Summer could spread the scorching heat and dry winds of destroyed, meaning that new as far as King Hussein said Tuesday.

Some of the posters made references to his opponent and to Kuwaiti oil production, including failing to seek approval for campaign posters, and defacing his opponent during the campaign.

During the campaign period, the District 1 race took on racial overtones. Peralez, who is Hispanic, publicly expressed outspoken views about Student United for Respect (S.U.R.F.), and zero in April, May and June, and temperatures will rise, combining to lift the sot and smoke higher into the atmosphere, Toukan said. The summer sun will heat the sot, causing it to rise, and the higher it goes, the more it swells," Toukan said. "We are talking about effects in Iran, Pakistan, even India. The environmental consequences could be disastrous, he said, noting some reports that temperatures have fallen 15 degrees in Kuwait as the sot blotted out the sun.

The drop in temperature has a great effect on livestock, people, many other factors," he said. Toukan was in New York to address a symposium sponsored by the National Association of Science Writers and the Scientists' Institute for Public Information, a non-profit group that provides science news and information for reporters.

Unfortunately, Gillespie said, one of the things that has changed is women's attitude toward feminism and movements. When she asks women about the movement, she said, "I get back is that somehow or other the women's movement has gone down." Gillespie views this as a mis­take. "The women's movement can't make things easy on them. ... The trick is that you should have a choice about what you want to do."

She also said it was a mistake to call the 1990s the "post-feminist" era. "There's no post-feminism era in the sense that as long as the majority of the people living in poverty are women and children."

Gillespie light-heartedly tried to explain why people started talking about low age. "Maybe the night before I heard it, I'd slept 100 years and when we'd wake up we'd get repa­rations."

Gillespie warned the audience about "quick-fix solutions" like the ones tried in the 1960s, which, she said, contributed to the current problems. These plans, she said, were proof that "you cannot make right what's been wrong for centuries."

What Gillespie would like to see is more care about each other and en­joy the benefits of equality. "I would like to see women be themselves without hurting other people," she said.

Gillespie's lecture was spon­sored by Saint Mary's Student Activities Board, student gov­ernment and Office of Minority, International and Non­Traditional Student Life.
It takes a lot to laugh, a fool to judge

There was once a French philosopher by the name of E. M. Cioran who said we cannot be normal and alive at the same time.

Article III of The Observer Viewpoint policy reads: “The Viewpoint department reserves the right to edit all commentaries. The Observer has no obligation to print commentaries submitted. Commentaries will not be printed if they are libelous, unintelligible or submitted by anyone medically unbalanced. What we consider the author of the policy meant by “emotionally unbalanced” was left undefined. So who is to pull the gavel passing judgement on who is unbalanced? Me? Not.

Even if I did feel myself obliged to make a decision regarding my perception of someone else’s mental condition, which the policy administrators do to me, why forbid someone who is “unbalanced” from voicing an opinion? Why would we want to deny troubled tongues who is to pound the gavel passing judgement on who is unbalanced? Me? Not.

Who is to judge __

To judge __

For example, if The Observer only printed articles from those mythically and ideally balanced “heads resting blissfully in the sand. But lost lunatic or confused castaway, I fools to speak out?”

Fortunately, the presumptuous part of this policy has been amended.

We will, of course, still accept and print letters from all the ostriches with their “heads resting blissfully in the sand. But lost lunatic or confused castaway, I fools to speak out?”

And it is certainly not about exclusively uphold a policy that only allows the world to be surrounded with such modern contradictions and state-of-the-art chaos and contradictions and state-of-the-art chaos and contradictions and state-of-the-art chaos and contradictions and state-of-the-art chaos and contradictions and state-of-the-art chaos.

The same is true with unbalanced. And the unbalanced. And the unbalanced. And the unbalanced.

So why should The Observer uphold a policy that only allows the fools to speak out?...
Poverty leaves youngsters hungry and malnourished

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of every eight children in America doesn’t get enough to eat and is far more likely to become sick and miss school than youngsters who do, according to a childhood hunger study represented as the most comprehensive ever undertaken in the nation.

Those 5.5 million children come from the poorest families, which spend so much of their income on housing that they can afford an average of only 68 cents per person for each meal, said the Food Research and Action Center, which released the report Tuesday.

The nutrition advocacy group’s three-year, million-dollar survey of 2,335 randomly selected families “painted a dis­turbting picture of the day-today struggle of low-income households to maintain a nutritionally adequate diet,” said Executive Director Robert Fersh.

“It shows that shelter costs dominate the budgets of most households, leaving little money for food and other necessities,” he said. “It shows that many working families, including those with a member employed full time, cannot escape hunger.”

The door-to-door survey was conducted in seven areas of the country where the characteristics of the low-income popula­tion reflected the impoverished population of the country over­ tall. The organization said it was “the most rigorous and comprehensive study of childhood hunger ever conducted in this country.”

The people surveyed came from families whose annual income was 185 percent of the federal poverty level or less. Since the government’s poverty level in 1990 for a family of four was $12,700, families of four at 185 percent of poverty would earn $23,495.

The 185 percentage figure was used because it is the one used to determine eligibility for free school lunches and food

The survey found that low-income families are resourceful in using whatever government assistance is available to supplement their earned income, but they still can’t get enough to eat.

“They are not buying frozen dinners with their food stamps. They’re buying things like rice, beans and cornmeal,” said Cheryl Weber, director of the survey project.

The surveyors asked questions of families in urban areas of Connecticut, Michigan, Minnesota and New York and rural areas of Alabama, California and Florida. Based on those answers, they classified some families as hungry and others as at risk.

The surveyors said the families whose children were categorized as hungry had average incomes 25 percent below the poverty level. They spent nearly a third of their income on food, but that amounted to only 68 cents per person per meal.

Most of the family income went for housing, the surveyors found, with the poorest families spending more than 60 percent of their income on shelter.

“This share was substantially larger than the typical American household, whose shelter expenses were 22 percent of their gross income in 1987,” said the report.

The card’s performance is the one you can count on.
Deacons to be ordained on campus

Special to The Observer

Four deacons will be ordained Roman Catholic priests in the Congregation of Holy Cross in Sacred Heart Church.

