Young women encouraged to run for office

Three-time Congresswoman and former vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro delivers her address to Notre Dame's women as the keynote speaker at the University's annual Women's Conference on Tuesday.

Ferraro said that women must be encouraged to run for office, both for themselves and for the good of their own communities.

“I believe that the best way to break down prejudice is through the example of leaders who run for office and win,” she said.

The conference was held on the campus of Notre Dame, a Catholic university located in South Bend, Indiana.

At University Counseling Center, Rita Donley refers to her clients as survivors, not victims of rape.

“They were victimized, but they survived,” said Donley.

Donley, who counsels rape survivors, said that the girls she works with are survivors, not victims.

Conference will focus on campus racism

By DAVID ZIRINGER
News Writer

In an attempt to chip away at campus racism, the University announced that it will present a conference on “Implementing Cultural Diversity in the Curriculum” next semester.

The goal of the conference is to encourage and aid faculty members to incorporate minority issues and literature into their courses.

Organizers said that offering students greater exposure to minority literature will heighten cultural awareness on campus and should give students a more balanced perspective in their studies.

“The best way to break down prejudice is through what goes on in the intellectual lives of our students,” according to Father Oliver Williams, associate provost, who submitted the grant application for the conference.

The conference will focus on the curriculum of the Freshmen Writing and Seminar Program and the College of Arts and Letters Sophomore Core Course. Thus, all freshmen and most sophomores will be affected by curriculum changes.

However, Erskine Peterson, conference director and professor of English, hopes “that people from all parts of the University will have interest — that we at least have some representation” from all the disciplines.

The conference hopes to attract at least fifty faculty members, who will be paid a stipend of approximately $1,000 each, according to the proposal budget.

During the conference, speakers will provide an overview of racism and will offer suggestions as to how faculty can revise their syllabi. Smaller group discussions in the afternoon will "help the teachers understand the litera-"...

However, Peterson said that "we want more than talk," according to Peterson. He said teachers will be asked...

Where is the Notre Dame Family now?

Now that all those idiots have stopped asking you how your summer was, let me tell you about some- one else's summer. Actually, let me tell you a story... Once upon a time there was a cold, uncaring, conglomerate under the guise of a national Catholic university. This conglomerate held many, including vast amounts of land, a football team with a television contract, and various investments in South Africa.

It could also somehow persuade very rich men to donate portions of their fortunes to its own treasuries. In fact, the conglomerate was so wealthy that some of its buildings were covered with gold?

One day the conglomerate hired an aged ma pro to work in its library. On the man's first day of work, while on a tour of the library and before he had clocked in or signed any legally binding forms, he had a heart attack. Sadly, despite that he was rushed to the hospital, the aged ma did several days later.

Luckily for the conglomerate, though, the aged ma was never an official conglomerate employee. He was only going to work part time, anyway. And besides, it figured, making sure to mention that the man never came an official employee in any way.

But why, you ask, should the conglomerate care about this man who nearly died on its property? Should it have to care for its other employees and its relations spokesmen, the conglomerate says under its guise of a --------­

Former President Ronald Reagan on Wednesday discussed changes in the Soviet Union and the Persian Gulf with Italian Premier Francesco Cossiga. Cossiga's spokesman, Ludovico Ortona, said Reagan received a "very friendly, very warm" greeting from Cossiga. "It was a very useful and important occasion for both to exchange views and ideas on the changes in Europe, the changes in the Soviet Union," Ortona said. At the end of a trip that included several days in the Soviet Union. Ortona said Reagan had been "very impressed by the greater liberty that he found in the (Soviet Union), and the growing commitment to a free market."

 Authorities in a southern Chinese city executed 65 criminals, including murderers, rapists, smugglers and "hooligans" in one of China's largest mass executions, an official report said. The executions on Tuesday in Guangzhou, or Canton, comprised the largest such occurrence since a nationwide campaign against crime began in China a year ago. They followed the executions of nine people in Shanghai for murder, theft and pimping last week. According to a report in Tuesday's editions of the Yanzheng Evening News, published in Guangzhou, 65 "criminals" were executed in 12 areas of the city. The crimes included murder, rape, gun smuggling, hooliganism and "major crimes," which often means theft, extortion or burglary.

Ferraro delivers press conference on deficit

By MONICA YANT
Associate News Editor

The present policies of the Republican Party may be just what it takes to put a Democrat in the White House, according to Geraldine Ferraro. "I could be facetious and say that the Republican Party is doing it nicely for us," Ferraro said of Republican budget, environmental and education policies which she feels are putting the Republican Party just in the right position to win. "We have to do something about reducing the increases in defense spending that we're passing, year after year," she said at a press conference yesterday. Cuts in social programs and taxes, which led to less revenue for the government, and increased spending, said Ferraro, are the key factors of her defeat yesterday. The former Congresswoman criticized capital gains tax cuts. "We need to look at a reasonable, balanced budget numbers escalate to that," she said. "We can address the problems of middle class Americans who cannot buy homes." Although Ferraro no longer holds public office, she is still active in the political arena. However, the New York Democrat said she has no aspirations for a spot in the Oval Office. Senator or Governors are "the universe from which candidates are usually chosen," she said. Ferraro mentioned New York Governor Mario Cuomo as a possible candidate for 1992. "I think he could point out to the American people exactly where the untruths have been," she said. She also speculated that Senators Bruce Babbitt, Bill Bradley and Sam Nunn could consider running in '92. Ferraro said that the timing was the key factor of her defeat in 1984 because she was an incumbent president who had succeeded in getting inflation down, interest rates down...people liked him. "It was a bad time," she said, "this time is different." Anadon said. "It can teach people to realize the equality of the sexes." It was at the University that Juárez said that she learned her freedom. She grew up under the Franco regime in Spain. "Franco and my father ruled my life," she said. "As a girl, I did not know anything else." At the public grammar school, children learned the conservative ideals of the Franco regime and the Roman Catholic Church, the only religion in Spain, said Juárez. At home, she helped her mother take care of the new baby, and there were always new babies, she said. "When I got older, I asked my father why he didn't pay me for working in the house," Juárez said. "He got very angry and slapped me. I remember that." Anadon said. "It was a hard time," she said, "this time is different." Changes are occurring in Spain at a rapid pace today, said Juárez. However, a woman still can't sell her property without her husband's consent. "I am still learning to be independent," Juárez said. "Women have to learn to be independent from inside." Independence would seem to come easily to the women of Uruguay. Juárez said. They have had laws of equality since the early 1800s. "Ironically, these laws bound women even more to the status quo," Olivera-Williams said. "Because we didn't have to fight for these rights, we weren't aware of ourselves as a group." Although the rights existed for women to participate equally in education and the state, women were criticized for using them, she said. It is only recently that things have begun to change for the better, she said. "Here you have a lot of opportunities," Olivera-Williams said. "However, I am surprised that although most of my students are the same...only my husband's consent, are men."

