Vigils held in protest of dedication of new ROTC building

Two vigils were held this weekend to protest a mass held for the dedication of the new Pasquerilla Center and to garner support for three proposals concerning the Notre Dame Reserve Officers' Training (ROTC) program.

The vigils were held on Friday outside of Sacred Heart Church during the mass and on Saturday outside of the Pasquerilla building, during the blessing of the building.

The proposals include a counselor for ROTC students, a mandatory class in war law, and a morals class and also must take the required philosophy and theology classes.

Women are "perpetual minors in the Catholic Church," said Sister Regina Coll in her lecture Friday.

Coll, Director of Field Education at Notre Dame, cited survey results showing that young, educated women are leaving the church more than any other group.

Historical church policy, the church's image of God as a male, and a disregard for female church responsibilities are responsible for the "serious" exodus, according to Coll.

A midshipman who observed the vigil stated that the demonstrators don't know what goes on in ROTC. His colleague said the "atmosphere of the University is militaristic" and that officers from Notre Dame will have sound morals and a religious background. He noted that many ROTC students take a morals class and also must take the required philosophy and theology classes.

A recent bishops' letter on Women's religious education, will speak Oct. 17 at Notre Dame.

His lecture, "Modesty and the Care of our Children," will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Hesburgh Library auditorium. It is free and open to the public.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Bennett holds a bachelor's degree from Harvard, a master's in political science from the University of Texas, and a doctorate in political and law enforcement officials. Last February Bennett accepted the resignation of William Bennett, director of the National Drug Control Policy and former U.S. Secretary of Education. "Don't think they're ROTC students unethically as people," she said.

The members of the vigil were not a formal organization, but called themselves an "ad hoc" group.

The vigil was "not-anti-ROTC," but emphasized that the vigil was "not-anti-ROTC."
Team needs support even after loss

Well fans, how do we deal with this tragedy? Being a jubilant, this is only the second time I've won up on Sunday, knowing the Irish football team had lost the previous day. The first was bad—because it was Miami. But we were on Thanksgiving Break at the time and I had Morgan State coming. This is different though. It's our first home loss in five seasons and Morgan is nowhere to be found.

Since we don't lose too often, it was interesting to see some people reacting to the loss. I myself did not take it too well. I learned that the human body is a delicate thing and doesn't do too well in confrontation with inanimate objects such as walls. I'm also out a clock radio and a light bulb—estimated retail value $19.95. At least now I have an excuse for waking up late for class.

Some "blitz" people deduced that we stink. Sure we should never have lost to Stanford. We know it and the team knows it. But we were on testing to see some people's reaction to the loss. Some people were proclaiming our greatness two years ago when we won the championship. A fair-weather fan isn't a true fan.

It's also not really fair to blame Ricky Watters. Sure, his mistakes were a big factor in the loss. But he's also done a lot to get lucky the last two weeks and it's about time the luck ran out. Some said it was about time we lost. We got lucky the last two weeks and it's about time the luck ran out. Sorry, I can't buy that logic either. Anyone who has ever played competitive sports feels you should win every time out.

You don't say, "Gee, we really have won a game." It's about time the luck no longer ran our way. When you get it to be as good as our team is, you're disappointed anything other than a win. That's especially true in football where you have to wait an entire week for a chance at redemption.

The real fact of the matter is the loss wasn't a tragedy at all. We still have seven regular seasons remaining, including meet with Top Ten Miami and Tennessee. Four of the Top Ten teams already have one loss and we believe the way this college football season is going, a few more are bound to be tagged with a double loss.

Keep in mind that Miami won the championship last year despite a mid-season loss to Ohio State, so it wasn't the end of the world. If you think it was, it wasn't because of this loss. We'll have to lose again to be out of the race. So take heart those of you who lamented that the season's over—it's not. The Irish still control their own destiny and the Irish still bounce back. The populist Freedom Party, capitalizing on widespread popular discontent over bureaucracy and corruption, made strong gains in parliamentary elections Sunday in Vienna, Austria. The governing Socialists slightly increased their representation and offered to form a new coalition government with the conservative People's Party, which lost ground in the balloting. The Socialists made it clear through the election campaign they would not form a coalition with the Freedom Party, which they say is too far right.

Discovery's astronauts, their primary job behind them, started a small fire aboard the shuttle Sunday in Cape Canaveral, Fla. as part of an experiment to study the spread of flames in space. The solar probe Ulysses, meanwhile, sped safely toward Jupiter at a record-setting 34,130 mph. Discovery's five-man crew started the satellite on its roundabout journey of 1.86 billion miles shortly after liftoff Saturday. The first test fire aboard a shuttle burned about 70 seconds within a sealed aluminum container, as cameras recorded the event. Shuttle safety managers wanted to observe how fire acts in the absence of Earth's gravity.

A woman threw herself over her 2-year-old granddaughter just as a 1-ton wheat planter rolled over her, and each somehow survived the twisting blades. Joan Sullivan, 54, of Niles, was hospitalized for treatment of broken bones and bruises. Young Sara escaped Friday's accident with just a few scrapes. The accident occurred while Sara's grandfather, James Sullivan, was planting wheat on the 800-acre family farm in Niles, about 20 miles east of Sallie, Kan.

Students, staff, faculty discuss sexism, the law, and individuality at open forum
By AMY MARK

An open forum, Friday gave students and other concerned members of the Notre Dame community a chance to discuss sexism, the law, restitution, and individuality.

Teresa Phelps, associate professor of law, was scheduled to give a lecture titled "Sexism and the Law," but was unable to attend. The lecture was to be the conclusion of a week-long series of "Fireside Chats," given by various speakers as part of the Multicultural Fall Festival.

In place of the lecture, students, faculty and staff spent an hour participating in an open discussion about topics of concern.

One senior spoke about the Victim/Offender Reconciliation program, which seeks restitution as an alternative to sending offenders directly "through the system." The open forum also addressed the matter of subjectivity versus objectivity, and the individuality of each person versus society, under the law.

Due to the unique structure of the discussion, most politics were inconclusive and unsolved, but one participant summed up his views with one thought: "By working together...we'll find a workable solution, in terms of the society." Stefanie Dzedzie, a senior living with others students in an area halfway house, stressed the obligation of personal responsibility and the necessity of changing the "system." to adjust to an ever-changing society.

ND teacher elected to head national group
By JOE GODIN
News Writer

Louis Berzai, currently a computer applications teacher at Notre Dame, culminated over 23 years of work in data processing by being elected the Association President of the Data Processing Management Association (DPMA) for 1990.

Berzai, an adjunct instructor in computer applications, was elected president on Sunday, September 30, at the annual Data Processing Management conference, which was held in San Diego.

Berzai has a long list of credentials. He has been a member of the Midwest chapter of DPMA for 23 years. In 1980, he started a five-year term as President of the Mid­ ana chapter as well as Association Director. He served in the regional association for six years including two year as president. In 1985 and 1986, throughout 1987 and 1988 he was the Association Vice President for the membership area. 1989 saw Berzai as the Associa­tion Secretary/Treasurer. In 1990 he served a one-year term as Association Executive Vice President.

The term of his presidency is one year. His duties concern the general governing of the association. "I hope the association and follow through with my goals for the associa­tion," Berzai said. "I am also concerned with the goals of the body. He body is the most important part of the organization. The goals of the body are just as important to me as my goals because they make up the organization."

Berzai was enthusiastic about his election. "In 1990, I decided that I wanted to become the president of the association. Now I have reached my goal. I expressed the desire to involve more people in the organiza­tion. I want to speak to the chapter. I want to create excitement and invite more cor­ nate interest. Secondly, I would like to do more research and development for educational purposes."

Although being president is a great responsibility, he does not feel it will affect his work at Notre Dame. "ND is my number one responsibility," he said.

It brings out the best in all of us.

Louis Berzai

Berzai has been involved with data processing since he graduated from college. He worked for a data center for 20 years before coming to Notre Dame.

"After working at the data center for that long I just got tired of it. I needed something more," he said of his former job. He came to Notre Dame in 1984 to teach computer applications. He loves his job as well as his students.

"I just love working with the students here. I think it's just class. To me, it seems like there is a higher quality of student here," Berzai said of his students.

The DPMA has a membership of nearly 40,000 people. It is the largest organization which represents computer applica­tions professionals in the world. DPMA dedicates itself to the advancement of com­puter applications in many fields, such as business, science, and education.

On the college level, there are 453 student chapters with about 10,000 members. Notre Dame has its own chapter with about 20 people. Berzai is a faculty advisor for the student chapter here which is called the Computer Applications Honor Society. According to Berzai, the student chapter is designed to "Give students ideas of different companies around and also provide interesting topics for study.

The DPMA has 285 chapters around the country. Besides the chapters, there are several hundred individual member­ships around the world. The benefits of this association include professional recognition in the industry, training for leadership positions, commu­nity service through chapter sponsorships, improved education, and management and technical information.
ROTC

Although most ROTC students said they respected the vigil, some felt their presence at the mass was wrong. ROTC student Gary Clark thought they "should not protest during mass." Another, Dennis Herger, commented, "We are a part of a celebration thanking the Pasquerillas" for their dedication to construct the building, and that the protest "made it look like Notre Dame didn't appreciate it." The demonstration on Friday was attended by about thirty, a group which was notably multigenerational and culturally diverse. The group of students, faculty, and staff handed out flyers and held signs.

Signs stated "There should be other financial options" and "Give peace a chance." One sign, as well as the flyers, stated "We cannot simultaneously prevent and prepare for war," a quote by Albert Einstein.

During a prayer vigil, the group sang, gave readings from the Bible and Martin Luther King, and shared reflections with one another. One student offered, "we are not here to antagonize, attack, or hurt, but because God is a God of peace." Another student stated "If anybody thinks we're doing something radical, Jesus was the biggest radical of all." One stated "we are here to question ROTC on campus" and said in our country "we practice war, we don't practice peace." Another participant, Chris Kozoll, said "ROTCAte Notre Dame is a contradiction in terms."