The ordination will take place on April 6 at 1:00 p.m. Those to be ordained are John Donato, serving St. Francis Xavier parish in Pensacola, Calif.; David Guffey, serving Little Flower parish in South Bend; Paul Kollman, serving St. Joseph’s parish in South Bend; and Patrick Neary, serving St. John Vianney parish in Goodyear, Ariz.

The ordaining bishop will be the Most Rev. Paul Waldschmidt, auxiliary bishop (retired) of the Archdiocese of Portland in Oregon.

All those to be ordained joined the Holy Cross Fathers as candidates in the seminary programs at Notre Dame and made their first vows in the Holy Cross order at Holy Cross Novitiate in Cascade, Colo.

A reception in the Center for Continuing Education will follow the ordination.

Supreme Court rules on trial procedure

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided Supreme Court veered from previous rulings Tuesday and said criminal defendants whose coerced confessions were improperly used as evidence are not always entitled to new trials.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled in an Arizona case that using such confessions may be "harmless error" if other trial evidence was sufficient to convict the defendant. Dissenters said the decision "dislodges one of the fundamental tenets of justice in America."

In other decisions, the court:

- Ruled, 6-3, that U.S. citizens working in foreign nations for American companies are not protected by a federal law banning bias against women and minorities.
- Removed a major threat to the government's efforts to police the savings and loan industry by ruling unanimously that federal regulators may not be sued over their alleged negligence in handling the day-to-day operations of ailing thrifts.

"In the future, extraction of that oil could be difficult," he said. "That means drilling new wells to get Kuwait back into oil producing.""You don't want to have a war there, because you can't do anything about it.

Tookam, who holds a Ph.D. in theoretical physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, called for an international treaty that would make nations responsible for environmental damage such as that inflicted upon Kuwait.

"Think there should be a treaty on non-use of the environment in time of war as an instrument of mass destruction," he said. "Once you do that, anyone who does it will be accountable and will have to pay the damages. At the moment, there's no mechanism." Such a treaty would mirror treaties on nuclear, chemical and biological warfare, he said. But now, such a treaty is not in the cards, he said, in part because of the costs and the potential political consequences.

Tookam said King Hussein of Jordan began warning of the potentially disastrous effects of oil well fires in November, but the U.S. warning was mostly ignored.

Bush appeals Gorbachev to end the stalling and break the arms stalemate

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a summit conference on hold, President Bush has appealed to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to exert his authority over the military to break a stalemate on two stalled arms treaties, officials said Tuesday.

Bush is asking the Soviet leader to remove stumbling blocks to the already-signed Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT), which the United States is willing to attend a superpower summit on nuclear arms, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

A personal letter from Bush to Gorbachev delivered Monday is a thinly veiled attempt by Bush to get Gorbachev stop deferring to military commanders whose doubts about weapons reductions is considered by the administration to be the main reason for the stalemate.

The letter urges the Soviet leader to "energize the process" by asserting his authority, officials said, and to be identified said Tuesday.

Bush also discussed the Soviet situation with the visiting German finance minister Theo Waigel.

Waigel told reporters they talked about "how difficult it is to get Gorbachev to exert his authorit".

The differences on the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT) are possibly the deepest — so much so that Baker found the Soviets unwilling even to discuss them during his Moscow trip.

Baker's analysis of the situation is that Gorbachev was deferring to the Soviet military on arms control in exchange for their political support as he tries to survive criticism of his reform program.

Negotiations in Vienna to put the treaty into effect went into informal recess last Thursday with no resolution of disputes that are keeping the Bush administration from submitting it to the Senate for ratification.

From the U.S. standpoint, the biggest problem was the Soviet military's insistence that three naval divisions assigned to shore duty be exempt from cutbacks required under the treaty signed last November in Paris by Bush, Gorbachev and the leaders of 20 other countries.

Similarly, negotiations to reduce long-range nuclear weapons went into recess in Geneva last Wednesday without agreement on how to monitor the contemplated 30 percent reductions in missiles, bombers and submarines.

The stalemates are preventing the rescheduling of a Bush-Gorbachev summit in Moscow. "We would still like to hold a summit. We would like to resolve these CFE matters as a means of expediting and setting up a summit date," said Fitzwater.

Elderly men fight intruder

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Two elderly brothers, blind and hard of hearing, were bloodied but unbroken after they fought off a club-wielding intruder who broke into their house.

Edgar Maulfby, 84, and his 79-year-old brother, Tom, required a total of 40 stitches for head cuts after Sunday's attack.

Police said the attacker first showed up on Friday, posing as a club-wielding intruder who broke into their house.

Study: Church displayed as authoritarian by media

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of news coverage of the Roman Catholic Church shows that the church has been overwhelmingly portrayed as an oppressive or authoritarian institution, its authors said Tuesday.

According to the study of four major news organizations, conflict often were presented as between the church hierarchy and lower-level clergy, laity and others.

"The result was a long-running media drama that pitted a hidebound institutional hierarchy against reformers from within and without," said the report by the Washington-based Center for Media and Public Affairs.

"The descriptive terms most frequently applied to the church emphasized its conservative theology, authoritarian forms of control and anachronistic approach to contemporary society.

The study, which involved counts of sources quoted for or against church positions, said most of the stories focused on church teachings that defended them over the past three decades.

Regarding sexual morality, the report says 56 percent of stories quoted disagreed with church positions, including 91 percent of priests and 86 percent of laity quoted, but church teachings were upheld by 88 percent of bishops quoted.

"Church teachings on sexual morality were endorsed almost exclusively by members of the hierarchy," it said. "The overall effect was to present the debate over sexual morality as a split between the church hierarchy and everyone else.

News executives of the organizations declined comment until reviewing the report.

The study was sponsored by the Knights of Columbus, a national lay Catholic fraternal organization, and the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights, an anti-defamation organization to defend religious rights.

S. Robert Lichter, a political scientist who directed the study, and two sociologists, said it found that the media had "given a negative image of the church." The report says most stories that employed descriptive language depicted the church as oppressive and lacking in appeal to the modern world. "In sum, the linguistic tone of news coverage has been generally and increasingly unfavorable to the church," the report said.