Sex Offense Services helps victims traumatized by date rape

By PETER LOFTUS
Assistant News Editor

"You can't be a little bit raped.

The above statement may sound a bit strange, but for Laurel Eslinger, coordinator of Sex Offense Services (SOS), it carries an important message. Eslinger dispelled the myth that an "acquaintance rape" is less of a rape than rape by a stranger, although a different situation carries an important message.

"It's often more traumatic," said Eslinger, for a woman to be raped by someone she knows rather than by a stranger. Date rape pressures many psychological and physical difficulties upon the victim. Eslinger cited the following:

• The victim's sense of trust is thwarted. Rapes often occur on the second or third date, after the woman feels somewhat secure with the man.

• Date rapes are often more violent than stranger rapes. Eslinger mentioned that one University student, a date rape victim, admitted severe physical beating during her rape.

• The victim feels her life is in danger. During most rapes, the victim actually thinks the rapist is going to kill her. This fear only adds to the other problems that are peculiar to date rape.

• Society views date rape in a different light. Many people think that date rape is not really rape, or simply a lesser "degree" of rape, said Eslinger.

On a college campus such as ND, the silence surrounding date rape can help it exist, said Eslinger.

"The administration needs to accept this (date rape) is a problem," she said. The administration considers rape to be raped by a stranger, not by an ND student, she added.

Not only is there silence from the administration, but the victims are often silent about date rape. Some do not report the incident to the Office of Student Affairs, according to Eslinger. In some cases, SOS is the only organization that knows about a campus rape.

One reason for the victim's silence, said Eslinger, is fear of publicity of the case. Alcohol plays a role in date rapes, she said. However, alcohol cannot be used as an excuse for what happened. If either the rapist or the victim, or both, is intoxicated, it makes no difference, she said, in terms of who should be held accountable.

"The rapist should always be held accountable," Eslinger said.

SOS, located in South Bend's Madison Center, provides help to victims of all sexual offenses. Eslinger said that ND and Saint Mary's students who were victims of rape have received help from SOS.

Eslinger discussed not only date rape, but rape in general and an overall sketch of the typical rapist.

She stressed that rape is an act of violence, not a sexual act. Sex is merely the weapon of a violent crime. The rapist motivated by "sadism, anger, and a desire for power," she said.

Many rapists already have willing sexual partners, so sex is not the motivation for rape.

Rapists often have a problem with self-esteem and feel as a way to control. By humiliating the victim, the rapist will have shown his power.

"We have been sexually victimized ourselves as children," according to Eslinger.

Eslinger noted that only one in 20 women knows her rapist. She gave the following reasons for underreporting of rape:

• The way society looks at rape. In many cases the victim is blamed for what happened. People think that because the woman was dressed or acted in a certain way, she is responsible for what happened. Fearing the judgmental attitude coming from this "mindset," said Eslinger, the victim does not report the rape.

• Some victims do not identify rape as rape. "They say, 'Well, you know how men are,' and accept what happened because that's the way things are," Eslinger said.

Society promotes the existence of violence against women, according to Eslinger.

"The media does a wonderful job" in promoting the existence of rape, said Eslinger. "Slasher movies," like "Dressed to Kill" or "Silence of the Lambs," often portray women as victims of violence, and this "de-sensitizes" society to the violence. Pornography has become very violent, according to Eslinger.

Eslinger does not believe in censorship of the media, but she wishes that movies would not contain so much violence directed against women.

As long as the woman is blamed for it, rape will continue to be a problem. When women are often held accountable, many rapists realize that they can get away with rape.

"We live in a patriarchal society," she said.

Acquaintance rape defined

By PETER LOFTUS
Assistant News Editor

No distinction is made between rape by a stranger and a so-called "acquaintance rape," according to the Indiana Criminal Code for 1989.

Section 35-42-4-1, titled "Rape," reads:

"A person who knowingly or intentionally has sexual intercourse with a member of the opposite sex commits a rape, a class B felony when:

• The other person is compelled by force or imminent threat of force;

• The other person is unaware that the sexual intercourse is occurring;

• The other person is so mentally disabled or deficient that consent to sexual intercourse cannot be given."

However, the offense is a class A felony if it is committed by using or threatening the use of deadly force, if it is committed with armed with a deadly weapon or if it results in serious bodily injury to a person other than a defendant, according to the code.

According to section 35-50-2-4, a class A felony, carries with it a term of imprisonment of 30 years, with a maximum of 20 additional years for mitigating circumstances, and not more than 10 years for mitigating circumstances and not more than 4 years for aggravating circumstances.

A person who threatens or uses deadly force or seriously injures his or her victim during a rape, then, faces up to 50 years in prison, and a fine of up to $10,000.

Class B felonies, according to section 35-50-2-5, carry terms of imprisonment of two years with a maximum of 10 additional years for aggravating circumstances and not more than 4 years for mitigating circumstances. The maximum fine for a class B felony also may not exceed $10,000.

society," said Eslinger. Men see rape as a macho act. It is emphasized in our society’s "score" often and early in a young man’s life, she said.

Regarding the news media, Eslinger said it has the obligation to provide "all information" about the crime of rape. It must emphasize that rape is not the victim’s fault.

As for printing names of victims in newspapers, Eslinger said that until the victim can be fully assured that she will not be further traumatized, then it is the "ethical obligation" of the media not to print or air names of rape victims.

She noted that victims often say they were raped twice — once by the rapist, and a second time by the "system" — the news media and judicial system.

