Bishops say No to funerals run by laity

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops on Tuesday showed their wariness about letting lay people preside over funerals.

The bishops' anxieties came out as they voted down a move to allow trained lay members to conduct funerals.

In a balloted vote, the measure lost by 136 to 112, with a two-thirds majority required for passage.

Heavy floor opposition had proscribed defeat of the plan.

Among those who voted to defeat the measure was Bishop Donald Wuerl of Pittsburgh.

"Such a sweeping move has a lot of ramifications and implications," he said, likely to make substitution of laity for priests "a common practice."

The measure, spurred by sharpening priest shortage, was proposed by a liturgy committee formed by Bishop Joseph Delaney of Fort Worth, Texas.

It would have authorized local bishops to permit lay persons to preside when no ordained deacon or priest was available.

Bishop Eiden Curtis of Helena, Mont., said the step would indicate "acceptance of priestless parishes and laity ordination of the non¬ sainted."

He said that signal would be that we are moving from an ordained to a non¬ordained ministry.... The time people must want a priest is when dying, at death and afterward."

A succession of bishops took the floor to assail the plan at a one-day fall meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

But a few bishops defended it with fervor.

Archbishop Francis Hurley of Anchorage, Alaska, said the measure was "extreme warfare" there make such lay-led services vital, and that the Bishop Robert Sanchez of Santa Fe, New Mex., said the measure would help to "reach out to the grieving and suffering with support" when no clergy was available.

The vote was 136 to 112 against authorizing laity to officiate at funerals, with 17 votes cast as "none."
INSIDE COLUMN

An insider's guide to driving a bus

I was innocently walking through the local supermarket on an August afternoon. Suddenly out of nowhere a tiny, youthful voice screamed "Hi bus-driver!" My eyes opened wide in horror; I weakly crouched out myhello's and smacked safely away. A fluke you ask? Perhaps a misidentification? I'm afraid not. I spent the summer months as a part-time bus-driver. Only recently have I been able to discuss my summer job. I was severely scarred by ill-intentioned friends introducing me as "Christine-she-drives-a-bus."

New acquaintances looked upon me as a victim of both society and school-children everywhere. Others tilted their heads, remembering me of behind the wheel of a Greyhound in faithful service to the CTA, and my parents begged the University for a refund. My 21st birthday left me bearing the rite of becoming a member of the Associated Press.

STEP 1: Three written examinations on commercial driver's license.STEP 2: Pre-trip inspection test including a lengthy discussion of such wonders as the hydraulic braking system and tread depth in tires.STEP 3: Skills test, laden with orange cones and careful maneuvering. STEP 4: (optional) Re-take of the 'backing-up' part of the test. STEP 5: Road test, measuring my knowledge of speed laws and proper procedures for railroad crossings. STEP 6: Drug test—no preparation necessary.

And thus, I was presented with a new commercial driver's license.

I feel I have traveled my way through narrow streets lined with UPS trucks and family wagons. It was during these times that I learned trees were not quite as stationary as they're rumored to be. I had but one life left in the last row of testing, as I recall the "backing-up" section of the tests reversing into a trailer-hitch and parking a $1,000 hole in the back. Sleepy, no injuries.

You've probably never thought about controlling 22 demonic children, especially while operating heavy machinery. And here, I would like to thank my loyal sister Cathy (a freshman here) for accompanying me on that prestigious and for taking care of the seat-keeping, the brave removal of bees and cicadas and the ever-patient ear for the "you know what-ers." My experience has granted me a new respect for the wits of school-bus drivers and my parents are ecstatic that I have promised to finish my fourth year. But there is one thing I cannot shake. I still fear the cold, impersonal, grocery-store greeting for the "you know what-ers.""It's for a strong union and union treaty," the independent Interfax News Agency quoted him as saying.

McCarthy says ROTC should be discontinued

By SARAH VOGT
News Writer

The sole goal of the ROTC program is to train people to slaughter others or to threaten to slaughter, said Coleman McCarthy, a liberal syndicated columnist for the Washington Post in a lecture Tuesday.

Yet McCarthy, a self-proclaimed pacifist who also founded and directs the Center for Teaching Peace located in Washington D.C., defines himself in relation to force.

"Ideas are a force. I am a pacifist so I love the use of force. I'm in the trenches every day teaching nonviolence."

Over the past eight years McCarthy has taught over 2,500 students about the theory and history of nonviolence.

McCarthy has also attempted to organize peace studies programs at colleges and universities across the country.

According to McCarthy, peace studies programs should replace ROTC programs on college campuses. "ROTC has no place on a campus, a place where we study ideas. We must push for students to graduate from college armed with ideas, armed with truth, armed with justice, not armed with guns," McCarthy said.

"Because guns and bombs are not working," McCarthy continued, "the U.S. spends $800 million a day on war. That's $13,000 a second that the Pentagon is wasting on war."

According to McCarthy, the United States is the only nation in what he calls the "violent ethic" that pervades many aspects of American society today. "ROTC is not the problem. It's just the symptom of the problem," he said.

McCarthy cited the recent increase in numbers of battered women, teenage suicides and campus rapes as tragic symptoms of the increased levels of violence in American society today.

McCarthy does not blame ROTC or even the American government for what he considers to be their participation in the "violent ethic." "I'm to blame. You are to blame."

Yet McCarthy does blame the ROTC program for class discrimination. "We need to find children of wealthy families in that program. It's mostly lower class, minorities, and it's the only way they can get money," he said.

In order to eliminate the need for a ROTC program McCarthy said, "We must organize our hearts, souls, schools and government to offer a counter-force," said McCarthy.

For McCarthy, nonviolence represents this counterforce. "Either you believe in that ethic of violent force, or you believe in nonviolent force. College is the perfect place to devote yourself to nonviolence," he claimed.

