Police punished for handling of assault

Two St. Joseph County police officers were suspended without pay Thursday for their roles in investigating the Oct. 7 off-campus attack and armed robbery of a Notre Dame student.

Cpl. Daniel Wissniewski was suspended for 15 days and Cpl. Donald Gruler for five days for "conduct unbecoming an officer."

Sheriff Joseph F. Nagy said in a press release issued Thursday that the suspensions are retroactive to Tuesday.

"As they were digging trenches, the armed forces arrived and began asking questions. When they asked who gave them permission to do this, the families said, "Necesitate gave us permission," Ramirez said. The repression has also been severe, she said. Because of our successes, the government and armed forces gained a certain amount of respect, a little bit of fear, and some hate for us," Ramirez said.

On October 18, 1989, the police ranacked UNADES' office and took everything, including Ramirez and fourteen others. "We were there for 72 hours without sleeping, without eating, or without drinking a drop of water, with continuous beatings and tortures," Ramirez said.

"They oppressed us because we say we have a lot of needs, and we are hungry," she said. Due to international pressure, the government returned most of the supplies they had taken from the office. However, they returned to the office on November thirteen and remained there for five months. "We find ourselves again with nothing as we began," she said. "But this time at least we have experience." Now, UNADES study programs conducted forward and are now looking for new support, said Ramirez.

Ramirez' lecture titled "Democracy Beyond the Ballots: A Campaign for Democracy through Community Self-Development in El Salvador," was part of her one month tour of the United States. Ramirez hopes to raise funds for a Vocational Community School to empower poor communities in El Salvador and other self-development projects of UNADES. She also hopes to generate active U.S. support for a negotiated solution to the war in El Salvador.

A worker on a North American campaign in support of UNADES translated Ramirez' lecture. The Center for Social Concerns and the local branch of the Fledge of Resistance sponsored the lecture.

They said that even the weather was in their favor. Brent Musburger and Pat Hayden had given the game to Miami before anyone came out of the tunnel. But when it was over, they called it the Game of the Century. It was two years ago, October 15, 1988, that Notre Dame defeated the number-one Miami Hurricanes in a game called The Game of the Century. It seemed like everyone on this campus was among the 59,075 in the stadium. At least, that's how it looked on television.

Now, I never watched much Notre Dame football before I came here. I knew about the winning tradition and the UPN uniforms, man. Dad never let them throw me out of the house.

The week before The Game, there was no way I could getcocked up as my fel­low students. in my infinitely feminine awkwardness, I flew home Friday. Telling my roommates, "We’re gonna lose anyway; sold my game ticket for $30 and took off.

Miami was unbeatiable. They won Nas­ional Championships, and just too good. But I saw something happen on TV that day. Tony Rice scampered into the end zone, 7-0. Pat Terrill flew down the sideline on an interception return, 21-7.

Later, right after Brent said, "Wouldn’t it be something if it came down to the two-point conversion." I saw Andre Brown, all grey and when he came down the next 45 seconds is my dad yelling, "We lost it " and The Game was nearly gone.

Then, quicker than you could figure out what was going on, Steve Walsh’s arm be­came a blur, and the ball was airborne, headed for Leonard Conley. A blue jersey jumped and hung in the air. And just too good. But I saw something happen on TV that day. Tony Rice scampered into the end zone, 7-0. Pat Terrill flew down the sideline on an interception return, 21-7.

The police have rounded up dozens of Moslem extremists suspected of involvement in the assassination of the parliament speaker, including 25 Pakistanis and Iraqis in Cairo, newspapers reported Monday.

But Iraq denied any involvement in the killing of Speaker Ri'afat el-Mahgoub, his driver and four security men Friday in Cairo. The official Iraqi News Agency said the reports linking Iraq to the slayings were "based on the promotion of lies" and meant to "cover up popular indignation" against Egypt’s support of the U.S.- led forces in the Persian Gulf region.

Leonard Bernstein, the impassioned American maestro who thrilled an international multitude with his spirited shows "On the Town" and "West Side Story," his podium panache and his hundreds of recordings, died Sunday in New York at age 72. Bernstein was a conduc­tor, pianist, educator, author and composer. His compo­sitions included the theatrical, chamber music, sym­phonies, ballet and even a Mass.

Writing course added to Arts & Letters musts

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Writer

The Arts and Letters Advisory Council has voted to require all students in the College of Arts and Letters to take an intensive writing course prior to graduation.

Michael Loux, dean of the College, said the program will begin with next year's incoming freshman and that the change will not affect students presently enrolled in the college.

The recommendation for the course was made by the Committee on the Quality of Undergraduate Education, which is chaired by Associate Dean Jennifer Warlick.

"There is a consensus across the college that we do a good job teaching writing in the freshman and sophomore years," said Loux. "We have the Freshman Writing Program and the Sophomore Core Course, but there's a concern that we've paid less attention to the skills of writing in the junior and senior years."

The Writing Intensive course will be a one-semester, three-credit course related to the student's major. The course will be a "smaller course in the major which will focus heavily on writing," said Loux.

Each department will engage in discussion within the department to precisely define what its writing intensive program will require," he said.

Each department will determine the number of papers the students write, the kind of student-teacher interaction necessary for the course, the standards required for the papers, and the page length. The departments will then send their requirements to Loux for his approval.