One notable member of the vigil was Adele O'Shaughnessy, who is the daughter-in-law of L. A. Pasquerilla, a Notre Dame donor. She said she is opposed to "ROTC at Notre Dame, and discussed this with Father Theodore Hesburgh, University of Notre Dame's president, over a tentative agreement that was incorrectly listed as "tolerated" by the University. The vigil on Saturday was held outside of the Pasquerilla building during the dedication.

Approximately two dozen demonstrators attended, and lasted for about twenty minutes. Like Friday, leaflets were handed out, and a short prayer service was held.

LaCour said he was "pleased" with the two demonstrations. Twowy said she thought they were "well done" and were a good start in achieving their objectives. She said the next step should be a "peaceful, goodhearted dialogue" between the people at the protest and ROTC students.

The $5 million Pasquerilla Center is the gift of Notre Dame trustee Frank Pasquerilla of Johnstown, Pa. It houses Notre Dame's Army, Navy, and Air Force ROTC detachments, which include 681 students. At 50,000 square feet, it is the nation's largest privately financed ROTC center. The University has more ROTC scholarships in effect than any other educational institution.

said, and that women are treated like "second class citizens in our church." She stated that women are rarely involved in Church decisions affecting them, and that they are not even directly addressed by Church leaders about such decisions.

Coll said she stays in the Church because she expects the church to be perfect. However, she also has heard from women who are committed to the church and its progress, despite recognizing the Church's "victimization" of them. Furthermore, she feels she can "move the church best by staying with it."

Pasquerilla receives D.O.D. award

Special to The Observer

Frank Pasquerilla, chairman of the board of directors and chief executive officer of Crown American Corporation, Johnstown, Pa., has received the second-highest civilian award from the Department of Defense.

The award for outstanding public service recognizes Pasquerilla's $5-million commitment to build the nation's largest privately financed Reserve Officers' Training Corps building at the University of Notre Dame. The silver medal and certificate were presented at a dedication dinner October 5 on campus by Army Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"Mr. Pasquerilla's patriotic support, coupled with the University's extensive involvement, underscores the highest level of commitment to educating value-oriented men and women as future leaders in the armed services," the citation stated.

There are 681 students—almost 10 percent of the undergraduate student body—enrolled in all ROTC programs at Notre Dame.

The Pasquerilla family and friends along with many dignitaries and University officials and trustees, were involved in dedication ceremonies for the Pasquerilla Center October 5 and 6 at Notre Dame. Pasquerilla is a trustee of the University.

Correction

In Friday's Observer story about the "U" college newspaper's subscription price was incorrectly listed as $15,000 per year. The fee, which was previously covered by the student activity fee, is actually $1,500 per year.

Saturday morning, Hurley, a former South Bend Police chief, commented that the alleged actions of the responding officer were not in line with formal police procedure and that the incident merits investigation.

Anyone who sees a man that fits the above description or has any information about the incident should call Notre Dame Security or St. Joseph's County Police, said LaCour.

Striking teachers consider settlement

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Thousands of public school teachers Sunday night argued over a tentative agreement that would end a three-week strike. Not LaCour, president of the United Teachers of New Orleans, had said he would recommend the city's 4,400 teachers approve the proposal. Hurley said he stays in the family and social concerns, and was a good start in achieving their objectives. She said the next step should be a "peaceful, goodhearted dialogue" between the people at the protest and ROTC students.

Germany to have important but restrained role in European politics, says expert

BY SIOBHAN MCCARTHY

News Writer

While the newly reunified Germany will have a tremendous impact on the European economic structure, it is hesitant to take the lead in creating a strong political union in Europe, according to Gerd Langguth, head of the representation of the European Communities in Bonn.

"In the long term, the European Economic Community (EEC) is the only stable economic structure in the future," said Langguth, speaking at Washington Hall Friday. Germany's already dominant role in world trade will help speed up the economic and monetary integration of Europe, but not too much, he added.

"Germans themselves know that they must be relaxed," said Langguth. The impact of Hitler and World War II have not been forgotten, and Germans today "fear that Europeans may feel that they are too powerful, too dominant. Germans are less influential than they could be."

"The current structure will not allow the German community to become a world power," said Langguth. However, the Germans will continue to play a vital role in the growth of the EEC. Its immediate goal is to form a European Central Bank. Later, "with no doubt, the EEC will probably become more politically involved," said Langguth. In the distant future, he believes that the EEC will go so far as to create a communal system of defense.

"Many people are afraid of this unity, however, because it could "upset the balance of Europe," according to Langguth. Presently, Germany simply "wants to be treated as an equal partner."

Today, Germany's political rulers get together in "conference rooms in Brussels...using arguments, not armaments," to get their way, according to Langguth. He is "convinced that West Germans have learned their lesson."

In an attempt to patch up relations with the Jewish community, the government of Germany has held seminars, organized discussions and financed trips to Israel in order to raise German cultural awareness. Also, Germany has restrained the number of its representatives at worldwide conferences, in order to appear less threatening to other nations, according to Langguth.

"Today we know that Germany can have, and eat, its cake," said Langguth.

At present, the Khmer Rouge are deepening the Khmer people's mistrust of Western and Chinese influence. In Angkor Wat, the site of the ancient capital, the Khmer Rouge are saying that the Vietnamese are not the ones who should determine the future of Cambodia.

"They want to portray themselves as the only ones who can have, and eat, their cake," said Langguth.

Cambodian rebels plan attack with Chinese tanks

SIEM REAP PROVINCE, Cambodia (AP) — Bolstered by their first shipments of Chinese tanks, Khmer Rouge guerrillas are preparing a major attack to expand their area controlled by Cambodia's most important cultural and historic region.

After making major gains in rural areas in the past year, the Khmer Rouge now are shifting out of conventional military tactics to seize cities and key economic regions, Western military analysts say.

The rebels recently took the key government artillery base at Sre Noi, and now say they are preparing to attack Bantei Srei, the last major government position defending the provincial capital of Siem Reap and the nearby Angkor Wat temples, the symbol of Cambodian civilization.

The rebels have massed tanks, heavy guns and troops to attack government defenses in this northwest region, according to field commanders and Khmer Rouge fighters interviewed in the guerrilla zone.

A recent 10-day, 190-mile trek through guerrilla-held areas near Angkor Wat showed the rebels had trained a large and important force and moved freely through villages less than an hour's drive from the Siem Reap provincial capital.

"We were ordered to attack Bantei Srei this month and then we will attack Siem Reap," said Bong Thieuan, a young Khmer Rouge soldier interviewed at Sre Noi.

"We are in a position defending the Siem Reap province. We will attack Siem Reap," said Hun Sen, the Khmer Rouge leader who controls the Bantei Srei region.

"What we see happening in Siem Reap is alarming," said Sihanouk, Cambodia's former Prime Minister, at his jungle headquarters. Hundreds of thousands of people fled from stay of execution and disease during the Khmer Rouge's fanatical Communist rule from 1975 until Vietnam invaded in late 1978.

Areas of the country's north are under the control of former prince Norodom Sihanouk, whose guerrillas are allied with the Khmer Rouge and a third rebel group. Sihanouk has wide support among peasants, and several thousands of his troops moved freely through scores of isolated rural villages.

They are welcomed by many villagers fearful of the Khmer Rouge's deep suspicions of Vietnam's influence over Prime Minister Pol Pot's government in Phnom Penh.

But Sihanouk commandery say they cannot assure their territory with the Khmer Rouge and other rebel groups.
S. Korean officials fired after spy scandal

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae fired his defense minister and the powerful chief of military intelligence last Monday following allegations that the government spied on more than 1,300 civilians.

Presidential spokesman Lee Soo-jung said Roh was holding the two officials responsible and said the government would take unspecified reform measures "to meet with circumstances of this new era.

Charges in the last week of the military surveillance, including spying on leading government and opposition politicians, have eroded government claims that the armed forces are politically neutral and no longer figure in politics.

Roh moved quickly in an effort to diminish the impact on his government.

Roh's office said Defense Minister Lee Sang-hoon was replaced by Lt. Gen. Cho Nam-pung was out as commander of the Defense Security Command and Lee. Gen. Koo Chang-hoe was in.

Lee Jong-koo once headed the Defense Ministry, and the current defense minister is the ex-commander of a military intelligence operation on Sept. 23, taking with him confidential papers, computer discs and data he said were evidence of massive and organized illegal spying on civilians.

He revealed data that included the names and personal records of governing party chairman Kim Young-sam, Kim Dae-jung, and 89 other lawmakers as well as hundreds of dissidents, clergy and journalists.

The Defense Ministry said Saturday it kept the information not for political surveillance but to "protect or cut off those listed from enemies or impure elements."

Kim promised to maintain the military's political neutrality after taking office.

Roh gathered in two thirds of the 299 National Assembly seats last Sunday by merging his party with two conservative opposition groups.

In August, all 78 opposition members of parliament resigned en masse, accusing Roh of railroadng bills and ignoring demands for reforms.

His political foes demanded that Roh apologize publicly.

Mandela and De Klerk to discuss black factional wars

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela have set a meeting for Monday to discuss recent black factional fighting, newspapers reported.

The ANC called last week for a meeting with de Klerk on the violence in black townships around Johannesburg, which has killed about 800 people since erupting Aug. 12.

The fighting has pitted Zulu followers of the conservative Inkatha movement against Xhosa and other blacks linked to the ANC, the nation's largest anti-apartheid group. It has strained relations between the white-led government and the ANC.

Mandela and other black leaders have accused security forces of instigating the street fighting in a bid to destabilize the country and derail peace talks with the government.

Brazilian elections bad news for ecologists

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The sweeping victories by conservatives in last week's congressional and gubernatorial races will mean bad news for the rain forest and its defenders, environmentalists say.

Conservatives won a large majority in last week's voting, and showed special strength in the nine states of the Amazon region.

Mormons: abortion is ‘morally dangerous’

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church leaders on Sunday decried abortion, homosexuality and drug addiction as “morally and spiritually dangerous” lifestyles.

