Peace group backs ND homosexuals

Administration issues warning

Despite a vague warning from Notre Dame's administration that the World Peace Action Group must not act as a vehicle for an unrecognized student organization, the group met Friday to recognize National Coming Out Day and urge support for all students.

In a brief meditation billed as "Peace Begins in the Family," Marcie Poorman, of the World Peace Action Group, Michael Vore, co-chair of the underground organization Gays and Lesbians of Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College (GLND/SMC), and Larry Bradley, assistant professor of Management, spoke at the Field House Mall.

Approximately 30 people attended.

Vore stressed that the mediation was not meant to single out a particular group, but both he and Poorman spoke specifically of the rights of gays and lesbians.

At the mediation, Poorman said the World Peace Action Group thought National Coming Out Day was "an appropriate day to address and encourage peace and acceptance" in the Notre Dame community.

"Gays and lesbians are the victims of extreme harassment and persecution," he said. "Although many groups suffer abuses of their rights, the rights of gays and lesbians seem to be particularly in jeopardy."

Poorman then called for a "more united and accepting, more peaceful campus."

Student Affairs had granted the World Peace Action Group permission to conduct the mediation, but a letter from William Kirk, assistant vice president of Residence Life, advised that "Under the provisions of du Lac, an unrecognized student organization does not...

Notre Dame's location and the enlightened leadership of the Holy Cross fathers contributed to the early success of the University, said Philip Gleason, professor of history, in a lecture Friday.

Gleason discussed Catholic education as it was established by the Holy Cross fathers under the leadership of Father Edward Sorin 150 years ago.

The initial reasons for building ND were to recruit students for religious training and provide a learning environment that was not available at the time, according to Gleason.

The early character of Notre Dame was one of "undifferentiated quality," he said in his talk at the Center for Social Concerns (CSC).

The University was not only a school but rather a place that contained many shops, a printing press, and a service organization, Gleason said. The University offered a full line of services in order to meet the greater demands put forth by the community.

The location that Father Sorin chose to establish his school proved to be advantageous to its growth. It was close enough to Chicago to attract students from that area but far enough away not to be overshadowed by the rapidly expanding city.

Between the years 1850-1866, Chicago's population increased twenty-two fold.

Gleason said that the largely Catholic immigrant population that moved to Chicago in this period chose Notre Dame for higher education, especially since it was the only Catholic institution in the area.

Notre Dame, however, was not exclusively for Catholics, he said. In fact, Gleason said, half the student population in the early days was Protestant.

The Holy Cross community was greatly benefited by its small-scale organization, according to Gleason.

Immigrants scramble for green cards

MERRIFIELD, Va. (AP) — Thousands of immigrants dropped millions of green card applications at the post office here Sunday as the deadline approached for an immigration visa giveaway.

Many immigrants delivered more than 1,000 applications each, dropping them off at various intervals during the day and scattering them in long mail bins in the hopes of improving their odds.

"If you make more letters, you have a better chance," said Rosa Frankevics, a Polish immigrant who drove from Chicago to enter 400 applications for herself and hundreds more for friends. "I have a good chance."

The State Department will accept the first 40,000 valid applications for immigration visas it receives after 12:01 a.m. Monday morning at a

Ten things ND could do with its megabucks

When Notre Dame pulled its coup in the spring of 1990,ousting NBC sports and making Notre Dame Saturday a part of the network, the next sighting of Halley’s comet, it garnered a cool $50 million (give or take a few million). It also counted all that money for pocket change.

What, you may ask, will all that money be spent on? Scholarships, grants, and other educational aid, as well as athletic aid, funding would be a respectable way to spend it. But I have a few other suggestions, albeit unrealistic ideas.

So, without further ado, here are 10 ideas for your perusal. The Top Ten Things That Notre Dame can do with its NBC Megabucks.

1. Throw a campus-wide tailgater. This would ensure that the University knows everyone is doing on a home-game Saturday, and besides, it would be impressive seeing all that food in one place.

2. Buy one of those snow-making machines. This way, instead of winning when Notre and South quad punt each other at the first snowfall, the University can sponsor a fight at a neutral location and avoid all that damage. They can even hire refs so that no one gets hurt.

