Bush prepares for Soviet summit
Assures European allies of 'no surprises' talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush sought to reassure European allies Tuesday about his summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, promising to consult them with 'no surprises' on any agreement to cut nuclear weapons or reduce U.S. troops overseas.

Bush said he and Gorbachev may discuss possible military cutbacks 'in a general way' when they meet off the coast of Malta on Saturday and Sunday. But he added in writing, I have made clear to Mr. Gorbachev — in my handwriting, so he knows it comes from me, not the bureaucracy — that this is not a summit for arms control agreement.

Meanwhile, budget constraints at home are forcing cuts in the U.S. armed services — whatever troop withdrawals are negotiated with the Warsaw Pact. As of Nov. 1, there were 213,000 men and women in the armed services. The services have drafted plans for a reduction of 275,000, with about 135,000 to be trimmed from the Army, 100,000 from the Air Force and 40,000 from the Navy and Marines, defense sources told The Associated Press.

Defense Secretary Richard Cheney will make a decision on the services' proposal when he returns Thursday from a NATO meeting in Brussels, Belgium, and reports to President Bush.

The sources, declining to be identified, said Richard Darman, the director of the presidential Office of Management and Budget, was pushing for even deeper cuts in the armed forces. Bush said it was very important for the allies to know 'I'm not going to go to parleys and prettily jump out there and try to grandstand by committing them to something. That's not the way you keep an alliance together.'

After the two-day summit, Bush will fly to Brussels on Dec. 4 to brief NATO leaders on the discussions. The allies were aghast to learn in 1987 that then-President Ronald Reagan and Gorbachev had come close to a deal at a summit in Reykjavik to abolish all nuclear weapons in spite of the fact that NATO regards some of those arms as vital to deter Soviet attack.

Now, with the collapse of hard-line communist regimes in Eastern Europe, and massive budget deficits in the United States, the Bush administration is considering major cutbacks in its own military programs.

Gorbachev is facing similar pressure at home. However, Bush said, 'There are no arms control proposals on the table.' The sources said, 'So the surprise will be, if you like, the absence of surprise. There won't be a surprise. That may come as a surprise.'

Bush signs bill pledging $938 M
in U.S. aid to Poland and Hungary

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Tuesday signed a bill authorizing $938 million in U.S. aid over three years to Poland and Hungary, saying the political reforms there have "altered the imagination of the world."

Bush signed the legislation as he prepared to send off Poland a presidential delegation whose leaders cautioned that Poland and other Eastern Europeans may be in for some hard winters before economic changes can catch up with political reform.

"We must be careful that economic expectations do not become unrealistic. In the kind of emotional environment that exists today, that can very easily occur," said Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, who heads the mission of government, business, labor and other leaders for a four-day visit.

Yeutter said he was carrying with him to Poland an additional $20 million installment in U.S. food aid. The legislation, providing more aid to the two East bloc nations than Bush had requested, includes programs for Poland with a value of $484.5 million. Hungary would receive benefits with a total value of $91.5 million.

Bush in a statement called the measure "a major and positive step in bipartisan foreign policy."

"We are nearing the end of a year that future generations will remember as a watershed, a year when the human spirit was lifted and spurred on by the bold and courageous actions of two great peoples, the people of Poland and Hungary," Bush said.

Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole promised help in retaining displaced Polish workers. And Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said he would plumb trade and investment opportunities.

Yeutter said his colleagues were pessimistic on short-term prospects for improved conditions either in Poland or in its fast-changing East bloc neighbor.

"Economic reform is not an overnight proposition. It will take time. It will be tragic indeed if all the magnificent emotion of the moment is channeled into impatience," Yeutter told a White House news briefing.

Mrs. Dole, who with her husband Sen. Bob Dole visited Poland last August, described it as "a period of some pain" as Poland moved from a state-owned economy to a market economy.

"There'll be a loss of jobs for some people. Also, as subsidies are removed from certain areas, there will be an increase in prices," the labor secretary said.

Czech premier pledges end to communist domination

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The premier pledged to include non-Communists in a new government, and new Communist Party chief Karel Urbanek said Tuesday the party would give up its constitutional monopoly on power.

Premier Ladislav Adamec made his pledge in a meeting with the opposition Civic Forum movement after 11 days of unprecedented protest. Millions of workers observed a two-hour general strike Monday, but the streets were quiet Tuesday because the Civic Forum asked for calm.

After the meeting, government minister Marian Calfa said Adamec would submit a coalition government to President Gustav Husak by Sunday and would ask Parliament, which meets Wednesday, to delete the guarantee of a "leading role" for the party from the constitution.

Hours later, party chief Karel Urbanek told 5,000 activists in Prague the "future of the party requires giving up the monopoly of power", the official news agency CTK reported. Urbanek also pledged Tuesday in a major reorganization of the party leadership, said Saturday he favors a "socially-based coalition government.

Central Committee spokesman Josef Hura said Urbanek would visit Moscow after the U.S. summit off Malta this weekend.