“In or out of marriage, abortion is not an individual choice. At a minimum, the lives of three are involved,” Elder Boyd Packer told the church’s 160th Semiannual General Conference.

Only in cases of incest, rape, when a mother’s health is jeopardized or a severely deformed fetus who cannot survive birth is abortion anything but a right choice,” he said.

Church officials said Benson, 91, watched the proceedings on television.

Packer, a senior member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, blasted those who justify homosexuality by saying “these impulses are inherent, cannot be overcome and should not be resisted.”

“They quote scriptures to justify perverted acts between consenting adults. That same logic would justify incest or the molestation of little children of either gender,” he said.

“I believe that most people are drawn to a life of drug addiction or perversion or submit to an abortion without really realizing how morally and spiritually dangerous they are.”

NOTRE DAME VS MIAMI
OCTOBER 20, 1990

On the evening of October 20 last year, Zheng-de Wang, a Notre Dame graduate student from Tianjin, China, was struck down by a car while walking on Notre Dame Avenue. Zheng-de had already received his master’s degree in sociology, was pursuing a doctoral degree and was hoping to obtain a law degree from Notre Dame for what would certainly have been a distinguished career in international law.

Unnoticed at the time of the accident, Zheng-de was severely injured and comatose for several months. Now confined to a wheelchair and undergoing therapy, Zheng-de is able to recognize old friends and to move his fingers for rudimentary communication, but his recovery is far from complete and far from certain.

Fees derived from the sale of this T-Shirt will be donated to Zheng-de’s family for the enormous expenses this tragedy has inflicted on them.

Kuwaitis flee to Saudi Arabia after opening

(AP)—Hundreds of Kuwaitis crossed into Saudi Arabia on Sunday after Iraq suddenly relaxed restrictions on Kuwaitis leaving the occupied emirate. Some refugees said it was the latest move in an Iraqi campaign to depopulate Kuwait, isolate the resistance movement and prepare for war.

World leaders kept up diplomatic efforts to achieve a peaceful solution to the crisis that arose with Iraq’s invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Japan’s Prime Minister Yoshihiko Kato traveled to Oman after a two-day visit with King Fahd in Saudi Arabia.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat met King Hussein in Jordan and said a peace initiative on the gulf crisis was being formulated according to the plan proposed by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

On Aug. 12, Saddam said he would discuss withdrawing from Kuwait if the Israelis also withdrew from the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Arafat said Saddam’s proposal “has brought about an international consensus for the need to solve the Palestinian problem.”

“The linkage is becoming possible now. Those who believe otherwise, let them submit their own proposal to solve the Middle East problems,” he said.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Isamat Abdul-Maguid, meanwhile, arrived in Damascus for talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad. He indicated he was making the visit to increase cooperation in forcing Iraq out of Kuwait.

Kaufi arrived in the Mideast last week to offer financial help to front-line states Turkey, Jordan and Egypt and to seek a political solution. He has rejected a new world order after the crisis is solved in which Japan was eager to play a role.

Kaufi spokesman Shigeo Tsuchi said Faro urged Tokyo to spread its financial aid to other nations hit by the U.N.-imposed economic blockade of Iraq, such as Syria and Bangladesh.

Takanaka said Japan reiterated its call for Iraq’s complete and unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait, restoration of the emirate’s leadership and release of all foreigners detained by Iraq after its attack on Kuwait.

Kuwaiti refugees at the Khafji border crossing in Saudi Arabia said the border opened on Friday, following intense searches in Kuwait City which prompted many of them to leave out of fear. They said Iraqi troops were confiscating all identification papers in the area.

That raised Saudi fears that the Iraqis planned to try to infiltrate agents into the kingdom.

About 1,000 people arrived from Kuwait over the weekend, intelligence lacking any identification, Saudi border officials said. The influx was the largest since mid-June, when about 100,000 Kuwaitis poured through in a three-day frenzy.

U.S. military officials in Washington and Saudi Arabia meanwhile reported the American troop buildup in the crisis area was nearly complete, with almost 200,000 U.S. soldiers deployed there. U.S. troops lead a multinational force arrayed in the Saudi desert to forestall any further Iraqi military thrust.

Iraq controls 20 percent of world oil reserves with its takeover of Kuwait. Saudi Arabia, which adjoins Kuwait, is the world’s biggest oil exporter. In other developments:

Soldiers In Israel began handing out gas masks to civilians in a nationwide drive to guard Israelis from a possible Iraqi chemical weapons attack.

Military officials called it a preventive measure. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in a speech Israel “has no intentions to attack Iraq,” although it takes Baghdad’s chemical attack threats seriously, Israeli radio said.

Dolphins, held in captivity for extensive study, released to ocean after 2 years

TAMPA BAY, Fla. (AP) — Echo and Misha, two dolphins held captive for more than two years as part of a California research project, splashed to freedom in the same shallow water where they were captured.

"It was chaos. The French psychiatrists were shooting, and the people coming from Mote were also shooting," he said upon arrival in Paris.

Echo and Misha, two dolphins from Florida's Gulf of Mexico were beached themselves in the same harbor in the summer of 1989.

Wells, who plans to track the dolphins for a year in what scientists say is the first extensive study of how captive dolphins adapt in the wild.

"Of course, it will take them a while to get their bearings," Wells said.

Within seconds after a dozen Mote Marine Laboratory researchers gingerly lowered Echo and Misha into the water Saturday, they sped off in tandem — and beached themselves on a sandbar.

"It was all a success," Wells said. Within an hour, they were spotted swimming with a pod of about three dolphins.

Wells, affiliated with the Chicago Zoological Society, took the dolphins from the same harbor in the summer of 1989 for a project at the University of California at Santa Cruz. He intended to study the sophisticated system of sounds dolphins use to gather information about their watery environment.

Last month, the two 300-pound dolphins were transported to Mote on Central Florida's Gulf Coast to prepare for their return home.

While other captive dolphins have been released in the wild, Wells said this is the first project involving electronic monitoring of dolphins as they begin to show signs of Readjustment to ocean after 2 years.

"You have to understand that for the past two years, these dolphins have been told and hand-fed nothing but frozen fish," said Kerri Deffenworth, spokeswoman for Mote, where the dolphins were held in a protective lagune, taught to eat live fish and slowly weaned from human contact.

"For the first two days in the wild, the 8- and 9-year-old males will be followed around the clock, both visually and with the help of a coin-sized radio transmitter on Echo's dorsal fin."

"Malad dolphins tend to bond for life," the spokesman said. "They were together when we found them and they should be together forever."

The transmission has a range of more than six miles and an expected life of two weeks before the specially designed bolts dissolve and fall off.

After that and for the year to come, the dolphins working from a small boat will track the dolphins three to four days a week and for up to 12 hours a day — taking photographs to see if they are assimilating into dolphin society and even counting their breaths to gauge their health.

If they begin to show signs of stress, they will be culled and hand-fed live fish, the spokesman said.

Echo and Misha, two dolphins from Florida's Gulf of Mexico were beached themselves in the same harbor in the summer of 1989.

"We've decided not to take them from their home."

They are led by Maj. Gen. Fred Smeygma, a Rwandan Tutsi.
Bitter debate in Calif. gubernatorial race

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Gubernatorial candidates Dianne Feinstein and Pete Wilson clash Sunday in the U.S. Senate attendance record, campaign funding and their visions for the state's future, in a bitter first debate.

Feinstein, the Democratic former mayor of San Francisco, and Republican Wilson both claimed to be the candidate who will lead the state.

"I think there's a need for someone that's fresh, new and a little bit different," Feinstein said in the live, televised debate.

Wilson said that because a Republican would not handcraft him in Sacramento, where the legislature is dominated by Democrats. He also portrayed himself as a reformer.

"I'm running for governor because I want to make changes in California that I think need to be made," said Wilson. He would give up his Senate seat if elected Nov. 6 to succeed retiring Republican Gov. George Deukmejian.

The debate quickly turned to attacks, some personal.

Feinstein accused Wilson of having "the worst attendance record in the Senate," missing votes on the death penalty, taxpayer aid to religious schools, Middle East resolutions and the budget.

"I think absenteeism is an important indication of performance," she said.

Wilson countered that he has a 93 percent attendance record over 14 years in Congress, better than that of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Turning to the offensive, Wilson criticized Feinstein for taking large campaign donations in the wake of a judge's overturning Proposition 73, which limited the amount individual donors could give to $1,000.

He singled out Feinstein's acceptance of $150,000 from a California Highway Patrol organization.

"Dianne, I am truly shocked that you would be so blind to so gross a conflict of interest," he said.

The one-hour debate, televised from KNBC-TV's studios, marked the first time the rivals for governor have met face-to-face in eight months, and their first-ever televised showdown. A second and final televised debate is scheduled next week in San Francisco.

The debate was divided into 30 minutes of questions from political reporters and 30 minutes in which Feinstein and Wilson questioned each other.

The two debates are especially important because Wilson and Feinstein have been virtually tied in every independent poll reported since they won their party nominations in the June primary.

"The debates' impact is expected to come in post-debate television and print reports," Wilson said.

Viewership for the Sunday night debate was not expected to be particularly high but it was coincided with the second game of the American League baseball championship series between Oakland and Boston.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — State Rep. David Duke conceded defeat Saturday to incumbent Democrat Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, who said he "got the message" from 600,000 voters who backed Duke, a former Klan leader running as a Republican.

Duke backed off his threat to file a lawsuit over absentee ballots cast — but not counted — for state Sen. Ben Bagert, the official Republican nominee.

Bagert dropped out two days before Saturday's primary amid pressure from former GOP leaders who feared his presence in the race would help Duke force a November runoff.

"We'll help people who feel their right to vote has been abrogated," Duke said. "We'll help them pursue that if they so desire, but I'm trying to do as Bennett Johnston said, and kind of hold at the point."

Complete but unofficial returns showed Johnston 749,552 votes, or 54 percent, and Duke 602,681 votes, or 44 percent. Two minor Democratic candidates split the remainder. Nick Acardo had 21,709 votes and Larry Crowe had 14,472 votes.

