The Dalai Lama says everyone has what it takes to win a Nobel Peace Prize. "In my case, I make more effort or more attempt to develop these good qualities, so I got this prize. But everyone has the capability," said the exiled spiritual and political leader of Tibet Thursday while in Newport Beach, Calif., for a conference. The Dalai Lama was awarded the prize in 1989.

Pregnant girls no longer need parental consent before having an abortion in Florida, thanks to the state Supreme Court. The court struck down the law on Thursday in Tallahassee, just five days before lawmakers were to consider restricting access to abortions. The split decision said Florida's constitutional guarantee of privacy outweighed the 1988 statute requiring consent of a parent, guardian or judge for a minor's abortion.

Scientist relates science to art in lecture

By ROBERT KELLY
News Staff

In his lecture "One Culture," Roald Hoffman, professor of physical science at Cornell University, sought to show the close relationship between science and arts. Hoffman, a 1981 Nobel laureate in chemistry, titled his lecture after a C.P. Snow essay which presented the view which Hoffman sought to disprove.

In his lecture, the first of a two-part series, Hoffman bases his argument on his opposition to C.P. Snow's description of the fields of science and humanities as "two polar groups" mutually ignorant of each other.

Hoffman, however, said he sees the two as being quite similar in their goals and methods, although these similarities might not be readily noticed without careful scrutiny. By presenting an example of work in chemistry, poetry and painting, Hoffman exhibited many ways in which these seemingly detached fields are similar to each other, most importantly in the areas of their foundations, the communication of their ideas, and, thus, their purposes.

Hoffman said that neither a work of science nor a work of art is totally original in its foundations. In the same way that a scientist "stands on the shoulders of giants," he bases his new molecular theory on the work of Isaac Newton, an artist does so by imitating the styles and themes of Rembrandt in his paintings.

Understanding that the very foundations of science are similar to those of art, is the first step in proving that "the rift between scientists and technologists on the one hand and humanists on the other" is not as great as it might at first seem.

According to Hoffman, however, the similarities do not end here. The importance of communication in both fields is equally comparable.

In the world of science, an American chemist will relay his theories to an English chemist and a German now, in order to find his goal. Communication in the arts is just as vital, Hoffman said.

Hoffman said he realizes that an artist's main purpose in painting a portrait and a poet's main goal in writing a poem is to communicate his or her ideas to the world.

In these ways, the artist and the scientist share the same purposes of foundation and communication, he said.

In conclusion, Hoffman said that art and science are really much more similar than they look. Hoffman summarizes his own views by stating that the arts and the sciences are truly parts of one united culture and that this is the time "to praise the achievements of the human mind" as a whole.
papal decree concerning the role of Catholic universities in the Church. Curran called the document, "totally unsatisfactory," because it would only allow Catholic universities a limited amount of freedom in the context of the Church's teachings.

The decree does not allow for the complete academic freedom that Curran feels is required if Catholic universities do not want to lose their Catholic character, as many Protestant educational facilities have, he said.

In conclusion, Curran pointed out that the Catholic Church can easily benefit from academic freedom, which he feels is one of the main benefits of the decree. freedom for the complete academic freedom since free Catholic Church does not want to lose their Catholic Church, he added.

Bakker was freed later Thursday on $250,000 bond imposed by U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter. The judge set sentencing for Oct. 24.

"I'm going to keep my faith in God and I'm going to see how this goes," Potter said. "I feel bad but encouraged in God." Bakker said, smiling in a brief statement to reporters. He said he was "still innocent of the charges against me."

Potter said he granted bond reasonably because Bakker faithful had a "Jim Jones mentality" and might help him flee the country. "They think he could walk on water," Potter said.

Davis declared the reference "horrible, absolutely uncalled for."

Bakker showed little emotion as the verdict was read. Tears welled in the eyes of Mrs. Bakker, who also received large bonuses from PTL but was not charged with any crimes.

The juror foreman said he was "totally unsatisfied," in which he defended his earnings as reasonable for someone who raised millions of dollars for the work of the Lord.

Freedom is paramount in abortion decision

By Paul Peralez

Timothy Homer, a conservative Democrat seeking to represent this district in the United States House of Representatives, spoke to a small group of prospective campaign workers recently. Well educated and handsome, Homer appears to be a community leader. I, however, differ with Homer on a very important issue: the right to choose. Homer is adamantly opposed to abortion.

Abortion has induced ferment across the nation. The Catholic Church has been the most influential institution to decry abortion as tantamount to murder. To a community comprised of an overwhelming number of Catholics, this concern is of special significance and is doubly so since Romer is a member of the Notre Dame community. Homer expects to garner the support of the Notre Dame community. Before we humiliate Romer’s expectations, however, careful consideration should be given to his opposition to abortion as an alternative to an otherwise unwanted child.

Romer insists that adoption is the best alternative for an unwanted child. Adoption is not, however, a viable alternative. Thousands of minority children, neglected by their parents and by society, languish in our inner cities. They are trapped within an invisible wall of hopelessness and decay from which escape is most arduous and uncertain. Where are the lines of people waiting to adopt these dispossessed and disillusioned children? I venture to guess that they do not exist.