Civic Forum spokesman Jiri Dienstbier said at a news conference, "It is our aim to bring the political conditions for the elections and the resignation by

sentenced to 32 1/2 years

NEW YORK (AP) — The man convicted of killing Notre Dame graduate Judith Anne Wrapp was sentenced Monday to 32 1/2 years to life in prison.

"I must tell you this is a case where if a death penalty were permissible I would impose it," state Judge Philip Lagana told Frank DeChirico 39.

DeChirico was convicted last month of fatally shooting Wrapp, 24, of Little Rock, Ark., in a Sept., 1984, street hold-up near Pratt Institute's campus in the borough of Brooklyn.

Wrappe graduated from Notre Dame in May of 1988 with a bachelor of fine art in studio. She was preparing to start graduate studies at Pratt Institute, according to Dennis Moore, assistant director of public relations at Notre Dame.

She was active in art while at Notre Dame, winning the Beardsley Award for her work in May of 1988. Police said DeChirico was out on parole since 1986 after serving 13 1/2 years for manslaughter. From 1986 until the time of the mugging, police said, he was believed to have been living on charges that included robbery, drug possession, grand larceny and burglary.

At the time of the robbery, the prosecutor's office had evidence leading to an arrest warrant for DeChirico, "He is a local crack addict who spends a lot of time on the street," the prosecutor said. He believed the remover of charges was for the purpose of getting money for drugs.

He was to lose $27 in the robbery, police said.

Grandfather of 10 to 25 years to life on each of two murder charges and 12-1/2 to 25 years for robbery.

He will not be eligible for parole until age 75.
Some football rivalries seem to bring out the worst in people. Fans aren't satisfied to watch the game. They hurl insults at the opponent's fans. This is especially true in the Orange Bowl.

Miami is not a friendly place to be if you're a Notre Dame fan and the Irish are playing the Hurricanes. The Orange Bowl crowd can be downright hostile — and it was Saturday.

Some Hurricane fans were more than rude; they were abusive. Several dozen took the trouble to come to a section of Notre Dame supporters to yell obscenities. Others just shouted from their seats.

There is a difference between supporting one's team and berating the opponent. Cheers need not reflect the morality of someone in the neighboring section.

Fans of theighting rival aren't always exemplary. The anti-Hurricane T-shirts that appeared before last year's Miami game were classless. Dishing the game as "Catholics vs. Convicts" is not right. Neither are the four-letter replays Miami students and players on both sides have shown a lack of class in this series.

The hatred is so strong that a record crowd of 81,634 packed the Orange Bowl to see the game. There is no love between these teams — or their fans.

Before the game, a tailgating Miami fan called attention to two pig wearing an N.D. cap. The fan said, "Look what we did to your coach. We fried his Notre Dame shirt.

Chris Rings, sports editor of the Miami Hurricane, told The Observer that the Orange Bowl isn't usually so jammed. "No one ever gets this wild for other games. It's just that everyone hates Notre Dame." Before the game, a tailgating Miami fan called attention to two pig wearing an N.D. cap. The fan said, "Look what we did to your coach. We fried his Notre Dame shirt.

Farther down the block, two middle-aged women cussed me out when they saw my Notre Dame shirt. Of course, their children outnumbered ours and their children uttered oaths and more forceful disapprovals.

All game long, a drunken Miami fan went down to field level to yell obscenities at Irish Quarterback Tony Rice. The obviously agitated Canes fan spat forth more than words, on fans from both sides.

The Hurricanes got their so-called revenge. Next year, it's our turn. Fortunately, the series won't resume until after Notre Dame hosts the Hurricanes and their fans on Oct. 20, 1990. While nobody expects N.D. to roll out a red carpet, Irish fans should have the class not to return rudeness with discourtesy.

Miami fans, meanwhile, face a dilemma: The Hurricanes can't win the national championship this season unless Notre Dame beats Colorado in the Orange Bowl. Now that's something to cheer for.

Andrew Young doesn't play up the milestone victories of two black candidates in New York City and Virginia, but he does share one strategy in his quest to become governor of Georgia — he rarely mentions race.

There's little doubt race will be a factor in many voters' minds next summer as they size up young, who is finishing eight years as Atlanta's mayor.

Some pundits already have predicted he will fail in his bid to become the state's first black governor.

Some farmers are still gouging the government by collecting crop subsidies in excess of limits set by Congress, the Agriculture Department's watchdog agency said Tuesday. In one case, the department's Office of Inspector General said, an individual farmer collected about $2.8 million in subsidies, 56 times the $50,000 limit set by law.

Consumers will see 1990 food prices rise at a much slower pace as farmers continue expanding crop production, a senior Agriculture Department economist predicted Tuesday. "The 1990 food outlook calls for larger supplies and lower prices," said James Donald, chairman of the department's World Agricultural Outlook Board. "Record food production, bigger crops and slowing inflation will hold the retail food prices increase to 3 percent to 5 percent in 1990."

