Two Notre Dame seniors given engineering award

Special to The Observer

Paul Dankojski, an engineering senior from Midland, Mich., and John Statter, an engineering senior from Rochester, N.Y., have been awarded the William J. Everitt Student Award of Excellence by the Notre Dame Engineering Consortium.

The award is offered annually to students majoring in electrical engineering, computer engineering, or computer science and ranking in the top 10 percent of their class. In addition to excellence, the students must have an active interest in telecommunications and computers and be involved in various activities and professional organizations.

The National Engineering Consortium is a nonprofit organization which sponsors the National, Eastern, and Western Communications Forums. The Everitt award winners from all engineering schools will be honored in October at the National Communications Forum in Chicago. They will receive recognition for their outstanding scholastic achievement at an NCF banquet attended by professionals in the telecommunications industry.

Bush urges educational reforms

Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.—President Bush urged governors at an education summit Wednesday to forge fundamental changes to rescue the nation's troubled schools, but was told in return the federal government's commitment has to grow.

"If they would give us a 5-year-old that is healthy and alert, the system would be much more productive," said Republican Gov. Garrey Carruthers of New Mexico.

The summit was the first of its kind to be attended by all 50 governors. The others came from states that failed to meet federal educational standards.

The summit scene was the historic campus of the University of Virginia, whose establish­ment was the first by Thomas Jefferson — America's first "education president." The university is still called "Mr. Jef­ferson's school" and Bush referred to it that way.

Bush dined with the governor at Jefferson's famous home, Monticello, atop a nearby mountain. A file and drum corps played and soldiers in colonial costume bearing the flags of the states lined the walkway to the main entrance, where Bush and his wife, Bar­bara, stood in a receiving line that passed the diners through the building into the back yard.

An Army band played swing tunes for the guests at rose- and orchid-bedecked tables beneath a large tent.

Governors outlined their own goals. Their plan called for eliminating illiteracy, curtailing the dropout rate and making American students the equal of their counterparts anywhere in the world.

To a packed crowd, panelists from the newly formed Committee on Notre Dame's Position on the Ordination of Women discussed the exclusion of women from public positions within the Church and the need for the University to make a stand on this issue, Wednesday.

The three panelists in the dis­cussion were Teresa Godwin Phelps, associate professor of law, Father Thomas O'Mears, Warren professor of theology, and Sister Regina Coli, director of field education in the depart­ment of theology.

"Notre Dame has to, as an institution, recognize that we have a justice issue here," said Phelps. "We've got to say that there is injustice against our women... a discriminatory practice," said Professor John Hoke, co-chair of the committee.

In a letter to University officials, the committee stated its objectives as threefold: 1) to express the committee's solid­arity with the women of the university who are being dis­criminated against with regard to this issue, 2) to provide public forums to explore what Notre Dame and other Catholic insti­tutions can do about the ban, and 3) to work through cam­puses and administrative organi­zations to express the University's position on the discrimi­natory policies of the Catholic Church on the ordination of women.

ND receives $2 million in gifts in fiscal '89

Special to The Observer

The University of Notre Dame has become the fourth university in history to receive more than $2 million in corporate and foundation matching gifts during a single fiscal year. This record was made possible by a $207,443 matching gift from the IBM Corporation, which offers its employees a 5-to-1 matching gift opportunity. IBM's matching gift is the largest the University has ever received.

Notre Dame received a total of $2,034,093 in matching gifts during the 1989 fiscal year, which ended June 30. This exceeded both last year's $1.46 million total and the University's previous record total of $1,578,185, reached in 1987.

Before 1989, only three other universities—Harvard, Princeton, and Yale—had reached the $2 million matching gift mark.

"There's not enough publicity of the Pre-Law Society, one of the sponsors of the event," said Barry Schulock, president of Notre Dame's Pre-Law Society.

The Caravan was attended by many of the 250 members of the Pre-Law Society, in addition to students from the South Bend area. Advertisements in the South Bend Tribune were purchased by the Pre-Law Society.

Representatives of 42 law schools discussed their schools with Notre Dame students and distributed applications and other information Wednesday at the seventh annual Law School Caravan in the Monogram Room of the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

"This was an opportunity for any Notre Dame student interested in law school to come and meet representatives from schools across the country," said Barry Schulock, president of the Pre-Law Society, one of the sponsors of the event.

"The purpose of this gathering is to make prospective law students aware of the many different schools and what they offer," said Schulock.

Police quell Quayle protests in Manila

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines—Police hurled tear gas Wednesday to disperse 2,000 leftist demonstrators against Vice President Dan Quayle and American military bases here, while President Corazon Aquino accepted a U.S. offer to discuss the bases’ future.

