Notre Dame football player arrested at local club

Notre Dame student and football player Troy Ridgley was arrested early Wednesday morning at a local lounge on charges of public intoxication, disorderly conduct and resisting law enforcement, according to the South Bend Police Department.

Ridgley, a 22-year old Sorin Hall junior, refused to leave the kitchen of Studies Lounge, 2306 Mishawaka Ave., after Patrolman Steven Noonan repeatedly told him to return to the main bar, the arrest report said. The arrest occurred at 3:03 a.m.

A lounge patron called the police department, and upon Noonan’s arrival told the officer two white males had “threatened him and threw popcorn all over him,” Noonan said in the report. Noonan then asked partial owner David Marozsan, who was behind the bar, what the problem was. Marozsan directed him to the kitchen, and said the men were not supposed to be there.

Ridgley and Eric Jones, a 21-year-old Sorin Hall junior, and also a football player, were in the kitchen eating popcorn, and Noonan told them to return to the bar.

The men ignored Noonan, the report said, and when he repeated the order, Ridgley threw popcorn at Noonan. He then said he was a friend of another owner, Dick Groth, swore at the officer and refused to leave.

Ridgley then asked to see Groth, who was not in the lounge, the report said.

“Again he stated that I did not understand and that he was not leaving,” Noonan said.

The officer then radioed for back-up units “due to the physical size and disposition of Ridgley,” who plays defensive line for football team.

Marozsan said he could not reach Groth by telephone, and had called another owner, Tim Decker, who directed the men to leave. Jones also repeatedly encouraged Ridgley to leave, the report said.

Noonan told Ridgley he was under arrest, and placed a handcuff on his right wrist.

But Ridgley “began shaking his body back and forth and extending his arms out in an attempt not to be handcuffed,” Noonan said, and “began moving towards the door.”

Back-up officer Cpl. Pat Lahey and Noonan again tried to handcuff Ridgley, then pushed him on the floor, where he continued to struggle.

A scholarship service of questionable legitimacy has hit Notre Dame’s campus, according to Joseph Russo, N.D. director of financial aid.

“Another mass mailing has been taken notice of on campus,” said Russo.

The College Financial Aid Service, whose mailing address is in Washington, D.C., is actually working out of an office in Northbrook, Illinois, said Russo. The college is attempting to detect the financial aid-location service’s legitimacy.

“Where the (student) addresses are secured is uncertain,” said Russo. Notre Dame does not sell student address labels even though their directory is public, he said.

It is not known how many packets have reached students, said Russo. Since he was notified Monday, his office has received calls from dozens of concerned students and parents.

When College Financial Aid Service was contacted for this story, a representative confirmed that they are working out of offices in Northbrook, Illinois.

They said that the offices in Washington D.C. are being renovated. The mail received at those offices is forwarded to Illinois.

They have been in business for six years, according to their customer service.

Up to two thousand applications are received annually, according to their customer service.

Bush pledges aid to former U.S.S.R.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush pledged $645 million in new aid Wednesday to the beleaguered people of the former Soviet Union as they struggle to “make the leap” from communism to democracy and free-market economies, but Bush’s unexpected gesture at a 47-nation conference on emergency relief to the Soviet people could inspire others to hike their own contributions even though Secretary of State James A. Baker III had said there would not be a bidding competition.

In fact, several of the governors participating in the conference came forward later in the day with offers of new assistance, said U.S. officials who spoke on condition of anonymity. The prospective donors and the amounts were not disclosed. At a luncheon, meanwhile, Baker singled out oil-rich Saudi Arabia, Australia and New Zealand for private consultations.

The United States “cannot and will not falter at the moment that these new nations are struggling to embrace the very ideals that America was founded to foster and preserve,” Bush said in opening the conference.

His aid proposal, which must be approved by Congress, marked a shift in emphasis since the new aid would not have to be repaid. Bush told the gathering that the United States has pledged more than $5 billion in various forms of assistance, but most has been in the form of agricultural credits that will benefit U.S. farmers.

“Let us join together to give these people a reason to hope,” Bush said at the ceremonial opening of the two-day summit.

Let us commit ourselves this morning to work in full partnership as we proceed.”

The bulk of the new aid would be used to set up a $500 million account for humanitarian assistance. Another $25 million would purchase badly needed pharmaceuticals, and $20 million will help farmers become private entrepreneurs after the half-century of communism. Money will also go to technical assistance and development projects.

Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin saluted the participants.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion foes massed 70,000 strong Wednesday on the national Mall, marking the 19th anniversary of the Supreme Court’s decision legalizing abortion with a new optimism that the ruling’s days may be numbered.

“Just feel it,” said Vi Randall of Godfrey, Ill., pointing to changes that have swung the high court rightward since its landmark decision in 1973. A day earlier, the court agreed to review a restrictive Pennsylvania abortion law, and activists on both sides of the issue have said the justices may well use that case to undermine the Roe vs. Wade decision.

Anti-abortion activists also rallied in dozens of other cities Wednesday, including crowds of 5,000 in Atlanta who heard Roman Catholic Bishop James Lyke declare that America has been “torn asunder over a law … which makes life cheap.”

Bush said at the ceremonial opening of the two-day summit.

Let us commit ourselves this morning to work in full partnership as we proceed.”

