Dr. Seuss, rhyme master, dies

SAN DIEGO — Theodor Seuss Geisel, the 87-year-old Pulitzer Prize winner who wrote such whimsical children's classics as "The Cat in the Hat," "Green Eggs and Ham," "One Fish Two Fish" and "Yertle the Turtle," died Tuesday night at his home in La Jolla, according to his family. He was 87.

Mr. Geisel told friends a few days before he died that he had cancer. His family said he was "dying with the grace and dignity of a true gentleman and with the love and support of his family." He was known to friends and family as "Dr. Seuss." He was born in Springfield, Mass., son of a newspaperman.

His works seemed like journeys into nonsense, lopsided worlds where things go a bit sour but the children are special in their own way. They were, in part, about freedom, but also about the need to do things, to get started, to make a living, to be free of things that are holding you back. And that's what a lot of people need to do," said George Kennan, who wrote the book "The Grinch Stole Christmas." It was the last book he wanted to write.

During a year studying literature at Oxford University in England, he met another American literature student, Helen Palmer, who encouraged Geisel's artistic career.

He returned to the United States in 1927 to marry Miss Palmer and to pursue his hope of becoming a novelist. But the Great Depression forced him to become a newspaperman.

"I wrote my first children's book because my exclusive contract for those books was vain and I needed a job," he said.

Notre Dame rules are not strict enough

Lots of people have been complaining how strict the rules are here at Notre Dame. Our alcohol policy is so strict, they white. "Paritalis don’t promote responsibility," they cry. "I think they should quit their whining. To be quite honest, I think the rules should be stricter. That’s right—stricter.

Now critics will probably go on and on about how already paternalistic and patronizing this place is, but they don’t realize that it is for their own good.

The University is supposed to be patronizing and paternalistic—that’s what in loco parentis means. And you thought it meant "We’re crazy parents."

Take, for instance, that sex rule. We, as young adults, are cursed with glandular desires that far exceed our moral abilities.

Thankfully, we have people—most of them celibate men—to help tame the desires that the devil is putting into our hands. They have made it against the rules for us to satisfy those desires. They think that will stop us. But I don’t think they’re working hard enough.

This current rule simply prohibits sex. That’s not good enough. When I was in high school, we had a rule prohibiting "public displays of affection," and that may seem like a weird rule, but it was even stranger considering I went to an all-male school.

Nevertheless, they enforced it strictly. I once got a detention for petting a dog. One of my friends even got a detention for kissing his mom goodnight. Although that was also ignored by the school’s so-called "Oedipus rule."

There’s also schools like Brigham Young University, which prohibit not only the possession of alcohol, but also drinking it; as well as drinking caffeine and smoking.

We need to go even further. Ban that Yo-Cream garbage, for it is the cause of many campuses problems.

For instance, if sugar makes us hyper, which causes us to lose sleep. Thus, we become drowsy during our classes, and that offends our instructors.

Second, men and women are always arguing about who eats more of the stuff, so getting rid about who eats more of the stuff, so getting rid of that sugar makes us hyper, which causes us to lose sleep. Thus, we become drowsy during our classes, and that offends our instructors.

Second, men and women are always arguing about who eats more of the stuff, so getting rid of that sugar makes us hyper, which causes us to lose sleep. Thus, we become drowsy during our classes, and that offends our instructors.

Third, one will admit it—but I will. Those con’s are obviously phallic. This is another example of the sexual demon thrusting itself heroically into our lives.

Once again, the University could penetrate the core of our sexual desires—desires that permeate all aspects of our existence. Food. I think we could all use a good penetration now and then.

I may be going out on a limb right now, but I think the University should consider mandatory castration for males and spading for females (I’m not too big on ‘spading’ in the medical term, but I think you know what I mean.) Then, once and for all, of the University’s problems would be solved.

Then we could all concentrate on real important things. Like football.

Mysterious cracks are found on Atlantis wings

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle workers removed thermal seals from Atlantis’ wings for inspections Wednesday after mysterious cracks were found in some of the protective gaskets.

NASA officials said it’s too soon to say if the problem will delay a military mission by Atlantis in November.

Technicians discovered the cracks during routine inspections of Atlantis in the hangar. Workers pulled off three of the 44 reinforced carbon seals Tuesday to check for damage from the ship’s last flight, in August. All three had hairline cracks, said NASA spokesman Mitch Varnes.

Five more seals were pulled off, and four of them were cracked, Varnes said. Shuttle managers decided Wednesday to remove all the seals to check for further damage.

“The issue is not at this point so much a safety issue,” Varnes said. “The concern is how did these happen and why are we only seeing them now.”

Installation procedures were being reviewed, as well as stress placed on the seals during ground operations and during flight.