Meanwhile, news stories on the use of guns by the police have dominated the Los Angeles news from the deaths of two black motorcyclists in March to the beating of a black motorist last week.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Four white policemen pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges stemming from the videotaped beating of a black motorist after their attorneys failed to have a grand jury indictment tossed out.

In soft voices, a sergeant and three of his officers answered "not guilty." If convicted, the four men face maximum penalties of four years to nearly eight years in prison.

Sergeant Stacey Koon, 40, and Officers Laurence Powell, 24, Timothy Wind, 30, and Theodore Briseno, 38, are charged with assault with a deadly weapon and unnecessarily beating a suspect under color of authority.

Koon and Powell are also charged with filing a false police report and Koon is further accused of being an accessory in a coverup.

In the case that prompted nationwide outrage, motorist Rodney King was seen in a video being beaten 56 times with bats, kicked and shot with a Taser electric stun gun during a nighttime traffic stop March 3 in Lake View Terrace. Doctors say King may suffer permanent damage from 11 skull fractures.

The videotape was made by a neighborhood resident, George Holliday, from his balcony. He was honored at a ceremony by Kenneth Hahn, a Los Angeles County supervisor. Called a hero, Holliday said, "Things like this need to be done."

In other developments, the California Highway Patrol completed an internal investigation of two of its officers on the scene, a county grand jury has reconvened to hear evidence about numerous officers who watched the attack, and the FBI has run into trouble questioning some police officers.

During the Superior Court arraignment, lawyers for the four charged policemen lost bids to have the indictment declared insufficient on grounds the charges were vague. They also failed to show the men were entitled to preliminary hearings.

The officers were ordered to appear in court Thursday. Judge Gary Klausner said a trial would probably begin the week of April 28.

Defense attorneys claimed prosecutors were rushing the case to trial because of publicity generated by the videotape.

Deputy District Attorney Terry White denied the allegation. He said the office has done a very thorough and professional job.

This office has done a very thorough and professional job," he told the judge.

State highway patrol Commissioner Maury Huggins and three executive assistants will review results of its probe, said Chief spokesman Sam Haynes. The findings and recommendations will be given to the district attorney's office, the state Department of Personnel and the governor's office.

The investigation reviews the actions of highway patrol officers Tim and Melanie Singer, who were among 21 city police officers present when the attack occurred.

FBI agents seeking to question about 250 officers at the station where the indicted officers were assigned called off interviews with about two dozen officers when investigators were told they would not voluntarily cooperate, a lawyer said.

Cecil Marr, an attorney for the Police Protective League, which represents the 8,300-member city force, said the FBI is insisting on only voluntary interviews.

FBI officials, who sent dozens of agents into the field, refused to discuss the investigation.

In the business world, you run across many means of communicating.

Isn't it great to know that Macintosh is multi-lingual.

Apple SuperDrive.

The Apple SuperDrive is part of every Macintosh computer sold today. This disk drive can not only read Macintosh diskettes, but also diskettes used in IBM or IBM compatible computers. That means that you can take your friend's diskette with a Lotus file created on an IBM computer and pop it into your Macintosh. With Apple File Exchange, a software program shipped with every Macintosh, you can quickly transfer the Lotus file to a Macintosh file so it can be used with your favorite Macintosh spreadsheet application.

If you really want to run applications you use on your IBM or IBM compatible computers, you can do so by adding either software or hardware to your Macintosh.

Bottom line, the Macintosh is the best of both worlds. It's multi-lingual!

This week, anyone can enter into the free drawing of a Mac SE/30, by registering in the computer lab of Hayes-Healy. The drawing is on April 18th, and you must be present to win.

Democrats plan ’92 campaigns amid Bush’s post-war popularity

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — The 1992 race for the White House is starting with the arrival of long-shot, undeclared Democratic candidates who are attempting to use domestic issues to blunt the postwar euphoria benefiting President Bush.

"George Bush thinks we should have a coronation," said former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, one of the possible contenders. "I checked the Constitution and there's no provision for a coronation."

None of the long-shots is ready to formally stake his claim to the Democratic nomination for president. But this is where it starts, with the country's first major Democratic test in the caucuses of Feb. 17.

And if nothing else, the potential candidates say it's time to start poking holes in Bush's armor.

In a swing through the state this week, two-time candidate Jesse Jackson assailed Bush's "moral vulnerability" as the nation's focus shifts from the Gulf War.

While Jackson said he wasn't ready to decide on a third run, "we will not allow this race to be a referendum on one piece of real estate in the world."

Jackson arrived on the heels of 1972 Democratic nominee George McGovern, here to test the waters, and just hours before Tsongas met with party activists Monday.

Though early and iffy, such potential contenders serve a purpose, state Democrats say.

"The race has to begin sometime," said Attorney General Bruce Campbell, a former Iowa Democratic chairwoman. "This is the beginning of the season when people check it out. Iowa is a good place to do some reality-testing."

"You can't win an election unless you pose alternatives," said Rep. David Nagle, D-Iowa, another former state chairman.

Tsongas, for one, offered his own options.

The Number one objective we have as Democrats is to convince this country we know something about economics and drop some of the old dogmas," said Tsongas, who left the Senate in 1984 because of cancer, which he has since beaten.

Amherst selectmen extend anti-nepotism laws to bar 'significant others' from office

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Contending that a "significant other" isn't just another taxpayer, selectmen in this college town have extended the state's anti-nepotism laws to their friends and lovers.

In a 3-1 vote Monday night, selectmen adopted a policy barring the appointment of their relatives or "significant others" to town boards and committees.

Selectman Harry Brooks cast the lone vote against the policy.

Last month his fiancee Margot Parrot publicly broke their engagement, maintaining she had failed to gain appointment to the Finance Committee and the Planning Board because of her romance with Brooks.

"This is totally absurd," said Mary Wells and loves.

On the heels of 1972 Democratic nominee George McGovern, here to test the waters, and just hours before Tsongas met with party activists Monday.

Though early and iffy, such potential contenders serve a purpose, state Democrats say.

"The race has to begin sometime," said Attorney General Bruce Campbell, a former Iowa Democratic chairwoman. "This is the beginning of the season when people check it out. Iowa is a good place to do some reality-testing."

"You can't win an election unless you pose alternatives," said Rep. David Nagle, D-Iowa, another former state chairman.

Tsongas, for one, offered his own options.