If there comes a time when victims can be assured that they will not be raped again by the system, then perhaps printing names will "show that victims are people," and not objects, said Eslinger. She added that rapists see their victims only as objects.

Education is the most important way to help alleviate the problem of rape in our society. Children must be informed of the problem of rape at a young age.

SOS has a large "prevention component," said Eslinger, that attempts to make contact with young children. Volunteers are sent out to area elementary and secondary schools to provide useful information to students. Many ND and Saint Mary’s students are part of these prevention programs. It is easier for students to relate to people closer to their age, thus they will get more out of the prevention programs.

"The kids love it," said Eslinger.

The prevention programs include play performances and presentations of situations that students may find themselves in. Students are forced to think about what they would do in certain difficult situations.

SOS is trying to reach children at an earlier age, to "nip the problem in the bud," as Eslinger put it. Sometimes fathers give the wrong messages to their children, she noted.

All kinds of sex offenses are addressed in the prevention programs, Eslinger said, not just rape. Because many rapists were victims of sexual abuse as children, one of the goals of the prevention programs is to teach children how to avoid sexual abuse.

SOS provides help to victims of sexual offenses and their families. It specializes in crisis intervention, prevention, treatment, and training of those come in contact with rape victims through their occupations, such as nurses and police officers.

The center was formed in 1974, at a time when rape was "coming out of the closet." It was initially a grass-roots organization that received no funding and relied entirely on volunteers. In the late 1970s, it hired a paid coordinator and that "facilitated growth" of the center, according to Eslinger.

There is now a paid staff of two — Eslinger and a co-worker — and a volunteer staff of 60, many of whom are ND and Saint Mary’s students. The volunteers are called "advocates," and they are employed to counsel sex offense victims who call the center, appear at the center in person or are staying in nearby hospitals. Service is provided to sex offense victims 24 hours a day.

"We’re very appreciative of the volunteers from Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s," Eslinger said. Currently, SOS is looking for more volunteers, and if anyone is interested, Eslinger may be reached at her office at 234-0061.

SOS station for 1990:
• 288 victims of sex offenses received help from SOS.
• 30 were under age 5.
• 102 were between 16 and 30.
• 128 were victims of rape.
• 13 were victims of attempted rape.

Occasionally, sex offenders call SOS. They are referred to the appropriate offender-focused service facilities. SOS is a victim-focused center.

POW/MIA’s honored

A ritual retreat ceremony commemorating POW’s and MIA’s from all wars will highlight National POW/MIA week at Notre Dame.

On Friday, the Arnold Air Society of the Notre Dame Air Force ROTC will host a reception and formal retreat ceremony in honor of POW/MIA week. The reception, at 3 p.m. in the Air Force Cadet Lounge of the Pasquerilla Center, will welcome approximately fifty former POW’s from the South Bend area along with their families.

In addition, a representative from the governor’s office, Carmen Wilson, will be on hand to present a proclamation declaring Friday “Indiana POW and MIA Recognition Day.” Wilson, the Deputy Director of Veteran Affairs for Indiana, will present a proclamation coinciding with George Bush’s declaration of September 15-21 as National POW/MIA week.

South Bend Mayor and Notre Dame graduate, Joe Korna, a former Vietnam POW, will also address the group.

At 4:30 p.m., the group will move to the main flagpole on the South Quad to begin the formal retreat ceremony. At this tri-military ceremony, conducted by the Air Force, Army, and Navy ROTC units, the flag will be taken down and Taps will be played.

The ceremony and reception will "remember, honor, and commemorate" those who have given the ultimate sacrifice for freedom, according to Major Cindy Hart, associate professor of Aerospace Studies.

"We should work for their freedom because they have sacrificed to give us our freedom," said Chris Stengrim, commander of the Arnold Air Society.

that you did something wrong, then the way for you to be safe is just not to do it again."

For the survivor to realize that she is not at fault, she must learn how to trust again, date again and how to feel safe again, Donley said.

Many times people in the survivor's world do not understand a rape, instead, they think the survivor's role has led to her being torn on the issue. "Especially in a date rape situation, it's his word against hers," she said.

In a situation like that, her behavior is going to be scrutinized. Was she 'asking' How was she dressed?" Mixed feelings aside, Donley said that ideally, upon receiving a report of rape that has just happened, the counselor would encourage the survivor to allow Security to secure evidence so that if the female later chooses to press charges, she has some evidence to do so.

"On the other hand, after dealing with lots of survivors, it would be very difficult for me to make a decision if I would report it or not if it happened me."

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress on Wednesday that the Persian Gulf crisis has piled "new and substantial risks" on an already faltering national economy.

In a generally gloomy assessment of U.S. economic prospects, Greenspan said the jump in oil prices since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait had increased the threat of both higher inflation and a recession.

But the chairman of the central bank rejected suggestions that U.S. economic policy makers were in effect being held hostage by Iraq President Saddam Hussein.

While he conceded that the Fed's job of promoting non-inflationary growth has been made more difficult by the unfolding events in the Persian Gulf, he insisted the central bank still had tools to mitigate the economic fallout.

But private economists said Greenspan's pessimistic comments reflected the tough choices facing him. Normally rising unemployment and other signs of sluggish growth would prompt the central bank to slash interest rates in order to spur demand.

But the oil price shock means that the country is now in the grips of its worst bout of inflation in nine years with consumer prices climbing at an annual rate of 6.2 percent.

Greenspan did not signal that the Fed either had eased credit already or was planning any immediate easing moves. Instead, he merely repeated comments made in the past that financial markets would respond favorably to a credible deficit reduction package by pushing long-term rates, such as mortgage rates, lower and the Fed would do its part by helping to lower short-term rates.

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said that Greenspan's testimony signaled new Fed concerns about a possible steep downward slide in the dollar if the Fed pushed interest rates lower at a time when other countries were raising their rates to fight inflation.

"This was a major departure. He emphasized strongly the dangers in a declining dollar. It means he will delay any easing steps," Jones said.

Greenspan's comments represented a setback for the Bush administration as well. The administration has been lobbying for months for the Fed to lower interest rates in order to avert the first economic downturn since the 1981-82 recession.