“The seals are original shuttle parts. There are not enough spares available to replace all the seals, but extras could be removed from the new shuttle Endavour,” Varnes said.

Atlantis, NASA’s youngest working shuttle, has made nine trips into space. Its planned 10th mission involves delivery of a missile-warning satellite.

The shuttle Discovery, meanwhile, got a little closer to home Wednesday. The modified 747 jet carrying Discovery back to Kennedy Space Center arrived at Columbus Air Force Base in Mississippi for an overnight stay.

The jet, with Discovery bolted to its top, left Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., on Tuesday and spent the night at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City.

“Everybody is allowed to produce whatever they want,” said Indonesian Oil Minister Gi­nawan Kartasasmita after the cartel decided to continue the “free-for-all” policy started during the Persian Gulf crisis.

After two days of talks, min­isters of the 13-nation Organi­zation of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to boost the output ceiling to 23.65 million barrels of crude a day in the October-December period.

The new cap replaces the in­formal limit of 22.3 million barrels set last spring. It also is about the level of the cartel’s current production and capacity.

“The decision represented a victory for heavyweight Saudi Arabia, which fledged off calls for restraint by Iran, Algeria and others to take steps push­ing up prices immediately to the cartel’s target of $21 a barrel,” said Shariq Saleh, oil analyst in New York.

The average price of a basket of crudes monitored by OPEC was $19.24 a barrel last week. It was $18.78 in the previous week.

Even so, ministers and some analysts forecast prices would rise because of increased de­mand in the winter. They cited cold weather in North America, economic recovery in indus­trialized nations and declining output in the Soviet Union, the world’s No. 1 producer.

“There is a buoyant market,” said Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Hisham Nazer. “We can’t keep up with it.”

Oil analysts in New York have differing views on whether prices will rise or fall in coming months, however. Every dollar rise may change the price of a barrel of oil amounts to a 2-cent to 5-cent change in gasoline prices, ex­perts say.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholam­reza Aqazadeh said in an inter­view that prices could hit $21 a barrel by year’s end, but he said if the carter was serious about getting prices higher, it could have done more.

A senior OPEC delegate, de­manding anonymity, said Aqazadeh and Saudi Arabia’s minister, Nazer, held heated discussions about the price is­sue in the closed-door sessions. The delegate said Iran wanted a stronger reference in the final statement to reaching a price target as soon as possible.

OPEC agrees to keep oil flowing

GENEVA — OPEC agreed Wednesday to keep its crude tape wide open in the winter, but oil ministers hope prices will rise anyway.

“The market is buoyant, but that doesn’t mean prices will rise, said Iranian Oil Minister Gholam­reza Aqazadeh said in an inter­view that prices could hit $21 a barrel by year’s end, but he said if the carter was serious about getting prices higher, it could have done more.

Mother shoots her three children dead

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A woman charged in the shooting deaths of her three children received counseling from a children's services agency earlier this year because of the problems she was having as a single parent.

Kimberly Chandler felt the stress of trying to raise her children while working and going to school to get the high school education that she gave up years ago.

Chandler, 25, often told relatives she would kill her children, but no one believed her.

"She said things, but I never took it to heart," said David Ferguson, 34, father of two of the children. "She took good care of the kids."

Chandler was charged with three counts of aggravated murder in deaths of her children, Quiana Chandler, 7; Quincy Chandler III; and Ericka Archee, 7 months.

They were found shot in her Nelson Park apartment on the city's east side Tuesday. Ericka was slain while secured in a baby car seat.

Police say Chandler then went outside and shot a neighbor, 7-year-old David Warren, who was eating an ice cream cone on the lawn.

"She drove off and we couldn't find her," said Noriega's protection. "Her body was inspected our planes, no cocaine cartel poured almost $2 billion into Panama in the early 1980s, some of it on Manuel Noriega's plane, a confessed money launderer testified at the deposed Panamanian leader's trial Wednesday.

Among the charges Noriega faces is accepting bribes to let the cartel launder its drug profits in Panamanian banks.

Late in the day the government's star witness, Panamanian pilot Floyd Carlton, also took the stand, but only began tracing his relationship with Noriega when court adjourned.

Carlton said he built up a charter business in the early 1980s at a Panamanian airport with Noriega's protection.

"Nobody messed with us, nobody inspected our planes, nobody did anything to us," Carlton said.

A jet the government says was Noriega's personal plane made several of the flights, said Guerra, identifying it from photos.

Flights from Fort Lauderdale began in 1982 and lasted about 18 months until the cash smugglers were caught in Florida, he said.

Guerra said Colombian Carlos Molina approached him in 1981 with the money-laundering scheme. He later found out Molina worked for Medellin cartel leaders Pablo Escobar and Gustavo Gaviria, both of whom were indicted with Noriega, but weren't extradited to the United States.