Ironically, McCarthy urged students to leave campuses and go among the victims of violence in order to better understand the schools they leave behind. "Learn the joy of service to others. That's where you'll find your joy, where you'll find your meaning. Teach someone how to read if you have time," he suggested.

"Most students that graduate from college are idea rich and experience poor. That's why students have to get off campus and find someone, who's hurting," he said.

McCarthy related how he hated when his friends would ask one of his children what they wanted to be when they grew up. He said that a more relevant question would be, "How do you want to serve society when you're ready?"

"Those committed in peace and justice also know that the world will not be changed through the use of armies, guns and nukes," said McCarthy.

Duggan leaves job with homeless

Special to The Observer

Dennis Duggan, executive director of the Center for the Homeless in South Bend, has resigned his position effective February 15, according to Father Richard Warner, chairman of the Center's executive committee.

Citing family reasons for his decision, Duggan informed the committee of his resignation at its Nov. 7 meeting. His wife is pursuing a doctorate in oncological nursing at the University of Texas-San Antonio and has continued to live in that city with five of the couple's six children during her husband's nine-month tenure at the Center. The Duggans' oldest child is a freshman at the University of Notre Dame.

Duggan told the board he felt he had accomplished the immediate tasks for which he was brought to the Center and that this was an appropriate time for a change in leadership.

Duggan cited the establishment of operating policies and procedures for the Center, the establishing of contacts with supporting organizations in the local community, the training of volunteers and the opening of new facilities on the Center's previously unused second floor as the major accomplishments of his tenure. The new second-floor facilities will be dedicated on November 17.

Warner expressed the executive committee's regret at Duggan's departure and its appreciation of his work as director, particularly his efforts in laying a solid operating framework for the facility. Warner said the executive committee would meet again Nov. 20 to begin planning a local and national search for Duggan's successor.

Duggan will return to San Antonio to the 250-bed homeless facility he directed before assuming his position with the South Bend Center.

Essentially, the issues that were raised by the Bill were its true success, according to Jochman.

"The work put into it showed up in the choosing of which rights to include," he said, "This is what we've taken from it."

The formation of a task force can also be viewed as a success. "Maybe it was a good way to start this thing," Singh said.

Moscow hopes for best with perestroika, historian says

By FRANK RIVERA
News Writer

Ordinary Moscovites hope for the best to come from the Soviet government's implementation of perestroika and the changes occurring in Moscow and Soviet Russia, according to Russian historian Sergei Romaniuk.

In his lecture, "Perestroika from the Perspective of an Ordinary Moscowite," Romaniuk, a historian at the Pushkin Museum and the Museum for the History and Reconstruction of Moscow, said he wanted to speak from the point of view of a citizen of Moscow and not as a political official.

"I spoke as an historian of Moscow who has the possibility to observe Moscow life," said Romaniuk, "and not a party official...but simply as an inhabitant of Moscow."

Many buildings and monuments were destroyed and replaced by the Soviet government after the Bolshevik revolution in 1917, according to Romaniuk, who is writing his third book, "Moscow Vanished," about the mutilation and vandalism by the government.

Romaniuk said he would be against the demolition of Soviet monuments to an extent. However, he said there were too many Soviet monuments than are needed and call for replacement or demolition.

Despite the widespread implementation of perestroika, there are still difficulties, most of which come as a result of the conservatives in the government, according to Romaniuk.

"The most difficulties come from our rulers who are unwilling to plunge in," said Romaniuk. "Many of them are right-wingers and not democrats, or liberals, and they still don't want it to be a complete rebuilding of our society.

Romaniuk acknowledged the possibility of totalitarianism re-establishing itself in the Soviet Union but expressed optimism in the progress of perestroika.

"I don't even know what the Soviet Union will be like tomorrow, but I would like to see it free and open like any democratic state in the world," said Romaniuk. "But, I would also like to be free from many of the evils of the capitalist society if it is possible for a democratic society to do so."

Romaniuk is a member of the Moscow City Council of the All Russian Society for Protection of Architectural and Historical Monuments and a member of the editorial board of the magazine "Staraia Moskva" ("Old Moscow").

The lecture was sponsored by the Institute for International Studies and the Department of History.

While few people at Notre Dame may attach any significance to the term, "the Night of the Broken Clubs," to a Palestinians, the phrase evokes disgust and fear.

"Yesterday in the Law School, Clare Brandabur, Fulbright Fellow and former professor at the now-defunct Bir Zeit University in the West Bank, gave an account of what happened one night in the West Bank as an dehumanization of about twenty listener in shock.

"In January of 1988, two months after the beginning of the Intifada, orders were issued that a group of soldiers go to a village...to round up twelve persons who were 'wanted.' The twelve were...brought together-without resistance—and handcuffed and shackled. The le-cal—they're called 'locals', not Palestinians—were 'wired up'...to a bus," said Brandabur.

"As they drove away, the bus driver revved the engine to drown out their cries. They were led to a nearby orchard, and in groups of two or threes they were laid into the orchard, laid down, gagged with flannel,
and then systematically clubbed so severely that the clubs broke.

According to Brandabur, the soldiers had orders to beat them until their arms and legs were broken. "The soldiers then took off the Palestinians' bonds and gags, and left them lying helpless in the orchard."

"What this shows...is that there is a kind of schizopharenia there in (Israel), and I would say that the real...underlying the 'mask of democracy' is not really democratic at all," Brandabur said.

Brandabur also pointed out that this is not to say that there isn't a very strong peace movement in Israel. There is a peace movement, and it is fighting for "legal trials for the people who beat the Palestinians to death."

The audience was read a New York Times headline saying that three Israeli soldiers accused of beating Palestinians were brought to trial. Two were acquitted and one was sentenced to a three-month sentence, "that will probably be suspended," said Brandabur. The three were also given a demotion.

"They can get billions of dollars from the American government, or all of this can be cut, they'll do just about anything. If the U.S. would cut aid by 50 percent...there would be peace in two weeks."