There is, I strongly believe, no moral justification for a woman to give birth to a child to whom she can give little or no life of extremity - a life where base survival is a persistent challenge. There is, moreover, no moral justification for a society, through its neglect and ineptitude, to provide no workable alternative but abortion. This is precisely what America has done. Invariably, the same people who decry abortion are the same people who oppose pre-natal care for gravid and poverty-stricken women. A supreme contradiction. In the nation’s public schools and public government support of these children upon their birth, Timothy Romer is an exception. Clearly, the pragmatic ramifications of opposing abortion are compelling and plentiful. I believe, however, there is an issue even more compelling: that of a woman’s sovereignty.

Women must be permitted to choose in matters concerning their physical well-being. In “Roe vs. Wade,” the Supreme Court of the United States cites the constitutional right to privacy as a justification for a woman to have an abortion if she so chooses. Moreover, the court elucidated, an unborn child is not a citizen of the United States and thus not protected by the United States Constitution.

If the Constitution is rewritten so that unborn children are guaranteed rights as citizens, an undertaking which Timothy Romer would likely support, an entirely new question would be spurred: could a pregnant woman be incarcerated since her unborn child would be unjustly imprisoned? Pettifoggers, championing the cause of those yet unborn children would add considerable strain to an already overload court system. The place of conception, and not of birth, would become the determinant of citizenship. How could such claims of citizenship be sustained? Would potential parents have to summon a barrister to witness the conception of their child? How embarrassing a thought. How even more impractical the notion of antenatal citizenship.

Perhaps those of you who view abortion as an alternative and who respect a woman’s right to have one if she so chooses may, in light of Romer’s position, nonetheless support his candidacy. Frankly, I will likely do the same. Many of you are probably wondering why I have thus focused so intensely on this single issue. Well, because I value freedom, and freedom is central to this debate. Central is the freedom of a woman to choose and the freedom of a child from a harrowing experience in a world where he is unwanted and uncared for.

This issue had a very real significance to me quite recently. A fellow student, within a week of his arrival at Notre Dame, received a disturbing call from home. His girlfriend believed she was pregnant. Teary eyed, he called home to inform his family and they offered him their consultation and support. Fortunately, this young woman ultimately learned that she was not pregnant; she did not have to consider abortion. Nonetheless, I’m glad the choice was there and that the choice was hers to make.

Timothy Romer may very well be elected to represent this district in the United States Congress. I would hope he wouldn’t join other Congressmen in an attempt to end the legal protection lest we return to the days of clandestine and dangerous “coat-hanger” abortions. If abortion were made illegal, only the wealthy could afford the means of traveling abroad to have abortions in a safe and dignified atmosphere. Other women would be forced to give birth to their children or face possible death. In the end, the plight of the poor woman will be exacerbated, society overburdened, and government will have denied a freedom which it is pledged to protect: freedom of choice.

Congress practices artistic censorship

Dear Editor:

I found Regis Coccia’s column in Monday’s Observer (Oct. 2) disturbing. According to Mr. Coccia, Congress is justified in banning works that to the viewer seem to be obscene or meritless art. So Jessie Helms will decide for us what has artistic merit Yikes!

Congress created the National Endowment for the Arts to free artists of the commercial pressures abiding in the United States marketplace. A vibrant artistic culture was deemed important for the health and growth of the nation. Congress considered freedom essential to support an artistic culture that constantly challenged and redefined art, rather than relied on the mechanisms of earlier artistic movements. Now Congress has backed away from this view.

Mr. Coccia is wrong when he states that Congressional constraints on the Endowment are not censorship. Congressional support of only “non-acceptable artists immediately limits artistic freedom.” This is precisely what he does with the Endowment. The Endowment was created to promote artistic freedom and growth. Now it is being used as an instrument of censorship by support only Congressionally acceptable artists, promoting some at the expense of others. To keep the arts alive we need an Endowment free of loose strings.

Otherwise we are left with the Jessie Helms’ Foundation for the Arts.

When I first heard that Notre Dame would be presenting "The Last Temptation of Christ," I can’t say I was a bit surprised. I mean, the University of Notre Dame is not exactly known for being a liberal institution run by the Jesuits. When I first heard that Notre Dame would be presenting this film, I was even slightly angered. The film is being presented as a work of art, and the Jesuits have defended the film on the basis that it is a work of art. I feel that this is a disservice to the film, and I believe that the University should not be presenting this film.

If you have the opportunity, skip the University alcohol policy. In doing so, you will remember the 3.1 million people who die each year. Each minute, 24 people, 750,000 a year, die in mobile accidents. We would be more aware of the problem if we were presented with more information about the problem. This weekend, the mighty Fighting Irish of Notre Dame will find themselves facing an opponent of such strength, such power, such magnitude, that it could only be... a tree? Yes, its time once again for the classic match-up between Stanford and ND. It can only mean the return of that arborial sensation, the Stanford Tree. Don’t call him a mascot; he’ll tell you that’s for the Cal Bears. He’s a symbol for the school, representing more than simply athletic spirit. He is that entity which embodies the liberal mood of Stanford. He’s Gil Blank.