Greenspan said at present the economy was still growing, although at a very slow pace. But he ticked off a number of negative impacts stemming from the more than $10 per barrel rise in oil prices since Aug. 2 and said prospects of a future downturn could not be ruled out.

"Regrettably, events in the Middle East have introduced new and substantial risks to the outlook," Greenspan told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

While explaining whether the chance of a recession was now above 50 percent, he did say, "The oil shock has clearly increased both the probability of inflation and recession."

The Fed chairman said that if crude oil prices average around $30 per barrel over the next year, about $10 above the prices before Aug. 2, the higher oil prices would likely lower the economic growth by a full percentage point over a year's time while boosting the inflation rate by up to 2 percentage points.

Financial planning essential for women

By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI
Business Writer

"People who devote a little time to managing resources will make it financially," said Luz Aquino, president of Independent Means, Inc., in a lecture emphasizing the importance of setting goals.

Women can relieve a burden from their husbands as well as benefit themselves by learning to budget their finances.

"We can do something, unless we have financial goals," Aquino said, adding that the best plan is to be responsible or the financial budgeter will become the husband.

Aquino, a South Bend certified financial planner, also emphasized the importance of setting numerous goals. This is a projection point for your savings, which can be as near as six months away or as distant as retirement age.

Among the elements of these goals are not only recording expenditures, debts, and earnings, but also avoiding overspending of credit cards and creating a statement of net worth—how much is owned and how much is owed.

Aquino tells those interested in budgeting their finances, "Start with savings as the number one goal. Save six months of living expenses at least."

These savings will accumulate, said Aquino. For example, just $30 saved annually will grow by age twenty-five with interest at 10 percent. Other money saved can be put in a special reserve fund for emergencies.

Secondary and tertiary goals should be focused on eliminating debt and cutting back on unnecessary expenditures. Eliminating debt involves re-paying loans while cutting back on expenditures may mean skipping more frequent outings or postponing vacations. Although these are not primary goals, they are just as crucial to successful budgeting.

Aquino summed up the secret of successful financial planning as, "Saving off the top before you spend any of your earnings."

"It's not what you make, it's what you save that counts," he said.

The lecture, sponsored in conjunction with the Year of Women, was the first in a series funded by the Hesburgh Library and the Notre Dame Accountancy Department.

The Alumni Senior Club: Where does the money go?

BY JOHN CRONIN
Business Writer

The Alumni Senior Club ('Senior Bar') has a truly unique relationship with Indiana University—It maintains the status of a non-profit organization and enjoys tax-free privileges as such.

Still, all practical purposes Senior Bar functions as a self-sufficient business.

The bar charges a $25 membership fee to about 1500 students yearly. This fee is for non-members, the prices of drinks are similar to other bars in town, and apparently the establishment is not lacking patrons during football weekends.

If this is the case, then what happens to all the money that Senior Bar pulls in?

Senior Bar never makes any profit, according to Lawrence Briggs, the general manager.

"We make just enough profit to get by every year and have enough to start up the bar every year with," according to Briggs.

Briggs has been managing the Senior Bar for four years now and never in those years has he seen any excess money which was not put back into the bar.

In fact, the reason that Senior Bar was put under his management was that it was being bailed out of debt by the University, said Briggs.

Concerning the non-profit status of the Alumni Senior Club, Briggs maintained, that although it is a bar, it is an auxiliary branch of the University which is itself a non-profit organization.

The undisclosed amount of money taken in by Senior Bar goes right back into covering the many costs of running a large drinking establishment.

The largest expense is labor. According to Briggs, approximately 32 percent of the gross is spent on labor. The Alumni Senior Club employs 22 bartenders, three student managers, numbers not approaching the average South Bend bar.

The student managers, as well as Briggs, receive a constant salary independent of the amount of money that the bar takes in. They receive no percentage of the bar's total receipts. The object in attracting business to the establishment is to cover the operation costs.

About 50 percent of the total money taken in went toward the purchase of alcohol, food, and other merchandise totaling $107,000 last year, according to Briggs.

All of the costs of running Senior Bar come directly out of the Senior Bar account. This year for the first time the University is charging a $2000 per month rent to help cover the original cost of the building.

"Because of all my expenses, most of the months that we're open I lose money. The only thing that keeps us ahead is the money made during football weekends," added Briggs.

Though it is seemingly indefensible, Senior Bar cannot escape Student Affairs regulations.

Student Affairs permits Senior Bar to remain open the winter months. It was not put back into the bar accounts.

"It's not what you make, it's what you save that counts," he said.

The attainment of these goals is achieved by saving off the top before spending any of your earnings.

"People don't make much is owned and how much is owed." He said.

"I understand where Student Affairs is coming from. They want to make money, we're here for the benefit of the seniors and alumni," commented Briggs.

Dear Editor:

I take exception to Saint Mary's College's position, which was acting president five years ago. He then became a candidate for president and was chosen over a large field of applicants, many of them women. Obviously, he was the best person for the job—a fact that he has proven many times during his tenure.

3. Dr. Hickey is a staunch advocate of women's education. If Ms. Marcuson had even attempted to meet him, I know she would come from her interview convinced of his sincerity and strength and free, male and female, for all of society will necessarily be one with each other in God.

Call for female SMC president smack of sexism

Dear Editor:

In her letter to The Observer about the most recent search, which reflected the change at Saint Mary's from an institution governed entirely by members of a religious community to one that incorporates members of laity in its governance. If subsequent presidents have been male, it is perhaps a testimony to the qualifications rather than sexism.

Ms. Marcuson seems to be unaware of the process by which these lay presidents were appointed. In each case, there was a search committee composed of male and female members who evaluated applications of both men and women on the basis of their qualifications and experience. In the most recent search, which resulted in the appointment of Saint Mary's College's president, many of the members of the search committee were female.

We are challenged to give deep and honest reflection to how the words we do or don't say and the actions we do or don't perform symbolize and affect our reality. In other words, they are sacramental.

‘Shrew’ provides humour

By MATTHEW MOHS

Willis n Shakespeare’s “The Taming of the Shrew” has had many incarnations. It’s been turned into a musical called “Kiss Me Kate,” and this summer it was performed in New York’s Central Park set in the Old West. It has even served as an episode on TV’s “Moonlighting.” Now, Catholic University’s National Players have brought it to Notre Dame’s Washington Hall through Sunday set in prohibition Chicago.