In respect to the current situation in the Persian Gulf, she stated that "there is great hope, hopeful in this...cruise in the Gulf, because it is not true that Israel is our best ally. They're an embarrassment to our entire foreign policy.

"Perhaps this will take some emphasis away from the concept that we have to place Israel because Israel is a bulwark of democracy. Israel is not a bulwark of democracy. Israel is a colonialist, fascist, racist, genocidal state which we are paying for, and we have part of the responsibility," Brandabur said.

"If we would listen to the peace movement in Israel...maybe we can bring about some change. That's what human and just on both sides." Brandabur then quoted a writer as saying, "what shall we, as Americans, say when the trials come...if they beat the Palestinian prisoners until their bones are broken, we handed them the clubs. We are just as much to blame as they are."
Rights
to Sister Mary Louise Gode, rector of Farley Hall. While a judicial board in a women's dorm might be used strictly in ball elections, a men's board may be directly involved in disciplinary action.

"The Bill of Rights, as it ap­plied to dorms, couldn't have been applied, because some dorms didn't have them [judicial boards], or had them only for election purposes," Kirk said.

He added, "Students aren't here to pass judgments on other students."

Further concerns were raised about factors other than content.

Pasin called the Bill "an awkward mix of philosophy and procedure... Empty rhetoric," Singh said it "spoke of fostering joint relations between stu­dents and the administration, but was itself totally student-sided."

Kirk, a rector and a law stu­dent sitting on the task force, said, "a lot of the rights men­tioned in the draft exist."

In their haste to finish the Bill and see it ratified, it was agreed by the CLC that the Legal Department's final docu­ment was not feasible. Some contributing factors were:

- Lack of administrative input
- Neither the administration nor faculty members were con­sulted in the process of develop­ment of the Bill of Rights,
- Since the Bill specifically dealt with situations in which the Administration's role in student affairs would be changed, a concern about the practicality of implementing the rights was prevalent, according to Singh.

"In this sense, the Adminis­tration needed to be involved," he said.

The Bill needed more critical research about the implications of the changes it proposed, ac­cording to Sister Jeannine Jochman, rector of Lyons Hall.

"While it was done by the stu­dents, it affected the lives of many other people—like rec­tors, security guards, and the entire community," she said.

Kirk said he could have added legal and administrative insight for the document, from the standpoint of a law student and rector. He offered his advice to the Legal Department, but was never taken up on the offer, he said.

"It was not done behind the backs of the Administration... but they might have discussed it [first] with the Administration," he noted.

"I know the administration on the CLC agreed that the Bill of Rights seemed real adversarial... seemed to take a little defensive stance," he said.

Judicial Board Coordinator Vinny Sanchez said this adver­sarial tone "taken by the people who wrote it" is what hurt the Bill from the start. "People had it out that the administration wouldn't comply with us, like it was an 'us versus them' thing, rather than wanting to cooper­ate and talk with them."

"From the beginning, I never thought it was going to work because of that [tone]."

"Conflicts with du Lac." The Bill would have been diff­icult to coexist with du Lac, according to Singh. Since Arti­cle II of the Bill specified that students would have to com­prise at least one-half of the disciplinary bearings, and du Lac specifies that two or three administrators are to be pre­sent at these hearings, du Lac would have had to be changed.

"One would have to have been made superior, one would have had to take precedence," Singh said.

"Timing"

"The timing was as bad as it could have been," Pasin said.

The document was presented in late Spring, and the authors and Legal Department were ea­ger to see it implemented be­fore the close of the school year. "It should have never gone to the CLC when it did," Singh said, expressing his reservation about whether the document was "rushed" through procedures without being thoroughly scrutinized.

Furthermore, that simple grammatical errors were pre­sent in the final product told Kirk that "not enough thought was put into the original docu­ment."

ND speech team falters at Bradley, flies at Ball State

By KEVIN GRUBEN
News Writer

Last weekend, the Notre Dame speech team competed with over 55 other schools in their biggest meet of the year at Bradley University.

The meet consisted of students competing in various categories including dramatic interpretation, prose speaking or narration, poetry interpretation and extemporaneous and impromptu speaking. Notre Dame only had one student place in the top five percent of his division. Sophomore Joe Wilson placed among the top finishers in the dramatic interpretation division, which has a student act out a segment from a well-known theatrical work.

Having only one student place near the top of the Bradley tournament is not, however, indicative of how the team has been doing over the year as a whole. Early in the year, they competed in two tournaments in Washington, D.C., at George Mason and Howard Universities.

At George Mason, Wilson took second place in the solo dramatic interpretation category, and first in the duo category with senior Amy Wandzola. Other top finishers in the tournaments included junior Mike Sayer, who placed near the top in the poetry interpretation division, junior John Mckeever, and Anne Marie Crane.

Two weeks ago, at a meet at Ball State University, sophomore Rob Hennings placed second in extemporaneous speaking and first in impromptu speaking. In both categories, the speaker is given a current affairs issue and asked to prepare and subsequently deliver a speech within a limited timeframe.

"Our performance this year has greatly improved over last year. Last year we had two returning members from the previous year, whereas this year we have fourteen," said Sayer when asked about the success of this year's team.

The team's next meet is December 1 at Ohio State University.

HPC passes Senate’s business bill

By DAVID KINNEY
News Writer

An amendment to the Official Constitution passed by the Student Senate last night regarding the regulation of student businesses was passed unanimously by the Hall Presidents’ Council (HPC) Tuesday night.

Senator Lisa Bostwick presented the proposal, which entails placing student businesses which lose $2,000 in one fiscal year or conduct business unethically on probation. If the Student Senate votes to put the business on probation, the business manager must report to the Senate and follow other regulations as specified by the Senate or the Student Business Control Committee, according to Bostwick.

