Bush asks $7.9 billion for drug war

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, calling drugs "the greatest threat to our nation," Tuesday night proposed a $7.9 billion war on narcotics emphasizing harsher penalties for users and more money for prisons, treatment programs and education.

Bush warned Latin American drug lords that "the rules have changed" and for the first time pledged U.S. military help to any government that requests it.

"Drugs are sapping our strength as a nation," the president said in his first nationally televised address from the Oval Office. He punctuated his address by displaying a plastic bag of crack cocaine seized across the street from the White House.

To attack cocaine at its source, Bush proposed a four-fold increase in the amount of military and law enforcement aid for Colombia and Peru, to $261.2 million in 1990. He called it the downpayment on a $2 billion, five-year program, the basis of progress in eradicating drugs.

To help offset the cost of his program, Bush proposed diverting $751 million from taxes or adding to the budget deficit, "We can pay for this fight," he said.

Although overall cocaine use is down, frequent users have almost doubled in recent years. "Roughly 6 million people have used cocaine in the last year," the president said. Almost 1 million of them used drug at least once a week.

Even before the speech, Bush's program was praised by the head of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, Charles D. Reynolds, who said in a statement that "the critical justice recommendations in this report are responsive to the concerns of police associations across the country.

However, Rep. Don Edwards, the Democratic chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's civil rights subcommittee, said the plan "proposes more of almost everything that hasn't worked — more arrests, more prisons, tougher sentences." He said a proposal to expand drug testing and step up arrests of users "poses serious threats to civil liberties.

Hurricane approaches E. Coast

MIAMI — Giant Hurricane Gabrielle, its tail winds swamping homes and businesses as far south as Barbados, strengthened Tuesday as it skirted the U.S. Caribbean islands and turned 135 mph winds toward the mainland East Coast.

Gabrielle, already the season's biggest hurricane, was expected to grow stronger still. Forecasters said it rivaled last year's record-setting Hurricane Gilbert at the same stage, but was on a path similar to 1985's powerful Hurricane Gloria, which did $900 million in damage as it raced up the East Coast and into New England.

Hurricane forecasters said Gabrielle appeared to be heading toward the British island of Bermuda in the Atlantic, but was still at least three days away and on an uncertain course that seemed to be moving from a northwesterly course to northward.

The biggest threat now is for Bermuda. Anybody on the East Coast should watch this storm," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables.

Sheets said Gabrielle was unlikely to come near South Florida. Gabrielle, already this season's biggest hurricane, was upgraded Tuesday evening to a Category 4 hurricane, with 5 the strongest.

Sheets compared Gabrielle's size to that of Gilbert of 1988, which became "the storm of the century" and devastated the island of Jamaica.

As of 6 p.m. EDT, Gabrielle was centered near 21.7 north latitude and 58.3 west longitude, about 500 miles east-northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico. It was moving northwest at 12 mph.

The governments of the Leeward Islands countries urged small craft to stay in port and issued heavy surf warnings as Gabrielle packed 74 mph winds as far as 100 mph away from its center.

In Barbados, the easternmost Caribbean island 550 miles southeast of Puerto Rico, Gabrielle's tail caused 10-foot waves and rough seas on the island's east coast Monday. Some beachfront homes and businesses in the capital of Bridgetown were flooded Tuesday.

No injuries or serious damages were reported.

Forecaster John Gray said the hurricane would have no effect on the Virgin Islands.

Gray called Gabrielle a major hurricane on the U.S. East Coast in Sept. 16-Oct. 1, 1985, started on a track similar to Gabrielle.

Suspicious man complains of injuries, asks for help

By KELLEY TUTHILL

A man wearing a navy blue running suit has stopped several women on campus complaining of false injuries and seeking their help.

According to Charles Hurley, assistant director of security, the man is described as a white male, approximately 23 years old, five feet, 10 inches, 165 pounds, dark brown or black short hair and usually wears a navy two-piece running suit.

The first incident occurred at 9:25 p.m. last Thursday evening. Two female students were walking from Dillon Hall to the Huddle. According to the women, a man came jogging up from behind them and stopped them to ask for their help.

Hurley said according to the women, the man said he was having trouble breathing and asked if one of the women would bend over so he could lean on her back and catch her breath. The women left the scene and fled to LaFayette Student Center where they called Security.

Security tried to locate the man, but were unable to find him, stated Hurley. The women said that they had had a similar experience with the same man last year that they never reported, he continued.

A man bearing the same description was seen Monday night in the C1 lot near the stadium, said Hurley. A Notre Dame female student was walking to her car when a jogger approached her.

According to the woman, the man said, "I know this is going to sound funny but I've been running and my stomach mus-
Police commanders and army generals who fight them often say Colombia's billionaire cocaine barons have the best weapons and equipment of any modern warlord; some say they can build a civil war. The two sides who are regarded as the most powerful in the fight against drug traffickers are the drug lords and the army. Both sides have been accused of using violence, and both sides claim they are fighting to protect their country.