Quayle called the ambush shootings of two American civilians on Tuesday “cowardly murder” and said a majority of Filipinos want the bases to remain.

“Let me be direct: terrorists will not drive Americans from the Philippines,” he told U.S. troops and dependents at Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay naval base, the largest of the six American installations here.

Police fired tear gas after demonstrators refused to end an anti-base rally near the presidential palace. Riot police also drove back hundreds of others who tried to march to the main gate at Clark during Quayle’s appearance.

Police arrested 157 people for joining anti-Quayle rallies in the capital.

Opposition to the bases is increasing among Filipinos, who see the facilities as an infringement on national sovereignty.

Quayle met for about an hour with Aquino early Wednesday and gave her a letter from President Bush suggesting talks begin in December on allowing the bases to remain after their lease expires in September 1991.

Not only are women inadequately represented by not allowing them to enter public office, but men and women alike are inadequately represented because of the Church’s discrimination against women, said Phelps. There are approximately 19,000 Catholic priests in this country, and roughly 1100 of those are today without priests, said Coll.

“If the Church must commit injustice... it must have convincing reasons,” Phelps said. “The supply of priests is running low,” and many Catholics will not have priests in the coming decades, said Phelps.

From the theological perspective, O’Meara said, “The Catholic approach is one of realism and one of reason.” O’Meara explained the concept of the Kingdom of God, in relation to the Church’s attitude toward the position of women.

The Church must come to grips with new issues, said O’Meara. “When half of the human race is excluded from the public role, the Church reverts back to tribal religion... We are reestablishing elite groups (of men)!” he said.

“We can’t expect to find today’s answers in scriptures written 2,000 years ago,” said Coll. Scripture doesn’t explicitly exclude women from public positions, and “Christ’s intention wouldn’t be transgressed if women were ordained,” said Coll.

“Such a justice issue... if they (women) don’t have this option, why are they being educated,” said Ann Beckinger, another committee member.

“The University has got to make a statement that this discrimination is wrong,” said Houck. Notre Dame should band together with other Catholic institutions and take the case to the American Catholic Bishops, he said.

there are five major regional gatherings of law schools in key cities around the country, there is an advantage to this smaller convention. ‘Seniors can pick up information and applications from a school that he or she thinks is best suited to his needs,” said Schulock.

The Caravan, also sponsored by the Office of Career Placement and the College of Arts and Letters, drew members of the law school’s admissions offices and graduate students as representatives.

“In the early 1980s, applications to law schools were declining at a rapid pace. We then saw the need for these gatherings... where we can get information out to the students,” said a representative, who asked to remain anonymous.

“We are looking for competitive students, students who rank in the ninetieth percentile and above in the whole nation, and Notre Dame is a good place to get our message across,” said Edward Hendrickson, dean of admissions at the Seton Hall University School of Law.

Pandora’s fights illiteracy in youth

Pandora’s Books, a bookseller in South Bend, joined with other booksellers and publishers across the country this week to begin the Year of the Young Reader campaign.

The campaign is designed to fight illiteracy in youth by encouraging children to pick up books and read.

Pandora’s Books will be giving away books for 1 cent to all local school children through grade 12. Any interested reader may select a book of their choice for a penny, and the local school children through grade 12. "It seems fitting to us that the Young Reader campaign. This week to begin the Year of National Banned Book Week we should announce our choice for a penny, and the choice," said Mandy Arnold, manager of the neighborhood bookstore.

National Banned Book Week (September 23-30) is sponsored by the American Booksellers Association to alert the reading public that censorship still exists.

Many books are banned by school districts, libraries, parent associations, and towns. Most of these books are well known. John Steinbeck’s “Of Mice and Men” (profanity) and Stephen King’s “Shining” (ridicule of Christianity) are among those banned in certain areas of the country.

Arnold believes that while those who ban books act with the best of motives, they are, in fact, doing more harm than good. According to Arnold and other booksellers, the banning of books in this country is contrary to the First Amendment.

“Our recent experience with the ‘Satanic Verses’ has caused us to become much more active in defending our right to read what we chose,” Arnold added, referring to the bombings of four bookstores in England last week as paperback versions of the controversial Muslim novel were released.

The goal of the program, according to Arnold, is to turn the negative implications of censorship into a source of curiosity in the minds of the young people in the community.

Sony gobbles up Columbia

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sony Corp. struck a $3.4 billion deal Wednesday to buy Columbia Pictures Entertainment Inc., producer of such movies as "Ghostbusters" and TV hits like "Who's The Boss?"