As a senior in a New Jersey prep school, he had his dream of attending an M.I.T. or Harvard and remaining in the East. Fed up with the college admission system, and overcome with senior apathy, he sent this picture along with his application to Stanford and wrote “A picture is worth a thousand words.” He was accepted immediately. Not knowing what to expect from the West Coast bastion of liberal academia, Gil kept his mind open, looking for something which would make his college experience meaningful. Impressed by the antics of

The finale of this week-long festival, The Taste of Nations, will be held on Saturday night from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the South Dining Hall. The event will feature the cuisines of eight different regions of the world. For example, the nations of Scandinavia will be represented by such specialties as chocolate fondue, cheese fondue and various seafood delicacies. For those who crave sweets, pastries form Italy, France, and Greece will be offered at several booths. Baklava, a light flaky pastry filled with nuts and coated with cinnamon syrup is one of the Grecian pastries that will be served. Other assorted desserts such as eclairs, petit fours, lady fingers, cream puffs and cannolis will also be presented.

Desserts, however, are only a part of the foods offered on Saturday night. Oriental foods such as egg rolls and steamed shrimp will also be on the menu. Exotic foods from the Middle East will also be prepared for the evening. Marinated beef and fresh vegetables on a skewer is a Lebanese entree which will be offered. Another Middle Eastern entree offered will be chick pea salad on pita bread. Foods from Africa, the Philippines and South America will also be served in various booths at the Taste of Nations.

The entertainment doesn’t end there, because tonight from 7:30 to 9 p.m. folk singer and comedian, David Lippman, will be performing at Theodore’s.

LAST WEEK

WEST LAFAYETTE - Notre Dame's top-ranked Fighting Irish spent a week hearing people question their abilities after last weekend's near-upset loss to Michigan State.

Then they went out and answered just about every one of them in a 40-7 rout of a pitiful Purdue team that committed eight turnovers Saturday at Ross-Ade Stadium.

In a game similar to last year's 31-7 rout of Purdue, the Irish jumped out to a 34-0 halftime lead, outgaining the Boilermakers 344-93, before letting their reserves get some game experience in the final 30 minutes.

"They're the most talented group I've seen out together in a long time, maybe the best ever," said Purdue coach Fred Akers, who has been a head coach since 1975. "They are clearly the number-one team in the country."

Todd Lyght (1) bats down a pass.

By MARY GARINO

Sports Writer

Todd Lyght is a man on a mission.

Lyght, the starting short cornerback, wants an interception every game this year. Or, at the very least, he wants to have more interceptions than teammates Stan Smagala, Pat Terrell and D'Juan Francisco. So far, he's right on track for both goals.

"We have a little contest between the secondary," Lyght says. "Last year, Pat Terrell led the team in interceptions as far as the secondary is concerned, and this year I'm in the lead. Pat got one against Purdue, and so we were giving Stanley Smagala and D'Juan Francisco a hard time. They have to buy dinner after the games until they get one."

Lyght has been credited with an interception in every game so far this season, and he hopes to keep it up for the rest of the year. If anyone can do it, Lyght can. His athletic ability and 4.40 speed make him one of the best cornerbacks in college football.

"Even my wife says to me every week, 'Boy, that Todd Lyght's a great athlete,' says Irish head coach Lou Holtz. "I think Todd Lyght during the summer made some decisions on what he was going to do with his life. I might be wrong, but I think he made a decision to be outstanding."

Todd and some of his fellow teammates did indeed make a commitment to the team over the summer. They decided that one national championship wasn't enough, and they want at least one more.

"We knew we had the capability to do it, and great coaching," Lyght says. "We knew what it was like to win, and so we made the commitment to strive to be the best we can be."

Lyght was a highly recruited high school senior free safety from St. Petersburg, Fla. "But the game really placed me at a higher level than I expected, so I've tried to play up to the standards that I set in that game."

Now Terrell anchors an outstanding defensive secondary, backing out signals to his backfield mates and punishing opposing receivers who dare to try to catch the ball in his zone. But it wasn't always that way.

In fact, Terrell spent the first two years of his collegiate football career as a split end, but since Tim Brown caught most of the passes for the Irish, Pat was usually the quarterback's second or third option on any pass play. So when the Irish coaching staff was looking for somebody to bolster their defensive secondary, Terrell was nominated for the job.

By KEN TYSIAC

Pat Terrell will always be remembered for his part in the most important play of the 1988 college football season. By reaching out and deflecting Steve Walsh's two-point conversion pass safely out of the end zone, Pat assured the Fighting Irish of its second national championship as well. Terrell, who also returned three interceptions for a touchdown in Notre Dame's historic game as well, was nominated for the job.

"Sometimes people say that there would be no Pat Terrell if it hadn't been for the Miami game," muses the senior free safety. "But the game really placed me at a higher level than I expected, so I've tried to play up to the standards that I set in that game."

Last year, Pat Terrell was the quarterback's second or third option on any pass play. So when the Irish coaching staff was looking for somebody to bolster their defensive secondary, Terrell was nominated for the job.

Stanford's nickname is a Cardinal, its mascot is a tree, and its offense is one big question mark. The Cardinal (3-3) host top-ranked Notre Dame (4-0) to try to get back in gear before plunging back into the Pac 10 season.

Stanford has won its only home contest thus far this season, a 18-17 win over Oregon, but has lost to Arizona and Oregon State, and a wild loss last week to San Jose State 33-40. Stanford is so bad, according to ABC Sports, and Notre Dame so good, that the coaches just weren't good enough for the street.

Irish head coach Lou Holtz, of course, isn't so sure of a Notre Dame blowout.

"Stanford is not an easy place to play in," Irish head coach Lou Holtz said. "I think we'll see a very fine performance from Stanford. As for being number one, I think we're smart enough to realize we're in a very precarious position."