Duke's strength surprised pollsters, as he carried 23 of the state's 64 parishes and held Johnston close in several others. Duke had campaigned on a ticket that opposed affirmative action and proposed welfare reform and a flat-rate federal income tax.

"A lot of those votes were protest votes," Johnston said. "People were sort of venting their spleen. They said, 'Well, I'm going to send old Bennett a message.' Bennett got the message."

He said he would work to diversify the state's economy away from the petroleum industry's boom-and-bust cycles. Under Louisiana's unusual open primary system, all candidates run against each other in the primary, regardless of party. A runoff would have been held Nov. 6 if Johnston had failed to receive a majority Saturday.

Bagert withdrew too late to get his name off the ballot. Under a 1981 law, Bagert's votes could not be counted.

Some were, however, because it was too late to change commuter programs or courthouse operations. Those reported to the Associated Press gave Bagert 10,536 votes — less than 1 percent of the 1.4 million cast.

Duke said "political deals" were responsible for Bagert's withdrawal. Johnston drew the unprecedented cross-party endorsement of eight Senate Republicans and Jack Kemp, secretary of housing and urban development.

Johnston said his 10 percent victory margin would have been considered a landslide had it not been for Duke's presence in the race.

"When you can win at a time when incumbents all over the country are in trouble, when Louisiana has been in a depression and when people are trying to send a message ... I think that's a tremendous win," Johnston said.

Duke said he was studying a possible run for governor in 1991. Such a race would rekindle his image as the House seat he won in a special election in 1989.

There also has been speculation he might seek a U.S. Senate seat in 1992.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Demo­cratic leaders predicted Sunday that a new budget agreement easing Medicare cuts and tem­pering excise tax increases will be reached before the government shutters take full effect Tuesday.

Democrats told their leaders to go ahead with a plan de­signed to let Democratic-con­trolled committees draft later the specifics for reaching $500 billion in deficit reduction over the next five years.

Republicans were walking but House Speaker Thomas Foley (D-Wash.) said he might go ahead with it anyway. Informal bipartisan talks continued into the night Sunday as the House remained on standby to con­sider any plan put before it.

The Senate, meanwhile, con­vened at 6 p.m. and adjourned 12 minutes later after conclud­ing that it would be hours, if not days, before anything concrete would emanate from the House. GM officials were hoping to avoid a chance of a final budget agreement being approved, Sunday, but the practical impact of pushing a decision into today was marginal since it is Columbus Day.

Republicans and Democrats, meanwhile, continued to blame each other for the partial go­vernment shutdown that closed federal tourist attractions and other weekend programs nation­wide. Foley said President Bush's veto Saturday of a bill designed to keep the government operat­ing during the negotiations was "a bad mistake" that had slowed the talks.

The president was "saying we ought to rebuild the fiscal house of this country and (then) we were told to get our fire under control," Foley said.

Bush spent Sunday at his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, promising to spend up at General Motors, "I think short term we're go­ing to be dealing with the problem of the overly large Medicare cuts... and also we will address the revenue part of the package," said Sasser, also ap­pearing on ABC.

The draft plan circulated in the House would reduce from $60 billion to $42 billion the amount that Medicare would contribute to deficit reduction over the next five years.

The shutdown affects non­essential government personnel nationwide. But federal opera­tions deemed essential, such as those involving aviation, health, law enforcement and security, are not affected by the crisis.

Non-essential U.S. services on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vacca­tion Americans have been hardest hit so far by the budget stalemate, even after "closed" signs at Montana's Custer Battlefield National Monument and locked gates at the White House.

The federal government tech­nically shut down at 12:01 p.m. Saturday, except for essential services, but that was the first day of a three-day Columbus Day holiday weekend.

As a result, most federal em­ployees did not anticipate going to work until Tuesday. Workers were told to go to their jobs Tuesday, at which time non-essential personnel will be on the job during the first three hours if there is no budget agreement.

Dear Editor:

I would like to footnote a letter which was written to the editor last week (The Observer, Sept. 28). In it a student expressed her shame and displeasure for allowing fellow students who was yelling out obscenities at the Notre Dame game. While I do not condone such completely unnecessary behavior either, I feel the student body of Notre Dame has a right to hear my story.

I traveled to Michigan State, like many other ND fans, to see a football game and have some fun. Out of the twenty of us who made the trip, only a few had tickets in hand. Subsequently, most of us were looking for any tickets we could find and as fate would have it, I had to settle for a seat alone. Nevertheless, the game was exciting and I made a few new friends during its course. After the game, however, as I left the stadium to join my friends to celebrate, I encountered unsportsmanlike behavior which was yelled out by a couple of MSU fans so they proceeded to kick and beat me. In fact, while they were on top of me, an interval which seemed like an eternity, one sensation which stood out was the sound of cheers from the bystanders looking on. Finally people began to get involved and security arrived, smaller fights ensued, and I was lost in the wave of the crowd. After some time I happened upon a couple of friends and they carried me to the RV I arrived in. Once there, security was called, and I spent the next long hours in an ambulance and a hospital emergency room.

Obviously it would be impossible to assume my attackers were students, however, judging from their shouts and screams, there were in fact MSU fans. It seems to me that I should not be the only one offended beyond belief by this incident. I think we all need to reevaluate exactly what competition involves; there are boundaries which should always be respected—by losers and victors alike. If nothing else, I certainly hope someone (if not everyone) can learn something from this episode.

Security for women requires work

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on the generosity of the students and faculty at Saint Mary's. Last week, I went into my classes, as well as some others, and explained that on Sept. 29 I was going to go on a 10 mile horseback ride to raise money for the We Can Ride 4-H Club—the Berrien County horseback riding program for the handicapped. I was overwhelmed by the response I received, and I thank everyone who contributed. In commending those who could sponsor me, I do not wish to scorn those who could. I certainly understand that individuals cannot give to every cause and that being a student (or teacher) does not pay well. I am certain, however, because of the community's spirit, members of Saint Mary's still give to the causes they most believe in when they are able. I am sure that the same spirit crosses the street to Notre Dame.

Again, I thank those who contributed. Money collected from Saint Mary's alone totalled around $200, and other contributions brought my total to $300 and made me the adult in the program with the most money raised.

Persuasive forces demand self-sacrifice

By Timothy Calmeyn

On the evening of Sept. 29, a television series called "Star Trek: The Next Generation" had its season premiere. The great bulk of Star Trek productions have always dealt with significant moral and philosophical ideas. This year's premiere featured an enemy known as the Borg, a race just outside of earth and ready to dem- olish all being. The earth sacrifices itself to the Borg collective where their diversity as individuals is subordi- nated into the Borg collective. The Enterprise, with the amazing feats accomplished by ships named "Enterprise," it seems to me, has its own equivalent to the Borg Enterprise prevailed and the earth was not forced into submission. The skills of the Enterprise crew and Captain Picard's ability to "individualize" while still under Borg control is the stuff of which many of our beliefs are formed and perhaps all of the Federation. Of course, Star Trek is fiction, but the moral threat posed by the Borg is not. The extremely powerful and in- fluential forces on this earth parallel that of the Borg. One can only be oneself and that it should be a natural thing for one to do. Most of us are familiar with the amazing feats accomplished by ships named "Enterprise." The "Enterprise" is to spark discussion and promote an open, discursive atmosphere. The goal of this "Issues" series is to spark discussion and promoting an open, discursive atmosphere. We invited Ferraro because she is the first woman to run for vice president. The fact that her lecture caused people to discuss the issue of abortion is positive. Mr. Dixon's article, "Hoelker found Fr. Kennedy's letter to be self-sacrificing. You need not accept my personal opinion (although I have few gay friends who do). There is always the authority of law, as it is the Supreme Court. A 1986 case, "John Bowers v. Hardwick," held that there is no constitutional right to engage in sodomy and upheld a Georgia statute that prohibited such behavior, even between consenting adults.

Finally, let us keep in mind that Notre Dame is a Catholic institution. The teaching authority of the Church instructs us that while homosexual orientation per se is not immoral, homosexual activity, especially with the existence of his nation and will are worth far more than the freedom of the spirit and the will of an individual. Politicians are often calling for a sacrifice, John F. Kennedy once said, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country." This was said with fan- tasy. ‘Chimes’ magazine provides Saint Mary’s students chance to showcase talents

accent writer

"Shakespeare and Milton don’t inspire writers to write. People around them do," says Max Renaldi. A second-year student and assistant professor of English and faculty advisor for "Chimes" magazine.

"Saint Mary’s students will be inspired to write when they receive copies of the 1990 "Chimes" in their mailboxes this week. Beth Renaldi, a Saint Mary’s senior and the editor of "Chimes," anticipates a good response since the project is unique to Saint Mary’s.

"Chimes" is a student-written and -edited literary and art magazine that displays the talent of peers. It is unlikely that you missed the "Chimes" is "Coming" posters, unless you've walked to class with your eyes closed and haven't opened an issue of "Chimes" Observer lately.

Renaldi pointed out that the staff has made a "conscious effort to make sure that students will recognize "Chimes" and be curious enough to read it." Having worked on the magazine for four years, Renaldi understands the rule it plays at Saint Mary's, but has also found that many students are unfamiliar with the publication.

Westler explained the importance of "Chimes" is "that it shows a different aspect of Saint Mary's. It's something that doesn't get into any other publication at the school. There is no other forum that the students can use to express their beliefs, anger, and dreams."

Inside the silkscreen cover, don't expect to find a homogeneously written table of contents. The poems, stories, and artwork are often thoughtful, and sometimes controversial, views of life. The depth and complexity of the pieces reflect the writing ability of many students. Westler explained his art with the art as well, and said that it is very impressive and a positive reflection on Saint Mary’s art department.

"Chimes" is available just taking submissions for the 1991 issue. English majors may not only use the forum to express something through words or pictures, but also as a contribution. "Although "Chimes" is mainly for Saint Mary's students, local and national writers, Notre Dame students, and faculty and staff members whose work has appeared in the past. All submissions are presented to the editorial board, which is comprised of ten to fifteen members. "The board looks for interesting, well-written pieces that make you think," Renaldi said. A reader will not find a tidy, trite, or silly story in any issue.