The deal comes 21 months after the huge Japanese video and audio equipment maker bought CBS Records for $2 billion. It marks the biggest step of Sony's push into the software side of the entertainment business that will provide products such as movies and records to complement its stereos, televisions and videocassette recorders.

The agreement also extends Sony's $27 a share offer should provide a big payday for Coca-Cola Co., which stands to collect $1.45 billion in gross proceeds from selling its 49 percent stake in Columbia. Coca-Cola signed an option agreement with Sony offering to tender its nearly 54 million shares of Columbia stock, subject to approval by Coca-Cola's board, which is expected to meet Monday.

Coca-Cola declined comment on what it intends to do with the cash.

In trading Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange, Columbia rose 37 1/2 cents a share to $32.62 1/2 while Coca-Cola gained 50 cents a share to $64.62 1/2.

Sony reportedly had been looking for a movie studio for more than a year in an effort to extend its reach into new areas of the entertainment business that it already serves as a dominant maker of consumer electronics.

Michael Schulhof, vice chairman of Sony Corp. of America, said he had held informal discussions with Columbia executives for about a year but that the talks turned serious only in the past week. He said Sony decided on a proposal over the weekend and presented it on Monday.

Columbia Chairman Donald Koonough, who also is president of Coca-Cola, said Sony was "an ideal buyer."

Chicken war calls for new tactics

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — While the colonel's troops are leading in the fried chicken war, newly merged Church's and Popeyes are banking on marketing and franchising tactics to gain ground in the $9 billion industry.

Church's Fried Chicken Inc. and Popeyes Famous Fried Chicken and Biscuits — second and third before the merger among chicken chains behind Kentucky Fried Chicken — will keep their names.

But Church's old business plan — small restaurants catering to inner city clientele — is undergoing a change as flashier decor, new menu items and some price increases are in store for customers accustomed to small orange and green buildings offering basic, inexpensive chicken.

The merger was completed Sept. 20 with a shareholders meeting in Metairie, La., ending a process begun last year when Al Copeland, owner of New Orleans-based Popeyes, launched an unsolicited tender offer for San Antonio-based Church's.

Under a February agreement, Copeland bought 86 percent of Church's stock for $331 million, with fees and other expenses estimated at $150 million. Church's and Popeyes will operate under Al Copeland Enterprises with offices in New Orleans and San Antonio.

In an attempt to wipe away some of Church's red ink, the company plans to emphasize franchised stores rather than company-owned stores within the Church's division.

Malloy stresses bond with area business

By LIZ PANZICA

John Keane, dean of the School of Business Administration, addressed over 400 at the University's annual luncheon for Michiana business leaders, Wednesday.

Keane outlined Notre Dame's business programs and stressed its commitment to ethics, international business development, and community relations.

Notre Dame's president, Father Edward Malloy, introduced Keane to the gathering. Malloy pointed out the importance of good university-community relations. He said, "We have been trying to pay as close attention as we can to the community. We want to be good neighbors."

In Keane's address, he said, "Faculty fellowships are this dean's number one goal. He stressed to the attending business leaders that this helps the business school. That research helps the professor upgrade and up-date our business development, so that you can use that development." Keane added, Notre Dame "needs to get better professors, and once we get them, to keep them."

Keane added that the business school was interested in the international business prospective. "Who among you could do your job in a vacuum. Education can not be that kind if Notre Dame does its job," he added. "If we don't give a source of culture with business, what are we doing to our students? Even if you have a five-mile radius to your business, international events will effect the long range prospective," Keane said.

Keane said ethics in business has always been important at Notre Dame.

"This university thought about it so long ago and others are only now realiz­ing how important ethics are," Keane said.

Keane stressed the bond between Notre Dame and the Michiana business community. He told those in attendance their presence was "tangible evidence that you are interested in cooperation."

He said, "They call us the rust belt but the only thing rusty is the metaphor. Other cities would like to have South Bend's health now."

Political debate forum needed at Notre Dame

By Terence Coyne

Imagine Father Malloy giving a speech to incoming freshmen when suddenly a group of students unsympathetic to Notre Dame's view on South Africa interrupt the meeting with a barrage of insults against the administration. Sound unbelievable? On Notre Dame's campus, yes, but an incident similar to this actually happened at the University of Michigan. Why is it that Notre Dame seems so politically passive?

Some may quickly retort that we have an abundance of organizations dealing with a wide spectrum of issues from the Northern Ireland Awareness group to Amnesty International. But many of these groups depend on the force of a few sincerely interested members, and other groups are organized but produce no political waves on our campus. This is not to disparage these groups—I believe they are effective for their members—but only a few organizations have any school wide effect. The one which comes to mind is the Apartheid Awareness Group which last year met every Friday on the Administration buildings steps to protest the University's stance toward South Africa.