Every year about this time the campus goes into a frenzy over football tickets. For four days each September it seems there's a battle for the last student to get good seats in the stadium. Seniors, the first to get student tickets, traditionally go to the greatest lengths to get the last seat in line before the window opens. They line up outside the JACC a day in advance and camp out to be the first in line when the ticket window opens. Seniors bring sleeping bags, blankets, games, and music, of course. On Monday night the scene outside Gate 10 was like an outdoor slumber party.

People camped out and talked, listened to music and some ordered pizza. That's just the thing for waiting all night in line. Before midnight, at least four Domino's trucks made deliveries outside the JACC. Imagine the confusion of a pizza deliveryman confronted by dozens of hungry college students.

Security kept an eye on the groups to ensure the overnight waiting was orderly. Notre Dame (and some Saint Mary's) students stay all night so they can see a few games in the stadium.

Are students at other schools as loyal to their football teams? Probably not. But other schools don't have a Notre Dame tradition. Seniors at ND know all about spirit and the feeling that goes with football games in the "House that Rock Built." They are more than witnesses to history; they are helping to make it. Every season there are ND students who wait all night to get tickets and then stand up during games in foul and foul weather?

Two years ago, the Fighting Irish played at Penn State when it was 20 below zero. Early in the second half, the stadium was about two-thirds full. Penn State's students had left the stadium.

Notre Dame, however, has a very loyal following. Even during the lean years when ND fans considered the Irish to be a 20-26-2 record, ND students scrambled to get tickets. Now that the Irish are back on top, good seats are in high demand.

Every season brings lots of speculation about the Notre Dame chances. A season Number Two ranking from the Associated Press is a little hard to swallow for fans of a team that has some of the best talent around.

Student ticket distribution: Getting there is half the fun

Notre Dame's romp over Virginia in the Kickoff Classic showed the team still has what it took to become national champions. Will Notre Dame repeat as national champions? Like Lou Holtz says, it takes desire to win.

The players in 1988 showed that they wanted to win, and they did. The students this year want the team to win again.

But waiting for tickets isn't all bad. It's a social event that one would call "collegiate." When will students be able to show up for football tickets again? It's kind of thing one ought do at least once.

Every student outside the JACC is anxious to get their tickets and eager to storm the doors. That's where the trouble of waiting in line enters the picture.

Nobody wants to move away from the head of the line, not even to let others open the doors. The crowd roars its disapproval when told to back up, or when someone tries to purchase tickets.

Tickets are usually distributed without incident, but why wait for an accident to happen? There seems to be a better way to accommodate students anxious for tickets.

Students could be a little more patient and form orderly lines. The ticket office could also take steps to cordon off the distribution area so that everyone has room to breathe, move, etc. The ticket managers, therein is a thankless job.

Students should cooperate during ticket distribution at the JACC so that everybody can get their tickets and live to enjoy the games across the street.

Students participate in community service

By MICHAEL SCHOLL

In the tradition of community service that has long been a hallmark at Notre Dame, nine University students spent eight weeks during this past summer participating in Summer Service Projects coordinated by Notre Dame's Center for Social Concerns (CSC).

The students were involved in a wide variety of projects all over the United States. The projects undertaken ranged from work in soup kitchens and homeless shelters to the summer's work in the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Alumni clubs served as hosts for service volunteers who came to work in their areas, providing logistical help to the students as well as room and board in some cases. The clubs also aided participants in the Summer Service Projects by contributing money to pay for the $1200 scholarship each student will receive for completing a service project.

AIDS mistake victim files suit against M.D.

INDIANAPOLIS — A woman who planned her funeral, was evicted from her trailer and lost her sisters and other family members, has filed a complaint against the hospital and doctors involved.

"It should never have happened and I don't think it ever ought to happen again," Gayla Gray said in a recent interview with The Indianapolis News. "I wouldn't wish this on someone I despised."

Gray, 33, of Noblesville, was hospitalized for peritonitis in 1987 and was tested for AIDS antibodies when she failed to respond to antibiotic treatment. The first test was positive, as was a second, more sophisticated test on the same blood sample.

Twelve months later, doctors discovered those tests were wrong when a routine test on Gray's blood came up negative for the HIV antibody. They re-tested the original blood sample that had been stored at Indiana University Hospital and it tested negative.

In the meantime, Gray's boyfriend broke up with her, her friends and neighbors shunned her and her teenage daughter was taunted by schoolmates. Gray, a nurse, had not been working during the period because of other health problems. Her complaint, which seeks an unspecified amount of damages, was pending before the medical malpractice division of the Indiana Insurance Commission. If the case is not settled by the panel, it will proceed to court. Neither party has yet requested a medical review panel be appointed to hear the case.

Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Two gunmen killed an army colonel's wife outside a supermarket Wednesday and Washington delivered five helicopters to help the government break the drug lords' violent grip on the country.

A police source said the government's 2 1/2-week-old crackdown on traffickers has virtually paralyzed the nation's cocaine-producing laboratories. A newspaper reported rising prices and a shortage of the coveted drug in the United States.

Meanwhile a man suspected of being one of the chief money launderers for Colombia's cocaine cartel faced a deadline Wednesday for appealing his extradition to the United States.

Police gave no motive for the slaying of Angela de Guerrero, 32. She was shot four times as she sat in her small sedan outside a supermarket in the northern suburbs by two gunmen who fled in a white car.

"Right now we're not concerned about motives," said a Defense Ministry spokesman, Col. Eduardo Arevalo. "We're concerned about catching the killers."

Police have blamed previous instances of random violence on drug traffickers retaliating for government crackdown.

The United States delivered five UH-1H "Huey" transport helicopters, modified versions of the combat choppers that gained prominence during the Vietnam war.

They arrived in a huge C-5 transport plane at Bogota's El Dorado airport, the last of the big-ticket items in President Bush's $65 million package to help the government fight its drug war.

In recent days, the United States has sent Colombia five C-130 transport planes and eight A-17 reconnaissance and attack jets. The aid also includes machine guns, bulletproof vests, grenades, boats and trucks.

Drug lords have waged a campaign of bombings, assassinations and threats, largely to intimidate the government into refraining from attacking drug traffickers who were working in the United States. Colombia's powerful cartels are believed to supply the United States with 60 percent of its cocaine.

The drug war began in earnest Aug. 18, when an assassination squad believed hired by drug carts killed leading presidential candidate Luis Carlos Galan.

Shortly after the helicopters arrived, an apparent bomb threat caused airport security agents to remove passengers and baggage from a jet of Colombia's Avianca Airlines bound for Miami. Soldiers cleared the airport and brought in bomb-sniffing dogs.

The National Police said Tuesday that since the crackdown began, cocaine production in Colombia has practically stopped and that prices should go up as a result.

"Cocaine-producing plants in the departments of Medellin, Vicabia and the eastern plains are inactive," said a police official, who insisted his name not be used.

So far this year, Colombian authorities say they have destroyed 252 cocaine labs, mostly in those three remote regions.

The Bogota newspaper El Tiempo, citing unidentified police sources, on Tuesday forecast a cocaine shortage in the United States "within 30 days at most."

USS Iowa reports 'very complex' investigation

WASHINGTON — The Navy's long-awaited report into the USS Iowa explosion that claimed 47 lives will point to the "probability" that human intervention may have touched off the explosion, but will not cite a specific reason for the blast.

Defense officials said Tuesday.

Top Navy officials plan to formally release their report Thursday at the Pentagon. It culminates a more than four-month investigation into the April 19 tragedy, when powder exploded in the battleship's No. 2 gun turret during open sea gunnery practice near Puerto Rico.

Defense Department officials, speaking privately, say the report is not expected to pinpoint a singular cause of the blast. Investigators were hampered by the fact that no witnesses survived the explosion, but that none appears to have been the overriding reason for the disaster.

The Naval Investigative Service launched a criminal investigation into the allegations of murder and sabotage, but failed to come up with any solid conclusions, and will instead provide a summary of the evidence compiled through interviews, statements and other research, the official said.

The official said he was told the report will show a number of "lapses in procedures," about such problems as the maintenance of the gun turret, or that some of the sailors had not been properly certified to operate the ship's complex firing mechanism.

But such problems were discounted as the primary causes of the explosion, both officials said.

At his daily briefing, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the report is 1,100 pages in length, and will be discussed by the Vice Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Leon Edney and the investigating officer, Rear Adm. Richard Milligan, at a formal Pentagon briefing.

"It will be a very thorough briefing," Williams said.

Meanwhile, Milligan, who has conducted the investigation, was chosen because he formerly commanded the battleship New Jersey and was familiar with the ship's powerful 16-inch guns.

He will be joined at the briefing by the head of the NIS, Rear Adm. William Schacht.

The long-awaited study has been the subject of much speculation, including numerous television and newspaper reports, over the past several months.

Officially, the Navy has withheld comment on the investigation, as reports contended investigators were looking into the possibility that suicide or murder was involved in the explosion.

In the latest twist, Seaman David Hartwig, 22, said in an interview carried by ABC-TV on Monday that Navy investigators browbeat him into implicating shipmate Clayton Hartwig in the explosion. Hartwig, a 25-year-old gunman's mate, died in the blast with the other sailors.

According to other reports earlier this summer, Smith told naval investigators that Hartwig had made sexual advances to him the night before the explosion and that on other occasions Hartwig had talked about how to set off explosions and showed him a lighter device.

In his ABC News interview, Smith said he did not receive a homosexual proposition from Hartwig and never heard of any timing device owned by Hartwig.