3. Increase the size of the Observer. While students would surely enjoy reading a daily newspaper, production just might garner a cool $30 million for the Observer (USPS 589 2-4000) is published Monday through Friday except during exam and vacation periods. Soviet republics may join arms talks

WASHINGTON — President Bush suggested Sunday that the United States might be able to align nuclear arms cutbacks might have to include leaders of the Soviet republics. In the last three weeks, Bush and Gorbatchev exchanged proposals for deep cuts in the superpowers’ nuclear arsenals, including unilateral reductions in tactical weapons. “I’m finding that these republic leaders are wanting more and more say over nuclear weapons in their territory,” said Bush, who recently met at the White House with the leader of the Ukraine. Bush encouraged the Soviet to sign an economic compact between Moscow and 10 of the republics.

G-7 agree on helping new Soviet economy

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The biggest industrial democracies agreed Sunday on what they called a historic plan to help the Soviet Union build a market economy, but made no specific promises of additional financial aid.

The Group of Seven said deputy finance ministers would go to Moscow to discuss economic reconstruction programs. French officials said the visit would begin in a week to 10 days.

The agreement was reached after two days of talks between the Soviets and the finance ministers of the Group of Seven nations — the United States, Japan, Germany, France, Italy, Canada and Britain.

Officials described the meeting as historic because it marked the first time the Soviet Union had sought such broad help in remodeling its economy along Western lines.

"What we are seeing here is really for the first time the Soviet Union engaging the West in a level of detail which is unprecedented," Alan Greenspan, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, told reporters.

"We are actively engaged in discussions on a range of issues which will shift a centrally planned economy to a market economy." Grigory Yavlinsky, leader of the Soviet delegation, said. "The goals we jointly want to achieve are not far from us.

Greenspan cautioned that the agreement "is not a watershed" but only "the beginning of what is going to be a very long and very detailed process."

U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady refused to estimate a timetable for rebuilding the Soviet economy.

He said the United States and the other industrial powers "will be as responsive as we possibly can in the shortest space of time."

Several officials said the economic crisis has been worsened by the Soviets' lack of detailed information on their economy and Soviet unfamiliarity with generally accepted economic practices.

Canadian Finance Minister Donald Mazankowski said he was encouraged the Soviets want to establish "fundamentals for a truly market-oriented economy." Norman Lamont, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, said he believed Moscow wanted the Group of Seven's financial expertise and international endorsement for stringent economic policies that may not be favorably received by the Soviet public.

In some former Soviet bloc countries, for instance, the shift to market economies has brought inflation and people have lost jobs because of the shutdown of inefficient businesses.

The Soviets face an immediate problem of ensuring adequate food and medical supplies through the winter. Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has asked for $10 billion in short-term aid.

A representative from the Group of Seven made no specific pledges of assistance apart from the billions of dollars in humanitarian aid and technical help already promised.

ANC plan to tax rich whites

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress, the leading black opposition movement, is preparing a plan that would tax rich whites as a form of reparations for apartheid, a newspaper said Sunday.

The proposal would require citizens to pay a levy equivalent to one-third of their assets to raise government money for the impoverished black majority, The Sunday Times newspaper reported. The money would be used to purchase land and other resources for blacks, said ANC official Heinz Klug.

The plan is not official ANC policy, but was recently adopted by the group's committee on affirmative action, according to the Sunday Times, the country's largest circulation newspaper.

However, another ANC official denied the report, saying the proposal was raised but had not been adopted.

"The government should introduce economic and social wealth, but there are various devices and they must be fair," the unidentified official told the Independent South African Press Association.

The ANC says the redistribution of wealth from the 5 million whites to the 30 million blacks will be a leading priority if the group comes to power. Most observers believe the ANC would win elections if blacks were allowed to vote.

ANC critics say the group is wedded to socialist economics that failed throughout Eastern Europe and much of Africa.

UBIversity OF Notre DAME

November 26, 1991

Dear Members of the Notre Dame Community:

It is with great pleasure that I use the Sesquicentennial Year to announce a new University honor, the Notre Dame Award.

The Notre Dame Award will complement the Lastarre Medal, which Notre Dame has awarded annually since 1863 to an American Catholic distinguished in his or her profession.