Molina called him each day from Medellin to direct him either to deposit the money in various banks or deliver it to individuals, he said.

"I was the one who disposed of it all," Guerra testified.
family is the kind of place where "everybody knows your name." Barrington is the kind of place where "something happens," said John Egger, a commodities broker and prominent member of the local Congregational Church, was arrested Monday while driving the Brendels' bloodstained car and was charged Tuesday, authorities said.

Hightower was jailed in lieu of $100,000 bail on state and federal charges including exhortation, possession of stolen property — the family's car and credit cards — and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. It wasn't charged with any violent crimes, however, because the fate of the Brendels was unknown, authorities said.

Brule said investigators had confirmed that Hightower picked up Emily Brendel from a YMCA after-school program Friday. Barrington, a Providence suburb of 16,000 that is one of the state's wealthiest communities, has been the sort of town where many people feel so safe they don't even lock their doors.

Barrington is the kind of place where "once every eight years, something happens," said John Calliri, 29, owner of Barrington Radio and Electric.

Residents said that what was most difficult was not knowing the full story. "It was weird. I wish we could know something," said retiree Frances Taie, 66, who lives just around the corner. "I don't lock my doors or anything."

"I think it's kind of scary. It really is very nerve-wracking not to know, to think that anything of this magnitude has happened, first of all, and then not to know," said Carol Collis, the Brendels' next-door neighbor.

Police began searching on Monday after Brendel's sister in Guilford, Conn., alerted the FBI that Hightower tried to extort $75,000 from her and her husband after driving there Sunday in the Brendel's car.

Christine Scriabine said Hightower told her and her husband an anonymous caller had claimed Hightower's wife, two children and the entire Brendel family had been kidnapped.

Hightower allegedly said the caller extorted $300,000 ransom. He showed the Scriabines the kidnapper's demands and persuaded them to put up $75,000, the FBI said.

"We talked for six hours. Unfortunately, his story didn't hang together," Mrs. Scriabine said.

The Scriabines offered a $5,000 reward for information about the Brendels' whereabouts. "We are living on hope," she said.

The FBI and state and local police concentrated on the garage, an office and the story house, a garage and an outbuilding. They appeared to concentrate on the garage, using drills, saws and a crowbar, apparently searching for arrowheads from the crossbow, authorities said.

Investigators removed pieces of the garage wall.

After Hightower's arrest, state prosecutor Patrick Youngs said weapons — later identified as crossbows — blood stains and signs of a struggle were found in the car and the house.

The only known connection between Brendel and Hightower was investments Brendel had made. Brendel filed a complaint against Hightower last summer to the Commodities Futures Trading Commission alleging that Hightower had made false representations and lost his investment of $5,000.

A commission spokeswoman said Hightower had not responded to the complaints.

Hightower and his family are prominent members in Barrington, U.S. Attorney Lincoln Almond said.

They're always out there who are real homebodies from what I can see," said neighbor Joseph Simas, 52.

The Rev. Joseph Day, pastor at the Barrington Congregational Church where Hightower headed Sunday school and a youth program, began putting together a counseling program for the youngsters Hightower led.

Testimony begins in trial of the murder of LA actress

LOS ANGELES — The man charged with murdering actress Rebecca Schaeffer hung his head and sat perfectly still Wednesday as a movie studio security chief described Robert Bardo's obsession with the young star.

John Egger said he tried to talk Bardo into abandoning his quest to see Miss Schaeffer after the young man arrived one day at the Burbank Studios carrying a huge bouquet of flowers and a 5-foot tall teddy bear.

Miss Schaeffer then was starring in the TV series "My Sister Sam."

Egger said he never suspected this fan might turn violent.

"He was one of the most lucid and intelligent types of people that I've dealt with," Egger said.

His testimony came as Barto's trial opened without a jury two years after Miss Schaeffer was slain, Bardo was brought to his office with his flowers and teddy bear by security guards. He had been denying having anything to do with Miss Schaeffer, Egger said.

Egger said Bardo carried no weapons, didn't seem hostile and was described as having mental problems.

"He proceeded to tell me how much he was in love with Rebecca Schaeffer and he just wanted to see her and give her the flowers and the teddy bear," Egger said.

"I let him know firmly that he wouldn't get in," Egger said, and after finding out that Bardo, of Tucson, Ariz., had taken a bus from his Hollywood hotel, Egger offered him a ride back.

Egger stopped him off and told him the best thing would be for him to go back to Tucson. "He is going to do that."