Notre Dame’s Smith elected to alumni council at Harvard graduate school

Roland Smith, executive assistant to the president of Notre Dame, has been elected to the alumni council of Harvard University’s Graduate School of Education.

Smith earned his doctorate in education from Harvard in 1988. He holds a bachelor’s degree from Bowie (Md.) State College and a master’s in public affairs from Indiana University-South Bend.

After working three years with the city of South Bend, Smith came to Notre Dame in 1973 as assistant director of the University’s Upward Bound program. He became director in 1976, and in 1980 he established and became director of the Center for Educational Opportunities, which includes Upward Bound, Educational Talent Search and other precollege projects.

Smith was appointed to his present position in 1988. He advises the University’s president, Father Edward Malloy, on a variety of issues and serves concurrently as associate professional specialist in the Institute for Urban Studies. Most recently, he has been Notre Dame’s liaison in a cooperative effort with Xavier University of New Orleans and Clark Atlanta (Ga.) University to increase the number of African-American students who pursue academic careers.

The Harvard Graduate School of Education Alumni Association is governed by the alumni council, a board of 12 graduates elected to four-year terms. The council meets twice annually to promote the interests and activities of the school’s alumni and students.

GSU announces officer election dates

Elections for Notre Dame’s Graduate Student Union (GSU) officers will be held sometime in March, it was announced at yesterday’s GSU meeting.

Prospective candidates must file for candidacy by mid-February, said GSU President Kurt Mills, although definite dates for both the elections and the candidacy deadline date have not been determined.

In other business, it was announced that a GSU report recommending child care on ND’s campus will be submitted to the ND Board of Trustees on Feb. 6. Members of the GSU Quality of Life committee reported that, based on data from a recent survey of graduate students and an examination of waiting lists at Saint Mary’s child care center, there was a “strong need” for child care on ND’s campus.

A Friday afternoon graduate club gathering will be held at the Wilson Commons from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

GSU officers named Jay Hosler as the new social officer.

Harkin labels rival Clinton as enemy of labor unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tom Harkin on Wednesday cast Hill Clinton as an unlikely to attract traditional Democratic support, drawing an angry retort from the Arkansas governor that the party must change if it wants to win the White House.

The once-united states of the Harkin-Clinton clash came as Democratic presidential hopefuls swarmed the nation's capital wooing labor, mayors and other key political activities. Republicans, meanwhile, picked a conservative senator to lead the right through a 1992 platform fight over abortion. And the White House, President Bush had tentatively picked Feb. 12 — Lincoln's birthday — to formally announce his re-election bid.

Three presidential contenders were Democratic Harkin and Paul Tsongas and Republican Patrick Buchanan — launched new ads aimed at voters in New Hampshire's Feb. 19 presidential primary.

For the Democrats, Wednesday's campaign agenda was a reminder of the many interest groups that demand attention during the presidential primary season.

And a reminder that the incapacity squabbling is getting nastier by the day as New Hampshire's Feb. 18 election approaches. Harkin, an Iowa senator bringing up the rear in New Hampshire polls, is the leading aggressor.

"Is this the kind of guy you want running for president for the Democratic Party?" Harkin asked a Machinists' union gathering as he waved a headline detailing Clinton's support for a free trade agreement with Mexico.

"NO!" was the booming response of the union leaders, who revised Harkin's heated rhetoric and the promise of power in his White House. Harkin also slammed Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey for supporting Bush on Mexico trade, and reminded the union leaders of child-labor violations at Kerrey's restaurants.

"It's time to take off the gloves and tell it like it is," Harkin said. "I'm the only real Democrat.

Indiana House defeats "living will" legislation after emotional debate

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana House defeated on Wednesday a bill that would have allowed people who have living wills to authorize an end to life-sustaining artificially supplied feedings when the people are terminally ill.

After an emotional and reflective 90-minute debate, representatives voted 55-43 against House Bill 2091.

Members of the family of Sue Ann Lawrence, an Indianapolis woman who died while her family tried to have her feedings stopped last year, watched from the House balcony as representatives debated the bill.

Several lawmakers recounted personal and poignant stories of the deaths of close relatives, including two former representatives, during the debate.

Rep. Robert Hayes, a Columbus Democrat who sponsored the measure, said he believed terminally ill or injured people should have the option to die with dignity rather than have their lives prolonged by artificial feedings.

He pointed out that both the U.S. Supreme Court, in the publicized case of Nancy Cruzan of Missouri, and the Indiana Supreme Court, in last year's Lawrence case, had held that artificially supplied food and nutrition was the same as medical treatment that could be withheld under living will statutes.

Hayes' bill would have specified that the artificial supply of food and water through feeding tubes could be cut off, just as extraordinary medical steps can be under existing law.

"This legislation puts the decisions about health care where they should belong — with the individual and the family," said Hayes.

Rep. Vernon Smith, D-Gary, recounted the death of his mother, the Rev. Julia Smith, last summer. He said after she died of kidney problems, he decided to write a living will to order the cessation of extraordinary life-prolonging procedures if he became terminally ill.

"If it comes to the point I'm going to be in a vegetative state, let me pass," he said, holding up his living will. "That is my decision. That is not something imposed on me."

Rep. Vanessa Summers Barnes, D-Indianapolis, said her father, former Rep. Joseph Summers, had made it clear he didn't want extraordinary life-prolonging procedures before he died of cancer last year.

