Lecture promotes hemp for food, fuel, and fiber

Herer: marijuana legalization can 'save earth'

By JOE GODIN
News Writer

Jack Herer has been studying marijuana for over 17 years. An ardent advocate of the plant, Herer once broke in front of about 75 people at the Center for Social Concerns on what he has learned and what he believes the world must do to help the poor. He now believes that reversing the greenhouse effect, and help people to live longer.

Before he founded the national organization called Help End Marijuana Prohibition (HEMP), he had little contact with marijuana.

He first smoked marijuana in 1969 with some friends. At the time he was a California businessman. After finding startling facts about the true nature and various uses of marijuana, also known as hemp, he started a personal crusade for marijuana legalization.

"When I first smoked mari­juana, I thought it was good to see different colors in the world, but marijuana didn't even like music before," Herer said. It was at that point that he began his current crusade.

In 1972 he petitioned in California for the legalization of marijuana. Thirty-four percent of the people responded in his favor. "Only 17 percent more and there would be a majority in favor of legalization."

Although he realized it would still take a long time to achieve legalization, he felt there was hope. He wrote a book; How Grass which demonstrated both the positive and negative effects of marijuana.

According to the book, mari­juana dilates the arteries, lowers body stress and temperature and also allows you to live longer. After Jack Herer started smoking marijuana, his ulcer healed.

Soon after publication, Herer started receiving calls from people who had researched the subject. He found out that marijuana is also called cannabis hemp, which, throughout history, has been used to make canvas and rope. This material made up the sails of ships from the 16th and 17th century ships, including the Mayflower. Herer asked the crowd: "We have a product that is left out of our education. What do you think of the teachers for not telling you about this? Are you mad?"

He said that marijuana was used because it had a better viscosity. Furthermore, a visit to the Smithsonian re­vealed that over 30 percent of the Colonial and Maritime ex­hibits contained hemp. Herer called the Smithsonian and asked from why the public does not know this. He said they claimed that children should be protected.

He has documented his latest discoveries in his newest look The Emperor Wears No Clothes. Among his most interesting discoveries are that marijuana may have been the first plant ever cultivated on earth. Smoking marijuana can cure glaucoma, asthma, and anorexia. According to Herer, there are five people in the U.S. smoking marijuana solely for glaucoma.

"The problem with this is that they have to smoke about 11 joints a day because they smoke green leaf. The U.S. govern­ment will not let them smoke anything stronger," said Herer. Herer also said that in the 1930s it was widely believed that once machinery was com­plete hemp would become the biggest single industry in the United States.

Herer's lecture became more dramatic when he moved to the topic of the greenhouse effect.

He called the government of­icials in charge of reversing the greenhouse effect and global warming. Both officials...jkl...see HEMP / page 7

Soviet Union makes steps toward free market economy

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has taken steps toward reversing seven decades of Commu­nist control to create a free market economy.

On Tuesday, the government received preliminary approval to a rescue plan for switching the Soviet Union to a free market economy.

Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov is reported to have issued an order to reverse the central­ized socialist economy.

The program marked a significant change in Gor­bachev's tactics. His pre­vious efforts to merge the Soviet economy had failed. As of Monday, the government had been working on the program since 1991.

Gorbachev has expressed frustration on Friday, saying the Soviet people have to adapt to market and consumer shortages now.

The resolution endorses Gor­bachev's compromise economic program, but also says the more conservative recipe drafted by Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov should be incorporated into it.

A third, more radical plan, has been adopted by the Russian Federation, the largest of the 15 Soviet republics with half the country's population and three-quarters of its territory.

Monday's resolution says a final detailed program should be presented to the Supreme Soviet by Oct. 15. It is to be developed by legislative committees and the authors of the various programs.

The Soviet public has become increasingly disappointed in Gorbachev's handling of the economic crisis, and dozens of protesters charged the lawmakers as they arrived for the morning debate.

"The people don't trust Gor­bachev," about a dozen demon­strators shouted outside the Kremlin's Spassky Gate. They held signs that read "a president — not an emperor" and "all decrees of the president are battles against democracy."

Security reports three incidents of indecent exposure around ND

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame Security is cur­rently investigating three re­ported incidents of indecent ex­posure.

The suspect's method of op­eration was to call a female to her car and ask where the Ad­missions Office was located, said Chuck Hurley, assistant di­rector of Security.