"In all, it was a pleasant and normal conversation," Egger said. "I felt I'd accomplished something."
Croatian factions urge for peace

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Leaders of the three main parties battling over Croatian independence agreed Wednesday to seek a peaceful end to the conflict, holding out a faint hope for the latest truce in the secessionist republic.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the leader of the republic which has claimed at least 1,000 other people as they fled to University School in the heart of the city.

But they were pushed out by police and gathered at a square about half a mile away. Fresh battles erupted after they marched through downtown Bucharest, attracting at least 10,000 other people as they left their University School in the heart of the city.

Police responded with tear gas, and the clouds hung over the building.

A photographer for Rompres said Roman was in the government building at the time of the assault. The miners forced their way in and demanded to meet him.

There were also scattered reports of violence in the republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

In Bosnia-Herzegovina — the republic that many expect to be the next where widespread violence erupts — a police recruit was shot and killed overnight while guarding a post office, Tanjug reported. The attackers were identified.

Scattered shooting was reported in two other Bosnian towns, and a Muslim-owned restaurant was destroyed by a bomb, Tanjug said.

Bosnia-Herzegovina's population is roughly divided among Muslims, Serbs and Croats who have a long history of bloody ethnic feuds.

Meanwhile, the Serbian government said it would "use all means" to prevent an independence referendum in Kosovo, the predominantly ethnic-Albanian province of Serbia. The vote is scheduled begin Thursday.

It was the largest and most violent protest in months against Roman's tough market-oriented reforms, which resulted in a sharp price increase.

Romania was already one of Europe's poorest countries in the wake of Nicolae Ceausescu's decades of Communist dictatorship.

In the melee at the government headquarters, helmeted miners threw firebombs at the building, starting small fires.

"Down With Iliescu! "Down with Communism!" the crowd shouted. Many of Romania's leaders are former Communists, although the draconian market reforms they are undertaking are far from communist.

One miner, 38-year-old Ioan Misa, said he had to borrow money to feed his five children.

Coal miners fight battles with police

BUCHAREST, Romania — Thousands of coal miners agitated by their plunging living standard standard fought pitched battles with police Wednesday as three died and at least 60 injured. After a day of rioting, the president announced he would form a new government.

The miners, who had commandeered trains in central Romania to bring their demands to Bucharest, stormed the government building and fought police with firebombs, clubs, rocks and axes.

"30 years ago mine workers fought police with sledgehammers," Ionescu said.

"We are not going to leave this town until Roman resigns," said Miron Coman, the leader of the miners. "The responsibility for the dead is his.

The federal army — short of recruits because many Yugoslavs are refusing the draft — on Wednesday ordered the mobilization of all male Serb refugees from Croatia over 40, and threatened legal measures against those who refuse.

The mining brought about 10,000 ethnic Serbs have fled to Serbia from Croatia since fighting started.
Palestinian delegates work on peace policy

ALGIERS, Algeria — Leaders of the Palestinian parliament-in-exile labored Wednesday to reconcile moderate and hardline views over terms of Palestinian participation in Middle East peace talks.

After two days of impassioned speeches by Palestine National Council members, leading delegates were working on a final policy statement that will give the Palestine Liberation Organization authority to decide on Palestinian participation, said Yasser Abbas, a member of the PLO executive committee.

The statement should be submitted to the full parliament Thursday, he said. PLO spokesman Ahmed Abdul Rahman said the congress would likely be extended one day to Friday.

Palestinian television, meanwhile, reported Wednesday that two Palestinians from the Israeli-occupied territories would defy Israeli law to address the national council in a closed evening session.

Safadi Husseini and Hanan Ashrawi have met with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III several times to discuss the peace proposals. Israeli bans contact between Palestinians from the PLO and those from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Many view the talks as a last chance for talks on a Palestinian homeland, yet virtually all delegates consider political guarantees offered to the Palestinians by Baker to be woefully inadequate.

Particularly irksome to them has been Baker's failure to address the issue of an independent state for Palestinians or guarantees that Israel would withdraw from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, occupied since 1967.

We are between the options of suicide and suicide," Abbas Rabbo said in debate early Wednesday.

Body found in Austrian glacier

INNSBRUCK, Austria — A man whose 4,000-year-old mummified body was found on a glacier's edge wore tattoos, dressed in leather and packed a knife, scientists said Wednesday.

Researchers called the Sept. 19 find by hikers an archaeological sensation, and said it could offer a rare glimpse into life in the Bronze Age, a time when men ate meat and stone-ground meal, judging from the mummy's chiseled teeth.

"We are absolutely sure this body is 4,000 years old," said Spindler of the University of Innsbruck's Institute for Pre- and Early History.

From an examination of the body and implements found with it, scholars dated the "Man from the Similaun" — so named by Austrian newspapers for the glacier where he was found — to the early Bronze Age, roughly 2,000 B.C. in the Alps, he said.