Food prices this year are expected to increase 6 percent, the sharpest annual increase since 1981.

A federal commission overestimated by $169 million the savings that the government will realize annually from closing or realigning 15 military bases nationwide, a lawmaker said Tuesday. Rep. James Saxton, R-N.J., said a study by the General Accounting Office found that the shutdown of or realigning 15 bases — including Fort Dix in New Jersey, Chanute Air Force Base in Illinois and the Presidio in California — will result in $453 million in savings instead of the $622 million per year estimated by the commission.

ND to host conference on coping with divorce/death

By MONICA YANT

Coping with personal loss and moving on with life after tragedy are topics for an upcoming weekend conference dealing with death and divorce. The conference, to be held Dec. 1-3 is entitled: "Death, Divorce, and Dismantled Hearths."

Participants will explore grief through group discussion and by relating personal experiences. Professional presenters will facilitate them in dealing with the past and moving on to the future, said Kathleen Sullivan, director of Alumni Continuing Education.

Forty participants have registered for the weekend-long conference, including 6 students. Sullivan said that students can still register by contacting her office. "We wouldn't deny somebody the chance to attend the conference," she said.

"I think the merit of the program is the peer ministry," Sullivan said. She said she sees the goal of the weekend as providing guidance and hope in an atmosphere of community and service.

Sullivan said she encourages students to participate even though the commitment is large. "You have to trust that it's the weekend going to benefit your life," she said. Although people might be apprehensive of a weekend of exploring personal emotions, Sullivan said that the weekend could be "a turning point in their lives."

GRAND is behind the installation of research equipment near Notre Dame which will "record the tracks of cosmic rays with a very high resolution of angle...and trace the paths of muons as well." according to the release.

Poirier said construction of the equipment began about two years ago, and was completed and receiving its first data two weeks ago. He said preliminary results would be used primarily to prove that the machine was working.

Poirier hopes to have the field of about 100 yards square filled with chambers within two years. He predicted that solid conclusions from the data will come one to two years after the full field of equipment is installed.

"I think that this mystery is a really big thing," said Poirier. "that its resolution will have a great impact on astrophysics."

ND receives equipment for study of cosmic rays of star Cygnus X3

By SANDRA WIEGAND

Equipment recently installed north of the University may cause a breakthrough in the study of cosmic rays, according to John Poirier, professor of physics at Notre Dame.

The machinery will collect information about the cosmic rays of the star Cygnus X-3, which is located about 37,000 light years away from earth. Cosmic rays are "rays of high-energy elementary particles which reach the earth from outer space" said a press release about the study.

Scientists believe these rays are gamma rays because they travel in a straight path from the star to the earth, and are not bent by magnetic fields in space, the release said.

According to an article in the September issue of Discover magazine, the magnetic field of Cygnus X-3 "generates a powerful electric field that fires cosmic ray protons into space."

Some protons collide with gas nuclei near the double star, generating gamma rays that shoot straight to earth. The showers point straight to the source, like showers triggered by gamma rays, but they contain a list of muons, like showers triggered by protons, according to the Discover article.

The presence of a great number of muons, evident through recent experimental data, has presented questions about the rays.

"It may mean that the laws of physics operate somewhat differently at very high energies," said Poirier in the press release.

"or there is the possibility that the source of these photons contains an exotic new, uncharged particle we haven't yet discovered."

Poirier's interest in the mystery is a recent obsession. Project GRAND (Gamma Ray Astrophysics at Notre Dame) is behind the installation of research equipment near Notre Dame which will "record the tracks of cosmic rays with a very high resolution of angle...and trace the paths of muons as well." according to the release.

"The equipment consists of "stacked...flat chambers filled with argon gas and a grid of very fine wires."

Poirier said construction of the equipment began about two years ago, and was completed and receiving its first data two weeks ago. He said preliminary results would be used primarily to prove that the machine was working.

Poirier hopes to have the field of about 100 yards square filled with chambers within two years. He predicted that solid conclusions from the data will come one to two years after the full field of equipment is installed.

"I think that this mystery is a really big thing," said Poirier. "that its resolution will have a great impact on astrophysics."

Log reveals fissure in downed Colombian jet

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The pilot's log of a jetliner that crashed with no survivors indicated a three-inch fissure was found in the fuselage three days before the plane exploded in the air, a Bogota newspaper reported.

The 26-year-old Avianca airliner Boeing 727 carried 101 passengers and six crew members when it exploded Monday morning, five minutes after taking off from Bogota on a domestic flight to Cali.

A woman who answered the telephone at Avianca's public relations office refused comment on the El Tiempo report and would not identify herself.

El Tiempo gave no further details, but a spokesman for the paper said policemen had found the log. Scores of police were involved in searching the wreckage Monday.

Col. Edgar Lesmes, assistant director of the Civil Air Authority, said the agency did not have the log and was trying to determine whether it had been found.

