Men on bikes accost student near campus

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Senior Staff Reporter

An off-campus Notre Dame student was accosted Saturday by men on bikes while riding his stolen BMX-type small frame bicycles.

According to Phil Johnson, assistant director of security, the incident occurred at 6:00 p.m. on Notre Dame Avenue near the north end of Cedar Grove Cemetery. He said the woman was not injured.

The victim reported she was walking alone south on Notre Dame Avenue when the suspects approached her, verbally harrassed her and took her inappropriately, said Johnson.

The victim fled the scene and walked to her residence hall.

Johnson said the suspects were two males, approximately 17 years old, thin build, short hair, and wearing blue jeans.

Suspect one is described as a male, black, approximately 17 years old, thin build, described as short with short hair, and wearing blue jeans.

Suspect two is described as male, black, approximately 17 years old, thin build, short hair, and wearing blue jeans.

Johnson said that no arrests have been made at this time.

He added that anyone with information about this incident is asked to contact Phil Johnson, assistant director of security.

Hurricane Hugo nears Puerto Rico with 140 m.p.h. winds

Hurricane Hugo

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Hurricane Hugo pounded the U.S. Virgin Islands and headed on a collision course with Puerto Rico early Monday after ripping across the northeast Caribbean with 140 mph winds and leaving at least nine people dead.

About 80 people were injured on the French island of Guadeloupe and 4,000 were left homeless, French officials said.

The region’s most powerful storm in a decade was expected to plop into Puerto Rico early Monday.

The government mobilized the National Guard, and residents rushed for last-minute supplies and taped and boarded windows.

At 10:30 p.m. EDT, Hugo’s center was located near latitude 17.4 degrees north and longitude 64.7 west, about 130 miles east-southeast of San Juan, said the National Weather Service in Florida.

The storm slowed slightly from 12 mph to 9 mph, the Weather Service said. The Virgin Islands population is 106,000, and Puerto Rico has 3.3 million people.

Hurricane-force winds of nearly 100 mph ripped away roofs and knocked out power on St. Thomas and St. Croix, about 70 miles east of Puerto Rico, officials said.

Those two islands have most of the Virgin Islands’ population.

Officials said stores in the St. Croix town of Christiansted were heavily damaged and there were reports of looting.

National Guard Adjutant Gen. Robert Moorehead said 1,000 people were evacuated to rescue shelters in St. Croix.

Jesse Moore, a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said Hurricane Hugo was too early to tell if the storm “will even hit the United States (mainland). The closest we can forecast it is to be off the southeastern Bahamas by Wednesday. After that it’s anybody’s guess.”

The storm caused widespread damage early Sunday as it passed near Guadeloupe.

Damage also was reported on the islands of Martinique, Antigua and Dominica.

French state radio said five people were killed on that island.

In Paris, French officials said up to five people had been killed there. Neither report gave further details.

East Germans seizing passports

Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary — East German and Czechoslovak authorities have issued new passports to stop the flood of refugees fleeing to the West one week ago.

Hungary’s foreign minister, meanwhile, defended his country’s decision to aid the immi­grant exodus and said the Warsaw Pact should stick to military defense and not dictate foreign policy or its members.

In West Germany, officials said they registered 1,400 new East German refugees during the weekend, bringing to more than 16,000 the number of East Germans who have arrived since Hungary threw open its borders to the West one week ago.

East German officials have said they would not crack down on visas for citizens wishing to visit Hungary. But refugees and charity workers at camps in Hungary said travel documents were in fact being seized.

“More and more people are telling us that their visas are being taken from them,” said Wolfgang Wagner, head of the West German Maltese Aid Service. “Some have told me that state security had come to their apartments to take the visas.”

Others were forced off East German and Czechoslovak trains and returned home. Wagner said in an interview. A growing number were forced to swap the passport of a Danube “or find other illegal means of coming here,” he said.

Going through Czechoslovakia, between East Germany and Hungary, is the most direct route for East Germans seeking to take advantage of Hungary’s open western border.

A 27-year-old man from East Berlin said he and 15 others en­tered Hungary Saturday on foot after crossing into three cars and crashing through several Czechoslovak border bar­riers at the Rakja crossing, about 85 miles northwest of Budapest.

