Rodgers-Rose: Blacks must recognize identity

By NICOLE MCGRATH

"You should be telling her the obvious," Jeremy Rifkin asked his listeners Wednesday night in a lecture called "Uniting the Black Race to Move Forward into the 90s." African-Americans have to function in situations where their identity as an African-American is denied, she said.

Rodgers-Rose stressed that: "We are, where we come from and who our real enemies must be recognized." Something is missing from me," said Rodgers-Rose when she spoke of experiences in college. "I was encouraged not to major in education for fear of supporting black identity.

Rodgers-Rose majored in sociology. She found that without any kind of concentration in education, she could not teach nor find a job.

Rodgers-Rose went back to school. In 1964, she went on to be the first black faculty member at a college in Minnesota.

"I am a Black African; so happy to be born into my African self. I don't allow anyone to question who I am," she said.

"I have seen us do a 360 degree turning away from self," she said. According to Rodgers-Rose, she believes African-Americans have been diminished since 1963.

When she was at the March of Washington in 1963, Rodgers-Rose said, she was a big joke. By the time Martin Luther King Jr. said his "I Have a Dream" speech, it was all for the public.

But Rodgers-Rose said, "Before you say too many negative things, look at some of the good things he (Marion Barry) did in his past."

She said she looks to your elders whom have wisdom to pass onto you.

Having a sense of where we came from is important. "I never want to forget how I got to Drew University," said Rodgers-Rose.

"Read your history; it's real. Ask the one who suffered the pain of what it meant to have your hopes up and then they take the vote away from you," said Rodgers-Rose in reference to the period after the Civil War.

There are parallels to be made to that time period and the one today after the 1960s Civil Rights Movement, she said.

About forty years ago, two-parent families made up 75% of black families while today it is close to 30%, according to Dr. Rodgers-Rose.

Important to note is that by the year 2000, the workforce will be heavily composed of women and people of color. According to Rodgers-Rose, today whites make up 14% of the world's population. "We are the majority. We are not minority," she said.

"We are living in a country more racist than ever before," said Rodgers-Rose. She pointed out that men such as David Duke were only the "tip of the iceberg." With the spotlight on the Dahmer trial, she said that no one is focusing on the pain of those victims' families.

"Movements and changes always come from the younger generation," said Rodgers-Rose. According to her, this country only understands massive civil disobedience and it is coming.

Rodgers-Rose said that changes have to begin within the community. For college students, treating each other with respect and living by Maat, an Egyptian term which means respect, will lead to positive racial relations.

We have to be self-confident, said Rodgers-Rose. With the fastest growing population of AIDS being college students, she urged being self-confident enough to ask your partner about safety sex.

"Do not let anyone tell you, you do not come from a great past," said Rodgers-Rose. "The most important thing you can do in your life is gain self-knowledge."

Rifkin transforms environmental crisis to personal responsibility

"Why should I be telling you the obvious?" Jeremy Rifkin asked his listeners Wednesday night in a lecture that transformed the environmental crisis into an issue of personal responsibility.

For Rifkin, the consequences of civilization's effect on the environment are beyond obvious. As a result, he has dedicated his time to making such concepts obvious to the rest of society.

In his last lecture, "The Greenhouse: Doomsday Scenario," Rifkin said "the greatest display of power in the history of the earth has been our ability to entirely alter the biosphere of a planet in this solar system."

He said that the majority of civilization's effect on this planet has taken place in the last 100 years. "We are producing and consuming faster than nature can recycle the pollution that's the environmental crisis."

"Our production schedules based on our profit and consumption basis that bears no relationship to nature's own," said Rifkin. "If we think it's barbarean to think of rainforests as a resource, why would it be any different in our social relationships, political relationships, economic relationships and our planetary relationships?" asked Rifkin.

Along with changing our current relationship with the environment to one of personal responsibility, Rifkin articulated a new concept for progress: enhance the well-being of the community, steward the resources, protect the rights of future generations of humans and other creatures; as opposed to the old concept of "more production and greater wealth."

In terms of immediate action, Rifkin is planning an all out campaign to increase awareness that there is an alternative to beef.

"Cattle are the number one environmental threat on the planet today," he said. "Beef results in cancer, strokes and diabetes; cattle are the number one environmental threat to deforestation in South America, the desertification of Sub-Saharan Africa and the erosion of the western range of the United States."

He added that 10 percent of all the grass grown in America is grown for cattle and livestock, not for people. According to Rifkin, in this age of growth, more people go to bed hungry (27%) than in any other period.

You can give up 50 percent of the beef and help restore the planet, feed the poor and restore our health.

As for a world view, Rifkin claims a "total leap of consciousness by this generation" will be necessary to stop the global environmental crisis.

"Are all living creatures just matter for manipulation, do we see ourselves as just an instrument of production-or do we resolutely reorient our relationships to each other as fellow creatures on this living earth?" Rifkin asked.
A new wager: Christianity is insanity

Christianity must be the most ridiculous thing ever invented. The amazing thing is the influence it has upon masses of people throughout this world. There is no evidence that absolutely proves the existence of God, but people still believe. I ask people why and how they could possibly believe in a God. People always tell me the same thing, they have faith. Everything about God comes down to faith, not evidence. In other words faith is, "the state of being mentally ill, because of reliance on illogical reasoning."

I was talking to a friend, and asked how he could have faith in anything. He tried to explain faith to me, but that did not work. Then he brought up Pascal's Wager, which basically states that if a person believes in a God, and he is right, he receives a finite time on Earth but an infinite time of happiness in heaven. If he is wrong, he just dies. The person that does not believe in a God, regardless of if he is right, receives only finite happiness. If he is wrong, he receives eternal damnation.

I feel that God would understand that I have done my best in life. If you do believe in a God and you do have faith, then I feel that God would understand. I believe an all-knowing God would be happy with how I have lived my life. I have made my own wager on life and all my life I have lived trying to learn as much as I possibly could. I have done my best in school, at work, and in life. I feel that God would understand that I have done my best in life.

