Saint Mary's College awarded $250,000 grant by foundation

By CORINNE PAVLIS

Saint Mary's College has been awarded a $250,000 challenge grant from the Knight Foundation of Akron, Ohio, to implement a comprehensive program designed to assist incoming, cultivating, and retaining highly qualified faculty.

Saint Mary's was one of only twenty-five private liberal arts institutions invited by the Knight Foundation's "Excellence in Undergraduate Education" program to submit project proposals, and one of just ten colleges awarded funding.

The project, entitled "Faculty for the Next Century: The Conditions for Quality," will establish mentor programs at each of the six interactive and.loadings for new faculty during their first years. Each of the six interactive elements resulted from three years of intensive research by Saint Mary's faculty and administrators. The actual program was prepared by Assistant Dean of Faculty Patrick White. The creation of the SISTAR, the first component of the program, involves offering students opportunities for scholarly interaction with faculty. SISTAR will provide stipends to students who will work as junior colleagues with individual faculty members.

The teams will be conducting summer research projects. Similar student-faculty research programs currently exist in the sciences and humanities.

SISTAR will provide students from all academic areas and will encourage a more symbiotic relationship between student and teacher. This opportunity, usually not awarded until graduate school, will be extended to four Saint Mary's students each academic year. The College hopes to motivate students toward careers in teaching sciences.

"The student research component is a real key to the project," said White, the program's creator. "Younger individuals interested in academic careers often have the misconception that their goals can only be achieved through leading a university setting.

White hopes to provide opportunities which will create a "grow our own" type of initiative for students. With such initiative White hopes to foster circumstances which will allow our students to see that professional academic aspirations can be realized within the framework of a small liberal arts college."

Novice-Mentor partnerships, the second part of the proposal, will involve pairing new faculty with experienced members. New faculty will be paired with colleagues who, in a one-year mentoring program designed to better acquaint junior faculty with the traditions and missions of the college. The College hopes that senior faculty will help the new members arrive at the demands of full-time teaching in a student-centered environment such as Saint Mary's. The goal is for new faculty during their first year to be "mentored" by the college.

Tree’s return stirs thoughts of bands

Stanford is back in town and that can only mean one thing: the Tree.

Stanford probably has one of the best mascots in college football. The Tree was the star of Stanford’s halftime show two years ago, and the band with its laid-back attitude and uniforms make it my favorite band. The coming of the Tree got me to thinking about other memorable existing bands (our own band will always be near and dear to my heart.) If there ever was a battle of the collegiate bands, these would be the likely winners:

BIGGEST BAND: It’s got to be Purdue. Their band covers the entire playing field and the first three rows of the stadium. Plus, the added features make the Boiler makers worthy of this title: the World’s Largest Drum, the battalion of baton twirlers, the other twins (one of whom kept dropping her baton at the last home game) and the Go-Go Girls.

MOST OBNOXIOUS BAND: USC. They play that stupid fight song after every damn play. They’ve got to be obnoxious that an entire section of Irish fans were dropping her baton at the last home game (in case you don’t remember the Boston College game?)

WORST FIGHT SONG: Michigan. Every time they play “Hail to the Victors” it gives their opponents a chance to shout in unison, “Will the Irish welcome. After all, he’s already dressed up in green.

Deputies in Slovenia on Thursday proposed a plebiscite on independence from Yugoslavia after declaring many federal laws incompatible with the republic's newly drawn constitution. In the neighboring republic of Croatia, deputies voted down a proposal to follow Slovenia's lead and declare independence. Debate also raged over ethnic tensions between Croats and Serbs. One irate deputy hurled his briefcase at an opponent. In the Parliament of Slovenia, the smallest of Yugoslavia's six republics, legislators ruled that 30 federal laws touching on economy, politics and defense were incompatible with the Slovenian constitution as it was amended last week.

Candlelight vigil held to promote peace in Mid-East

By SCOTT KEEGEL
News Writer

A candlelight vigil for peace held near the Old Fieldhouse Mall last night was "inspired primarily by the current situation in the Middle East," said Father Newton of Campus Ministry, "and this week was thought to be an appropriate time."

This week marks the feast of Saint Francis of Assisi, who is often regarded as the patron saint of peace.

After reciting the Prayer of Saint Francis at the War Memorial, each person in the crowd of about 150 lit a candle, which was carried in procession to the Grotto. Many sang such hymns as "Amazing Grace" and "Let There Be Peace on Earth" as they walked.

There the group sang and prayed en masse, and moments of silence were observed for personal reflection.

Michael Affleck, assistant professional specialist at the center for Social Concerns pointed out that the vigil served "to remind us of our responsibility as Christians to promote peace. The vigil is a public activity for peace; not one in protest, but rather in prayer."

When asked if the vigil could be made an annual event, Father Newton commented that "it has been considered, but it will depend upon the overall response it receives."

The event was well attended and many people indicated their belief that the vigil is well worth repeating each year.

Yesterday Robert Pasin, student body president, urged people to attend, noting that, "our prayers for peace are needed now more than ever."

ND to stop paying for "U" paper

By BETSY PUNSALAN
News Writer

The "U" college paper supplement will no longer be distributed with the Observer, according to Student Body President Rob Pasin.

"When Fred and I were considering renewing the subscription, we asked ourselves: 'Do students really read these?'

Last week, we saw [the 'U'] all over the floor of the dining hall," Pasin said.

The subscription costs $15,000 a year and is paid for by the student activity fee.

A second reason for stopping distribution of the "U" on campus is because of complaints received concerning the advertisements for condoms in the classified section.