He said police in Bratislava took away their travel docu­ments, and at one point they were held at submachine-gun point until they pledged they would not head toward the Hungarian border.

Hungary’s role in the refugee affair has been condemned by the United Nations.

“We are a host country,” said Gyula Hornischer, chairman of the UNHCRHRC, as Hungary’s role in the refugee affair has been condemned by the United Nations.

“The plan calls for $16 million to be spent on the sale of the South Shore RR to the railroad to buy only the passenger service from the railroad to South Bend, East Chicago and Hammond at a cost of $17.4 million.”

A federal bankruptcy judge has cleared the way for the sale of the South Shore to Anastasia & Pacific Corp., a Chicago holding company, for $33.6 million. The railroad is currently owned by the Vehango Corp.

The Northern Indiana Commuter Transportation District — a public agency that channels federal money to the railroad — wants to buy only the pas­ sor service from the holding company for $16 million. The plan calls for NICTD to buy 14 new passenger cars and make improvements at stations in South Bend, East Chicago and Hammond at a cost of $17.4 million.

“A number of key issues would have to be resolved in order for UMTA to con­sider the grant,” said Cramer.
Campus crime wave poses perplexing problems

We were five civilian girls talking at lunch in the South Dining Hall. Nothing unusual about that.

What was unusual though, was the topic of conversation—exactly which is the best way to hold your keys to be ready to gouge out an attacker’s eyes or the correct way to disembowel someone with a knife.

“You have to hold one key in between your forehead and your thumb when making a fist, that way the key doesn’t slip when you go to blind the guy,” one of my roommates explained.

“And when you attempt to stab an assailant (assuming you happen to carry a knife) you should come up from below with the weapon, because if you come down from above he can stop your arm,” my other roommate enlightened us with her Chicago street smarts.

Another of my roommates from the South just flattened her eyelashes uncomprehendingly.

It’s hard to believe that at one of the most Catholic universities in the country assaults are a regular occurrence. And it’s even harder to believe that such innocents as the five of us have to discuss counter-attack plans over chicken patty.

To help us to defend ourselves, we decided that the administration should add some karate or jujitsu lessons to the mandatory meeting for freshman women, held every year during orientation.

Being from New York, when walking from LaFortune to Walsh late at night, I am even more suspicious than the average Jane. I constantly check over my shoulder and look for shadows behind the trees. Actually I’ve even been thinking of investing in a Swiss army knife...

SUCH innocents as the five of us have to discuss counter-attack policies over chicken patties.

Some other recommended lethal weapons, in addition to keys and knives, are the ever-handy umbrella or a roll of toilet paper. Of course, the knee is always a sure-fire approach.

It seems as though security is already pretty tough—detectors for girls’ dorms and signing in late at night on the weekends if you’re of the male persuasion. What else could we do?

Here are some suggestions to prevent attacks on campus:

• Avoid showering and deodorant
• Run everywhere (think of what great shape you’ll be in)
• Gain 200 pounds so no one would want to attack you
• Wear the karate outfit you were issued at the freshman women’s meeting
• Pick your nose when you spot a potential attacker

Seriously though, I hope this article has grabbed your attention, because better this than some strange man at 2 a.m. Take genuine precautions, because this really is no laughing matter.

Tens of thousands of Soviets ask for freedom for Ukrainian Church

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Tens of thousands of Ukrainian Catholics on Sunday joined in their church’s biggest service since World War II to demand that Mikhail Gorbachev’s government restore their legal status and end decades of repression.

The two-hour outdoor Mass in the Ukrainian city of Lvov came on the 50th anniversary of a pact between Stalin and Nazi German Dictator Adolf Hitler.

Those candles will turn off the electricity and put a candle in the window to commemorate the millions who died under Stalinist repression,” Ukrainian Catholic activist Ivan Gel told the worshippers in Lvov.

Candles of mourning also twinkled in some apartment windows of the city of 650,000 people.

The action was designed to mirror Aug. 23 demonstrations in which more than 1 million Estonians, Lithuanians and Latvians joined hands to protect the annexation of their lands.

The Baltics and the Western Ukraine both fell into the Soviet orbit as a result of a secret pact between Stalin and Nazi German Dictator Adolf Hitler.