"He let us know he would rather die than have a quality of life he didn't know anything about," she said.

But others told similar stories and gave them different interpretations.

Germany turns back nuclear shipment

BONN, Germany (AP) — The German government has seized a load of American nuclear components being shipped to Libya through Germany, a government spokesman said today.

Dieter Vogel, the spokesman, would not specify what was in the shipment other than saying the components were "dual use" items for a nuclear program. He would not say whether he meant a civilian or military nuclear program.

However, the government appeared to act very quickly and to consider the shipment very sensitive. Libya is widely thought to be trying to develop a nuclear weapons program.

Vogel would not say where the components came from in the United States, but he said they would be returned to the United States. He said intelligence agencies tipped customs officers to the shipment.

Vogel would not say when the shipment was seized. However, he disclosed it while informing reporters that the Cabinet voted today to approve a change in export regulations aimed at Libya.

The new rule prohibits "sensitive" items from being transported through Germany to Libya "when the government has reason to believe these items are to be used for arms purposes."

Asked why Libya had been singled out, Vogel said, "Because it's a special case."

The government is still smarting from the 1987 scandal in which German were found to have sold a poison gas factory at Rabta. The German government initially denied the U.S.-lodged allegations, but later confirmed them.

German companies also have been implicated as suppliers of Iraq's nuclear and chemical weapons programs.

Hoosier pro-lifers march in South Bend

(Ap) - About 450 anti-abortion activists gathered in South Bend Wednesday to protest the 19th anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision making abortion legal.

The St. Joseph County Right to Life's annual march around the federal building was just one day after the nation's highest court allowed the abortion issue to reopen.

The court agreed Tuesday to decide a Pennsylvania case that would place some of the most stringent restrictions on abortions in the nation.

While the justices said they will try to focus only on the Pennsylvania case, some people believe it could be a step toward overturning the 1973 Roe v. Wade case.

"It's no longer a matter of 'if' but a matter of 'when," said Julianne Marley, executive director of the National Abortion Rights League's Indiana affiliate.

Abortion opponents won a battle in Fort Wayne on Tuesday, when a federal judge approved an annual march in front of the city's only abortion clinic.

U.S. District Judge William Lee agreed to modify a permanent injunction that had prohibited protests in front of the Fort Wayne Women's Health Organization Clinic by those involved with Northeast Indiana Rescue.

Because of that injunction, the city wouldn't allow the parade to pass the clinic last year, during the group's 18th annual march.

When the city denied the request by parade organizers again this year, the group went to court.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's decision to review a restrictive Pennsylvania abortion law this election year thrusts an emotionally charged issue into the presidential race, and some say it could affect the outcome.

The high court plans to hear arguments in April and a ruling is due just before the Democratic and Republican nominating conventions, assuring that abortion will be on the minds of voters and party strategists.

Polls show most Americans support legalized abortion, Democrats, who are strongly identified with that position, view the coming court battle as a political opportunity that could easily touch on the race for the White House.

"This is a big weight on the side of the scale for George Bush," said Geoff Garin, a Democratic pollster. "A lot of people think he has come to his pro-life views by political calculation. So there's a character problem, but beyond that he's just out of step. He's been for constitutional amendments to make abortion illegal.

Some Republicans concede the renewed focus on abortion could put their party on the defensive.

Charles Black, a Bush campaign adviser, said the issue has been a wash historically.

"There's no proof that pro-life gets you more votes than pro-life," Black said. He added: "Given the state of the economy, this is not going to be a decisive issue."

On Wednesday, the 19th anniversary of the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling that legalized abortion, Bush called the anti-abortion movement "a righteous cause." He told participants in the "March for Life" that "I am out there with you in spirit."

He called the number of abortions unconscionable and pledged to continue fighting congressional attempts to federally fund abortions.

The five major contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination, all of them in favor of legal abortion, were scheduled to speak Wednesday night at a National Abortion Rights Action League dinner.

NARAL released the transcripts of four TV ads scheduled to start next week on CNN and some local stations.

In one, a woman discusses her back-alley abortion. In another, a retired Marine says a botched illegal abortion killed his mother when he was 4. The two others paint a grim picture of the consequences if the court overturned Roe vs. Wade.

Democrats agree that the economy is a primary voter concern. But they also play up the potential significance of a court ruling perceived as ending or seriously threatening legal abortion.

Mudd supporters say he wasn't part of Lincoln murder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Descendants of Samuel Mudd asked the Army to clear his name Wednesday, 127 years after the doctor who set John Wilkes Booth's broken leg was convicted as a conspirator in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln.

Today's decision by the Army Board for Correction of Military Records will put an end to a case that took 127 years to conclude.

The case was brought by Mudd's family and his supporters, who argued that Mudd was innocent of any wrongdoing.

The Army convened a five-member panel in Washington Tuesday to decide whether Mudd should be exonerated. The panel's decision is expected to be announced within weeks.

The case was reopened in 1991 after a review of evidence suggested that Mudd may have been wrongly convicted.

In 1865, Mudd was convicted of conspiracy to assassinate President Lincoln. He was sentenced to life in prison, but was released in 1869 after serving two years.

The case was one of the most controversial in American history, and has been a source of controversy for many years.