The Neanderthals:
A New Look at an Old Face

Anthropologists crawl around on their hands and knees, sifting through piles of rubble, slate, and bedrock looking for bits and pieces of ancient human bone. After collecting hundreds of bone fragments, some barely larger than small rocks or pebbles, these scientists make broad, sweeping assertions about how this, that, or the other part of human anatomy looked one, two, or three million years ago. Understandably, considering the amount of evidence that they have to work with, anthropologists occasionally make mistakes. In the case of Neanderthal man, they made a doozy. For, unlike the common representation, Neanderthal man was not a beetle-browed, hunch-backed, knuckle-dragging, muscle-bound savage at all. In fact, if recent findings prove correct, he more closely resembles a broad-foreheaded, long-anned, buff mental midget like those found in today's weight rooms. Granted, it's not a heck of an improvement but it's one that warrants further discussion and research.

At one time, before the theory of gravity existed, it was thought the earth (being flat as a pancake) was supported in mid-air on the shoulders of a giant, who in turn stood squarely on— you guessed it— the back of a tremendous tortoise.

The point being, human progress is based on scientists righting the intellectual wrongs of the past. In which case, today's anthropologists have their work cut out for them. For, as scientist Jim Avery recently stated in the Weekly National Star, "Our Soviet space program blasts off

Associated Press

BAIKONUR COSMODROME, U.S.S.R. — Two cosmonauts riding an advertising-embellished rocket blasted off early Wednesday in search of a Soviet space success following a series of failures and bitter public disputes over costs.

Interrupting its regular programming, official Radio Moscow reported: "A Soviet space craft sent a crew of two blasted off from the Baikonur Cosmodrome."

As the countdown progressed toward the launch time of 1:38 Moscow time Wednesday (5:38 p.m. EDT Tuesday), soldiers had gathered around hoopties under crystal-clear skies to watch the launch.

The blastoff was televised live on Cable News Network in the United States.

The white Soyuz TM-8 capsule, resting on a gray booster rocket, sat in the middle of the Central Asian desert, with no other structures or space vehi­cles nearby. Correspondents watched the countdown from a viewing stand about a mile away.

Mission commander Alexander Viktorenko and engineer Alexander Serebrov have a busy schedule of space construction and science laid out for them during their six-month mission aboard the new vacant orbital station Mir. But from the way their mission has been promoted, the public relations aspects are also important.

Soviet officials have stressed repeatedly that such space-flights can yield practical dividends sorely needed in a country now struggling with economic and environmental woes, and poured home the theme in the final hours before the cosmonauts' liftoff.

To help their country's space program pay more of its own way, the Soviets have even allowed commercial advertising on the flight.

One of three stages of the 120-foot booster rocket, painted orange, carried an ad for the Italian insurance company Generali. Others, for a Soviet electronics company and "New Dawn," perfumes, were displayed on a side of the launch pad and in a room where the cosmonauts met reporters Monday night.

The 20-ton Mir was designed to be permanently manned, and two cosmonauts ended a year on the space station in 1988. It was unexpectedly moth­balled in April, however, be­cause two add-on modules were not ready and the Kremlin did not want to keep a crew aboard while legislators and ordinary people were demanding more spending at home.

"If we had colossal sums, we could have had the two modules on time, but we have limited re­sources like everyone else," Lt. Gen. Vladimir Stashalov, head of cosmonaut training, told The Associated Press.

Deciding to leave the Mir unoccupied for only the second time since it was launched in February 1986 showed a new sensitivity to public opinion by the Soviet space bureaucracy, which generally has been more interested in matching or surpass­ing the U.S. space pro­gram.

Gorbachev's political reforms have given space officials something in common with the West's National Aeronautics and Space Administration: opposition from a skeptical public and from legislators trying to trim a budget deficit of $120 billion rubles ($192 billion at the offi­cial exchange rate.)

Space officials invited re­porters from all 15 Soviet re­publics and several Western correspondents to the huge Baikonur Cosmodrome, 1,560 miles southeast of Moscow in Kazakhstan, to watch the blastoff.

And who offset the new shuttle Buran and its powerful rocket? Only a few conferences and allowed re­porters to roam freely in the once restricted nearby city of Leninsk.

Pluto probe could ride with sun explorer, says NASA

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A rocket designed to send a probe to Pluto could also hurl an un­mailed spaceship to Pluto, a relatively cheap, quick way to visit the solar system's only un­explored planet, said a NASA engineer.

"It's a free ride," Robert Farquhar, who manages the small-missions program at NASAs headquarters in Washington, was quoted as saying in Tuesday's Los Angeles Times.

Voyager 2's flight past Neptune last week leaves Pluto, the only planet unvisited by an Earth spacecraft. There are no plans for a Pluto mission, and such a flight won't be finan­cially feasible for decades, NASA officials have said.