Tonight let us all turn off the electricity and put a candle in the window to commemorate the millions who died under Stalinist repression,” Ukrainian Catholic activist Ivan Gel told the worshippers in Lvov.

Those candles will also symbolize the great hopes we have for one, our dear Ukraine,” declared Gel, head of the Committee in Defense of the Ukrainian Catholic Church.

The Ukrainians carried at least 300 blue-and-yellow flags of their once independent homeland, along with crosses, images of the Virgin Mary and candles, parading “freedom for our church.”

The outdoor service under an overcast sky was only the latest in a series of pro-Ukrainian demonstrations in cities throughout the Soviet Union.

In 1946, it was accused of widespread collaboration with the Nazis and forced to merge with the Lvov synod of the Roman Catholic Church.

Gel told the worshipers in Lvov.

The millions who died under Stalinist repression are being remembered at the Ukrainian church’s property center at New York University.

“Those who toppled Koch in the Democratic contest with surprising ease.

Whoever wins the general election, political analyst said, “is the party’s candidate” tied to a discredited Democratic regime.

Still, Giuliani, 45, faces formidable odds. Two-thirds of the city’s 3 million registered voters are Democrats. It took just 75,000 Republican votes for Giuliani to overwhelm his primary opponent, cosmetics heir Ronald Lauder; Dinkins, to defeat Koch and two other Democrats, got nearly 540,000 votes.

“Tonight is a Democratic town with a vengeance,” said Norman Adler, a veteran political consultant. “You’ve got to get a whole lot of Democrats to vote for you if you want to win.”

Dinkins, 62, has promptly seized that advantage, making party affirmation a prime issue.

$\text{Three more bombs explode in Colombia}

\textbf{Associated Press}

BOGOTA, Colombia — Three bombs exploded Sunday in the drug-infested city of Cali, killing a security guard, and a newspaper that has crusaded against Colombia's cocaine barons said one of its reporters was slain by thugs.

Meanwhile, a top presidential contender reportedly urged that no more drug traffickers be extradited to the United States.

The bombings in Cali occurred shortly after midnight at two banks and a shopping center, said Col. Roso Julio Navarro, chief of the national police force in Cali.

The city of 1 million people about 185 miles southwest of Bogota is the headquarters for one of Colombia's two cocaine cartels. The other is in the northwest city of Medellin.

Navarro told Colombian radio the bomb at the shopping center killed a guard. He said another bomb was found at a bank and deactivated.

Cali, Bogota, and Medellin have been sites of frequent shootings and bombings since Aug. 18, when the government went to war with the nation's powerful drug traffickers.

A total of 42 blasts have killed four people and injured 115.

The war began after the assassination of Luis Carlos Galan, a senator who was seeking the presidential nomination of the governing Liberal party and who was killed four people and injured 115.

The war began after the assassination of Luis Carlos Galan, a senator who was seeking the presidential nomination of the governing Liberal party and who was killed four people and injured 115.

Juan Diego Jaramillo, a top presidential contender, reportedly called for an end to the extradition of drug traffickers.

"I do not support giving up Colombians to be tried under someone else's roof," he was quoted as saying. Excerpts from the speech were published in a dozen Colombian newspapers Sunday.

So far, one person has been extradited to the United States, and authorities have said extradition proceedings are under way against two others.

As the violence continues, newspapers have begun calling for the government to negotiate with the drug traffickers.

Juan Diego Jaramillo, a columnist for the country's leading daily, El Tiempo, suggested Saturday the government should use extradition as a bargaining chip in negotiations and warned that the war could become "a little Vietnam."

In another Bogota daily, La Republica, columnist Francisco Morales Casas wrote, "We should not continue with this war and should turn to dialogue."

Perhaps the most important Colombian favoring negotiation with the drug traffickers is Juan Gomez Martinez, mayor of Medellin and one of the owners of Medellin's leading daily, El Colombiano. He favors negotiation.

El Espectador, however, has remained firmly opposed to such moves, despite the murder of its editor, Guillermo Cano, three years ago.

El Espectador's editor was slain by drug traffickers in 1986, and the newspaper was heavily damaged Sept. 2 in a car bomb attack.