This is the first year at Stanford for head coach Denny Green, who took over for Jack Elway after serving as the San Francisco 49ers receivers coach.

Stanford defense vs. Notre Dame offense

The Cardinal has had some problems on defense this season, allowing 96 points in four games, including the 40 given up against San Jose State. Stanford returned eight starters on defense, including left tackle Lester Archambeau, who has 212 total tackles in his career and has accumulated 17 quarterback sacks. Th 6-5, 260-pound senior has amassed 21 tackles in four games this year.

"Stanford has three different football players in Archambeau, (Kevin) Scott and (Alan) Grant, who might go in the first round of the professional draft," Holtz said.

Grant, a 5-10, 187-pound, anchors the secondary and pulls double duty as a punt returner for Green's team. Grant has three career interceptions and has 118 tackles in three years of play. Junior Kevin Scott, a 5-11, 182-pound lightweight at cornerback, has 18 tackles this season.

The big surprise for Stanford has been sophomore free safety Tony Trousset, who leads the team in tackles with 34, including one sack, and has one of the team's two interceptions.

The Irish offense returned to form last weekend, scoring 40 points against Purdue after sputtering against Michigan State. The key to Notre Dame's offense is quarterback Tony Rice.

"One thing Tony Rice always does is bring a positive attitude to the field," Holtz said. "He adds so much to our football team. I can't begin to mention it. He's an outstanding quarterback—not a great athlete, but a great quarterback. He's just getting better and better.

"Just to think about being without Tony Rice is rather frightening. We've never had a player play as great a role as Tony Rice."

Rice's numbers are beginning to back him up. He is 20-2 as Notre Dame's starting quarterback, and has hit 43-of-28 passing for the year for 513 yards. On the ground, he has rushed for 294 yards on 52 carries, scoring two touchdowns.

But Rice doesn't do it alone. Fullback Anthony Johnson, one of the best in the country in short yardage situations, has scored five Irish touchdowns and gained 216 yards on 59 carries. When the Irish take to the air, Raghib Ismail (11 carries, 241 yards) and Ricky Watters (six catches, 110 yards) are Rice's key targets. Tight end Derek Brown has been more involved in the offense late and has five catches for 104 yards.

Notre Dame defense vs. Stanford offense

Green switched the Stanford offensive scheme from the run-and-shoot to a pro-style set.

"Last year they had some success against us," Holtz said. "But it's not the type of offense, it's the way people execute."

Steve Smith and Brian Johnson have split time at quarterback, an injury to Johnson giving Smith the chance to start. Smith shone in the San Jose State loss, throwing for 284 yards, most of those caught by wide receiver Ed McCaffrey.

On the ground, Stanford is hurting, with four of its top five running backs hobbled with injuries.

Notre Dame's defense is led by linebacker Ned Bolcar, who has 37 tackles, three for loss, and two sacks this year.

Denny Green
Formerly head coach at Northwestern, Green takes over for Jack Elway, and has led the Cardinal to a 1-3 record so far this season.

Walter Batson
WR

Batson is capable of springing for a big play. The 5-10, 175-pounder has scored three touchdowns in his career, including an 82-yard TD reception in 1988.

Scott Palumbush
DT

The 6-4, 255-pound defensive tackle has been a stronghold of the Stanford defense for three years. He has seven sacks among his 52 career tackles.

Steve Smith
QB

All eyes are on Smith as he tries to fill in for injured quarterback Brian Johnson. Considered equal at the start of the season, the two have split the playing time.

John Hopkins
PK

Hopkins is the leading scorer for the Cardinal this year. He is six-for-six in PATs and six-of-13 in field goals, with a long of 54 yards, this year.

Horsemen defeat Stanford in final game

By VIC LOMBARDI
Sports Writer

Layden, Crowley, Stuhldreher and Miller

In their final game together, the legendary "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame were victorious. They galloped away with a 27-10 win over Stanford in the 1925 Tournament of Roses. Knute Rockne's squad capped a perfect 10-0 season as the Irish won their first-ever national championship.

Time Capsule

One member of that famed Notre Dame backfield, Elmer Layden, stole the show as he displayed his sensational versatility. A standout on both sides of the ball, Layden finished with three touchdowns, including two on interception returns. He also handled the punting responsibilities, booting kicks 60 yards downfield.

The other Horsemen also contributed to the Rose Bowl victory. When running back Jim Crowley wasn't scrampering for yardage, he was kicking extra points. Quarterback Harry Stuhldreher played with entire confidence and even sprouted a broken ankle. And Don Miller—well, Don Miller was there.

Except for the final score, Pop Warner's Indians dominated in all the game's statistics. Stanford outgained the Irish in total yards, 331-192, and first downs, 17-7. Nevertheless, the Irish capitalized on key Stanford turnovers to pull out the victory.

“We won by playing heads up football,” said Rockne. “We'd have won regardless of the breaks.”

Stanford's massive All-American fullback-quarterback Ernie Nevers muscled his team downfield to set up the game's first score—a 27-yard field goal by Murray Cuddeback.

The second quarter featured the "Elmer Layden Show," as the skinny fullback rushed for one touchdown and returned a 78-yard interception for a second score. Layden, known as the fastest man in football, gave his team a 13-0 advantage going into the locker room.