The Number one objective we have as Democrats is to convince this country we know something about economics and drop some of the old dogmas," said Tsongas, who left the Senate in 1984 because of cancer, which he has since beaten.
Most of us have heard about the radical changes taking place at "politically correct" colleges and universities across America. Many schools now prohibit derogatory remarks directed at homosexuals, minorities, the "disabled" ("differently abled" to the politically correct) and women ("women" to the politically correct). Students of politically correct professors are taught that the heart of Western civilization is racism, sexism and classism.

Some universities, yielding to pressure from politically correct students and faculty, are eliminating traditional course requirements with teach the classics (such as Plato's Republic and Dante's Divine Comedy). These and other events are the result of a readily identifiable system of beliefs shared by many radicals in the education field. When we take the basic precepts of politically correct education at face value, we are deluded. The idea that anything can be objectively known is dismissed as hopelessly archaic by these new thinkers. According to Professor Barbara Herrnstein Smith of Duke University, "there is no knowledge, no standard, no choice that is objective." No set of values or beliefs is better than any other because no objective standards are available to use in making comparisons. Anyone who searches for objectively verifiable facts, what we would call "truth," is deluded.

Any idea or theory that relies upon one or more "truths" is false because all truth is lies. Thus, democracy is no better than Nazism and Christianity is no better than Satanism. In fact, this is best illustrated by a recent incident at the University of Pennsylvania. A student was disturbed by some of the things being said at a seminar she was attending on racism, sexism, and heterosexism. She sent a note to an administrative official in which she expressed her "deep regard for the individual and my desire to protect the freedom of all members of society." The administrator sent the note back to her with the word "individual" underlined and the following commentary: "This is a RED FLAG phrase today which is considered by many to be RACIST.

Arguments that champion the individual over the group ultimately privilege the individuals belonging to the largest or dominant group. "This is a RED FLAG phrase today which is considered by many to be RACIST.

The basic precepts of political correctness are as simple as they are Orwellian: truth is lies, knowledge is ignorance, and freedom is slavery. From them flow other dictates of political correctness such as the belief that the Constitution is racist, sexism and classism that are behind the politics. This precept is well accepted in politically correct circles, for instance, the New York Times recently reported that young academics at a recent conference generally agreed that "just about everything... is an expression of race, class, or gender." Likewise, Annette Kolanos, the dean of humanities at the University of Arizona admitted to a reporter that "I see my scholarship as an extension of my political activism."

Freedom is Slavery. The traditional American emphasis on protecting the rights of individuals is an anathema to the politically correct. The reason for this is that the Constitution is seen as racist, sexist and classist. This is a RED FLAG phrase today which is considered by many to be RACIST.

Rick Acker, in My Opinion

New York University's Denis Duquette, a proponent of the politically correct theory of literary deconstructionism recently admitted in the New York Review of Books that "nothing in deconstructionism provides an ethical criticism of Nazism."

2. Knowledge is Ignorance. When we think of "knowledge," we think of historical facts, mathematical theorems, and the like. This, say the politically correct, is the essence of being ignorant. Every field of study from physics to philosophy is essentially political. Thus, the facts and theorems that come out of them are nothing more than politically correct. Our knowledge, say the politically correct, is based on an interpretation of political correctness. This is a RED FLAG phrase today which is considered by many to be RACIST.

We only gain true understanding when we grasp the realities of racism, sexism, and classism that are behind the politics. This precept is well accepted in politically correct circles, for instance, the New York Times recently reported that young academics at a recent conference generally agreed that "just about everything... is an expression of race, class, or gender." Likewise, Annette Kolanos, the dean of humanities at the University of Arizona admitted to a reporter that "I see my scholarship as an extension of my political activism."

Dear Editor:

Political Correctness. The term has entered the vocabularies of all political stripes, although those on the conservative end of the political spectrum have attempted to appropriate the debate regarding what is and is not appropriate to say and discuss by claiming that they are the victims of some sort of left-wing plot to stifle everyone else. Or, is there a problem at all, and if so, does it actually break down along the aforementioned ideological lines?

To answer this, we must first define political correctness as it may be defined. In a nutshell, political correctness can be defined as a syndrome whereby a certain group of people feel offended by other people's thought and foist on others their own notion of what is right and wrong around the world. This definition says nothing about actually who does this in whom, or in what particular context. The issues around which political correctness becomes a problem include the whole of what universities teach, the respect or lack thereof given to certain groups of people within political thought, and whether or not people are allowed to say certain things in certain situations. In one way or another, all of these issues have arisen at Notre Dame.

Since it has been the more conservative elements of society which have been crying foul regarding this issue, I will start with their alleged grievances; however, I will show that they do not actually make any sense. To begin with, political correctness has become a problem in the whole of what universities teach, the respect or lack thereof given to certain groups of people within political thought, and whether or not people are allowed to say certain things in certain situations. In one way or another, all of these issues have arisen at Notre Dame.

It seems that the more the political correctness movement has become better organized, the more it has actually become an issue. Although those on the conservative end of the political spectrum claim that they are the victims of a left-wing plot to stifle them, it would seem that this is not the case. In fact, it has forced its ideology — in this case a religious ideology — on the campus as a whole. The political correctness movement is starting to become an issue because of the way in which it has been applied.

Certainly nobody, especially those who have taken the stand that free speech is a right and are willing to protect it at all costs, would agree that we should be as concerned with the right to hate as we are with the right to profane anyone's faith. The heart of this debate is whether or not diversity should be encouraged in the university. This is not to say that all perspectives are equally valid, but the dominant ones should be looked at. Of course, this diversity can be approached in many different ways, and those who are close-minded in any direction in what they would like to see included into the educational system can be condemned.

Conversely, as those who support political correctness recognize that they cannot be legislated; yet, attempting to open people up to various perspectives of the world, like Notre Dame's viewpoint, is to expect that diversity will be realized in the hiring process. Probably no issue is more controversial than the issue of free speech. More than any other, this aspect of political correctness has become the focus of the debate.

The first concerns the right of those who opposed to the war either because of their particular political viewpoint or not. There are those who would like to see American universities as an example of how a certain ideology which is sweeping the country, will serve to illustrate this point.

