Saddam expects attack from U.S. in near future

(AP) - Saddam Hussein said Tuesday that Iraq was making final preparations for war and expected an attack within days by the United States and its allies. A U.S. senator said President Bush’s "patience is wearing thin.

In the Persian Gulf, 10 American sailors died when a steam pipe ruptured in the boiler room of the USS Iwo Jima. And in Saudi Arabia, a Marine was killed in an accident while driving in the desert. Bush discussed possible military action against Iraq in a meeting with congressional leaders on the gulf crisis, but he told them he could not guarantee he would consult them before embarking on hostilities. He refused to comment publicly on a report the United States plans to discuss a timetable with U.S. allies for a military offensive.

Secretary of State James Baker on Saturday will begin a weeklong visit to Arab and European countries to consult on future steps in the gulf, officials said. The visit will include a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. Asked about the potential for a U.S. military strike, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "As things unfold, of course, there are always scenarios for action that have to be considered ... but there is no timetable for action.

Fitzwater sought to dampen fears that fighting was imminent. "The attitude at the meeting was play it down — be cool about it.

The United States has more than 200,000 troops in the gulf region and has announced plans to send at least 100,000 more. It is the largest U.S. military deployment since the Vietnam War.

McCormick: Church should offer support to individuals deciding to be homosexual

By KATE MANUEL
News Writer

While the moral statement of the church maintains that homosexuality is non-normative, the pastoral policy of the church should be one that both respects an individual’s judgment before God to be homosexual and supports an individual who has made that judgment, according to Richard McCormick, S.J.

McCormick, the John A. O’Brien Professor of Christian Ethics, began Tuesday’s lecture, "Perspectives on Homosexuality and the Church," by saying, "We’re really grasping for a word."

While he gave an example of a, "first obstacle to developing such a theological position, according to McCormick. He said, "There is no such thing as homosexuality. There are only homosexual individuals, more or less.”

Abstractions such as homosexuality often lead to stereotyping because there is a reduction of the whole person to the "private parts," according to McCormick.

"When we say that gay is good, we are implying that it is good precisely because it is gay," said McCormick, who also applied the same objection to saying that heterosexual sexuality is good precisely because it is heterosexual.

Other problematic ambiguities in the term homosexuality, according to McCormick, include the homosexual individual’s "tracking" on the Kinsey scale, whether the individual is engaged in overt acts or has psychic inclinations, whether the person accepts the homosexual sexual or gender orientation or is trying to change or control it, and whether the individual is engaged in casual contacts or has enduring relationships.

The term "morality" presents a second obstacle to presenting a pastoral position, according to McCormick.

Make the most of your time at Notre Dame

Sitting on a flimsy folding chair on the lawn of an alumnus of Notre Dame, I looked around at all the cootered faces of soon-to-be Notre Dame students, as they began to arrive in a cockpit to high school students that had been accepted to our university.

It was four years ago, and I was among the wonderers, following those made artificial conversations, said how excited they were to be there, and how the food was so pleasant.

I got out of my flimsy chair and walked over to where a couple of Notre Dame seniors were standing idly with their hands in their pockets.

"Excuse me," I said. "I've got to get home for a week during midsemester breaks. What an unappreciative, family-hating, brutish senior I was talking to."

"Excuse me," I said. "I've got to get home for a week during midsemester breaks."

"What an unappreciative, family-hating, brutish senior I was talking to."

"Oh, no," he said. "Usually two or three, sometimes you have to do more."

Full of smug contentment to have my hopefully general questions answered, I turned away to get more pleasant food.

"Don't go home for breaks. Go out and do something. Find your four blocks of time."

"Don't go home for breaks. What was this he was saying? Notre Dame was 2,000 miles from home, and I was going to be ready to be home for a week during midsemester breaks. What an unappreciative, family-hating, brutish senior I was talking to."

Drug traffickers in Bogota, Colombia threatened to execute seven journalists they are holding if the gov- ernment launches a new offensive against them, accord- ing to a statement sent to news organizations Tuesday. The statement, bearing the letterhead "The Extraditables," as the Medellin cocaine cartel calls itself, marked the first time the traffickers admitted holding the journalists, kidnapped over the past two months. Among the suspected reporters were Francisco Sandoval, news edi­ tor of the country's leading newspaper, El Tiempo, and Luisa Turbay, daughter of former President Julio Cesar Turbay.

ND business professors discuss potential business faculty jobs

By DAVID KINNEY
News Writer

A burning intellectual curiosity, enthusiasm for teaching, and a desire to make students understand are keys to success for students seeking academic careers as professors, Edward Trubac, associate professor of finance and business economics, said Tuesday.

A panel of Notre Dame professors discussed the faculty life during a seminar on business faculty careers sponsored by the ND College of Business Administration.

The faculty life requires an interest in the big picture and in theoretical situations, as well as a desire to teach others, according to Ann Root, assistant professor of marketing.