The play opens with a rich young man named Lucentio arriving in Padua with Tranio, his servant, to attend the university. Lucentio falls in love with Bianca, the daughter of Baptista. Baptista will not allow her to marry until a suitor is found for his older daughter, Katharina. Katharina and Tranio decide to find a suitor for Katharina to expedite the situation.

Lucentio and Katharina go head to head with their wit and wits as he tries to make her more feminine. Lucentio also develops a very elaborate scheme in order to win the love of Bianca which results in some hilarious and outrageous scenes.

All in all, the National Players give an outstanding performance in this rendition. However, some performances are stronger than others. For example, Craig Wallace gives a warm, enjoyable performance as Hortensio, while Bruce Nelson does an outstanding job as Tranio, making the humor more apparent with his inflection and gestures.

However, the chemistry between Kevin Durkin as Petruchio and Kelly McShain as Katharina steals the show. At times the fast pace of their performances seems a little overwhelming, but due to their interaction among actors and the play on dialogue the performance remains humorous.

The setting of the play is very sexual, but this is completely negative because it is not really a necessity. However, setting “The Taming of the Shrew” in prohibition Chicago does create a lack of continuity.

Even with those problems, the production is very lively and fresh, and it accomplishes its most important job, which is entertaining the audience.

“The Taming of the Shrew” will be performed nightly at 8:10 p.m. through Sunday at Washington Hall.

Pressler combines education with social awareness

By KRISTIN BAZANY

“When in doubt, do both,” or in this case, do it all. This is the philosophy and the second of ten rules of life that Dr. Charles Pressler has chosen to follow. As a Professor of Sociology at Saint Mary’s, Dr. Pressler has “done it all” and shares his plethora of knowledge and experience with many students in the ND and Saint Mary’s community.

Fifteen years ago, if someone had asked Dr. Pressler (commonly referred to as Chuck of Chuckles) what he was going to do with his life, I doubt he would have given an answer that even remotely resembled the answer he would have to give today.

Throughout the years, Dr. Pressler has touched upon many different careers ranging from truck driver to intelligence agent, soldier to college administrator and even dabbled in the industry of TV. Today however, it seems Dr. Pressler has not only dabbled, but plunged into the world of sociology and it’s real life experiences.

An Indiana native, Dr. Pressler attended primary and secondary school in Elkhart, Indiana before deciding to familiarize himself with the sociology of other areas. Prior to receiving his B.A. in Philosophy, Dr. Pressler spent six years as a research assistant at the Graduate School of Public Health for the University of Pittsburgh, studying Male Sexual Issues and Practices.

Following his research, Dr. Pressler attended Duquesne University in Pittsburgh where he received his B.A. in Philosophy. During this time, his studies at Duquesne as well as his research and boiling crisis intervention experience sparked his interest in practical real life phenomena.

Because of this interest, Dr. Pressler went on to receive his Masters in Philosophy of Social Sciences at University of Chicago, and then returned to Indiana where he earned his Doctorate in Sociology at Notre Dame.

In 1983 Pressler became a part-time professor at Saint Mary’s College. Pressler was assigned as a full-time professor in the department of Sociology, Anthropology and Social Work. During the first few years, Dr. Pressler realized there was a “large gap or conflict between sociological awareness and theory.” It was then that he decided that he wanted to “facilitate women’s understanding of the world they would be entering into, as professional people.

Dr. Pressler believes, “we spend too much time judging and not enough time understanding the world in which we live.” Because of this belief, Dr. Pressler features his classes so that his students receive applied sociology as well as theoretical concepts. Dr. Pressler offers his students the option of working in the community on a volunteer basis, so that they will do things and come in contact with people and lifestyles that they will be encountering in the world which faces them after college.

His classes present pressures, motives and lifestyles which are neither desirable nor beneficial in our society, in order that we may try to understand and tolerate them while trying to figure out what to do about them. Dr. Pressler says, “you can tolerate people even when you don’t approve, and this tolerance leads to understanding.”

Dr. Pressler has a fascination with the nasty stuff and has witnessed a great deal of it. He doesn’t believe this means he’s jaded, just aware. Pressler says, “I’ve talked with lots and lots of people, including murderers, rapists, child molesters, prostitutes and transvestites, and I always see or learn something new, but I’m never surprised.”

In addition to the deviants in society, Pressler also has a great deal of interest in sexual behavior and AIDS. He is considered highly knowledgeable in this area through out the South Bend community, and can often be found doing guest appearances on this subject around town.

On Sunday, September 23, Pressler and a sex educator from South Bend will be hosting a talk show on ZIP 104, dealing with Teenage Sexuality, Sexual Behavior and The Specter of AIDS.

According to Pressler, “Sociology is a discipline that teaches people not to do anything, but to live well. By understanding those who do not live well, we can get below the surface and apary in order to see the real issues.”

Dr. Pressler has done it all, or at least most of it. Through his experience we can all learn a great deal about ourselves and the world we live in. Dr. Pressler tries to stress the importance of self-understanding and insight and tries to guide his students in this direction.

Pressler says, “I am not a teacher. I don’t want anyone to become me, or take my standpoint. I want to facilitate them so they can understand where they are at, and their own position.” Dr. Pressler has done just that; he is facilitator, mentor and an asset to the entire community.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Two days after journeying to Miami, Kansas State kicked off a nine-day tour to Miami that would take it to South Carolina officials as the SEC continues its search for a possible 12th member.

"I don't have any information or anything else that we don't have anything other than confirmation that he is coming," university spokesman Debra Allen said Wednesday.

Miami and South Carolina are two of the front-runners to become the 12th member of the SEC, if the league decides to expand further after adding Arkansas this summer.

South Carolina, which is an independent in football and a member of the Metro Conference in all other sports, has made no secret about its interest in joining the SEC or, at the least, joining an all-sports conference.

Kramer is expected to meet with interim President Arthur Kramer in Kansas City this week to discuss football and a league.

"There is a lot of speculation out there," Kramer said in a statement Monday. "What the discussions would be is something that would take place with an all-sports conference, but now the dream is yours: Dear Phantom-How romantic!"