The heart of this debate is whether or not diversity should be encouraged in the university. This is not to say that all perspectives are equally valid, but the dominant ones should be looked at. Of course, this diversity can be approached in many different ways, and those who are close-minded in any direction in what they would like to see included into the educational system can be condemned.

A true patriot

Effective leadership, Patriot missiles and Notre Dame

By JOHN FISCHER

I make my way to the Pasquerilla Center which houses all ROTC operations for the University, reminding myself of who I am going to talk to. Lieutenant Colonel Douglass Hemphill, commissioned since 1966 in the United States Army, was one of the officers chiefly responsible for the Defense Department's approval and deployment of the Patriot missile in the mid-1980's.

Reflecting on the possibilities of events the Patriot never came to existence, I make my way up to Col. Hemphill's second floor office. In my position as Accent writer, student and campus activities are my beat, and rarely do I write about topics of national significance. Accordingly, I look forward to getting an interview with Col. Hemphill underway.

He greets me, shows me into his office, and makes sure I am comfortable. "Must be a slow news day," he says, "if they want to do a story about me."

Slow news day or not, the fact of Hemphill's 25 year career stand out. From his 25 months as an advisor in Vietnam to his ultimately successful efforts in helping to combat the drug problem in the mid-70's, to his work on the Patriot missile in his Pentagon days in the 80's to his current tour at Notre Dame. Hemphill has run the gamut of nations and assignments.

He finds his most significant work, however, to be his current extended tour of duty as an instructor in the ROTC program here at Notre Dame. His custom four-year tour has been extended a year in his case, and the prospect of having to leave is one of the factors in his imminent retirement. "I consider my work here to be the most important and the most fun of my career," he says.

"From his 25 months as an advisor in Vietnam...to his current tour at Notre Dame, Hemphill has run the gamut of nations and assignments." occasional presentations in some Government classes.

Hemphill sees an immense difference between the Army of the 70's and today. "An "Army of one" and "dual military" were precedent in the years following the Vietnam War, most prominently in the years 1975-77. At this time, Hemphill served as a Brigade Adjutant, Battery Commander, and Battalion Operations Officer for what he describes as an "isolated division" in Germany.

At that time, due to factors such as the draft, a huge problem involving drugs and drug dealing existed in the Army's ranks. The concentration of the Army's supervisors and commanders in the Vietnam region also led to a loosening of control in other areas of the world.

As a result, heroin dealing, racial unrest, and rebellion multiplied. This situation paralleled nationwide problems and the American public as a whole was facing at this time. "We need to establish an environment where the good soldiers realized that they could stand up to the other soldiers (who were) selling drugs. Sheer numbers overcame the drug problem."

One night stands out in particular for Hemphill. The clean-up had been extremely successful. He and the drug dealers and told them they could no longer live with the battalion if they persisted in selling drugs and adversely influencing the younger soldiers.

Hemphill says that the volunteer Army of the 90's does not experience such problems as the drug epidemic anymore. "The main difference is that today's soldiers, who have voluntarily gone, have far fewer reasons for being there than the draftees of the 70's did."

In 1975, Hemphill retired from the Pentagon through 1986 marked as a Force Integrated Staff Officer (FISO) whose mission was the approval of deployment of the Patriot missile system.

He says the Pentagon was not only on the alert for weapons difficulties. The opportunity to speak to the former Patriot missiles' designers, adequately disposed of the system and improved the Patriot's shortcomings.

The project was completed in a 1984 demonstration of the Patriot and the subsequent decision by then-Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to deploy it.

Has Hemphill had the opportunity to speak to the former opponents of the Patriot since its effective showing in the Gulf War? "No," Hemphill says with a smile, "but I'd love to. They seem to be keeping a low profile lately."

Hemphill sought to strengthen the Patriot's capability against missiles.

In this problem the system met with one of its biggest difficulties. The Patriot system could be endowed with anti-missile capabilities, but it could not violate the ABM treaty to which the United States was bound.

The developers of the missile were eventually able to provide a limited anti-missile capability to the Patriot, but still stay within the limits of the treaty. It was this capability against enemy missiles which rendered the Patriot so successful against Iraqi Scud in the Gulf War.

When asked how he feels knowing that his efforts for the Patriot contributed to the speedy end of the Gulf War, Hemphill is at a loss for words for the only time during the interview. He uses simple yet eloquent phrases such as "pretty great," to express his opinion of the work of both himself and the various staffs responsible for the Patriot.

He recalls with pride a phone call from an acquaintance in the Army on the night the air war broke out. His colleague informed him that when the first Patriot took out a Scud, the lives of 500 people in the field were saved.

Hemphill describes a FISO as a kind of "honest broker," working among the various groups and committees involved in a certain project. It is the task of the FISO to make sure that all problems are addressed and solved, and that military leaders are informed as to the evolution of the project. The FISO helps to make the final presentation of the project to the leaders, for their ultimate decision.

Awards and decorations Hemphill has earned include a Bronze Star, a Meritorious Service Medal, an Air Medal, and a Republic of Vietnam Psychological Operations Medal, among others. Despite the long career that has earned him so much recognition, Hemphill still insists on the value of his retirement that his most important assignment has been his time here at Notre Dame. As to his future plans, Hemphill, who earned his MA in International Relations here, says, "I want to stay at Notre Dame. I would love to continue to teach. It's hard for me to imagine not having some kind of contact with students."

The interview is finished. After a mutual exchange of thanks, Hemphill reiterates his statement that if he is to be featured in a story, then it must be a slow news day.

Thanks to the Patriot missile and the quick ending of the war.
Goaltender Tom Barrasso helped the Penguins to their first division title with a 3-1 victory over the Penguins, who lost to Buffalo, which solidified its hold on third place behind Adams Detroit. The Penguins erased a three-goal deficit with five points to play. Washington, with Lemieux providing all of its scoring, tied with New Jersey in the second period, extending the Devils' unbeaten streak to nine games.

Blackhawks, 2 TORENO, 1 CANADA - Dave Keon's 41st goal of the season with 1.32 left in regulation time gave Chicago a 3-2 victory over Toronto, extending the Blackhawks' unbeaten streak to nine games.

In the NHL, the Devils pulled away with New Jersey in the third period for his 105th point of the season. Fleury got No. 49 earlier in the third period he gave the Senators a 2-1 lead that only Robert Reichel, who set him up for the shot, could save.