More importantly, "the job is about learning," said Joseph Nichols, research gives a person recognition for his discoveries. "It's the most rewarding thing I've done and the most frustrating thing I've done professionally," he concluded.

However, "if you're interested in the academic life because of teaching, don't get into it," said Trubac. Research and teaching are interdependent parts of faculty life, he said.

The PhD program trains students in methods of research, through small-group, intensive-study seminars, research and the dissertation, according to Michael Crant, assistant professor of management. Students, according to Crant, work toward contributing to the body of knowledge in a certain field.

Both Trubac and William Nicholas, professor of accountancy, said that teaching and research have rewards. Trubac explained that teaching never becomes boring, since there are always new developments and applications of basic principles to changing situations.

While "your biggest impact is in the teaching area," said Nichols, research gives a person recognition for his discoveries. "It's the most frustrating thing I've done and the most rewarding thing I've done professionally," he concluded.

"It's very hard for you to know whether you want to go into a doctorate program," said William Wilkie, Nahe professor of marketing. According to Wilkie, students considering a doctorate program needs to consider their long-term aspirations. According to Guiltinan, a student must like learning, be self-disciplined, and have succeeded as a student.

"Keep yourself in the running until you're sure you're out of the running," added John Keane, dean of the College of Business Administration.

Interested students should talk to faculty members and students in doctorate programs, and investigate the doctorate programs of many schools in order to make a well-informed decision, said Guiltinan. According to Wilkie, the faculty life is a rewarding one.

DACOR asks ND to submit candidates for fellowship

Special to the Observer

The University of Notre Dame has been selected by Diplomatic and Consular Officers, Retired (DACOR), an association of retired U.S. Foreign Service officers, to nominate candidates for a $10,000 fellowship in international affairs.

The Willard Memorial DACOR Bacon Home Fellowship will be awarded to one of three seniors nominated by the University at the conclusion of the fall 1990 semester and selected by the education committee of the Washington, D.C.-based foundation. Awarded primarily on the basis of academic excellence, the fellowship is exclusively for the payment of tuition and will be granted for a year of full-time graduate study in 1991-92. It may, however, be extended at a lower rate for a second year of study leading to a master's degree.

Seniors who are U.S. citizens and are majoring in the fields including international relations, economics, history and political science will be eligible for the award and need not be planning careers in the Foreign Service.

Detailed information on the award will be available from Jennifer Warlick, associate dean of the College of Arts and Letters and director of the University's Institute for Scholarship in the Liberal Arts.

Hoffmann wins Cavanaugh Award

Continual growth needed to reduce poverty, Gaag says

By JAY STONE
News Writer

Sustained economic growth and an "investment in human development" are essential to successfully reduce poverty, according to Jacques van der Gaag, member of the World Bank and co-author of The World Development Report 1990 on poverty.

Gaag gave a lecture Tuesday in the Law School about the findings in the 1990 report on global poverty. The World Bank's report examined the condition of poverty over a 20-year period from 1965 to 1985. According to Gaag, the report takes a long-term view towards poverty, emphasizing a pragmatic approach to poverty reduction and an interest in human development. The authors of the report were interested in "what worked and what didn't," said Gaag.

Two factors are necessary to successfully reduce poverty:

- a pattern of growth which effectively uses the poor's most important asset, labor, which Gaag said is "the core of successful anti-poverty policies,"
- and an active policy to provide basic social services, such as education, family planning, and health care.

Gaag said that the report is "not pleading for" economic growth, social service alone, but for a balance between the two. The report's co-authors found that countries which emphasized only one of the two factors did not successfully reduce poverty.

For example, according to the report, Brazil and Pakistan, who increased growth while neglecting social services, have quite high infant mortality rates and low mortality rates for children under the age of five, but have low economic opportunities for the poor.

"Roosevelt's paralegal program was my stepping-stone to a rewarding career." — Anne Hillard
Legal Assistant

According to Gaag, in determining the type of safety net policies which would be most effective, an emphasis on targeting those most in need should be observed. Policies which encourage self-selection by giving the poor various economic opportunities will be the most effective targeting technique, he said.

In addition to national policies which encourage sustained economic growth and social services, Gaag said international efforts on issues like trade liberalization, debt, and foreign aid are essential to reduce poverty.

The world bank report suggests that trade liberalization indirectly reduces poverty. Trade liberalization is an "engine for sustained economic growth," said Gaag, which, in turn, fosters poverty reduction.

Debt, however, contributes to the poverty levels in many developing countries. Gaag said that the debts of extremely poor nations, particularly countries in Sub-Saharan Africa, need to be forgiven in order for them to embark on a path towards reducing their poverty levels. Less poor developing countries, however, could conceivably repay their debts, said Gaag.

The report found little correlation between foreign aid, bilateral and unilateral, received by developing nations and poverty reduction. Gaag said that if foreign aid were to help reduce poverty, the existing amounts of such aid should be redirected to focus on poverty reduction, or redistributed to those nations which are severely poverty-stricken.