The new award will be international and interfaith. In keeping with the inquiry, belief and community themes of our 150th anniversary, a recipient of the Notre Dame Award will be one for whom learning has been a wellspring of action, one for whom religious faith has nurtured deed, and one for whom inquiry and belief have inspired service to the world community.

The recipient of the Notre Dame Award will be announced yearly on Founding Day, October 26. He or she will receive an honorarium as well as a crystal memento symbolizing the award. The award will be presented on an occasion that will be a celebration for all people is an issue of basic human rights,

"We know the way Jesus loves is unconditionally accepting," she said at the time. "Jesus did not judge people, least of all based on their sexual behavior."

"As a Catholic university, . . .

we should stand apart as a model of Christ's peace and unconditional love. . . and yet, we still reject and persecute gays and lesbians."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anita Hill on Sunday passed a lie detector test on her statements that Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas made sexually explicit remarks to her, a polygraph expert said.

Paul Minor, president of American International Security Corp. of Fairfax Va., told reporters outside the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing room that he had concluded she was telling the truth in her accusations that Thomas sexually harassed her.

Such tests are not universally admissible in court. One of Hill's attorneys, Charles Ogletree, said they would not formally submit the results to the committee.

Minor said he put four questions to Hill, asking if she had lied in her testimony or fabricated remarks that she attributed to Thomas.

"She answered no. There was no indication of deception to any of the relevant questions," Minor said outside the hearing room. "It's therefore my opinion Ms. Hill is truthful."

Hill has testified that when she worked for Thomas at two government agencies in the early 1980s, he pressed her for dates and used graphic sexual language in conversation with her.

Thomas has emphatically denied each of Hill's allegations.

The questions on the polygraph test were:

- Have you deliberately lied to me about Clarence Thomas?
- Are you fabricating the allegation that Clarence Thomas discussed pornographic material with you?
- Are you lying to me about the various topics that Clarence Thomas mentioned to you regarding sexual acts?
- Are you lying to me about Clarence Thomas making references to you about the size of his penis?

Bush, asked earlier in the day whether both Thomas and Hill should take polygraph tests, said "I think it's a stupid idea."

He said: "If the idea is challenging the word of one over another, to use the lie detector test in that way, I reject it."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, a Vermont Democrat who is on the judiciary committee, called the polygraph result "a very significant development."

"It's my hope that it be formally entered in the record," Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wisc., who also is on the committee. "We all know."

Ogletree, a Harvard law professor, said Hill wanted to take the test in light of the attacks made on her motives and integrity by Republican senators defending Thomas.

Poll: Majority of U.S. doesn't believe Hill

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Americans in a poll released Sunday said they were not inclined to believe the charges against Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas.

More men than women rejected Anita Hill's sexual harassment allegations against him.

The ABC News-Washington Post poll was taken after Hill and Thomas appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee but before the testimony of two panels of witnesses — one defending Thomas and the other supporting Hill.

Fifty-five percent of those surveyed didn't believe the sexual harassment allegations against Thomas, 34 percent accepted Hill's allegations as true and 12 percent had no opinion.

Hill, a law professor at the University of Oklahoma, said Thomas asked her for dates, described pornographic movies and bragged of his own sexual prowess while she worked for him at the U.S. Education Department and later the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in the early 1980s.

Men said they believed Thomas' denials by 56 percent to 20 percent, with 24 percent undecided.

Among women, 28 percent believed Thomas, 20 percent supported Hill and 33 percent were undecided.

The poll's analysts said about half of those questioned said Thomas should be confirmed, a percentage roughly unchanged from previous polls. But for the first time a "statistically meaningful split" along gender lines has developed on this question, they said.

Among men, those who believe Thomas should be confirmed fell from 51 percent to 59 percent and opposition rose from 23 percent to 31 percent since Wednesday.

The percentage of women who believe Thomas should be confirmed remained at 43 percent, with opposition rising from 23 percent to 31 percent.

Women were twice as likely to be undecided on whether he should be confirmed, 26 percent compared with 13 percent of men.

The poll, based on a national telephone sampling of 1513 adults, had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.
FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) - Rightist youths injured at least nine people in weekend attacks on foreigners, and a magazine reported the Ku Klux Klan was recruiting members among German neo-Nazis and "skinheads."

The attacks were the latest in a spate of violence against refugees in this newly reunited nation, which has had a sharp increase in Eastern European and Third World refugees since the collapse of Communism made travel abroad easier.