Scene like this are not uncommon on many other campuses, but other campuses are not like Notre Dame. We are a very homogeneous group, and it could be that this homogeneity which causes people not to protest. It seems that a large majority of the people agree with one another on major political issues. Hence, there is no need to have open disagreements or protests. Also, so many students are involved with sports that it becomes almost a diversion of our attention from extracurricular intellectual pursuits to athletic pursuits.

I do not think it is bad for students to be involved in athletics, but I do think it is bad if they are done to the exclusion of other activities. So, you say, what do I suggest to correct this perceived imbalance? First, I do not think that it is practical or necessary for more students to become suddenly politically radical and protest things just for the sake of protesting. Of course, I do encourage people to protest if they hold a certain belief strongly enough that they think change can be affected through this method.

What I suggest is really an old idea I am stealing from universities such as Oxford, Harvard, and Princeton. I am not stealing it because it came from these schools but because it is a genuinely good idea. My suggestion is to create a forum where students can meet and debate topical political concerns, such as the drug problem or answers to poverty. The forum would be a debate society that would meet either daily like at the other universities, or weekly, in some type of audito­rium or meeting place such as Theodore's. The debate would have two opposing teams made up of different students every week. After the fast paced and humorous formal debate, students and faculty could directly cross examine the participants, keeping the team members and the crowd on their toes.

I realize that Notre Dame already has the Intersection Debates and only last Monday there was a debate between College Republi­cans and College Democrats. I am suggesting, however, that this forum occur every week.

At many other schools these debating societies serve both social and political functions and are usually well attended by students and faculty alike. At Princeton, they have a year­round tournament to decide their best team, which could easily happen at Notre Dame. Oxford's Union Club is world renowned, with some of their best debaters traveling around the globe exhibiting their talents. The Union Club requires semi­formal dress, and their daily debates are a social center for the school.

There is no reason Notre Dame could not have a debating forum patterned after the other colleges. It would not require much on the part of the students, except their attendance and willingness to cross­examine the debating teams. This would increase the knowledge of the student body concerning current events because week by week they would be exposed to both sides of many different issues.

Who would organize it? I suggest that the College Democrats and College Republic­ans work together to start it. This would help both sides. Each side's opinion would be explained, and students who became interested in one of the sides of the issue might join one of the two clubs. In this arrangement everyone is helped. The students learn, they become more politically active, and the two political clubs create an outlet and recruit more members.

Nothing is stopping it except people's willingness to become a little more politically active. I am not suggesting protesting, just debate and current events education and the desire to make a small but important difference.

Terence Coyne is a sopho­more in the College of Arts and Letters.

Student emergency conduct commended

Dear Editor:

The events of the past few weeks have brought new meaning to the term "Notre Dame family." Just as a tradi­tionally close family comes together to support one another during times of need, many members of the Notre Dame community responded to our recent measles emergency. In a very short period of time and under very intense circumstances students, staff and clergy gave their time to make the program successful.

We want to thank the students for their cooperation, patience and understanding as they responded to the directive to receive an immunization. On numerous occasions, the representa­tives from the Public Health Department commented on the exceptionally pleasant and cooperative attitude of the students.

We also want to acknowledge the contribution of the numerous students and staff members who volunteered their time to work at the various locations around campus where the immunizations were offered. It took approximately 30 volun­teers each day—in addition to the staff of the Public Health Department and University Health Services—to provide the service.

Hopefully, we have stopped the spread of measles on our campus. If so, it will be due to the outstanding response of the entire Notre Dame community. Thank you.

Dear Editor:

Today I saw a wonderful bumper-sticker: "A mind is like a parachute: It only works when it is open." I could not help but smile and reflect on such an ideal sentiment.

The University of Notre Dame dedicated the 1985-1986 school year as the "Year of Cultural Diversity." As a result, programs and commissions were created in an effort to enrich any understanding of other cultures and backgrounds. The purpose of these commissions, programs, and speakers was to increase awareness and education, for it is only through education that stereotypes are eliminated and replaced with fact.

With this assertion in mind, allow me to present my quandary: If we are able to declare a year for greater understanding of diversity, then why is it that we, as the women of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame are so unwilling to open our minds to one another and replace stereotypes with fact?

We are all educated people, although most of us apparently fall victim to sporadic bursts of ignorance. Our education has taught us that individuals are created equal, regardless of skin color, weight, and financial status. Yet, it would seem that our ignorance, which is perpetuated by the presence of anatomical marvels, a communications department, worst professors, and an administration without guts. It would be appropriate for those who object to this public promotion of blasphemy on this campus to join in peaceful and dignified protest, including prayer in repatriation at the Snite Museum before and during the showings.