Pizzah Hut declares war on MCPizza test

Associated Press

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — Pizza Hut Inc. has fired the first salvo in an advertising war over the test marketing of pizza by McDonald's restaurants.

The fastfood war turned into a pizza war on Sept. 1 when Pizza Hut advertisements were published in newspapers in Evansville and nearby Owensboro, Ky.

"If you're looking for great pizza, make no Mistake," the ad said.

"We always use dough that's made fresh daily. Not McPizzo," the ad also said.

Thirty-second commercials began airing on Evansville television stations Thursday night. Pizza Hut, the nation's largest pizza chain, launched its advertising campaign in response to the addition of pizza to menus at 24 McDonald's restaurants in southern Indiana and western Kentucky earlier this summer.

The pizza, which comes in four varieties and ranges in price from $5.84 to $9.49, is promised within 9 1/2 minutes of an order being placed. Although Pizza Hut owns about 22 percent of the $314 billion-a-year pizza market, it's not taking the McDonald's test lightly.

"The television commercial is very humorous. We're being, however, very serious to our approach to the McDonald's threat," said Roger Rydell, a spokesman for Pizza Hut in Chicago, Kan.

"We want to make it clear to them that we are very strong competitors and make sure people are aware of the quality difference between our two products," Rydell said Friday.

Pizza Hut officials have not determined how long the advertising campaign will last. Rydell said:

"It really depends on how long the test goes. Once we see there's really no need to continue it, we'll discontinue it.

"Rather than fighting back, McDonald's is "Delightful," that they noticed how good our test product is," said company spokesman Chuck Rubner.

"We want to thank them for giving our own ad campaign some extra topping," he added.

Junk bonds fuel 80s buyout boom

Associated Press

NEW YORK — If you took takeover mania out of the stock market, what would it cost investors?

That's the tough calculation many analysts are trying to make now, prompted by the latest tremors in the high yield "junk" bond market that has provided the fuel for the buyout boom of the 1980s.

The immediate issue the markets had to contend with last week was the problems of Toronto-based Campeau Corp., faced with the challenge of reduffing the coast-to-coast U.S. retailing empire it had built with debt-financed acquisitions.

Whatever the outcome of that particular case, analysts said, it set up a compressed demonstration of the broader psychological effects that might arise should big trouble develop in the takeover debt markets.

Through the late 1980s, the market for "junk" debt has proved much more resilient than most of its critics and skeptics ever expected.

It has yielded solid results and bankruptcy filings by some of the biggest names in the junk bond business — for example, LTV Corp.

It has ridden out a prolonged scandal at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the Wall Street firm that virtually invented the market for junk securities as takeover tools, and its boss Michael Milken's chief sponsor since.

Still, some observers said events in the markets on Wednesday and Thursday, when Campeau's situation became the subject of intense speculation, were a sort of unscheduled "fire drill."

Stock prices fell for a good company to buy, discussed as the next possible target for a junk bond takeover, and the reasoning that Campeau's experience might deter lenders and put off eager acquirers.

The share prices of leading banks that also play a major role in takeover financing:

Traders in all the markets looked warily at any sign of stepped-up repurchases by investors in mutual funds that specialize in junk bonds. Such repurchases could force investors to dump low-quality securities and put other junk-bond investors in a bind.

"Within a short time, or length-term perspective wondered at what point stocks would trade if junk bond investors and market participants were no longer so eager to appraise whatever the outcome of that trial, what would it cost to take over a company, what would it cost to take over an oil company, what would it cost to buy Nabisco, what would it cost to buy the Superior Tire Company?

"When Campeau's situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart, the Campeau situation apart...

"No one knows exactly how soon the next recession will strike, how deep it will inevitably be, or how many debt-laden corporations will seek to reduff their junk bonds," said James Stack, editor of the financial advisory newsletter Dow Jones's InvesTech.

"Few have an inkling of the likely effects from the quarterly fuel '80s.

"No one knew exactly how soon the next recession will strike, how deep it will inevitably be, or how many debt-laden corporations will seek to reduff their junk bonds," said James Stack, editor of the financial advisory newsletter Dow Jones's InvesTech.