In 1988, Israel received $282 per capita in aid and had an $8.65 per capita GNP, but China received $1.84 per capita in aid and had a $330 per capita GNP.

According to Gaag, aid should also be given in an effective way which implement programs that encourage sustained economic growth and social services.

The report is not calling for an increase in foreign aid across the board, said Gaag. Rather, he said, aid needs to be targeted toward investments that "are truly necessary, such as developing rural infrastructure and human capital.

From 1965-1985, the poverty outlook in developing countries has improved according to the World Bank's 1990 report. Over that period of twenty years, consumption per capita has increased about 70 per cent, from $590 to $985. Life expectancy has increased about 20 per cent, from 51 years to 62 years, and primary net enrollment rate has increased from 73 to 84 per cent.

Regionally, however, these economic indicators vary. For example, South Asia's consumption per capita has increased 30 per cent while Sub-Saharan Africa's consumption per capita has stagnated.

Although the global progress of poverty reduction is good, Gaag pointed out that there are still about one billion people living in poverty. Gaag said the report ignores the global poverty line as about "one dollar of consumption per day per person."
Students will ‘Take Back the Night’ with march

By CARRIE DWYER
News Writer

Students from Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s will participate in a campus-wide “Take Back the Night” march Thursday, beginning at 8 p.m. in front of O’Shaughnessy Hall.

The basic purpose behind the march is to “raise community awareness concerning the fact that women do not feel safe walking alone on campus at night,” said senior Lisa Keckler, one of the organizers of the event. In addition, the march will serve as a “public witness to the fact that a problem of security does exist at Notre Dame and recognize that there have been attacks,” Keckler said.

Several speakers will be addressing security issues and safety precautions at several points during the march. The participants will walk around campus including a march down Saint Mary’s Road and a stop at the Grotto.

Organizers of the march hope that the event will encourage women to be more cautious when walking alone and suggest that students should take advantage of the University’s escort service, SafeWalk, whenever possible.

University organizations sponsoring the march include Women United for Justice and Peace, the Women’s Concerns Commission of Student Government, the Center for Social Concerns and Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination.

specific and individual rectitude. He defined specific rectitude as independent of personal dispositions and circumstance, while individual rectitude pertained to the conduct of an individual. The married state, according to McCormick, is an example of specific rectitude; the conduct of a married individual is an example of individual rectitude.

“By giving emphasis to specific rectitude, we abstract from the real. Lumping all actions together more or less obscures differences (such as that between sexual relations between engaged individuals and sexual relations between casual acquaintances),” he said.

“We tend to focus our attention on the morality of acts. But in doing this we run the risk of oversimplification. Sexuality is our capacity for relationship. One can avoid all sexual violations and still not be sexually mature.”

After pointing out the problematic nature of the terms “homosexuality” and “morality,” McCormick turned to the question of whether there is a normative position on homosexuality and what such a position would be.

“The evidence that we have is that the heterosexual is the norm. I accept that. Now what does that mean?” he said. He also pointed out that not all heterosexual marriages are happy and fulfilling, while not all homosexual relationships are unhappy and unfulfilling.

PROMOTING THEIR NEW ALBUM HOT CHOCOLATE MASSAGE
Gender images confine idea of God

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to Charles Weiber's letter entitled "Fatherly relationship with God justifies masculine references." (The Observer, Oct. 15). Masculine images of God are indeed very justified, for God surely has many qualities which we consider "masculine." However, God also possesses an abundance of qualities which we consider "feminine." Think, for instance, of Isaiah 49:15, which compares the love of God to that of a mother. "Could a mother forget her baby, or a woman be without compassion for the child within her womb? Even if these forget, I (God) will never forget you." The point of inclusive language is not that masculine images of God are wrong; instead, it attempts to make us aware that there is more to God than masculinity. "Father" is a wonderful image of God, offering the concept of God as a loving provider and protector, but God is so much more than a father to us. Likewise, "mother" works beautifully because of the tender, compassionate, nurturing love we so often connect with our mothers. So many of our fathers and mothers have given us such a beautiful taste of God's unconditional love, but neither parental image nor even the two combined can fully express the reality of God. No single image can offer our human minds a complete understanding of God.

The mistake we make when we consistently call God "He" is, on some level of our consciousness, that we limit the ways which God can manifest Godself in our lives. It would be just as wrong, just as incomplete to consistently call God "She." The images we require to express the reality of this infinite being we call God, let us call God mother, father, sister, brother, master, servant, neighbor, friend, should be any image that works. Let us speak of God as male, female, as both, or as neither. Let us refuse to confine our God according to the limitations of our own language and understanding.