If you believe in a God, you do believe in a God. But I have had written once. I received a letter from a priest that said, "I do hope someone prays to save your soul, or you will get a big surprise when you die and find yourself in a place that you damned." I scoffed when I read that, because instead of Pascal's Wager, I have made my own wager on life after death. I was raised a Catholic, and all my life I have been told that God is an all forgiving god, and that if I truly sorry for my sins, God will forgive me. And when I die, if I have any inclination at all that is some type of afterlife, I will be really sorry for anything that I have done against His wishes. I mean, I would be really sorry.

I do not believe in a hell anyway, hell is just a concept of people that do not believe in Christianity. They needed some reason to cause people to have faith, and what better way than to scare them into faith. I do not see how anyone could be punished so severely to be damned to a place like hell. Everybody grows up in different circumstances, and are born with different genetic traits, and people are brainwashed as they grow up in different ways. What about the people who are not brainwashed into Christianity, and what about the people who grow up in an earthly world of hell, how could those people ever be judged into an infinity of hell.

I feel that God would understand that I have trouble believing in illogical things that are unsubstantiated. I think He would not question why I would reject something that tells me to go against my natural desires. I believe an all-knowing God would be happy with how I have lived my life. I have made my own wager on life and all my life I have lived trying to learn as much as I possibly could. I have done my best in school, at work, and in life. I feel that God would understand that I have done my best in life. If you believe in a God and you do have faith, explain senseless tragedies in which innocent people die. And I ask you where is your God, Christian, explain your faith now.

Russian elephant loses fight for life

MOSCOW — Masha, an elephant found frostbitten and starving at a cash-starved zoo south of Moscow, has lost the fight for her life despite the best efforts of the Moscow Circus. Too weak to stand, Masha died Tuesday after two weeks of efforts to nurse her back to strength. Her plight had inspired an outpouring of sympathy and donations of food since she was rescued in Volgograd, about 500 miles south of Moscow. The death of the 32-year-old elephant — who might have lived four more decades — underscores the plight of many circus and zoo animals in an economy where people are having enough trouble just feeding themselves.

NASA kills Magellan's Venus mission

PASADENA, Calif. — Magellan's Venus-mapping will end next year instead of 1995 — not because of faulty equipment but because of a lack of money. NASA's decision to shut down the project came as the spacecraft resumed mapping after a three-week breakdown. Jim Scott, manager of the project, said NASA headquarters informed him last week that the mission will end in 1993 to save $80 million. NASA officials "have other planetary missions that need money, and they never got into the congressional budget money for an extended mission for Magellan," he said.

Restoration of the earth will become possible only when all people choose to "reparticipate with the body of nature, not out of fear...but (out) of volition," said environmental activist Jeremy Rifkin Wednesday.

Rifkin, the author of several books on environmental issues, has been called "the most hated man in science" by Time magazine.

"When asked what individuals can do to help, Rifkin replied, "Stop eating hamburgers. That's the single most important thing you can do."

He referred to the environmental devastation occurring from overgrazing and the large amount of grain necessary to feed cattle while 25% of the population is hungry. "Save the planet, feed the poor and restore your health," he said.

Rifkin is part of "The Green Wave" political movement which will begin this spring. The movement will attempt to broaden the concept of an environmental-political movement and unite farmers and consumers, he said.

Rifkin concluded that there can be a positive future, but the time for change is now.

"People make history," said Rifkin. "I don't believe in destiny...and we're going to have to find that leader from this generation."

Rifkin blamed most of today's environmental problems to humanity's tendency to "enclose" their surroundings. While the process began 500 years ago in Tudor England when common lands were fenced to raise sheep, Rifkin said the practice continues today with the commercialization of the ocean, the atmosphere and even the gene pool.

"In five centuries we've now enclosed almost the entire earth," he said. "We have taken the earth, which is a living organism, and turned it into a commodity," he added.

Rifkin said that only a change in people's view of their place in the world can lead to solutions. "It will require a leap in consciousness of the people of this world...to a new reality...to think not in terms of national, ethnic or gender identity, but identity as a species," he said.

According to Rifkin, humanity has attempted to dominate the earth in recent history and to "squeeze out" what they can use from it. He asked if such behavior would work in personal relationships and continued, "Why would it work in science?"

Rifkin said that the "heart of our world view" is efficiency, to maximize output while minimizing time expended, labor and capital. However, "efficiency is the prescription for disaster," he continued, because efficiency leads to faster depletion of the earth's resources which can not be renewed at this rate of use.

The solution, he said, is to change the emphasis from efficiency to sufficiency.

Rifkin concluded that there can be a positive future, but the time for change is now.

"People make history," said Rifkin. "I don't believe in destiny...and we're going to have to find that leader from this generation."

Baker: U.S. will not targeting Russia

Yeltsin: Russia will no longer aim missiles at America

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin underlined Tuesday the U.S. would not cut nuclear weapons spending Wednesday and urged the United States and other nuclear powers to “move much farther along the road” to disarmament.

And in a dramatic shift away from more than 40 years of Cold War hostility, the Russian president identified the United States’ nuclear warheads would no longer be aimed at any targets in Europe.

Yeltsin’s first major policy pronouncement on disarmament came only a few hours after President Bush proposed in his State of the Union message that the United States and Russia take steps toward their nuclear arsenals.

In a nationwide broadcast, Yeltsin said he is ending production of two bloc of long-range cruise missiles and stopping development of new offensive nuclear weapons.

Those were among several cutbacks in nuclear program design that Russia would reduce Russian military spending 10 percent the next five years. That will allow Russia to focus more resources on urgent consumer needs and restructure its crippled economy.

As he taped speech was broadcast, Yeltsin told Senate President Stassen Baker III would no longer target its long-range missiles on U.S. cities or military sites.

“We no longer view the United States as a foe,” Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev told reporters after the announcement.

Baker said the United States would consider reciprocating.

Yeltsin did not speak for Ukraine. Belarus and Kazakhstan, the other former Soviet republics that have strategic nuclear weapons on their soil. All four agreed last month to put nuclear weapons on a common roof, but there have been tensions among them about dividing up the former Soviet military.

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House press secretary, said Yeltsin’s announcement “certainly sets the stage for very productive talks” at Wednesday’s meeting between Bush and Yeltsin at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Bush, in his speech Tuesday, offered to eliminate 1,500 of the 2,000 warheads on U.S. land-based long-range missiles, cut the warheads on sea-based missiles by a third and convert some bombers to non-nuclear roles.