"The only thing we have been able to establish is that there was an in-flight explosion for unknown reasons," he said in an interview with the Caracol radio network.

He said investigators have found no trace of explosives or explosive devices in the wreckage.

Col. Jorge Gonzalez, the agency's chief of operations, told a news conference oxygen masks had dropped from the overhead consoles. That is automatic in a case of pressure loss, and would occur if an explosion ripped a hole in the cabin.

Wreckage was spread over six miles, but most was within an area about two acres wide, lying in grassy hills south of Bogota.

A spokesman for the Colombian Pilot Association told The Associated Press on Monday night, "Given the circumstances of the crash, I would say that it was a terrorist attack." An Avianca pilot said the crew probably would have spotted trouble in advance if mechanical failure had caused the accident.

Both pilots asked to remain anonymous so their jobs would not be put in jeopardy.

On Monday, the Civil Aviation Authority said no problems had been reported by the plane's crew.

Lesmes said a flight recorder of cockpit conversation was found, but another instrument recording flight data still was missing.

"The pilot's log has been placed on the agenda," Krenz told West Germany's ARD-TV network in insisting on the continued existence of two sovereign, independent German states.

There are fears among Europeans in the East and the West about the political and economic power of a reunified Germany with 80 million people.

Kohl, in a speech to Parliament, sought to allay those fears, saying, "The Germans ... will be a dividend for a Europe that is coming together, and never again a threat.

The United States favors reunification, and State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler reiterated that position in Washington on Tuesday.

The Soviet Union has said the idea is "dangerous and unrealistic.

Kohl said he had no timetable in mind to carry out his ideas and made it clear it could take years to form a federation. He is expected to discuss his proposals with East German leaders at a summit next month.

East German government spokesman Wolfgang Meyer said Kohl's plan in general provided "interesting starting points for negotiations."

But writer Stefan Heym and a number of other East German artists, clerics and intellectuals rejected reunification, saying they opposed their country "being pocketed" by West Germany.

The group said it would start a petition drive in support of its appeal.

"A unity of Germany isn't on the agenda," Krenz told West Germany's ARD-TV network in insisting on the continued existence of two sovereign, independent German states.

The chancellor proposed creation of a federal state in which the two states, in Germany and in East Germany, would have a common "federal parliament" and a "federal council.

Those bodies would be elected every four years on the basis of proportional representation.

In the past, the Social Democrats have cautioned against hastening toward German reunification; some in the leftist party have flatly opposed it.

"We are now standing at the start of a new period in European and German history, a period that points beyond the status quo or the hitherto political structures in Europe," Kohl told Parliament.

He are prepared ... to develop confederative structures between the two states in Germany in order to create a federal state in Germany. A federal state of independent nations must be "bedded in the pan-European process and in East-West relations. The future structure of Germany must fit into the whole architecture of Europe at a whole.

He said his proposal could only be carried out if East Germany holds free elections, as it has promised.

The chancellor proposed creation of joint governmental and parliamentary committees for "permanent consultation" between the two Germanys.

He also suggested such committees to deal with economic, environmental, cultural and scientific matters, and he said they could be set up soon after free elections in East Germany have been held.

Kohl said West Germany is prepared to offer "concrete assistance" to embattled East Germany.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A crane tipped over and plunged from the 16th to the 26th floors of a building under construction Tuesday, flattening a school van, crushing several students and bystanders and smashing into an office building across the street.

At least five people were killed, 21 injured and five missing, authorities said.

Concrete and twisted steel rained on one of the busiest intersections in the financial district.

There were conflicting statements on what happened before the crane fell. Fire Chief Fred Pestel said it was hoisting steel beams, but the general contractor said the crane was being repositioned from the 16th to the 26th floors.

“It felt like an earthquake,” said Merrill Lynch Vice President Joe McLaughlin, who was in the damaged office building. “I looked out and saw two bodies. One construction worker’s boots were sticking up through the roof.”

A piece of the crane at least three stories long dangled from the side of the building under construction two hours after the 8:30 a.m. accident. Police roped off the area and ambulances rushed in and out.

The street was littered with flattened cars and a mangled motorcycle. Gas was cut off to the damaged 21-story office building for fear of an explosion.

“The wreckage looks absolutely incredible — steel beams look like pickup sticks,” said one of Mayor Angela Alioto’s officials, who was in a van on the street.

Aldo said the workers were four construction workers, all from the Seattle area, and the woman driving the school van, operated by Laidlaw Transit Inc.

“It’s pretty rough,” said Laidlaw Senior Vice President Howard Wallack. “They (the employees) are pretty upset, and we are arranging a chaplain and psychologist to go over to our offices.”

The fire chief said five people were listed as missing in the twisted steel and broken concrete.

The crane, model No. SN355 manufactured by American Pacific of Milwood, N.Y., had an 18-ton capacity.

The 16th story of the project, which began in January, was not cited for safety violations, the company said.