In other business:
• Kathryn Pirrotta and Kristin Hayesallen announced the 1991 Student Senate last night representing the proposal, which entailed placing student businesses which lose $2,000 in one fiscal year or conduct business unethically on probation. Exhibit of African art to open at Snite Museum

By PATRICK HEALY
News Writer

Notre Dame’s Snite Museum will host a private art exhibition of African sculptures from Nov. 18 to Dec. 30, showcasing “objects of great quality,” according to Douglas Bradley, Curator of the Arts of the Americas, Africa, and Oceania at the Snite.

The exhibition, “African Art from the Rita and John Grunwald Collection,” contains pieces from the western and Atlantic coastal regions of Africa dating back to the 17th century.

Bradley said that the pieces of the Grunwalds have collected were “chosen very well” and are “wonderful objects,” containing some objects not found in museums.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key senators in both parties asked President Bush on Tuesday to convene an emergency session of Congress for what Republican leader Bob Dole called a "put-up-or-shut-up" vote on administration policies in the Persian Gulf.

The White House quickly opposed the idea as unnecessary, and Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell, too, showed little enthusiasm. But Mitchell said Senate hearings would be scheduled on the gulf crisis, probably in the next several weeks, because "the American people deserve a full national debate."

Personal attacks undermine truth

By Father Stephen Newton

Recent national political campaigns and local letters to editors highlight a problematic trend that seems to have permeated the core of our intellectual character. In logic, this method of argumentation is called "ad hominem" or "to the person" argumentation. It is the "last resort of the scoundrel," what one resorts to when all else has failed—when one has run out of arguments that convince or advance one's case in and of themselves. Whatever it's called, it's the antithesis of truth and undermines the concept of truth as a fluid process.

It's represented in campaign ads when a person running for some particular office says little or nothing about what he or she believes, represents or stands for, but has plenty to say about the character and background of his/her opponent. "His family owned a saw mill and a loom; she used to drink; that one wears a bow tie; the other was born with a silver foot in her mouth."

It's represented in letters to the editor when people attack an individual or a group in ways that appear more clever than substantive.

This trend seems to be based upon a belief that truth is static, existing independently and in isolation, surrounded by millions and millions of lies. The one truth needs no amplification, the trend would contend. Truth stands on its own and is neither to be disclosed nor examined. Its sole purpose is to stand immovable and is neither to be disclosed nor examined. Whatever it's called, this is truth.

I propose for consideration the idea that students at Notre Dame would like to address the policy of the Catholic Church in the United States has faced accusations of racism, which are not entirely unfounded. The unfortunate effect of the wording of this caption is to give the impression that the Church was throughout most of its nearly 2000-year history has refused to accept blacks as saints. This is patently not the case, as I have mentioned above.

This letter is by no means intended to demean the achievements of Pierre Toussaint, but is rather intended to express the hope, given the painful and vital issues involved, that in the future The Observer will take greater care with its facts.

Every fool in error can find a passage of Scripture to back him up.

QUOTE OF THE DAY
Women & football: Do they mix?

Amidst all of the excitement caused by the football team last Saturday, (Orange Bowl here we come), I noticed a subtle yet disturbing trend. As I watched the game at our indoor section tailgater (yet more proof that Morrissey is the best dorm on campus), there was a good deal of tension between the men and women during the game.

Actually, I perceived the problem being more one sided. It appeared that while the girls seemed to be enjoying being in a room filled with guys, the men did not want any women to be in the same room with them during the game. I passed. Surely that couldn't possibly be the case at this school where "men and women get along so well." I wandered from room to room and made a quick survey.

Sure enough, the men were at a few of the rooms with the women. How could this be? Just before game time, the two groups appeared to be getting along just fine. Yet now, during the game, these polite men had turned into heathen animals. What was it about football and women that turns grown, civilized men into pigs?

1. being the journalist that I am, decided to pursue this further. I went around the dorm asking these same women what the problem was. One junior told me withholding for obvious reasons) said "I had to leave the room because there were too many girls around and all they did was yap." Others said, "They have to keep their traps shut during the game." And "I don't think as long as they know something about the game, but not if all they're doing is looking at the players' butts." I assume this meant that they couldn't concentrate on the game. And yet, there were plenty of guys talking during the game. Surely they couldn't think women are the only people who talk during the game. I asked if their annoyance was caused by a lack of knowledge about the game. "There are a few girls who know the game, so they're not that bad, but there aren't many girls like that." Another gripe was that girls "jump up every ten seconds to get a drink, to gossip, or to "freshen up" in the powder room." One guy went so far to suggest that a special room with "The Little Mermaid" playing should be used to accommodate the girls during the game. This particular fellow-declined by the talking. The most common responses to the guy's statements were "Rude!" and "Absurd!"

How do you solve this problem? To not invite members of the opposite sex would be one solution. This idea was outvoted in about half a second however. The only other solution I thought of was to have a "Football Knowledge Quiz" which must be taken before anyone (male or female) would be allowed to watch the game. This quiz would weed out those that need "to get on the clue bus" about football. As far as the talkers, I figure anyone with enough football knowledge to pass the quiz would have seen enough football to know proper T.V. etiquette. So get out those pencils, here comes the quiz.

1. Who is O.J. Simpson?
   a. the president of Herz rental car service
   b. a famous tallback for the Buffalo Bills
   c. a rapper from South Bend
   d. Bart's father

2. What is the Heisman?
   a. an award for the football player of the year
   b. an award for the best football player in college football
   c. the act of a girl shooting down a hopeful guy (very frequent at ND)
   d. a Jamaican greeting

3. Who is the best announcer for a football game?
   a. Tom Cruise
   b. the President of the United States
   c. Mel Gibson
   d. Richard Gere

4. Where is pass interference?
   a. driving 50 mph in the left lane
   b. making contact with the receiver before the ball has arrived
   c. an attempt to stop the further movement of the dessert tray at dinner
   d. walking in on a scammers' con

5. What is a "Hail Mary"?
   a. the lady on top of the dome
   b. a last second desperation throw
   c. Nazi salute to Hitler's call
   d. a scream to save your female friend outside in the freezing rain

Well, there it is. Feel free to cut this quiz out to post on your door for the USC game. One last thing, you can't talk about tailgaters without mentioning their buns...a topic for another story altogether. (No, not really. I'm just kidding. Don't call me to complain.)