He said Russia would have to eliminate the most potent land-based missiles in its arsenal — 154 SS-18s and 92 SS-24s that carry a total of 2,460 warheads.

Yeltsin said Russia has decided to:

— Take off alert about 600 land- and sea-based long-range missiles carrying 1,250 warheads. Russia is believed to have about 1,025 missiles with 17,000 warheads.

— Cut the number of missile-launched submarines on patrol by half, and end all such patrols if the United States does the same. It also will dismantle the launchers aboard six missile submarines.

— Stop production of TU-160 “Black Jack” and TU-95MS “Bear” bombers, the most powerful in the world, and of air- and sea-based cruise missiles.

— Halt programs to modernize long-range offensive missile weapons.

— Cut weapons purchases by 50 percent, decreasing the defense budget by a tenth.

Johannesburg. South Africa (AP) — Two insurance company employees staged an automobile crash that killed five blacks so the plotters could collect insurance proceeds, one of the survivors said Wednesday.

Lazarus Mndadi said at a news conference that a van carrying eight black people plunged off a road and burst into flames last Sunday in the town of Lichtenburg, east of Johannesburg.

The insurance company said it confirmed that two of its employees, Isak Kruger and Lucas Loubsher, were beneficiaries on policies for two of the survivors. It did not disclose the amounts involved.

Mndadi and two other survivors said Kruger and Loubsher threatened the victims as. salesmen, and were purportedly driving them to their new jobs when the crash occurred.

Mndadi, 34, said the windows of the van had been painted black, the inside door-handles replaced with a black, who was at the wheel, gave the eight passengers “danger” drinks and food that made them appear intoxicated.

Loubsher stopped the van, got out and ran toward the people, seizing in his native Pedi language through an interpreter.

Mndadi and another man, Kgosikgomo Kozi, 23, sustained minor injuries while the third survivor, Samuel Matolima, 22, was seriously burned. Matolima said the other five suffered “a horrible, screaming death.” They were burned beyond recognition.

The insurance policies were part of documents signed by the survivors when they were told they had been hired, Mndadi said.

Police said an initial investigation, conducted before Bush’s disclosure, failed to turn up sufficient evidence for any arrests.

The South African Press Association that the gunman was wounded in a shootout with police. He said the attacks occurred after the gunman had quarrel with his girlfriend and that he also fired shots at a white woman.

Black columnist calls for white execution

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — A black columnist on the newspaper serving white people who pose a threat to the paper hit the streets, telephone operators, and editors of the newspaper with a staff-written column Wednesday, one day after an opinion page editor at the paper wrote that he was known for this sort of thing.

White people are irredeemable racists, who have never loved or cared about black people," the columnist wrote. "To protect ourselves we should arm ourselves immediately and form a militia to defend our property, our beautiful black women, men and children."

DiFilippo said that he was known for this sort of thing. It's his own, warped opinion, but it's not necessary the opinion of the paper," managing editor Dana DiFilippo said. "He's known for this sort of thing. It's his own, warped voice," said Kevin Naff, an opinion page editor at the paper.

Penn State's main campus has 38,911 students; 1,204, or 3.1 percent, are black.

"It surprised us, to see a staff-written column that advocates large-scale interracial violence," Stewart wrote in a letter to the paper. But that wasn't the official school position.

"Just as any other hate magazine or hate periodical has a right to publish in this country, the Collegian has the right to publish anything they want to," university spokesman Bill Malon said.

Malathion spraying linked to skin rashes in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Low doses of malathion cause allergic reactions in mice, boosting claims that some Californians got skin rashes after aerial malathion spraying, said Kathleen Rodgers, an immunotoxicologist at USC's School of Medicine. The spraying of malathion in the Los Angeles Basin during 1989-1990 was intended to halt an infestation of Mediterranean fruit flies.

Formations of helicopters spraying pesticide over urban areas sparked widespread protests. Officials have since stopped malathion spraying. Rodgers force-fed various doses of malathion to about 200 mice, while an equal number got skin rashes, said Kathleen Rodgers, an immunotoxicologist at USC's School of Medicine. KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Kansas Attorney General Bob Stephan was indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on two counts of perjury involving lawsuits filed by a former clerk in his office.

In Topeka, Stephan released a statement saying he is innocent.

The grand jury charged him with two counts of perjury and one count of conspiracy to commit perjury. Robert Storey, a former Kansas state legislator, was indicted on one count of perjury and one count of conspiracy.

Stephan and Storey are charged with conspiring to lie while under oath during depositions in 1986 and 1987, and in court testimony in 1988.

Terms of a settlement in a sex harassment case with Marcia Tomson Stingley were supposed to be confidential, but they were revealed at a Stephan news conference in 1985.

Stephan, 59, is charged with falsely testifying that he didn't know the settlement required him to keep details confidential or that terms included the payment of $24,000 to Stingley.

The perjury count against Storey, 57, accuses him of lying under oath in federal court on Nov. 4, 1988.

The charge alleges that he falsely testified that he wasn't aware of the confidentiality clause.

Stingley, a former clerk in Stephan's office, filed a sexual harassment lawsuit against Stephan in December 1982 after she was fired. She alleged that Stephan made advances on numerous occasions.

The lawsuit was settled out of court in March 1985. Terms were kept secret by agreement of both parties.

Mideast talks draw to close

MOSCOW (AP) — Palestinians stayed away from Arab-Israeli peace talks again today, but other parties agreed to hold a series of meetings this spring in cities around the world on issues ranging from refugees to arms control.

Despite the Palestinian boycott, the two-day Moscow conference represents a symbolic leap forward for the U.S.-brokered peace process that began with a ceremonial Madrid conference in October.

Negotiators described today's working group meetings on regional issues as businesslike and rhetoric-free, and said they would tackle the same subjects again at the end of April or beginning of May after the Jewish holidays.

The negotiators said they would likely discuss the issue of refugees at a meeting in Canada, economic cooperation at a meeting in Belgium, arms control in the United States, the environment in Japan, and water in Turkey or Austria. Dates for future talks will be decided then.

The conference also decided that Japan will send a fact-finding mission to the Middle East to explore environmental problems.