"I will leave it up to you and me. What you and I can make ..." Kramer said Wednesday. "But he (Kramer) just felt like he's not going to get involved in anything at the SEC."

Drabek’s 20th win timely for Pirates

CHICAGO (AP) — Doug Drabek became the National League’s first 20-game winner and Barry Bonds hit his 30th and 31st home runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates ended a six-game losing streak, beating the Chicago Cubs 9-7 Wednesday.

The victory increased the Pirates’ lead to one game over second-place New York in the National League East. The scheduled game between Montreal and the Mets at Shea Stadium was postponed by rain. Drabek (20-6) allowed seven hits and five runs while striking out six in 7 1-3 innings. He is Pittsburgh’s first 20-game winner since John Candelaria was 20-5 in 1977.

Bonds’ first homer, a solo shot, came with two out in the fifth. He hit his second leading off the seventh. It was the ninth time he has hit two homers in a game in his career.

Bonds became the first Pirates player and the eighth player in NL history to hit a home run of the season on Aug. 22. With the score tied 2-2, a single by Jeff Treadway. It led to Bonds’ 30th home run of the season on Wednesday, reaching two milestones at the same time. Bonds’ father, Bobby, is a former major league player and the eighth player in NL history to hit a home run of the season.

TOKYO (AP) — The International Olympic Committee launches a crackdown Wednesday on the free-spending campaigns of cities hoping to host the Games. Flagrant violators could be expelled from the bidding.

Japanese authorities have been watching the other 18 bidding cities and have heard reports of bidders who have made promises they can't keep or who are giving gifts that could be illegal. The IOC executive board placed strict limits on the gifts and services that bidders can offer committee members.

While Atlanta organizers held their first meetings about actually staging the Games and talked to President Bush in Washington next week.

I think it does as it is the fee to reaffirm the American commitment to the Olympic movement," Payne said. Bush made a videotaped appeal to the IOC on behalf of the Atlanta bid Tuesday.

From now on, each bidder can invite such IOC member to visit the city once. Gifts to members are limited to a total of $200.

Unlike previous attempts to hold down expenses, the board this time included punishment in the new rules. It will publicize violations it discovers and — if the bidding crime is bad enough — throw the candidate out.

"We are not trying to be policemen, we will not turn into the CIA or the FBI," Francois Carrard, the IOC's secretary general, said. "But there should be acceptable rules. We are not going to check, but we are not naive. And if it's known that they have broken the rules, we will publicize it to all of the Olympic movement."

Carrard said a bidder's expulsion would be used as a last resort.

There have been reports of numerous first-class flights to faraway destinations and lavish presents, including gold medallions and jeweled necklaces, as the lists of bidders have grown in recent years.

Carrard and Jim Worrall, a retired IOC member from Canada, said the problem started in 1986, when 13 cities were bidding for the 1992 Summer and Winter Games. Diamonds, fur coats and other luxury items were said to be changing hands then.

"Those campaigns showed there was an almost-traitorous effort by some cities," Carrard said. "This time, things were improved. But when you have six big cities in the bidding, as we did this year, things have a way of escalating."

The scope of the problem was illustrated by Bob Scott, head of Manchester's unsuccessful bid. Manchester's $5.7 million budget was a fraction of the other cities'.

"We spent no money whatsoever on gifts, which didn't stop members from coming up to me and thanking me for the gifts they received," Scott said.

Princess Anne, one of Britain's IOC members, said Manchester's strategy had been correct, even though it was eliminated on the second round with just five votes.

"I am in the habit of sending (the gifts) all back, and that has created a busy task for the people with me — a rather steady stream," she said. "We chose not to do that and believe the money can be better spent developing sport."

The IOC also took the first step toward controlling the growth of the Summer Games. It adopted a new charter that says sports must be played in at least 75 countries on four continents for men and 40 countries on three continents for women to be part of the Olympic schedule. The limits now are 50 countries on three continents for men and 35-3 for women.

The new limits take effect for the Games of 2000.

The charter revision, headed by Worrall, took eight years, and the copy now goes to international federations and national Olympic committees.

"This is no total revolution. It is a restructuring of the document that is readable and workable," Carrard said.

The session also elected Kevan Gosper of Australia as a vice president, filling a new position.

The second half remained scoreless for a fairly long time, although the Irish did have several chances to score. Their best opportunity came when Kenyon Meyer's header was saved by Titan goalie Dan Koonz.

Detroit pretty much wrapped up the game with a goal at the 67:41 mark. Danny Rabie hit a crossing shot that David Poniatowski headed into the goal from a yard out, and the Titans were leading 2-0 with just over 20 minutes left to play.

The Irish had other chances to score, but couldn't seem to put the ball in the net. With 12 minutes left in the game, Mario Tricoci nailed a free kick that flew over the wall of Detroit players, hooking towards the outer post of the goal. Unfortunately for the Irish, Detroit keeper Dan Koonz made a great save, depriving them of a score.

Neither team was able to mount much of an attack from that point on, and the jubilant Detroit bench stormed the field after the referee blew the whistle to end the game.

"We're very disappointed. We didn't give it that Fighting Irish spirit," said sophomore midfielder Mario Tricoci. "We're their biggest game, and they came out and played with intensity."

Coach Berticelli was frustrated with his team's attitude for the game. "We weren't ready to play," he said. "I don't know why. Maybe it's a letdown after the Valparaiso game."

The intensity level is obviously something the Irish need to work on. "We get motivated against top 20 teams, but we don't have that same motivation versus teams we should beat," Scott said. "That's the sign of a young team," said Berticelli.

"We need to gain some maturity," Berticelli continued. "We need to realize that every game is as important as the next."

That is a lesson Berticelli's troops need to learn if they hope to avoid being the team that showed up late last night, and instead play like the national-caliber team that played N.C. State and St. Louis just a few days ago.

Unless you really enjoy reading manuals, get a Macintosh.

Macintosh practically eliminates the need to keep manuals next to my computer, because — regarding the Macintosh logo, I can open, close, save, and print files in exactly the same way. And you can't say that about any other computer.