Renaldi is impressed with the discriminating board members who select appropriate material. Westler and Renaldi speak emphatically about the editorial board and describe it as a satisfying experience. Most of the submissions are being handed in during the second semester. That is when the real work begins. All of the members read and study every piece before the meetings and come together to discuss what should make the cut. Westler finds the meetings particularly rewarding because the board members get to know each other well and influence each other's decisions.

Westler recognizes "coming to a tolerance for a diversity of voices. The members feel free to disagree. Someone may be shy at the beginning and not say anything, but once a piece she likes is rejected, she'll speak up next time. Artists have to be free to talk about anything."

By having many distinct voices, "Chimes" is less likely to publish bad material. Democracy makes the process worth doing, Westler smiled. Freshmen who are accustomed to the restrictions of high school publications may be surprised by the refreshing candidness of "Chimes."

Censorship is not taken into account. Westler and Renaldi agreed "judging a piece is not so much a judgment to decide what someone should or shouldn't read. "Chimes"cepts the intelligence of the students and only a kaleidoscope of the students. Renaldi and the other board members have a busy year of selecting pieces, contacting authors to make any changes, seeing the published issue, and preparing the magazine for Ave Maria Publishing. The final product shows an often hidden aspect of campus life that doesn't receive enough recognition.

"Chimes" is an important magazine," Renaldi stated "It shows the creativity and talent of Saint Mary’s women and exposes the uniqueness of the Saint Mary's women here. 'Chimes' captures what it means to be a Saint Mary's student.

Westler's only regret is that the size of the magazine does not allow room to include all of the material they'd like to. But the confidence in the magazine that is published is high. Westler always keeps extra copies of "Chimes" for his friends, visiting professors, and well-known artists who come to Saint Mary’s.

"When people visit the campus, they usually have a good impression of the school by the atmosphere and talking to a student," Renaldi said. "Chimes" goes way beyond the surface of subjects. "It shows the students' side of a variety of things going on and the maturity of wisdom of these women."

A letter direct from the Rome front . . .

ELIZABETH WHOLIHA

Almost every school year, a few weeks after Christmas break, students read The Observer's Accent page and wonder about someone's account of their experiences abroad. Unfortunately, this ends up being very much a condensed account of an entire semester of activities. Generally, this is too late to influence anyone to go the following year.

This article comes to you straight from Rome, home of the Saint Mary's Rome Program. There are 60 of us, 49 women and 11 men. There are a good number of students from Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, and a few from other schools such as Marquette, Colgate Catholic University, Boston College, and University of Toronto.

The program sends us to Assisi for five days of orientation. We were warned about this trip, but I am going to make it a little more clear than previous students ever did. If you decide to go next year, plan spending at least a little time walking up hills during your summer vacation. Prepare yourself or plan on being in a little bit of pain for a day or two. Assisi is not only home of Saint Francis but also many of hills and steps.

Upon arrival in Assisi, we walked uphill for 15 minutes to reach our residence. Remember, that is up steps with carry-on luggage that has everything for a five-day stay. This things haven't been a sign to us. After every meal there is a climb of about 55 steps back to the residence.

It sounds awful, but everyone agrees it was a wonderful orientation. Assistance is a beautiful small town. The history surrounds you. Even a three-mile hike (uphill, of course) to the Eremo (hermitage) of St. Francis was worthwhile.

Those of you who attended mass at the Basilica of St. Francis were given a tour through a monastery that dates back to the 13th century. About time war—it is as medieval as you can get!

As a ND student, I knew only three people in the program prior to the trip. By the end of the orientation everyone was pretty well acquainted with one another. This was done by alphabetically assigning us to a roommate during our stay in Assisi and creating a system by which everyone sat with different people at every meal.

I had a conversation with almost every person by the end of orientation and felt comfortable. Everyone is willing to be open because we have no one else, so to speak. This whole trip is all about new friendships and a new culture.

At the time of writing this article, I have been in Rome for one full week. The city is a lot to take in at all once. Assist pre arranges us well by the Italian we had not spoken since May.

Hotel Tiziano, the women's residence, and the Pensione will be mentioned only after the food are comfortable. The rules take some getting used to, but it is not anything dramatic. The men join us for meals during the week at the Tritone, and we fond ourselves for the weekends among the many bars and restaurants.

We are really in the heart of Rome—the noise level proves it. The Piazza Navona and the Pantheon are two blocks or two way away. Even in our first week here I have heard the pope say mass at St. Peter's, and some of the guys saw him as they walked around outside a few days before.

Everything is not always dramatic, whether it is getting mail or noticing another cultural difference. I have had us out of a crowd by our tennis shoes and worth it with the other Italians by their jeans, which are either hemmed or worn a little more clear than previous years.

Every site is awe-inspiring at first glance. Every conversation with an Italian is triumphant, even when we stumble and struggle for the right words. We just continue to try because 'when in Rome. . .'.

Scoring the touchdowns even made the dorm Walton smile. His new offense had been criticized by fans, media and even some players, but coach Chuck Noll stood by the former Jets coach.

"Joe came up to me and said, 'Good job, big man,'" Green said of his TD catches. "We're back. I feel more in tune now. I know how the NFL feels."

The Chargers felt that their fifth-ranked defense could contain Pittsburgh's unceaseable streak. Not only couldn't they do that, they couldn't stop the Steelers from rolling over them.

"It was embarrassing," said linebacker Gary Plummer, who scored a first-quarter touchdown on defense when he caught a 2-yard pass on a tackle-eligible play. "It was a lack of confidence, as far as I'm concerned. There's no enthusiasm on defense, and if you don't have enthusiasm, that reflects on your confidence. I don't understand that. It's as flat as we've ever been."

The Steelers were stoked by the unveiling of a 2-foot-tall statue of team founder Art Rooney outside the stadium. "That brought out a lot of the spirit in the team," Dawyne Woodruff said. "We felt the Chief was with us today. We felt he was right there on the sidelines with us."

Bengals 34, Rams 31
DT breach's winning kick came at the end of a 63-yard, eight-play drive. Esiason started the drive from his 12 with a 22-yard pass to Harold Green. He hit McGee for 27, Brooks for nine and then the Bengals gained 17 yards for a touchdown, setting up the game-winning field goal.

"I felt the Chief was with us today. We felt he was right there on the sidelines with us."

Indianapolis 38, LA Rams 14
While coming back for victories were Atlanta, 28-27 over New Orleans, which set an NFL mark with its 12th consecutive road win, 24-21 at Houston; Detroit, a 34-27 winner at Minnesota; Dallas, a 21-17 winner at Chicago; and Miami, a 20-16 victory against the New England Patriots.

Chicago beat Green Bay 27-13 and, in a night game, it was Pittsburgh 38, the Raiders 24. On Monday night, Cleveland is at Denver.

Four NFC East teams - the Redskins, Eagles, Giants and Cowboys - are 1-3-0, the unenviable mark.

Steelers 36, Chargers 14
"We came together today as an entire team," said Mike Saxon, "and that's where we stop," said Merrill Hoge, the besiegled offensive coordinator.

"We voted Joe (Walton), the besiegled offensive coordinator, to the bench today," said Saxon, "but we have to show we're going to find a way to get the job back, because he's going to get confidence in this and we've got to keep it going."

The Pittsburgh Steelers' offense scored four touchdowns in a 36-14 victory over San Diego yesterday, come back that way was an outstanding performance."

Seahawks 33, Patriots 20
After New England took its only lead, 20-19 on Jason Stauriovy's 48-yard field goal, visiting Seattle riled in the final three minutes with two touchdowns in 24 seconds. Miller twice hit Rison on the 80-yard drive. After a 4-yard gain

Steve Bisci's debut as coach, Jerry Burns' debut as coach, and the Metrodome and fell to the Vikings.

Denver 34, Bills 21
At Buffalo, the Bills had their highest-scoring fourth quarter for the second straight week. Last week, a blocked field goal was returned 80 yards for a touchdown by Cornelius Bennett sparked the Bills over Denver.

This time, Steve Tasker broke in untouched to block Jeff Good's punt. James Williams grabbed the ball and went 38 yards for the winning TD with 6:52 left.

The Bills were down 24-14 before James Lofton caught a 42-yard touchdown pass from Jim Kelly with 8:37 to go. That began a run of 24 points in 5:03.

After Williams put Buffalo ahead, Bennett forced and recovered a fumble by Jay Schroeder on the next possession. The Bills got Scott Norwood's 23-yard field goal with 4:07 left, then sewed it up late. Nate Odomes stripped the ball from Willie Gault and ran 49 yards for a touchdown.

Browns 27, Packers 13
At Chicago, Mike Tomczak's 6-yard touchdown run on a bowling play and field goals of 50 and 51 yards by Kevin Bucier were decisive as the Browns' defense continued the control of the NFC Central lead at 4-1.

But the game was over when Nate Odomes stripped the ball from Willie Gault and ran 49 yards for a touchdown. The Raiders (4-1) had allowed just two TDs in 12 quarters before Sunday.

The Pittsburgh Steelers' offense scored four touchdowns in a 36-14 victory over San Diego yesterday, come back that way was an outstanding performance."

It was Montana's third touchdown pass as he earlier hit Taylor with a 78-yarder and threw six yards to Jerry Rice. Montana finished with 318 yards, completing 20 of 28 passes. Taylor caught four passes for 132 yards and Rice had 70 yards on six receptions.

Rogers wrote the game has turned into a running back with 494 for San Francisco (4-0).

Warren Moon had two touchdown passes and sneaked in for a yard for another score for Houston (2-3).

Lions 34, Vikings 27
At Minneapolis, the Lions turned to Bob Gagliano and he led in a terrific performance in place of injured starter Rodney Peete.

Gagliano passed for 299 yards and three touchdowns as he replaced Peete (1-3-2) dropped the Vikings into the NFC Central cellar.