Former ND research chief and science dean dies at 91

Special to The Observer

Frederick Rossini, Notre Dame's first vice-president for research and sponsored programs and former dean of Notre Dame's College of Science died Sunday of pneumonia in June Beach, Fla., at the age of 91. He was an internationally known authority on petroleum chemistry. Rossini in 1965 assumed the leadership of research and sponsored programs at Notre Dame following seven years as dean of the College of Science, associate dean of the Graduate School and professor of chemistry.

He left Notre Dame in 1971 as professor emeritus and joined the faculty of Rice University, remaining there, first as professor of chemistry and then as professor emeritus in residence, until 1978.

In 1965 he received Notre Dame's lastestarke Medal, the University's highest honor, which has been conferred annually since 1883 on an outstanding American Catholic layperson. He was the second scientist to receive the coveted award and the first person to be so honored while serving on the Notre Dame faculty.

He came to Notre Dame in 1960 after a ten-year association with the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was Silliman professor and head of the department of chemistry, as well as director of the chemical and petroleum research laboratory.

He served as president of Sigma Xi, the Washington Academy of Sciences, the Permanent Council of the World Petroleum Congresses, the Associated Midwest Universities, and the Albertus Magnus Guild and was a past chairman of the Catholic Commission on Intellectual and Cultural Affairs.

In addition, he was a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the American Petroleum Institute, the American Society for Engineering Education, the Chemical Society, the Geochemical Society, Phi Kappa Theta and Tau Beta Pi.

He also maintained memberships in the Philosophical Society of Washington, the Albertus Magnus Guild, the Catholic Association for International Peace, Phi Lambda Epulum, the Cosmos Club in Washington, D.C., and the Franklin Institute.

A native of Monongahela, Pa., Rossini held undergraduate and master's degrees from Carnegie Tech and a doctorate in chemistry from the University of California at Berkeley.

He lecture under the auspices of numerous colleges universities and professional organizations in this country and abroad.

He was given the National Medal of Science in 1977. Among other honors he received were honorary doctorates from six schools, including Carnegie Tech, and Notre Dame; the Hildebrand award of the Chemical Society of Washington; the John Price Wetherill Medal of the Franklin Institute; and the Priestly Medal of the American Chemical Society.
Notre Dame opens four new computer centers

The Office of University Computing announces the opening of four new computer clusters on campus and the renovation of five existing clusters. The new Notre Dame computing facilities, located in Fitzpatrick, Hayes-Healy, Nieuwland, and the Computing Center/Math Building, add 147 workstations to the total available for the Notre Dame community's use.

These labs contain a variety of different computers to meet the needs of Notre Dame's students, faculty and staff. Each lab accommodates different computer systems which may provide access to Macintosh, Zenith and IBM microcomputers; Sun SPARC station and NeXT workstations; and access to the IBM and Convex mainframe systems. Software packages which are available on lab computer networks include word processing, spreadsheet, graphics and database applications.

People may use their own software in the labs if it is compatible with available computers. The more powerful microcomputers, workstations, and mainframes provide programming languages, statistical packages, high-end graphics, and advanced scientific and engineering tools. All members of the Notre Dame community with valid IDs may use the computer labs.

Cluster growth was spurred by the 1986 Task Force on Computing report detailing a plan for developing new directions for computing at Notre Dame. "We envision publicly accessible clusters of workstations located in academic buildings to be the primary mode of access to computing resources for most undergraduate students," wrote the task force in its report to the Provost.

A ratio of 20 undergraduate students per workstation was determined a reasonable target by the task force. By the end of this fall semester (with the addition of a cluster in Campus Security), the ratio will be reached. The report defined workstation "as a generic term for single-user environment. Workstations range from simple terminals to high-powered stand-alone microcomputers."

Campus computing resources include 189 Macintoshes, 65 DOS computers, 117 Unix workstations and 34 dedicated terminals with 41 printers and plotters available in 10 campus clusters. Another cluster also is planned for the DeBartolo classroom building when it is completed.

The following public computing facilities are available on campus:

- Architecture, Room 412
- ComputingCtr/Mathematics, Room 2
- ComputingCtr/Politics, Room G115
- Fitzpatrick Engineering, Room 170
- Hayes-Healy, Room 25
- Hesburgh Library, Room 249
- LaFortune Student Center, Room 16
- Nieuwland Science, Room 203
- O'Shaughnessy Hall, Room 248
- Public Safety, Second Floor

(Opens in Nov.)

For further information about campus computing facilities, please contact the Information Resource Center, room 111, Computing Center/Math Building, phone 239-8111.

Happy 22nd Birthday, Elizabeth Anne Crisp

Water gun battle will be part of Student Government's fundraiser

By MIKE SCARESLLA

A campus-wide water gun game called GOTCHA will be part of Student Government's annual fund raising drive to benefit the South Bend United Way.

The events began with a dessert reception on Saturday for parents and students.

"The dessert reception was a great success with about $500 going to the United Way," said Kevin Costello, the executive coordinator of special projects.

The reception included performances by the glee club and two jazz band combos.

Individual dorms will be responsible for the majority of the drive. The Student Government hopes to get at least fifty cents from each student.

Each dorm will decide the way it wants to go about collecting the money. As a motivating force, a VCR will be given to a dorm that raises the highest percentage of money.