Debris rained down on a taxi driven by Issa Massarweh, who had two passengers at the time.

The cab’s back window was smashed.

“It don’t know where my passengers are," he said. "I threw myself under the dashboard." He told his passengers to duck and when he next looked, they had left. He was unhurt.

Don Trabert, a stockbroker, said stockbroker.

Three hospitals reported receiving 21 victims, four in serious condition. Most of the rest had minor injuries.

Swinson & Wallberg Co. of San Francisco, the general contractor on the job, said the crane was being repositioned from the 16th story to the 20th story, the second such repositioning of the project.

Debris rained down on a taxi driven by Issa Massarweh, who had two passengers at the time.

Dear Editor:

This is in response to Mr. Bruner’s article “Socialism in the States: Leaving People Alone.” Mr. Bruner has been clearly proved to be an utter failure. As I have lived under a Marxist-Leninist government in Ethiopia for six long years, I know how communism is an inhuman and absurd communist rule. However, I would not just write off the concept of socialism; for me, it means “wellfare for all” or “everyone matters.”

The Communists are the enemies of mankind. Their word “socialism” is a great facade. All people are called “socialists” in this rhetoric that we have grown aversive to this meaningful notion. Buddha, Jesus and Gandhi were all real socialists.

I would strongly disagree with Mr. Bruner over his very high enthusiasm about Capitalism. Freedom and liberty, the basic tenets of mankind, and whenever they are denied or threatened, humanity has struggled to attain and preserve them. The human soul-force which was instrumental in that struggle and success, not any political or economic ideology. A wonderful example is the recent spontaneous happenings in East Germany.

If democratic capitalism has given all the freedom and liberty to the people, what is the reason why 35 million U.S. citizens are poor, why 58 percent of the people in this country feel powerless and alienated, why the U.S. citizens cry for peace in Central and Latin America has always gone ignored by the government. I hear that 83 percent of the rich and resources of this country are enjoyed by 10 percent of the population and that the remaining 90 percent of Americans “democratically” share the 17 percent left over. The rich get richer, and the poor get poorer, from this freedom and liberty in democratic capitalism.

In my view, both communism and capitalism are equally bad. There is a certain amount of centralization and competition is kept healthy. A certain amount of centralization is absolutely needed. Absorbing the best elements of both communism and capitalism, we strike a healthy compromise in the form of a mixed-economy. However, this experience has proved to be a success in India, despite shortcomings like an enormous population, underdevelopment, the huge diversity of people,itterarchy, a lack of resources, corrupt politicians, an inefficient bureaucracy, etc.

Our world is entering a fantastic phase of change. The age-old evils like communism, colonialism, racism and the like are fast giving way to reason, justice, truth and soul-force. Capitalism has to follow suit.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

There are important cases in which the difference between half a heart and a whole heart makes just the difference between signal defeat and a splendid victory.

Surviving Cranks Creek

‘Our group did not move mountains, but we were introduced to the problems which face the Appalachians daily.’

ELIZABETH A. WARD

Are you sure you can handle it?

"You might not take a shower for a week..."

"Yuh?"?

These were some of the reactions of many of my fellow students when they heard about my October break plans. Between the USG game and the Pil game, I worked for a week in Appalachia.

My friends were surprised, shocked, and most demanded pictures—they wanted proof of my manual work experience. The fact is, everyone thought of me as an atypical participant for service at the Cranks Creek Survival Center in Harlem, Kentucky. Even I thought my plans were a bit out of my character. However, upon my return, I decided that every single individual can be a typical participant in the Appalachia program. All you need is the drive to give service a try.

Our week began at 7:30 a.m.

Sunday, October 25. All the groups loaded into their custom-designed vans that had been rented from Banney Ford Honda. My group stood at the Center for Social Concerns staring at a rusted, old, light blue van covered with snow and dripping with ice. "The Big Blue Bomber," as we affectionately nicknamed her, was ours for the week, though no one thought she would last. Anyway, we claimed her, we loaded her up, and she led us straight to Cranks Creek.

The quintessential element, which created the positive Appalachian experience was our group as a whole. We began getting to know each other in the airplane and continued throughout the week. The group consisted of sixteen seniors, one junior, and three sophomores, but we all treated each other as equals. No single individual did all of the cooking and cleaning. We worked as a team and bonded as one unit.

The highlights of the week included the Fundraising Church revival, our dance, the Thursday night bonfire (complete with late night snipe hunt), the ceremonial raising of the shelter, the completion of the white picket fence, and the repainting of Opel’s house from dingy grey to white with a pink trim.

Monday night we were invited to attend religious services at the nearby church. Wednesday night we found the Drillwood, a local establishment, which we enjoyed with our dance. And finally, on Thursday night our bonding experience solidified around the campfire while we told riddles and ate s’mores.

Despite all the social activity, we did find time to work. The completion of our projects proved to be the most memorable events. Unfortunately we did not have enough time or skill to rebuild the bridge, to fill the survival center, but we did clean up the center’s yard, paint their barn, find their shelves, and build them a fence. In addition, we helped the community by sorting clothes and repainting a local resident’s home.