The offenses occurred at: 4:15 p.m., Sept. 19 on Dorr Road, east of Juniper Road; 4:17 p.m., Sept. 19 in the D-R parking lot; and 4:32 p.m., Sept. 19 in the C-1 parking lot.

The suspect is described as a male Caucasian, 18 to 20 years old, slight build and tall, medium length dark hair and pale complexion, Hurley said.

The suspect's vehicle is de­scribed as an older model, cream colored station wagon, with a ladder on top of it.

If anyone observes a vehicle or on or around campus matching this description, they are asked to please contact Security immediately and attempt to obtain the license plate number.

Security can be reached at 239-5555.

Notre Dame needs some 'playtime'

Alison Cocks

With all the construction going on around campus I'm surprised Notre Dame hasn't found space for the one structure we truly need: a playground. Sure, a $13 million classroom complex and a new gym structure or two are probably helpful in achieving the University's newest goal of becoming a REALLY GREAT research institution, but a playground would help to solve a more important issue: morale. It's a rare individual who can take himself seriously while playing sand at each other?

Snowflake invites everyone to her birthday party except one or two people. Three-year-olds in some dirt and forget the whole thing.

It probably would be helpful in achieving the University's goal, but a playground could be in inclement weather (i.e. most of the year). No problem.

Winston Mandela and seven former associates will stand trial in February for charges of kidnapping and assaulting four young men, a magistrate decided Monday.

The charges against Mandela stem from a December 1988 incident in which 14-year-old Stempel Seipel was killed. The former head of Mandela's bodyguards, Jerry Richardson, has been convicted of murder and sentenced to death in the case. During Richardson's trial, the other three victims testified they were abducted by members of the Mandela United Football Club — Mandela's bodyguards — and taken to her Soweto home. They said Mandela beat them with a whip, and the others also assaulted them.

Alan Cranston, a Senator from California, says he will vote against the confirmation of Supreme Court nominee David Souter because the Federal appeals court judge was stoned to death. Reserve Sgt. Ammon Pomeroy, 46, was stoned to death in the Burej refugee camp Thursday after his car hit a donkey cart, injuring two Palestinian teenagers. The Palestinian mob set his car and body afire with gasoline-soaked rags. The army spokesman's office declined comment.

Foreman registers will be distributed Sept. 25, 26, and 27 from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. at the Information Desk in the LaFortune Student Center.

Free information on natural family planning will be offered today at 7 p.m. in the Hayes-Healy auditorium. Couples married and engaged will also begin Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the Heflin-Healy auditorium. For more information or to register, call the NPF office at 237-7401.

The English Majors Association will hold a meeting today at 7 p.m. in Room 188, Nieuwland Science Hall. For more information, call Tim at 283-1421 or Dan at 283-1509.

Senior portraits are still being taken this week. Sign up at LaFortune Information Desk for an appointment.

Pandora’s campaigns against book banning

By COLLEEN CONLEY
News Writer

Visitors this week to Pandora’s Books will be greeted by a yard sign cautioning them to be aware of “books at work,” as the store kicks off its campaign against censorship and banned books.

The display, at the store’s 808 Howard St. location, is part of a nationwide promotion “Celebrating the Freedom to Read” and will contain a collection of historically controversial and challenged books. These books have been banned for reasons ranging from language that is considered offensive to content that is considered racist.

Store manager Mandy Arnold, a Notre Dame graduate student, said Pandora’s hopes to make “people aware that censorship is alive and well in this country,” and to encourage attitudes that will allow for wide accessibility to all types of books.

“We are not out to gross sales,” Arnold said. Instead, the store’s primary focus is to incite ideas in print. “We Deliver daily to Notre Dame, Saint Mary’s, and Holy Cross campuses Visa/Mastercard 283-4242 Closed home football Saturdays and “to get interested in more than what’s going on in their lives.”

Arnold pointed out that it is commonly school districts or public libraries who ban books and that “they have the best interests of the community at heart, trying to protect the community from perceived evils. But they do more harm than good by banning, because there’s not much freedom when you can’t print the things you want to... censorship is the same kind of denial by not allowing books to be accessible, read your First Amendment.”

School children, in particular, are seriously disadvantaged by censorship because when they are denied access to delicate subjects, they miss the whole point of discussing and questioning a book’s portrayal of sensitive material, said Arnold. “This is not very healthy... and leads to a society of mindless idiots running around who don’t question their existence.”

