn of the Soviet Union, a former world record holder and bronze medallist at the 1988 Olympics, was third. He also cleared 7-7 but had more misses than Conway.

"I had problems with my first attempt and that took a lot out of me," said Conway, who made two efforts to clear at 7-1/2. "I'm strong now but I have a few problems with my knees."

The Cheruiyot twins of Kenya took medals in two different events.

Kipkoech Cheruiyot upset Olympic champion Peter Rono, also of Kenya, to win the men's 1,500, 3,080 by his brother, Charles, took the silver in the 5,000, behind Stefano Meo of Italy.

In the 1,500, the two Kenyans took charge early in the race, running in front and staying there in a relatively fast race for the windy and cool conditions. Kipkoech Cheruiyot won in three minutes, 40.38 seconds. Rono was second in 3:40.79.

Charles Cheruiyot was in front with 1,000 meters left in the race but could not hold off a strong finish by Meo, the 1986 European champion, who won in 3:59.04.

"This was my first good race since Stuttgart," said Meo, referring to his 1986 European title. "I was able to follow the pace, especially in the last few laps."

Ana Quiroa of Cuba completed a double by adding the women's 800- meter title to her gold in the 400. Her winning time was 1:58.88.

University of Virginia football players Derek Dooley, (83), Scott Greise and Yusuf Jackson (51) relax before practice at Giants Stadium. If you're going to ask Virginia coach George Welsh about the quality of the Notre Dame football team, you'd better plan on staying a while.

"This Notre Dame team reminds me of the teams I saw in the '70s when (Ars) Parseghian and Dan Devine were there," said Walsh, whose team meets the Irish in the Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. "They had a different kind of offense then, but things have changed in the last 10 years. They have a very physical, intense type of play, especially on defense.

"They have really great tacklers in the secondary, good people up front and a dominant offensive line. (Tony) Rice can beat you just like (Joe) Montana could beat you.

"Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz is, well, slightly more restrained in singing his team's praises.

"We're awfully thin at several positions, I'm greatly concerned about linebacker and running back as far as depth is concerned," said Holtz. "If we lose a Tony Rice, a Ned Bolcar, someone on the defensive line... it's not a football team that can stand any more adversity, particularly injury-wise.

"Welch, who is respected by his peers as one of the best in the craft, can only make up a defensive line that should help give Notre Dame one of the top run defenses in the country.

"Virginia returns nine starters, including the entire line and secondary, from last year's defense. Some defensive end and tri-captain Ray Savage anchors the line. The only area where Virginia lacks experience on defense is at linebacker, where Jeff Lagemann and David Griggs both have left since getting selected in the National Football League draft. They will be replaced by sophmore and three-time lettermen Phil Thomas and Elton Tollever.

"Virginia allowed over 22 points per game last season, while Notre Dame averaged 20 points per game.

The Irish defense, which looked devastating on paper this summer, appears slightly more vulnerable after the on-time in the NFL. But with Arnold Aikin, Michael Stonebreaker and George "Boo" Williams. That doesn't mean any offenses are going to lick their chops in anticipation of meetings with Notre Dame.

Business as usual as Holtz bemoans the plight of ND

Associated Press

Notre Dame, N.J.--If Lou Holtz had managed the 1927 New York Yankees, probably he would have moaned about Babe Ruth’s strikeouts and convinced writers that the club was heading for a last-place finish. So it isn’t surprising that the coach of defending national champion Notre Dame is already poo­morning this year’s chances of winning.

"We’re not a top 20 team right now," Holtz said at a news conference Tuesday. "We’re not as good as you think, but we’re probably not as bad as I think."

Actually, Holtz has reason to worry as his team prepares to face Virginia in Thursday’s Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium.

In the last month, Notre Dame has lost seven players to injury. Two couldn’t recover from lingering injuries and one wasn’t declared academically in­eligible. The most damaging depar­tures were All-American lin­ebanker Michael Stonebreaker and running back Tony Brooks, the team’s sec­ond and third leading rushers last season. Also gone for the season are defensive tackle George Williams, fullback Braxton Banks, defensive end Arnold Leek and offensive tackle Pete Rausch.