"Business has been real good," Smith said. "It was crazy. We normally would deal with more than 300 people a day. We were dealing with over a thousand. We sold stuff we never dreamed of selling."

Still, Smith and other merchants said they profited from the boom that came from the massive gallons of North Slope crude oil spilling into Prince William Sound.

"Business is just great," Smith said. "We were dealing with over a thousand. We sold stuff we never dreamed of selling."

Valdez: Big spell, big oil, big bucks follow

Associated Press

VALDEZ, Alaska — Calm has returned to the dusty streets of this port for the first time since the wreck of the Exxon Valdez, but the tranquility belies the social friction caused by the big spill, Big Oil and big bucks.

"It's not sticking around," Smith said. "We'd like to expand, but we can't see to get anyone to work. Most of these guys made so much money on the deal.

Still, Smith and other merchants said they profited from the boom that came from the massive gallons of North Slope crude oil spilling into Prince William Sound.

"Business is just great," Smith said. "We were dealing with over a thousand. We sold stuff we never dreamed of selling."

Bill Lee, manager and co-owner of the bar's hours because of the oil spill, said the town was full of people a day.

"It's even better than the fishing," he said. "As long as the spill had to happen, it certainly helped the economic situation.

The town's economy is no longer being built with debt-financed acquisitions.

"The town's economy is shrinking number of workers. It's a lot of money, a lot of money, a lot of money."

and again at the close was prompted by the widening hourly wage gap in the construction boom for the trans-Alaska oil pipeline, which terminates at Port Valdez.

The town's economy is no longer being built with debt-financed acquisitions.

"The town's economy is shrinking number of workers. It's a lot of money, a lot of money, a lot of money."

heavy activity at the opening extended vacations to warmer locales.

that has sparked tensions among the town's 3,700 residents.

"We're not sticking around," Smith said. "We'd like to expand, but we can't see to get anyone to work. Most of these guys made so much money on the deal.

Still, Smith and other merchants said they profited from the boom that came from the massive gallons of North Slope crude oil spilling into Prince William Sound.

Students use pens to save lives across world

By George Lopez

I don’t think there was a dry eye in the place.

Even before he began to read from his prepared text, the audience of about one thousand faculty, students and townspeople, who had come out in opposition to the speaker at the meeting, the self-styled Uruguayan was his early audience. Lopez, who was raised in La Libertad prior to a month earlier.

Liber’s cheers and tears were prompted by the speaker’s comment as he first looked out into the crowd: “I can truly say that I am alive today because a little corner in a small American city stopped them from killing me. I am still a human being capable of life because you made me aware of my precious life...Your first package of letters made the guards think I was faculty advisor to the Bertrand University College. I was considered a member of the Tupamaro guerrilla group. Liber’s own work and writings had rejected violent options for Uruguay’s social and economic ills. But in a wave of generalized repression. January 1983 visit that Lib was being permitted to see a lawyer. After nearly six months of waiting in lunch lines and to petition for a review of those at Wisconsin and Earlwarden in an effort to improve and to entertain with words outside of a South African prisoner was sentenced to fifteen years in prison. The following sermon and, a has too often been considered criticism for a ruling military which made the fate of political prisoners, he was the subject of brutal torture.

Under these conditions he was “convicted” in “illegal association, invasion and assault upon the community.” He was “convicted” by a military tribunal, without being able to present a defense, which sentenced to fifteen years in prison. And it began on the case, and, by the seventies, groups like those at Wisconsin and Earlham were writing letters to government officials and prison wardens in an effort to improve his treatment in prison and to petition for a review of his case and his release. After many months of steadfast letter writing by freshmen waiting in lunch lines and sophomores on study breaks, we received word that Liber was being permitted to see a lawyer. After nearly six months of sending letters to Uruguay and Uruguayan officials which read that during a two month period in 1982 some 2,500 cards and letters demanding Fazzi’s release had come to the prison. It seems that the Good Samaritans posting as college students in the U.S. had made a difference. As rather average biology, literature or accounting majors, with no special political orientation beyond a belief in the dignity of all human beings, they were making a government and its prison system remember that they were watching. The student actions were neither extraordinary, nor time consuming—one meeting every few weeks and a promise to send letters to Uruguay with the same frequency that they would write home saying “send money”. For a number of years now the same pattern has occurred here at Saint Mary’s and Notre Dame. Amnesty International Group 43 has been working for the better treatment and release of a South African P.O.C., Muttile Henri Fazzi. Fazzi, now in his early sixties, was a carpenter and labor organizer whose non-violent protests of wage conditions led to his arrest in August, 1986. For periods of time in the eighties his wife has also been arrested for similar activities.