By introducing children at a young age to issues such as racism and discussing and evaluating it with them, the chances are better that they won’t grow up to be prejudiced or bigoted, she continued.

Arnold went on to say that children should be allowed to talk about topics that society traditionally wants to shield them from, such as the occult or witchcraft, because it is through exposure to these fantastical mediums that children learn to discern story from reality.

Additionally, there are “horrendous theories and philosophies” such as Adolf Hitler’s Mein Kampf that are worthy of reading, because “in a tangential sort of way... it is a means of ensuring that these things are not forgotten.”

Saint Mary’s assistant professor of political science Sean Savage affirmed Arnold’s position favoring intellectual freedom. On a level of secondary education, he maintained that “as long as books are not sexually explicit, I really don’t see any reason to have a censorship policy. The First Amendment protects virtually complete and absolute access to ideas in print.”

Pandora’s bookstore is currently participating in a nationwide promotion to heighten awareness of the results of book banning.

‘Gays and lesbians’ make plea to be accepted and recognized by Notre Dame

By PETER AMEND
News Writer

Mike W. Miller and John Corvino, co-chairs of Gays and Lesbians of ND/SMC, asked that the Notre Dame community accept unconditionally their gay members by recognizing National Coming Out Day (NCOD). Miller and Corvino spoke at the Student Senate meeting this week and offered the following written proposal:

• The Student Senate of the University of Notre Dame, recognizing and fully appreciating the Catholic nature of this University and all that it represents, wholeheartedly condemns discrimination, harassment, and violence against gay and lesbian people.

• Recognizing that gay and lesbian students on this campus often feel the oppression that comes from misinformation and misunderstanding about homosexuality, we call upon the student body of this University to open their minds and hearts to their gay brothers and sisters and to stand up against any form of violence, discrimination, or harassment.

• Also recognizing how difficult it is for gay and lesbian people to live openly in an oppressive environment, we support the students in the Notre Dame community who have chosen to live openly and not to conceal or repress this basic aspect of their identities.

• Therefore, be it resolved that the Student Senate of the University of Notre Dame proclaims 11 October 1990 National Coming Out Day at Notre Dame in conjunction with the celebration across the country of NCOD in America.

The Senate will vote on the proposal next week. Also addressing the Senate, Adworks President, Damian Shiner, explained how Adworks has been reorganized to prevent another loss. Shiner said he has cut the payroll staff by one third, and made the accounting and distribution systems more efficient. “We have had no problems this year, and do not foresee any losses,” said Shiner.

Finally, the HPC report stated that the HPC will sponsor the first annual “Quarter Smorgas-bord,” held this Friday from 4-7 p.m. on Holy Cross Field. All proceeds will go to the Women’s Care Center and Zhengde Wang, the ND student who was hit by a drunk driver and is still at St. Joseph’s Hospital.
ALA kicks off national Banned Books Week

CHICAGO (AP) — What do Dr. Seuss, Stephen King and the editors of Webster’s dictionary have in common? Theirs are among the scores of books banned or challenged in the past year, the American Library Association said Monday in launching Banned Books Week.

We need to bring to the attention of American public the fact that our First Amendment rights are under attack,” said Judith Krug, director of the association’s Office for Intellectual Freedom. A Webster’s Dictionary edition was challenged in the upper Pittsgrove Township, N.J., school district last September. Parents working for a local logging company said the book portrayed their industry negatively.

The book remained on the second-grade required reading list after the challenge, but teachers voluntarily moved it to an optional list the following spring, said Superintendent Brian Buckley.

Stephen King’s “The Stand” was restricted to ninth-grade students with parental consent at Whitford Intermediate School in Beaverton, Ore., after some parents objected to violence and sexual language. Another King novel, “Christine,” was pulled from the library at Washington Middle School in Meriden, Conn., after a parent complained about offensive passages.

Jurors asked if they read Playboy

CINCINNATI (AP) — Potential jurors in an obscenity trial involving Robert Mapplethorpe’s sexually explicit photos were asked Monday whether they look at Playboy magazine or attend arts fund-raisers.

Many questioned during the first day of jury selection said they’d seen such adult magazines as Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler, but said they didn’t subscribe. None acknowledged having taken an art class or attending a fund-raiser for the arts.

The Contemporary Arts Center and its director, Dennis Barrie, were charged in April with pandering obscenity and displaying nude photos of children. The photographs were from the exhibit "Robert Mapplethorpe: The Perfect Moment.