"Since the money used to pay for the "U" comes out of the student activities fee and some people complained [about the condom ads], we looked into having the ads removed," Pasin said.

This practice would follow last year's request from Student Government to "U" publishers that Notre Dame receive "U" papers without any alcohol advertisements.

The publishers had agreed to provide Notre Dame with "U" editions free of condom ads. However, last week's edition did contain the offensive ads.

"The overwhelming reason for discontinuing the "U" is that students don't read it," Pasin said. "The secondary reason is that the "U" broke the contract we had with them regarding the condom ads."

Joe Cassidy, director of Student Activities, received the initial complaints about the offensive ads.

"I think it's one of those ethical, student responsibility decisions," said Cassidy, "Student leaders have to decide on how they want to project the University."

Alison Cocks, editor-in-chief of The Observer, regrets that the "U" will no longer be distributed.

"I think it's unfortunate that more people didn't appreciate the opportunity."

Eastern European countries has decreased, said Miscamble. In addition, Vietnam can no longer rely on cheap goods from the Soviet Union. The American embargo is seen by Vietnamese as a "big barrier" to economic progress.

The Vietnamese, however, are aware of their situation, and are contemplating ways to improve it. "There is an enormous interest in Vietnam in the operation of a market economy," said Miscamble, who said that be is not a "big fan" of market economies.

There is hope for the Vietnam economy, he said. There are sizable amounts of off-shore oil, as well as other raw materials, in Vietnam. And the Vietnamese are hard-working, talented labors.

Miscamble spoke of the differences between Hanoi, a northern city, and Ho Chi Minh City(formerly Saigon), a southern city.

In Hanoi, which "withstood incredible bombardment" during the Vietnam War, there is little military presence, and little evidence of human injuries resulting from the war, according to Miscamble.

There is an active market in Hanoi, with a decent availability of food, said Miscamble. With little direct begging, there seems to be a "Puritan ethic" to the air.

Ho Chi Minh City, which, according to Miscamble, is still referred to as "Saigon" by most Vietnamese, is twice as large as Hanoi. While bicycles are prevalent in Hanoi, motor scooters and even cars fill the streets of Saigon.

Regarding the prospect of peace in Cambodia, Miscamble said that one cannot underestimate the "continuing danger" of the Khmer Rouge. Western nations such as the United States, which has supported the Khmer Rouge, have never "named them for what they are."

He said there is no guarantee that the Khmer Rouge will be disarmed, even with the intervention of the United Nations, which recently proposed a peace plan for Cambodia. In spite of the unrest in Cambodia, Miscamble said that the culture is being rebuilt. Some medical schools, hospitals and universities have been constructed, he said.

O'Leary defines, urges women to embrace "authentic womanhood"

By Ann Marie Hartman

Magazine columnist Dale O'Leary urges women to embrace "authentic womanhood." She defines this as being separate from the ideal that feminists originated at the beginning of the movement in the sixties. O'Leary believes that women are now operating in a mode more ideal and radical than the one that the feminist revolution has been fighting for.

On Friday, October 5, O'Leary brought these sentiments last night to a crowd of spectators. She said that the feminist movement was taken over by liberals on a quest for equality, and that radical feminists "want equality of result not equality of opportunity and they will use force."

Radical feminists say the woman will only be free if she can find a non-coercive family. The feminist revolution has realized how drastic women do not make them equal.

O'Leary said that the "authentic womanhood" that women may now encompass to transform the ideology of a woman as a mother, having respect for men, where the family is good. With this in mind, O'Leary said that it is still possible to manage both a family and career.

At the conclusion of O'Leary's discussion, the floor was opened to questions from those in attendance. A question was asked about women serving equally in the military with men. When asked if she would send her daughter as well as her son to fight for liberty, she said that she would not. Her justification was that, at times, men are better suited for certain tasks and it is male instinct to want to protect the women and children. However, O'Leary stressed that these differences between men and women do not make them unequal.

O'Leary made it clear that equality between the sexes is not something that is going to be granted by the government or the result of a sexual revolution, but a thing that we turn to theology, she said.

Newspaper recycling to expand

Special to The Observer

University Food Services will begin recycling The Observer in the dining halls this semester starting with collection at the North Dining Hall during lunch hours on Monday, Oct. 8. Collection will also begin in the South Dining Hall on the same day.

Cardboard recycling containers will be placed near the meal tray returns and near the exits to provide easy and convenient collection of the student newspaper. The food services' newspaper collection program will eventually expand to include LaFortune Student Center and the Oak Room.

Newspaper recycling is currently available in participating residence halls for students.

This recycling effort is the result of a newly formed University Food Services Recycling Task Force. The task force includes Chairman Mike Davy, manager of the North Dining Hall, and involves staff from all campus food services' facilities.

The task force was designated by David Prenzlikowski, director of University Food Services, a member of the University Task Force on Recycling, which has been working for approximately one year to establish an intensive recycling program on campus.

University Food Services is one of the largest departments on campus and consequently generates a sizable portion of the waste stream at the university.

This concentrated effort by food services is an attempt to begin reducing this waste and actively participate in the current campus-wide recycling program.

The task force, which meets every week, will address such issues as recycling paper, cardboard, glass and plastic materials, as well as reducing the amount of office waste it currently produces.

Tough job, great reward

Gregory Tuel, in ND sweatshirt, stands with residents of Isla Alta, Paraguay. Tuel a 1987 ND graduate, served for two years in Isla Alta as part of his duty with the United States Peace Corps.

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Writer

Gregory Tuel, a 1987 graduate of Notre Dame and a member of the U.S. Peace Corps, advises students interested in volunteering for the Peace Corps to "make sure they're dedicated to the basic ideals of the Peace Corps."