For the second straight season, the Rangers erased a three-goal deficit with five points to play. Washington, with Lemieux providing all of its scoring, tied with New Jersey in the second period, extending the Devils' unbeaten streak to nine games.

Wanted to play. Thanks for a terrific time!

Oklahoma aims to out hustle Stanford for NIT crown

NEW YORK (AP) — After playing poorly the second half of the season, the Oklahoma Sooners were so discouraged they almost turned down an invitation to the National Invitation Tournament. Now they’re glad they accepted.

With four straight NIT victories, the Sooners have extended their streak of 20-win seasons to 10 and moved into Wednesday night’s championship game against Stanford at Madison Square Garden.

Not bad for a team that tied for sixth in the Big Eight and lost 11 of 13 games heading into the NIT.

“The NIT has been great for us,” said Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs. “It’s given us a chance to end our season on a positive note.”

When Tubbs led Oklahoma to the NIT semifinals in 1982, it served as a springboard for a highly successful decade. He hopes this year’s NIT performance will do the same thing for the Sooners (20-14), who advanced to the final by beating Colorado 88-78 Monday night.

The final four of the NIT was the starting point for our program a 10 years ago. Hopefully, this will get us started on another 10 years of similar basketball at Oklahoma,” Tubbs said.

Like Oklahoma, Stanford had a mediocre regular season. The Cardinal (19-13) finished in a five-way tie for fifth in the Pac-10 after losing four of its last five games. But the team has rebounded in the NIT with four victories, including a 73-71 semifinal win over Massachusetts.

“I don’t think anybody in their wildest dreams thought we would be in this place at this time,” said Stanford coach Mike Montgomery. “This is a tremendous boost for our program.

Stanford’s strength is a powerful front line that features 6-foot-9 center Adam Keefe and 6-7 forward Andrew Vlahov, who combined for 44 points and 21 rebounds against Massachusetts.

Stanford outrebounds its opponents by almost nine per game, the third best margin in the nation.

“They’re a very physical team,” Tubbs said. “They’re just bigger and stronger than we are.”

Keefe, a two-time, All-Pac-10 selection, is averaging 21.8 points and 9.5 rebounds per game.

“Adam is a great player,” Tubbs said. “He’s big and strong, but he’s also a good athlete.”

Unlike most Oklahoma teams in the 1980s, this year’s squad doesn’t have a star like Wayman Tisdale, Stacey King or Morrie Blake.

But the Sooners do have a balanced scoring attack, with four players averaging double figures and two others averaging 9.7 points per game. Their leading scorer is freshman forward Jeff Webster, who is averaging 18.7 points and 5.5 rebounds per game.

“They’ve got a lot of quickness and speed,” Montgomery said. “It’s going to take a great effort for us to keep up with them.”

Montgomery is worried that his team may have had a break from a hectic week of travel.

“Fatigue is definitely a concern, especially with Adam playing 40 minutes the last three games,” Montgomery said. “I’m glad we’ll be getting those TV minutes.”

Stanford hasn’t won a postseason title since 1982, when it captured the NCAA championship. Oklahoma has never won an NCAA or NIT title.

U.S. hockey squad will not include NHLers

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — College players and foreign-based pros, not NHL players, will be used on the 1992 U.S. Olympic Hockey team, USA Hockey announced Tuesday.

Olympic coach Dave Peterson said USA Hockey doesn’t expect many, if any, NHL players to be available for the Olympics, but that the pool of college and European-based professionals gives the U.S. “the largest talent pool we’ve ever had.”

The three-pronged selection process will begin with a preliminary selection camp at Lake Placid, N.Y. on May 22-23. The second stage is the U.S. Olympic Trials camp at St. Cloud, Minn., from June 18-29, followed by a final selection camp, also at St. Cloud, in early July.

Peterson said about 40 skaters and four goaltenders will be invited to the final selection camp, with about 30 players to comprise a team that will play at an international summer tournament in Mirabel, France — site of the 1992 Olympic tournament.

Peterson said that after the group returns from France in late August, the roster will be trimmed to 25 players. That team will play a 50-game pre-Olympic schedule that will include at least 15 games against American-based NHL teams, 8-10 games each against the Canadian National Team and Soviet teams and the rest against college and minor-league teams.

USA Hockey also announced that it will send a Select Team to the Lesigrad Pravda Cup, a six-team international tournament for national “B” teams, scheduled for March 31-April 7. The team will be made up of college players supplemented by some Americans who play in Europe.

for Lions owner Murray Peck, nicely to the style of play in their last five starts at the Meadowlands. Chad Lynch had 32 points and 17 rebounds for Philadelphia.

Hornets 97, Warriors 94

Chuck Lennon, "Charlotte made its biggest comeback in team history, rallying from 20 points down, and Rex Chapman scored eight of his 17 points in the final 2:28 against Golden State.

The Warriors, leading 62-62 late in the third period, entered the fourth quarter shooting 57.9 percent with an 83-70 lead. But Golden State made just four of 19 shots in the final 12:12 minutes and was outscored 27-11 in the quarter.

A layup by Chapman pulled the Hornets to 91-90 with 2:22 remaining, and he gave them the lead on a baseline drive with 1:40 to go. After Muggsy Bogues made a free throw, Chapman hit a shot from deep in the right corner to put Charlotte up 95-91 with 32 seconds left.

Pacers 123, Hawks 113

Indianapolis - Chuck Person scored 10 of his 24 points in the final 3:48 and Delcif Schrempf had 16 points, a career-high 12 assists and 11 rebounds for the Pacers, who improved their record to home to 25-10. Dominique Wilkins led the Hawks with 34 points, and Kevin Willis scored 21.

Heat 104, Cavaliers 98

Miami — Kevin Edwards scored 28 points and Grant Long hit four key free throws in the final 34 seconds as Miami snapped an eight-game losing streak by beating Cleveland.

The Cavaliers, who suffered their first loss in 10 games against the Heat, trailed 99-96 after the Heat's Glen Rice, who scored 21, missed a jumper and the Cavaliers rebounded with 43 seconds to play.

Spurs 129, Knicks 119 OT

San Antonio — Sean Elliott scored a career-high 34 points and made the big plays in overtime, rallying San Antonio past New York.