Police say rightist-oriented youths, who blame foreigners for taking away jobs and scarce housing in Germany, are mainly responsible.

At the University, said Jesuit archivist James Burns, and Hesburgh, because football helped to make Notre Dame well known and funded the academic program that Burns hoped to strengthen.

In the past fifty years, Notre Dame graduates, Burns was instrumental in organizing Notre Dame to move with the times, said Gleason. He said Notre Dame's academic program that Burns hoped to strengthen was based on the Jesuits, who were established in the 1540s, were bureaucratic and rigid, with a pedagogical fear of change, Gleason said. Sorin, on the other hand, was flexible to change.

Unlike the Jesuits, who dominated higher Catholic learning, the Holy Cross Fathers would concentrate all of their efforts on Notre Dame, he said. The Jesuits' efforts were somewhat dissipated due to the number of schools that they had under their control, he said.

"Notre Dame was the centerpiece of the Holy Cross education," said Gleason.

The lack of tradition of the Holy Cross order allowed the fathers to do as they wanted as they went along, he said. The Jesuits, who were established in the Southern states of Bavaria, Baden-Wuerttemberg, and the northern states of Mecklenburg-Vorpommern and Brandenburg reported firebombs and rock-throwing raids on homes for asylum seekers and refugees from the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, a major German news magazine reported Saturday that the Klan was recruiting members among extreme rightist groups.

Bush meeting with 'Big Three' on hold

Detroit (AP) — Preparations for a meeting among President Bush and the chairmen of the Big Three automakers this week about electric cars have been put off, sources at two of the automakers said Friday.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they had been told that scheduling conflicts prevented Bush from confering with the top executives of General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp.

The White House confirmed that Bush would remain in Washington. Last week, the sources said there was a good chance Bush would visit the Detroit area and meet with Robert Stempel of GM, Harold Poling of Ford and Lee Iacocca of Chrysler.

The Big Three formed a consortium, which later was joined by the federal Department of Energy, to develop technology for a battery capable of powering an automobile.

There has been speculation that the government, through the Energy Department, would provide money to the consortium.

The big problem in electric vehicle development centers on range and recharging capabilities.

Magnavox changes name

Fort Wayne, Ind. (AP) — A Fort Wayne-based defense contractor has changed its name to reflect what its chairman said will be a business broader than just the government and defense sectors.

The name change reflects the company's strategy to more aggressively sell its products in the commercial marketplace, but "defense electronics will continue to be the mainstay of our business base," said James Loomis, chairman and chief executive officer.

Magnavox supplies military electronics for communications, antisubmarine warfare, ordnance electronics, infrared systems and other areas. It also produces commercial satellite navigational and communications systems.

Since it was acquired by Dutch-owned North American Philips Corp. in 1975, Magnavox has operated under trustee ownership so it can continue defense contract work.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Homophobia stems from ignorance

Dear Editor:

In reference to his letter printed on October 8, I do not feel that Mr. Ouellette accomplished his stated purpose of evaluating the "entire situation for what it's worth." The situation of which he writes is the controversy of "safe havens" which in my eyes is a subtle disguise for the gay/lesbian "safe zones" of which he writes is the entire Notre Dame "family" would poke at the sight of same sex couples, defend their actions or reactions. This sentiment hints at the same homophobic qualities, and agrees to abide by the admission that was being done by it other than the maintenance of the status quo. A resolution any stronger would have been rejected or reduced to a copy of the one passed. It must still be noted that many dorms did not feel comfortable even endorsing the status quo. Had the dorms on campus wanted to do anything more than brush this issue aside, with deft political spin, they would have considered a larger question. Perhaps the passing of a bill suggested by Mr. Vore would have forced the administration to enforce its policy. Perhaps the administration would have even applied du Lac to themselves.

Mr. Ouellette's evaluation de-generates from a discussion of safe havens to an open letter on the evils of homosexuality. I find it a shame that he and others in the Notre Dame "family" would poke at the sight of same sex couples, defend their actions or reactions. Perhaps the passing of a bill suggested by Mr. Vore would have forced the administration to enforce its policy. Perhaps the administration would have even applied du Lac to themselves.