Remarks embarrass church hierarchy

Dear Editor,

In reading an Oct. 16 Wall Street Journal article about the conflict between the Catholic bishops and Catholic politicians on the abortion issue, I find that the Reverend Richard McBrien, Chairman of the theology department at Notre Dame University, was as is so often the case, quite forthcoming in providing some choice quotations.

"To hell with them that's what the politicians should be saying," is among the things which McBrien is quoted as saying.

I wonder if McBrien has any appreciation of how offensive and embarrassing such comments are to a great many people, although they might be quite fashionable in certain circles. They strike me as neither thoughtful nor perceptive, and, rather than arising out of a loving concern for those members of the clergy who are in the hierarchy, they seem to spring out of a deep antago­nism. Judging solely from McBrien's quoted comments which from time to time affront me in the press, it is hard to believe that McBrien wishes the Church's hierarchy well. The impression he gives, rather, is that he takes glee in seeing it put down and barricaded.

For example, suppose that I was quoted in the Wall Street Journal as saying, "To hell with the theology department, that's what Notre Dame students should be saying." Would McBrien be inclined to think that I was a thoughtful person with the best interests of the theology department at heart, or would he think that I was a benighted bigot out to "get" someone, and quite unworthy of his attention?

Homosexuality is clearly a burning issue on college campuses today. Balancing the debates are held, "education" mandates, campus climate, and student attitudes. While these debates do not generate as much heat as homophobia, they do not mislead students. First, I would like to discuss in a rational and constructive manner the position of the student body towards homosexuals, which places it on the same level as racism and sexism. However, one form of homophobia, at least in a Christian context, is actually desirable. By Rick Acker

In my Opinion

Homosexuality is a sin. As the Bible says, "homosexuality is..." Phobia (feelings of fear and repulsion towards a thing) is not evil, like racism or sexism, but may not be wholesome either. It is, actually, a sin and is, generally understood to mean evil, intended to repel homosexuals towards homosexuals, which places it on the same level as racism and sexism. However, one form of homophobia, at least in a Christian context, is actually desirable. By Rick Acker

Hussein's atrocities easily overlooked

Dear Editor:

In Paul Peralez's Viewpoint article entitled, "U.S. policy in Middle East neglects humanity's interest" (Viewpoint, Oct. 19), the author begins his "argument" by legitimizing the three-fingered salute of the League of Arab Nations. The next logical step in Mr. Peralez's argument, although he doesn't include it, would be to ask, "Is the U.S. justified in its presence in Saudi Arabia?" Other Arab nations and the world seem to answer a resounding "yes." Judging by the level of support and condemnation of Iraqi atrocities, Saudi Arabia's advocacy of U.S. presence is not unique. Egypt, including the United States, has supported and helped in overthrowing the former regime in Sudan and in Syria, and they should react precisely the same way to Hussein's atrocities. The only difference is that Christians should "hate the sin, not the sinner," which is particularly apt in this situation.

In short, Christians should be homophobic in the same way they should phobia of any sin or sinful act. However, Christian homophobia requires love and acceptance of our homosexual brothers and sisters at the same time we reject their immorality.

Letters Column purposefully subverts SUB efforts toward better music

Dear Editor:

Unlike any group of hardworking fans, the SUB, Notre Dame's student body, has a long history of supporting campus music. The group sponsored a concert last fall at a local bar. Many SUB members who attended the concert have expressed concern about the SUB's efforts towards better music. The group has attempted to organize new events, including a live performance by a popular band. The SUB has also sought to increase student participation in music-related activities. However, the group has faced opposition from some members who believe that the SUB should focus on academic pursuits.

This opposition has led to a division within the SUB. Some members favor the group's traditional focus on academic activities, while others believe that the SUB should be more involved in music-related events. The debate has brought attention to the importance of balancing academic and extracurricular activities.

Ultimately, the SUB's efforts towards better music have faced challenges, but the group continues to strive for improvement. The SUB's commitment to promoting music at Notre Dame is evident in the group's ongoing efforts to enhance student involvement and provide opportunities for cultural expression.
The Return of the Great Pumpkin

How grand is the night when every malvolent spirit is given free reign upon unsuspecting mortals?

A top the plateau of holiday excitement, Halloween stands undaunted, shaking a bloody flat at all the leftovers from Thanksgiving and Eastern Christmas always produced a wave of Star Wars figures, but all too often December 25th resembled a sacrificial-sweet Hallmark card.

Throughout my years of childhood, all Halloween's Eve involved memories of gore-dropping terror that even Arbor Day just couldn't surpass.

Halloween had all the advantages of a major holiday, but none of the miniaturist- stuffy family dinners where aunts from Oregon and who your girlfriend was; you weren't jumbled in a suit and herded off to Mass except for the following day, but I got out of class for that. Most importantly, people gave you candy for wearing some costume.

It also arrived at a key time, repulsing the deep-blue funk of a new school year, carrying me towards the next major vacation. In addition to all this it meant something more, much more.

...vampires... would be the laughing stock of the undead community if spotted in earmuffs.