Midway through the third stanza, Notre Dame's Ed Hunsinger picked up a loose ball after a fumbled punt and rammed in for the touchdown. But the Indians struck right back as halfback Ed Walker connected with Ten Shipkey in the endzone to cut the Irish lead to 20-10.

The, in the fourth quarter, Stanford was threatening from the Irish 8-inch line. But a stingy Notre Dame defense managed a memorable goaline stand and prevented the Indians from scoring. The victory was secured on the ensuing Stanford series when Layden returned his second interception for a touchdown.

That Notre Dame team was considered by many to be the most alert squad ever to play the game. Much of its success was due to its impeccable chemistry that the "Four Horsemen" displayed when they were on the field together.

The Horsemen reminded everyone that football games aren't won on talent alone. They're won on strategy, wit, and, most of all, teamwork.

Lyght continued from page 1 player, and he chose to come to Notre Dame over Michigan, Michigan State and other football powerhouses. It was the combination of athletics and academics that sold Lyght on Notre Dame, plus Lou Holtz' great recruiting skills. He hasn't regretted the choice either in football or in his studies.

"When it came right down to it, I knew deep inside that Notre Dame was the school for me, and so far it's been right," Lyght, who is enrolled in Arts and Letters, says. "When I first came to practice, I remember being a freshman, going out playing, I knew I was the best from day one. I could compete on the college level and be successful."

Lyght's confidence was immediately put to the test after two members of the secondary, Brian Wells and Corny Southall, both went down with knee injuries during his freshman year. Lyght found himself playing in all twelve games of his first season, and he liked it.

"It was a good learning experience for me, being able to play so early," Lyght says. "It has helped me mature as a ballplayer."

Among his favorite plays from his freshman campaign are his interception in the Michigan State game, and a blocked punt in the Pittsburgh game that sparked a comeback even though the Irish eventually lost.

Since then, the defense has relied on Lyght for his pass defense skills. During the national championship season, Lyght broke up nine passes and collected 36 tackles, earning Associated Press honorable mention as an All-American. Before this year began, he was rated as the best cornerback in the country by The Sporting News.

Lyght started every game last year except the opener against Michigan. He is part of the Irish defense that has dominated games so far in 1989, and saved games when the offense has been less than perfect.

"I think our defense is improved upon last year," Lyght notes. "All of the guys that we have now, we've played together, and there is a real closeness on the team. I think that showed during the Michigan State game. The offense wasn't doing too well, and we just looked at each other, and said, we have enough points to win this game, let's just go out and win it."

The defense is good, but that doesn't mean that there is no room for improvement. Lyght credits Chuck Heater, the coach of the secondary, with improving his skills as a football player. And Heater says that Lyght's willingness to learn has contributed to his game.

"He has to continue to be a consistent player. He has been a very consistent guy here in his practice habits, and it has carried over into the game. He just needs to maintain the consistency from a practice standpoint," Heater says.

Lyght says that he is just taking the season one game at a time. As far as his goal of getting an interception every game, he realizes it is difficult to accomplish. But in the meantime, he's getting a lot of free dinners from his teammates.

Chuck Hepler, who coaches the defensive backfield, adds: "We moved Pat because of a need we had at free safety. We were looking for an individual we thought would help us, and Pat is an outstanding athlete. (Defensive Coordinator) Barry Alvarez said that the first player we should consider moving to defense should be Pat Terrell, and he's worked out very well.

Terrell possesses a rare, explosive combination of strength and speed which helped him make tackles consistently and painlessly. He runs the 40-yard dash in 4.2 seconds, and his power is enough to stand up to running backs who charge into the defensive backfield with a full head of steam.

In the beginning I thought Pat had trouble with the heavy contact on defense, adds Slim Smagala, the Irish corner who doubles as Terrell's roommate. "But he became very aggressive as he became well-versed and developed into one of the hardest hitters we have in the secondary.

The switch to free safety also entailed a new responsibility for Terrell. He became the linebacker and negotiator of assignments to the cornerbacks. This new duty created some problems for Pat at first.

"Last year it was just hectic for me playing the gun," concedes Terrell, "Stan Smagala and Todd Lyght would yell like crazy for their calls, but I didn't know what to tell them." Heager agrees. "Last year it was difficult for him to control the signals, but this year he has a lot more confidence. Pat does very well with the adjustments now.

"He'll have a quite a few signals to call from the nickel against Stanford. Since their offensive backfield has been ravaged by injuries, the Cardinal will likely bomb the Defense with a pass-oriented offense. Irish fans recalling earlier games against Michigan State might worry about whether Terrell's pass defense is equal to the task, but Terrell would like to set their minds at ease.

"When a team is completing passes, everybody always wants to blame the secondary," he charges. "But the fact is that we are doing pretty well. Teams are going to complete some passes. We just have to make sure that if the receivers do catch a pass, they remember where they caught the ball."

Terrell thinks the Irish defense will be okay this year, given Stanford's acknowledged offensive threat. "We have a very explosive defense, and they have obviously perfected the front pass, but we'll make them limit what they can do. Our personnel matches up well with them man for man.

In fact, the Irish match up against Stanford much better than they did against Miami. But Pat Terrell would rather not think about that.

Peerless Prognosticators

Each week, The Observer sports staff, a random point picked by the sports department and some well-known figure in the Notre Dame community predict the outcomes of the week's major college football games. Records are compiled as to how each prognosticator did against the spread. In other words, it's not enough to pick the winner of a given game. The prognosticators must pick the team that covers the spread and give the underdog points.