If you are interested in learning about Mr. Fazzi and helping his situation and that of other P.C.O.s think about joining Amnesty’s campus group.

George Lopez of the Government Department and Peace Institute, serves along with Joe Inavonda as faculty liaison of Amnesty International, Group 43.

Working mothers shouldn’t be made the fall-guys

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my discontent over a political cartoon. The Observer ran on Sept. 14. It stated “You’ve come a long way, baby—and so has your baby,” and depicted a working mother with her alcohol and drug-ridden child. The cartoonist implies that if mothers work, their children will become alcoholics and drug addicts, and if mothers stayed home, their kids would not get into trouble.

This view is insensitive and degrades the right of the working mother. What about family dynamics based on the cam­puses and we have worked for the better treatment and release of a South African P.O.C., Muttile Henri Fazzi. WHEN DARKNESS FELL

Fifty years later The Observer reflects on the hardships of World War II

America had entered the War. Student life took a drastic turn. The major change at the University was the arrival of the Navy. The ROTC programs had been here, but Notre Dame was selected for a Naval training base for naval aviation cadets. Over the course of the War, four dorms — Lyons, Monastery, Howard, and Badin — became home to 1000 midshipmen every six weeks. A Navy Drill Hall was built south of what is now Fieldhouse Mall, and due to the difficulty of serving all the Navy men plus the Notre Dame students, the dining hall had to be changed to a cafeteria.

Many new classes were added to the curriculum in keeping up with the international situation and ranged from plant safety to military courses to war economics. Enrollment in the College of Engineering skyrocketed, and lights blazed in Cushing Hall well into the night as students and professors put in extra time for the war.

Hugh O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame, instituted a trimester system so students could finish a four-year curriculum in two and two-thirds years instead, and because if students were called to the War it would be easier for them to return and finish their studies with less of a time lapse. So the only large break the students had was Christmas. Notre Dame had the distinction of becoming a key center for War Information along with the Universities of Purdue and Indiana. One of their purposes was to provide printed bulletins of the War situation as part of a national network. United States War Bonds and Stamps were sold at all the home football games.

A calm attitude was enforced throughout the War years, especially at the very beginning. An editorial in the Dec. 12, 1941 issue of the Scholastic said, "What, specifically, shall we do during this interim of relative inactivity? First of all, we must study. Then, too, we must remain at all times as calm as possible whenever a personal crisis arises."

An open letter from the President of Notre Dame in the same issue pledged the full support of Notre Dame to President Roosevelt, and said that there was "no reason why students should become unduly alarmed at this time... Go about your normal ways until such time as our country calls. This is what Notre Dame expects of you... This is the best way to serve our country."

Over the course of this week, we will try to give an idea of what Notre Dame was like during World War II. We will bring you interviews with some of the professors that were called to duty, and the impact that the Navy had on the campus, as well as a look at campus life.

The Notre Dame defense turned in a good performance against Michigan Saturday afternoon. The defense held the Wolverines to just 27 yards per carry and sacked Michigan quarterbacks three times.

"We knew we were going to give up some points," Dahl said. "But we also knew our defense was going to score some points. We just hoped Tony (Irish quarterback Rice) would score more."

Rice did score more, with help from Haghib Ismail's two touchdown returns. The defense held when it had to. The Michigan offensive line couldn't produce when it had to. Zorich compared the hype for the Michigan line to playing West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl. The Mountaineer offensive line came into the game touted as the best in the country, but Zorich and Company quickly silenced that claim.

"I'm really getting used to it," Zorich said of the underdog role. Don't be surprised, though, if the underdogs suddenly become the favorites.

Irish fullback Anthony Johnson dominated the game in the first half, rushing for 65 yards on 14 carries. He also caught Notre Dame's only pass completion of the day, a six-yard touchdown pass in the first half, set up by his 23-yard run to the Michigan nine-yard line.