Mudd's supporters argue that he was innocent and that his conviction was based on false evidence.

The Army's decision is expected to be a significant victory for Mudd's family and supporters, who have been working for years to clear his name.

The case has also been a source of controversy for the Army, which has been criticized for its handling of the case.

The Army's decision is expected to be announced within weeks, and will likely be a major victory for Mudd's family and supporters.

Job cuts could haunt economy

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors, 74,000 jobs. IBM, 49,000 jobs. Citicorp, 37,000 jobs. All three of these companies announced job cutbacks Tuesday, bringing the total number of layoffs announced this week to 13,900 jobs.

Unlike one-time layoffs of the past, often prompted by plant closings, these job cuttings will spread over several years and could haunt the economy long after the recession ends.

"The recovery will be limited by it," said Ken Oye, a former economist at the Conference Board, a New York-based business research group. "It is not going to come with the kind of bang with which we have seen recoveries in the past."

Corporations apparently believe they are being more humane by announcing their cuts far in advance, experts said Wednesday. They hope the employees will take early retirement or opt for other voluntary severance plans, limiting the need for layoffs.

But in the meantime, the drawn-out job cuts could have many damaging effects on the economy, such as hurting consumer confidence.

"It's fairly demoralizing if you know there's a small probability you're going to be laid off. You're going to cut back on your spending," said economist Doug Handler of Dun & Bradstreet Corp.

Consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of economic activity, must pick up for any economic recovery to accelerate.

"We had those waves of layoffs in October and November. You saw what happened to consumer confidence — it just plunged," said James Fralick, an economist with the investment firm Morgan, Stanley & Co. That led to one of most disappointing Christmas shopping seasons in years.

The announcement Tuesday by United Technologies Corp. of 13,900 job cuts through 1995 heightened the problem. Fralick said. It followed similar announcements by Citicorp, International Business Machines, General Motors Corp. and Sears, Roebuck and Co., all leaders in their industries.

Most of the jobs to be eliminated under the plans will never come back, said economist Richard Hoey of Citibank. "The only beneficiary of this is the unemployment operator."

And another impact of the cutbacks is they will limit the number of new employees hired by these companies.

"It's going to be a horrible job market for new entrants and the people who lost their jobs," Fralick said.

Democrats introduce trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of House Democrats on Wednesday introduced a bill aimed at eliminating Japan's trade surplus with the United States and highlighting differences with President Bush over the trade issue.

The United States this year will buy $42 billion more in goods and services from Japan than it will sell to that country, a gap the bill's sponsors say is due mostly to unfair restrictions Japan places on U.S. products.

"Our bill is designed to open the Japanese market in order to fight Japanese protectionism and to give American workers and American firms the right to compete overseas and the ability to operate without unfair competition," said the measure's primary sponsor, Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Renewed debate on trade with Japan comes amid increased tension between the two countries, with harsh rhetoric on both sides.

In a statement, Gephardt accused Bush of "cold-war use of currency conversion" that prompted his most recent trade talks in Japan last year. "The trip was right, the purpose was right ... But the results were wrong," he said.

The act increases federal funding to fight Japanese protectionism and to give American workers and American firms the right to compete overseas and the ability to operate without unfair competition. The act will for the first time allow American college students to study abroad for up to two years.

Millions of them lost good jobs during the 1970s and 1980s, and countless others took pay and benefit cuts.

Today, corporate middle-managers, professionals and technicians also are feeling the effects of recession and structural change. Almost daily, we read about another matter of supply and demand. On the demand side, there has been a shortage of good jobs in the military sector; that is, jobs that are reserved for college graduates about to embark on their careers, prospects are much dimmer today than they were yesterday. Hence, the paucity of job openings.

Corporations apparently believe they are being more humane by announcing their cuts far in advance, experts said Wednesday. They hope the employees will take early retirement or opt for other voluntary severance plans, limiting the need for layoffs.

But in the meantime, the drawn-out job cuts could have many damaging effects on the economy, such as hurting consumer confidence.

"It's fairly demoralizing if you know there's a small probability you're going to be laid off. You're going to cut back on your spending," said economist Doug Handler of Dun & Bradstreet Corp.

Consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of economic activity, must pick up for any economic recovery to accelerate.

"We had those waves of layoffs in October and November. You saw what happened to consumer confidence — it just plunged," said James Fralick, an economist with the investment firm Morgan, Stanley & Co. That led to one of most disappointing Christmas shopping seasons in years.

The announcement Tuesday by United Technologies Corp. of 13,900 job cuts through 1995 heightened the problem. Fralick said. It followed similar announcements by Citicorp, International Business Machines, General Motors Corp. and Sears, Roebuck and Co., all leaders in their industries.

Most of the jobs to be eliminated under the plans will never come back, said economist Richard Hoey of Citibank. "The only beneficiary of this is the unemployment operator."

And another impact of the cutbacks is they will limit the number of new employees hired by these companies.

"It's going to be a horrible job market for new entrants and the people who lost their jobs," Fralick said.
Travels in Ireland reveal country's violence, turmoil

Dear Editor:

In the days before and after Christmas, a series of bombs exploded around the city of Belfast in Northern Ireland, causing widespread destruction. Little news was given to these bombs, as a matter of fact, the news that was given to the American people was the British Army is again put into the unpleasant situation of being the saviours of the inhabitants of Northern Ireland. This is just another method of justifying the war and methods employed by the British Army.