"We’ve got a completely dif­ferent team than the one we started spring practice with," Holtz said. "We’re awfully thin this year, at a lot of positions and we’ve got an awful lot of question marks."

THE CAVILLERS

The Fighting Irish will face the Cavaliers, who have an edge because they have an experienced, talented coach. Then, when practices started, we realized what a disciplinarian he was. Anyone can see the effect he’s had on us. But, in true Notre Dame fashion, no one is looking past the Kickoff Classic and the Virginia Cavaliers.

"We’ve heard a lot about how fired up Virginia is and how they have an edge because they’re the underdogs and have nothing to lose. But we’ve got some motivation now, too, to show that we can meet with adversity and treat it as a chal­lenge to be met. We’re playing for our life out there. And Bolcar is playing for a repeat of the success of his Notre Dame career."
Ball State's Schudel cautious as season opener against West Virginia approaches

Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. Ball State coach Paul Schudel said Wednesday he doesn't exactly like the idea of starting against a team like West Virginia.

"I'd rather start out against somebody else and then play them maybe next week," said Schudel, whose Cardinals take on the Mountaineers Saturday at Mountaineer Field in the opener for both teams.

The Mountaineers went undefeated and untied last season for the first time in 97 years of football and were named the top team in the East before losing to Notre Dame 34-21 in the Fiesta Bowl.

Ball State finished the year tied for third in the Mid-American Conference with an 8-3 record.

"If we just want to go out and play hard and play well," Schudel said during a telephone interview. "Whatever happens, happens. It will be a great challenge and a great honor to play against a team like West Virginia.

"I'll be satisfied if we execute and play hard from beginning to end. It's the first game for everybody and it will be tough. We'll just let the chips fall where they may." It will be the first time the two schools have met in football. But Schudel and West Virginia coach Don Nehlen are close friends and each knows the other's coaching style.

They worked together as assistants to Michigan coach Bo Schembechler in the late 1970s and spent many nights discussing their respective coaching philosophies.

"He's going to do everything he can to beat me and he knows I'm going to be out to beat him," Schudel said.

"But we'll still be friends."

Schudel said his offense basically uses the I-formation, but he said West Virginia's defense can expect to see some plays run from the shotgun.

"We'll use it when it's appropriate," said Schudel. "We like to run the football, I know it's going to be a challenge to do that against West Virginia."

The 45-year-old Ball State coach said money entered into the decision to include West Virginia on the Cardinals schedule this season.

"It was partly a financial decision, but part of the reason is that against West Virginia's coaching styles."

"It was mostly a financial decision, but part of the reason the game was scheduled was because our athletic director (Don Purvis) and Don (Nehlen) coached together at Bowling Green.

"A lot of those times games are scheduled that way, just by friendship."

Ball State will reportedly take away about $87,000 from its contest with the Mountaineers.

"We're working to improve our facilities and at the same time I think you need to play people of West Virginia's caliber for recruiting reasons," said Schudel. "We're not ready to play people like this week in and week out — we'd get killed.

"But we like to do it on an occasional basis to improve our program."

The Mountaineers had their last contact drill before Saturday's game on Wednesday. Gov. Gaston Caperton visited the squad during a break in practice and wished them luck during the upcoming season.

"I talked a little bit about the fact that you have to dream, you have to set goals and you have to work hard," Caperton said after the 10-minute meeting that was closed to reporters.

"I just feel it will be another great year and I look forward to being here as much as I can."

Miami

Dame sent a contingent headed by Athletic Director Richard Rosenhall to Miami for discussions about future scheduling. The two schools didn't reach agreement on extending the football contract, but they will meet in a series of basketball games beginning this year.

But, low and behold, the more things change the more they stay the same.

Before parting, Johnson told his players to beat Notre Dame. Erickson will apparently continue the tradition of Johnson, saying he will maintain the Miami style of play.

Whether that means just winning or winning ugly remains to be seen. Conflicting quotes have Erickson both deploring and tolerating the finger-pointing and taunting of previous Hurricane teams. I'll believe the latter until I have tangible evidence of the former. Erickson, a former quarterback at Montana State, says he will still utilize the passing game, which translates to scores like those of the Johnson era, 42-14 romps over teams like Youngstown State and Maine University. Maybe Erickson will go easy on the Idaho Spuds.