Go ape at the Beaux Ball

BY JIM BONSALSKY

Imagine if you will, the opportunity to travel to an exotic, primitive jungle where you will witness, first-hand, the very creation debate. This fantasy can be brought to life, says Sean O'Reilly, a first year philosophy student, at the Fall Beaux Arts Ball, which will be held in the lobby of the Architecture Building on Friday, November 16.

The Ball is an annual campus-wide costume dance, the only one of its kind at Notre Dame. It is being sponsored by first and fourth year students, in conjunction with the American Institute for Architecture Students (AIAS). The theme for the event will be "The Origin of Species" and all decorations and costumes will focus around the evolution verses creation debate.

"People are encouraged to do and wear anything revolving around this theme," Jason Montgomery, the co-chairman of the event, says. "We're hoping for a lot of different approaches to the idea." The other co-chairman, David C. Bagnoli, adds, "We will be decorating the entire lobby to look like a jungle, and the adornments will extend outside the building and up the walls, so the entire campus will be able to see us.

This is no new or local event, and the tradition goes back to 17th century Paris. The ball began at the Fursian School of Fine Arts as an annual fall mixer between faculty and students. In the spring, the undergraduates would hold a gala of their own, where they would dress up as their favorite of least favorite professors. The first year students, however, kept their costumes more simple. They painted their naked bodies and ran through Paris, arriving at the height of the ball. This tradition continues in Paris to this day.

Have Notre Dame freshmen been as bold as their French counterparts? Bagnoli says no. "It has been pretty much consensed the past few years, and we do not anticipate any [strikers] this year.

And if some daring freshman were to arrive in "the idea" outfit, what would happen? "We would probably put him on a pedestal. We do encourage creativity in all forms.

The campus reaction to this event is quite positive. Sean O'Reilly, a first year "arke" is eagerly anticipating Friday night. "Despite the fact that I will probably be fully clothed all evening long, I hope I have a good time." Scooter Hughes, a freshman from Grace Hall, is also looking forward to the Ball. "I think it is a good idea to have a dance where we can go single, because it seems like a great place to meet new friends. If nothing else, it makes it difficult to find someone to go with."

This year's ball promises to be just as successful as last year's. The doors for this all-night event will open at 9:00, and the band Genecy will crank up at 9:30. Complimentary refreshments are also included. Tickets will go on sale this week in the dining halls, and space is limited, so the chairman recommend that people buy early.

Manley to apply for NFL reinstatement

WASHINGTON (AP)—A year after being banned from the NFL, Dexter Manley is ready to resume his career after his two-game suspension for the Super Bowl to drug and alcohol treatment centers.

But the former Pro Bowl defensive end, who has also used his time in rehabilitation to clear his head of the league and the Washington Redskins.

"I've had a lot of tough times," said Manley, banned last Nov. 19 for violating the league's substance abuse policy for the third time. "The most important thing is to stay focused on my recovery."

Manley's lawyer, Paul Tagliabue, will meet with Manley in New York on Friday before deciding whether the defensive lineman could return. The commissioner had said he would review the case after one Manley were reinstated, the Redskins would have to decide whether to keep him or let him go. The Redskins have said privately that isn't likely to happen.

"I'm hoping the commissioner knows what's best for the league, and for the game, and I hope I play again," Manley said from Houston, where he did volunteer work at the John Lucas New Spirit substance abuse clinic. "If not, life goes on. I will accept whatever will be.

Manley has said if the Redskins don't want him, he'd be interested in playing for Miami or the Los Angeles Rams.

Two players who were also banned by the NFL were later reinstated after a year off, though they are not playing now. Tony Collins, who played for the New England Patriots, was cut by Miami this summer; Stanley Wilson has not played since going to the Super Bowl with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Manley's attorney, Bob Woolf, said he was confident his 31-year-old client will play again somewhere.

"You don't have that kind of talent around," Woolf said.

"There are guys who can be teams that could use him."

In nine years, Manley had 97 sacks, including a team record 18 in 1986.

But as important, he produced finished 20th and 23rd, respectively.

"If you watched John Coyle all year long, you wouldn't have expected that," said Notre Dame coach Joe Piane. "But he's a very solid runner, and ran a very wonderful race. For a District meet is a great accomplishment."

"We basically prepared for this one race all season," said Coyle. "We really came together as a team. The number-one and number-two runners were a little off, but they still had strong runs, and without them we still wouldn't have won."

Coyle and McWilliams bled the extraordinary depth of the Notre Dame team. Coyle and McWilliams were the keys to the Irish winning the district race, a race which Notre Dame never had won in the 18-year history of the program. As a result of their success, the Irish are ranked fourth in the nation in this week's NCAA cross country poll.

"We just basically prepared for this race all season," said Coyle. "We really came together as a team. The number-one and number-two runners were a little off, but they still had strong runs, and without them we still wouldn't have won."

"That was strange, a bit of a shock," said Coyle, who was bothered by the flu.

"That's an accomplishment."

Spiders finished sixth overall, running in seven-man cross-country teams.

By doing more than three miles a day, he's a very solid runner, and

"But the emotions he showed around the field also took a toll on him."

"I was running bad, but in this one race all season," said Coyle.

"Next week (at the NCAA Championships) our seventh man could be our first man and we'd still run well," said Coyle. "We're a very evenly balanced team."

"It's a nucleus for a real good team in the future. But I'm not thinking about running on the team, that I was beating so many teams' first man."

McWilliams' thoughts reflect an excitement that the team will be sharing when they line up for the NCAA Championships Monday in Knoxville, Tenn. And Piane has to be excited as well, as his two big hitters at the district meet were underclassmen.