In my recent trip to Northern Ireland I received a first hand view of the situation. I found that the spirit of the people in the towns of Londonderry (called Derry in the Republic of Ireland) and Belfast has been hurt, but is not destroyed. I found that most people are concerned with the day to day struggle with keeping or even getting a job. The war is rarely mentioned by the layperson, due to fear of possible retaliations by some group including the British Army. Workers are afraid to wear religious items since this would present possible targets for extremists groups. Recently a law has been passed barring the displaying of any religious symbol on campus through letters, and the expression of varying opinions on campus through letters is encouraged.

Northern Ireland is so difficult for them to adjust to urban warfare. Thus the police (BUC) are stationed to be “spotters.” I received several questions most of the time by the soldiers, but a few times I got a thorough body search at the road blocks, especially if I was coming to the center of town from the West of Belfast, the Falls Road area. The soldiers are particularly aware of anyone from this area. The Falls Road runs through the strong Nationalistic Catholic areas of Belfast.

During the week after Christmas the British Army brought reserves into Belfast from the Ulster Defense Regiment (UDR). This mainly protestant detachment, which explains why it can not patrol into Catholic areas, has been called into question.

A number of UDR soldiers have been revealed to be members of the Ulster Freedom Fighters (UFF). The UFF is the loyalist (Northern Ireland loyal to United Kingdom) equivalent to the Irish Republican Army. The targets of the loyalists are the Catholic areas of Belfast, and the British Army.

In my touring of Belfast I found the conditions in the West Belfast area to be deplorable. There is widespread unemployment, in some areas 80 percent are unemployed, and the houses are poorly maintained. The upkeep on the houses is too expensive if you do not have a job.

The latest casualty was a young man working two jobs in order to make ends meet. The Loyalist shot into the mobile vehicle where the young man worked selling food. The man had absolutely no connection with any republican movement. His mother took the news very badly saying that the devil was running the minds of the people that had killed her son.

The targets of the Irish Republican Army have been the British Government and anyone that works with the British Government. Such was the case of the seven killed workers in Cookstown. Until recently the IRA have issued warnings before shooting “ collaborators” telling these people to stop helping the British Government or suffer the consequences. The idea is to hurt the British economically, but at times one has to question the goals of the IRA.

Some of the communities have put together Community Service Programs to help train and educate the community members. One such program is the Spring Hill Community Service. It is supervised by Father Des Wilson, who works relentlessly to help his community develop a sense of dignity and pride. Father Wilson has been to Notre Dame in the past to speak about those community service centers.

The people that I talked to at Spring Hill had a lot of personal ambitions. These people were warm and friendly. They were excited by learning new skills. Other Community Service Centers certainly are needed to help train the large number of unemployed.

For more than twenty years there has been a foreign army posted to keep the peace. The British Army does by using counter-insurgency methods to break the spirit of the people. I found this out when I saw a soldier train his weapon on children coming out of school. This leaves one feeling very uneasy, but to the people of West Belfast it is routine. They say we can deal with it now. We have the power that the IRA needs.

The future of Northern Ireland is not clear. Talks with some of the political parties are scheduled to begin soon, excluding Sinn Fein the political arm of the IRA. Sinn Fein is not allowed to attend since they will not renounce violence as a means to achieving reform. However, do not expect these talks to accomplish anything. The parties are so entrenched with their own agenda that almost none of the parties will compromise.

The Social Democrats Labor Party (SDLP) seems to be willing to bend the most. It is willing to terminate the hope of a United Ireland. Many of the people in Northern Ireland are starting to question the SDLP’s legitimate representation of the people. It is sure that until the British Army leaves, the Unionists will do their best to stall talks, since any agreement will only hurt the power that the Unionists have.

Poverty, the homeless, drug addiction, unemployment. These problems may not seem prevalent on the Notre Dame campus, but in reality they are just around the corner.

The Urban Plunge, run by the Center for Social Concerns, is a "four-hour immersion into the inner-city, observing and/or working with individuals, agencies and parishes which work with the homeless, poor, and persons in drug rehabilitation."

The program's goal is to "allow students to experience and learn for themselves the problems of injustice, poverty and apathy in the urban areas of the United States."

Pat McHugh agrees. The Notre Dame junior participated in the Urban Plunge program this year because he wanted to get involved with social concerns in his hometown, Atlanta, Ga.

McHugh's 48-hour Plunge was led by Dewey Merritt, a civil rights leader in the 1960s who introduced his group to Dr. Gerald Darley, another civil rights activist who works with the homeless, poor, and persons in drug rehabilitation.

Both men were just phenomenal writers," explained McHugh.

The group's itinerary included a visit to a homeless shelter. "It was really interesting for me because I pictured it to be full of hams and derelicts, but instead there were lots of 30-year-old, good looking, strong, working men," explained McHugh.

He emphasized that many of these people had a job or were looking for a job and simply needed a place to stay. "These guys aren't dumb...they just don't have any place to stay.

The group visited a center in the heart of Atlanta where they participated in a variety of activities, such as basketball for children. Activities such as these are run with the hope of keeping young people away from drugs and street gangs. One group had a 15-year-old girl who was pregnant with her third child.

"You hear about things like that as a statistics, but to look at it right in front of you..." McHugh said.