A steering committee approved the negotiators' progress, and was expected to report later to a final session of lower-level ministers. The talks formally ended late in the afternoon, a member of the Egyptian delegation said.

Following the talks, Secretary of State James Baker III held an unscheduled meeting with the Palestinian's spokeswoman, Hanan Ashrawi, the U.S. Embassy said, without giving any details.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa also met separately with Palestinians and then told reporters that the Egyptians "have reason to believe the Palestinians will attend future meetings of the multilateral talks since the sponsors have announced this problem has been resolved."

The Palestinians stayed away from the day's talks and Tuesday's opening session after seeking to broaden their representation by bringing in delegates from Jerusalem and countries beyond Israeli rule.

The American and Russian co-sponsors have backed up Israel's insistence that only delegates from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip may take part.

But the Arab delegates on all the committees discussing regional issues insisted the Palestinians be brought in at future meetings.

"There were lots of contacts yesterday, but the situation has not changed," said Palestinian delegate Saeb Erakat. "They have not accepted our delegation, and we are not going to the talks."

The talks have brought Israel-Palestine together with a broad cross-section of the Arab world, as well as Japan, the European Community and other countries that can contribute to rebuilding the war-torn Middle East. Nearly 20 nations were attending, although Lebanon and Syria chose not to.

Baker on Tuesday stressed in his opening speech that one way of ending decades of mistrust is to address such regional problems as water shortages, pollution and refugees.

The five working groups that met today each was led by a Western nation.

Japan heads the environment group, Canada the refugee committee, the EC the economic cooperation group, and the United States the water resources group and the committee on disarmament and regional security.

Yehuda Haim, Israel's chief delegate to the refugees committee, said he was so pleased with the atmosphere at his session that he put aside his prepared remarks.

"After everyone else had spoken I told them I was scrapping my speech because the atmosphere is excellent, so informal, so businesslike," he said.

He added that at the meeting the European Community representative called for the inclusion of the United Nations as well as Palestinians who do not live under Israeli occupation on the refugees committee.

Baker has acknowledged there is merit in including such Palestinians, since the committee "concerns those who lost their homes when Israel became a state."

On Tuesday, Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy called the negotiation process "irreversible." Yet Tuesday's speeches rarely touched on substance.
LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — Twenty years after British soldiers killed 14 Catholic civil rights demonstrators on “Bloody Sunday,” a wave of introspection has overtaken this city divided by religion and the River Foyle.

While books and documentaries dig for the truth of the events of Jan. 30, 1972, survivors of the march are deeply divided — and the commander of the British troops that day says it’s time for the army to go home.

“Bloody Sunday showed us that British justice protects the state’s terrorists. That’s what the soldiers were that day,” said Kathleen Kelly, whose 17-year-old son Michael was killed. “I will take my hatred to six feet under,” Kelly said. “I could find the soldier who shot her son, ’I would blow the brains out of him, I would put 13 bullets in him’.”

On a BBC television documentary broadcast Tuesday, one still-active army officer admitted he saw no gunmen among the crowd. “In my own heart ... they were all innocent.”

The regiment’s commander, Col. Derek Wilford, said his men’s action “achieved nothing at all except tragedy.” He suggested the British government would be wise to withdraw its troops.

In Catholic working-class Derry — a community so close-knit it’s said you can’t throw a stone without hitting a cousin — the killings touched nearly everyone.

Particularly haunted is Eamonn McCann, whose 17-year-old son Michael was killed in 1985. He said, “I would blow the brains out of him, I would put 13 bullets in him.”

The army’s elite parachute regiment barred their way. The soldiers had orders that, if rioting broke out, they would charge into the Bogside’s “no-go” area, then controlled by IRA gunmen, to arrest suspected leaders.

A new book by journalist Eamonn McCann contends the soldiers “encountered only unarmed civilians and forswore set about killing them.”

The government’s official report at the time concluded that none of the victims was armed when shot, but that some might have been earlier. Thirteen people died that day, and another man who was wounded died five months later.

McCann’s book details the suffering of each family. Particularly haunted is Kathleen Kelly, whose 17-year-old son Michael was killed.

“I will take my hatred to six feet under,” Kelly said. “I could find the soldier who shot her son, I would blow the brains out of him, I would put 13 bullets in him.”

On a BBC television documentary broadcast Tuesday, one still-active army officer admitted he saw no gunmen among the crowd. “In my own heart ... they were all innocent.”

The regiment’s commander, Col. Derek Wilford, said his men’s action “achieved nothing at all except tragedy.” He suggested the British government would be wise to withdraw its troops.

Peter Robinson, deputy leader of the pro-British Democratic Unionist Party, called Wilford “an idiot who has swallowed IRA propaganda.”
Family seeks answers about son’s ‘friendly fire’ death

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Nearly a year after Army Cpl. Douglas Lance Fielder’s death from “friendly fire” during the Persian Gulf War, his father has lost faith.

Run Fielder doesn’t know if the Army will answer the questions that haunt him about why his 22-year-old son died Feb. 27, 1991.

His son was killed when hit by machine-gun fire from a cavalry squadron, even though another cavalry unit had ordered firing stopped.

He wants to know who is responsible, and whether the Army conspired to cover up the circumstances of his son’s death at an Iraq desert airfield.

Fielder is convinced the only way to get all the facts is a court-martial of Lt. Col. John Daly, commander of the squadron that fired on Lance Fielder’s small group of combat engineers.

Daly has been told by Army investigators not to discuss the case until an investigation is complete, said an Army spokesman at Fort Bliss, Texas, where Daly commands the troop of the 3rd Regiment of the 3rd Armored Cavalry. Daly has declined all interview requests.

Fielder also wants to know why the commander of his son’s unit, a troop of the 7th Cavalry Brigade of the 1st Armored Division, left his son and two other soldiers in the desert with a broken-down vehicle and no radio.

Fielder and his former wife, Debbie Shelton, pinned hopes on House Armed Services Investigative Subcommittee hearings Thursday into the 35 “friendly fire” deaths in the Gulf War.

The panel originally was to have begun work on the subject Wednesday.

“I feel violated and abandoned by a government that I trusted,” said Fielder, a 21-year veteran of the Nashville police force.