He said items found with the corpse were not purposely buried with it, but were carried by the living man. They included a flat stone, pieces of leather and fur clothing, and shoes.

Hikers in the Tyrolean mountains in Western Austria near the Italian border stumbled across the remarkably well-preserved man sticking out of the glacier about 100 feet above the valley and notified local police.

Spindler said the man appeared to be between 20 and 40 years old and was "a good mountain climber." He wore winter clothing of leather and fur stuffed with hay at the time of his death, he said.

Colored tattoos are visible on his forearms, in the form of crosses and lines, but their meaning was not immediately clear.

India's new open-door policy lures four American companies

WASHINGTON (AP) — India's commerce minister said Wednesday four of America's biggest companies had decided to do business in India under its new open-door policy for foreign investment.

International Business Machines and Ford Motor Co. have concluded joint venture agreements with prominent Indian firms, while General Motors and the Kellogg Company have submitted proposals, Minister Palanpmpam Chidambaram told reporters.

Chidambaram said IBM has agreed with Tata Industries, India's largest private conglomerate, on manufacturing Ps-2 personal computers and software and setting up a network of component vendors in India. Ford, he said, has concluded an agreement with Maruti Motors to manufacture aluminum radiators.

GM is proposing a $290 million investment with another automaker, Hindustan Motors, to develop a new car and a range of components, he said. The Kellogg Co. proposes to set up a food processing subsidiary. Under the new policy, the project will receive automatic approval, Chidambaram said.

The four are the first major companies, including PepsiCo, to enter India under a more gradual liberalization policy of the mid-1980s now revived and accelerated by Narasimha Rao.

The new policy says "India will grow faster as part of the world economy and not in isolation. Trade must be free rather than shackled and the state must withdraw from areas of production where private enterprise has developed maturity," Chidambaram said. "Today our private sector is strong and mature."

The minister's staff said IBM and Tata would share 50 percent equity in their joint venture, with the U.S. company supplying some of its equipment to India and providing a training program.

Governor Cuomo outlines ambitious spending plan to 'rebuild' New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo outlined an ambitious $7 billion capital spending plan to "rebuild" New York City, but says both private and public sectors must pitch in.

It's time, Cuomo said, "to show what we are made of. We need to stop moaning and start moving."

Cuomo's plan to "rebuild the city from the ground up" includes a wide range of public works projects.

They include a light rail line to New York's airports, high-speed water ferries, and major renovations at commuter hubs such as Grand Central Terminal and Penn Station.

The cornerstone of the plan is for the state to gradually assume the local share of highway costs in return for counties shifting some of their road authority to the state.

That plan has already generated criticism from smaller municipalities with low Medicaid costs and praise from officials in the Big Apple, which could save $1 billion annually.

Mario Cuomo

Cuomo, often touted as a potential Democratic presidential candidate, unveiled his "New York" plan at a private meeting of 100 city officials, union leaders and business executives Monday night and publicly Tuesday.

The governor's proposals were intended to help lift the palpable depression Cuomo says has enveloped the city: "You can feel the tension in the streets. You can see it in people's faces."

But he said it would only be accomplished if all sectors — public, private and particularly municipal unions — were willing to help.

The proposal calls for the multibillion-dollar plan to be funded through public and private money, with a minimal input from state coffers.

Cuomo said it could create 75,000 jobs — including 25,000 permanent slots and generate $2.2 billion in economic activity by the year 2000.

Most of his proposals would have to be approved by the state Legislature or other cities, state and federal authorities before officials could even begin drawing up plans.

Cuomo said he hoped he could offer no assurances that any of his proposals would become law.

"I don't know if we're going to run into another Depression or have another period of growth and recovery. "But I'm saying it's worth pursuing and keeping the hope alive."

"What is important is saving this city and starting now," he said.

Although the tree has not been lit yet in Rockefeller Center, Christmas appears to have come early for New York City. Governor Mario Cuomo announced a $7 billion spending plan to "rebuild" the city.

Saint Mary's academics enviable

Nowhere is the idea that Saint Mary's is a second-class institution more noticeable than when students talk about academics. The typical Notre Dame stereotype is that Saint Mary's women attend the College because they were not good enough to get into Notre Dame.

This stereotype does not give credit where credit is due. In the recent U.S. News and World Report survey of American colleges and universities, Saint Mary's is ranked third among other small, Midwestern, liberal arts colleges. This rank is indicative of the fact that, in competition with other schools of similar size and focus, Saint Mary's is a first-rate academic institution.