"The dorms proceed could make or break the entire drive," said Costello. Money will be collected through Monday, October 29th.

GOTCHA will be started in the hope of raising additional money for the campaign. Sign up for GOTCHA will take place in the dining hall today through Friday. A one dollar donation is necessary to play the game.

A participant receives a name of someone else playing the game. He or she then finds that person and shoots him/her with a squirt gun. He or she then takes on the eliminated person's name. The cycle continues until only one person is left. The winner receives $75.

The goal for this year's drive is $3500. "The drive will be a success and I am very optimistic about the whole thing," said Costello.

The money will benefit the Big Brothers/Big Sisters and the Logan Center of South Bend.

Notre Dame has stipulated that the donated money cannot be used for projects that go against Catholic moral standards.

"The United Way has been a long standing tradition here at Notre Dame and we hope to make this year's drive as good a success as the ones in the past," said Costello.

The Caravan has been held annually for several years, but this year's number of visiting representatives (75) is substantially larger than the usual number of thirty or forty. Most of the nation's top law schools will be represented, among them Michigan, Duke, Yale, Notre Dame, Wake Forest, Northwestern, and Southern California.

Information on admissions criteria include minimum LSAT scores, a student's undergraduate record and median G.R.A. No specific applications will be made available, as this is information designed to answer questions. Individuals and groups can make or break the entire drive. ABC will apologize for ad slighting Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — ABC television will try to soothe bruised feelings in Cleveland stemming from a joke in a promotion for the situation comedy "Coach," the mayor's office says.

Robert A. Iger, president of ABC Entertainment, promised to air an apology the night of Oct. 22, when ABC broadcasts the Cleveland Browns' home game against the Cincinnati Bengals, a statement by Mayor Michael R. White's office said Saturday.

When the Browns played in Denver against the Broncos on Oct. 8, the network broadcast a brief promotion for "Coach." Actor Jerry Van Dyke, who plays an assistant college football coach on the series, commented that even if the Browns beat Denver, they would still lose "because they have to go back to Cleveland."

White sent a letter to ABC, calling the remark insensitive and disrespectful to the city. "Any comedian or comedy show that uses Cleveland as the punch line for a joke has never visited our city and is relying on what has been for years the crutch of feeble comedians," White said in his letter to ABC.

Town stages underwear celebration

PIQUA, Ohio (AP) — Wearing underwear — and nothing else — in public is becoming a proud tradition in this western Ohio town's annual "Made in Piqua" parade.

This weekend's two-day Great Outdoor Underwear Festival was the community's third. Patricia Cunningham Flesh, grand marshal of Sunday's festival parade, said underwear has been good to her family and her community. She is the widow of Alfred Flesh, whose father, Leo, founded the Atlas Underwear Co.

Mrs. Flesh, 83, considers it a duty to her community and the family name to take part in the parade. "Where else would you put underwear but on flesh?" she said.

The hour-long parade each year includes about 100 units — at least one of which touts the virtues of underwear. Organizers cautioned that the parade is a family affair. Risque lingerie is not welcome.

There are 107 males on the waiting-list for on-campus housing. We've taken care of all females that wanted on for this major, originally had no option but living off-campus.

"Housing is limited to first-born Domers, and I am a naturalized Domo," he said. Now Raymond says that he would not move on campus even if he could.

"We keep a listing of places in the community available for rent. When they are rented, they are crossed off the list," she said.

The student has to use his or her own judgment. We also have a sample lease that all students should see.

PLO chief hints at Saddam's 'flexibility' in the Gulf crisis

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel said on Sunday it rejected the U.N. decision to investigate the Israeli shooting of 19 Palestinians on the Temple Mount and would not cooperate if the world body sends a delegation.

The decision came after a four-hour meeting of Israel's Cabinet and was announced by Foreign Minister David Levy.

Levy, speaking on Israel radio. said the government "unanimously rejected the decisions" Friday of the U.N. Security Council and "determined its refusal to accept such a mission."

Other ministers indicated that Israel would not block the arrival of the U.N. group but would not cooperate with it. "We have refused to meet any members of the delegation," said Religious Affairs Minister Avner Shaki.

The Security Council on Friday condemned Israel and decided to send a team under Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to investigate the slayings. Israeli troops on Monday fired live ammunition at Palestinian protesters on the Temple Mount, known in Arabic as Haram al-Sharif, or Noble Enclosure. Haram al-Sharif is considered Islam's third holiest shrine.

Israel maintains its police were provoked by Palestinian rioters who threw rocks from the Moslem compound on the Temple Mount at Jews worshiping at the adjacent Western Wall.

New York (AP) — The incoming chairman of the New York Stock Exchange took the stage at the Waldorf Astoria Sunday and denounced the slowdown he sees in the 80s as the "decade of abundance." William H. Donaldson, who will take office formally in January, delivered a sermon in which he also derided a "city in which it seems like everybody is at everybody else's throat." Donaldson urged everyone from the "chairman of the board to the janitor" to communicate as individuals and share their talents to prevent what he termed "the well-being of the city." Donaldson, 59, a securities industry veteran, is a friend of President Bush and the fourth, full-time paid chairman of the New York Stock Exchange. He and two friends founded Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, the 10th-largest brokerage in the U.S. He also serves on the Nixon and Ford administrations.