He’s 6-foot-5 son was awarded a Bronze star for valor for organizing his unit’s defenses after his superior, Sgt. James Napier, was wounded.

Mrs. Shelton says she continues a barrage of letters to the Army and elected officials because her son “hated a lie and he loved the Army. If this had happened to one of his friends he would have spent the rest of his life seeking justice.”

The Army first said Fielder — who was promoted to sergeant about 30 hours after his death — was killed in battle with Iraq’s Republican Guard.

Two months later, a fellow soldier called the parents and told them Daly’s squadron attacked Fielder’s unit, killing Fielder and wounding Napier.

Official Army notification came Aug. 12.

In October, The Washington Post published letters by Capt. B.H. Friesen charging that Daly and Col. Douglas Starr, then commander of the 3rd Regiment, were responsible for Fielder’s death.

Friesen, a troop commander under Daly, said he fired warning shots and led his unit against Fielder’s group, thinking they were Iraqis.

Friesen said he was puzzled by a lack of return fire from Fielder’s unit and ordered a cease fire.

“A cease fire was already in effect when LTC Daly arrived at the airfield. I had given the command several times and my second-in-command had relayed the order to the squadron command post on the radio frequency monitored by LTC Daly,” Friesen wrote.

However, he said, Daly’s unit opened fire.

The Army inspector general is conducting another investigation into why Fielder’s parents were told he was killed by enemy forces and whether there was intent to mislead them, she said.

Jury picked for Dahmer sanity trial

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fourteen jurors were chosen Wednesday, and immediately sequestered, to hear grisly testimony about dismemberment, cannibalism and sex with corpses in the sanity trial of serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer.

Fielder also wants to know whether Dahmer was sane when he strangled and dismembered 15 men and boys in the Milwaukee area.

Most of Dahmer’s victims were black homosexuals. The jurors are seven men and seven women, 13 whites and one black. They were isolated immediately after being seated on the third day of jury selection.

District Attorney Michael McCann and defense attorney Gerald Boyle were slated to give opening statements Thursday before Circuit Judge Laurence Gram Jr.

Dahmer has pleaded guilty but insane to 15 Milwaukee County manslaughter slayings. If a jury accepts his plea, Dahmer would be sent to a mental institution, where he could petition for release every six months. If deemed sane, he would be tenced to life in prison for each slaying.

“Right now in this court, he is a sane man,” McCann told one woman as he pointed to Dahmer, who sat quietly across a round table from each juror being questioned in the judge’s chambers.

This summer, start building your career with Aetna.

We are looking for outstanding junior accounting majors to participate in our Internal Audit Department’s summer internship program.

A summer internship with us is an excellent first step toward Aetna’s impressive career opportunities, an exceptional professional development program, direct involvement with top management, special consulting, fraud investigation assignments, and some travel. As a full time member of our staff after graduation, you can qualify for CPA licensing in Connecticut.

Aetna was recently named by Fortune magazine and The Wall Street Journal as one of America’s most admired companies. Our outstanding compensation, benefits and training programs were major reasons why.

We are looking for individuals with proven analytical ability, effective communication skills, initiative, flexibility and creativity to join our large staff of audit professionals at our corporate headquarters in Hartford, Connecticut. We’d like to meet you and learn more about your expectations.

Saddam forms special force as protection from opposition

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saddam Hussein has formed a special military force to protect him, his palaces and key government centers against internal opposition, diplomats said Wednesday.

The troops reportedly were taken from the Republican Guard, which itself was formed originally to protect Saddam from unrest in the regular army.

The two Baghdad-based diplomats said Saddam also has sent several more army divisions to southern Iraq, where fighting between the army and Shiite Muslim rebels reportedly has intensified in recent weeks.

There was no independent confirmation of either the report of the new military force or the renewed fighting.

A U.N. official in Geneva, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there had been a number of reports from Syria and Iran over the past two weeks about new fighting in southern Iraq. But he could not confirm them.

Lisa Scott (front) and Molly Schwartz (back), two Saint Mary's seniors, beat the Valentine's Day rush by buying cards for friends in January.

The Iraqi regime has become increasingly hostile to foreign news organizations, including The Associated Press. It has refused to allow AP reporters and many others to visit.

The United States and other nations hope the hardships caused by a U.N. trade embargo will intensify discontent against Saddam. On the anniversary of the Gulf War, President Bush again called for Saddam's overthrow and praised the "thousands of brave Iraqis who are resisting Saddam's rule."

Various Iraqi opposition groups have been trying to unite and develop a strategy for toppling Saddam, who has ruled for nearly two decades. A large gathering of Saddam's foes is planned next month in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

The two diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity during visits to Nicosia and Amman, Jordan, said Saddam's new presidential guard consists of 13 battalions drawn from the five or six Republican Guard divisions that survived the Gulf War.

The diplomats said they saw some units of the new force when the troops deployed for the first time outside government buildings in Baghdad last month after a series of hand grenade attacks in the city.

They said reliable sources in Baghdad had provided information on the new force.

The force's estimated 10,000 soldiers are staunch Saddam loyalists, the diplomats said, most from Saddam's hometown of Tikrit, on the Tigris River north of Baghdad, and the nearby town of al-Door.

All are veterans of the 1980-88 war with Iran, the Gulf War and the anti-Saddam rebellions that followed and are commanded by Saddam's second son, Qusai, 26, they said.

The soldiers undergo special training at military bases in Baghdad and Tikrit, with the emphasis on urban combat and house-to-house fighting, the diplomats said.

The diplomats and travelers from Iraq said Saddam reinforced his garrison in southern Iraq with several divisions this month for what appeared to be a major push against Shiite rebels.

Belgrade feels war's effects

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) - On a big night in Belgrade, the famous bar swings to the sounds of white-haired crooners, a night when the Old World scene lacking only Peter Lorre smoking a Balkan Sobranie.

Among the grizzled workers in cloth caps and natty men with painted women in face paint, however, a few young men in camouflage offer a grim reality check.

With a back table, a trio of teenagers talk nervously among themselves when a foreign stranger asks them about the war between Serbs and Croats.

Finally, one girl offers a one-word, unprintable opinion.

Belgrade feels the war in gas lines, short supplies and shorter cash, snarled communications and a sense of dread.