Miami's schedule also remains the same. The Hurricanes open against Wisconsin, California and Missouri, three teams with combined 1988 records of 9-22-2. Keep in mind, though, that the Bears beat Miami 9-7 in their last meeting back in 1964. After a game at Michigan State, they play Cincinnati and San Jose State. Three of their last four games are at the Orange Bowl. Give the Hurricanes credit in that they play Florida State on the road.

What it all boils down to is Miami is Miami, like apples are apples, oranges are oranges and bananas are bananas. People and coaches change, but teams don't.

So back to that question: Can we continue to hate Miami, the team who pounded the Irish 58-7 back in 1985 and came to represent everything we deplore in a university? Yes. Yes. A 100 times yes. But remember— that was 1000 times yes last year.

Lighten your load this semester by carrying an extra unit.

Even if you're up to your eyebrows in homework, you needn't carry the world on your shoulders.

Not with a Macintosh® computer on your desk.

Think of an assignment that weighs heavily on your mind right now—say, a term paper. With Macintosh, you can bring instant order to the jumble of notes, scribbles, quotes, and excerpts that'll go into your paper. You can quickly draft an outline, change the order of topics, and jot down related ideas at will.

Then you start to write. You don't like the way you phrased a paragraph? No problem—try something new, without erasing or retyping a word. Want to move the second page of your first draft to the tail end of your last draft? It only takes a few seconds.

With Macintosh, you can also have your paper proofread in a minute or two. And you can illustrate it with professional-looking drawings and graphs, even if you don't know a T-square from a T-bird.

And here's the clincher: You can learn to do all of these things—all of them—in less time than you might spend studying for a Monday morning quiz. Starting Sunday.

If you don't believe it, stop by the location listed below and see Macintosh for yourself. You'll wonder how you ever carried a semester without one.

Royals gain ground

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jim Eisenreich doubled twice and Mark Gubicza pitched a four-hitter over seven innings as the Kansas City Royals beat Detroit 6-1 Wednesday night to hand the Tigers their 11th loss in a row.

Gubicza had his streak of 17 scoreless innings snapped when Detroit scored in the first. He then stopped the Tigers through seven innings, striking out seven and walking two, before Terry Leach finished up.

The third-place Royals moved within three games of Oakland in the American League West. The Athletics lost 8-5 to New York.

Tigers starter Doyle Alexander, 5-16, lost his sixth in a row and is 2-16 with six no-decisions in his last 24 games.

The Tigers are on their longest losing streak since they lost 19 straight in 1975.

Eisenreich has hit in 13 of his last 15 games and 11 of his last 24 hits have gone for extra bases. George Brett had two hits for the Royals and has hit seven of his last eight games.

The Tigers scored in the top of the first, but Kansas City scored twice in the bottom of the inning on Brett’s RBI single and a bases-loaded walk by Alexander.

Brett tripled with two out in the fifth and scored on a double by Bo Jackson. Jackson scored on a double by Eisenreich.

Jackson reached on an infield hit in the seventh and scored when Danny Tartabull extended his hitting streak to eight games by doubling over the head of center fielder Gary Pettis. Bob Boone singled in pinch-runner Willie Wilson to make it 6-1.

Detroit got its run in the first when Lou Whitaker singled and scored on Fred Lynn’s double.

Coach Wayne Fontes dealt with the team's problems last week when he sent quarterback Eric Hipple into a tizzy. Fontes then swapped Hipple for backup James Jones to face the Seahawks. The trade comes one day after the Lions said they were placing Jones on the trading block.

Fontes hopes to see Taylor in action Saturday even though his new player won't know much about the defense. "We'll send him out there and tell him to cover that guy," Fontes said. The Lions believe Taylor has the speed and man-to-man coverage ability to allow the defense greater flexibility in blitzing.

"We just played against him the other night and didn't throw the ball in his area once," Fontes said, adding that Seattle could afford to give up Taylor because the Seahawks were deep and young at corner back. The trade comes one day after the Lions said they were taking Jones off the trading block.