Many believe that Saint Mary's small size is its greatest asset. A lower student to faculty ratio and smaller class sizes enable Saint Mary's students to receive a more individualized education than what is offered at larger institutions like Notre Dame.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's participate in an academic exchange program which enables students to take classes at the other school. This program is mutually beneficial to both schools. Notre Dame students have the opportunity to take smaller classes. This is something that Saint Mary's students have been yanked at in view of the fact that many colleges fill a larger number of large lecture classes offered at Notre Dame.

At the same time, Saint Mary's students have the opportunity to take classes in a wider variety of academic fields. Many Saint Mary's students are able to get a second major in an academic area that is not offered at the College.

In addition, Saint Mary's offers its students, as well as those from Notre Dame, the opportunity to receive a degree in education. Saint Mary's education program fills a gap that exists in the academic offerings of Notre Dame.

One of the most revealing aspects of the U.S. News and World Report survey is the fact that Saint Mary's is ranked first in student satisfaction. This is indicative of the fact that many people do find value in the education that is offered by a small, all-female college like Saint Mary's.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's are intrinsically different institutions with different focuses and purposes. The differences in the two should be able to compliment each other, not be a source of tension.

Minority Student Affairs emphasizes their relationship with students and administration

By MEREDITH MCCULLOUGH
Accent Writer

Doors are opening at the office of Minority Student Affairs (MSA). As Iris Outlaw, current director of the program, and her assistant Mari Fuentes assume their new positions, MSA teams with potential for growth and development.

This school year has been a fresh start for the office, stemming from small changes in organizational structure and big plans for new culturally diverse programs.

"This office has changed a lot since the events surrounding Fuentes' position," Outlaw said. "To break away from music with the lily-white stereotype that is being a star in the Christian music scene is paling in comparison to her new found fame as a pop singer."

Grants new pop image promises to uplift audience

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
Accent Writer

Want your spirits lifted? Then you need Amy Grant tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Joyce ACC. Her reputation of being a star in the Christian music scene is paling in comparison to her new found fame as a pop singer.

On her Heart in Motion Tour, Amy Grant is capturing the attention of not only her devoted followers, but also a whole new generation of secular listeners with her most recent hit, "Baby Baby," which is a song dedicated to her baby daughter.

She states that the song "helps to explain where my base is - where I'm coming from.

Grant assisted in the writing of all the songs on her latest album, Heart in Motion. For the first time she is breaking away from music that speaks only about spiritual matters and is now concentrating on topics such as love, sexual abuse and matters of every day life.

Her on-stage performance is filled with color and enthusiasm. There is the usual dancing and lighting, but there is also a great deal of humor and personality.

When Grant performs "Hats," she appears on stage with a cart of hats and proceeds to model them to the audience while singing. Her down to earth character is also evident. She relates stories about her children and her life to the audience. Her success as a pop singer has not transformed her charm and warmth in the least.

When Grant achieves crossover success from Christian to secular music much of her core audience was wary of her new music.

She responded by saying, "I'm just being who I am and hoping to God that I am writing music that you can live with and that adds something to your life." She has maintained the admiration of her old listeners even though she is quickly entering into the ranks of superstardom.

Grant has shattered the image that all Christian singers are from the "Barbie and Ken" mold. She is not the white stereotype that people have associated with Christian singers. She, however, has kept her spirituality very much alive while singing the new pop singer image.

She started singing when she was 15 years old. She achieved extraordinary success as a Christian singer and transformed contemporary gospel music sales.

Now, she is setting precedents for herself. Her new album has sold over 10 million records worldwide.

Evolved into this album is a stepping stone for Grant, she claims, "this is probably the least self-conscious of any album I have done."

America was tired of losing at the only sport in which it dominated internationally. So it pleased to have NBA professionals dominated internationally. Finally, because they concentrated on the accomplishments and competitiveness of an athlete.

America was tired of losing at the only sport in which universities is consistently on a higher level than that on European mainland. America, an average of four or five years.

American coaching was simply not geared for international play. John Thompson's failure to win a gold medal at Seoul in 1988 is the highest tariff toward NBA participation. However, another, more flexible coach, it is likely that the United States would have put up more than a bronze-metal fight. The complaining of the Yankees, however, coupled with hopes of big American dollars from television, won the IOC over, and NBA professionals were voted eligible to play in the Olympics.

The United States, therefore, will go to Barcelonas and beat up on inferior competition, flexing basketball muscle for all the world to see. Are we so insecure that we must not only beat up on smaller, poorer countries with guns, but also with Magic's behind-the-back passes and Jordan's jams?

Magic hurt by racial comments

DETOIT (AP) — Magic Johnson has asked for the resignation of the school board member who described the NBA star as a "big, dumb black kid" during his school years in Lansing.

William Carter made the statements during a Sept. 12 board meeting. He said he deeply regretted them, but added they were taken out of context. Johnson said Wednesday he and his family have been hurt by Carter's remarks.