Minnesota is off to its first 1-4 start since 1967, has lost its last two at home to division rivals after 13 straight wins in the Metrodome and fell to the Lions for the first time since Jerry Burns' debut as coach, ending a string of seven Vikings wins.

Gagliano had TD passes of 22 yards to Barry Sanders, five to Richard Johnson and 16 to Terry Greer.

Cowboys 14, Bucs 10
At Dallas, the Cowboys passed their victory total of last season as rookie Emmitt Smith rushed for 121 yards and scored on a fourth-quarter, 14-yard run. Smith's yardage was the most by a Dallas running back since Herschel Walker gained 134 yards against Cleveland on Dec. 9, 1988.

Right. A deep thigh bruise kept Irish flanker Raghib Ismail out of action against the Cardinal.

Far right. Notre Dame's Adrian Jarrell holds on for a big gainer.

The ball bounces away from Notre Dame tight end Derek Brown on the last play of Stanford's 36-31 victory over the Irish. If Brown had held on to this 23-yard Rick Mirer toss in the left corner of the endzone the Irish would have pulled off yet another miraculous comeback.

Above. Cardinal fullback Tommy Vardell dives across the line of scrimmage and into the endzone. Vardell only carried five times in the game, but four of those carries went for touchdowns.

Holtz deprecated after his most disappointing loss

By KEN TYSIA
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame's 36-31 loss to Stanford took its toll on Irish coach Lou Holtz. After the game Saturday, a dejected Holtz said that he couldn't recall ever being in a loss which was as difficult as the defeat at the hands of the Cardinal in Notre Dame Stadium.

Holtz was particularly disappointed with his defense. "There are going to be changes somewhere," Holtz said. "You give up 38 points or whatever it was (36)—we've got to look back and get at it again."

The Irish hadn't given up 36 points since they defeated USC, 38-37, on Nov. 29, 1986 in the season's final game. "They haven't given up that many at home since a 36-32 loss to South Carolina on Oct. 20, 1984, under Gerry Faust," Holtz said.

Stanford coach Dennis Green, who was once receiver coach under Bill Walsh with the San Francisco 49ers, has developed an offense for the Cardinal much like the one the 'Niners have used to win two straight Super Bowls. The Cardinal players like to believe that they can be as successful with that offense as San Francisco has. "We try to think of the best offensive system in the country," Cardinal quarterback Jason Palumbis said. "If they (the 49ers) can win Super Bowls with it, we'd better be able to win some big games. Now I'm not Joe Montana, but I try to improve each week, and when you have talent like (receivers) Ed McCaffrey, John Pinckney and Glyn Milburn, it makes my job a lot easier."

One player who could have made McCaffrey's job a whole lot easier was junior fullback Raghib "Rocket" Ismail. The Irish star suffered a deep thigh bruise three weeks ago in Notre Dame's 28-24 win over Michigan, and he still hasn't recovered.

"If he's in the lineup, we'd play a lot better," Holtz said. "He's a tough football player who could have come demoralized if it stops a team. We'll be back."

In Ismail's absence, the other Irish receivers showed what they could do. Junior split end Tony Smith was particularly impressive. He became the first Notre Dame player to catch two touchdown passes in one game since Ricky Watters caught two in a 41-13 win over Air Force on Oct. 22, 1988. Smith finished with five catches, 126 yards, and one touchdown.

"I thought our receivers played exceptionally well," Holtz said. "I think Tony Smith caught the ball well and completed thought for us to have the ball against a good team. We could have possibly played him, but then again when he'd been banged up a few couple weeks. We probably should have played him then."

We could have possibly played him, but then again when he'd been banged up a few couple weeks. We probably should have played him then."

The weakness of the Irish secondary further handicapped the Irish defense. It seemed that every time the Cardinal were in a third-and-long situation, they threw to combalter Regga Jones's side of the field. Jones had 14 tackles in the game. When a cornerback makes that many tackles, it is a good indication that the ball is coming his way much too often.

To Brooks's credit, he did draw a difficult assignment. "(Brooks) is a good player," said Cardinal quarterback Jason Palumbis. "But when you've got a guy like Ed McCaffrey who is 6-6 and runs a 4.5 (40-yard dash) and has a 38-inch vertical leap, you can't cover him. Not even Tony Smith would have tried to play with some man coverages and two-deep zones, and they could do just fine here. The middle and down the sideline and I try to get him the ball."

McCafigure caught six passes for 111 yards. Even senior All-American receiver Chris Zorich hurt them. Zorich, who had been limited in practice, let his worst-vice—overagression—get the better of him against the Cardinal for one play. His 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness allowed the Cardinal a second chance after linebacker Mike McVicker forced a fumble back Tommy Todd for a loss on third and four in the second quarter. After the penalty gave Stanford first down, the Cardinal drove deep into Irish territory.

And last, but certainly not least, junior fullback Raghib "Rocket" Ismail took the game. Ismail was sorely missed on the punt return team, and one can't help but think that if he had been able to perform he would have somehow managed to come up with a big play that might have carried Notre Dame over the top.

That, in a nutshell, is how it happened. Take a confident, underrated Stanford team, throw in a few fumbled punts and missed coverages, a key injury, and you have the recipe for an upset. But remember, don't lose sight of the big picture. It is only a game.

The Notre Dame men's tennis team met a formidable opponent on Friday when it faced the top-ranked Stanford Cardinal in an exhibition match. Although head coach Bob Bayliss feels his team as a whole did not play at the level it could have, the Irish doubles combination of David DiLucia and Chuck Coleman struck on fire in the third set en route to a 5-7, 7-6, 7-5 upset of Jonathan Palmer and Jared Stark, ranked first in the nation.

The doubles win provided the sole victory for the Irish, who entered the match ranked 15th. "I'm not satisfied with the way we played," said Bayliss. "Stanford is a difficult measuring stick, but I think we can play better."

While DiLucia was to have played Palmer, the top singles player in the nation, in the number one singles match, he instead faced Alex O'Brien, who moved in the Cardinal lineup due to Stark's recovery from a foot stress fracture. DiLucia would have preferred to play the best the Cardinal had to offer.

"I was a little disappointed that Stark wasn't able to play," said DiLucia, who lost to O'Brien 7-5, 6-3. "I've played him a few times before and know his game pretty well, but you just have to adjust in situations like that." O'Brien, on the top 10 players in the nation, proved to be a worthy opponent for DiLucia, ranked 48th.

"He didn't have anything too flashy," commented DiLucia. "He's pretty consistent all around and makes you earn every point. He doesn't give away anything either."

The rest of the Cardinal singles players provided the Irish with their toughest competition to date. At number two singles, sophomore Chuck Coleman lost to Palmer, 6-2, 6-2, while sophomore Mark Schmidt jumped off to a 3-0 lead in the first set before losing 6-4, 6-2 at number three singles.

"I started off really strong, but he started charging and got me off balance," said Schmidt. "After I lost the first set, I just lost my confidence and didn't play nearly as well as I did in the first set."

Irish sophomore Ron Bass lost 6-2, 7-5 at number four singles, while freshman Tommy North put up a great effort before falling 7-6, 1-6, 6-4. At number six singles, sophomore Ryan Lee fell, 6-1, 6-1.

In doubles action, DiLucia and Coleman took advantage of sloppy play from the top doubles team in the country.

"We started making more first serves in the second set," said DiLucia. "They gave us easy points and we capitalized on their mistakes. Before we knew it, we had taken the second set and only needed the third to win."

At number two doubles, Ryan Wenger and Paul Anthony fell in a close match, 6-4, 6-4. Sophomore Andy Zurcher, after recovering from a bout with mononucleosis, teamed with Todd Wilson in a 6-3, 7-6 loss at three doubles.

While the Irish feel they could have put a better showing, playing such a big match early in the season would prove to be beneficial.

"This will definitely build character," said a pleased DiLucia. "We play three other top five teams later in the season, so this is going to give us something to build from. Hopefully everything will come together by the time we play those other matches."

Irish men's cross country squad wins its own tournament

By BARBARA MORAN

For the first time since 1984, the Notre Dame men's cross country team captured first place at the Irish Invitational, taking a decisive victory over 17 competitors on Burke Memorial Golf Course last Friday.

The undefeated Irish won by a large margin, finishing with a total of 40 points to second-place Pittsburgh's 503 points. Rounding out the top five schools were Virginia (115), Wisconsin/Oshkosh (140), and Edinboro University (173).

Senior Captain Mike O'Connor crossed the line first for the Irish, completing the five-mile course in 25:07.9 for third place overall. Pittsburgh's Keith Dowling took first overall with a time of 25:04.5, and was followed by teammates John O'Connor (eighth) and Ryan Lee (ninth).

"We had a good day," said O'Connor. "When you consider that out of the four teams finishing behind us two are nationally ranked (Pitt and Virginia), one is number one in Division II (Edinboro) and one is number one in Division III (Wisconsin/Oshkosh), we can see why we didn't expect to finish so far ahead. It indicates that our kids are pretty good."

"I don't even think that we were favorites to win the meet. We had a solid team effort," said Chuck Coleman.

O'Connor agreed with his coach about the surprising finish.

"We were really surprised that we won by that much," said O'Connor. "I don't even think that we were favorites to go into the meet. We had a solid team effort."
ND baseball wins one of three from Wichita State

Special to the Observer

After defeating 1989 NCAA Champion Wichita State in the first game of a three-game series, the Notre Dame baseball team fell to the Shockers in the ensuing two, 8-7 Thursday night and 9-3 Friday night.

On Friday, the Irish allowed four runs in the sixth inning, with the main damage being a three-run home run by Brian Morrow that landed outside of Coveleski Stadium. Morrow, a freshman, was 2 for 4 with 4 in the game, with a triple in addition to the home run.

Shockers starter Darrin Paxton, who played on Team USA over the summer, earned the win by pitching four shutout innings, allowing one hit and striking out five. Freshman Tom Leahy walked. Wichita State rallied for six runs.