Patrick Ewing scored 37 points for the Knicks, who won their first six overtime games this season, but lost to both Dallas and the Spurs in overtime during their 0-3 Texas road trip.

Suns 117, Wolves 95

Phoenix — Kevin Johnson scored 16 of his 27 points during a one-sided first half as Phoenix continued its domination of Minnesota.

Xavier McDaniel added 22 points while Mark West had 12 points and 13 rebounds for the Suns, now 8-0 against the Timberwolves.

Michelle Mitchell paced Minnesota with 19 points and 11 rebounds.

King schedules Tyson-Ruddock rematch

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The world demands a rematch between Mike Tyson and Donovan "Razor" Ruddock, says promoter Don King. And he's happy to oblige.

"Even the world will not take Richard Steele away," Muhammad said after he and King announced the June 28 rematch Tuesday at the convention of the National Cable Television association. The site again will be The Mirage in Las Vegas.

Steele's decision to stop the scheduled 12-round fight in the sixth round on March 8 touched off a storm of controversy. There was a brawl in the ring, and Steele was kicked before being led away by security guards.

Both promoters said that the rematch will be bigger financially than the first fight, which they said was a success. It also will be shown on King Vision pay-per-view television.

"Razor Ruddock will make more in two non-title fights than Michael Spinks made fighting Tyson," Muhammad said. Spinks got $13 million for his first-round knockout loss to Tyson in 1988 when Tyson was undeniably heavyweight champion.

Ruddock was down in the seventh round and sent him backward. Steele suddenly turned his back on him and motioned that the match was over.

"What?" asked Ruddock when he realized what Steele had done.

"There are two schools of thought about stopping the fight," King said. "I'm of the school that thinks he did the right thing."

Tyson talked about a rematch immediately after the fight.

"Tyson said, 'It didn't count, because he ain't dead,'" King said. "Many people thought the fight was prematurely stopped. It ended with a lot of activity in the ring."

Spectators will be prohibited from bringing emergency pagers, cameras, video recorders, televisions, radios, coolers, bottles, cans and other containers. Purses and bags must be opened for inspection and hand-held metal detectors will also be used to check spectators as they enter the Hoosier Dome.

Officials will open the gates three hours before the start of Friday's public practice sessions, Saturday's opening semifinal game and Monday night's championship contest to allow fans to pass through the extra security and reach the stands in time for the games. "We know that some of the security procedures may cause a little hard feelings," said Bill Hancock, director of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championships. "Some people might even be angry. But if we don't do it someone might get hurt. We'll take anger over injury any day." Visitors will also find it hard, if not impossible, to get a hotel room. The Indianapolis Convention and Visitors Association reports that the city's 15,500 hotel rooms were all reserved as of Jan. 25. A special housing bureau set up for the Final Four has been recommending nearby cities. A few rooms were available in Kokomo, about 50 miles north of the city, and Bloomington, about 50 miles south.

Purdue continued from page 20 game in perspective. "We'll go down there and we'll play well," said Murphy. "We won't be out of contention, but that's part of the road trips and things like that." National rankings are another distraction for the Irish. Currently, the Irish are 25th in the Baseball America poll, and questions about post-season play keep plaguing the Irish. "Everybody's worried about the national picture," said Murphy. "Everybody's talking to us and asking us if we'll go to the World Series. You have to block it out, you have to have fun playing the game, and play with enthusiasm and positive attitude." That is the attitude the Irish will take to Purdue.
Jackson takes player of the year

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Senior forward Larry Johnson of UNLV was named winner of the First Team Award as college basketball's top player Tuesday.

Johnson is the 17th winner of the award, voted on annually by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. Last year's winner was Lionel Simmons of La Salle.

A junior college transfer, Johnson transferred to UNLV to play for national championship last year when he averaged 20.6 points, 11.4 rebounds and 2.1 assists per game. This year, the uncertainty surrounding his eligibility bidding for a second straight title was aided by averaging 28.2 points and 10.8 rebounds and 3.8 assists per game.

"I was not accepted by me, it's accepted by my coaches, my family and most important my teammates," Johnson said during his appearance on NBC's Today Show.

"It's not just me getting the award, it's the whole team." That's the answer we look for it. It's one of the reasons we've been so successful.

UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian praised Johnson.

"Nobody in this room knows how unbelievable this guy is," Tarkanian said. "He absolutely doesn't know how many points he had after the game. The only concern with Larry is whether we win or lose.

"In two years he hasn't complained once about not getting the ball. Sometimes he goes 7-8 minutes without getting the ball. I'm the one who gets mad, not him. I yell, 'get him the ball.'"

"He's probably the nicest guy I've met in athletics," Tarkanian said.

Johnson and Steve Smith of Michigan State were the only seniors on the NABC Division I All-America team, also announced Monday. Joining them were junior Billy Owens of Syracuse and sophomores Shaquelle O'Neal of LSU and Kenny Anderson of Georgia Tech. All were finalists for the Wooden Award.

Picked for the NABC's Division II All-America team were Corey Crowder of Kentucky Wesleyan; Dave Voseh of North Dakota.

Armando Becker of Central Missouri State; Lambert Shuell of Bridgeport; and Myron Brown of Slippery Rock.

On the Division III team were Bradraid B醫t of Wittenberg; Andre Foreman of Salisbury State; Chris Fitz of Rochester; Lamont Struthers of Christopher Newport; and James Bradley of Otterbein.

Johnson again;

Pitto top coach

ST. LOUIS — Kentucky's Rich Pitino was named coach of the year, while Larry Johnson was selected as the college basketball player of the year Tuesday by The Sporting News.

It was the second time Pitino has received the Sporting News award. He was selected five years ago when he coached Providence into the Final Four.

This season, Kentucky had a 22-6 record but was prohibited from playing in a postseason tournament because the school is on probation for recruiting violations.

Jackson vows to return to sporting life in three network television appearances

NEW YORK (AP) — Bo Jackson vowed today to overcome what he called a serious hip injury and again play both baseball and football.

Jackson went on a television blitz, appearing on the morning shows of all three major networks within an hour, to criticize doctors who had predicted his hip injury and again play both sports.