Halloween released the flood-gates of my imagination and sent every shambling horror shrinking into the night. Alive were the creations of my teachers and I the Connecticut Pancake, a lumbering 16-foot- tall flap jack which shredded halls in my face teeth, and the dreaded Hopping Noodle, a waiting street urchin with a glaring eye, which chased us on one until Th... Costume counseling: how to choose the ultimate toga.

The last time you wore a costume, it came out of a box and had "Speed Racer" emblazoned across the chest. Somehow, you could just never endure those plastic masks that make your face sweat. Even those realistic rubber "Plaques of the Ages" ones could get pretty moist.

It's not that you don't have spirit. At Halloween every year, you paint yourself up in orange and black, and wear that cute pin with the spider that crawls back up when you pull it on.

Unfortunately, you've just had to, "Color. My beautiful consultation (all you fashion slugs, and you know who you are), your girlie pin at the next table that means that), and as a Spring, orange is a big no-no.

So what do you do? Like every other Red-Blooded American College Student, you put on a toga and, between swigs of beer, refer to yourself incorrectly as a mythological god, as in, "Peasants! Bring me a muton-chop! Charybdis is weary with hunger!"

Why not try something a little more imaginative this year? Instead of going with the Greek theme, wear the same sheet and go as your favorite politician you might want to carry a stuffed camel and call it your wife. It's timely, it's making a political statement, it's you, the adding offense political issues are happening. This year's creative challenges seem to have portrayed Marie's majestic hairstyle. You might decide that the best way to do justice to those gravity-defying azure tresses is to go with cotton candy (and a lot of it). Art majors could experiment with paper mache', and the Irish Guard, of course, is set. All they have to do is decide whether to spray-paint their hats Mysterious Mulberry or Simply Sapphire.

Why not go as your favorite tailgate celebrity? I don't think Elvis will ever go out of style. Roseanne might be an option, if you like to spit. Cher could be relatively simple to impersonate, especially in her "I Could Turn Back Time" video. All you'd need would be a big wig and two black robes. Oh, and a few tattoos. (HINT: Investing in a cartoon or Bookstore's little leprechaun face tattoos will not be very efcative.)

Don't forget: here at Notre Dame, we have a gold mine of campus personalities to ridicule. Enough said.

Remember the Coneheads? Some conscientious citizens came up with the educational idea one year of dressing up as five forms of birth control. Going as a six-pack of beer or a group of cavemen would only be original, but would foster a sense of camaraderie. Years from now, when you're wearing plain pants and tailgating at the Michigan game, you can drunkenly slur, "How about the year we dressed up as a box of Oyster Wines? we nuttier! It ha ha!"

The bottom line is that Halloween can be what you make of it. One sophomore recently perfected the "Oh, me soz as not to be tormented with obscene phone calls and the censure of his roommates, confided that he had always had a fantasy to go as a giant Pez" dispenser, Bill, a Pez dispenser, Maybe a Donald Duck one with cherry candy.

Or just wear a toga.

Men's soccer loses 3 games

Fall break is supposed to be a time of relaxation and rest, but for the men's soccer team it was a time of troubles.

With four losses in three games over the break, losing 2-0 to top-ranked Evansville in an overtime loss last Friday, traveling to Miami, Fla., to play in the Southern Bell Classic. The Irish lost to North Carolina—Charlotte 3-0 and 3-2 in overtime against the Golden Panthers of Florida International University.

The Irish, now 1-3-3 on the season, weren't expecting a walk in the park when they went into Evansville. The Purple Aces were ranked second in the country at the time, and Black Beauty Field is a notoriously difficult place to play. The Irish players had only good things to say about their opponents.

"They were really, really good," said senior co-captain Paul LaVigne. "They're one of the fastest teams I've ever played against.

Although Notre Dame was outplayed in the first half, LaVigne felt that the Irish hung tough in the second half.

"They cramped it down our throats in the first half," he said, "but we may-gave with them in the second half."

The Irish hoped that the trip to the warm sun of Miami would get back on track, but, as has happened all season, the Irish got short-changed when it came to the luck department.

The 4ers of UNC-Charlotte could manage only five shots on goal, but three of them went for scores. LaVigne summed the game up briefly.

"We got some unlucky breaks, he said.