"Public Promotion of blasphemy" must not be tolerated

Dear Editor:

I have read the script of "The Last Temptation of Christ," and the intellectual content can be described most favorably as moronic. Its public exhibition can be justified neither on academic nor any other grounds. It should be cancelled by the department or the administration. It is not cancelled, one could claim the LeMans Hall front desk to the University to join in peaceful and dignified protest, including prayer in repatriation at the Snite Museum before and during the showings.

Dear Editor:

My open view is that the only outside quote used in his article is from one of history's most infamous figures, Vladimir Lenin. Lenin, too, thought that people were unable to make decisions on their own, so he established a totalitarian government which would regulate what ideas and opinions could be heard and expressed. When I see the results of such censorship in the Soviet Union, I'm relieved that I live in a country, and attend a university, where my choice of movies is not limited by the closed-minded will of a person I've never met.

Dear Editor:

I am responding strongly to disparagement of his beliefs only at the price of being regarded as an extremist and forfeiting "respectability." For the cultural Christian, this can be an effective deterrent. On the other hand, if we are open to all cultural Christians, we will respect them peacefully and fairly but forthrightly, to the cultural insult offered by this film to the divine person, Christ, who is God and our Redeemer. If we really believe that Christ is who He claims to be, we ought to be loyal (and loyal) to respond to this insult with onsite witness and prayer in repatriation for the blasphemy directed at Him.

BIZARRE LOVE SQUARE

A fter critically acclaimed debuts in major cities across America, the film sex, lies, and videotape finally made its way to South Bend, opening last Friday at the General Cinema at University Park East.

Written and directed by newcomer Steven Soderbergh, the film tells the story of four people whose lives become overwhelmed by the sexual misdeeds surrounding them. It features some of the best writing and acting in any movie this year.

Frustrated with his wife's lack of sexual enthusiasm, John Milani (Peter Gallagher) begins an affair with her sister, Cynthia (Laura San Giacomo). Ann (Andie MacDowell), his wife, is receiving therapy for her problem.

Now, enter Graham (James Spader), an old friend of John from high school. Graham has spent the last 10 years of his life roaming the country to videotape interviews with women about the sexual aspects of their lives. These tapes, as well as daily masturbation, serve as an attempt to eliminate his need for female companionship because of the pain he continues to endure through the loss of a high school love.

Ann and Graham become close friends and grow to know each other's problems well while the physical relationship of John and Cynthia continues. Conflict occurs when Ann discovers her husband's affair and responds by having Graham interview her. Indeed, it is during this interview that they discover that the solution to their problems can only be reached through the unique love they have for each other.

Ann's husband John tells her the rest of the story.

The use of videotape is employed very originally and effectively throughout the film. In the movie's most powerful moment, John watches the taped interview of his wife. Throughout the scene, the camera alternates between videotape footage and normal cinematic film, so the audience experiences both the drama between Graham and Ann and the rejections of John as he watches the videotaped scene.

The film captivates by focusing on sex and relationships. Only five sets are used throughout the entire movie. The setting is never known. Its focus is not on action or plot or setting, but rather on what these people have to say to one another. This is a film based on dialogue and the human feelings it portrays. Creating this type of film is risky for a film maker, but it has resulted in such innovative pieces as The Breakfast Club, The Big Chill, and now, sex, lies, and videotape.

In Influence, its focus is on sex and relationships. It's a movie you'll deal with sex and relationship. This is a movie you'll find yourself talking about because the car ride home. It's a movie you're in the mood for more than entertainment.

Andie MacDowell is one of the stars in newcomer Steve Soderbergh's first feature-length film, 'sex, lies, and videotape.' Particularly fine performances are turned in by James Spader and Andie MacDowell. They create a conflicting and yet beautiful relationship as a man trying to live without sex and a woman trying to live with it.

Guest Columnist

you how to b.s. your way through just about any question. In the interest of good journalism, I have chosen to use actual questions from actual Notre Dame quizzes. So sit up straight, and pay attention.

My first question is from my freshman year theology class. I think I got a "C" in this one, but who can remember that long ago?

"Write your name and favorable color on a sheet of paper, and hand it in."

Now, this is a rather progressive kind of unsanctioned quiz prank to punish the people who didn't bother to come to class. Therefore, this is obviously the hardest kind of quiz because you actually have to randomly BE IN CLASS to pass it. So, here's my advice: GO TO CLASS, STUDENT!! Come on, any prof who would give a quiz this dumb must have the intellect of a cracker. Even all the sleep you can catch up on in this class. You'll never get any sleep if you stay back in the dorm anyway, not with all the people snoring. You have the book. You have the notes. You have the review sessions. You have the tests. You have the assignments. You have the assignments.