"I knew we'd have to get some yards up the middle, and that we'd have to make them play honest," Johnson said. "And it's a big on the defensive line, really. All five guys up front, including the tight end. They controlled the line."

"They were great hitters," Johnson said of the Michigan defense. "We knew they did a good job. Their linebackers were great. The quarterback didn't have any time to run, and again Rodney Culver was a factor."

But Johnson back, giving the Irish a 38-yard gain. The Irish held Michigan to 17 completions for 211 yards. The Wolverines lost their opener to Notre Dame last season, but still bounced back to win the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl. Don't be surprised if that happens again.

"We have the potential to be a fantastic team and we probably still won't be a good team," Schenbechler said. "This game was important, but it isn't going to ruin our season."

Michigan is a better football team than Michigan. They may not be at the end of the year. But they are football, we've got to give them credit."

The Wolverine press guide does not list a coach for the special teams, unlike Schenbechler about this.

Saturday afternoon's contest at Michigan Stadium. Johnson scored one of Notre Dame's touchdowns on a six-yard pass from Tony Rice.

AN ORR — Freshman quarterback Elvis Grbac caused enough commotion just by having his name announced, but his performance on the field had the Irish all shook up. The Irish were 17-21, passing for 134 yards after stepping in for the injured Michael Taylor. He engineered two Michigan scoring drives, combining with Chris Calloway for one score and Greg McMurtry for another in a first game as a Wolverine.

"Grbac did a good job," Michigan coach Bo Schembechler said. "He handled himself well in a tough situation; however, it was not totally unexpected that he would play." The Wolverine quarterback came in and did a great job," Irish coach Lou Holtz said, more generous with the praise than Schenbechler. "He made some good throws, too. I think that kid has a great future." Tony Rice replaced a bruised back on a third-and-eight keeper early in the second half. Schenbechler said he couldn't have played in the second half but might have been able to play in the third round.

Cubs drop second straight to Bucs

PITTSBURGH — Doug Drabek defeated Chicago for the third time in four decisions. Pittsburgh has won seven of eight against the Cubs, St. Louis and New York. Chicago lost for the second time in eight games.

Drabek, 13-11, allowed eight hits, struck out seven and walked none. Mike Bielecki, 16-9, lost for the second time in 10 decisions since July 14, giving up two runs and seven hits in five innings.

Phillies 9-0, Cardinals 5-2

Philadelphia's Cris Carpenter allowed five hits in 7 1-3 innings and drove in a run as St. Louis won the second game. In the first game, John Kruk hit a two-out, grand slam in the 12th off Matt Kinzer, 0-2.

parts and perfunctorily put points on the scoreboard to down the Irish 15-3.

A bloodied but unbowed Irish squad hustled to stay in the game, driving back to within six at 13-7. But untimely service errors, which plagued Notre Dame all weekend, combined with missed hitting opportunities to add up to yet another Irish loss.

"I was pleased with the way everyone played at times," Lambert said. "We couldn't sustain our play over time, but we definitely played better than we did against Pittsburgh. "We have to be realistic about our expectations and be optimistic about our future. We have a lot of maturing to do as a team, but we played a team that could very easily be in the Final Four at the end of the season against an Irish team that could take that into consideration."

Lambert took comfort in his team's play against Pacific after witnessing a lethargic Irish squad lumber through its first six contests of the season.

"But the Irish persevered behind the strong serving of freshman outside hitter Alicia Turner, rallying to take the second game after racing out to a 6-0 lead. And despite battling its own errant serves and the Broncos' variegated offensive attack and defensive hustle, Notre Dame sustained its level of play and tied the match at two games apiece. The Broncos put on a clinic in the fifth match though, crushing the youthful Irish squad in the fifth and deciding game, after bruising the Irish early by grabbing a 6-0 lead.

Junior setter Amy White turned in an impressive performance against the Broncos tallying 41 assists. six kills, nine blocks and a game-high seven total blocks — an unusual feat for a setter.

But barring sporadic moments of glory, the Irish could not summon the team unity needed to capture a victory against any of its opponents.

"We've improved as a team," Lambert said. "But when you look at the people that made some costly errors, you'd notice that they're our younger players.