He said they should "believe in the importance of helping people."

Tuel became interested in the Peace Corps during his senior year at ND. He sent in his application in July 1987 and was interviewed three times. Six months later, he was invited to be a volunteer.

In April 1988, he began three months of training in Paraguay. During these three months he studied Spanish, Guarani (an ancient Indian language), and the customs, traditions, geography and politics of Paraguay.

Tuel was sworn in and sent to Isla Alta, where he spent two years in the performing his service. He said of his experience in Paraguay, "It was like being born again, but not having parents."

Tuel reflected on his attitude towards his relations with the people of Isla Alta. "In order to influence the people of my community, I must live with them."

This meant living without electricity and running water. He awoke at 7:30 a.m. to do his day's work which included yardwork and house cleaning. He said, "All of my everyday jobs are part of my mission: volunteers are actually trained to promote development by maintaining a model home."

Tuel also taught classes at the local high school. "We (Peace Corps volunteers) are taught to plant ideas for progress by means of well-placed information, suggestions and provocative questions."

Tuel also helped to form a health commission for the people of Isla Alta. The citizens of this town were not educated about proper hygiene, according to Tuel. As a result, "ninety-six percent of the population" had worms. Tuel said, "Many of the children suffered from malnutrition."

By the summer of 1989, the health commission had improved the sanitation in Isla Alta by helping "ninety percent of the 110 families" build latrines and by conducting town meetings to discuss and teach hygiene.

Tuel said the basic goals of the Peace Corps are to help people of underdeveloped countries, introduce another viewpoint to these people and to introduce U.S. citizens to foreign lands.

When asked whether the people of Isla Alta received him with open arms or were suspicious of him when he arrived in their community, he said, "Some people had a lot of respect for the Peace Corps. At the same time, some people were unimpressed."

Tuel says there was a baby smuggling ring operating at the time and about twenty-five percent of the people thought he was a baby smuggler and another twenty-five percent were convinced he was an agent for the CIA.

"After a year," said Tuel, "people still thought I was a CIA agent, but I was still respected."

Tuel said he gained a lot from his two years in Isla Alta. He became fluent in another language and learned new customs. "In Paraguay, volunteers talk to and listen to people in two foreign languages in order to reveal and learn from the other possible ways to live."

"The hard work necessary every day to keep the self healthy and adjust to the conditions," seemed to "stick out" most from his experience.

He also said one can overcome these obstacles by being dedicated to the "pursuit of helping other people."

To Peace Corps volunteers and those interested in volunteering, he said, "Your amount of initiative determines success."

He also said, "Each experience serves as a point of reference when trying to make informed decisions about the world."

Fireside chat introduces new philosophy

By MOLLY MALLOY
News Writer

By thinking of occurrences only in their relationship to past, present and future, Western society has trapped itself, according to the Circular Frame of Reference. The Circular Frame of Reference helps to avoid this tendency, by putting everything into a continuous circle giving different perspectives from different vantage points, according to Ronald Dorris, assistant professor of American Studies. At a fireside chat yesterday, "African Philosophy and the Circular Frame of Reference," Dorris said this cyclical philosophy is non-secular and is found in all cultures. This philosophy can combat "the bid of Western society to control our essence."

Registration is the first part of the Circular Frame of Reference, according to Dorris. Registration is followed by a noticeable sensation. Under this philosophy, sensation is the basis of one's perceptions. Dorris said. Perceptions then lead to conceptions.

Only through this series of reactions can anything be conceived as real or "it," according to Dorris. Therefore, "to do something for the sake of doing it is to do something to be seen," he said.

The whole point of the Circular Frame of Reference is to avoid doing things just as it is seen, according to Dorris. This philosophy concentrates on capturing the "iness" of things through a six point model which relates back to the four step process of registration, sensation, conception, perception and conception.

The first step is presentation of a challenge as a revelation, Dorris explained. To illustrate this step, he used as an example someone whose house is destroyed by a hurricane. Rather than view the hurricane as a tragedy, it can be seen as an opportunity to start over. Thus, the challenge becomes a sign of what one should do next, he said.

These revelations come from nature, other humans or within oneself, according to Dorris.

Acceptance or rejection of what has been revealed is the next step in the cycle. If one rejects the revelation, the cycle stops there. But acceptance leads to the search for some greater truth, which is what Dorris called the third step.

Through this search comes discovery, which comes when "you begin to understand how to name what's coming at you," he said.

Confirmation of discovery, like the revelation, comes from nature, from others or from within oneself, Dorris said. Once this confirmation is established, only the final step remains.

This step, planning of the strategy, brings the philosophy full circle as it provides a knowledge of the immediate action when one is confronted with a similar challenge or revelation.

Westerners escape Iraq

DHAIJRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Three Britons who escaped from Iraq by sea said Thursday their fear of Iraq sustained them through their long hours bobbing in 10-foot swells of the open Persian Gulf.

The three, rescued Wednesday morning along with two Frenchmen off the border city of Khafji, spent 25 hours in a 10-foot fiberglass boat floating through the marshes and canals of southern Iraq, down the Shatt-al-Arab waterway and into the gulf.

They avoided lights, used a small compass to navigate and got lost several times before being picked up by a Saudi coast guard vessel.

"It's a trip I wouldn't like to do again, but it was well worth it now that I am here," said Mike Teesdale, 40, told a news conference. "My fear was of Iraq, not of the trip."