Mr. Ouellette's comparison of homosexuality to bestiality and drug abuse were unnecessary, but they do illustrate a belief prevalent at this institution. They make allusions that homosexuality is evil, perverted, and a sin. This view of sodomy is denounced in the Bible but homosexual love is not. Not all homosexuals are sexually active, just as not all heterosexuals are. If they were, then they would also be committing a sin.

It is this attitude which insures that "that gay and lesbian group" will remain off campus indefinitely. It seems that that is "where the queers are in '91." As a progressive institution, we could support this group and join the ranks of Catholics demanding that the Church rethink its stance on non-marital monogamous relationships.

As a progressive student body we should be able to, as Father Warner asks, "examine our expressed and sometimes implicit negative attitudes" towards gays and lesbians and "if we are simply reluctant to do so, it is only with difficulty that we can call ourselves followers of Jesus Christ in any meaningful way." If we hold Christ as our model, then we too will embrace those with whom we do not agree.

Mr. Ouellette also embraces a right which is not his. He asserts that one cannot judge people because of who they are, but one can, in making a moral decision, judge a person by their actions. He writes that, "Everyone will discover what right and wrong actually is when they die." It is for that reason, Mr. Ouellette, that we are not capable of judging others, by their actions or otherwise.

Co-ed dorms would benefit ND students

Dear Editor:

You are now about to enter the twilight zone. Notre Dame, an all boys Catholic school was unwilling to accept any changes. Until along came an individual who thought that girls should also attend. I am pretty sure that when this was proposed it was a far fetched idea. The question that is being brought up now is why are there no co-ed dorms.

Even though the concept of co-ed dorms requires great responsibility from the students' part, the maturity level of Notre Dame students should be high enough to uphold the rules of du Lac. In short, college is a pre-game warm-up for the real world. Surviving in today's world requires much responsibility. A responsibility that co-ed dorms could provide. The experience that would be learned while living with the opposite sex would be a beneficial factor to the knowledge of an individual.

With the growth of the co-ed dorm, there will be a growth in the understanding of the opposite sex. Along with the understanding that will be gained, the respect level will also increase. By no means is this an abandonment of rectors or resident assistants but simply an advancement on the present system. I guess one could call it an amendment being added to the constitution. Think, pariarchs will be a thing of the past, co-ed dorms will be a thing of the present, and a better understanding of the real world will be a thing of the future. Who is to say, maybe one day in the near future we will see females on the first floor, males on the second floor, and so on.

QUOTES, P.O. Box Q, ND, IN 46556
The other day I was confronted with a funny situation. A single student in my history class told me that he had been sexually harassed by another student. I was shocked at the thought of such an incident occurring in our class. I decided to speak to the student and try to find out more about what had happened.

I asked the student if he had reported the incident to the school administration. He told me that he had not, because he was afraid of the reaction of his classmates.

I offered to help him file a complaint with the equal opportunity commission, but he refused.

I then decided to take the incident seriously and try to help the student. I contacted the school administration and explained the situation. They promised to investigate the case and take appropriate action.

I am glad that I was able to help the student. It is important to deal with incidents of sexual harassment promptly and appropriately. This will help to create a safe and supportive learning environment for all students.
Alcohol Awareness Week stresses education instead of abstinence

A devoted car has been sitting on the Saint Mary’s Library Circle since Friday.

"A car and a person can be dead within 7 seconds, if it’s an alcohol-related accident," said Michelle Ptak, member of an SMC alcohol peer awareness group.

The disfigured hose in front of the library was the car of a St. Joseph’s county resident after it was in an alcohol-related accident. This spectacle will be on display in front of the library until this Friday as a part of SMC’s promotion of Alcohol Awareness Week.

Saint Mary’s will participate in National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, October 13-19. College campuses across the country will sponsor various informational programs throughout the week to inform students of the effects that drinking has on the body, and to promote wise decision-making.

"Everywhere you turn there’s alcohol. What we wanted to promote was responsible drinking." -Michelle Ptak naive, a group of interested girls have decided to educate their peers about the realities of drinking.

This alcohol peer education group includes: Michelle Ptak, Vanessa Brehi, Courtney Champion, Michelle Hill, Sheila Curtis, Lynn Pfeffer, Ann Marie Jordan, McCandless Hall director, and Dean Mary Ellen Curtis, director of students affairs.