McHugh's Plunge group spent time at housing projects in the Atlanta area. In addition to visiting Techwood, a rundown project near Georgia Tech, they saw Hutsville, this area, located under the bridge, is filled with small shacks built by and lived in by the homeless.

"It was pretty amazing," said McHugh.

"Above the bridge you see the Atlanta skyline, and below all you see are huts."

McHugh was very shocked by his visit to the housing projects. He explained that to get there, you must travel on one of the most beautiful roads in Atlanta.

"You go over a hill and it's like you're descending into hell. It's dirty, and there's garbage and kids everywhere. If you didn't go over the hill you wouldn't know it was there.

They attended the Carter Presidential Library to hear speakers for "Project for Atlanta," which is working to solve social problems in the city. President Carter spoke and explained the many problems facing Atlanta's inner cities.

"It was funny, in a really sick way. They really didn't say anything."

Urban Plunge allows students to experience inner-city problems.

"The group was very impressed by the Carter Plunge," explained Hardgrove.

Hardgrove said. "The group was very impressed by the Carter Plunge," explained Hardgrove. "They really didn't say anything."

"We all have to make decisions as voters, business leaders, or politicians. People have good intentions, but that's not enough. Many people treat the symptoms but don't fix the problem," McHugh added.

"I decided to do Urban Plunge because I felt that a good way for me to understand the poor was to see the poverty which is prevalent in my own city," Hardgrove said.

Hardgrove's Plunge group spent time touring the city and saw both wealthy and poor sections of Chicago. They worked in a soup kitchen, visited several parishes in different parts of the city and talked to priests about the problem of gangs, crime and homelessness in the inner-city.

"They spoke with the principal of a Catholic grammar school about the problems of education within the city. "She basically told us there is almost no hope. They try to keep the tuition low, but although many inner-city families want their children to attend Catholic schools, they can't afford it. After they've paid the tuition they can't offer much else," explained Hardgrove.

"Also, many families cannot afford the high tuition of Catholic high schools, and kids that were able to attend Catholic high schools," she added.

Urban Plunge participants must attend an orientation workshop prior to taking part in the program, write a reflection paper and attend a follow-up meeting after the Plunge is completed. The credit in Theology is given to each student who successfully completes all requirements.

"We're not trying to make social workers out of everyone. I hope that they (the participants) will remember what they saw and find time in their lives to do something," Cunningham said.
Fernandez changes style, dominates Sabatini in Australian semis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini, inspired by new coach Jared Fish and exasperated by Fernanda Gomes, is finding it difficult to remember the 20-year-old Spaniard tried in 1990 U.S. Open.

In contrast to Seles’ 6-2, 6-2 demolitions of Arantxa Sanchez Vicario from the baselines, Fernandez mixed play service ace as well as Sabatini did in winning the 1990 U.S. Open.

Fernandez, a 20-year-old Floridian, said she thought about the straight-sets loss to No. 3 Sabatini two weeks ago but concentrated on tune-up tournament in Sydney.

“I had to do something drastically different. I tried to attack a lot and come in a lot,” Fernandez said. “I played good throughout my whole life, and it’s hard to change my mentality.”

Fernandez figured the key to beating Sabatini was to follow her example and try to hit the ball too short."Sabatini said. “I was probably surprised by how little I was doing. I was probably surprised by the games I allowed. She changed her strategy from Sabatini with an aggressive and accurate attack to win 6-1, 6-4 in the baseline affair.

The high moment for Sanchez Vicario came in the first game of the tiebreak when she broke Seles to love. But Seles broke right back and, at 2-2 went on a streak to win seven straight games.

Seles had more confidence as the match went on, and she started hitting more winners,” Sanchez Vicario said. “I have to improve my serve to control the points better than her.

Seles expected a much tougher match against Sanchez Vicario than on a similar hard court, where she barely beat Sanchez Vicario 6-7 (5-7), 6-4, 6-4 in the semifinals.

Seles said. "At least I was happy with myself." She's by far the best defensive player in tennis, and she has a lot of power and precision, tattooing the lines repeatedly with her 20-year-old Spaniard tried in vain to respond.

Seles, 0-8 against Sanchez Vicario, will have an easier time of it if she can get past her.

The mystery of Seles has nothing to do with her tennis, as she showed once more with an unequivocal baseline bash of Sanchez Vicario.

Seles, 18, started every tac- tic Sanchez Vicario tried in a one-hour match that was as straightforward as Seles’ grinding groundstrokes.

Nets win fifth straight at home

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 37 points and established a club career rebound record as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the New York Knicks 119-109 Friday night for their third straight victory.

Barkley's 14 rebounds give him 6,642, four more than Billy Cunningham and the total for Cunningham and Chamberlain doesn't include stats with the Philadelphia Warriors.

Barkley scored the first 10 points of the third period and had 17 in the quarter as the game winning streak at home.

Bosio, Gott sign one-year contracts

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Bosio and Mike Gott, two players agreed to one-year contracts Wednesday, leaving 124 players remaining in salary arbitration, and free agent righthander Scott Bankhead signed with the Cincinnati Reds.