Stanford mascot leaves fans laughing

he "Tree" his freshman year, who along with the entire band decided to parade through the campus one evening. Gil knew he had found his destiny. He would carve his niche at radical Stanford. He would be the Stanford Tree.

After being chosen "best wood on campus" and destroying the old Tree's uniform (a requirement) Gil constructed his own using two mattresses, green carpeting, and felt. Says Gil, "Babes love foam and felt."

What "kind" of tree is Gil? "I am not 'any' tree," he says, "but I am the 'Anytree.' All trees can feel angst and pathos through me." He describes himself as "the Ideal Tree, through which all other trees are mirrored."

This ideal tree is a combination of "orgiastic furor, hormonal imbalance, and aerobic training," which leads Gil to claim that he, "likes to germinate as often as possible." He claims he also has had to increase his intake of life-essential liquid with the rest of the band. He doesn't do chlorophyll, though, the NCAA forbids it.

He finds his work paradoxical, as he is "establishing some tradition, in a school with almost none. Their old symbol, the Indian, was dissolved in the 60s, following students protesting its racist overtones. In the following years of anarchy, the mascot changed yearly with no clear form. The Band finally decided it would borrow the "Palo Alto" from the University shield, and so the Tree was born. Gil wants to make the Tree a well-known symbol of Stanford among the college circuit and will use any means to do so. He plays with other mascots, like the Beavers of O.S.U., who recently chased him with a chain saw and threatened to 'stump' him.

Gil says he's excited to meet with the Leprechaun and respect the tradition at ND. He doesn't feel animosity towards any mascot, and enjoys the familiarity among the mascots who, "understand symbolic rivalry." He has had to learn a few things though, like running around with a hundred-pound suit on and playing with the children who approach him. He advises other saplings to, "branch out into something bigger and not, "pine away their existence.""

Gil takes no definite stand on environmental issues such as the rain forest and recycling, but he takes his position seriously as the quintessential symbol of his institution. When you see him raising his limbs to the crowd on Saturday, Gil hopes you'll remember this "Be Tree... and I am not an asparagus."

The Pogues find 'Peace and Love' by David Desalle

"Peace and Love," the latest album by the Pogues, features bold experimentation. This is a new addition to the fine rollicking music, that bridges the gap between Irish folk songs and the Clash, which fans have come to expect.

Surprisingly, Shane MacGowan, who co-wrote most of their popular 1986 release, "If I Should Fall From Grace With God" with band member Jem Finer, is credited with only six of the fourteen tracks on this album. He also shares his duties as lead vocalist with the other seven members, who typically sing in the songs they wrote themselves. MacGowan continues to distinguish himself as the band's most accomplished songwriter and takes credit for the record's most outstanding cuts.

"Down All The Days," may be the finest song on the album. It is one of the band's experimental efforts that is truly memorable. It creates a mood of yearning and has a mesmerizing tune. The song shows a departure from the Pogues' traditional sound, resembling something the Mighty Lemondrops might play.

Other outstanding songs are "Night Train To Lorca," a dark, driving account of a annual train ride that banjo player Jem Finer, should be proud of. He also is to be applauded for the chilling dirge, "Tombstone."

The Pogues and their fans should be pleased with "Peace and Love." Although, some of the band's experiments are not successful, this is a fantastic album. The Pogues have maintained their unique sound while exploring new styles.
I'm about to offend many good people whose good will and respect I would appreciate having. That makes me sad, because it's the eve of my birthday, and I'll need all the friends I can get as I crawl down the flumery. Like a wimp.

In my opinion, "The Last Temptation of Christ" is far less offensive than the alleged message of Medjugorje. Medjugorje is based on totally unacceptable premises, which is another man's poison.

Does the fresh-air fiend quoted in the press realize that having rights is a two-way street? As a smoker, I dirty the air in the room when I talk, and I don't have a car license or know how to drive, and I don't own a car, which could dirty the air much more lethally than my cigarettes do. If I promise not to smoke, will the non-smoker promise not to drive a car to places on and off campus, which he could walk to, or do, poisoning the gulls with fumes that my dog and I must breathe in, or leave the windows open? If protecting the environment is the name of the game, shouldn't I have the right to insist that hundreds of students leave their cars in the parking lots, instead of using them for anything as unessential as a beer run?

Remember the mutual forbearance we had to practice as children, when each of us was a possessive and protective heir of his or her favorite toys? Children keep peace among the siblings, our parents told us, 'Brother won't touch Sister's doll, or promises to keep her cotton-pickin' hands off brother's red fire engine.'

Millions of Americans feel they have a God-given right to smoke, just as millions of Frenchmen feel they have a God-given right to smoke. Frenchmen in Paris, they say, reserve the right to smoke when they make love, or to make love when they smoke, which ever excites them the most.

Smoking first became patriotic in 1917, when the American Red Cross started showing up at the ports of embarkation to hand out fags to the "boys who were going to fight over there." On one hand Surgeon-General Koop wants America to go smokeless. On the other hand, he favors handing condoms to our kids at about the age they are weaned, which goes to show that one man's meat is another man's poison.