This group has planned activities and promotions for Alcohol Awareness Week at Saint Mary’s.

The week is based on donations from various beer companies and the support of local businesses.

The alcohol awareness campaign will begin with the "tie one on" campaign. Red ribbons symbolizing responsible drinking will be offered to each student.

Each student who wears a ribbon to Coach’s will receive a free soda drink.

Fact cards will also be distributed with the ribbons. The cards list breathalyzer readings based on various weights and number of drinks per hour.

"That (the breathalyzer readings) is something I don’t think most students are aware of," said Ptak.

Messages reminding students to “know what your limits are and know what alcohol does to you” will be written on chalkboards in various classrooms throughout the week.

Posters have also been distributed to the RAs.

Schools and tournaments have been provided with the ribbons. The winners of a poster contest for students of the week will be on display in front of the library until Friday.

The posters will be displayed in front of the library until this Friday as a part of SMC’s promotion of Alcohol Awareness Week.

AffirmativePeerPromotion was the winner of a poster contest for SMC酒精Awareness Week. Students of the week will be aware of the risks of alcohol and its abuse.

The average glass of beer has 110-150 calories, but can reach as high as 440 calories, depending on brand. "You think of these beers and they seem so light, but they’re not. We want to stress these facts to women so they know," said Ptak.

"People are going to drink," Ptak said. "You just need to know what it’s going to do to you.

"Alcohol education instead of abstinence, which Ptak calls, "is going to be on display in front of the library until this Friday as a part of the features in Alcohol Awareness Week at Saint Mary’s.

"The beer companies are big promoters of Alcohol Awareness Week," said Ptak. Posters and fact cards have been provided by Coors and Anheuser-Busch. Anheuser-Busch is offering a $20,000 scholarship for the winner of a poster contest for college students.

White Notre Dame has not organized any activities specifically for Alcohol Awareness Week, students of NI as well as SMC are invited to pick up an entry blank for the poster contest at the front desks of all the Saint Mary’s residence halls.

"Clean and Sober" will be shown Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Science Hall by the Popular Culture Group and the Social Action Club, which will also emphasize to students the risk of alcohol and its abuse.

Alcohol Awareness aims to do just that: make students aware.

"A twelve-ounce glass of beer is equal to one one-ounce shot of vodka. I don’t think many people realize that," said Ptak. One drink will effect a woman the same as two drinks will effect a man.

The average glass of beer has 100-150 calories, but can reach as high as 440 calories, depending on brand. "You think of these beers and they seem so light, but they’re not. We want to stress these facts to women so they know," said Ptak.

"People are going to drink," Ptak said. "You just need to know what it’s going to do to you.

White Swan gloriﬁes bravery in art

By PAIGE SMoron
Assistant Accent Editor

Everybody knows about Custer’s Last Stand at the Battle of Little Big Horn, but how many have heard of the Battle of Big Shoulder Blade?

White Swan, who was a native American U.S. Army Scout from 1876-1881 and served under Colonel Custer, immortalized his battle accomplishments in a series of paintings, twelve of which will be on exhibit at the Snite Museum of Art in the Museum’s O’Shaughnessy Galleries until December 15.

"Every man, once he had proved himself in battle, had the right to portray his most impressive feats in a pictograph, a pictorial record of his bravery in battle," said Douglas E. Bradley, curator of the Arts of the Americas, Africa and Oceanian Gallery at the Snite. "White Swan must have been a hell of a warrior, because so many of his works are still with us."

Bradley assembled the exhibition from various public museum collections. The O’Shaughnessy’s holdings are the largest of Swan’s work in the United States.

The Suite owns the earliest of his paintings, which were created with bone paint applicators and traditional paints on muslin or paper.

"Depicting more than thirty separate battle victories, White Swan had strong motivation on the battle field as well as in his art. "As a member of the Crow tribe, White Swan became a scout to avenge himself against his enemies, the Cheyenne and the Sioux Indians," said Bradley.

"Avenge White Swan did, killing upwards of 35 men and carefully recording his feats. As a masterfully successful warrior, he had many chances to hone his skills. "White Swan is unique in that he had the opportunity and he the right to evolve as a painter," said Bradley.