The Irish didn't let their last two failures affect them going into the game against Florida International, as they came out and fought tena-

"The thing that we have developed is a winning attitude. We refuse to lose right now and that may be more important than everything else we've done because it will carry over -- a winning attitude gets passed on. I think that that will have a big impact on the future of the program." The records broken by the 1990 squad read like a coach's wish list. Most Wins in a Season (16), Best Winning Percentage (.885), Most Goals Scored (66), Least Goals Allowed (18), Most Assists (40), Most Points (172), Most Shots (372), and Fewest Games Held Scoreless (two). Where individual records are concerned, marks were set for Most Shutouts in a Season (11; Michelle Lodyga), Most Goals (15; Alison Lester), Most Assists (9; Marianne Giolitto tied record), Most Points in a Season (35; Alison Lester), Most Game-Winning Goals (6; Susie Zilvitis), and Most Shots in a Game (10; Denise Chabot). So why, if Notre Dame is such a great team, aren't they recruiting themselves for post-season competition? Good question, but rest assured, the Irish have suffered no gross injustice. In Division I, the number of teams who participate in the championship tournament is proportional to the number of teams who participate in the sport. Hence, twelve teams are picked for post-season play. Even though the Irish went 16-3-1, their three losses came against Duke, UNC-Greensboro and Creighton -- recognized powerhouses. Had Notre Dame pulled out wins over these teams, you can bet that they would be suitling up for a tournament game.

After watching the women's soccer team mature and improve over the course of the season -- especially after learning of their dismantling of nationally ranked Xavier -- I cannot help but think that the Irish would have fared better against Duke and Greensboro had they played them at the end of the season.

Of course, it could be argued that the Irish might not be playing so well now if they had not been spanked earlier. In any case, I'm not going too far out on a limb by saying that Notre Dame would give Duke and Greensboro a tighter game right now.

"The weekend at Duke made us realize that we still had a lot to learn," said freshman Mary Kate Kelly, whose sentiments seem to speak for the entire team. "Duke was good, though, because if we had gone on playing relatively weak teams, we probably wouldn't have improved as much as we have.

"After the weekend in North Carolina, I was upset that we had lost," said Petrucelli. The kids thought that I was crazy. I said that we had a chance to beat lots of great teams and make the playoffs. But at the end, we all think that we had a great season. It's funny what you can accomplish when you really believe in yourself - these kids really believe that they can play now.

When asked about the future of the growing Irish program, meanwhile, Kelly was optimistic.

I know that we'll probably get more and more competitive as time goes on with our new coach," said Kelly. "Coach is going to recruit hard and bring in lots of players. I had a great experience this year, and I hope and plan to be around for the next four years." Her coach shares her optimism.

"We have to do a couple of things to take the next step," said Petrucelli. What is the next step, I wondered.

"Our goal is to win the national championship," stated Petrucelli, his eyes and expressions conveying that, without a doubt, he is a man with a mission. "I don't really feel that we are one, three or five years away. I feel like we are four or five players away. It could be a year or four before we win it. I don't see it as a matter of time, but as a matter of players. Potentially, we have the players that we need right here and they just have to get better. I have to get better and the kids have to get better. We need to be better at every position.

"We are actively pursuing the top players in the country. I don't know if any Notre Dame team will ever win as many games as this, but we are trying to upgrade our talent. Also, we play Wisconsin, Duke, Xavier, Dayton and William & Mary next year. We are trying to get away from the club teams - I think we have proved that it is not worth it for us to play club.

"If the Irish will face their next championship on November 9-12 when they travel to Madison, Wisconsin to participate in the Rolex National Indoor Qualifier. The Rolex Tournament will involve all the teams in the region, and the top doubles team, along with the singles champion and runner-up, qualify for the National Indoor Tournament. Notre Dame had no qualifiers last year, but Louderback hopes for a different outcome this year.

For the third consecutive year, the Notre Dame women's tennis team swept all singles and doubles titles to capture the Midwest Regional Conference crown at Notre Dame last weekend. The Irish easily beat second place Marquette by a wide 7-2 margin.

Notre Dame junior Tracy Barton defeated Marquette's Kim Limpert 6-1, 6-1, for the top flight singles title. Other Irish winners in the singles competition were freshman Christa Faustmann, who captured the crown at second seed, freshman Terri Vitale (third flight), freshman Lisa Tholen (fourth flight), sophomore Melissa Harris (fifth flight), and senior Kim Paolilla (sixth flight). Barton followed up her singles victory by teaming up with Faustmann to capture the doubles crown. Vitale and Tholen took the number-two doubles title, and Katie Clark and Kristy Duran combined to win the third flight.

Irish Head Coach Jay Louderback said his team performed admirably despite harsh weather conditions.

"All the singles matches were outdoors," said Louderback. "Saturday it was really windy and Sunday it got pretty cold, but our girls went out and didn't let it affect them. Everybody did really well.

Male swimmers beat WOU

By BECKY WOOD
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's swim team returned from a successful road trip to Canada last weekend, recording their first dual meet season win against Western Ontario, 58-37. Notre Dame has defeated their friendly opponents in all but one of their 30 meetings. The tradition swimmers' associate with the annual meeting is inherent in the ceremonial exchange of gifts among the team captains and the singing of both the American and Canadian National Anthems before the start of each event.

Although the Irish dominated the waves, winning eight of nine individual events, the meet required more than the Irish men just showing up on the pool deck in their suits. "Canadian men have always done an excellent job of racing the 'opponent,"' said Coach Welsh. "Swim meets often choose between racing the 'clock' and racing the 'man' (person in the next lane). It is very good preparation for us to race with a team that races the 'man.'"