"Not if, but when I come back, they will be sticking out there with their feet in their mouth," Jackson said on an appearance on NBC-TV's Today Show.

"No one knows me better than me or my personal doctor, Dr. [James] Andrews out of Birmingham." Jackson expressed annoyance at those who speculated publicly that a hip condition which developed from the injury would not permit him to play again.

"They have nothing else to do with their time, or they're getting their own publicity," he said.

"They should be trying to find the cure for the common cold and not be speculating on me."

"They're trying to get their names in the paper."

Jackson conceded during his NBC appearance that the hip injury suffered while playing for the Oakland Raiders in a post-season NFL playoff game on Jan. 13 was serious, but he said, "There have been players who had the same injury and in six or seven months, they were playing again."

Jackson said the examination given him by the Kansas City Royals before they put him on waivers last week was cursory, and not thorough," he said, and the "cure doctors" opinion that he would play again was based on a more thorough examination and consultations with other doctors.

"If he says I will be back on the field playing, I have confidence in him and his profession that I will be back on the field playing," Jackson said during his appearance on CBS's This Morning.

Jackson also said he wanted to continue playing both football and baseball despite warnings that his career in both could be shortened by pursuing the two sports.

Powell will throw out first ball

NEW YORK (AP) — General Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will throw out the first ball for the New York Yankees' home opener.

Powell grew up in the South Bronx, not too far from Yankee Stadium.

Robert Nederland, managing general partner of the Yankees, said Powell will be joined in the ceremony before the April 15 game with the Chicago White Sox by the family of Marine captain Manilal Royya, the first Bronx resident to lose his life in Operation Desert Storm.

Atlanta games stealing Barcelona's thunder

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games is about to scale back the sale of merchandise associated with the 1996 Games to avoid conflict with the marketing of the 1992 Games in Barcelona.

Items bearing the star-and-circle logo of the '96 Games have been a huge success in the six months since Atlanta was awarded the rights to the Games in a marketing effort limited to Georgia and surrounding states.

For example, T-shirt and sweatshirt ads have each surpassed 500,000 items, said Bob Holland, ACOG director of merchandise.

But International Olympic Committee policy stipulates that, beginning in April, Atlanta will have to suspend — or at least greatly restrict — its merchandising campaign until after the 1992 Games.

Atlanta officials are talking with Barcelona about a possible compromise. Possible alternatives include selling Atlanta merchandise alongside Barcelona goods or selling Atlanta items only locally.

"We don't want to offend our friends in Barcelona," ACOG President Billy Payne said.

Overall, the Irish are 36-26 against the Boilermakers, but the team has been ineffective against Big Ten teams this year with losses to Ohio State and Michigan.

Notre Dame coach Pat Murphy is cautious about Purdue. "Purdue's always a good club; they are a Big Ten club. It's been just recently that we've had great success over them," said Murphy.

The Irish will not be at full strength for this game with several players staying here for academic reasons. Missing players should not affect the Irish game plan as the team plans to do what they do best: play baseball.

"We know we have a good club," said Murphy. "We've got to do is block out distractions.

One of the distractions Murphy is referring to is the Oscar Mayer Classic in Minneapolis this weekend. The tournament is one of the biggest in college baseball, and the Irish will face Minnesota, Stanford, and UCLA in the Metrodome.

For Murphy and his Irish, the tournament overshadows the contest with Purdue. However, the team will keep today's game against the Boilermakers in perspective.

Notre Dame pitcher Peter Sinness is involved in a collision at home plate. Notre Dame travels to Purdue this weekend for a game with the Boilermakers.

Lacrosse hopes to turn season around

By RENE FERRAN

The Notre Dame lacrosse team (2-3) tries to break a two-game losing streak this afternoon at 3:30 p.m. against the Air Force Academy (1-1).

The Irish come into today's match in similar fashion as they did before last year's game against the Falcons. Just like last season, Notre Dame hopes the results are the same.

"It was the best game I ever played in," said senior co-captain Mike Sennett. "It really set the tone for the rest of the season. It taught us how to win, to come back.

"We had a few bad losses to some good teams lately, but this is a winnable game for us," said Murphy.

Sennett anticipates Air Force to employ a physical style of play against the Irish.

"It's always a good game. They never give up, and they're very well-disciplined," he said. "We have to play a solid game to beat them."

Notre Dame has had problems scoring in its first five games. Junior Mike Sullivan leads the Irish with 11 goals, while sophomore Brian Mayglothing has added eight. However, their top five scorers account for 30 percent of their goals, a cause for concern for Sennett.

"We have to start coming together as a team. We've had some individual performances, but we need more balance as a team," Sennett said. "We need to put pressure on our opponents rather than on those (five) we have to order to win."

Starting with today, Notre Dame enters a favorable stretch of its season. Irish hopes of returning to the NCAA tournament may hinge on their taking advantage of this soft spot in their schedule.

"These are very important games coming up," Sennett said. "For a tourney bid, it's very well-disciplined," he said. "We're going to do it."

Notre Dame hopes to continue its winning ways against the Falcons this afternoon.

Final Four tix available

Typical $2000 price tag in Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Basketball fans can still buy tickets to the Final Four. All it takes is a lot of cash because scalping is legal in Indianapolis.

Tuesday’s editions of the Indianapolis newspapers had more than 300 ads in the classified section, mostly offering tickets for prices ranging from $100 to $2,000 each.

Ticket agents had the largest ads and reported a brisk business.

"We have four phone lines going constantly," said Dave Brusslan, president of Preferred Tickets and Tours, which had the largest advertisement — 2 inches by 2 1/2 in the classified section and another 3-by-4 1/4 inch ad in the sports section.

"We’re selling tickets from $200 to $2,500 each," said Brusslan. He estimated he had “thousands” of tickets available.

“Mainly we get them from people who get a win through the NCAA lottery and then decide they won’t come,” he said. “We’ve done this for several years. This year it’s a lot more fun because there are a lot more tickets available. There were very few tickets available last year in Denver."

The elimination of Indiana and Ohio State from the tournament did not cause a major decline in ticket demand, Brusslan said.

“He made it easy for us to lower the prices we paid for tickets. Some people held their tickets too long and it cost them money,” he said. “But the tickets were pretty good. And having two teams from North like Indiana.”