"There is a definite progression in his work in a three-tiered compositional structure," said Bradley. "More experimentation with color and spacing, and much more detail."

By the 1890’s, white settlers had heard of his paintings and traveled to Montana to buy them, making White Swan the proprietor of one of the earliest tourist businesses in America.

"He didn’t compromise his art or just crank out paintings, though," said Bradley. "These were works he took great pride in, and he inserted himself in every painting, carrying a pennant and bearing wounds on his leg. White Swan has interpreted his own life in these works."

Bradley will interpret White Swan’s paintings as well as his life in a noontalk on Tuesday, November 14, from 12:10 to 12:55 p.m. in the O’Shaughnessy Art Galleries. On Thursday, November 14, he will also speak on White Swan in the Snite’s Annenberg Auditorium at 4:15 p.m.

And following in White Swan’s marketing tradition, Bradley has assembled a catalogue, picturing White Swan’s works for the exhibition and featuring the first extensive treatment of his painting style, which will be available for sale in the museum shop.

Holtz. "We put Rod Smith at strong safety. We felt we had to do that against a team like Pitt because they run a million different formations, and trips and motions, just create some problems."

The defensive line, although young and inexperienced at the start of the year, has matured rapidly.

"(The experience) has helped out a great deal," said defensive tackle Junior Bryant. "Game by game we get better and better, and hopefully it'll continue throughout the rest of the season. I don't think we're doing anything differently, we're just getting after people a little more than we had been."

And with both the line and the secondary clicking on all cylinders, the Irish defense is in full gear.

"As good as they are rushing, it gives us a better chance to get interceptions," Covington said.

Notch tackle Bryant Young repaid the favor. "The defensive backs played a large part in this because they played their men real well and that allowed us to put on the pressure to get to the quarterback," said Young.

This is the kind of intra-squad chemistry that great defenses show. But now that the defense has put together a streak of stopping passing defenses, they get to face the wishbone next weekend.

"Our problem is that one week you're playing a team that throws it from one end of the field to the other, third and one they throw the football and reverse all of a sudden we're into a game where third-and-seven is running down," said Holtz. "But that's a problem for the upcoming week of practice, a problem that a rapidly improving defense should be more than equipped to handle."

was able to recover the ball in the corner of the end zone for a touchdown. "I give a lot of credit to Jay Hayes (special teams) and Joe Wessel (volunteer assistant). They have been working with the kids from day one on blocking punts," said Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz. "It was just beautiful to watch him block it the way he did. He just blocked it perfectly."

Both teams exchanged punts after ineffective drives until the end of the half.

Pitt kicked off to start the second half. Reggie Brooks, in a Rocket-center move, fielded Ron Silvestri's kick at the eight-yard line, broke a tackle, and raced 42 yards before he was brought down by Ken Hadrick.

"I thought I had one," said Reggie Brooks. "Somebody kind of got me from behind and I lost my balance and they caught up with me."

From midfield, the Irish drove to the 30-yard line behind Culver, Derek Brown, Betits, and Tony Brooks.

Culver then booted the middle for one yard, only to see his effort negated on the next play when Brooks was stopped for a three-yard loss after a Miler pitch. Facing third and 12, Miler scrambled in the backfield until he found Brown in the middle of the field for a 14-yard reception and a first down. Then, the backfield took over. Brooks blasted right for two yards. Brooks fought for the left and lunged for three on the next play. Betits took one up the middle for four and one to the right for a big twelve yard gain. Brooks added five more up the middle along with six more for Betits to bring the Irish to a first and goal.

On a play action fake, Miler got the ball away to Irv Smith in the end zone for a touchdown before Ricardo McDonald flattened him. The reception increased the Irish lead to 21-0. Pitt was more effective in its next possession moving the ball from the 20 to midfield despite a powerful pass rush. Berrick bailed away a pass and Eric Jones and John Covington broke through the line defense. We had trouble on offense," said Holtz. "We had no rhythm and we couldn't get the passing game going."

Pitt completed four of 15 passes with one interception and two touchdowns—one on the opening drive of the game and two 40 yards. Bettis had another 100-plus game with 125 yards on 17 carries and two touchdowns. Tony Brooks (63 for 16) and Derek Brown (14 for 9) were tremendous, but the Panthers were at a disadvantage because the Irish defense creates so many opportunities and puts together such a dominating front."