Farquhar, who masteredminded the flight of the first spacecraft to visit a comet, said he's come up with a way of launching a probe toward Pluto within about a dozen years and for less than $150 million. That's cheap compared with the twin­spacecraft Voyager mission that visited four planets for $865 million.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to send a probe through the sun's searing atmosphere right after the turn of the century.

To approach the sun at an angle that would allow scien­tists to monitor the probe throughout its flight, it first would have to be carried around Jupiter.

Farquhar said a lightweight Pluto probe could be carried on the same Titan rocket. Once they reach Jupiter, the two probes would part company for their respective targets. The Pluto probe, given a boost by Jupiter's gravity, would reach Pluto around 2014.

Pluto normally is the ninth and most distant planet from the sun, but Neptune now is temporarily in that position be­cause of Uranus' elongated ellip­tical orbit.

Farquhar's proposal is being taken very seriously by NASA headquarters, the Times said.

"I find it a very interesting possibility," said physicist Bruce Tsurtani of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, who is planning the solar probe. Tsurtani said Farquhar's proposal should re­ceive strong consideration.

Do we know why we come to get a university education? You may not be under the illusion that the purpose of our four years was to land a good-paying job after graduation.

It is not surprising, therefore, that we do in class should not stand apart from what is exciting and fulfilling to us. What we do in class should not be directed towards finding out what we want to do with our lives. The fact is that we spend little (if any) time ever finding out what we want? And how can we know what we want unless we take time to find out? What we are told to choose, while it may be very good for those that tell us to choose it, may in fact not be so good for us. But we are told so many times what we ought to want, that we end up believing that we ourselves actually want it.

Education is not the same as job training. An education is directed towards finding out what we want to do with our lives. The Greeks really realized that to "Know Thyself" is the indispensable requirement for a worthwhile life. To know oneself is in fact the essential pur- pose of an education. But in our society we are forgetting that, and in the process, we are losing a sense of our own selves.

If you don't think so, try telling people you want to spend four years of your life "finding yourself." They will laugh at you. Not only will you sound hopelessly naive and stupid, but worst of all, you will be considered wasteful and impractical. Most likely the kind of (and often patronizing) advice you will get is, "first make a job, and then you can spend your time finding out who you are.

But how can we choose how "to make a living" if we don't know what we want? And how can we know what we want unless we take time to find out? What we are told to choose, while it may be very good for those that tell us to choose it, may in fact not be so good for us. But we are told so many times what we ought to want, that we end up believing that we ourselves actually want it.

Education is not the same as job training. An education is directed towards finding out what we want to do with our lives.

The sad fact is that we spend little (if any) time ever questioning what we are given, because we are too busy trying to fit in, too busy keeping pace with a set of values we have never had a chance to choose.

In falling to distinguish between our education and our job training, we are becoming the victims of a system that robs us of our own identity.

To see our lives as school divided into two distinct and incompatible sides is a sign of the spiritual fragmentation that is rampant in our society. We are no longer in touch with who we are because we never give ourselves the time to find out who we are.

Throughout history, peoples have recognized deep within the human consciousness a directive, a sort of natural compass that shows us our way. Everybody has it. Some hear it as a voice that speaks to them. Socrates is said to have had one. All the prophets heard it...

LOS ANGELES — Among the myriad of returning actors and actresses, Mariel Hembrone, Paul Newman, Gregory Peck and Audrey Hepburn will reappear on the big screen this fall, adding starpower to that personal ongoing pizza war, and evolving the pizza crust as a star attraction.

Edwardo's spinach pizza with broccoli, the stuffed pepperoni with regular crust, and the stuffed pepperoni, its flavor being more appealing to the spice-lover. The pepperoni and sausage stuffed pizza has a little skimpy on the pepperoni, but was also excellent.

The stuffed pizzas are filling and rich so be careful not to eat too many of the unlimited garlic pizza dough crackers provided as appetizers. We found them very addicting.

Edwardo's only offers pizzas in two sizes — regular, serving two to three, and deluxe, serving three to four — so bring a heady appetite. We found that even the regular can be too much for two people.

Beyond the traditional and spinach stuffings, Edwardo's offers some intriguing choices: broccoli, the Special (sausage, mushrooms, onions, peppers, and onions), and pesto.

Although famous for their stuffed pizzas, thin crust pizzas can also be had with the same toppings as crustless version as the stuffed. A small, distinct selection of salads and pastas round out the menu with the fresh basil salad ($2.50) sounding the most intriguing. And if by some remote chance you are still hungry after all the pizza, dessert is waiting. We sampled the chocolate chip cheesecake ($2.50) which, although small in size, was so rich that two could barely finish it. Plain cheesecake and homemade cookies also comprise the desert list.

The service was prompt and courteous. We didn't have to ask for water, and our cracker basket was replenished as soon as it was devoured.