In South Bend, we're treated to the nauseating stench of the ethanol plant. I can get sick to my stomach when I stand close to people who don't wash, or to someone who does, if they use Right Guard. I can get sick dancing with a lady doused with scents taken from the cosmetics counter at Harrod's in London. No woman has the "right" to pour all the perfumes of Arabia on one little hand, to make herself more fragrant than a garbage truck.

When I go to old tenements to make sick calls during suicide times I sometimes get sick from the odors that hang in the hallways, from the raggamuffin paraphernalia of Arabia on one little hand, to make herself more fragrant than a garbage truck.

Do I have a right to expect those downwind of me not to give vent to the nauseating stench of the ethanol plant? And the fumes of a perfume store?

Of all the crimes that go on in cities like New York and San Francisco—drug sales, muggings, gambling, prostitution, child abuse, pornography, petty theft—the sin that can be strictly enforced is the one that makes smoking a crime. So now the cops feel free to push smokers around, to put them in jail in all of the beavers to whom threats of law and order can't be applied.

The Notre Dame women's soccer team looks to build its winning streak as it continues its 13-game winnings homestand this weekend.

The Irish, 5-6, will play host to the Redskids of Miami (Ohio) on Friday at 1 p.m. As the new week rolls in, Notre Dame will play Tri-State on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Notre Dame built a three-game winning streak during last week's action. The first victory came against Lake Forest on Tuesday, Sept. 26 by a score of 3-2. The Irish fell behind in that game but came on strong as Susie Zilvitis and Joy Sisulak scored their first goals of the season. Bernie Holland added the winner.

The Irish defeated Indiana 4-1 three days after the Lake Forest game. Zilvitis scored an unassisted goal in the win over the Hoosiers, and K.T. Sullivan added her fifth goal of the season on an assist from Zilvitis.

Notre Dame downed Michigan 4-3 last Sunday. Marianne Giolitto scored the first goal for the Irish, with Sullivan, Sisulak and Margaret Jar rounding out the scoring.

Surprise! Mets stick with Johnson
Despite team's subpar season, manager won't be fired

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Davey Johnson kept his job after all Thursday when the New York Mets announced that he will return for a seventh season as manager.

The announcement came two days after sources told The Associated Press that the Mets had decided to fire Johnson and three days after the manager himself told The New York Times that he was convinced he would be fired.

In a statement released in New York and at the National League playoffs in Chicago, the Mets said: "In an effort to dispel rumors and responses to the contrary, general manager Frank Cashen of the New York Mets today announced that the club plans to have Davey Johnson return to manage the team next season. Johnson has a three-year contract with the Mets which runs through 1991."

Cashen had said Tuesday that a decision on Johnson's fate had been made but would not be final until he could talk to the manager, who was fishing in Florida.

"We never had any intentions of firing Davey," Cashen said Thursday through Mets spokesman Jay Horowitz.

Joe McVilaine, the Mets' vice president for baseball operations, confirmed that the front office had been divided, but he said the final decision was Cashen's "and we all stand by it."

McVilaine would not say if he agreed with the decision.

"There's always going to be disagreement in the room," he said. "You're not going to get 100 percent agreement all the time. We sit down and discuss it, but that's not unusual. We have these disagreements on trades all the time."

Johnson, who signed a three-year contract after last season, has led the Mets to two division titles and four second-place finishes in six years. The team is 575-395 under him.

Mets owner Nelson Doubleday decided Thursday, a day after talking with Johnson, to keep him. Al Harazin, the Mets' senior vice president, met with owners Nelson Doubleday and Fred Wilpon on Monday after receiving input from McVilaine. The next day, the Mets announced as expected that they would not re-sign co-captains Gary Carter and Keith Hernandez but left Johnson's status hanging.

A source close to Cashen quoted the general manager as saying a definitive decision had been made to fire Johnson.

Notre Dame has won its own meet seven times in the 33 years that the race has been held.

The Irish are hoping to fare better than last year, when they placed fourth overall. Notre Dame's top two finishers - Dan Garrett and Ron Markezich - have both graduated, so the Irish will be relying on Mike O'Connor and Tom O'Flourie to lead the team.

Notre Dame will certainly not lack confidence after overcoming strong adversity to win the National Catholics last week.

"The top five runners competed very well," said Piana.
Cubs even things up with 9-5 rout

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Cubs still can’t figure out Kevin Mitchell and Will Clark. But Mark Grace and friends had no trouble solving Rick Reuschel and salvaging the split they needed.

Ryne Sandberg, double by Grace in the sixth that gave him three hits for the second consecutive night, was enough for three Chicago pitchers to withstand San Francisco’s sluggers.

Mitchell, who led the majors with 47 home runs, homered for the second straight game and singled twice. Clark, who drove in a record six runs in the opener, singled and walked, extending his streak of reaching base to seven. Matt Williams hit a two-run shot in the eighth and Robby Thompson a solo home run in the ninth that gave the Giants, who out-hit/homered Chicago 14-12 during the season, a 6-2 home run edge in the playoffs.

The Cubs, however, stopped Clark when it mattered most, maybe because of a move Manager Don Zimmer might have made one night earlier. Chicago led 6-2 in the fifth when the Giants put runners on second and third with two outs. Zimmer pulled Bielecki and brought in lefty Paul Assenmacher to face the left-handed Clark, who grounded out on the first pitch.

The next three games will be in Candlestick Park. Rick Sutcliffe (16-11) will start against San Francisco’s Mike LaCoss (10-10) Saturday.