"Not only were his comments hurtful to me and my family, but especially to the children of Lansing, Michigan, if not everywhere," Johnson said in a statement released by the Lakers.

"I feel it is inappropriate and dangerous for a man with his ideas and feelings to be in such a position," Johnson said Wednesday. But at the end of the last year I felt I was one of the best in the league. I just want to get back in there and pick up where I left off.

Smith said he's rusty and out of shape, but the knee feels good. A decision on whether to activate him for the Jets game will be made later this week.

With Smith's return pending, he and Higgins are wondering how coach Don Shula will parcel out playing time. Shula himself isn't sure.

"We're going to have to see," he said Wednesday. "I'm not going to get a chance to run the ball, like, 10 times a game. That would be OK with me."

Smith, however, would prefer not to share playing time. He averaged 15 carries a game in his first two seasons and likes a heavy workload.

"I feel like I'm better when I'm constantly in there and getting the ball, rather than sitting out a series and not really getting into the flow of the game," Smith said.

Johnson said Wednesday he was trying to explain that Higgs has struggled to meet high expectations.

"He was correct. James was a fine young man and there was never any indication that he would use drugs," Cannon said. "An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of death, he said.

"I'm constantly in there and it'll keep us both a lot happier," Smith said Wednesday.

"If I was in Magic's shoes I guess I would say the same thing," said Wednesday. But at the end of the last year I felt I was one of the best in the league. I just want to get back in there and pick up where I left off.

Higgs' job security in jeopardy

MIAMI (AP) — Mark Higgs, the third leading rusher in the NFL and perhaps the Miami Dolphins' most pleasant surprise this season, finds his job in jeopardy.

Higgs stepped in when Sammie Smith, Miami's top running back the past two years, sustained a sprained left knee Aug. 10. Smith missed the first four games but rejoined practice Monday and is eligible to come off injured reserve for Sunday's game against the Jets in New York.

"I'm not saying I expect to come in and just take over, because Mark has done a real good job," Smith said Wednesday. But at the end of the last year I felt I was one of the best in the league. I just want to get back in there and pick up where I left off.

Braves, Reds split doubleheader; Twins need three to clinch

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves wound up a wild day that included Deion Sanders’ return and two arrests by splitting two 10-inning games with Cincinnati.

The Braves, who began the day two games behind NL West-leading Los Angeles, won the doubleheader opener 2-1 on Ron Gant’s double, but lost the second one 10-9 when their two-run rally in the final inning fell short.

The Braves won the opener 2-1. Atlanta’s day started when rookies Brian Hunter and Keith Mitchell were arrested on drunken driving charges in separate, early-morning incidents. They both returned to the team in time to play in the first game.

Giants 2, Astros 1
HOUSTON — Bob Kruk drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including his third career grand slam, as Philadelphia edged Chicago on a windy day at Wrigley Field.

Tommy Greene (13-7) won his fourth consecutive start, allowing three runs and five hits in six innings. Mitch Williams got three outs for his 30th save, setting a club record for saves by a lefthander. Al Holland set the previous record in 1984.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 2
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Toronto increased its AL East lead to 2 1/2 games Wednesday, beating the California Angels 7-2 as John Olerud hit a three-run homer that capped a six-run rally in the fifth inning.

The Blue Jays began the day with a two-game lead in the AL East over Boston, which was raised out of a two-night doubleheader at Baltimore. Boston’s doubleheader was rescheduled for Thursday, an off-day for the Blue Jays.

White Sox 6, Twins 1
MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Fletcher drove in two runs with a pair of doubles and sacrifice fly, leading an early onslaught from Chicago.

Phillies 5, Cubs 4
CHICAGO — John Kruk drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including his third career grand slam, as Philadelphia edged Chicago on a windy day at Wrigley Field.

In that one, Ron Gant’s double, but lost the second one 10-9 when their two-run rally in the final inning fell short.

HOUSTON — Bob Kruk drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including his third career grand slam, as Philadelphia edged Chicago on a windy day at Wrigley Field.

Tommy Greene (13-7) won his fourth consecutive start, allowing three runs and five hits in six innings. Mitch Williams got three outs for his 30th save, setting a club record for saves by a lefthander. Al Holland set the previous record in 1984.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 2
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Toronto increased its AL East lead to 2 1/2 games Wednesday, beating the California Angels 7-2 as John Olerud hit a three-run homer that capped a six-run rally in the fifth inning.

The Blue Jays began the day with a two-game lead in the AL East over Boston, which was raised out of a two-night doubleheader at Baltimore. Boston’s doubleheader was rescheduled for Thursday, an off-day for the Blue Jays.