"It was good to win the ball game, but the score was very deceptive. I thought Pitt played a great game of football and we had trouble in the secondary defense. We had trouble on offense," said Holtz. "We had no rhythm and we couldn't get the passing game going."

Notre Dame got lucky after the punt as a Miler interception by Israel was called back by a roughing the passer call against Pitt. The backfield went to work again pounding out yardage up the middle and down the field. On a fourth and one at the eight-yard line, Miler kept on the option and dove across the corner of the end zone for the touchdown.

In the final minutes of the third quarter, Pitt moved the ball to midfield on the legs of Williams only to have a Van Pelt pass intercepted by Oarl Clark on the second play of the new quarter. Clark returned the ball 28 yards before he was tackled by Chris Boyzer, but seconds later Miler's long pass to Tony Smith was intercepted by Blessos Perkins.

The drive had the look of every other Pitt drive in the game until tight end Eric Seaman caught a Van Pelt pass and ran down the sideline for a touchdown. Scott Kaplan converted the point after to put the Panthers on the board and bring the score to 28-7.

Keeping pace, the Irish marched down the field and scored another touchdown of their own. Betits forced his way through the middle, broke a tackle, and rambled 30 yards for the score. The score remained at 35-7 until the final minutes of the game when several big rushing gains brought the Irish to the now familiar first and goal situation. Sophomore quarterback Kevin McGaughey kept on an option for the touchdown and sophomore wide receiver Drew Marsh made the extra point kick.

Hall, Bercich injured; ‘Air Irish’ grounded

By RICH KURZ AND JENNIFER MARTEN

Reggie Brook’s punt block and recovery for a touchdown is something Irish fans haven’t seen much of in the past few years.

As a matter of fact, it has been 13 years since a Notre Dame player blocked a punt and recovered it for a score. The date was January 1, 1970, in the Cotton Bowl versus Houston. Tony Belden blocked the punt and Steve Giey recovered it for a touchdown.

And for those of you who haven’t seen enough rules quirks, here’s another one for you—technically, since Brooks blocked and recovered the kick for a touchdown, it is scored off a 26-yard punt return for a touchdown.

...Irish quarterback Rick Mirer had an uncharacteristically poor performance versus the Panthers. Mirer completed only four of 15 pass attempts, while throwing two interceptions. Another interception was nullified on a roughing the passer call against Pitt.

Mixer did throw for one touchdown, a pass that moved him closer to a school record for touchdown passes in a season. The sophomore has 11 passes for four of 15 pass attempts, while possibly an ankle injury.

Linebacker Pete Bercich did not play the second half due to injury. The extent of the injury was unknown after the game.

Men's soccer defeats MCC foe Butler in team effort

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

Three second half goals lifted the Notre Dame men's soccer team past Butler in a crucial Midwestern Collegiates Conference game Sunday afternoon at Alumni Field.

Each team could create only four shots in a first half dominated by defense. Notre Dame's back line shut down the Bulldogs for most of the game, with one exception. Butler's Noel Kerowin fired a nearly unstoppable shot from 24 yards out to give the Bulldogs the early lead with less than four minutes remaining in the opening period, but that would be all the offense they could muster.

The second half belonged to the Irish. Sophomore Mike Palmer collected a loose ball and fired a shot past Butler goalie Dave McVay to even the score at the 66:20 mark.

Seven minutes later Butler's Matt Morgan was ejected, giving Notre Dame a one-man advantage for the final 17 minutes.

It took less than a minute for the Irish to capitalize on the advantage as freshman Jean Joseph notchted his fifth goal in as many games on rebound shot to put the Irish ahead to stay.

With less than four minutes remaining, freshman Tim Oates pulled McVay away from the net after a season with a 4-1-1 record, and carries their 7-3-1 mark into Friday's game against DePaul. They will also put a five game winning streak on the line against the Blue Demons, but appear confident that the streak is far from over.

"This win should put us first or second in the conference tournament," said senior captain Kenyon Meyer, "but we have six games to go before the tournament and we expect to win them all.

The Irish will spend fall break on the road at Georgetown and the South Carolina Met Life Classic, before completing the 1991 regular season at home against Western Michigan and Kentucky.