The seven-week exhibition but attorneys got less than 50 prospective persons said they had personal contact with the art community. One person said she was a member of the Contemporary Arts Center, and three said they had seen the exhibit.

Protesters outside denounced the trial as homophobic intimidation.
AIDS victim made sex a hobby
Sleeping with 15 girls regularly proves deadly

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — By the time Romie Mutimusekwa was 15, he was sleeping regularly with three different girls. A few years later, the number had grown to 15 and he was proud to think any woman he asked would go to bed with him.

"I guess I made sex a hobby," said the 34-year-old.

A deadly hobby.

Mutimusekwa, from Zimbabwe's southern city of Bulawayo, contracted AIDS. He does not know who gave it to him, nor does he know who may have caught it from him.

Behavior like his has contributed to the rapid spread of the disease in Africa, and has helped make the continent the AIDS center of the world.

Two-thirds of the world's estimated AIDS cases are in Africa, and most of those are concentrated in about 12 countries across the continent's central, eastern and southern regions.

The problem only threatens to get worse, according to medical experts. Infection rates, unlike those in most other areas of the world, are rising in Africa. If current trends continue, millions of African infants will be born in the United States, which has recorded about half the world's known cases of AIDS, of one every 75 men and 700 women has HIV, WHO estimates.

Because of under-recognition, under-reporting and delays in reporting, WHO estimates only a fraction of the world's cases of AIDS and HIV have been recorded.

As of mid-1990, about 65,000 AIDS cases had been reported from Africa. But WHO estimates closer to 500,000 adult AIDS cases probably exist — more than half the estimated global total.

In what it calls a conservative estimate, the organization says 5 million Africans may be HIV carriers. AIDS and HIV are becoming more and more a disease of the developing world," said Michael Merson, WHO's anti-AIDS chief, in a telephone interview from Geneva. "By the year 2000, we expect 80 percent of the cases to be in the developing world.

The organization says about 20 million cases worldwide are expected by the end of the century.

Merson includes Latin America when he speaks of AIDS and the developing world, but WHO statistics show the severity of the disease in Africa far outstrips any other continent.

Today, AIDS is the leading cause of death among young adults in many African countries, said Merson.

The average African victim, however, differs from his American or European counterpart, who is usually a homosexual or an intravenous drug user. In Africa, most AIDS casualties are heterosexuals. Because of this, the number of women infected roughly equals the number of men.

And because many of the infected women are in their prime, HIV transmission from mother to child is an increasing problem.

Already this year, about 500,000 children carrying the virus have been born in Africa, says WHO. The organization estimates an additional 2 million to 3 million infected infants will be born before the year 2000. Another 10 million children born to infected mothers but who will not contract the disease are expected to become AIDS-related orphans in the 1990s, says WHO.

Dambudzo, a 26-year-old unemployed Zimbabwean, lost a 2-year-old daughter to the disease. The divorcee said she learned she had AIDS while still in the hospital after delivering her baby.

"I was really hurt because the baby had also contracted the disease and whenever she was brought in for breast-feeding, I would look at her and cry," Dambudzo told Ziana, Zimbabwe's news agency.

Oil prices peak as world tightens sanctions on Saddam

French President Francois Mitterrand delivered the first of a series of condemnations of Iraq, warning that Iraq’s aggression could lead to global anarchy. Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze speaks Tuesday, and President Bush is to address the 160-member assembly next Monday. Bush said in Washington on Monday "I’m not going to be distracted" by Saddam’s efforts to link the crisis with the Israeli-Palestinian dispute. "First we’ve got to take care of the situation that exists right now, naked aggression of one country against the other. That cannot be permitted to stand," Bush told a group of Arab-American leaders in Washington.

Saddam has suggested one way to ease the crisis would be for Israel to leave the Arab territories it has occupied since 1967. Iraq’s foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, was to address the United Nations the same day as Bush, but he has insisted on traveling to New York aboard Iraq’s flag carrier, Iraqi Airways.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit jumped $22.8 billion to a record $241.7 billion in August, but could be reduced before the fiscal year ends Sept. 30, the Treasury Department reported Monday.

The 67 percent surge over the comparable 11 months of 1989 boosted the spending imbalance well over the record of $221.1 billion posted in fiscal 1986. The August total, however, fell short of the one-month record of $253.3 billion set last March.