Thinking back on the week I spent in Appalachia I would not hesitate to say that it was one of the most rewarding weeks of my life. Our group did not move mountains, but we were introduced to the problems which face the Appalachians daily. Waste disposal, contaminated water, and a lack of education appeared to be the top three problems facing the people. An awareness of these problems and our small contributions will provide resolutions to this ongoing crisis, but we cannot get frustrated. If we do, no resolutions, no matter how small, will take place.

I sat in the front seat of Big Blue on the way back to Notre Dame with a good friend of mine. He and I were discussing the week and we almost agreed that the University should make a service project mandatory for all undergraduates. But thinking over, we decided that forcing an individual to do work for his or her community is wrong. The desire to serve comes purely from the individual. Obviously, my desire shocked the people I knew. Despite everyone’s apprehensions, including my own, the week proved to be rewarding because of our accomplishments and because of the people in my group. The two combined to make me feel truly that in Appalachia a very positive experience and one which would encourage every student to participate in at least once before graduating.

Do’s and don’ts for the airborne passenger

Well, another vacation has come and gone, and for many of us, this means that we once again were allowed to experience the joy of flight. Commercial aviation is truly one of the wonders of our modern age. But it’s also an Ian Mitchell easy target for ridicule and denigration, so let’s not waste any time. Clip ‘n’ Save for your next visit to the friendly skies -- Lion Taming’s guide to airline flights:

Things you don’t want to hear from the cockpit:
2) Shortly after takeoff, the pilot comes on the PA system, screams "Whooee, let’s see what this baby can do!" and proceeds to take the plane into a series of barrel rolls.
3) "Ladies and Gentlemen, this plane’s gonna land!"
4) "Uh, well, good evening ladies and gentlemen, this is your captain speaking. Has anyone on board the aircraft flown this route before, and if so, do you remember which way we turn after the third big mountain?"
5) "Hey, what do you say we throw out the itinerary and take this baby to Bermuda?"
6) "Ladies and Gentlemen, this is your first officer speaking. Umm... by the way, has anyone seen the captain?"
7) "All right everybody, outta your seat. It’s poll time!"
8) "Although we don’t have an infight movie for your enjoyment, the co-pilot and I would like to perform a few musical numbers from the world of hat-core western singing, along, all..."

Things to say after pushing the call button:
1) "I just testing."
2) "Hi, I’ll be your passenger in the main cabin today, and if there’s anything I need during the flight, I won’t hesitate to call you on.
3) Pretend not to understand the safety instructions: "Excuse me, but you were going a little too fast for me just now. Do I insert the silver buckle into the metal tongue or is it the other way around?"

‘Clip ’n’ Save for your next visit to the friendly skies..."

4) Whatever you say, push the call button early and often; that’s what it’s there for, right?

More fun things to do:
During the boarding process, when they announce the pre-board for children, senior citizens, and all those passengers needing a little extra time boarding the aircraft, get up, run to the door and explain in a loud voice that you are extremely stupid and need the extra time to find your seat. Once you get on board the aircraft, you get to play the mystery game ‘who am I sitting next to?’ Did you lock out and find the macawoman of your dreams? Or wait a minute, isn’t that your seat next to the inebriated, chain-smoking, fat woman with the screaming baby?

Now, there are two kinds of people in the world; those who enjoy talking for several hours non-stop to total strangers on the airplane and those who are sane. If you’re seated next to those who hate conversation, try an icebreaker like ‘You’re probably wondering about my life story...’ or ‘Man, I didn’t think that cop would ever stop blinding...’ To silence those who would otherwise be yammering away for hours, start a conversation by politely asking ‘Mind if I drool?’ or, better yet, try flapping your arms wildly during takeoff and, when asked, explain that you’re just helping the pilot.

The fun doesn’t stop there, of course. You can memorize the safety announcements and do them in rap form, make fun of the food, or even surf up and down the aisle during takeoffs and landings by removing your shoes and using two of those plastic-coated safety cards as skis. (According to a friend of mine, people actually did this aboard the press plane during last year’s presidential campaign. I have a feeling it wouldn’t go over too well on the average flight.)

In reality, I’m sure that flying isn’t really that boring or that bad; its just that I fly a lot of discount airlines. You know, the kind that have slogans like: ‘just like a bus... but with wings!’

Zendejas' remarks earlier that he had known of the bounties before the game. "My God, 45 minutes before the game, Jimmy Johnson ran halfway across the field to say hello to me," Braman said.

"And that's why I found it so difficult to believe that he knew this bounty non-secum the night before.

"If he knew the night before, I believe that he would've said something to me and not been so effusively warm with Shudy before the game."

Johnson, meanwhile, said he doesn't want his team to retaliate in the next meeting between the teams. "I would discourage anything that would be a waste of time or that was disruptive," Johnson said.