"Those errors will disappear in time, but they hurt when they decide the outcome of a match."

Irish running back Rod Culver picks up yardage during Notre Dame’s 24-19 victory over Michigan Saturday afternoon.

Irish defensive line proves bigger isn’t always better

By GREG GUFFEY
Assistant Sports Editor

ANN ARBOR - Michigan’s big and brawny offensive line came into its own against Notre Dame Saturday as one of the most heralded units in the country, the force that boosted the powerful Wolverine running attack.

Few disagreed with that assumption until Saturday. After all, the average weight of a Wolverine lineman was over 290 pounds. These players didn’t miss many holes, let alone blocks.

But it was the Irish defense that was hungrier before 105,000 drenched fans in Michigan Stadium. The defense turned in a stellar performance in Notre Dame’s 24-19 victory that kept the Irish aimed toward a second consecutive national championship.

The Wolverines relied on width, and the Irish on quickness. On this day, bigger wasn’t necessarily better. Michigan made the headlines, but Notre Dame made the tackles.

The Irish held the Wolverines to 94 rushing yards on 34 carries. That 2.7 average per carry was almost half of the 4.8 yards that Michigan runners gained in 1988. The Wolverines averaged 252.6 rushing yards per game last season.

“Our offensive line didn’t do a good job,” Michigan coach Bo Schembechler said. “Give Notre Dame credit. They had a quick-reacting defense. I was very much impressed with their quickness. Junior Irish mon guard Chris Zorich-whom Irish defensive coordinator Barry Alvarez says will someday be the standard all now guards are measured by—again anchored the line by recording five total tackles.

Before home games, Zorich likes to show a meal with the squirls on campus. On Saturday, Zorich ate with the Wolverines. Only this time, he didn’t share; he just feasted.

If his appetite wasn’t big enough already, Michigan made Zorich feel like he was about to end a fast.

“Greg Skrepenak (Michigan offensive tackle) was talking about how they were going to beat Notre Dame,” Zorich said.

“When we got in the bus, the coaches gave us an article where he was talking about how they were going to blow us off the field. Things like that we’re used to.

They also fired up the rest of the line.

Said defensive tackle Bob Dahl, “We were presented with a challenge. Our coaching staff did a great job with the type of schemes we ran.”

Michigan put the starting spot at left tackle when George Williams was declared academically ineligible, turned in the line.

The road to victory may prove to be a long and winding one for the Notre Dame football team.

The Irish dropped all three of their matches in the Notre Dame Invitational they hosted this weekend to plummet to 1-6 on the season.

Notre Dame fell to eighth-ranked Pacific Saturday night in three games, 7-15, 5-15, 7-15, after losing to Pittsburgh earlier Saturday in three games as well, 7-15, 5-15, 11-15.

The pain of those losses was only worsened by the squad’s hard-fought five-game defeat at the hands of Western Michigan Friday night, 8-15, 5-15, 11-15, 2-15, 5-15.

The Irish’s passing, the foundation for mounting any offensive attack, was suspect throughout the tournament, and recurrent service errors and mental lapses proved to be the team’s undoing.

The squad’s lurcher-performance throughout the tournament prompted officials and coaches to completely ignore the Irish in their final all-tournament awards. Even Notre Dame Coach Act Lambert is hoping that his rather green team will get the kinks out of its game soon.

“Our passing hurt us this weekend,” Lambert said of his team’s performance. “But the girls were tight, they were nervous, and that’s just youthful inexperience.”

“We have a week to practice before heading south to Louisiana State next weekend, and I think that this team’s going to start putting some matches in the win column once they mature a little.”

The Irish took on a highly-touted Pacific squad in the last game of the tournament Saturday night and were literally bombarded by the Tigers’ diverse hitting attack.

The Tigers, who captured the team title by beating each team it faced in the tournament, wasted no time with the Irish, grabbing a quick 13-1 lead in the first game of the match.

Despite a strong performance from freshman middle hitter Jessica Fiebelkorn, Pacifice was able to utilize Notre Dame’s stuttering start to take a one- game lead.

The Irish exchanged sides out and longs to keep the ball away from the Irish’s late stages of game two. But the seasoned Tigers took advantage of their younger counterpart.