White Sox 6, Twins 1
MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Fletcher drove in two runs with a pair of doubles and sacrifice fly, leading an early onslaught from Chicago.

FSU’s Buckley not impressed with Howard

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — It seems everyone is impressed with Michigan split end Desmond Howard. Everyone except Terrell Buckley.

But that’s to be expected. Buckley is a linebacker back for Florida State. It will be his job to stop Howard on Saturday when the No. 1 Seminoles meet the No. 3 Wolverines (2-0).

“I face receivers as good as Desmond Howard every day in practice,” Buckley said this week. "I look forward to taking on players like that. We’ll both lace on our shoes and go out on the field and see who’s the best.”

There is no doubt that Buckley believes those words. That’s part of the mind-game between receivers and their defenders. But practice plays don’t count like the ones Howard has had in games.

Howard has six of Michigan’s seven offensive touchdowns. He ran for one, returned a kickoff 93 yards for one and caught four TD passes, including that heart-stopping finger-tip grab that tied the game, when his stock went up. But that’s to be expected. “I’m now in the situation Klingler was in when the No. 1 Seminoles go on campus on:

Kevin Pendergast takes things lightly off the soccer field. "Most of the guys would tell you I'm a clown," he said. "The freshmen probably thought I had a screw loose when they first met me."

But when the junior forward suits up for the Irish, it's all business. His on-field intensity has made Pendergast a vital part of the soccer program in his first two years. "Kevin's greatest asset is his intensity," said coach Ken Berticelli. "He is a very motivated player with a high level of commitment to winning."

Of course, intensity alone doesn't make a quality soccer player. Thanks to great speed and a powerful shot, Pendergast has led the team in goals over the last two years.

His seven goals last year tied him for the team lead with Kenyon Meyer, while he was tops on the Irish with twelve goals as a freshman.

"Things might be more difficult for Pendergast this season, though, as opponents will be well prepared to defend against him. He has scored just once in Notre Dame's first five games, but Pendergast doesn't seem all that worried."

"I hope to put the ball in the back of the net on a regular basis," he said. "I don't think I'll keep scoring one goal in five games."

Berticelli's feelings mirror those of his star forward. In fact, he expects improvement from Pendergast over last year. "Kevin is always a threat to score. He has tremendous potential, which he will reach with more experience as a front runner in our system," said the coach, who installed a new offense just last year, his first at Notre Dame. Pendergast also looks for the Irish to have a much-improved core of representatives for the Heavy-Fours, which it has competed. The 1987 and 1991 Pan American Games, 1988 Olympics, and 1991 World Championships will pose some problems for the Hoosiers. Those first year players will have to step forward and put in a goal or two." Meyer leads the Irish this season with 21 shots on goal, but he has yet to score while junior Kevin Pendergast, who is next with 13 shots, has notched only one goal in 1991. If they continue to create those scoring opportunities against the Hoosiers, the Irish should come out on top. Defensively, the Irish are expected to continue to play at a high level. Senior co-captain Brett Berticelli and junior Kevin Pendergast, Tricoci anchor the defense, which has allowed only 41 shots on goal in the last two games of the season. Freshman goalie Bert Bader has been equally impressive this season, collecting 20 saves on the way to an impressive 0.56 goals against average.

In order to continue their dominance, however, the defense will have to stop Meyer, who is the basketball boss is like treating the defense. Most of the rest of the 1991 Indian team, however, will be visiting South Bend for the first time tonight. Those first year players will pose some difficult challenges for the Irish, but Notre Dame's rockies with Pendergast's senior teammates, however, as many as eight freshmen have been in the starting eleven this season, and 12 have seen action this season. Despite their inexperience, however, they have proven they can play to the collegiate level and fill both of those spots.

Indiana has dominated the series, winning 12 of 12 meetings, the Hoosiers have never lost to the Irish and hold the only one loss and one tie. The lone Irish victory was a 4-3 decision in 1987.

After holding their opponents scoreless for three consecutive games, the Notre Dame men's soccer team clinched a 2-2-1 record on the line tonight against ninth-ranked Indiana at South Bend's School Field. Shutout wins over Central Michigan and Michigan State, as well as a scoreless tie against Evansville, have given the young Irish team confidence, but they will have to convert more of their scoring opportunities to be successful against the Hoosiers. In the last two games, the Irish offense has scored 21 shots, but only one goal, while the Hoosiers have scored 22 goals on the opposition to just nine shots.

"Our defense hasn't been scored on in over 200 minutes," said senior co-captain Kenyon Meyer, while he was a member of the I.U. men's soccer team. "Anybody will have to step forward and put in a goal or two." Meyer leads the Irish this season with 21 shots on goal, but he has yet to score while junior Kevin Pendergast, who is next with 13 shots, has netted only one goal in 1991.