My second question comes from Phil 256, Business and Ethics. I took it last year and got a "B." (It was screwed, I tell you.)

"Briefly, what does it mean to treat a person only as a means and not also as an end?"

Well, if you were really smart, you could say something about this being against Kant's second formulation of the Categorical Imperative. But this would mean you have read the book, and we all know you don't have time to read the book because you're trying to build a National Championship team here. And the A.P. simply does not vote on which school's student body can recite the most Kant. So, naturally, you have to be a little creative in extremely sloppy handwriting.

This, by the way, is a good time to mention to the prof what a great speaker he is, and that he really did drop his wallet on the floor and the picture of his family fell out, you happened to notice what a beautiful family he has and that he should be very proud and that you hope he is able to find enough time to spend with them because, after all, they're only young once. After this, he's really beginning to feel guilty and will forget grading the tests to play Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles with the little ones. You are now free to fill in the remaining space with just about anything you want. You have some fun. You've earned it.

My third and last question comes from MARK 231, Principles of Marketing, which I took during the summer and got an "A" in. I swear, really, I did.

"You produce a product which is small, inexpensive, has very little weight, will not perish, and is not necessary to the consumer. Describe the Utilities and best Distribution Channels involved in getting your product to the customer."

Now, what you have to keep in mind here — I mean NEVER forget — is that this is a BUSINESS class. There are ALWAYS two ways to answer a question in a business class. 1. Give the correct answer. The prof's probably been trying to find out what it is for years now and giving it will really impress him. 2. Discuss GOLF and it's APPAREL. If you want an "A," use method number two.

Something else... I wanted to read the book, but I had to fit in 36 before the pro-shop closed. Have you seen the new Titleist Collection for Fall '89? They've really done some bold new things with Neon Currency Green? And for Extra Credit, you can always throw in the bit about how disappointed you are that the vest has fallen by the Business-Fashion Wayside. So that's it. Pretty easy, huh? I bet you feel pretty silly having spent all that time studying over the course of your college life. Enjoy the extra time. But before I go, I have a question for all of you business majors. I turned 21 over the weekend and am wondering if I can get a...

SMC soccer downs Hope, gets upset by St. Joseph's

By COLLEEN KRENZER
Sports Writer

Saint Mary's soccer saw it's undefeated streak come to an end last week, as the Belles posted a 1-2 record for the week. The Belles headed to St. Joseph College last Monday, a game that Milwaukee was another close was much closer than the University of Wisconsin-Jefferson last week, as the Belles themselves bringing home a 4-0 upset. The team squeaked out a 1-0 victory at home against Saint Mary's. The Belles are looking to rebound this weekend with two big games at home, Marquette versus Notre Dame's only loss of the season.

Orioles 4, Brewers 0
Baltimore stayed one game behind Toronto as Mickey Tettleton hit a three-run homer and rookie Bob Milacki, 14-12, allowed five hits in 6-1-3 innings for his fifth consecutive victory.

Cubs 7, Expo 2
Chicago, fresh off clinching the NL East title, kept its momentum going by beating Montreal despite hitting into a triple play for the second time this season.

Phillies 5, Mets 3
Just a few minutes after Keith Hernandez and Gary Carter said their goodbyes to the fans at Shea Stadium, Roger McDowell and Gregg Jeffery had something far less pleasant to say to each other.

University of Michigan, although only a club team, defeated Notre Dame 3-0 earlier in the season and should be a formidable opponent, on Sunday at one p.m.

Turner led a balanced Irish attack with 18 kills, and Hubelinken followed with 13. Senior Kathy Cunningham continued her consistent play with 12 kills and a .391 hitting percentage. As a squad, Notre Dame had a .223 .223. 12 kills and a .391 hitting percentage, compared to .135 for Purdue. This type of effort might let Lamberti find the fountain of youth, even if he just gained one more year to his life.

Spartans eyeing the Hurricanes

After last weekend's 21-13 loss to top-ranked Notre Dame, Michigan State defensive coordinator Phil Bennett gave a little pep talk to his teammates.

"I just told them, 'Forget about this game. We're going to win the rest of them,'" Bennett said.

Bringing in a second-ranked Miami

The Spartans will try to bring the Hurricanes into an early finish Saturday at Spartan Stadium. Under the Erickson gang, coach Dennis and quarterback Craig, Miami has opened the year with a 51-3 win over Wisconsin, a 31-3 victory over Cal and a 38-7 triumph over Missouri.