The Irish had tied the score at seven when Bautch singled in Jacobs, who had walked. Wichita State started off the eighth with consecutive walks to Jose Ramos and Jaime Bluma was the winner.

In the second game, which extended past 1:30 a.m., the Shockers scored the deciding run in the eighth when Notre Dame shortstop Mike Cox committed his third error of the game on a Todd Preidt ground ball, allowing pinch runner Chris Wannier to score.

Sophomore Chris Michalak was the losing pitcher, while Jaime Bluma was the winner.

The Irish were leading 2-0 in the fourth when Wichita State rallied for six runs.

ND doesn’t allow a goal in Irish Soccer Classic

By RICH KURZ
Sports Writer

Going into the past weekend, the Notre Dame men’s soccer team was in a deep funk. The squad was on a four-game winless streak, having scored a goal in the last five periods of play, and was questioning itself at every turn.

The Irish Soccer Classic, held this past weekend, helped Notre Dame to erase those some of those problem spots. After defeating Ohio State 2-0 on Friday, the Irish beat Creighton on Sunday, now 3-6-3, tied 0-0 with an unbeaten Creighton team (10-0-2), and probably would have beaten the Blue Jays by surprise. In the course of those problem spots, after a 2-0 halftime before the Creighton ball was cleared to the middle of the penalty box, the linesman disallowed the ball that was out of bounds.

The official never indicated at what point the ball had left the field of play, but subsequent replays indicated what the ball had never, at any point, gone out of bounds.

Notre Dame head coach Mike Berticelli wasn’t dwelling on the missed call, though. "We were closer to it than I was," said Berticelli. "If the says its out, then I guess it was out."

Both teams came out fighting in the first half, but Creighton led 1-0 at the 28:18 mark, as Mary Porte scored an unassisted goal in the 19th minute of the game.

Creighton's Brian Kramler hit the shot over the wall. towards the upper left corner of the net. Giolitto made an incredible save, stepping to the wall, jumping and knocking the ball out of the way.

Creighton goalie Kevin Doyle kept the Irish in the game, with 10 saves in the second half, including three remarkable saves in a period of 30 seconds.

After a deflected header, the ball was cleared to the midfield where it was passed to Kenyon Meyer. Meyer rocketed a shot on goal, but Doyle knocked it away, right to Danny Stebbins who lifted his shot just over the crossbar.

Although both teams challenged the goalie with a remaining minutes of regulation, neither team had a solid chance to score until overtime.

With 2:52 left in overtime, the Blue Jays had a free kick about 15 yards from goal. Creighton's Brian Kramler hit the shot over the wall, towards the upper left corner of the net. Giolitto made an incredible save, stepping to the wall, jumping and knocking the ball out of the way.

SportsChannel America taped Sunday's game with Creighton, and will air it at a yet-to-be-determined time.

The Irish started out their weekend with a 2-0 victory over the Ohio State Buckeyes in front of 1,112 fans Friday night.

Both teams started out a little sluggishly in the first half, but the Irish were able to pick up the level of play in the second stanza, and knocked two shots in midway through the half. Brendan Dillman lined a shot at Buckeye goalie toddler Todd Wilson, which Wilson deflected up into the air. Kenyon Meyer was there to take advantage of the deflection, heading it into the goal at the 67.02 mark to give the Irish a 1-0 lead.

Just a 1:53 later, Irish co-captain Danny Stebbins scored his third goal of the season on a breakaway. After his forceful goal to come out and attack him, Stebbins slid the ball into the net before the keeper could do anything about it.

From that point on, no one really challenged to score, and Notre Dame hung on for its third win of the season, 2-0.

Notre Dame women’s soccer splits two weekend matches in Invitational

By DAVE DIETEMAN

The Notre Dame women’s soccer team split its two weekend matches in the Notre Dame Invitational during the Weekend of Champions.

On Friday, Dayton and Creighton battled to a 1-1 tie in the first game, while Notre Dame sparkled Lewis University 4-0 in the second game.

Although the Irish went no kind to the Irish, as they dropped a 2-0 heartbreaker to Creighton (8-3-1), Dayton (4-4-2), which will face Notre Dame (9-3-1) in the MCI Champions Invitational, outclass Lewis (3-7-1) 5-0 in the early game.

"I think we played well against Lewis," said Notre Dame Coach Ruth Petrucelli. "Early in the game we tried to kick too long, but thought that we adjusted well and played some shorter balls. I'm satisfied with the way we played."

All four of the Irish goals came in the first half of a game that was played almost entirely in front of the Lewis goal. Notre Dame's first score came at the 18:54 mark, as Mary Kate Kelly took an assist from Susie Zilvis and quickly hit a shot.

"Mary Kate Kelly has really come on lately," remarked Petrucelli. "She really caused problems for them on the right side. Early on she was concentration on defense, but now her attacking is coming on. She really has gotten her whole game together." Soon after Kelly's goal, Marianne Giolitto drilled a shot into the opposite corner of the net. Stephanie Porter got the assist.

Yet perhaps the most incredible goal of the day came off the foot of senior center-correct Mimi Suba. Marianne Giolitto, who had levanted an unassisted kick after a Lewis foul, passed the ball to Suba, who had positioned herself 20 yards from the net. Suba one-touched a chip shot over the hands of the leaping Lewis goalie and below the crossbar for a 3-0 Irish lead.

Stephanie Porter finished the scoring for Notre Dame with her unassisted goal in the closing minutes of the first half. Notre Dame outshot Lewis 18-0. Key to the defensive effort was the play of freshman Andrea Kurek, who completely shut down the attack of Lewis scoring machine Ann Stenholt.

Hamill to skate at Joyce ACC

By SCOTT BRUTOCOA
Assistant Sports Editor

The professional skaters took in "Irish on Ice," an ice-skating exhibition to benefit the Notre Dame hockey team, will represent a wide variety of skating talents and styles.

To 1976 gold medalist Dorothy Hamill, it will also represent the evolution of professional skating in a microcosm.

For a person like Hamill, 14 years after whisking into the international sporting scene complete with pretty looks and a revolutionary haircut, skating has been a vehicle for a career in many different forms. It provided her with international fame when she won the gold in Vienna, Austria, in 1976; it gave her a trade in which to earn a living, and it helped her learn about what being a performer is about.

"I'm one of the last of the warhorses that have been out there and really toured on the 'Irish on Ice.' It's not a glamorous life. It's the life of a gypsy," Hamill received this awakening as a result of her five-year contract with ice Capades, signed specifically for her success in the Olympics. She had the same time in the previous meets. She finished a man

The Irish have now lost six consecutive matches and 17 straight games. The goal is looked like they may break the string of losses for the first time.

The Irish have won their last 15-12, 16-14, 15-6 Friday night against the Hoyas.

Oklahoma ran off three straight points to win. It seemed as if the Irish might finally pull one off in the second game. It was close the entire way, but the Sooners eventually took a 14-11 lead. The Irish fought back to tie at 14, but didn't have enough as they fell 16-14. Game three was never close.

Chris Choquette and Alicia Turner played well as each chalked up 11 kills. Choquette had a .360 percent, while Turner had a .303.

It did get worse. It took Hofstra only 50 minutes to dispose of the Irish. The Irish had the led only 1-0, 1-2, and 3-2, respectively in three games. The Irish recorded only 12 digs and five blocks for the match.

LSU did much of the same to Irish, taking 53 minutes to take care of business. The Irish experienced the ultimate humiliation in getting skunked 15-0 in the third game of the match.

"We had two days of practice and we had a different lineup," said Perez. "We're going to make mistakes. Considering all that happened, it could have been worse." The Irish can only hope Loyola and Marquette are more generous foes Tuesday night.

Virginia wins ND Invitational

The Virginia Cavaliers outdistanced Western Ontario, 48-2. Their score of 48 points to easily outdistance their nearest competitor Western Ontario, who finished with 67 points. Beni Grass of Virginia took the honors with a time of 19:31.5. She was closely followed by Western Ontario's Brenda Aruikoke who finished with a time of 19:33.1.

The Irish women's team finished fourth in the meet with a total of 141 points. Junior Amy Blasing was the top Irish finisher coming in 19th with a time of 19:27.4. classy senior Jenny Ledrick, who placed 22nd with a time of 19:35.7.

Dorothy Hamill today, it's kind of a shame that they don't have the experience of traveling with a professional show because it really teaches you an awful lot about being a performer and a touring athlete is like.

So when Hamill shares time on the ice with younger skating professionals like 1990 World Champion Tonya Harding and U.S. men's figure skating champion Christopher Bowman, and two-time national dance champions Susan Wynn and Joseph Urrea, there will be a difference in skating experiences as wide as Lake Placid.

Ice skating has changed completely," says Hamill. "It's a whole different sport. Emphasis is really on athletics and gymnastics, and I think that's good. It's just different. Compulsory figures are our now, and that's where I used to spend my seven hours a day of practice, doing school figures and only a couple of hours doing free skating."

Nowadays, says Hamill, the atlhetes have a greater public awareness of amateur skating and a lot of that has to do with what happens before the Olympics. "Just about everybody has heard of Chris Bowman and Jill Trenary. In my day, I was second in the world championship level about three years before the Olympics and nobody knew me. There's a greater awareness of the amateurs now than there was then."

It's a lot of us have paved the way for the kids nowadays. I think it'll be easier for them. Peggy Fleming opened a lot of doors for me. In the same way, I think we've opened the doors for the Debbie Thomases, the Jill Trenarys. And they'll continue to open doors for the next ones. And that's good."

"Obviously I'd be doing things differently if there's a chance that some of the changes in the sport, but I think for Hamill sometimes won- ders about how she would fare if she were skating in the '90s.

Irish men lose match but gain valuable experience

By HUGH MUNDY
Sports Writer

From the outset of Friday afternoon's men's swim meet between Notre Dame and the highly regarded Stanford Cardinal, the atmosphere at Rolfs Aquatic Center was one of excitement and camaraderie over competition. Both teams looked more towards gaining experience and enjoyment from the early season match up than establishing a fierce rivalry.