Meanwhile, Bert Blyleven agreed to a minor-league contract with the California Angels. Blyleven, 38, didn't pitch last season and became a free agent after the World Series, can't be brought up to the majors until May 1 because he signed after the Jan. 8 deadline. If he makes the Angels roster, he would get a $300,000 salary and the chance to earn $700,000 in performance bonuses.

Barkley scored 37 points to lead the 76ers past the New York Knicks 119-109 at the Spectrum.

Bulls 115, Hornets 112

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan scored 23 points and his tie-breaking three-point play with 0.8 seconds left gave the Chicago Bulls their 11th straight victory over the Hornets since Charlotte won the first-ever meeting between the two teams.

The loss was the Hornets' fifth straight.

Celtics 107, Magic 95

BOSTON — Reggie Lewis' 14 third-quarter points and a 14-0 fourth-quarter run vaulted the Boston Celtics into first place in the Atlantic Division with a 107-95 victory over the Orlando Magic Wednesday night.

Trailing 52-43 at halftime and 57-49 with 9:23 left in the third quarter, the Celtics went on a 16-2 run sparked by Lewis' 10 points. It gave them a 65-59 lead with 5:11 remaining in the period and they didn't trail after that.

Cavaliers 119, Pacers 115

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Larry Nance sank two baseline jumpers in the final 1:13 as the Cleveland Cavaliers overcame a five-point deficit in overtime and beat the Indiana Pacers 119-115 on Wednesday night.

Bonds to give Pirates one last chance

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bobby Bonilla has left Pittsburgh and Barry Bonds may be on the verge of leaving, but Bonds apparently will give the Pirates one more chance to sign him to a long-term contract.

Bonds said he will give the Pirates until the end of spring training—and no longer—to extend his contract. If they don't, he'll take the same free agency route as Bonilla, who signed a record $29 million, five-year contract with the New York Mets.

"I don't negotiate before spring training," Bonds said. "I am not going to negotiate after that. If they want to do something, they have to go to do it before the end of spring training."

"They're agent, Rod Wright, talked Wednesday with Pirates interim general manager Cam Bonifay, but neither side wanted to discuss specifics. And neither said whether progress was made.

"I've learned from Bobby's negotiations to keep my mouth shut," Bonds said. "I'm not going to go through what he did..."

Barry Bonds

I'm not going to talk about it now and I'm not going to talk about it (during spring training). I'm just going to concentrate on playing baseball and doing well.

However, while former general manager Larry Doughty indicated last month that Bonilla's huge contract made Bonds all but unobtainable to the Pirates, team president Mark Sauer appears ready for one final effort.

Doughty said he's tried to trade Bonds rather than lose him free agency, but received no offer.

Bonds, who has lost in arbitration the last two years, has filed for $5 million and the Pirates countered with a record offer of $4 million.

Nine Pirates have filed for arbitration, but outfielder Gary Varsho avoided a hearing Wednesday by agreeing to a one-year contract worth $332,500. Varsho, who made $155,000 last year, filed for $400,000 and was offered $275,000. He can earn another $52,500 in performance bonuses.

Bonds says he won't repeat Bonilla's year-long public negotiation with Pittsburgh.

"I'm not going to be a pinea pig for the Pirates," Bonds said. "I'm not going to be put into that Bobby Bonilla situation. If the negotiations get serious, then the media will know about it. They'll probably know about it before I do."

Royester leaves

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mazio Royester, who became one of the third Southern Cal sophomores to surpass the 1,000-yard mark in rushing when he gained 1,168 yards in 1990, announced Wednesday he will leave USC to enter the NFL draft.

Royester, who has one year of eligibility remaining, started five games and saw action in two others as a junior last fall. He was hampered by a knee sprain early in the season, but wasn't used late in the year despite being healthy.

Royester, a 6-foot-1, 195-pounder, finished the 1991 season with 542 yards rushing and seven touchdowns. Overall, he is 16th on Southern Cal's career rushing list with 1,760 yards.

"It's a tough decision to leave USC, but I want to try my hand at the next level and I feel now is the right time," said Royester in a statement issued by the school. "I know I'm taking a risk, but I have confidence in my ability. I've had doubts about my ability since I was in high school."

Said Smith, "I wish Mazio well and hope it works out well for him. He had a fine career here. We'll do everything we can to help the pros in their evaluation of him so he can get drafted as high as possible. I just hope he comes back to school to finish up his degree, because that's the bottom line."
UNLV players react to regent's comments

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV basketball players, upset with a reported comment from Nevada Regent Carolyn Sparks, responded by taiping photos of her to the back of their shorts during practice Tuesday.

Sparks allegedly said she was tired of UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian recruiting "ghetto kids." Sparks denied using the term in a racial sense and said she was baited into the telephone conversation by Les Meilke, identified only as one of Tarkanian's backers.

Forward Evan Gray used an explosive in referring to Sparks Tuesday.

"What it means is that all of them (regents) think that way," Gray said. "Just happened to be one of them." Forward Bobby Joyce took credit for the phone idea, tearing the regent's mug shot from Rebel game programs.

"If she said it, she deserved it," Joyce said. "If she didn't, then we owe her an apology. But most likely she said it, so I'm not going to apologize either way." Sparks said she only told Meilke's motives. "If Sparks always talked about bringing in these ghetto kids and giving them a chance."