The Western men won the opening relay, putting the Irish seven points behind. After Notre Dame won the next three events, they took the lead and didn't look back. Welsh felt the men and did "an especially strong job of controlling the middle portion of the meet." The transition points came in the middle of the meets in the 200 fly, 100 free, 200 back and 400 free. The Irish men increased their lead from eight points after the 200 fly to a 21 points three events later in the 400 free.

"It is important in dual meets to grab the opportunity to win the meet when it comes," said Coach Welsh.

Senior co-captain Brian Rini won both the 400 free and the 200 free by coming from behind in the second half of both races. Rini broke the Western pool record in the 200 free with a time of 1:45.82. "Brian's races are an excellent example of 'racing the man' and also of our level of conditioning," said Welsh. Coach Welsh felt both the training work and practice time spent on starts, turns, and stroke mechanics showed very well in the team's performance.

Welsh emphasized the importance of team spirit among the team. Spirit, unity, enthusiasm, and commitment to doing a good job are all a part of the game. "Both teams led in spirit by example and leadership of the senior class," he said. "Team spirit continues to be a trademark of our Notre Dame Swimming Teams. We are proud of that."

Freshmen David Nathe won both sprint freestyle events; 50 free and 100 free. Senior co-captains Pat Godfrey and Jim Byrne took firsts in the 800 free and 200 back respectively. Junior Joe Renz won the 200 fly and junior Roger Rand placed first in the 200 breast. Welsh is riding on the excitement of the Western victory as he prepares the men's team for the 26th Annual Notre Dame Relay Meet on Friday and the MCC Dual Meet Saturday. The MCC Dual Meet on Saturday will feature the MCC conference teams in a meet format which will allow Notre Dame to swim every event that will be in their conference championships in February. The day will also score dual meets between all conference teams, so that nearly 60 dual meet scores will be recorded on Saturday.

The meet this weekend will give us a chance for everyone to do a lot of swimming, and for us to examine both our own strength and team depth in detail," said Welsh.

Women's swim team winners

By BECKY WOOD
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame's women's swim team recorded its first win of the season in a cross the border dual meet this past weekend. The Irish handily defeated the Western Ontario Stangs in London, Ontario, winning six of nine individual events.

Coach Tim Welsh was pleased with his swimmers' performance.

"It was a very good win for us," said Welsh. "The Canadian women have always been very competitive with us, they won two of the last three meets.

"When they won the first relay in a time two seconds faster than they had swum last year in February, we knew they were prepared for the meet. On the next event, however, (600 Freestyle), Katie Pamentos, and Karen Keeley finished first and second to tie the meet. We were in charge of the meet from that point on.

In addition to winning six events, four combined first and second places helped lead the Irish to a 54-37 win. The combined places also proved the increase in team depth since last year when the Irish only beat the Stangs by six points. Coach Welsh attributed the teams' impressive performance to the strength of overall conditioning and to practice time spent working on starts, turns, and stroke mechanics.

"Our hard training work showed, and showed up very well. This is a good sign for upcoming meets," said Welsh. "The team's spirit, unity, enthusiasm, and commitment to doing a good job," said Coach Welsh, was an important key to the Irish win. "It is especially exciting to see the team so spirited this early in the season." Welsh was happy to see the continuation of Notre Dame Swimming Teams' "trademark" team spirit.

"Both the men and women teams led in spirit by example and leadership of the senior class. This will help in our preparations for the meets leading up to the National Catholic meet right after Thanksgiving," he said.

Sophomore standout Tanya Williams continued her winning ways by setting a Western Ontario pool record in the 200 fly, 2:05.61, and winning the 200 freestyle. Freshmen Kristin Heath, Shannon Mather and Colette LaForce all had excellent meets for their first Irish road trip. Heath recorded wins in the 200 Individual Medley and the 400 freestyle. Junior Shauna Stephens and sophomore Kay Broderick took first and second places in the 200 back, while Susan Bohdan and Jean Kelly sealed two events by taking second places in the 200 free and 200 fly.

This week the women prepare for the seventh annual Notre Dame Relays on Friday afternoon and the MCC Dual Meet on Saturday.

"Both meets will give everybody the chance to do a lot of swimming, and for us to examine both our team strength and team depth in detail," said Welsh.

Notre Dame won both relay meets last year, and Welsh is preparing his team towards winning the relay meets again this year.

Although Irish quarterback Rick Mirer had his worst outing of the year against Pittsburgh (five for 16 passing, 85 yards, one interception), he erased any doubts Holz migh have had about his determination on the field.

"On offense the thing that surprised me the most was Rick Mirer," Holtz said. "That was probably Rick Mirer's worst performance as far as technique is concerned, and productivity. But sometimes a pitcher learns to win when he doesn't have a fastball.