"We used to have years that were that bad," economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch said of the August deficit.

The department said about $25 billion of the August deficit reflected a shift of payments normally made in September such as military pay and Social Security checks to the previous month to avoid Labor Day weekend delays.

"This will affect September's results by $25 billion as compared to last year," it said in a statement.

Still, without the $25 billion early payment, the deficit so far this fiscal year would have totaled $216.9 billion. The deficit in September 1989 was $6.1 billion.

The Bush administration had forecast a $218.5 billion imbalance for all of fiscal 1990.

White House and congressional negotiators are trying to reach an agreement on reducing the deficit by $50 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 and $500 billion over the next five years.

Without an agreement, the White House estimates the fiscal 1991 deficit will total $232.8 billion.

Revenues in August totaled $78.5 billion, up 3.1 percent from the comparable month in 1989. But the receipts were offset by $113.2 billion in outlays, a 33.5 percent gain over August 1989.

In addition to the early payments, the spending bill included $2.6 billion for the Resolution Trust Corp., the government agency charged with bailing out the savings and loan industry. The S&L bailout cost $3.2 billion in July and $7.8 billion so far this year.

The government hopes to regain much of the bailout cost by selling real estate, loans, securities and other assets from failed thrifts. That would help reduce the deficit in future years.

"It's just a continuation of the trends we've been seeing," Steinberg said. "Receipts are not particularly strong because the economy is weakening."

Revenues for the first 11 months totaled $928.6 billion, up 4.2 percent from the first 11 months of last year. Spending during the period totaled $1.2 trillion, 12.8 percent over the comparable period of 1989.

As usual, the biggest spending categories were the military, Social Security and other programs of the Department of Health and Human Services and interest on the national debt.

Military spending totaled $27.8 billion in August and $269.2 billion so far this year. It is projected to total $270.2 billion for the entire fiscal year.

Social Security payments amounted to $41.2 billion for the month and $244.2 billion for the year. They are projected to total $244.9 billion for the year.

Other HHS payments, including Medicare and Medicaid, totaled $183.3 billion in August and $177.9 billion for the year. They are projected to total $192.4 billion for 1990.

Interest on the national debt amounted to $18.9 billion for the month and $77.6 billion so far this year. Such interest is projected to total $261.1 billion for the entire year.

Bush's son faces judge for costing taxpayers $1 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's son Neil goes before a judge Tuesday in Denver for a rare public hearing that could lead to his being barred from working for a bank or savings and loan.

Federal regulators have accused Bush, 35, of conflict of interest in his former role as a director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association, a Denver thrift that failed in late 1988 at an estimated cost by selling real estate, loans, securities and other assets from failed thrifts. That would help reduce the deficit in future years.

It's just a continuation of the trends we've been seeing," Steinberg said. "Receipts are not particularly strong because the economy is weakening."

Revenues for the first 11 months totaled $928.6 billion, up 4.2 percent from the first 11 months of last year. Spending during the period totaled $1.2 trillion, 12.8 percent over the comparable period of 1989.

As usual, the biggest spending categories were the military, Social Security and other programs of the Department of Health and Human Services and interest on the national debt.

Military spending totaled $27.8 billion in August and $269.2 billion so far this year. It is projected to total $270.2 billion for the entire fiscal year.

Interest on the national debt amounted to $18.9 billion for the month and $77.6 billion so far this year. Such interest is projected to total $261.1 billion for the entire year.

Bush could have avoided a public hearing by agreeing not to dispute the conflict-of-interest charges, as other S&L officials have done in nearly all such previous cases. By fighting the government, he has taken the case out of attorneys' and regulators' offices into a public forum.

"The swords are drawn," Bush's attorney, James Nesp-land, said recently.

Bush plans to testify in his own defense at the hearing, which is expected to continue through most of the week.

Although such a public hearing is almost unprecedented, the participants don't expect any fireworks or courtroom drama. In fact, Nesp-land said, "This is going to be an extraordinarily boring hearing."

That's because it will mainly be a replay of written testimony already submitted to the administrative law judge, Bruce Davidson. Regulators and outside experts will be cross-examined on that testimony in the torqueys for the two sides.

The judge won't issue an opinion for some time.

Today's complexities demand an aware citizenry

By Mike Byrne

I just turned 21 this past August 31 and one of the places where I was feted and sated at was The Commons. It's a place where I was membered something a man might say. His task at hand was not getting drunk. In fact, he really didn't seem to think of living in this complex, man."