The men said they would fly back to London early Friday. It was the first report of Western men escaping Iraq in over six weeks. Baghdad has permitted hundreds of women and children to leave Iraq and Kuwait since its invasion Aug. 2 of Kuwait, but has restricted departures of thousands of Western men.

Iraq has taken several hundred hostages and put them near key military and civilian targets, describing them as "guests" serving to prevent a military attack on Iraq. Western leaders have described them as a "human shield."

The Britons said they knew of some Americans being held near the oil installation where they worked south of the Iraqi port of Basra. They said they did not want to reveal the identity to order by mail call late for the Sky Production Co. ROTC enables many to attend Notre Dame

The impending dedication of the new Pasquerilla Center has prompted members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community to suggest that the Reserve Officer's Training Corps (ROTC) program goes against the mission of this Catholic institution and should be dropped. These changes are unclear for and against.

While it is true that weapons training is a part of the ROTC program, it is training at a basic level. Participants in the program are not being brainwashed to kill. The majority of the participants in Monday's event were Potawatomi Indians. This University would not stand only rude, but also a good demonstration of the ignorance that seems to persist on this campus. Despite the fact that this week is supposed to help dispel common stereotypes about other cultures, The Observer has chosen to perpetuate them. It was hardly an "Indian invasion." The majority of the participants in Monday's event were Potawatomi Indians. This University would not stand for the education of its people. The University is now in violation of this agreement because qualified ROTC scholars do not receive a free education. It is very ironic that Notre Dame can so strongly claim that they are a family-based organization and at the same time leave important contributing members out in the cold. Furthermore, explanations were given previous to the beginning of every dance.

Therefore, labeling the inter-tribal dance as "some sort of tribal dance" was inexcusable. I hope that in the future The Observer takes more care in covering cultural events. What The Observer may deem unimportant is another person's life and history. I encourage everyone to attend this week's events sponsored by the Multicultural Executive Council. By doing so, you will not only learn about other people's cultures, but you will also learn about yourself.

Wording offensive to students

Dear Editor:

One objective of the 1990 Multicultural Fall Festival is to demonstrate the beauty of the various cultures represented at Notre Dame. For several of my colleagues and me, the caption below the photograph on page 1 of The Observer, Oct. 2, illustrates insensitivity to Notre Dame's American Indian students and their culture. We believe that this unfortunate choice of words works against the purposes of the Multicultural Fall Festival and deserves an apology from the person on The Observer staff who wrote the caption.

More attention needs to be given to children of poverty

By Maura McCabe Sheehan

As world leaders of more than 70 nations gathered at the United Nations last weekend for a summit on the plight of the world’s children, one child was left to ponder over the hypocrisy of the Bush Administration’s policies on children in this country.

On Sept. 25, the Census Bureau released a report which revealed that in 1990, the gross national product (GNP) of children under 18 years old was $12,675 a year. In that same year, the GNP of children under five was $10,267. According to the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, in 1990, 5 percent of children under 12 lived below the poverty line.

The United States cannot allow its most valuable resource—its children—to live in poverty. Action must be taken immediately, before it is too late.

Maura McCabe Sheehan is a graduate student in the department of economics.

S.T. helps the injured

Nore Dame has won its last football game of the season, and fans pour onto the field, but the field is not at the same level of the stands. As your best friend jumps he bends his ankle, and you have no idea what your next course of action should be. Do you rush onto the field, or do you stay with your fallen comrade and try to treat his injury?

Actually, you will not need to do anything because of the services of a little appreciated campus organization. Any injuries to fans are tended to by the F.A.S.T. organization. This acronym stands for First Aid Services Team, and they are a presence at each Notre Dame football game.

These lifesaving techniques prove themselves necessary when least expected, and the Purdue football game illustrated this fact. For three quarters the expertise was unnecessary, but suddenly in a manner of five minutes, teams were called to accidents at three separate sites in the stands. A diaphoresis patient had collapsed, an usher had a seizure, and a woman fainted and hit her head. The F.A.S.T. team was probably never noticed in the stands, but they responded when needed.

Thirty-four trained members of the F.A.S.T. organization are present at each contest. They are on the sidelines of the field, in the top rows of the stands, and under the stands assisting injured fans at the two first aid stations they help operate. They can be distinguished by their red smocks with white crosses, and each member of F.A.S.T. can treat a variety of injuries based on their standard first aid and CPR training.

As may be assumed, a certain majority of the seventy members of F.A.S.T. are interested in the medical profession, but they can also count electrical engineers and English majors among their ranks. Of course a certain amount of training is necessary for these positions, but the most important requirement is a love for working with people.

While many Notre Dame students could not imagine watching the game from anywhere but the stands, members of F.A.S.T. relish the chance to be an active part of the weekend festivities. No one expresses any sadness at not watching every minute of every game with their friends, and co-workers must create new friendships in order to work together successfully.

A successful organization depends on the total work of its members, and senior Laura Olaszewski serves as the coordinator of these members. Her responsibility is to make certain that workers are present at not only every football game but at every event that first aid might be necessary. She not only coordinates football, but she also coordinates Non Varsity Athletics, basketball games, concerts, and any other event which occurs in the JACC. The activities of her organization are coordinated with the desires of the administration and the actions of Joann Burrington. "She [Joann] does everything," said Olszewski.

The F.A.S.T. organization has come to depend on the work of Burrington more and more of late as the group has only recently come to exist as its own entity apart from the Red Cross. This new freedom has meant a budget and the ability to update equipment and conduct recruiting.

Although every home football game is not going to be an emergency situation, when accidents do happen, the F.A.S.T. team will be ready to go into action at a moment's notice.