"Today lots of other computers are attempting to look and work like a Macintosh, but it is not possible. They're too fundamentally different to begin with. This may sound a little strange, but comparing a Macintosh to other computers is like comparing apples to oranges."

You cannot change the shape and paint it to look like an apple, but underneath the makeup, it's still an orange.

"It's funny — I work at the Vanguard Program I'm using — and I've seen lots of people switch from other computers to Macintosh, but I've never seen anybody with a Macintosh switch to another computer."

Second rape charge of week filed vs. Wingate

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A woman filed a civil lawsuit Wednesday against San Antonio Spurs guard David Wingate alleging he sexually assaulted her in June. It was the second rape accusation against him this week.

Wingate, 26, was charged Monday in Maryland with the rape of a 17-year-old woman at his apartment.

In the civil suit filed here in state district court, a 21-year-old woman alleges Wingate bought her alcoholic drinks at a San Antonio nightclub on June 24 and later offered her a ride.

The suit claims that when the woman became ill, Wingate got out of the car with her down the street from his house and sexually assaulted and sodomized her.

Afterward, the suit alleges, Wingate left the woman in a room at his house and "allowed at least two other friends of his in to rape her." The woman required medical care after the attack, the suit states.

The woman reported the incident to police. No criminal charges have been filed.

Police spokesman Sgt. Paul Burke refused to confirm Wednesday whether Wingate is a suspect in the case, which remains under investigation.

There have been some extenuating circumstances that have prevented us from completing the investigation, he said, declining to elaborate.

Attorney Maryann Maloney, who represents the woman, on Wednesday accused the San Antonio Police Department of moving slowly with the investigation.

"The police basically chose to slow-ball it," she said. "Unfortunately the Maryland incident may not have happened if they had acted properly."

Spurs officials did not return a call late Wednesday from The Associated Press.

After the charge in Maryland was filed, Spurs owner Red McCombs said contract negotiations with Wingate, a restricted free agent, were on hold.

McCombs said he wasn't assuming Wingate is guilty and would investigate the matter.

Keith Jackson signs with Eagles after long holdout

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — All-Pro Keith Jackson ended his 50-day holdout with the Philadelphia Eagles on Wednesday.

Jackson, who refused to report after the Eagles declined to renegotiate the four-year, $2.1 million contract he signed two years ago, is scheduled to be at Thursday's practice.

"I expect him to play against the Rams," Ryan said. "I think he'll bring a big lift. He'll scare the hell out of some folks. He's going to dictate some coverages."

A spokesman for the Eagles said Jackson had made no deal with Jackson, who was replaced in the lineup by Mickey Shuler. Jackson's agent, Gary Wichard, was not immediately available for comment.

Harry Gamble, the Eagles' president, said Jackson would still have to pay fines totaling $114,500 — $34,000 for the two games he missed and $1,500 per day for 31 missed days of training camp.

Ryan said having Jackson would take some pressure off his wide receivers, who have been double-zoned in losses to the New York Giants and Phoenix Cardinals.

played farthest back. She also got forward and scored. She was just all over the field today. I'm glad to see that because I know her ability, but I'm also glad to see it because she has settled into that spot well."

Jarc readily concurred.

"At the beginning of the season, I felt that there was a lot of pressure on me. That's how it took it," admitted the sophomore from Bay Village, Ohio. "Now I've dealt with that and I'm starting to fit into the game. I like to go forward instead of just staying back the whole game. Also, coach has put the confidence in me to go forward. We're getting together now, and everyone is really complimentary about the job coach is doing. It's been a real positive change."

Notre Dame nailed down the victory at the 69-21 mark of the second half. Jarc took the ball from goalkeeper Michelle Lodiga and traveled deep into the Lady Pumas' backfield before passing to Marianne Giolitto.

Giolitto in turn passed to Taisha Strawbridge, who was camped in front of the Saint Joseph's goal. Strawbridge quickly fired a shot before the charging goalie could cut it off, putting the Irish ahead to stay.

"I think that we made this game close," concluded coach Petrucci. "We weren't as prepared to play as we should have been. Of course, I want to say that without taking anything away from Saint Joseph's, because they played hard and they stuck with us the entire game."
World will celebrate Olympic centennial in Atlanta in 1996

TOKYO (AP) — Atlanta has a chance to host "the most important peace event of the last 100 years" when it stages the centennial Olympics in 1996, the leader of the city's successful bid said Wednesday.

"We have inherited an awesome responsibility," Billy Payne, president of the Atlanta Organizing Committee, said.

The choice of the International Olympic Committee over five other cities in voting Tuesday night will turn 1996's birthday of the modern Games into an unparalleled panorama of the world's youth and sports, according to the 42-year-old lawyer.

"The certain specialness about the centennial celebration of the Games, and our excellent location will provide significant and sufficient revenues so that the principle message of Olympicism and sport won't be diminished by us scrambling for money all the time," Payne said. "Our commercial attractiveness doesn't do nothing but ensure that our organization will be able to spend time trying to put on the best Games ever." Payne estimated a $1 billion budget and a $154 million surplus. It also projects a sporting event. But yes, it's a sporting event. But yes, it's a sporting event.

Both brothers were high school stars as running backs in their hometown of Tulsa, Okla., and now they occupy consecutive numbers on the Irish roster. Tony had been number 40, but last year Reggie wore it in his place. This year, he's given his brother's number back and taken number 41.

"I'll always be his little brother," said Reggie. "We've come to accept each other as pretty much equals as far as athletic ability, so he's always there to encourage me and I try to be there for him when he has a bad day."

University of Miami. If they do, they're just not going to play." Celebrating by several Hurricanes drew boos from the California fans and a shower of postgame criticism in Bay Area newspapers and on Miami radio talk shows.

The primary targets were receiver Randy Hill and linebackers Michael Barrow and Jessie Armstead. Hill raised both arms after each of his first six catches. Barrow and Armstead shook their hips in a sack dance.

Tauting and gloating are nothing new at Miami, but the reaction to Saturday's antics was unprecedented. "Some things were accepted three years ago that aren't accepted now by the public," Erickson said.

Even before the crackdown was announced, the negative response from fans and the media had convinced the nick-named Hurricanes to tone down their act. Barrow said: "People my age pretty much understand the dances," Barrow said, "because some of the things we did, you'll see a lot of people doing in nightclubs.