"They're so well-rounded a team as you'd want," said Michigan State coach George Perles. "Their passing game and running game produce high yardage. Miami has few bumps in its schedule, then coming on strong in its last game. We're referring to his team's stock and we've learned a lot about its offense. We're a top-ranked team and we will provide the Hurricanes with a test of the year."

Perles sees this game as another big test for his team heading into its last two contests. Michigan State has a history of starting slowly because of a tough non-conference schedule, then coming strong in conference play.

"People asked me after we played Ohio if I'd learned anything," Perles said, referring to his team's 49-0 season-opening victory. "I took the question with a grain of salt. My kids don't point out many things. After Notre Dame, we learned a lot about ourselves and our team - positive stuff that should help us this week.

Michigan State will be without starting tailback Blake Ezor, who has an artificial sternum last weekend. Hylan Hickson, from Fort Lauderdale (Fla.) Dillard High School (former MSU star Lorenzo White's alma mater) gained 86 yards replacing Ezor last weekend.

"Hylan's very anxious to play, and I expect him to play well," said Perles. "Hylan has big thighs and does a pretty good job of hurdling people and running over people."

Sugar Bowl tie with Syracuse were the only blemishes on Auburn's record that year. Led by Reggie White, perhaps the most underrated quarterback in the country, fourth-ranked Auburn makes another visit to Tennessee with national title aspirations this weekend.

Now that Oklahoma has gone on probation, Houston is taking the Sooners' place as the team that makes a habit of running up huge scores on extremely weak opponents.

With quarterback Andre Ware directing a run-and-shoot offense, the Cougars have opened this season with a 69-0 pummeling of Nevada-Las Vegas and a 36-7 whipping of Arizona State.

Last season's 9-3 campaign included a 60-0 win over Louisiana Tech, an 82-28 waxing of Tulsa and a 66-15 annihilation of Texas.

The heat figures to go on this Saturday when the Cougars face the Temple Owls, who just might be the worst team in Division 1A football this year.

So far, Temple has lost 31-24 to Western Michigan, 43-3 to Penn State and 23-0 to Virginia Tech.

College Football

The game that attracts the most national attention this weekend may be Colorado's intercontinental contest with Washington, and not because both teams are ranked in the Associated Press Top 25. Colorado, undefeated and fifth in the nation, will be playing its first game since former quarterback Stal Aumos died following a lengthy battle with stomach cancer.

Washington coach Don James, whose 21st-ranked Huskies are coming off a 20-17 loss to No. 17 Arizona, is worried enough about Colorado's talent, let alone emotion.

"I've never seen a team that has more big plays in my life," said James. "In their three losses, you look at their passing game, their rushing game, their line - it's unbelievable."

Miami fans have seen their team lose to top-ranked Florida State and the infamous Auburn fans have seen their team lose to top-ranked Auburn team that featured eventual Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson.

In the 1985 Sugar Bowl tie with Syracuse were the only blemishes on Auburn's record that year. Led by Reggie White, perhaps the most underrated quarterback in the country, fourth-ranked Auburn makes another visit to Tennessee with national title aspirations this weekend.

Now that Oklahoma has gone on probation, Houston is taking the Sooners' place as the team that makes a habit of running up huge scores on extremely weak opponents.

With quarterback Andre Ware directing a run-and-shoot offense, the Cougars have opened this season with a 69-0 pummeling of Nevada-Las Vegas and a 36-7 whipping of Arizona State.

Last season's 9-3 campaign included a 60-0 win over Louisiana Tech, an 82-28 waxing of Tulsa and a 66-15 annihilation of Texas.

The heat figures to go on this Saturday when the Cougars face the Temple Owls, who just might be the worst team in Division 1A football this year.

So far, Temple has lost 31-24 to Western Michigan, 43-3 to Penn State and 23-0 to Virginia Tech.

Spartans eyeing the Hurricanes

Spartans eyeing the Hurricanes

After last weekend's 21-13 loss to top-ranked Notre Dame, Michigan State defensive coordinator Phil Bennett gave a little pep talk to his teammates.

"I just told them, 'Forget about this game. We're going to win the rest of them,'" Bennett said.

Bringing in a second-ranked Miami

The Spartans will try to bring the Hurricanes into an early finish Saturday at Spartan Stadium. Under the Erickson gang, coach Dennis and quarterback Craig, Miami has opened the year with a 51-3 win over Wisconsin, a 31-3 victory over Cal and a 38-7 triumph over Missouri.

"They're so well-rounded a team as you'd want," said Michigan State coach George Perles. "Their passing game and running game produce high yardage. Miami has few bumps in its schedule, then coming on strong in its last game. We're referring to his team's stock and we've learned a lot about its offense. We're a top-ranked team and we will provide the Hurricanes with a test of the year."