But he was so jittery Sunday that he made a point of not mentioning the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, he said, that by comparison "on January 1, when I pass through those worldly portals on 11 Wall Street, my first day will seem like a piece of cake." Donaldson's brief transformation into preacher stemmed from a rally at the cathedral last May during which Mayor David Dinkins called on civic leaders to help restore faith and community in the city. Donaldson's was the first of a series of weekly sermons dedicated to what church officials call "sharing the visions.

"Last May, remember the days when our beloved New York was going to explode with hatred," said the Rev. James Parks Morton, dean of the cathedral, as he introduced Donaldson. "Now we hope to heal and bring peace and unity to New York.

During his 25-minute sermon, Donaldson called the 1980s a decade in which "it was easy to see how good things were for some people and every easier to see how bad things had become for others.

It should not be left to the captains of industry and government to reverse the trend of excess and greed. Donaldson said.

"It is a spirit that must spring from the individual, not the employee manual, as he said.

Are we amidst a recession? Economic analysts unsure of country's future

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Business leaders cannot agree on whether the U.S. economy is heading toward a recession. "I guess I would align myself with those who believe we are in or are entering a recession," said William Butcher, chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank.

But while John Reed, chairman of Citicorp, described it as "a difficult period," he says he's not ready to throw in the towel yet.

And David Kerns, chairman of the Xenex Corp., says he doesn't "have the slightest idea" whether the United States is in a recession.

There were other topics discussed at the President's Business Roundtable meeting the evening the Palestinian Gulf crisis, the Federal budget deficit and the baseball playoffs — but recession took center stage.

The council's semiannual economic outlook report, prepared by 19 corporate economists, set the tone. "The first question is the very big difference in what our com­mit­tees are projecting now compared to what they were projecting last spring," Lewis Preston, chairman of L.P. Mor­gan & Co. and council vice chairman, told reporters before pre­sent­ing the report to leaders of the nation's top 100 corpo­ra­tions.

While three-fourths of the economists believe the economy still can skirt a recession this year, projected growth in the second half was down from 0.3 percent at an annual rate, compared with a 2 percent rate projected in May. Five of the 19 panelists said an economic downturn would occur before year-end.

In a session with reporters, 12 of the council's corporate chiefs assessed their particular industries. While most agreed on the overall economic sluggishness, many noted that certain industries varied from industry to industry and from region to region.

"It feels like a recession in some segments," said General Electric Co. Chairman John Welch Jr., who becomes council chairman in January. "In other segments, things are going quite well." Citicorp's R. Ed­d‎d said con­sumers were reflecting the economy.

"We look at our credit card business ... we see different patterns depending on the segment of the economy in a given area," he said.

"In areas where the economy is weak, consumers tend to pare their outstanding balances and put the card in a drawer," Reed said. "And in areas where they're feeling good, they tend to use it normally.

But most agreed that even those industries that had not been greatly affected by the economic sluggishness earlier in the year, slowed dramatically after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion.

"There is still growth but at a lower rate," said James Robinson III, chairman of the American Ex­change Co.

"This, too, changes as you go across the country — the Northeast, of course, being quite hard hit now; Central and Western parts of the country, however, spending at a bit more robust," he said.

Robinson, Welch and others agreed that housing and construction are durable goods — big-ticket items such as appliances and automobiles that have been most adversely af­fected.

Those items were sliding even before the Persian Gulf crisis, in part because of rising interest rates. The oil-price shock has eliminated the price advantage that with which to buy them.

Housing starts, instead of being up about 2.3 percent, are going to be down about 2.2 percent this year," said S.D. Bechtel Jr., chairman of the board of directors of Bechtel Group Inc. "Next year? More of the same."

Bechtel also said non-residen­tial construction would be down considerably this year.
Lockeroom policy unfair to women

Recently a debate has been brewing at the professional and collegiate level over whether female reporters should be allowed into the locker rooms to interview male athletes after games. Several incidents of harassment of female reporters have brought more focus to the issue during the past few weeks. The situation can be resolved if the coaches and players make the effort to assist female reporters, such a policy is inherently discriminatory.

Because male reporters can go into the locker room, they have access to more information than their female counterparts. If they can accomplish the players interviews immediately after the game and are able to gather quotes a female reporter would like to interview a player, she makes a request and the interview is conducted in a separate room. Although Notre Dame does make the effort to assist female reporters, such a policy is inherently discriminatory.

If a paper’s best sports writer is a woman, it is troublesome that the paper would have to think about sending her to cover a football game. In the case of The Observer, female reporters have typicall been assigned to cover women’s basketball. At Notre Dame Stadium, female reporters are not allowed into the locker room following the game. If a woman would like to interview a player, she makes a request and the interview is conducted in a separate room. Although Notre Dame does make the effort to assist female reporters, such a policy is inherently discriminatory.

The situation can be resolved if the coaches and players are willing to create a space where athletes can meet with female reporters after the game, while the male reporters talk to coaches after the game, and are able to gather quotes a female reporter would like to interview a player. The coaches need to explain the situation to the players and encourage them to respect the female reporter who is only allowed to interview select players outside the locker room.

Dear Editor:

The recent shake-up in the women's volleyball program needs to be explained but should be handled by the athletic department. Until it is explained, half-informed sports editors should refrain from editorials that are belligerent in tone and insinuate some wrongdoing on the part of the players.