In other training camp news Wednesday, the Lions sent starting right tackle Harvey Lang back to Detroit for treatment on his right shoulder. "There won't be any surgery, but they have to check for nerve damage," Fontes said.

"I'll do whatever I can with what I have been given. Which is zero," Hipple said.

Douglass was one of 13 players suspended by the NFL on Tuesday for steroid use. He will be placed on the Bears' reserve non-football illness list, but will not be paid.

On Thursday,梯boin refused to offer any guarantees that Douglass would remain a Bear after his suspension ends. "Certainly, there is a chance Douglass won't be here," said Tobin. "There's a chance he will be, also." The Bears have taken a tough stance on players who have violated the NFL's substance abuse policy. Last year, fullback Calvin Thomas was traded by the Bears after he was suspended after failing a drug test for the second time.

Douglass admitted he's concerned about his future with the Bears. But he said since Thomas was given several chances, "they should give me a second chance." "I have never tested positive before for any type of drugs," Douglass said. "And I have never done anything to make this team look bad or put a blemish on this team."

Bear's Douglass says he deserves 'a second chance'

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Defensive back Maurice Douglass said Wednesday he deserves "a second chance" with the Chicago Bears after the National Football League suspended him for 30 days for violation of its anabolic steroid guidelines.

Douglass was one of 13 players suspended by the NFL on Tuesday for steroid use. He will be placed on the Bears' reserve non-football illness list, but will not be paid.

"I'm going to try to fight this thing," Douglass said. "I want to be honest, I know deep down in my heart that if I had taken steroids and knew I had it in my system then I would have taken some kind of a masking agent to cover it up."

Douglass said he knew of other players who had taken steroids but escaped detection on drug tests by covering it up. Douglass, 25, a four-year pro from Kentucky, will not be able to return to the Bears until after the third regular season game on Sept. 24 against the Detroit Lions. Cornerback Lemuel Simpson will start in his place on the Bears' nickel defense in Saturday's exhibition game against the Los Angeles Raiders.

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Lions coach Wayne Fontes dealt fullback James Jones to Seattle on Wednesday and then sent quarterback Eric Hipple into a tizzy. Jones was swapped with Seahawks corner back Terry Taylor in a deal that was to be completed late Wednesday evening when Taylor passed his physical. Jones, a No. 1 pick in 1983, holds the Lions' single-season receiving record with 77 catches in 1984.

But he hasn't scored a touchdown in more than two years. Taylor, a No. 1 pick in 1984, has been a four-year starter in Seattle and had a career-high five interceptions last season. However, Taylor is also a two-time loser in the NFL's drug policy.

He was suspended for 30 days last year and missed the first two games of the season and will be banished from the league if he tests positive again. "Terry Taylor has gone through (drug) rehab," Fontes said. "He talked to him. He knows he has only one more chance."

Speaking of last chances, Hipple will get one more chance to impress the Lions' coaches in Detroit's preseason game against the Rams on Saturday. But Hipple isn't impressed with his opportunity.

"I didn't get any offensive reps the first week (of preseason), not many the second week when I played and I haven't gotten any since, Zero," said Hipple, who is getting the opportunity because Chuck Long won't play and will probably be placed on injured reserve after the 47-man roster is determined, sidelining him for six weeks.

Long is returning from offseason elbow surgery. Since Fontes is looking for two quarterbacks to fill three spots, Hipple feels he's at a great disadvantage. Rusty Hilger and Bob Czaglao have been working irregularly with the offense through the preseason.

"I do what I can," Hipple said. "I'll try to get ready and I'll do whatever I can with what I have been given. Which is zero."

But Hipple isn't impressed. "I'm going to try to fight this thing," Douglass said. "I want to be honest, I know deep down in my heart that if I had taken steroids and knew I had it in my system then I would have taken some kind of a masking agent to cover it up."

Cornerback Lemuel Simpson will start in his place on the Bears' nickel defense in Saturday's exhibition game against the Los Angeles Raiders.