But owner Jerry Jones said by telephone on Tuesday that he was calling NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue.

"It's a good opportunity for the new commish to make a statement, an example," Jones said. "I agree with Jimmy that there's a 50-50 chance anything will come of it. It's something that is difficult to pin down."

Zendejas reveals bounty-hunting Eagles to NFL officials

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dallas kicker Luis Zendejas has given the NFL the numerous Philadelphia players who told him that Eagles coach Buddy Ryan put a bounty on him and two other Dallas players.

Zendejas said he gave security officials the names of "four or five" players.

He said they warned him before the Thanksgiving Day game and admitted afterward that Ryan planned to reward anyone who could kick off returner Troy Aikman or punter Mike Saxon out of the game. Zendejas said he was told that the Eagles' Walsh, the league's director of security, would question the player.

Dallas running back Junior Tautaleta, like Zendejas a former Eagle, said he suspected security people about allegations that the Eagles had placed bounties on other players during his years with the team from 1986 to 1990.

Meanwhile, Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said he wasn't going to do something that's not going to help us. We're going to wait and see what develops." Langston, whom the Eagles acquired from Seattle for three young pitchers on May 25, is also a free agent. Langston, 12-9 with the Expos, was born in San Diego and has expressed a desire to play in California.

He made $1.3 million in 1989. Montreal reportedly offered Langston a three-year contract around $9 million, but later withdrew.

What the Expos have left of their starting rotation is Dennis Martinez and Kevin Gross. Zone Smith is expected to compete for the starters' spots.

Zendejas' early first this month by the Expos and signed by Dallas, was in fact, hit by rookie linebacker Jessie Small after a kickoff and dazed. Aikman also hit after the whistle on a Dallas offside, precipitating a skirmish.

Small has denied going after Zendejas to collect a bounty.

No. 8 Illini beat Rebels; Temple edges Penn

Oxford, Miss. (AP) – Kendall Gill scored 23 points and Marcus Liberty added 16 to lead No. 8 Illinois to an 83-72 victory over Mississippi Tuesday night.

After a close opening 15 minutes, the Fighting Illini went on a 12-2 run to take a 41-32 half-time lead. Illinois, playing its season opener, never trailed in the second half and led by as much as 20 points.

Freshman forward Hakim Taylor paced the Rebels with 23 points and senior Gerald Glass added 20 for Mississippi, which fell to 0-2 after a lackluster effort of 8-49 to Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Illinois, the first Big 10 Conference school to ever play at the Oxford campus, took the lead for good, 31-30, in Liberty's layup with 4:16 to go in the first half.

Temple 55, Penn 54

Mark Macar scored 21 points and 7-foot sophomore Donald Hodge scored all 11 of his points in the second half as 16th-ranked and heavily favored Temple squeaked by city rival Pennsylvania 55-54 Tuesday night.

The Owls did not lead by more than five in the second half until reaching 47-42 on a three-point shot by Mk Alipour with 11:57 to play.

Temple, in their season opener, went ahead 35-30 in the first half and had their biggest lead of the game, 47-27, midway through the second half. Scott then scored eight points in a 22-9 spurt that enabled the Yellow Jackets to open up a 48-35 halftime lead.

Johnny McNeill came off the bench to hit a pair of free throws that started Tech on a 20-5 run and the Yellow Jackets took control of the game.

Oklahoma St. 84, North Texas 66

Boise Jefferies scored 21 points as 23rd ranked Oklahoma State, playing without leading scorer Richard Dumas, opened its season with a 94-66 victory over the University of North Texas on Tuesday night.

Dumas is serving a one-game suspension because he missed a team curfew. Bryan Houston scored 17 points and Corey Williams and Robby Martin added 16 each for the Cowboys.

The Eagles also were minus a key part of their offense — 6-8 255-pound center Ronnie Morlan.

Coaches falling like flies: Claiborne resigns, Morton fired

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jerry Claiborne, who was 41-46-1 in eight years as head coach of Kentucky, began his head coaching career at Virginia Tech in 1961. He was 41-39-2 in 10 years and took the Hokies to the Liberty Bowl in 1966 and 1968.

Following a one-year stint as an assistant coach at Colorado under Eddie Crowder in 1971, Claiborne took the top job at Maryland. In 10 seasons with the Terrapins, he compiled a 77-37-3 record while coached seven bowl appearances.

However, Kentucky had fallen on hard times since never winning more than five games until getting 6-5 this season. Still, Kentucky led the league in Academic All-Southeastern Conference selections under Claiborne with 68, and the Wildcats won the prestigious CFA Academic Achievement Award last year for graduating 90 percent of its seniors.

Don Morton, who managed only six victories in his three seasons, was fired Tuesday as the head football coach at the University of Wisconsin.

The school's Athletic Board voted 10-0 with one abstention to remove Morton. UW Chancellor Donna Shalala accepted the board's recommendation in fire Morton and said the school would exercise the reassignment clause in his contract.