The headline of Greg Guffey's Oct. 5 editorial read, "Lambert's future uncertain as volleyball team revolts." This was not some violent takeover of the ACC, rather, it was an effort on the part of college-level athletes to improve playing conditions, the morale of the team and, through such advances, improve the Notre Dame Women's volleyball program.

Later in the same editorial, Guffey stated, "Lambert's son, Greg, is the other assistant coach." I think this exemplifies Mr. Guffey's interest in, and knowledge of, the 1990 volleyball season. Greg Lambert has not been an assistant coach at any time during the 1990 season.

In the editorial of Monday, Oct. 8, Guffey wrote, "I like the public Art Lambert. I don't know the private one." Does Mr. Guffey believe a mid-season change would be based on the "public" Art Lambert? The players know the "private" Art Lambert, and in that light, shouldn't their judgment on the situation of the team and on his coaching of the team be respected and taken seriously? Then why did the players change now? Was it something that no one could have taken action about in the past six years? I would like to point out that three seasons ago, two scholarship athletes did take action after only one season under Art Lambert. Ironically, that was after the 1988 season.

Furthermore, Guffey seemed to expect a statement from Maria Perez following the matches this weekend. She had every right to decline to comment because the athletic department had not yet made an announcement concerning the coaching situation.

In his Oct. 5 editorial, Ken Tystace wrote "The Irish looked pretty pathetic in the Golden Dome Classic this weekend without Lambert on the sidelines." The performance of any athlete or team in any given game, match, or tournament does not depend exclusively on the coach on the bench at the time of the game; it depends on the preparation and conditioning the team has had throughout the season. Any team experiencing a coaching change goes through a transition period and should be allowed time to adjust.

Finally, I would like to quote the headline from Mike Kamrad's Oct. 8, Inside Column. It read, "Team needs support even after loss," and although he was speaking of the football team, I think the sentiment is appropriate for the volleyball team also. I hope that the student body is willing to stand behind the women's volleyball team through this transition period, and that Maria Perez and the team's coaches are given the time and opportunity to improve.

Logan Center appreciates ticket donors

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the clients of the Logan Center, we would like to say a big thank you to the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. Because of your generosity, the clients were able to enjoy the ND/Stanford football game in person.

Sports reporting is no longer solely a male and football programs. Both collegiate and professional, must accommodate the rights of female members of the press. Creating a separate waiting area for interviews is a viable solution to make Notre Dame Stadium a place where women and men are treated equally.

Use of sexist language influences values

Dear Editor-

This letter generally addresses the representation of women in language and its social implications. It is a full appreciation of the "Year of Women," and while I do not propose to go into any detail, it is hoped that this letter may serve to illustrate the implications of such a posture, in that it is a fundamental part of our social fabric.

What the author is suggesting is that sexism in language is not simply a matter of linguistic choice, but rather a reflection of societal attitudes and values. The use of gendered language, for example, can reinforce patriarchal social norms and limit the opportunities available to women. The author also argues that the use of gendered language can have a negative impact on women's confidence and self-esteem.

The author suggests that the use of gendered language should be challenged and changed. This can be done by raising awareness of the issue, promoting gender-neutral language, and encouraging women to speak out against sexism in language.

The letter concludes by emphasizing the importance of gender equality and the need for all of us to work together to create a more just and equitable society.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]

For your dining pleasure: 'Hotel California'

So I called up the captain.
Please bring me my wine.
He said, "I haven't seen that spirit here since 1965."
In 1969 the First Church of Satan was founded by Anton Levey. The "captain" is the leader of the Satanic ceremonies who told Don that they haven't seen the "spirit" of wine (Christ's blood in a Christian mass) since 1969. And still those voices are calling from far away.

Wake you up in the middle of the night, just to hear them say, "Welcome to the Hotel California."

Such a lovely place.
Such a lovely face.
They're leavin' it up at the Hotel California.

What a nice surprise, Bring your alibis.
The voices would appear to be supernatural forces within the Church (demons?). The fact that the song "lives it up" would go along with the theme of Satanism. It would also fit the philosophy of Levey when he founded the Satanic Church: to indulge in every vice and follow your own will in any direction that you want. Live it up.

Bring your alibis" is an indication of the fact that a good number of those who join the Satanic Church do not use their real names to protect their other public and social lives.

The song continues, further proving the point:

MIRRORS ON THE CEILING

The Black Mass held within the Church was notorious for staging large scale orgies with the members and the priest or priestess, pink champagne on ice, Satanists used pink champagne as the sacred drink during ceremonies as a form of blasphemy and mockery of the Christian wine.

And she said, "We are all just prisoners here, of our own devising."

And in the master's chambers, they gathered for the feast.

They stabbed it with their steel, and they just can't kill the Beast.

This last line is in reference to the Beast (666) in Revelation that suffered a mortal wound but still did not die.

Last thing I remember, I was running for the door.

I had to find the passage back to the place I was before.

"Welcome to the Witch's Woman" into a new perspective.