We're waiting ever so patiently for a stout lady to serve up some stout, and this easy, man," and walked away.

That piece of his mind was a minimum, utterly selfish, and it's true. I'd like to think of myself as someone who keeps up with current events; I mini-

Voices of the students

"I'm afraid I'll have to pause here—because I could do nothing but nod—and more business transactions—most any personal financial decision, or, the, and/or on television, for, at least three times a week. Because there's no solution to continue reading unless they believe there's some reason to follow the news. Here goes. One should follow the news—in newspapers, magazines, on radio, and/or on television, for, at a minimum, utterly selfish, practical reasons. If one is aware of the events which daily affect and change the globe, the nation, the state and the local- ity in which one lives, he can shape his actions on a local level so as to secure the best future he can for himself, his family and his friends. Conversely, the uninformed individual necessarily gambles, to a greater degree, with his future.

I once again apologize for placing this primer in front of adult eyes, but I felt the need to make this point to the younger generation is going to remember where it came from."

Parents who wonder where the younger generation is going should remember where it came from.

"Oh, they'll drift...some...eventually...priding is such a complicated thing, we know..."

QUOTE OF THE DAY

Sam Ewing
In its first year of existence, the FRED line is bringing in an interesting new aspect to the Notre Dame community. The FRED line, ND student government's latest method of gaining input from the student body, is bringing in important suggestions and comments for possible improvements by student government.

ND students who dial x3733 (F-R-E-D) are welcomed by a short, recorded message which requests that they leave their suggestions, along with their name, address and phone number so that they can be contacted later. The use of an answering machine in this process enables the service to be offered 24 hours a day.

At regular intervals, the messages are replayed by student body Vice-President, Fred Tomhers. Fred takes down the suggestions and comments for answering machine in this process suggestions, along with their (F-R-E-D)

In its first year of existence, the FRED line's bizarre calls may shed light on the mysterious side of the FRED line. They also will serve as testimony to the ingenuity of the student body. While some of these calls were possibly intended to be serious, it is highly unlikely that they all were.

Looking at the structure of the academic year, one student commented that classes should not be held on Mondays or Fridays. Another felt that classes should start later in the year so that students would have time to build their lofts.

The area of campus improvements brought yet another interesting request. Apparently nighttime waders through the Hesburgh reflecting pool were shocked to discover that, upon emerging from the water, their legs had turned blue. It was suggested that the dye presently used in the pool be removed to avoid further incidents.

Some socially conscious suggestions have been made. For example, a student requested that the gold in the dome be melted down and the proceeds used to feed the hungry people of the world.

The mention of bizarre calls to the FRED line would be incomplete without the mentioning of the line's regular caller. This caller claims to be, incredible as it may sound to political science majors, to be the high ranking official which leaked the Watergate scandal, "Deep Throat." This notable official, now a resident of Pangborn Hall, has observed various injustices occurring on the campus grounds.

One of "Deep Throat's" observations was made at the South Dining Hall. Note that this observation has been summarized to remove what seemed to be suspiciously off-color details. Much to a student's dismay, he was only allowed to remove two pieces of fruit from the cafeteria instead of three. The third piece of fruit was confiscated by a cafeteria employee. The official was also rudely kicked off South Field during a pickup baseball game.

"Deep Throat" has expressed great confidence in Fred. One of the official's messages closes with "Fred, I believe you, I trust you, and I know you can do something about this." There are rumors of a possible plot by "Deep Throat" to place Fred in power as President, although details are uncertain.

Among the really bizarre calls, Fred and Bob have received interesting propositions. Supposedly the line is helping them to gain dates, as well as hear from admirers. One female in the office uses the line to make comments about Bob's physique.

As a final note, the student government seems pleased with the response to the line. And what about the origin of the name? Well, apparently Fred never knew about the name until it was installed, and therefore had no way of knowing what would hit him.

New suggestion line attracts offbeat grievances

We're the keg is definitely the best of all, we offer high quality outputting at extremely reasonable prices. In fact our prices are some of the lowest in the nation. Our customers are some of the finest in the nation. Special discounts are available for large jobs.

Our stuff is familiar with most major desktop publishing and graphics programs for the Macintosh. And we have a large library of Adobe Typefaces.