Every city has its own personal ongoing pizza war, and South Bend is no exception. In the stuffed pizza realm, the heat may well be very high.

Edwardo's spinach pizza with whole wheat crust, or perhaps the stuffed pepperoni with regular crust, or maybe the vegetarian special...

Noted by Chicagoans as serving some of the best stuffed pizzas, Edwardo's pizza, pizzas, pastas, and desserts can now be found in downtown South Bend.

Edwardo's delicious stuffed pizzas are more like cheese pies than traditional deep dish pizza. The thin layer of bottom crust is covered with an inch of cheese and your choice of sauce, and other paper-thin crust smothered with a liberal helping of Edwardo's delicious fresh tomato sauce.

We tried the fresh spinach stuffed pizza ($9.95 regular, $11.95 deluxe with whole wheat crust) and found it to be a fresh and healthy option. The spinach pizza, with its fresh spinach and fresh tomato sauce, is a little skimpy on the pepperoni, but was also excellent.

The stuffed pizzas are filling and rich so be careful not to eat too many of the unlimited garlic pizza dough crackers provided as appetizers. We found them very addicting.
Irish, Wolverines pull shootout atop AP Poll
ND gets 31 first-place votes

Notre Dame took over the No. 1 ranking with an impressive win in the Kickoff Classic, while winning losses dropped Southern California, Florida State and Louisiana State out of the Top 10 on the first day in The Associated Press' college football poll.

The Fighting Irish, who routed Arizona 36-13 last Thursday, replaced Michigan in the top spot in the first regular-season Top 25. Michigan opens at home against Notre Dame on Sept. 16.

The last time No. 1 met No. 2 was last Nov. 26, when top-ranked Notre Dame beat Southern Cal 27-21.

Notre Dame received 31 first-place votes and 1,430 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters. Michigan was second with 18 first-place votes and 1,419 points.

Informed of the media's vote, Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said: "I just hope they feel I've made a change."

Mizzou was ranked No. 3, followed by four other teams that have yet to play a game — Nebraska, Auburn, Oklahoma and Arizona. Miami received four first-place votes, while Nebraska was No. 1 in six ballots. No other teams received first-place votes.

Arizona, Colorado and Clemson found their way back to the top 10. Oklahoma, Colorado and Ole Miss dropped out of the Top 25.

Jumped from No. 14 to No. 9 after beating Texas 27-6 and Clemson rose from No. 12 to No. 10 following a 30-0 win over Furman, the defending Division I-AA champion.

Mets, Expos stay close with wins

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Mets aren’t dead yet. The Chicago Cubs couldn’t finish them off.

With their pennant hopes about to fade, the Mets beat the Cubs 3-2 Tuesday night behind Sid Fernandez’ six-hitter and Juan Samuel’s winning single in the ninth. New York once again closed to within 3 1/2 games of first-place Chicago in the National League East.

“We had to win,” said Tim Teufel, whose ninth-inning double started the Mets’ winning rally. “This was a true test of this club, winning like this.”

Teufel, batting for Fernandez, hit a drive that bounced off the center-field fence and off center fielder Jerome Walton for a double.

“I tried to catch it any way I could,” said Walton, whose bad throw led to New York’s first run. “It’s a hard catch.”

“It’s hard to lose a game like this,” Williams said. “We came back to tie the game, put it back in line for a sweep and I screwed it up. It’s demoralizing.”

Expos, 6 Cards 2

With one swing of the bat, Tim Wallach breathed new life into the Montreal Expos Tuesday night at the Polo Grounds. The Montreal outfielder hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning to snap the Giants’ three-game losing streak.

Wallach’s seventh-inning grand slam gave the Expos one run in a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night, giving the Expos a 5-2 victory in a game which started a 5-5 tie Tuesday night and the San Diego Padres beat the Atlanta Braves for their 12 victory in 13 games.

With National League West-leading San Francisco losing to Cincinnati, the third place Expos moved within six games of first place.

Roberto Alomar led off the 10th inning with a single against Joe Boever, 4-8, the Braves’ fifth pitcher. Alomar went to second on Tony Gwynn’s grounder, and, following an intentional walk to Jack Clark, scored on Flannery’s single to right.

Padres 7, Braves 5

Tim Flannery’s pinch RBI single in the 10th inning capped a 5-5 tie Tuesday night and the San Diego Padres beat the Atlanta Braves for their 12 victory in 13 games.

With National League West-leading San Francisco losing to Cincinnati, the third place Expos moved within six games of first place.

Roberto Alomar led off the 10th inning with a single against Joe Boever, 4-8, the Braves’ fifth pitcher. Alomar went to second on Tony Gwynn’s grounder, and, following an intentional walk to Jack Clark, scored on Flannery’s single to right.

Astros, 3 Dodgers, 2

Glenn Wilson singled with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning for the winning run as Houston came from behind to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday night in a game critical to the Astros’ chances in the National League West.