Not many people have much good to say about it.

"This stupid war has pushed us a hundred years backward," says Danica Alekovic, a professional translator. "Belgrade should be a European capital, but it looks like a military camp."

"There are a lot of others, Aleksic is concerned about the ragtag mix of people engaged in the black market for weapons, walking around with automatic weapons.

When war broke out over Croatia's independence declared last July, hand grenades began appearing on the black market for $3 each.

Now, 15-year-olds are buying up supplies at $3 each. As the economy rocks downward and even those lucky enough to have jobs lose their buying power, people are becoming more vulnerable, those weapons and explosives will be used.

"Empty stores, looting, starveation, violence..." snorted Miodrag Vujacic, a Russian literature specialist. "That is how I see Belgrade in the near future."

In the best of times, Belgrade is not one of Europe's liveliest capitals. The name means "white city," but whoever thought up that has not seen Belgrade for some time.

When the icy cold settles in, the city's gray tones are tinged with deadpan faces and black bow ties sling tiny Turkish fez cups, heaping glasses of hot black coffee, heaping glasses of liquid potent enough to launch a rocket.

Up to now, Belgrade is not yet a stereotypical wartime capital. The downtown McDonald's is a picture of bourgeois burglary, patrolled by mothers with small prams and counting coupons. At night, the lights blaze, and cafes thrive with life until 1 a.m.

At the Moskva, perhaps the liveliest spot in town, the cavernous bar fills early. Waiters with deadpan faces and black bow ties sling tiny Turkish coffee cups, heaping glasses of syrup-topped ice cream and shot glasses of liquid potent enough to launch a rocket.

The orchestra, a geriatric combo out of time, warps the sounds of strings and woodwinds over the diverse clientele.

GUNMAN surrenders after hostage standoff

TUCCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man slashed a woman's throat and led police on a chase during which a homeowner mistakenly shot a police officer.

The man later gave up after holding a person hostage for 10 hours, police said.

Albert Ramirez, 25, gave up early Wednesday afternoon. He was charged with attempted murder, kidnapping, aggravated assault and burglary. Sgt. Roberto Villasenor said.

The woman, Renee Belcher, 42, was hospitalized in serious condition, a University Medical Center spokeswoman said.

Police Officer Phil Wright, 36, was in fair condition at the hospital after being shot in the abdomen by a homeowner who mistook him for an intruder.

Villasenor said.

Police believe Ramirez knew Belcher and possibly the hostage, but no other information on their relationships was immediately released.

The chain of events began late Tuesday when Belcher was attacked in a church courtyard.

She made it to a nearby residence, Villasenor said.

Officers went to the woman's apartment complex to check on her children. There, they saw a man jump from a balcony and flee, Villasenor said.

Professors discuss Bush’s address

By PAUL PEARSON
Assistant News Editor

Professors on the Notre Dame campus had different opinions on President Bush’s State of the Union address Tuesday.

Martin Wolfson, assistant professor of economics, believes that Bush’s proposals were “too weak” to sufficiently deal with the country’s problems.

The tax cuts Bush proposed will “only provide limited benefits,” such as the cut in the capital gains tax and the elimination of the 10 percent luxury tax on yachts, which will benefit only the wealthy, Wolfson said.

Wolfson was disappointed that Bush did not deal with such problems as health care, education, unemployment properly. “We need a strong commitment from the federal government for a policy of full employment,” he said.

Given the proposals Bush made in his address, Wolfson believes that the recession will continue for some time. “I am not optimistic,” he said.

On the other hand, Barry Keating, professor of finance, believes that the country will “slowly move out of” the recession before the tax cuts take effect. “The timing (of the tax cuts) may be poor,” Keating believes that the national economy is not as poor as people think. “The media may have overplayed it.”

According to Keating, other nations see the U.S. economy far differently than the United Nations does. “The rest of the world,” he said, “seems as quite powerful.”

Keating cited such industries as pharmaceuticals, aircraft and textiles in which “the U.S. is clearly the leader.”

Peri Arnold, chairman of the department of economics, said that Bush’s speech provided a set of piecemeal programs “which at best will have a marginal effect on the economy.”

Bush’s recommendations for tax cuts will “put a few hundred dollars in most people’s pockets,” but will not fix the major problems with the economy, Arnold said.

The speech, according to Arnold, too often were based on “activist” economics (“Thank God he wants to put some more money into Head Start”), but more likely would result in “short-run, minor problems.”

One trick of Arnold’s is pessimistic about the recession, saying that the economy will experience a “try, struggle, grow” in the future.

Despite Arnold’s criticism, Bush’s political future is also in jeopardy because of the economy. The U.S. economy is not as poor as people think. “This is a guy who has basically shot himself in the foot,” Arnold said.

Bush’s main mistake, according to Arnold, was building up the deficit so high that it would not live up to those expectations.

Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Alan Greenspan, released a statement saying that “the economic momentum is beginning to recover.”

President Bush unveiled 1993 budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush unveiled a $1.52 trillion budget on Wednesday that would fight harsh tax loads for families and businesses in hopes of easing the recession’s “winter’s gloom.” He would boost spending on children, but limit other programs including Medicare help for the aged.

Military spending also would be trimmed, but the federal deficit would still rise to a record level of about $400 billion.

Bush urged Congress to “lay aside partisanship” and speedily enact his election-year spending plan in order to “get the economy moving again.”

After setting a March 20 target for action in the State of the Union address Tuesday night, he visited GOP legislators Wednesday and asked them to help communicate with the American people to win support for his program, according to lawmakers.

But major problems remain, with their own ideas for reviving the economy, criticized at the 2,000-page budget plan for fiscal 1993 as it is arrived at the Capitol. As for Bush’s deadline for action, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, scoffed, “We don’t operate that way.”

Bush would throw the financial might of the government at a wide collection of programs in the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

For example, the Head Start pre-school program for children would grow by $600 million next year to $2.8 billion, the fight against AIDS would grow from $4.4 billion to $6 billion, and highway building would grow from $17 billion to $19.2 billion.

But to help pay for the expansion of some initiatives, domestic programs would be eliminated and 84 others would be trimmed.

Fed Chairman opposes plans for large tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Tuesday that tax cuts probably are not needed to revive the economy but said a small package to ensure a recovery would be acceptable.