If you found it a bit too small, you've probably already missed the 190 dpi output of the laserwriter and switched to the 120 dpi resolution of our Linotronic Imagewriter.

Notre Dame stumbles in R1 volleyball tourney

Entering the Rhode Island Tournament last weekend, the Notre Dame women’s volleyball team expected to come away with a victory. In order to cap itself into the toughest part of its schedule, unfortunately for the Irish (5-5), the weekend did not prove to be as easy as the springboard coach Art Lambert had hoped it would be. None of the teams were ranked, but with only one win.

The Irish did not start off well for the Irish. Facing Sherbrooke, a team from Canada, the Irish were in trouble. After losing the first game, 19-29, Notre Dame staged a short-lived comeback, taking the second game 16-14. However, the Irish were put away quickly in the third and fourth games, 15-10, 15-13 by the Vert & K. On a bit of a better note, the loss was not added to after Saturday afternoon, due to the international standing of the teams.

Notre Dame looked better in the second match of the day against Louisiana State, which placed 28-9 record in 1989. The Golden Dome was filled quickly and easily in the first game, 15-10, but stormed back to take the game away quickly in the third, 15-9. Notre Dame rolled in the fourth game, 15-6, and fought for the fifth game, winning 16-14.

The match was highlighted by 17 kills by Antoine Norges, six by Svetlana Fiebelkorn and the 50 assists set by freshman Janelle Stitt.

In the weekend’s closer, against the University of Rhode Island, Notre Dame came out strong, but faltered. The Irish put away URI in the first game, 15-10. Rhode Island took the second game, 15-11. Notre Dame came back in the third, 15-13, but the third-hearts goal (14) took control, winning the fourth and fifth sets, 5-15, 15-10.

“We didn’t do enough,” said Coach Art Lambert, who was hardly pleased with the team’s performance this weekend. “We have to improve our blocking, which did not exist.”

Notre Dame will host Penn State and Miami (Ohio) on Friday and Saturday, respectively. During the weekend of the Irish, the host the University of Rhode Island, the Vert & Ks.

“Notre Dame is a very physical team,” which placed 6-7 record in 1989, still could not handle the remaining five minutes.

The Irish then traveled to Milwaukee, Wis., to face the Marquette Warriors Sunday afternoon, hoping to erase some of the bad luck that had plagued them ever since it bailed Valparaiso over a week ago.

“Any good luck leprechaun must have been exhausted because we didn’t play well at all. We were going to take the second half of the MSU game, played well in the first half against the Warriors. Going into half time the game was a scoreless tie, but it didn’t take long for the Irish to get back into the game. Just 25 seconds into the second stanza, Barry Notoro would knock down a kill, followed by the closing minutes of the game beginning.

At the 45-25 mark, the Warriors’ Josh Norman took a pass from teammate at 45-25, and put it past Fitz to notch the first score. The Irish would respond with a 13-2 run, but still trailing 53-54 had passed in the game, to make the score 2-0.

Fitz and the Irish defense were able to buckle down for over 25 minutes, hoping in vain for the ND offense to get the game back within striking distance. Ironically, Marquette broke Notre Dame’s lines and put the game away.

Spaztek again beat the Irish defensive system and established the lead 2-0 mark to seal the fate of Notre Dame. Then, to add insult to injury, Marquette’s Matt Bredes added an unassisted goal with just under three minutes to make the final score 4-0 in favor of the Warriors.

With those two losses, the Irish capped a week in which they played four games in seven days. Notre Dame now has until Friday to rest, regroup, and solve several problems of the 1990 NCAA co-champions, the Irish.

One of the most pressing of these is the lack of offense. After scoring 14 points against Valparaiso, Notre Dame scored just 16 in a loss against Marquette. The Irish have now gone three games and eight days without scoring.

Another question mark for the Irish is at goalie. Freshman Matt Fitz replaced junior Peter Gulli after the latter surrendered only one goal, on a penalty kick, in Friday’s game. Fitz did a good job against another goal against Michigan State, but was rocked for four goals in the Marquette game.

“It was a tough stretch of games for us this week,” said senior co-captain Danny Stehlin. “It’s been a hard season. We’ve kind of been unlucky, but you make your own luck. A couple days of rest and practice, and we’ll come together.

In everyday things we’re going to be the team they’re looking for. We’re going to get one sooner or later,” noted Peter Gulli. “We had two losses, but we’re not losing.”