On March 21, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said players using steroids would be handed the same punishment given players for illegal drug use — a four-game suspension. He also said players would be banned if traces of "masking agents" for steroids turned up in the tests.

"Certainly, there is a chance I'd be suspended," Douglass said. "I have never tested positive before for any type of drugs." Douglass said. "And I have never done anything to make this team look bad or put a blemish on this team."

Sutton leaves Purdue after bout with homesickness

Associated Press
LEXINGTON — Former University of Kentucky point guard Sean Sutton said Wednesday he had returned home and would sit out the coming season instead of following through with a commitment to attend Purdue University.

"I have decided to leave Purdue, return to Lexington Community College, and concentrate on my studies and basketball skills," Sutton said in a news release. "I will not play collegiate basketball again until next year.

Sutton's mother, Patsy, said in a telephone interview that Purdue but he did not want to attend because of "the emotional strain I've been under." Sutton said he alone had decided to leave the Indiana school but his family was supportive of his action. He said he respected Keady and his staff and thanked them for their interest.

"This year has been extremely emotional for me," Sutton said. "Only someone who has experienced something similar can relate to this. At times it has felt like a continuous nightmare."

He said when he decided to transfer from Kentucky to Purdue, he thought all the problems had been put behind him. But he had reconsidered the decision during the past few weeks before deciding to attend Purdue. Sutton said he had also been considering going to Arizona State and Michigan.

Vruggink said he speculated that homesickness might have caused Sutton to leave. Purdue was away from home for the first time and had a difficult time finding an apartment on or near the crowded campus, Vruggink said.

Sutton was living alone in an apartment complex that did not have many students, Vruggink said. "Everybody here was excited about Sean coming here," Vruggink said. "He was seen as the missing link. We definitely lacked a point guard last season. We needed someone to run the offense and handle the ball things Sean can do."

The Boilermakers last eight games by four points or less last season. The Purdue squad had a 15-16 record, the school's first losing season in 23 years.

"This will just make everything much more simple," Patsy Sutton said. "It was seen as the missing link. We definitely lacked a point guard last season. We needed someone to run the offense and handle the ball. Things Sean can do."

Under NCAA regulations, Sutton was allowed to transfer and play immediately without having to sit out a season, because the NCAA's ban on post-season play covered his final two years of eligibility.

Classes at Purdue began Aug. 21. Purdue Coach Gene Keady had told Sutton's family that he would not return, Vruggink said. Sutton had told coaches he didn't know if he was ready to play again "after everything he went through last year."

Rice downplays Heisman talk to prepare Irish for Kickoff Classic

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.— Notre Dame's top dog is scared of cats.

Quarterback Tony Rice, who led the Fighting Irish to the national championship last season, isn't afraid of anyone on the football field. It's felines that he fears.

"I hope Virginia doesn't bring a cat onto the field," Rice said of Notre Dame's opponent in Thursday night's Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium, the opener of the college football season.

"I hate cats. If they put one next to the ball, I'll probably run off the field."

Running to Rice's specialty, but he's also a potter. That's why the 6-foot-1, 200-pound senior is on almost every preseason list of Heisman Trophy contenders.

Notre Dame has produced just one winner of the award, Mark Gastineau of 1983. The Hurricanes' season opener with Virginia on Thursday night is just another step in their transition to a new era.

"Hope springs eternal with new players, new schedules and, in some cases, new coaches. And these changes are not limited to the likes of Wisconsin and Northwestern, trying to carve themselves out of the Big Ten cellar.

"If the personnel changes aren't enough, if the scare him is cats. Rice, who was the leading rusher for the Irish last year, is looking to lead Notre Dame to a second national championship this season. Story by Guffey.

Irish football fans may still be hating Miami in '89

Fall is the season of change across the United States. Leaves turn colors and fall, corn stalks shrink to nothing and baseball is back.

But most of all, fall signals new life for college football. Hope springs eternal with new players, new schedules and, in some cases, new coaches. And these changes are not limited to the likes of Wisconsin and Northwestern, trying to carve themselves out of the Big Ten cellar.

For the most noticeable example of this change, turn for a moment to south Florida to the team of the 1980s, the Miami Hurricanes.