"I wanted to put my size to practical use," Liptak joked while explaining his reasons for trying out to be the 1990-91 Leprechaun. Size was not, however, an important deciding factor. Spirit was.

During his freshman and sophomore years, Liptak became notorious for his enthusiasm at the Irish football and basketball games. This enthusiasm never wavered - in fact, Liptak would be at his loudest and most obnoxious during the slow, predictable games, wanting no less than to have the entire crowd participating in his latest cheer.

"I would be at these games," he explained, "and someone standing near me would say 'You know, I could see you doing that.' That made me think." By November of 1989, Liptak had made up his mind and the training had begun. Tryouts would take place just a week after Spring Break.

Knowing no gymnastics, Liptak found himself taking a crash-course from some members of the ND/NSMC gymnastics Club, while learning how to walk on his hands by practicing in between the bookshelves at the library.

While he insists that, due to strong competition, winning the title of Leprechaun was never a given, Liptak's physical and mental preparation, his creativity and most importantly, his spirit and love for Notre Dame gave him that needed edge.

"I thought I could give the Leprechaun a class representative, not just scream my brains out and roll all over the place," Liptak stated. He added knowingly, "The Athletic Department doesn't want a side show, either.

Ironically, Liptak's previous summer jobs include such side shows as Shamu and Fat Cat Mouse Buckle, at Sea World. His ultimate goal, touring aside his psychology major, is to work for Walt Disney in the entertainment department.

Entertainment, in his eyes, requires spontaneity. Liptak confesses his difficulty with being spontaneous. "A lot of times I just have to think things out." Consequently, about an hour every night, on top of his two to three hour practices with the cheerleaders, is spent brainstorming ideas for upcoming games or special events.

Speaking of time, much has been spent practicing himself to do the traditional touchdown push-ups, which, he assured, seems to be the most popular issue concerning the Leprechaun. So far he has not missed a single point and intends to match every one the team makes.

To remain the Leprechaun for the 1991-92 year, Liptak must tryout again. Will he?

Liptak answered, restating the title would still not be a given. "If things go as well as they are going now, I would guess yes. Every game's a new experience, so you never know how you'll feel."
The blood on the bricks at Notre Dame

I'm proud to see new buildings going up and Notre Dame; yet looking at them from the outside, nearly clothed, I have feeling that they tend to look smaller. A late, great Notre Dame professor used to say that the blood of all the schools since the days of the founder is on the bricks of the place.

The new buildings may be washed in the sweat, tears and honest spit of hard effort generated by the new benefactors and fund-raisers, but how can you feel at home in a place if you're not flowing through its veins than you have feeling that they tend to look smaller. An inconsistent Saint Mary’s College volleyball team bowed to an overpowering I.U. P.U. at Fort Wayne in three sets, 3-15, 8-15, 7-15.

I.U. P.U. at Fort Wayne is the top division II school in the area," stated coach Sue Medley. "At points in the match we played very well against them. but we were inconsistent and couldn’t capitalize on their errors." Medley felt that there were too many mental errors with Saint Mary’s servers and passing. She also said the Belle’s defense in the backcourt was not up to par.

"They (IPFW) attacked us and we didn’t adjust our defense,” said Medley, who felt that Fort Wayne’s aggressive outside hitters, Julie Huber (10 kills) and Temple “Swoverland” (14 kills) were the main antagonists to Saint Mary’s defense.

Overall, Medley was pleased with the play of Saint Mary’s. "The scores don’t reflect the game,” said Medley, "as a team we played much better and we had a lot more intensity and confidence.”

Saint Mary’s College will play in the Wisconsin Whitewater tournament this weekend.

I think that this game will be a challenge for us. "We’re going to give Andrea Korek an opportunity to shut down Stenboli. It seems to me that if we can stop Stenboli, we can stop that team from scoring. They don’t have a great deal of balance in their goal scoring. The game should come down to scoring and whether we finish our offensive chances.”

Could the Irish possibly trip themselves by looking past Lewis to Creighton? Not likely.

"Looking ahead of Lewis is a concern of mine," stated Petrucelli. "We seem to struggle on days when we come right out of class onto the field. But I also think that these kids are starting to mature. I don’t think that this is a group of freshmen any more. They have 11 games under their belt and they are really maturing. I am concerned, but I hope that we have overcome all that.”

The Lady Jays of Creighton, on the other hand, not only have a high-powered attack, but also possess an airtight defense.

Over its first ten games, Creighton’s offensive corps has amassed 164 shots, 107 shots on goal, 32 goals, 19 assists, and 33 total points. Four players — midfielder Karen Kopp and forwards Jill Thurman, Greta Matthews and Allison Dunham — all have five goals apiece. Two other Creighton players have each scored four goals.

On defense, the Lady Jay goalkeeping tandem of Denise Zaver and Lori Kwapielski has a GAA of .715 (six goals allowed, 82 shots saved). "I think that as far as Creighton is concerned, we are two pretty even teams,” said Petrucelli. "They have been scoring lots of goals, and they will be a really good test for us. This is the kind of game we are waiting to play against a team that is evenly matched with us.

Any concerns about an Irish squad which has seemed to have trouble in the second games of doubleheaders?

"We have struggled all year on the second day when we play games back to back like this,” confessed Petrucelli. “Coming out flat is a concern, but I think that playing at home will help, as will the fact that they are ranked ahead of us. That should give us motivation.”

Yet while the Irish have been enjoying a good measure of success thus far this season, they have again been struck by a plague of injuries.