"I put McWilliams in the same hotel room as Coyle in West Lafayette because he has got to be three years running with Coyle," said Piane. "It's a nucleus for a real good team in the future."

Yet he said he has stayed in shape.

Louisville for Jan. 1

(AP) — The Fiesta Bowl has decided how to fill its program on New Year's Day, setting off a chain of events that means trouble for some other bowls.

"Who would have thought the Fiesta Bowl would have affected the Independence Bowl? It is a strange world we live in," Independence Bowl chairman Brant Goyne said.

On Tuesday, Fiesta officials announced that 20th-ranked Louisville (9-1-1) will play the Southeastern Conference runner-up — No. 14 Tennessee (9-2-2). No. 15 Mississippi (8-1-1), No. 24 Auburn (6-2-1) or unranked Alabama (6-5).

Top-ranked Notre Dame and No. 8 Virginia already turned down the Fiesta Bowl because voters in Arizona defeated a referendum that would have made Martin Luther King's birthday a state holiday. The Fiesta Bowl is played on New Year's Day in Tempe, Ariz.

The SEC champion gets to the Sugar Bowl, also on Jan. 1, and will play Virginia (8-1). That leaves two other bowls, the Jan. 1 Gator and Dec. 29 Peach, with the third and fourth-place finishers in the SEC.

The Gator will match the Michigan-Ohio State winner against the SEC's No. 3, while the Peach gets Indiana against the SEC's No. 4.

There is a possible catch. Some Mississippi players have said they don't want to play in the Fiesta Bowl because of the politically explosive situation, touched off when the NFL said it would move the 1993 Super Bowl out of Phoenix.

"Our seniors expressed reservations about playing in the Fiesta Bowl, but nothing has been made," Mississippi athletic director Warner Alford said.

The school has decided to wait until after Saturday's game against Tennessee before taking a stand, if it's necessary.

"Our goal is to play in the Sugar Bowl," Alford said.

Bowl invitations can't officially go out until Nov. 24, but a lot of schools already have made their intentions clear.

Louisville's decision to play in Tempe became known on Monday when the Cardinals told All-American bowl officials in Birmingham, Ala., they were withdrawing from an oral agreement with them.

Louisville's bowl-day earnings immediately jumped from $600,000 to $2.6 million.

No. 25 Southern Mississippi stepped in to fill the All American Bowl void on Dec. 28, creating another void in the Independence Bowl on Dec. 15 at Shreveport, La.

"Of course, we are disappointed because we wanted other Miss to come, but that part of the decision is out of our control," Goyne said. "There are no hard feelings."

Southern Miss (8-3) probably will play against the Big West champion, the Alamo Bowl or the Independence Bowl.

The Independent now plans to invite Baylor (5-3-1) to play against perhaps Louisiana State or South Carolina (9-4).

The California Bowl Dec. 8 at Fresno, Calif., likely will have Central Michigan (8-2-1) against the Big West champion, San Jose State (7-2-1) or Fresno State (8-1-1). Arizona (6-4-1), ticketed for the Aloha Bowl on Christmas Day against Syracuse (5-3-2), if the Orangemen win at West Virginia on Saturday.

The Liberty Bowl on Dec. 27 at Memphis, Tenn., looks like Air Force (5-5) against the Ohio State-Michigan loser. Ohio State is 6-2-1, Michigan 6-3. The inaugural Blockbuster Bowl in Joe Robbie Stadium on Dec. 28 will match No. 9 Florida State (7-2-1) against No. 18 Penn State (7-2-1).

The Holiday Bowl on Dec. 29 at San Diego will get No. 5 Brigham Young (8-1) against either No. 7 Texas (7-1) or Texas A&M (6-3-1), while the Dec. 31 John Hancock Bowl gets Michigan State (5-3-1) against No. 19 Southern Cal (7-2-1).

In the other Jan. 1 bowls, it's No. 22 Illinois (6-3) vs. No. 17 Clemson (8-2) in the Hall of Fame, No. 4 Georgia Tech (8-0) vs. No. 11 Nebraska (9-2) in the Citrus, the Southwest Conference winner vs. No. 3 Miami (6-2-1) in the Cotton Bowl, No. 10 Washington (8-2) vs. the Big Ten winner, probably Iowa, in the Rose Bowl and No. 1 Notre Dame (8-1) vs. No. 2 Colorado (9-1-1) in the Orange Bowl.

It's a big 'Oh, Baby' at Big Apple NIT tournament

(AP)—The days of early-season blowouts may be over for many college basketball powerhouses.

Just take a look at the season-opening Big Apple NIT, which has a 16-team quality field likely to match ranked teams against each other even before Dick Vitale has gotten off his first "Oh, Baby!"

Tonight, Vanderbilt is at Arkansas, one of two Final Four teams in the field; New Orleans is at Connecticut, the No. 1 team in last year's final regular-season poll; Pittsburgh State is at Boston College; Marquette is at No. 6 Duke, last year's NCAA runner-up; Austin Peay at No. 3 Arizona; and East Tennessee State is at Brigham Young.

On Thursday night, Florida is at Notre Dame and No. 19 Temple is at Iowa.

The second round is Friday and Saturday, with the semis and final set for Madison Square Garden on Nov. 21 and 23.

For the first time in its six years, the tournament is bracketed ahead of time, setting up a number of intriguing matchups between ranked teams.

Naturally, coaches followed their own handbook Monday and wouldn't talk of any game but the next one. However, the second round should bring about an Arkansas-Oklahoma matchup.

"We've never played Vanderbilt," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said. "I think they will resemble North Carolina teams because Eddie (Fogler) worked with Dean (Smith). It will be a different kind of game in terms of tempo. There's no penciling in in a tournament like this."