Morton has two years remaining on his five-year contract. Shalala said the decision to fire Morton was not based solely on his 6-27 record over the past three years. An ad hoc committee formed to evaluate the football program reported that the Badgers, under Morton, had not made the necessary progress to become a winner.

"Our primary responsibility is to the student athletes. We believe they deserve the best coaching they can get. It is possible to mount a competitive team while playing within the rules. We have demonstrated that in other sports," said Shalala.

The judgment is that football has not made sufficient progress in the past three years in establishing a solid base and moving toward a competitive position," she said. "The win-loss record was not the deciding factor."

Wisconsin's athletic department faces a multi-million dollar budget deficit brought on, in part, by declining attendance at football games.

The Badgers averaged only 17,124 in their 77,000-seat stadium this season. That's the lowest since 1942.

Earlier this month, Athletic Director Apte Spontberg was forced to resign, effective in May.

Morton said he should be given another year as coach because the Badgers are ready to turn the corner. He says hiring a new coach would only shake the stability of the program even more.

"Whenever you make a change, you're starting over," he said.

Campbell also was head coach of the Falcons from 1974-1976 and coached the Philadelphia Eagles from 1983-85.

New England Patriots' owner Victor Kiam said Tuesday he plans to extend coach Raymond Berry's contract despite the team's 4-8 record and the team's worst start since 1981.

"Berry is a very good coach and he's staying," Kiam told Associated Press Sports Editors at their Northeast regional meeting. "I have every intention of extending Raymond Berry's contract."

The Patriots face their first season since 1982 without selling out a single home game. The Patriots have filled Sullivan Stadium to less than 85 percent of its capacity this year.

STUDENT UNION BOARD
Irish dominate Dons in opener 84-64 JACC win avenges last season's upset.

By STEVE MEGARGEE Associate Sports Editor

For the Notre Dame men's basketball team, Tuesday night's season-opening 84-64 victory over San Francisco looked suspiciously familiar to an intraquad scrimmage.

First, the "Green" team of starters Joe Fredrick, Jamere Jackson, Scott Paddock, Keith Robinson and Tim Singleton played the visiting Dons to a 17-17 tie for the opening six minutes of the game before giving way to the "White" team.

"We were playing horribly and had to get it going," Fredrick said of the starters' early performance. "We took a breather and realized we hadn't done anything. We knew we had to go back and make a run."

The "White" team, which consists of reserves Elmer Bennett, Kevin Ellery, Daimon Sweet, Keith Towar and Monty Williams played the next 29 minutes and gave the Irish a 29-25 lead with 6:35 left in the half.

That made it time for a rested green team to return, and the starters put the game away by halftime. Just as Fredrick had hoped, the Green Mountain men dominated the second half to the final 20 minutes.

"I have confidence in both units, and they both did a good job," said Irish coach Digger Phelps, who improved his record in season openers to 14-5. "I just didn't see a chance in each other because they go up against each other every day."

"I want the guys to run. I told the guys not to rest. I want them to bust it for six minutes, then we'll get other guys to bust it for six minutes."

Robinson scored a career-high 26 points and pulled down six rebounds to pace the Irish to an 84-64 victory over the Dons. More impressively, he hit 10-of-11 field goals and 6-of-7 free throws.

"He's a very quick and strong guy inside," said San Francisco coach Jim Brownell. "He's greatly improved. We didn't have a big, strong, agile guy like him inside to match up with." Jeff Van Gundy and LaPhonso Ellis ineligible for at least the first six games, Phelps convinced someone up front would need to turn in better than average performance.

"I dominate one against San Francisco. "I felt like it was going to be a physical game," Robinson said. "I thought they were going to push me around. I had to move to get open. The players were going to be big and low and it just worked out well."

Robinson was determined to start the season on a positive note. He scored just six points on 3-of-6 shooting in the first 17 minutes against Israel in Notre Dame's lone exhibition contest. He thought 10-of-11 shooting in the game against the Dons was a game against Israel. Robinson said Robinson turned in some plays that might have seemed out of place in previous years.

Last season, Notre Dame men's basketball coach Digger Phelps took note of his star's ineligibility and knew someone up front would need to turn in better than average performance.

"I scored a career-high 26 points and pulled down six rebounds to pace the Irish to an 84-64 victory over the Dons. More impressively, he hit 10-of-11 field goals and 6-of-7 free throws.

Robinson turns around and plays basketball Notre Dame always has had the reputation of being a thorn on Alabama's side. In his legendary coaching career, Paul "Bear" Bryant only played and started in two games against Keith Robinson to his "All Invisible Team" last month. The points and the rebounds on a consistent basis, but nobody seemed to notice.

In Notre Dame's season-opener Tuesday night against San Francisco, Robinson continued the play as hard as you can cause you know five more people will be ready to come in," said center Keith Towar, who scored four points. "It helped us play more as a unit because the five of us had been playing together in practice. I think the crowd liked it too."