No. 7 Connecticut survives scare
Huskies hold off Friars in OT; Rebels upset No. 15 Tide

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Chris Smith scored 23 points and Scott Burrell added 25 as No. 7 Connecticut held Providence without a field goal in overtime for a 97-86 victory Wednesday night.

The Friars missed 13 shots in the extra period and managed just five points in remaining the only Big East yet to have a conference win this season.

The Huskies (14-1, 5-1), who tied Villanova for first place in the Big East, were 11-0-16 from the free throw line in overtime, while Providence added to its overtime woes with a 5-19 effort from the free throw line.

Mississippi 78, No. 15 Alabama 77
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Joe Harvell scored 32 points as Mississippi beat No. 15 Alabama 78-77 on Wednesday night, the Crimson Tide's third straight loss.

The Rebels (8-7, 1-3), the last Southeastern Conference team to win a league game this season, took control early in the second half with a 21-4 run sparked by a wave of 3-pointers.

Harvell made three 3s and Keith Watkins and James Bailey had one each as Ole Miss erased a 35-30 deficit and took a 51-39 lead with 12:23 left in the game.

No. 9 Arkansas 75, Florida 62
FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Todd Day became Arkansas' all-time leading scorer Wednesday night and the ninth-ranked Razorbacks held off Florida 75-62.

Lee Mayberry and Oliver Miller combined for 27 second-half points for Arkansas (16-3, 5-1), which remained in first place in the Southeastern Conference's West Division, and the points were needed to offset the play of Florida's Stacey Poole, who got inside for 22 points, and Scott Stewart, who scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half.

No. 6 Ohio St. 72, Minnesota 69
COLUMBUS, Ohio — Jim Jackson scored 21 points, including four free throws in the final 29 seconds, as sixth-ranked Ohio State overcame a late 3-point flurry by Minnesota for a 72-69 victory Wednesday night, stretching the Buckeyes winning streak to 10 in a row.

Ohio State, struggling with its shooting all night, hit more free throws (22 of 33) than it did field goals (22 of 53 for 42 percent).

Mark Baker added 15 points and Lawrence Funderburke 13 for Ohio State, which moved to 12-2 overall and 4-1 in the Big Ten Conference.

Hendon to protest at Super Bowl

Irish fell to Louisville, 84-81. Since then, they have gone 5-4 and have a great deal of experience.

"The road games gave us a chance to come together as a team," MacLeod said. "The players were able to get a feel for each other, and they developed a lot of poise and mental toughness."

Against Missouri, the Irish are going to have to use the experience they gained on the road and play up to their potential on both ends of the court to leave the JACC with a victory.

Due to a university computer malfunction, DART was not available Tuesday and part of Wednesday. To offset any conveniences to students the DART period will extend 1 day to include Friday Jan. 24th. DART lines will be open through midnight on the 24th.

Indians promise peaceful protests at Super Bowl

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An American Indian leader said Wednesday he expects a peaceful and dignified demonstration against the use of Indian mascots and nicknames when protesters gather at the Super Bowl Sunday.

Clyde Bellecourt, a founder of the American Indian Movement, said he anticipates hundreds of Indians and others will demonstrate outside the Metrodome before and during the game between the Washington Redskins and Buffalo Bills.

"We're going to let the world know we're not going to tolerate this kind of behavior," Bellecourt said. "John Wayne is dead, and it's time for this kind of racism to go with it."

The demonstration is to include a rally and a one-mile march to the Metrodome, where tepees and a speaking area will be set up near one of the stadium's gates. The demonstration at the stadium is to start about three hours before gametime.

David Dobrotna, Minneapolis deputy police chief, said the protesters will be allowed to demonstrate despite requests by police connected with the Super Bowl to stop the demonstration. He refused to name those who asked that the protest be stopped.

Dobrotna said his biggest concern is making sure the demonstration is peaceful. The city will have more than 350 police officers on duty during an 18-hour period surrounding the game, he said. The NFL and several corporate sponsors also will have their own security measures.

The protest will be similar to those AIM staged outside the Metrodome at the 1991 World Series between the Minnesota Twins and the Atlanta Braves. The protest is particularly aimed at the Redskin nickname.

Bellecourt said his "one of the most racist and derogatory names in sports."

Bellecourt's comments came one day before the first National Summit on Racism in Sports and the Media opens for a four-day run in Minneapolis. Bellecourt said he hopes the participants in the AIM-sponsored program will develop a national strategy on how to stop the use of Indian nicknames.

AIM also has planned to protest in Minneapolis Friday at an NFL awards ceremony and Saturday at the Minnesota college basketball game, where they'll demonstrate against Illinois' Fighting Illini nickname and Chief Illiniwek mascot.
Funeral for OSU player arranged

LYNW OOD, Calif. (AP) — Funeral services for Oregon State guard Earnest Killum will be held Saturday at Lynwood High School, where Killum starred.

Killum died Monday at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital, three days after suffering a major stroke. He was 20.

The Oregon State team will attend the services. It was announced Tuesday that the Beavers' game against Washington State would be postponed to allow the team to go to the funeral.

Killum sat out the 1990-91 season because of academic problems. After suffering a mild stroke last July, he had a blood clot removed from his left arm.

He was cleared to return to the Oregon State team less than a month ago and averaged 8.7 points in seven games.

Dr. Carl Orfuss, a neurologist at Daniel Freeman who treated Killum, said that his death was not related to playing basketball.