Les Lancaster pitched four innings for the victory. Because Bielecki didn’t last five innings, Assenmacher would have been in line for the win, but he gave up two singles to start the sixth and was relieved.

An all-day rain that stopped shortly before gametime failed to dampen the spirits of the sellout crowd of 39,195 and fans standing five deep on the nearby rooftops. A slight wind seemed to favor the Giants.

ND volleyball playing two at JACC after disappointing loss to Ohio St.

By MOLLY MAHONEY Assistant Sports Editor

The city of Columbus, Ohio - the heartland of the Buckeyes of Ohio State - is roughly a five-hour drive from South Bend, and much less than that if you fly the friendly skies.

But for the Notre Dame volleyball team, which dropped to 3-6 on the season after losing to the Buckeyes in four games Wednesday night, that jaunt seemed like an eternity.

"To tell you the truth, I’d rather forget that game," Irish head coach Art Lambert said. "I’d like to think that you learn from your losses, but there comes a time when you have to start winning."

Notre Dame will try to re-bound from that defeat in a pair of weekend matches at the Joyce ACC. The Irish host Northern Illinois at 7:30 p.m. Friday and face Eastern Michigan at the same time Saturday. The Irish left Wednesday for Ohio with high hopes of recovering from a spattering start of the season, but once again, they stalled out.

They play thus far in the season has left them a reputation as slow starters, and the Irish did little to shake that habit from their necks as they dropped the first two games of the match to the Buckeyes before taking game three.

Ohio State, led by a one-man army named Holly O’Leary and her game-high 22 kills, won the first two games 15-7, 15-8 and then rallied after a hard-fought 13-15 loss in game three, to capture the fourth game 15-7. Junior outside hitter Tracey Shelton led the Irish offensive attack with 18 kills, while the middle hitting tandem of senior Kathy Cunningham and freshman Jessica Feibelkorn added 13 kills apiece.

Senior setter Taryn Collins contributed 42 assists and matched Cunningham’s 14 digs, but the Irish only managed to tally three total team blocks in four games—a statistic which explains why six Irish players were able to record double-figure digs.

The Irish tallied more than three more kills than the Buckeyes, but an unexcused middle blocking corps left Ohio State an open window the hit through.

"Poor blocking was obviously our downfall," Lambert said. "In fact it was just nonexistent, but if we can take care of that problem, we’re going to do something."

The Irish will try to act on this weakness tonight as they host Northern Illinois in the Joyce ACC.

The Buckeyes come into tonight’s matchup 3-15 prior to their Oct. 3 showdown with Indiana State, and, like the Irish, have been torpid in their early matches.

Notre Dame has momentum on its side going into its fifth meeting with Northern Illinois, as it holds a commanding 4-0 lead in the series. The Irish last faced Northern Illinois in 1987 and won 15-7, 10-15, 15-8, 15-6. But Huskies such as junior outside hitter Kari Niesen, who tops the team with 164 kills, and senior middle blocker see HUSKIES / page 14

Irish host cross country invite

Men’s team looking to prove pollsters wrong

By MARY GARRIN Sports Writer

When the national cross country poll came out last Tuesday, the Notre Dame men’s cross country team surprisingly was still ranked 15th.

The Irish had hoped to move up in the rankings after defeating second-ranked Providence last weekend at the National Catholic Invitational.

Apparently, the Irish will have to prove themselves again. They have a good opportunity today at the Notre Dame Invitational, but it won’t be an easy task.

The men’s team will race at 2 p.m., and a B team race will begin at 4 p.m., both on the Burke Memorial Golf Course.

This weekend’s meet includes some of the top teams in the NCAA’s Division II and Division III ranks.

Mike O’Connor

"It’s going to be a heck of a meet," said Irish head coach Joe Piane, who also coordinates the races. "The meet is deeper in quality with good Division I, II and III schools.

Ohio University, ranked 20th in the nation, will be one of the strong contenders. Edinboro and Mankato State, which tied for the Division II national championship last year, also will be participating.

The 16-team field also is expected to include Malone, which is ranked number-one in the NAIA and Division III national championship Wisconsin-Osh Kosh.

But the teams to look out for historically have been from neighboring Michigan. Central Michigan won the event last year, and Michigan and Eastern Michigan were victorious the previous two years. Michigan runners also have fared well on the individual level recently.

The Notre Dame Invitational was initiated in 1956 by former Irish coach Alex Wilson, making it the oldest collegiate cross country invitational in the country.

The Notre Dame women’s cross country team has a tough task ahead as the Irish 10-quality teams in the Notre Dame Invitational Meet this weekend.

The competition includes Ohio University, ranked 20th in Division I, and Wisconsin-Osh Kosh, the defending Division III national champions.

Notre Dame also will face Western Ontario, perhaps the best team in Canada and the second-place finisher in the Notre Dame Invitational last year.

Irish coach Tim Connelly is impressed but not discouraged by the stiff competition in this meet.

"If just look at the statistics on paper, we’re probably the eighth best team out of 10," said Connelly. "There are a couple of outstanding teams, and the rest of the teams are also strong. But our goal is to finish in the top five of the race."

Connelly stressed consistent weekly improvements in performances as the game plan for a successful season.

"We look to improve every week," he said. "We came in sixth in this meet a year ago and we’re shooting for a place in the top five this year."

A top five place finish will also take depth and teamwork, according to Connelly.