About Peter Gulli, Junior goalkeeper at Notre Dame, has been a big difference for the Irish. We’ve got some serious thinking to do, and some

BOストン (AP) — Boston's Roger Clemens, sidelined with a sore right shoulder since Sept 4., was given medical clearance to pitch on Friday against the Toronto Blue Jays.

"He plans to throw on Tuesday and he's looking forward to pitching on Friday," Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Red Sox doctor, said Monday at a news conference at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

"Roger feels he's pitched through more than this in the past," Pappas said after examining the two-time Cy Young Award winner. "Roger wants to pitch and he feels he can pitch Friday night."

Pappas, an orthopedic specialist, emphasized that there is nothing seriously wrong with Clemens’ right shoulder.

"There is no problem with his rotator cuff," Pappas said. "There is no structural damage within his shoulder."

Clemens, 20-6 with a 1.98 earned run average, was stricken with severe tendinitis within his shoulder.

"For his performance in big games and his ability to bring his teammates up from bad," said Pappas on Sept 8. Detmer completed 38 of 54 passes to lead Brigham Young to a 28-21 triumph over Miami, which was the top-ranked team in the country at the time. And on Sept 15 he rallied the Cougars from a 29-7 deficit against Washington State, throwing three touchdown passes in the last 15 minutes of a 50-36 BYU victory.

Vaughn has not exactly been racking up the yards against a bunch of sissies, either. His 201-yard performance came against a top-ranked Notre Dame team which gave up only 117 yards rushing against the entire Michigan State team Saturday. And UCLA, which is having an off-year, is still always a decent team. Some of the credit for Vaughn’s success will go to a Michigan offensive line which may be the biggest and best in the country. Likewise, a portion of Detmer’s success will be credited to the sophisticated passing attack of Brigham Young coach LaVeil Edwards, and a weak Cougar schedule.

Virginia quarterback Shawn Moore, who was a preseason favorite just like Detmer, might soon be in the race, too. He has completed 53 of 74 passes for 831 yards in four games this season, but he will play against an even weaker schedule with the Gators than Detmer will this year, and he will almost certainly end up with inferior numbers.

So if Vaughn and Detmer continue to perform like they have in the first few weeks of the season, it will be difficult to give the Heisman to another candidate. It will also be difficult to choose between them.

Notre Dame both lucky and good in early going

The two players who have emerged as the early-season frontrunners in the race for the Heisman Trophy have reached the spotlight from opposite directions.

Brigham Young quarterback Ty Detmer was one of the preseason favorites to win the Heisman. He has still managed to surpass the expectations of all but the most optimistic BYU fans in leading the Cougars to victories in their first four games.

Michigan tailback Jon Vaughn, on the other hand, was not even assured of a starting spot until the week before Wolverine's first game against Notre Dame. The tailback position was supposed to be a question mark for Michigan this season with last year's star Tony Boles gone. But Vaughn has broken or tied 13 NCAA records. In last year's Holiday Bowl, a 50-39 Cougar loss to Penn State, Detmer passed for more yards (376) than any other player ever has in any bowl game.

The San Antonio native has been sensational this season as well. Saturday he completed 26 of 38 passes for 514 yards and three touchdowns in a 62-34 win over San Diego State. That brought his season totals to 1,755 yards (439 yards per game). Also to Detmer's credit are 15. He improved on national television audience; Vaughn has achieved nationwide attention in a hurry.

The leprechaun that has followed Notre Dame football team, guiding it to last-minute victories in the past two weekends, obviously hasn't had time to follow the men's soccer team.

The Irish (2-6-1) dropped two games over the weekend, losing to Michigan State 1-0 Friday night and getting battered 4-0 by Marquette Sunday afternoon.

The Michigan State game was played on a wet, muddy field that had been torn up by the women's game that immediately preceded the men's game. The playing conditions were definitely to the Spartans' advantage.

“...It (the field) affected us,” said Assistant Coach Chris Petrulievich. “They were bigger, and faster, and we were smaller and quicker. It slowed us down.”

Regardless of the field conditions, obviously the final box-score on the game indicated the parity of the two teams. The Irish had only two shots on goal while the Spartans managed only four; the Irish had two saves by MSU goalkeeper Pat Trese and three for Notre Dame (two by Peter Gulli and one by Mike Fitz).

Furthermore, Michigan State had only two corner kicks, while ND had just five.