Notre Dame kicks off Soccer Classic against Ohio State

Western Michigan andCreighton to meet Irish as ‘Weekend of Champions’ moves outdoors

Observer Staff Report

The Notre Dame men’s soccer team will host the four-team Irish Soccer Classic this weekend, meeting Ohio State at 8 p.m. Friday and Creighton at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Western Michigan will be the fourth team participating in the Classic and the Broncos will square off against Creighton at 5 p.m. Friday and Ohio State at 12:30 p.m. Sunday. All of this weekend’s soccer matches will be held at Kress Stadium.

The Irish come into this weekend looking to get back on track. They have gone 0-3-1 since a 6-0 triumph over Valparaiso on Sept. 17, in fact, they haven’t even scored a goal since that victory. Coach Mike Berticelli is not really concerned, though.

“Our problem is the ball is too big and the net is too small,” Berticelli jokes. “Seriously, though, it’s not that big of a problem. Soccer is not necessarily the type of game where you score a lot of goals. We have an inexperienced team with no returning goal-scorers other than Kevin Pendergast, so we’re not a team that is made up of goal-scorers. We are just going to have to concentrate on keeping organized defensively.”

Berticelli also notes that his team’s 2-6-2 record is due to a difficult schedule rather than poor performance.

“Our problem is that we have one of the toughest schedules in the country in September, Indiana, Duke, North Carolina State, and even Wisconsin in the beginning of the year were all top 20 teams. I don’t think that as an inexperienced team we have to look at each game individually. Instead, we are going to have to look at the season as a culmination of individual games,” Berticelli says.

Ohio State will present the next challenge for the Irish. The Buckeyes started the season strong, winning their first three games, but have been in a slump of late, dropping five of their last seven. Although his team may be catching the Buckeyes at a good time, Berticelli is cautious.

“They’re always a very competitive team. They work very hard, they are physical, and they are very aggressive. The difference is that they have more talent this year than in the past. They have a freshman by the name of Carl Lombardo who is very dangerous and dynamic. He really adds another dimension to their team,” Berticelli says.

Lombardo (four goals, five assists this season) will lead the Buckeye attack, as will senior Angelo Castanerii (three goals, three assists).

Creighton, meanwhile, is unbeaten coming into this weekend. The Blue Jays (9-0-1) are in their first year of varsity competition, so they will field a very young team this weekend. Their record is deceiving; they have won many of their games against teams like Concordia and Bradley.

Freshman Keith Defini (13 goals, 13 assists) will lead the Blue Jays, which has outscored opponents 41-7 this season. Freshman Kevin Doyle, who has a goals-against average of 0.58, will likely start in the net for the Blue Jays. The game will be televised nationally on tape delay on SportsChannel America.

“They’ve got a young team with some talented kids. What Creighton did was hire a coach the year before they started their program and gave him some time to recruit. As a result, they got a lot of good, young players. They’ve got a great nucleus there and a good foundation on which to build a program,” Berticelli says.

Berticelli says he hopes this weekend can be a turning point for his own young team.

Jacobs continued from page 24 said Jacobs. “I’m lucky I got the chance to play both sports.”

Irish head coach Pat Murphy is definitely another person who is satisfied with the results of Jacobs’ tough choices.

“I’m glad he’s not playing tight end tonight,” said Murphy, almost jokingly. On the more serious side though, the Irish skipper felt that Jacobs silenced some of his critics.

“A lot of people said if he didn’t sign with the Astros now, he wouldn’t get another chance to play pro ball,” Murphy said.

Notre Dame women's tennis accepts Cardinal Irish several surprisingly big guns.

Top-ranked and seven-time NCAA champion Stanford has brought numerous cannons to this contest. The Cardinal could make this match look like a massacre.

Stanford will carry a 65-match winning streak into Eck. The Cardinal have not lost a team match in the last two seasons. They have won five consecutive NCAA championships.

Contacted by The Observer over the past two days, Lambert said that the team will play in this weekend's Golden Dome Classic. The Irish will meet Oklahoma at 8 p.m.

What is certain is that the team will play in this weekend's Golden Dome Classic. The Irish will meet Oklahoma at 8 p.m.

Friday, Hofstra at 10 a.m. Saturday and LSU at 8 p.m. Saturday.

What is uncertain is who will call the shots on the Irish bench. If Lambert isn't here, then assistant coach Maria Perez would probably take over the duties. Lambert's 4-year-old son, Greg, is the other assistant coach.

The final event in this excruciating ordeal apparently came after the losses last weekend. The Irish lost in straight sets to Penn State and Miami (Ohio) by combined scores of 90-36 to drop to 5-7 on the season.

The Miami loss took less than one hour as the Irish had negative hitting percentages in two of those three games.

"I have nothing but praise," Lambert said after Saturday's debacle. "I can't possibly say" Lambert came to Notre Dame in 1984 and has an overall record of 127-86. He led the Irish to their 1988 NCAA Tournament berth in 1988 after compiling a 19-12 record.

But Notre Dame struggled last season, finishing with a 14-17 record. The Irish have also struggled throughout most of this season.

Off-Campus, Farley take early lead in Interhall play

By CHAD WISCHCHUK
Sports Writer

The 1990 women’s Interhall football season is only three weeks old and yet there’s a championship fever in the air. Stormy skies wiped out Wednesday night’s slate of games for the twelve-team league but failed to dampen the competitive joie.

Halfway through the short season the race for the playoffs remains tight. The intimidating Off-Campus team holds the first-place with the exciting Breen-Phillips Hall, both with an unblemished 2-0 record. Farley Hall, Lewis, and Pasquerilla West are closely clawing at the league-leaders, all at 2-1.