ND has to improve on defense

With Notre Dame's 57-27 victory over Air Force, Lou Holtz felt the Irish were in the running for a career-high 253 yards and tied his best single-game total with 10 tackles. "If he's behind the secondary and you try to throw a deep ball, he's pretty good and he's pretty perfect. You just kind of let him run his route and let him work it out," said Holtz. McGraw's troops promise NCAs are within reach

The opener may be over a month away, but the Irish women's basketball team is already promising big results.
"This year's Notre Dame women's basketball team is going to make history," predicted Sara Liebacher, this season's tri-captain along with fellow seniors Karen Robinson and Kris Davis. "We're going to make the NCAs for the first time.

The formidable expectations are not unfounded. The squad that finished last season with a 23-6 record graduated only one player (Lisa Kuhn) and returned six starters. While the NCAA selection committee snubbed the program last year, a tougher schedule and influx of talent should make them viable contenders for a tournament invitation come February.

While Notre Dame, which begins practices today, will face Tennessee and Old Dominion late in the season, the "make-it-or-break-it" games will probably occurred at the end of the month. The team travels to California at the end of November to play UCLA and Stanford in its third and fourth games.

"If we can come back from that trip undefeated, we would definitely be in the Top 20," said Robinson.

Easier said than done. Stanford, defending national champion while the Bruins are still smarting from Notre Dame's one-point victory at home last year. Still, the game should prime the Irish, who must face Indiana, Syracuse, and Louisiana Tech among others all before January 1.

"The whole of December is going to be big," said Head Coach Muffet McGraw. "It will be a good test if we're going to be ranked in the preseason.

People are not unfounded. The squad has been given more bodies to work with this year. Four talented freshmen and the return of junior forward Comer Haysbey should add much-needed depth to a team that last year featured only seven healthy players.

"All of them will make an impact right away," said Liebacher of freshmen Andrea Alexander, Katarina Jones, Kristin Knapp and Sherni Osolny. The 6-1 Jones and 5-11 Osolny were Gatorade Players of the Year for Oklahoma and Maryland, respectively, as seniors in high school, while Alexander, 5-10, and Knapp, 6-2, were first team All-State in Michigan and California respectively.

"The best players are going to play," said McGraw, "although some may have been penciled in last season.

McGraw already has the unusual comfort of returning six starters. When Haysbey was injured and ineligible at midseason last year, sophomore point guard Shannon Washington found herself playing point guard while the 5-11 Liebacher moved to forward. Robinson, Davis and junior Margaret Nodwin were the other regulars.

Cooper Washington has a year of experience at point guard and that's the pivotal position," said McGraw.

Despite Haysbey's return, Washington may see a good deal of playing time again this season. Liebacher recently underwent surgery to remove bone spurs in her ankle and may not be healed in time for Notre Dame's opener Nov. 16th versus the Latvian National Team.

Meanwhile, McGraw has welcomed back the six foot Haysbey, who led the team in scoring before her suspension.

"It's going to be a big game," said McGraw. "She does everything we want to do. She'll help us run the break and gives us good height under the boards."

McGraw said that while Notre Dame's basic playing style shouldn't differ much from last year, having 12 people on the team will allow the Irish to pick up the tempo and defend man-to-man more often.

That upbeat outlook, combined with some clutch wins on the road, should help the Irish come two weeks ago when the Tar Heels were ranked in the Top 20.

"There may not be a lot of difference in the players, but the talent is there," said McGraw. "We've got the talent to fill up the box score again this season.

The Notre Dame men's basketball team will find out quickly what kind of season to expect.

The Irish open the 1990 season in exactly one month in the pre-season National Invitational Tournament. They host Fordham in the first-round of the 16-team event.

"The pre-season NIT is a great opportunity for us," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said Friday afternoon during the team's Joyce ACC. "It's a big advantage when you can play for something before going to the NCAA. We're looking at it as a 16-team regional."

Said junior Daimon Sweet, "We're taking that tourney very seriously. How well we do in that tourney will tell how well we will do the remainder of the year."

Notre Dame finished 16-13 last season and is ranked 19th in the preseason USA Today poll.

Irish aren't disappointed after second-place finish
By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

At first glance, it might look like the Notre Dame women's cross country team should be disappointed with its second-place finish at the Indiana Intercollegiate Championship held at Indiana State on Friday. After all, the Irish were beaten by Purdue 39-60, after defeating the Boilermakers last weekend at the Notre Dame Invitational.

In reality, it was probably the best performance for the Irish this season. They placed seven runners in the top thirty, including two in the top ten.

Purdue's Amy Koontz took first-place honors, coming home in a time of 18:19.5 for the 5,000 meters.

A rejuvenated Diana Bradley led the Irish, posting a seventh-place finish with a time of 18:44. It was the best race she has run since the Georgetown meet Sept. 15. Of course, Ms. Consistency Amy Blaising was right there also, placing eighth with a time of 18:48. Senior captain Terese Lemanski rebounded from a disappointing race last week to place a strong eleventh in the meet covering the distance in 18:56.

"It was a real good performance," Diana Bradley and Terese Lemanski came back real strong. As always, Amy Blaising was really solid," said Irish coach Tim Connelly.

The remaining Irish finishers were Patty Villareal (16th-19:07), Renee Arupt (18th-19:10), Lisa Gorski (22nd-19:18), Sarah Esterline (29th-19:44), and Andrea Sullivan (37th-20:08). Again, Connelly was particularly pleased with the performance of freshman Patty Villareal, saying, "She needs to gain more confidence and know she can compete with the top four (runners), but she can close with anyone."