Richardson could use ink for this one as standout guards Lee Mayberry and Todd Day and slimmest-down big man Oliver Miller return from the team that went 30-4 last season and lost to Duke in the national semifinals. Vanderbilt, which lost two of its top three scorers, is coming off the postseason NIT championship.

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs needed a program when practice began on Oct. 15 after losing four starters, two to poor grades.

"I'm not sure we have any stars," Tubbs said. "We're short on returning players who were starters. But there are some exciting newcomers like Brent Price. He has got a chance to be one of top guards in nation. The rest are all relatively new although some have been in the program for a couple of years."

"They're hungry and excited and they have a lot to prove and I kind of like this situation."

New Orleans was 21-11 last season but the Privateers lost American South Conference player of the year Tony Harris.

There were reports Tubbs would refuse to go to Arkansas to play a second-round game. NIT president Jack Powers said the site of the second-round games would not even be determined until after the first round was completed.

"What I said was that I'd rather play all of our games in Norman," Tubbs said. "I'm trying to move all our conference games here too. It is a challenge to be out on road and play good tough teams. It's the NIT's decision. It's not my tournament and I knew that coming in."

If form holds true, the semi-finals could be Duke against the Arkansas-Oklahoma winner and Arizona against Temple. That would be four ranked teams together on a weekend in November.

"I feel it's important for good competition early because there's no other way to find out about your ballclub," Arizona's Lute Olson said. "I'd much rather play good teams. What you're doing well will be obvious and so will what you don't do well. Being a veteran ballclub we need this early."

Duke's Mike Krzyzewski likes the tournament because his team is inexperienced.

"Eight of our 13 players are freshmen and sophomores," he said. "We play nine, 10 people and we'll have to rely on enthusiasm and hustle along with good talent. But we're young and hope we're at the level the veteran teams are going to in this tournament."

Belles beat Glen Oaks in second-half surge

By CHRIS BACON
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's basketball team tested the waters last night, routing Glen Oaks Community College 80-62 in the annual scrimmage between the two teams.

First-game jitters attacked the Belles offense in the first half. The Belles, suffering from poor passing, failed to convert on scoring opportunities.

"We did terrible in the first half," said Belles head coach Marv Wood. "We had poor timing, poor positioning. Our passing was sloppy at best. While the Belles defense remained consistent through both halves, the offense rebounded in the second. Returning juniors Janet Libbing and Annie Hartzel led the Belles offense in the second-half surge.

"I was really happy with Annie. She really did the job for us on defense, and made a second-half offense contribution," said Wood. "Janet was also solid for us off the boards and defensively."

Said Libbing, "I think I did well for an opener. The shots weren't hitting at first. But I followed the shots and got the rebounds."

The Belles, anticipating a more challenging season in their new home in the NCAA Division III, are using last night's game to prepare them for the rest of the season, and particularly Saturday night's season opener at Beloit College. One of the first things the Belles hope to improve on is their rebounding.

"We did not rebound well, offensively or defensively," said Wood. "It may be a problem all year. We don't have the great size, so we'll have to get good position and really hustle on the boards."

We're running into a veteran team on Saturday. This game definitely helped us.

Agassi whips Sampras with vastly improved serve attack

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Since losing the U.S. Open final to Pete Sampras, Andre Agassi has been working on his serve.

It paid off Tuesday as Agassi hit 12 aces and whipped Sampras 6-4, 6-2 on the opening day of the ATP World Championships, the season-ending finals pitting the top eight players in the world.

"I was not really out to prove I can beat Pete, I was more out to prove that the U.S. Open was just a day out in New York," Agassi said after finishing off Sampras in just over an hour.

In other matches, Stefan Edberg, the No. 1 in the world, overcame a sluggish start and beat Emilio Sanchez 6-7, 6-3, 6-1, while Ivan Lendl, the No. 3, served seven aces en route to a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Thomas Muster.

Lendl needed one hour, 18 minutes to dispatch the seventh-ranked Austrian, who is coming off an 11-week suspension.

Sampras beat Agassi in three sets in the U.S. Open final, beginning at 19 the youngest winner in the history of the tournament. Agassi has not forgotten the loss.

"After the U.S. Open, I realized what a tremendous asset the serve can be," Agassi said. "If you can serve that big, you don't need a lot of other things to win matches."

"I've been working on my serve since the U.S. Open." Sampras said Agassi served "as well as he's ever served."

"His serve was the key. It was a complete opposite of the U.S. Open. He played flawless tennis," said Sampras, who is ranked fifth.

Sampras, suffering from shin splints that forced him with drawal from a tournament at Wembley last week, started off well. Agassi, ranked fourth, was taken to four deuces before holding serve in the fourth game. But he broke Sampras in the seventh to take full control of the match.

An erratic Sampras sprayed shots wildly and Agassi notched breaks in the first and third game of the second set.

Sampras made a brief rally in the sixth game, breaking Agassi for the first time to cut the deficit to 4-2. But Agassi saved the next game on a double-fault and Agassi served his 10th ace to seal the set.

"He was on fire, he beat me fair and square," Sampras said. He said he was still feeling pain in his left shin, but "healthy or not healthy I was going to be broken."

Edberg, Agassi, Sampras and Sanchez are in the same group. After round-robin matches, the two top players from each group advance to the semifinals of the $2 million event.

Agassi and Edberg now lead their group, but Sanchez and Sampras are tied for second, a chance of making the last four.

Boris Becker, the No. 2 seed, goes into action against No. 6 Andres Gomez of Ecuador on Wednesday.

Tarpley to miss full season

DALLAS (AP)—Star forward Roy Tarpley will miss the rest of the Dallas Mavericks' season after ligament damage was discovered in his right knee Tuesday.

The damage was found during surgery. Tarpley was injured in the first quarter of Friday's 111-99 victory over Orlando, but the Mavericks thought it was just a dislocated kneecap.

Dr. Pat Evans said "the arthroscopic surgery on Roy revealed serious tear of the anterior cruciate ligament with complete detachment in an area of previous tearing."