“I don’t think they are necessary at this point,” he said, adding, “I understand the desire ... to create insurance.”

Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee at his confirmation hearing.

The 65-year-old economist, nominated by President Bush to a second four-year term, said joint support for many of the tax proposals outlined in the president’s State of the Union address.

But he warned legislators to avoid an election-year bidding war resulting in a huge package of tax cuts and spending increases that, he said, would work to “tarnish the credibility of the government.”

Greenspan also said that the “structural budget deficit” would send inflation fears into “manic markets and likely result in higher long-term interest rates, he said. Thus, an excessive stimulative package could actually aggravate, rather than help, the economic troubles.

“We have to be quite careful,” he said. “My major concern is that the types of negotiations that could occur (would) result in a much tax plan, possibly fiscally disruptive package.”

Even without tax cuts, Greenspan said some “very subtle” signs of economic improvement have already emerged. He repeated two weeks ago that he believed interest rate cuts already engineered by the Federal Reserve were probably sufficient to produce a recovery.

“We are beginning to see some very subtle signs that the erosion in the economy is beginning to stabilize,” Greenspan said.
Dear Editor:

Earlier today, my alarm radio went off this morning, the news concerning the swim team blared over the speakers and the news announcer shared the story of a tragic event that occurred last night. It seems that a swimmer in our local pool, Jonathan, was involved in a near-drowning incident. The news announcer stated that he had been pulled from the pool unconscious and was airlifted to the nearest hospital. The news is still unfolding, and the community is in shock. My heart goes out to the swimmer's family and friends. It's a reminder of how quickly life can change.

Volunteers in inner city confront life's realities, widens perspectives

Dear Editor:

Looking out my fourth story window, I watched a midnight drug deal while cars drove by with boomboxes blaring and reverberating through their closed trunks. Gang members tried their Mc Hammer moves on the sidewalk and girls clad in mini-skirts hung out at the corner.

I wondered if the little four-year-olds I had come to love so much through my work in the day care center would grow up to "hang" outside my window, too.

The realistic response to my inquiry, I knew, was "most likely," but the thought of that broke my heart, so I decided that 'my' kids would not be too smart for that; that they were going to make better lives for themselves and their neighbors had made. Oh, what helpful thinking that is.

I know in a few years those four-year-olds, loving, adorable and excited, would become the sullen and hardened eight and nine-year-olds in the neighborhood and then the defiant and lost ones who become teenage parents, welfare recipients and drug users and sellers. Some won't finish high school and most will not go on to college. And, as the cycle goes, their lives in the ghetto will be perpetuated by their offspring.

I know this is a pretty bleak picture of what hope there is in the life of an inner city child, but I cannot yet paint a different one. The summer I spent living and working at Marillac House in Chicago, my Summer Service Project site, was revealing of the woes of urban minority city dwellers. I found that until something drastic is done either through public policy or private organization, the fate of my little four year olds, Eric, Jonathan, Daruis, Tellah... will not be changed.

My summer, however, was not spent just learning the very downs side of politics, economics, and sociology. Never before had I associated myself with people so different from myself, making my summer job also a cultural experience.

Both the clients of the service agency and the religious who ran it were of different kinds. They saw the world through a different pair of lenses, perhaps lenses that allowed them to see reality and lenses which so many of us refuse to wear or to realize even exist. The little children who needed love and the importance of youth.

The awareness that I gained from my 'summer job' was, in my opinion, more important than any 'practical' experience I could have gotten from a conventional summer job or internship. I imagine that em- ployees like to see office experiences and some business related work can be a resume, but this summer's experience was the best career move I could have made for myself.

To go to grad school or to get a job, to get a job or to volunteer work are the questions we are all faced with as the college years go by. Although working for eight weeks in the ghetto did really open up a new view to me. It did not draw my focus completely, I have to admit that I see the world and what I do in it a little differently than I did when I had only a middle class vision of myself and of society. The answer to the "what am I going to do after I graduate?" question is much easier for me to discern now.

I am not going to say what mine is, since such, as individ uals, will come to personalized conclusions. What I can fairly say is that opening up new experiences and giving of oneself are wondrous ways to learn about the world in which we all live and about oneself with whom we live.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Recent tragedy reminds us to repent, look to God

Dear Editor:

I watched a midnight Doonesbury cartoon this morning, the love so much through my work reverberating through their window, too.

I was about to 'hang' outside my window, thinking about why did God allow such an event? I prayed and asked God for an answer knowing, was 'most likely,' but the thought of that killed some Galilaeans and then mixed their blood in their sacrifice. Let's all sinners and have come short of God's standards which is perfection. We need someone who can take away the sin that we inherited from Adam. If we baved sinned only once we have broken the whole law. We need a Savior. We must realize that we cannot do anything to merit or deserve salvation. I believe Jesus Christ died on the cross for my sins. Please forgive me. I believe He rose again from the dead. I am placing my faith in Jesus Christ alone to take away my sins. Lord Jesus come into my life and save me from my sins. In Jesus' name, Amen.

This event was a shock to most if not all the South Bend Community. Yet these things happen so that we as finite human beings turn to God so that we will not perish. It is impossible to explain all the reasons for last night's event concerning the swim team, but God desires that all of us who are alive will turn from our sin, confess it to Him and put our faith in Jesus Christ and Him alone for the forgiveness of our sins so we can get to heaven.

We need God very much and events like this show us why we need to be dependent upon Him.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"It is better to be hated for what a you are than loved for what you are not."

Andrea Gide

Who, by fire, can submit: QUOTES, P.O. Box Q, ND, 46556
I am deeply disturbed by the views expressed by Mr. O’Hara-Grace in his recent letter (The Observer, Jan. 24). As a pref- ace, I would like to comment on this questioning of the amount of funding devoted to AIDS research. I would further recom- mend that this inquiry address itself to the many issues to stimulate the debate concerning AIDS research. Issues of proper distribution are very important but they require a much more thorough and objective approach than Mr. Acker’s column of Jan. 24.

I take serious issue with his approach to research in what seems to me to be the example of an obiter dictum. I do not think that the proper way to consider the dangerous ramifications which would arise from his proposal is to resort to inquiries from AIDS research to those which he would consider correct.