The victory, only the Astros’ fourth in 14 games, enabled Houston to remain a half-game behind San Diego for second place and put the Dodgers, holders of division-leading San Francisco, in a game behind Cincinnati. The Giants beat the Mets Tuesday.

Orioles, Indians 3

Baltimore’s Cal Ripken became the first shortstop in baseball history to hit 20 or more home runs in seven consecutive seasons and then doubled home the tie-breaking run in a two-run seventh.

Winner Bob Milacki, 10-12, scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings, including Cory Snyder’s fourth-inning homer. Gregg Olson picked up his rookie-record 24th save with 1 2-3 scoreless innings.

Twins, Rangers 4

Carmen Castillo’s second home run in his major league career was a two-run shot, triggered a tie-breaking four-run fifth inning and the Minnesota Twins went on to defeat the Texas Rangers 4-2 on Monday night.

Kevin Tapani scattered six hits over seven innings in his first major league start.

Tapani, 1-0, a 25-year-old right-hander who made three brief relief appearances for the New York Mets before they traded him in the Frank Viola deal, walked one and struck out seven in the Twins’ 10-4 win.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 1

Toronto’s Dave Stieb pitched a three-hitter over seven scoreless innings and beat Chicago for the 14th time in 22 decisions as the Blue Jays remained one game ahead of Baltimore in the American League East.

Tigers 10, Royals 2

The Tigers won their fifth straight game for the first time since 1983 as rookie pitcher Ritz pitched seven strong innings and Doug Strange’s two-run double keyed a six-run first.

Adds co-capitain Dave Augustyn, “We just need a lot of experience. Some of our players haven’t had the high­time collegiate experience like the guys did last year.”

The Irish will gain some of that valuable experience against Detroit. “We’ve got a young, quick team who has played together a lot,” says Behrje, “We’ll have to play our best game to beat them.”

Building the perfect beast, NFL style

Associated Press

The search for the complete football player would be so much easier if scouts could just build their own from individual parts of today's pro stars.

Here's how one might look.

Eyes: Eric Dickerson, the begoggled Indianapolis Colts running back, all-time NFL single-season rushing champion. "What makes Eric so great is that he has the ability to see the entire football field, and not just from tackle to tackle," Colts coach Ron Meyer said.

Feet: Rod Woodson, Pittsburgh Steelers cornerback-kick returner and world-class hurdler at Purdue University. If not the fastest man in the league — he finished second to Washington cornerback Darrell Green in the NFL's Fastest Man competition in 1988 — he has the quickest and most agile feet, running backward or forward. "With his quick feet," says Steelers defensive backs coach John Fox, "Rod Woodson has the greatest closing speed of any football player I've ever seen."

Left Leg: Morton Anderson, New Orleans Saints kicker who is 8 for 19 from 50 yards and over. While his 131 field goal attempts overall are most in the league for the past four seasons. He hit at least one field goal in 23 straight games from 1986-88 and hit 30 straight in 1985-86, both third-best in NFL history. His training regimen: 120 miles a week on a bicycle in the offseason, no running at all except for 300-yard sprints after camp opens in July.

Brain: Bernie Kosar, Cleveland Browns quarterback, graduated with honors from the University of Miami in just over three years with a 3.36 grade-point average and a double major of finance and economics. Browns coach Bud Carson is glad he's on Kosar's side now, instead of trying to devise a defense against him. "No matter what we tried to hide," Carson recalled of his days as defensive coordinator for the New York Jets, "he seemed to figure it out by the time the ball was snapped."

Game Face: Ronnie Lott, San Francisco 49ers safety. "There's no mistaking the look in his eyes when Ronnie is in a game, and when he gets that look, there is nobody that can control him," said Eric Wright, his longtime partner in the secondary. "It's a possessed look. It's just like a wild pit bull would be when he locks onto something and attacks."

Neck: Tom Newberry, Los Angeles Rams guard. 20 1/2 inches. For comparison, Mike Tyson's neck measured 19 3/4 inches when he first fought for the heavyweight boxing championship.

Shoulders: Bo Jackson, Los Angeles Raiders running back on the "reserve," did not report last week while finishing the baseball season for the Kansas City Royals. His 111 receptions are most in a first season for the New Orleans Saints shows the most perfect leg in the NFL. If he combined the features of Bernie’s "Brain" Kosar, Boomer Esiason, Ronnie’s "Game Face" Lott and others, Anderson could be the most feared man in the league.

Mandarich signs pact, ends 45-day holdout

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Tony Mandarich, who wanted to fight Mike Tyson, decided it might be safer on the football field and agreed to tentative contract terms with the Green Bay Packers on Tuesday.

Mandarich, the No. 2 pick overall in the NFL draft, arrived at the Packers' headquarters about 10 a.m., took a physical and then met with offensive line coach Charlie Davis.

Mandarich missed all of the Packers' training camp, spent the time in weight training and doing a little boxing. The boxing was just for fun.