"Mostly the people that disagreed with it were older. And I can understand that, because they helped build this school. They don't want it to end up like a nightclub on the football field."

Erickson plans crackdown on Hurricane snowboats

CORNELIANS, Fla. (AP) — Coach Dennis Erickson, who last week told his Miami Hurricanes to temper their tack, has now cracked down on showboating.

At least two Hurricanes "crossed the line" of good taste with dancing, prancing and posing after big plays in last Saturday's nationally televised 52-24 victory at California, Erickson said Tuesday.

"I wasn't as proud of it, and I know our team wasn't very proud of it," the coach said during his weekly news conference, "There's a point where it's embarrassing to the program." Erickson said players guilty of excessive celebrating in the future will be benched for the rest of the game and possibly longer. It was the coach's second edict concerning behavior in as many weeks. Following an opening-game loss at Brigham Young, he ordered the Hurricanes to stop making degrading comments about opponents.

Erickson declined to spell out guidelines as to what kind of celebrating he would permit.

"We are going to play hard, and we are going to be excited about playing good game, and we are going to jump up and down," he said. "But there's that line that we're not going to cross at the former Ambassador to the United Nations Andrew Young (left) and Georgia Governor Joe Frank Harris meet at the IOC meeting in Tokyo.

"The centennial celebration could be the most important peace-time event in the last 100 years." At the same time, Payne said he wanted to avoid the impression left in much of the world of the Los Angeles Olympics being a glitzy celebation of America, filled with jingoism and staged by Hollywood.

"I myself couldn't have been able to do it," said Reggie, with a tone of respect for his brother. "That shows great self-discipline and determination. I'm proud of him for being able to get back in from all the things he had to be up against." Both brothers were high school stars as running backs in their hometown of Tulsa, Okla., and now they occupy consecutive numbers on the Irish roster. Tony had been number 40, but last year Reggie wore it in his place. This year, he's given his brother's number back and taken number 41.

"I'll always be his little brother," said Reggie. "We've come to accept each other as pretty much equals as far as athletic ability, so he's always there to encourage me and I try to be there for him when he has a bad day."

Men's soccer falls to rival Detroit, 2-0

By RICH KURZ
Sports Writer

Monday night the men's soccer team was a jubilant and confident bunch after destroying Valparaiso. Last night, after losing 2-0 to a Detroit team that Notre Dame should have beaten, the Irish must be at least a little bit confused.

It is the real men's soccer team the one that came within a whisker of upsetting two Top 20 teams and left Valparaiso battered and bruised, or the team that tied a weak Loyola crew and lost to the Titans yesterday?

While it will probably take a couple of games to tell for sure, one thing was clear last night—Detroit was hungrier for the win.

Neither team attacked early in the game, which was a switch for the Irish, who went right for the jugular with a great deal of success last game.

The Irish had several early drives into Titans territory, each of which was thwarted by Detroit defenders before Notre Dame could get off a shot. The first real break in the game came when Irish midfielder Tom Connaghan got inside the defense, but couldn't convert when his shot sailed just wide of the goal.

Detroit began putting some pressure on Notre Dame goalkeeper Peter Gulli at the 26:45 mark when a header off a crossing shot went wide of the goal, and after 39 minutes when a shot had to be made a nice save off a header.

Just 28 seconds before the half, the Titans got on the scoreboard and grabbed hold of the momentum. Detroit's Goran Cepo, deep inside the goal box, got a hold of a shot that had deflected off an Irish player and buried it deep in the upper left corner of the net, where Gulli had no chance of saving it.

The Titans were confident coming into the game, and scoring the first goal renewed their confidence and intensity. Cepo was mobbed by his fellow players, and the Detroit bench went crazy in the knowledge that they would carry a lead into halftime against a favored Notre Dame team.

Younger Brooks takes starting position in stride

Sophomore corner back takes advantage of opportunity against Michigan with interception

By SCOTT BRUTOCO
Assistant Sports Editor

It's your first game in a new position. You're playing for the top-ranked team in the country. You're playing against the nation's fourth-ranked team. And you didn't even start the game.

But you find yourself, late in the fourth quarter, defending against a drive that could win the game and cause your team to lose for the first time in four years.

Oh, and to lose that top ranking in which your team has found a home.

Reggie Brooks is familiar with this scene.

The game was against Michigan, and Brooks was playing short-side cornerback against Michigan's offense that had been picking apart the Irish secondary in key situations. But not this time.

"I think that we came out..." the Notre Dame women's soccer team defeated Saint Joseph's Wednesday night.

Women's soccer beats St. Joseph's

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team wrapped up its three-game homestand with its third win in a row, sneaking past Saint Joseph's College 2-0 at Alumni Field Wednesday night.

With the win, the Irish improved their record to 4-2, while Saint Joseph's slipped to 2-5. However, all was not a bundle of roses for the fledgling Notre Dame squad. The Lady Pumas played a very physical brand of soccer, which frustrated the Irish in the early going. Additionally, the Irish did not have their attention entirely directed toward the game at hand.

"I thought that we came out a little bit flat today," remarked Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli. "We were looking past this game a little bit. I definitely think that we were more concerned with playing Michigan State and Marquette this weekend that with today's game. Also, it is tough to come out of the classroom at 3 p.m. and play a game at 4 p.m. Some of the kids just left their games in their books.

"Saint Joseph's physical play took us off of our game a little bit, I do not think that we re-acted very well. When Brenda Gorski came in, that changed, because it is very hard to push her off of the ball.

"Yet the matchup was not without bright spots for the Irish.

In the first half, Notre Dame played its corner kick short to midfielder Marianne Giuliotte, who passed to midfielder Margaret Mack, Mack's shot from 20 yards out deflected off the head of a Saint Joseph's defender and into the opposite corner of the net for a 1-0 Irish advantage.

"Margaret Mack had a very good game," noted Petrucelli. "But the kids playing in back also deserve some credit. Jarc, Shannon Jenkins, Andrea Kurek, and Gennifer Kowalowski are the reason why we won this game. They defended very well and were solid in the back.

"Today we had five midfielders and three fullbacks, and Jarc was the midfielder that