"Well, people will say, "They beat Purdue before, so they should have won,='- but Purdue never here at Notre Dame, especially with this kind of field. They've been improving every week and you can't ask for anything more," said Connelly.

Jacobs, Danapilis lead ND to win

Special to the Observer

Frank Jacobs launched a two-run homer and Eric Danapilis had four hits as the Notre Dame baseball team beat Air Force 12-5 Friday night at Coveleski Stadium. The win, which concluded the fall season for the Irish, put Notre Dame's fall season record at 3-2, including a two-game sweep of Air Force. The Irish beat the Falcons 8-2 Thursday night.

Jacobs's home run gave him two during the fall. The first came two weeks ago when he launched a towering blast to right center against Wichita State. Danapilis, 4-for-5 Friday night, was 6-for-7 in the two-game series with Air Force with six runs scored and three RBIs.

In the game Friday, Irish starter Tom Price pitched five innings for the win, allowing five hits, one walk and five runs. He struck out five. Irish sophomore Pat Leahy entered in the sixth and pitched three innings of near-perfect relief, allowing only one walk and striking out five. Alan Wlasia pitched a shutout ninth.

Air Force opened the scoring against Price in the first with three runs. With one out, David O'Keefe singled and Mike Kazlausky reached on first baseman Joe Binkiewicz's two errors, one a botched fielding play when Binkiewicz charged Kazlausky's dribbler down the first-base line and another when he threw wild into right field, trying to throw out Kazlausky at first.

Outfielder Ian Pharris followed with a double that scored both runners, and Vern Mullis knocked in Pharris with a single. In the bottom of the inning, Notre Dame put a run on the board when Dan Bautch walked and moved around the bases on two wild pitches and a passed ball.

Opening the second with the score 3-1, Air Force scored two more runs on two Notre Dame errors, one by third baseman Craig Counsell and another by second baseman Greg Layson. Notre Dame got two back in the second when Freshman catcher Matt Haas singled, and Craig Jacobs followed with an RBI double. Frank Jacobs slammed a two-run shot to right after Danapilis had singled.

In the fifth, Counsell singled and Danapilis followed him with a double. Jacobs then walked, and Edwin Hartwell followed Counsell and Danapilis when first baseman O'Keefe missed the ball to the plate. Hartwell was safe at second on the throw.

In the sixth, in this week's balloting, Danapilis came home on first baseman O'Keefe, who threw wild into right field, allowing Danapilis to score. Cowart, however, failed to step on the plate, and the score was 3-5.

Freshman catcher Matt Haas, substituting for Cory Meek, walked...with the bases still loaded to make it 6-5, and another run came across when pitcher Brad Smith threw a wild pitch.

Notre Dame added to its lead in the sixth with an seventh innings, scoring a run both times on errors by Cowart. In the seventh, Danapilis came home on Cowart's passed ball, and in the bottom of the third was scored when he stole third and Cowart's throw went out of left field.

In eighth with the score 9-5, the Irish scored three more runs. Counsell walked and Danapilis doubled to put runners on second and third. Followed with a well placed bunt and another when Danapilis was caught stealing at second.
Belles, Irish psyched for today’s big soccer match

SMC will try to rebound from loss to Calv\n

The Saint Mary’s soccer team lost to Calvino College 1-0 Saturday at Calvino in a critical game that will affect the chances of a post-season NCAA bid.

The Belles started out sting­ingly against Calvino and con­tinued to play poorly throughout the first half. Calvino took advantage of the situation and scored the only goal of the game near the end of the first half.

The Belles pulled together in the second half playing a more intense game. Saint Mary’s had opportunities to score, but they were unable to capitalize.

"The team lost their compo­sure," said Coach Tom Van Meter. "We played a second half but we were unable to convert the chances we had into goals.

The Belles (11-2-1) will face a difficult task today when they play Notre Dame in a highly emotional game at Saint Mary’s Field at 4 p.m. The match pits a growing Division III Belles team against a powerhouse team of Notre Dame.

Saint Mary’s is counting on the senior leadership to guide the Belles, who barely lost to the Irish last year. Captain Trish Troester, Marcie Gaus, and Amy Ross will lead the team in shutting down the Notre Dame offensive and defensive game plans.

Troester plays a major part in the Belles’ defense. She has a combination of speed and strength and is capable of converting opportunities as she has done all year. Junior Forward Greer Gillbihler is also a great asset to the Belles offense and she will provide, when she returns, a vital part of the game. Gaus, Ross, and Kelly Cook look to lead the defense.

Junior goalie Mary Alice O’Neill will play a vital role in her first game against rival.

"The Notre Dame defense has two major obstacles," said Van Meter. "We had a tough loss to Notre Dame and the Irish had an impressive win over Northwestern.

'Saint Mary’s will have to play an almost perfect game today to come away victorious. The team has to get confidence along with the tremendous talent will help the Belles efforts.

"We have to play the best de­fensive game we can," said co­captain Amy Ross. "If we can control their offense and we will be able to take advantage offensively and win the game.

The two teams are counting on tremendous student support from both sides. "This game is a chance for the students to show their true school spirit," said co­captain Trish Troester. "The Notre Dame game."

Irish slam Falcons now can focus on Hurricanes

Notre Dame took some big steps in Saturday afternoon's rout of Air Force.