We have agreed on the numbers but we have not agreed on the terminology and how the money will be "tolls," said Tom Braatz, the Packers vice president of football operations.

Braatz said Mandarich's agent, Vern Sarnaugh, was traveling to Green Bay to complete the contract, which is expected to be signed by Wednesday. The agreement would end Mandarich's 45-day holdout.

Irish soccer battles MCC foe Detroit

By KEN TYSIAC
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame Men's Soccer team travels to the University of Wisconsin, today in hopes of winning for the first time this season. If they beat their MCC rivals from the Motor City, they will secure their sixth collegiate win for Dennis Grace, who is 98-36-15 while coaching in the contrast season.

The outlook for today's 3:00 game is promising for the boys in blue and gold. The Irish beat the Titans twice last season, the second victory coming in a 6-0 shellacking in the MCC tournament. Junior forward Pete Tangialo, who set Detroit records for goals (9) and points (22) last season, will likely lead the Titans' quest for their first victory of the season. Detroit lost their first game of the season last Sunday against DePaul.

Goalie Don Koontz, who started 17 games last year, will attempt to quell the predecessors' tendencies to frustrate the Irish in the goal department. Notre Dame has yet to score a goal this season. "Detroit has seven scholarship shipmates and a lot of talent," says Grace. "It would make their season to beat Notre Dame, so they'll be ready for this one."

Irish co-captain Rolfe Behnke says today's game is crucial to the Irish as well. "It's important for us to beat Detroit in order to get a winning attitude going," he says.

"We're going to have to come together and win as a team," Behnke says. "We're not going to win by having one person skate around people. Instead we're going to have to

Waller jumps to European mania

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

What does a Notre Dame graduate who has turned off the Irish resident books as the all-time leader in service aces, total blocks, block solos and assists while leading the Notre Dame women's volleyball team to an NCAA bid and her highest NCAA ranking ever, over the world of professional sports.

The other is even more enticing: a chance to play volleyball league.

Former Irish volleyball standout Mary Kay Waller has joined the ranks of former Irish athletes in the world of professional sports.

Four teams were vying for Waller's skills, but when the French A League—the Division I of professional volleyball—called, Waller accepted the offer of a comfortable salary, a car, an apartment paid for and free meals. It didn't take long for the Lafayette graduate to make the jump to the European ranks.

With a yearly contract renewed on an annual basis, even the slight possibility of winning for the first time this season, the Irish are hoping for a successful year.

The learning experience of Virginia just might end up helping the underclassmen, if only for the extra practices they received to prepare for the Aug. 31 game.

"We weren't pleased with the way they played," said assistant head coach Barry Alvarez. "There was a lack of concentration and intensity." A lack of experience also. Since the Irish lost three defensive starters in August, a number of true freshmen have moved up second on the Notre Dame depth chart.

"A lot of them are very young," said Alvarez, last year's defensive coordinator. "Some of them had their first game last week."

Unfamiliar names like defensive end Karl McGill (from Clearwater, Fla.) and Shawn Smith (Minotola, N.J.) tackle Junior Bryant (Omaha, Neb.) and Eric Jones (Portage, Ind.) and Linebacker Nick Smith (Cincinnati) have been ranked as high as 4th on the Irish depth chart at one time or another. All of them are wearing a college uniform for the first time thisfall.

Nonetheless, the reserve defenders appear to have made strides in practices early this week.

"We have a really good practice Monday," said Alvarez, "I think they're improving. They're picking up things really well.

The learning experience of Virginia just might end up helping the underclassmen, if only for the extra practices they received to prepare for the Aug. 31 game.

"The length of two-a-days allowed them more experience to get to this level," said Alvarez. "If we'd started practice two weeks ago, they just wouldn't have been ready to go.

And the starters on defense seem willing to make sacrifices for the continued improvement from the underclassmen.

"I promise we're never going to take the practice like we did in the second half of the Kickoff Classic every again," said starting nose tackle Chris Zorich.

This year, it's the defense that has to dominate

Following an early-season win over Michigan State last week, Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz predicted that his team would need to average over 200 passing yards a game to become a national contender.

"We can't even think about being a complete football team until we prove we can throw the ball." Holtz predicted.

Although the Irish did not average anything close to those types of numbers through the air, an improved passing game was one key to the 1988 national championship.

After the 36-13 Kickoff Classic rout of Virginia, Holtz issued a similar warning to a different group of players.

"We're not going to become a good football team until we become dominant on defense," said the always even-tempered Holtz.

The thousands of fans who turned off their television sets at halftime last Thursday might want to argue. The Irish defense looks deep enough to withstand the impending dominance. A defense can't fare too much better than Notre Dame, which gave up just 6 points and 63 total yards on offense.

"Our first team played okay," said junior nose tackle Chris Zorich. "But we need help from our second-team guys."