The games on Sunday, September 30 featured last-minute heroes and nail-biting action. Sigfried, Farley, Lewis and defending champion Howard, all recorded six-point victories, but it was Off-Campus’ overtime thriller over winless Lyons and Brown Phillips’ 40-shotout of Ill-fated Walsh that caught the attention of the Interhall football bowl scouts. With these two giants poised to meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday the 10th, Cartier Field officials are bracing for the ensuing fireworks.

The “Black Flag” of Off-Campus got a scare of their own from a fired-up Lyons squad. The game seesawed up and down the field for the entire forty minutes of regulation without a point on the board. Not until O.C.’s initial possession of the extra period when Jill Bedenstetlene danced into the endzone on a quarterback sneak from the twodi the game see a score and that decided it, 6-0.

Michelle Richards, the fast-talking captain of the high-powered Off-Campus team was excited with the outcome.

“Tonight was the first time we really played like a team,” she said. “I think we’ve proved improving every out there and that’s the most important thing. We’re having fun.”

Two individual highlights keyed Brown Phillips to a slim victory. Kryse Akidas took a pitch and blasted 98 yards for the lone score of the game in the first half.

CC to host National Invite

By BARBARA MORAN
Sports Writer

The eighth-ranked Notre Dame men’s cross country team will face its third test of the season when it hosts the 35th annual Notre Dame Invitational this afternoon on Burke Memorial Golf Course.

The Invitational will consist of four races, with the Irish men racing at 2 p.m. against 16 competitors, including nationally-ranked Pitt and Virginia, and defending Division II national champion Edinboro.

The Irish enter this meet riding on the momentum of their first-place finish in last week’s National Catholic Invitational and their recent boost in the national rankings. The team has a strong chance of besting its second place finish in last year’s ND Invite, but will face an extremely tough field in its effort.

“I think Edinboro will be really good,” said Notre Dame senior captain Mike O’Conner. “This is one of their only Division I meets, so they’ll definitely be ready to run. Virginia and Pitt are both great teams also. They both deserve to be in the top 25.”

Irish Head Coach Joe Piane agreed with O’Conner.

“Pitt just won the Penn State Invitational, and Virginia just won their own invitational. Edinboro is the defending Division II national champion, and four of the top five Division II schools in the country are also competing. We also have the number-two team in the NAIA, Malone College, competing. It’s a pretty good field.”

Neither Piane nor O’Conner expects much competition from Central Michigan, the defending champion of the Notre Dame Invitational.

“The coach (of Central Michigan) transferred to William and Mary and took four of his best runners with him, and graduated two others,” explained O’Conner. “They were completely devastated.”

Also working to Notre Dame’s advantage will be O’Conner’s return to top racing condition. O’Conner, who had been suffering from a sore hip flexor before last week’s meet.

Men's tennis braces for Stanford

By DAVE MCMAHON
Sports Writer

Dynasty. It's a level that only a few collegiate teams achieve, but the Stanford Cardinal men's tennis team, winner of the last three NCAA national championships, must be included when considering such great traditions. When the Cardinal faces the Irish today at the Eck Tennis Pavilion, look for their dominance to continue, despite playing without the best singles player in the nation, sophomore Jonathan Stark.

Although playing a team of Stanford's caliber, Irish head coach Bob Bayliss relishes the chance to go up against the best team in the nation. "I'm excited about the opportunity to test ourselves against this quality of opposition," said Bayliss. "This season is going to be a very high quality of competition, where the duo is presently ranked first. Palmer, ranked in the top 12 in the nation, will face Irish All-American David DiLucia, currently ranked 10th nationally, at number one singles.

Although the junior from Norristown, Pa. will not be able to take the top player, DiLucia, who defied last week's Texas All-American Tournament with a pulled hamstring, will still have his work cut out for him. "Dave's ready to play," said Bayliss. "He knows what he has to do to win."

Stanford will be without the services of Stark, who is recovering from a foot stress fracture, at singles, but he will team with sophomore Jared Palmer in the doubles competition, where the duo is presently ranked first.

"This is our senior, and we're looking for a chance to improve on what we've been doing," said Plansky. "This is our opportunity to test ourselves against the best team in the nation."

Despite playing without the services of Stark, who is recovering from a foot stress fracture in the spring, Stark was on the road to recovery before aggravating the injury at the end of the spring. Whereas most of the top players compete on the junior circuit during the summer, Stark did not play at all.

Alex O'Brien, a junior form Amariello, TX, and also in the top 12 nationally, will face Irish All-American Chuck Coleman in the number two singles match, while senior Glenn Solomon (Roslyn Heights, NY) battles Notre Dame sophomore Mark Schmidt (Atlanta, GA) in third singles match.

The Cardinal, winners of four of the last five national championships, are equally as impressive in the doubles bracket, where Palmer and Stark (1st in nation) will team up against the Irish duo of DiLucia and Coleman (4th in nation) in what should be one of the best matches of the evening.

Although playing a team of Stanford's caliber, Irish head coach Bob Bayliss relishes the chance to go up against the best team in the nation.
ND to host National Invite
By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

"It's the best field we've ever had for the Notre Dame Invitational," says Irish Associate Sports Editor Tim Connolly.

That seems to fit perfectly into the Weekend of Champions theme, as the Irish host the meet today at the Burke Memorial Golf Course beginning at 1 p.m.

Fifteen teams will be vying for the first place trophy, including national standouts Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Michigan, Purdue, Western Ontario, and Wisconsin-Osh Kosh.

"Virginia is the class of the field," said Connolly. "They are better than Boston College, but not quite as good as Georgetown."