"It also revealed a tear in the back portion of the lateral cartilage. The procedure went well. We expect him to have full recovery and he could be ready for the playoffs in May."

Tarpley had averaged 20 points and 11 rebounds in five games and was shooting 54 percent from the field.

"This is as big blow," said Dallas coach Richie Adubato. "It just means every player on our team will have to get better. Roy helped us control the boards. Now everyone will have to pick up his rebounding."

Tarpley previously missed more than a season when he was suspended because of the NBA drug policy. He played in only 19 games in the 1988-89 season after being suspended on January 5, 1989 by the league's drug counselors.

The previous November, he underwent knee surgery.

Tarpley was activated from the suspended list on April 12, 1989, but was suspended again on Nov. 16 for violating his aftercare program. On Jan. 23, 1990, he was removed from the suspended list and, other than a two-game suspension by the Mavericks last April for missing practice, he had not had any more such problems.

Prior to Tarpley's surgery, Evans performed an arthroscopy on the right knee of guard Fat Lever.
NEW YORK (AP)—Bob Welch had the success, if not the stats, of Roger Clemens and Dave Stewart. On Tuesday, he got the Cy Young to go with it.

Welch was the American League's biggest winner in 22 seasons, going 27-6 for the Oakland Athletics. And wins are what usually win the award for the best pitcher.

In a split vote in which no one was named on all 28 ballots, Welch got 15 first-place votes and a total of 107 points. Clemens, with an earned-run average more than a full run better than Welch, was second with eight first-place votes and 77 points.

Stewart, Welch's teammate, won 26 games for the fourth straight season, but again failed to win the Cy Young. He was third with three first-place votes and 43 points, followed by record-setting Chicago reliever Bobby Thigpen, who got the, other two first-place votes and 20 points.

Two members of the Baseball Writers Association in each AL city voted, and balloting was completed before the start of the playoffs. The National League Cy Young winner will be announced Wednesday.

Before this season, Welch had been one of baseball's most consistent pitchers for 12 years, although he had never won more than 17 games. But bolstered by Oakland's outstanding defense, the Athletics' excellent relief corps and the benefits of playing at the spacious Coliseum, he set a club record for victories as his team won the West championship. He helped himself by never losing two straight decisions.

Welch's win total was the highest in the AL since Denny McLain won 31 in 1968. Not since Steve Carlton won 27 for Philadelphia in 1972 had a major leaguer won that many.

Welch did it with a 2.95 ERA while pitching just two complete games—both shutouts—in 35 starts. In 238 innings, he walked only 54, gave up just 209, walked only 193 hits.

Stewart finished third in the Cy Young voting in 1987 after being 21-12 and was left off by three voters. Thigpen, who set a major league record with 57 saves in 64 chances and had a 1.83 ERA, was named on 10 ballots.

Oakland's Dennis Eckersley, who got 48 saves in 50 tries and had an 0.61 ERA, received only a pair of third-place votes.

Stewart helped prevent Clemens, his longtime rival, from winning this year—Stewart won all three head-to-head meetings with Clemens; without those games, Clemens was 21-3 with a 1.71 ERA.

Welch got 10 second-place votes, three third-places and was left off one ballot. Clemens also got 10 second-places, received seven third-places and was left off by three voters.

Thigpen, who set a major league record with 57 saves in 64 chances and had a 1.83 ERA, was named on 10 ballots. Oakland's Dennis Eckersley, who got 48 saves in 50 tries and had an 0.61 ERA, received only a pair of third-place votes.

It's no joke—Bob Welch wins Cy Young balloting

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

If you think you've come far in the past four years, you won't believe how far you could go in the next five.

If you've spent the past four years developing a solid technical background, we have an extraordinary opportunity for you: The Travelers Telecommunications Technology Management Program (TTMP).

The most comprehensive training program of its kind in the financial services industry, TTMP is a five-year introduction to a state-of-the-art telecommunications environment. Through a variety of rotational assignments—and supplemental classroom study—TTMP is singly focused on developing the managers who will keep us on the cutting edge.

TTMP is not easy and it's not for everyone. But, if you're looking to develop the full range of skills needed to manage the most sophisticated telecommunications technology available, there's simply no better place to begin your career.

Find out more. Come to The Travelers' Information Session on Thursday, November 15th, at 6:00 PM, LaFortune Student Center, Foster Room. Interviews will be conducted November 16th.

Summer Intern candidates are also encouraged to attend.

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps has said for the past month that junior center Jon Hanson was not discouraged, the success of the Irish team this season.

"I think he knows his junior year, the third year of college basketball, is the time to get things going for his own individual career," Phelps said. "I thought he played well against Athletes in Action. I think you've got to look for him inside and he has the capabilities of shooting it from outside. He's got to become that dominant player for us at both ends of the floor." Phelps added that Hanson "is going to be a focal point in this team," Ellis said matter-of-factly after Tuesday's practice.

Hanson once wanted to average 30 points per game. Ellis is the leading scorer in the country with an average of 22 points per game.

"I think Phonz is going to be the focal point of this team," Ellis said. "Phonz will determine how far we go. If we can get him 20 points a game, that's going to force a lot of teams to double up on him. That will open it up for everybody else." Ellis is the leading returning rebounder in the country with an average of 12.9 rebounds per game last season. But after missing the final seven contests in 1989, he was actually not eligible to be ranked until the last month of the season because he had not played in 75 percent of Notre Dame's games.

Ellis is already the career leader with 90 blocks and should become one of the top 15 rebounders on the all-time list early this season.

But Fordham, with two experienced big men, is on Ellis' mind right now. Forward Fred Herzog (6-9, 250 pounds) and Nick Latief (6-9, 240 pounds) should give Ellis a test on Thursday. They combined to average 22 points and 14.1 rebounds per game last year.

"I'm really looking at every game as a big test," Ellis said. "Even if he is 5-10 and 135 pounds."