Perles sees this game as another big test for his team heading into its last two contests. Michigan State has a history of starting slowly because of a tough non-conference schedule, then coming strong in conference play.

"People asked me after we played Ohio if I'd learned anything," Perles said, referring to his team's 49-0 season-opening victory. "I took the question with a grain of salt. My kids don't point out many things. After Notre Dame, we learned a lot about ourselves and our team - positive stuff that should help us this week.

Michigan State will be without starting tailback Blake Ezor, who has an artificial sternum last weekend. Hylan Hickson, from Fort Lauderdale (Fla.) Dillard High School (former MSU star Lorenzo White's alma mater) gained 86 yards replacing Ezor last weekend.

"Hylan's very anxious to play, and I expect him to play well," said Perles. "Hylan has big thighs and does a pretty good job of hurdling people and running over people."

The game that attracts the most national attention this weekend may be Colorado's intercontinental contest with Washington, and not because both teams are ranked in the Associated Press Top 25. Lambert gets birthday gift as Irish upset Boilermakers

By GREG SHECKENBACH

Notre Dame volleyball coach Art Lambert got one heck of a birthday present Wednesday when his team defeated Purdue 3-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. It was the first time ever for Lambert against the Boilermakers and also the first ever in Notre Dame volleyball history.

Naturally, it was a shorter helper who stood tall for the Irish. Junior Tracy Shelton, who is only 5-foot-6, provided the spark when he launched the bench compiling 13 kills in three games. Her acrobatic style of play epitomized the Irish attack as they sent the Iowa Hawkeyes to the bench.

In the first game, nothing would go right for the Boilermakers and the Irish. After the game was tied at five, Purdue rallied for seven straight points to grab a 15-5 lead. The Boilermaker's consistent style of outside attack crushed Notre Dame into submission. The Irish only managed eight points in the first game and Lambert could not have been pleased.

The only thing Purdue had to worry about was an Irish spurt. That is exactly what happened.

After Purdue jumped out to a 2-1 lead, Notre Dame stormed back to grab a 4-6 advantage. The game then shuffled back and forth until the Irish eventually won 15-12 on a kill by Jessica Fiebelkorn. The only sour spot for Notre Dame was their lack of concentration on serves. They had 12 service errors by the end of the second game and 24 for the match. Other than that, the Irish and Shelton could do no wrong as the Irish tied a Boilermaker record for game apiece.

A new low-high starts, they pulled together and started to focus in and concentrate," stated Shelton after the match. "I really wanted to do something for the team. Notre Dame's aggressive style of play dominated the third and fourth games. Junior Amy White, who recently moved from setter to hitter, had a career-high 13 digs, most of which were of spectacular fashion.

At this point in the match, freshman Steve Akers had a 13-2 lead as she dominated the Purdue blockers with numerous spikes and serves. Turner and White combined for seven service aces.

Once again, the Irish utilized their middle attack as Fiebelkorn recorded two aces.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Baseball moved closer to its all-Bay Area World Series on Wednesday as the Oakland Athletics and San Francisco Giants each clinched division titles.

Oakland won the American League West championship with a 5-0 shutout of the Texas Rangers. The Giants lost to Los Angeles 1-0 but clinched the National League West crown when the Cincinnati Reds beat San Diego 2-1 in 13 innings to eliminate the Padres.

Oakland 5, Texas 0

The Athletics became the first repeat division champions since Kansas City in 1984-85 when they beat the Texas Rangers.

Mike Moore, 19-11, became the A's 19th gamer-winner by allowing one hit and no runs over seven innings. Rick Honeycutt followed Moore and got two outs. Gene Nelson then relieved and got four outs, completing the five-fitter.

Reds 2, Padres 1

Eric Davis doubled to score Herm Winningham in the 13th inning as the Cincinnati Reds eliminated San Diego from playoff contention.

Winningham led off the 13th with a single off Calvino Schmidl, 6-7, and then stole second. Two outs later, Davis doubled home Winningham from second for his 101st RBI.

Dodgers 1, Giants 6

The San Francisco Giants were swept for the first time this season, losing to Los Angeles, and then waiting to hear from San Diego on Wednesday night.

The Giants needed a victory — or a Padres loss — to win the National League West, but Tim Belcher pitched four-hitter to deny San Francisco a chance of doing it on their own for the third straight day.

Blue Jays 5, Tigers 1

Dave Stieb, 17-8, allowed four hits and struck out seven in 7 2-3 innings. Tick Henke finished for his 32nd save.

Doyle Alexander, 6-18, gave up three runs and seven hits in seven innings and walked five.