Last week, the Irish improved dramatically, finishing a close second to Boston College in the National Catholic's meet. The Irish will pin their hopes on their top junior runners, Amy Ricketts and Isana Bradley. Bradley ran well versus Georgetown in the first meet, but finished a disappointing fifteenth in the National Catholic meet. Blaizing turned in an impressive performance in the National Catholic, leading the Irish with a tenth-place finish and a time of 18:59.3.

Irish swimmers to meet Cardinal
By KEN TYSIA
Associate Sports Editor

When the Stanford men's and women's swim teams visit Notre Dame this weekend, they will field star-studded squads which are second-to-none.

There will be some pretty good swimmers on both Cardinal squads in the meet at the Rolfs Aquatic Center at 4 p.m. today. The Stanford men won three NCAA Championships in the 1980s and have finished no less than fourth in the country for the past nine years. The Stanford women's team can boast of some pretty fair athletes as well.

Like Janet Evans, for instance. Evans won the 1989 Sullivan Award for being the nation's top amateur athlete. She holds the world record in three events—the 400-meter freestyle, the 800-meter freestyle and the 1500-meter freestyle. And she won three gold medals in the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

And Summer Sanders. She was the national champion in the 400 individual medley and the 200 butterfly last season. She also won three gold medals at the 1990 Goodwill Games.

And Janet Jorgensen, who also participated in the Goodwill Games, the list goes on and on. So why would Stanford want to come all the way to Notre Dame for a meet?

"We've had so much success in the last 10 years that I think it's great to be able to share that experience with a school like Notre Dame," Stanford coach Skip Kenney says. "Notre Dame is the type of school that could be great at anything it chooses. (Notre Dame coach) Tim (Welsh) is one of the all-time great guys in coaching and helping his program is very special to me."

Stanford's men's team will feature some fantastic swimmers as well. World record holder Jeff Rouse is an NCAA backstroke champion. Distance freestyler Alec Kostich was the Goodwill Games this summer. And J.J. Frieget, Matt Rodgers and Jason Flumney-all should challenge for NCAA titles this year.

All of these athletes will be staying in the residences of Notre Dame swimmers and spending the weekend with them. It will give swimmers from both teams a chance for new experiences. The Irish will be able to swim against Olympic-caliber athletes. And the Cardinal athletes will get to see a Notre Dame football game in addition to swimming in a meet.

"I want our team to experience a part of America and Notre Dame football is part of that," Kenney says. "This is our opportunity to do more than just see the inside of a hotel room."

Irish shock Wichita State 4-0 in opening game of twinbill

Shockers gain split in nightcap, 9-7

By SCOTT BRUTOCOA

Stoking the embers of last year's slogan, the Notre Dame baseball team took "one more step" towards establishing itself as a national contender Thursday night when it defeated 1989 national champion Wichita State 4-0 at Coveleski Stadium.

Wichita State salvaged a split by winning the nightcap 9-7.

Starting pitcher David Sinnes combined with Tony Livorsi and Alan Waiulini to blank the Shockers on six hits in nine innings as Notre Dame took the first game of a doubleheader against Wichita State. The Irish are playing the Irish in the fall in the event of "The Weekend of Champions," that gets underway in full today. The victory was just one more Notre Dame upset of a national power in the last two years. Two years ago, the Irish upset Miami twice in a two-game exhibition during the Miami football weekend, and during that regular season defeated Texas and Miami again.

"We've done it before," said fourth-year Irish head coach Pat Murphy. "I'm not surprised by the win, but I'm proud of these kids. I just stood there and watched. I can't say enough about the great job they did."

The Irish collected 10 hits off three Shockers pitchers, one being a towering home run by designated hitter Frank Jacobs. That blast, hit in the eighth inning with sophomore Eric Danapilis on first, provided two insurance runs that closed out the contest.

Former football player Jacobs' mammoth home run results from correct decisions

By RICH KURZ

Frank Jacobs has had quite a few tough decisions to make over the last few months.

The Notre Dame senior turned down an offer from the Houston Astros, who thought enough of his combination of power and speed to make him a 15th-round pick, and the former tight end also decided not to rejoin the Irish football team in its pursuit of the national championship in order to pursue baseball fulltime.

About the only easy decision Jacobs has had recently came in the eighth inning of the baseball team's 4-0 win over Wichita State last night, under a full moon so bright that it probably could have lit Coaleski Stadium on its own.

With the Irish up 3-0 and Eric Danapilis on first, Jacobs worked the count to 3-1 against Shocker reliever Morgan LeClair. Jacobs then decided to swing at the next pitch, which, when it re-entered the atmosphere, landed well over the 260-ft. wall in right-center field.

"I knew he'd be coming with something hard," said Jacobs. "I was just looking for something to drive."

Well, he certainly found it. He was surprised when it cleared the fence, so surprised that he knew he'd be coming with something hard," said Jacobs. "I was just looking for something to drive."

"I didn't get all of it," he said. "But I guess I got enough of it.

What made the distance of the home run even more remarkable, however, was that it was hit using a wood bat, which usually does not generate as much power as the more common aluminum bats. Wood or aluminum, it doesn't make much of a difference to Jacobs.

Lambert's future uncertain as volleyball team revolts

By GREG GUFFEY

The future of Notre Dame volleyball coach Art Lambert remains uncertain since Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal refused to comment Thursday night on the situation.

The Irish coaching situation -- mainly the future of the embattled Lambert -- has been uncertain since an apparent revolt by team members following two losses last weekend. The team met with athletic department officials earlier in the week to air their concerns.

"I don't really want to comment on the matter now," Rosenthal said when reached at his home Thursday night. "I'm sure we'll be commenting on that very soon."