"That's the thing about Rick Mirer. Number one, on the pass that was intercepted, Rick Mirer was the guy that made the tackle on it. When it was first-and-15, we ran one of the few options we ran and he picked up 14 yards. He ran physically, he competed well, never got downhearted, never got discouraged, never worried about anything except winning and remained positive through the entire course of the football game. That's the first time I've seen him when he had a reason to be down, and he remained positive."

Chris Zorich out indefinitely with sore knee

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame nose guard Chris Zorich's knee injury will keep him out of the lineup indefinitely, according to Irish Head Coach Lou Holtz.

Zorich hurt his knee on the astroturf at Pittsburgh Stadium midweek through the third quarter in Notre Dame's 31-22 victory. Although there was no serious damage, the knee is very swollen and Zorich is experiencing some pain. He will definitely miss Saturday's game against Navy in Giant Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

"My understanding is that is when the swelling goes down and the pain subsides, there isn't any other damage that he can do to it," Holtz said.

Holtz added that Zorich's injury is identical to one he suffered in the spring of his freshman year. Zorich missed all five weeks of spring practice that year because the swelling did not go down and the pain did not subside.

"I know this. I know he wants to play. I know he would do anything to come back to play, but we aren't going to let him come back and play until he is perfectly healthy," Holtz said.

Leading the injury to Zorich, one of the top defensive linemen in the country, obviously concerns Holtz. The Irish coach is also worried about the condition of several players. Outside linebackers Andre Jones (thigh bruise) and Erik Simion (injured knee) will miss Saturday's game, as will split end Will Pollard, who hurt his shoulder in practice Monday. Tight guard Mirko Jurkovic (knee) is listed as doubtful for Navy, and Holtz said tailback Tony Brooks (sore rib) is considered "possible."

"Injury-wise, every time we go on astroturf we have a problem with this," Holtz said. "Our football team has been in six very, very, very, physical football games out of the seven, and I think it's showing up now on the injury list."

Two Irish freshmen figure to carry an increased load in the upcoming weeks. Holtz said he has been particularly impressed with the recent play of fullback Jerome Bettis and defensive tackle Bryant Young lately. Bettis and Young should both see more playing time as the season progresses.

"It has been difficult to justify playing Bettis this season because junior fullback Rodney Culver has been outstanding thus far. Culver is Notre Dame's leading rusher with 624 yards in 108 attempts. He also has caught 10 passes for 59 yards. He has finished every game he has progressed so much that it will be impossible to keep him out of the lineup much longer," Holtz said.

"I think Jerome Bettis is really coming along as a freshman and he will definitely play much, much more," Holtz said. "He is starting to compete for a starting position at the fullback position. Culver is playing well, but Jerome Bettis is such an excellent blocker that it has been hard to keep him on the bench."

Gorski said, "We ran together and actually had a lot of fun." Connolly, who received MCC Coach of the Year honors for his efforts, echoed Gorski's sentiments.

"It was an outstanding group performance," he said. However, the Irish coach did have special praise for the individual performance of junior Diana Bradley, who was the sixth Irish runner to cross the finish line.

"Diana went out and made the race," Connolly said. "Even though she did not finish strongly, her leadership really helped the team." Connolly hopes the momentum the Irish will carry through the District IV meet at Purdue on November 10.

"We've got to beat teams like Purdue, Illinois, and some Mid-American Conference squads," said Connolly. "But I hope that, we'll crack the top ten."

Regardless of the district outcome, Connolly views the MCC victory as the pinnacle of a remarkable season.

The Courier-News/Macdonald

Given the fact that I am a sports writer covering the Notre Dame women's soccer team, it is somewhat of a surprise that the obnoxious question "That must be pretty boring - why don't you cover a real sport?" with its related questions is not always worded politely does it any more.

Anyone who can walk to the home games at Alumni Field or read the game stories should be very much aware of the fact that women's soccer is a "real" sport, and Notre Dame has a very competitive team. Keep in mind that 1990 was only the third season of varsity play for the Irish. Despite having such a youthful program, the Notre Dame women's soccer team is well on its way to establishing itself as one of the premier programs in the nation. Those who denigrate women's soccer should also be reminded of the fact that in the first season under new head coach Chris Petrucelli, the Irish set a whopping 20 team and individual records in addition to winning the MCC Tournament in convincing fashion. Petrucelli, who makes covering his team not only professional but enjoyable, was visibly pleased with his team's accomplishment. He did, however, appear to be shocked or surprised.

Before the season started, we set a few goals for ourselves," said Petrucelli. "We wanted to gain regional recognition. We did. We wanted to reduce our number of goals allowed. We did. We wanted to rewrite the record book. We did. We also wanted to win the MCC Tournament. We did. Obviously, we accomplished what we set out to do."

Irish goalkeeper Michelle Lodyga, making a save against St. Joseph's College, set the ND record for shutouts in a season this year.