Miami is a program in transition, a team with new players, a new coach and possibly a new style.

Since this year's Notre Dame-Miami game isn't until Thanksgiving, it might be too early to hate even the Hurricanes. But the real question may be: Should we even hate Miami at all?

Jimmy Johnson, the man who brought on a majority of the personnel changes, was not afraid of anyone in his heyday.

Steve Walsh, who would have been a natural pre-season Heisman Trophy choice, defected to the pros and found himself as a starting quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys.

In 1984, Walsh brought most of his coaches and most of his players with him to Dallas, and Erickson brought most of his coaches to Washington State.

Since Erickson coached at Idaho, Wyoming and Washington State, he knew how to deal with success and with talent.

No one was better at success and talent than Johnson, the man who brought on a majority of the personnel changes.

Erickson coached at Idaho, Wyoming and Washington State, compiling a career record of 50-31-1. It's hard to hate a guy who was 6-5 in 1984 at Idaho, losing to Nevada Reno and Montana State along the way. Johnson took most of his coaches to Dallas, and Erickson brought most of his coaches with him from Washington State.

"If Rice has another banner season, he'll be worth a lot to an NFL team."

"I'm not worried about that now," Rice said. "If I have my day, that's good for me. Right now, I just want to get through my senior year of college."

Finishing school and getting a degree is an important to Rice as winning another national championship. No afterthought for a summer school each year, Rice has remained on course to graduate with his class.

Steve Walsh, Rodney Peete and Major Harris got most of the pregame attention. After the games, Rice was the hot topic.

"He's not a good athlete playing quarterback. He's a good quarterback, period," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "He can run, he can pass and he can lead."

"Just how valuable is Rice?" Holtz said. "I don't think there are too many insurance companies who would sell me a policy that would cover his worth to Notre Dame."

The Houston Astros' Mike Scott captured his 18th victory of the season as the Astros handed the Chicago Cubs a 8-4 loss. Despite giving up home runs to Ryne Sandberg, Mark Grace and Dwight Smith. Scott held on the get the win.

Astros, Scott win 8-4 over Cubs

Associated Press

CHICAGO—Mike Scott had a hard time not thinking about Houston's great collapse.

Scott pitched a four-hitter for his 18th victory, tying the major league high, and added a run-scoring single as the Astros rebounded for an 8-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Wednesday night.

On Tuesday, the Astros blew a 9-0 lead and lost to the Cubs 10-9.

"I didn't feel safe until the last out," Scott said. "It was hard to forget yesterday."

Scott gave up home runs to Dwight Smith in the first inning, Ryne Sandberg in the fourth and a two-run shot to Mark Grace in the ninth. He finished with nine strikeouts and one walk for his eighth complete game.

"Balls were flying out here," Scott said. "This was a strange series, I'm glad its over."

Gerald Young had four hits, three RBIs and scored a run and Rafael Ramirez, who had seven RBIs on Tuesday, added three hits and scored twice.

Scott, 18-7, had failed in four previous attempts to match his career high 18 victories. Oakland's Dave Stewart and St. Louis' Joe Magrane also have 18 each.

"Some showed some offense against me, others not," Scott said. "Grace got it. But he was too tough for us. He didn't win 18 games for nothing."

Leadoff 2-1, the Astros got consecutive RBIs singles by Jose Trevino, Scott and Young in the fourth inning to take a 5-1 lead.

Sandberg hit Scott's first pitch in the fourth for his 26th home run to make it 5-2.

In the fifth, Young singled home two runs put Houston ahead 7-2.

"Yesterday was a living nightmare," said Young, a .372 lifetime hitter against the Cubs.

"Some guys hit better against certain clubs and I just hit better against the Cubs."

Glen Wilson's sacrifice fly scored Young to give the Astros a 1-0 lead off Rick Sutcliffe, 13-11, in the first inning. Smith added another, with his eighth home run, a towering drive to right in the bottom of the inning.

Houston went 1-3 in the third on Bill Doran's double and a single by Don Wilson.

Harry Spilman added an RBI double in the ninth to make it 8-2. Grace hit his 13th homer with a man on a base in the bottom of the inning.