As a result, the 117-90 Cardinal victory did not dampen the spirits of Irish coach Tim Welsh.

"It was wonderful competing with one of America's premier swim teams," said Welsh. "The score really had no relevance." Stanford, which finished third at the 1989 NCAA Championships, boasted a stellar squash of America's most valuable performing Brian Rini.

Welsh, however, was unconcerned with comparisons of individual times or performances. "The purpose of this meet is not which team swims faster," noted Welsh. "Notre Dame and Stanford are two outstanding universities who came together to promote the sport of swimming."

In the meet's first event, Stanford lived up to its advanced billing, capturing the 400 medley relay in a pool record 3:26.76. The Cardinal dominance continued throughout the meet as Stanford coped first place in each of the eleven events.

"The entire meet was great for us as a team," Rini commented. "The excitement generated by the crowd created a championship atmosphere and helped everyone swim well."

Other solid performances were handed in by Jim Doran, third in the 1,000-yard freestyle, Colin Cockey, fourth in the 200 breaststroke, and a surprising third-place finish in the 200 meter butterfly.

Welsh hopes the momentum gained in Friday's meet will remain with the Irish throughout the season and views the entire experience as invaluable for both schools.

"We'll look to the positive energy generated through this meet to help our training and racing for the remainder of the season," Welsh remarked.

Stanford women break four pool records in defeat of ND

By RICK SALVINO
Sports Writer

When the Stanford women's swim team entered the Rolfs Aquatic Center Friday, Notre Dame coach Tim Welsh knew not to expect a victory from his own, featuring senior captain and 1989 most valuable performer Summer Sanders.

Not surprisingly, then, Stanford defeated the Irish 111-85 in their meet. In doing so, the Cardinal women broke four pool records. Leading the record-breakers was Evans, whose time of 9:41.74 in the 1000-yard freestyle, shattered the old pool record by 29 seconds. In addition, Sanders led Stanford's 400-yard medley relay team to a time of 3:54.00, which was also a pool record. She also set a record in the 200-yard individual medley, with a time of 1:43.33. Evans, the Irish' second place finisher in the 500-yard freestyle to claim the Cardinal's final record.

Janet Evans also swam on her own, featuring senior captain freestyle relay team, as well as finishing third in the 200-yard breaststroke. "My performance in the 1,000 was very good," she said. "I and I swam well in the 200 breaststroke, in which I wanted to work on my stroke." Evans' top priority right now is to prepare for the upcoming World Championships, in hopes of performing well there. She said that her coach felt that she did very well for this stage of the season.

Despite the great performance by Stanford, Notre Dame coach Tim Welsh had nothing but praise for his own team.

"This was a wonderful experience in which we learned some valuable lessons. The gap between their team and ours is a big one, but we got to see first hand what it takes to be the best," Welsh commented. "Most important though, is that we enjoyed the experience immensely."

As for the upcoming season, coach Welsh is very optimistic. "This is the best we have ever swam in October," he said. "We have a very demanding schedule, but with the aggressiveness that we demonstrated today, I feel that we'll do very well."

In addition, Welsh stated that several Irish women had personal best times on Friday. One bright spot for Notre Dame was sophomore Tanya Williams, who captured the Irish victory of the meet. Her time of 2:05.08 in the 200-yard breaststroke was not only good enough to win, but it also established a new pool record in the event. "We'll look to the positive energy generated through this meet to help our training and racing for the remainder of the season," Welsh remarked.

Williams hopes to return to the NCAAs this year, and she is looking forward to the demanding schedule that the Irish women have to face.

For now though, Williams and the rest of her teammates will concentrate on preparing for the start of the season. This past weekend certainly showed the Irish what they will have to do achieve the national prominence which they are looking to gain.

Cardinal rally ends Irish home win streak at 19
Stanford capitalizes on ND errors to score 36-31 victory

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO

Tommy Vardell's acrobatic flip into the end zone over a grounded Michael Stonebreaker Saturday represented more than just a touchdown. It was a pin that took the air out of one of the most robust collegiate football balloons anywhere.

How much air escaped and how long it will take to refill the pin that took the air out of one of the most robust collegiate football balloons anywhere is unknown.

It was a 61-yard, 12-play final drive by the Stanford Cardinal that consumed 5:28, came with just 36 seconds left in the game, giving the Cardinal a 36-31 lead which dumbfounded Irish football fans and left them bewildered about just what had happened.

This is what happened:

• It made Stanford (12-3) only the second team in history, and the first in 14 years, to defeat a top-ranked Irish team at Notre Dame Stadium (Purdue did it twice, in 1930 and 1954).

• It ended a 19-game home winning streak by the Irish.

Let me preface this by saying that I really don't care whether Art Lambert coaches the Notre Dame volleyball team. I like the public Art Lambert. I don't know the private one.

The situation remained muddled over the weekend as Lambert said he was finished coaching the Irish, but no one from the athletic department would confirm the move.

"I will not be coaching the Notre Dame volleyball team," Lambert said when asked if he would finish coaching just days after being named interim director of the athletic department, and in the middle of a season that has been anything but a success.

It's almost like an encore to the weekends that has been played all season, one of the most difficult of situations." Even so, Stanford's achievement almost was nullified when the Irish, who have had a penchant for last-second victories this season, followed the Cardinal touchdown with a 47-yard march in 25 seconds to the Stanford 23.

With six seconds left, quarterback Rick Mirer lofted a pass deep to tight end Derek Brown, who dove into the front corner of the end zone but could not hang on to the ball, letting a possible victory crash with the incompletion.

"I was stretched out, but I had the ball in my hands," said Brown. "I hit the ground and then so did the ball. I should have had it."

Few would have thought that it would come to that, as the Cardinal did not gain a first down until 8:23 into the second quarter and were trailing the Irish 24-7 with 6:30 remaining in the first half.

But in a day in which all-purpose man Raghib Ismail was out with a deep thigh bruise, the Irish fumbled three punts, presented a lax coverage scheme for the probably-to-be-cardinal quarterback Jason Palumbis, and failed to execute on crucial plays that could have swung the game around.

"I don't know if I've ever been in a loss that was this difficult," said Lambert, who had been coach Lou Holtz. "The three turnovers on punts were absolutelyをしてLOS/ page 17

It's only a game, but still...
How did Notre Dame lose?

Notre Dame football losses have become such a rarity during the Lou Holtz regime that the campus collapses into a state of shock when the Irish do stumble.

The alumni leave soon after the game ends, and the students, left all by themselves on a campus which is dead silent, drink to excess and torment each other with that elusive question. How did this happen?

First of all, it seems that Notre Dame students take an Irish loss a bit too seriously. It's only a game, folks. It seems a bit childish to cry over something as trivial as a football game, and I wonder that and get to the question you have all been asking.

So how did the Irish lose?

Starting Stanford is a much better team than most people think. This was virtually the same Cardinal squad which threatened to upset the Irish last year in Palo Alto but finished on the short end of a 27-17 score. This Notre Dame team, on the other hand, is quite far behind last season's squad, particularly on the offensive line and in the secondary.

And then there were the turnovers. With Raghib Ismail out with a deep thigh bruise, returning punts became a nightmare for the Irish receiver Tony Smith, who had five catches for 78 yards, as he was in jubilation after one of his two touchdowns receptions.

Stanford fullback Tommy Vardell, who rushed for four touchdowns in the Cardinal victory, is wrestled to the ground by Tommy Carter.

Let me preface this by saying that I really don't care whether Art Lambert coaches the Notre Dame volleyball team. I like the public Art Lambert. I don't know the private one.

The situation remained muddled over the weekend as Lambert said he was finished coaching the Irish, but no one from the athletic department would confirm the move.

"I will not be coaching the Notre Dame volleyball team," Lambert said when asked if he would finish coaching just days after being named interim director of the athletic department, and in the middle of a season that has been anything but a success.

It's almost like an encore to the weekends that has been played all season, one of the most difficult of situations." Even so, Stanford's achievement almost was nullified when the Irish, who have had a penchant for last-second victories this season, followed the Cardinal touchdown with a 47-yard march in 25 seconds to the Stanford 23.

With six seconds left, quarterback Rick Mirer lofted a pass deep to tight end Derek Brown, who dove into the front corner of the end zone but could not hang on to the ball, letting a possible victory crash with the incompletion.

"I was stretched out, but I had the ball in my hands," said Brown. "I hit the ground and then so did the ball. I should have had it."

Few would have thought that it would come to that, as the Cardinal did not gain a first down until 8:23 into the second quarter and were trailing the Irish 24-7 with 6:30 remaining in the first half.

But in a day in which all-purpose man Raghib Ismail was out with a deep thigh bruise, the Irish fumbled three punts, presented a lax coverage scheme for the probably-to-be-cardinal quarterback Jason Palumbis, and failed to execute on crucial plays that could have swung the game around.

"I don't know if I've ever been in a loss that was this difficult," said Lambert, who had been coach Lou Holtz. "The three turnovers on punts were absolutelyをしてLOS/ page 17

It's only a game, but still...
How did Notre Dame lose?

Notre Dame football losses have become such a rarity during the Lou Holtz regime that the campus collapses into a state of shock when the Irish do stumble.

The alumni leave soon after the game ends, and the students, left all by themselves on a campus which is dead silent, drink to excess and torment each other with that elusive question. How did this happen?

First of all, it seems that Notre Dame students take an Irish loss a bit too seriously. It's only a game, folks. It seems a bit childish to cry over something as trivial as a football game, and I wonder that and get to the question you have all been asking.

So how did the Irish lose?

Starting Stanford is a much better team than most people think. This was virtually the same Cardinal squad which threatened to upset the Irish last year in Palo Alto but finished on the short end of a 27-17 score. This Notre Dame team, on the other hand, is quite far behind last season's squad, particularly on the offensive line and in the secondary.

And then there were the turnovers. With Raghib Ismail out with a deep thigh bruise, returning punts became a nightmare for the Irish receiver Tony Smith, who had five catches for 78 yards, as he was in jubilation after one of his two touchdowns receptions.