But Coach Lou Holtz said the Irish must take the biggest step of them all this week in practice before Saturday's showdown with Miami.

Notre Dame bounced back from a shocking loss to Stanford and routed the Falcons 57-27 before the customary 39,075 in Notre Dame Stadium. The win showed the Irish could rebound from a defeat, but it also showed there is still much room for improvement.

"I was glad to win and we needed to see a few more positive things," Holtz said. "We have to make an awful lot of progress this week in preparation for Miami. We never made the big play today, but we are going to have to do that next week."

Notre Dame can now turn its attention to the highly anticipated showdown with Miami, set for 2:30 Saturday in Notre Dame Stadium. The winner of that game the past two seasons has won the national championship.

"They're finally here and we need to see a few more positive things," Holtz said. "We have to make an awful lot of progress this week in preparation for Miami. We never made the big play today, but we are going to have to do that next week."

Notre Dame can now turn its attention to the highly anticipated showdown with Miami, set for 2:30 Saturday in Notre Dame Stadium. The winner of that game the past two seasons has won the national championship.

"We dug ourselves a hole early," Air Force Coach Fisher DeBerry said. "We just didn't give ourselves a chance to be in the football game today. I think you will find them in the books for the national championship at the end of the year."

It was a record-setting day for several Irish players.

Notre Dame's 57 points were the most ever allowed by an Air Force team. Colorado State had the previous high of 54 in 1971.

Baghish Ismail set career highs in receptions (six), receiving yards (172) and all-purpose yards (223).

Quarterback Rick Minor set a career high with 253 yards passing and tied his career mark of two touchdowns in one game.

Fullback Rodney Culver had his second consecutive 100-yard rushing game and the longest run of his career (41 yards).

The Falcons did have some rushing success out of the wishbone. They ran for 244 yards, the most yards allowed by the Notre Dame defense since the season opener with Michigan. Quarterback Rob Perez led the Air Force attack with 118 yards on the ground.

"We always expect to run the ball that well," said DeBerry, whose team was averaging 257 rushing yards per game.

They're finally here and we need to see a few more positive things," Holtz said. "We have to make an awful lot of progress this week in preparation for Miami. We never made the big play today, but we are going to have to do that next week."

Notre Dame recovered the first punt at the two-yard line and tailback Dorsey Levens scored on the next play.

The Irish recovered the second punt in the 57-27 win over the Falcons.

Notre Dame quarterback Rick Minor passed for a career-best 253 yards in the win over the Falcons.

Ismail rockets back into Heisman race after sitting out Stanford game last week

Seemingly making up for time lost Oct. 6 versus Stanford, Baghish Ismail rocketed his way back into Heisman form Saturday, setting career highs for pass receptions (six), pass receiving yards (172) and all-purpose yardage (223) in the 57-27 Irish victory over Air Force.

In Notre Dame Stadium after the game, fans filed through the exit mumbles "Heisman," and reporters mobbed Ismail and discarded towels and uniforms in the locker room seeking Ismail's confirmation of those mumbles.

What they found was a soft-spoken Ismail with a towel over his head, as if to hide from the inevitable questions that were about to come.

"That the Heisman trophy is the first thing thing from my mind," said Ismail. "Heisman mumbles might have been shouts instead, had Ismail had an opportunity to return any more balls. Back for every kickoff and punt, Ismail could only watch as punts sailed out of bounds and kickoffs flew to players 10-20 yards in front of him.

"It wasn't frustrating," said Ismail. "I guess it's just a kind of respect."

It was the ultimate sign of respect, and the only time Ismail did get a chance to return one was on a punt after a safety in the third quarter. In that

Women lose to Indiana, Ohio St. over weekend

By MIKE KAMRADT

Things were looking bright for the women's volleyball team Friday night. They came out fired up and aggressive in game one after Indiana delayed taking the floor for 45 minutes. They won that game 15-12 and then blew out a 12-3 lead in the second game. But...

Indiana came back to win that game 15-12 and then went on to take the next two games, 13-11 and 15-8, to win the match.

The Irish were vocal on the court and excited in game one. After each point they huddled at center court and shouted, "Irish!"

"We were upset by what they tried to do," said Chris Chequerette referring to Indiana's Irish coach Maria Perez refused to talk to reporters once again this weekend after her team to Indiana and Ohio State.

Weekly soap opera frustrating for players and reporters alike

Like a never ending soap opera, the plot continues to thicken for the Notre Dame women's volleyball team. Once again, interim coach Maria Perez continued to exercise her constitutional right to not talk to the press after a match.

It's one thing when she refuses to answer questions about the Art Lambert situation. But when she won't even answer questions about the match, she has a problem.

It's frustrating as a reporter to cover an event and then not be able to hear how the coach feels. Lou Holtz, who obviously was very disappointed after losing to Stanford, talked to the press. Come on Maria, lighten up.

But that's not even the tip of the iceberg. Upon arriving at the Joyce ACC Friday night, I was told there would be no match. Upon further investigation, I learned that Indiana was protesting the match and refused to play. After a meeting with assistant athletic director Missy Conboy, in which she informed the Indiana players she'd be sending letters to the NCAA and the Big Ten, IU decided to take the floor.

What they found was a soft-spoken Ismail with a towel over his head, as if to hide from the inevitable questions that were about to come.