First, his introduction mis- represents the essentials of the HIV debate in his quantification and assessment in a dollar value. A person who was patients were spent fighting AIDS. Is this truly what the research says? Has the sound but here negate the facts about AIDS. His argument is focused upon a virus known as HIV. Many people are infected and the virus seems to spread itself. The word AIDS has been corrupted in that section of the media. It is not just the AIDS epidemic that is the problem. It is the manner in which the numbers include the HIV in- fection. I am sure that this is why Mr. Acker did not develop the syndrome? I say that his representation of the data is incorrectly applied to the argument. The virus will adapt to the injury when he digresses from his ar- gument to a general quick pro- cess. The virus is taken from other areas of research. I don’t know enough about economic theory to argue against his unsupported proposal. He is wrong from the beginning to the end.

Second reason behind his argument further demonstrates his myopia and bigotry and demonstrates his mistaken values. I boldly ask what it is that he means by the “right to state that 19 out of every 20 people who catch AIDS and then die have no medical care?” Is this an attempt to mislead or something more immoral/legal? The question would be, is this a malicious argument? The reader is led to believe that this is the case. I have not said that it would also agree that too much is being spent on AIDS research. The CDC was established, as was the United States, to insure that every citizen is granted the same treatment under the law. I am afraid that it does not show his bias.

Dr. Anthony Fauci (Director, office of AIDS Research, National Institutes of Health), in his presentation last semester, demonstrated that for the first time the HIV patients are associated accord- ing to lifestyle rather than sexuality, orientation, etc. To be- longing to one of these groups does not necessarily place you at risk of HIV infection; further, to not belong to one of these groups does not remove the risk.

To conclude that “Unless you’re homophile, you have very little chance of catching AIDS” is a very dangerous and unethical proposal. Refusing health care to those who are deemed unworthy or offensive is methodologically unsound and is evidence of fascism. He most certainly is able to adhere to a set of values and provide proper health care for all people.

If AIDS were generally easily preventable, if no one would be affected? Many issues are so easily solved by rhetoric: to stop murder - nobody kill anyone; to stop HIV from spreading - nobody engage in risky behaviors. It sounds simple. In conclusion, I would like to ask everyone to earn more about AIDS, and health in gen- eral, in order to dissuade you from holding any credence to Acker’s us-and-them mentality and moral superiority. Please make an effort to attend an in- teresting talk on AIDS by Mr. Acker, on Jan. 28 with Lloyd Sims, entitled: Living with AIDS.

AIDS is a disease of risky behaviors, not categories

Dear Editor:

Concerning the two articles, “Yugoslavia is a neighboring country,” and “Slovenia and Croatia win European recogni- tion,” I would like to comment that the Greek-American Association of Notre Dame would like to make a few clarifying statements.

Greece, and formerly named Yugoslavia are neighboring countries in the Balkans. One of the major disputes in the area, is the origin of the name Macedonia. I would like to point out that the name Macedonia is being used. Macedonians are a population of Slavs, Turks and Albanians, which have been present in the region only after the 7th century. They have no relationship to Macedonia whatsoever. Present day Macedonia is in the northern part of Greece.

Macedonia is a part of Southern Yugoslavia, are trying to convince the world that it is separate. These people are a Macedonian mi- nority living in Yugoslavia. They are trying to establish the Republic of Macedonia. The malicious at- tempt of the Slavics to identify themselves with the ancient Macedonians is not only un- acceptable, but also an outrage- ous effort on their part to forge the historical truth.

The Macedonians are Greeks. It is important to mention that the Greek government advised the other members of the European Community during the summit of Maestricht, about the intentions of the the Macedonians to separate Macedonia from the country Macedonia.

The E.E.C. came to a unani- mous decision, to not recognize any independent state in the former Yugoslavian province. If Mr. O’Hara-Grace wishes to make such a decision by himself, he will not mention the name Macedonia as a country, when in fact it is a part of the Republic of Scopia as a forger history. Our efforts coincide with the efforts of the Greek Embassies all over the world to make people aware of the issues in the region. I hope that in the future, articles published in the newspapers, do not provide accurate infor- mation about the region. We would like to suggest that Mr. O’Hara-Grace read page 7 and the articles in the newspaper, do not provide accurate in- formation about the region. We hope that in the future, articles published in newspapers, do not provide accurate infor- mation about the region.

I think that the E.E.C. will not mention the name Macedonia as a country. I do not believe that I could be correct.

If, however, the editor chooses to change the name on reprints of articles published in other newspapers, we ask that at the end of such articles, the editor adds the following: “The NOS/SMC Greek American Association strongly opposes the use of the name Macedonia as a country called by that name. A member of the Republic of Scopia as a forger history. Our efforts coincide with the efforts of the Greek Embassies all over the world to make people aware of the issues in the region.”

All humans deserve compassion

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to Rick Acker’s column of Jan. 24, “AIDS is Not Worth Disproportional Funding.” Acker is not original in applying himself to cast that first stone that Jesus spoke of, but I would like to congratulate you for reaching new heights in blindness and judgmentalism.

I’m amazed at how we can ease up on the war against AIDS. Now that I know that AIDS is an issue of illegality and immoral and should be put on the back burner in order to focus on such honorable diseases such as cancer or Alzheimer’s, I feel so much better.

I used to worry about AIDS babies, born into a world for which they didn’t have the strength. I used to be bothered that many IV drug users, disadvantaged people, and the lack of education, often died without even being diagnosed. It used to concern me that the already marginalized and stigmatized population were to be left out. But the community now had to fight the widespread misconception that AIDS was only for the rich and famous. And I used to feel sad and angry that a young person could be infected with the AIDS virus during her or his very first sexual experience. Thank you, Mr. Acker, for setting me straight. Now I can sleep nights. It is estimated that by the end of this century, about 2 million people in the United States will have the AIDS virus. That is more than eight years from now. Yes, it is true that the spread of AIDS will be decreased and people avoid certain practices. I strongly support AIDS awareness programs and all recommendations to practice safe sex, know your partner’s sexual history, stay away from drugs, etc. But you know, Mr. Acker, being human doesn’t mean that people forget things. Sometimes people are careless, or simply trusting - and other times they are just unlucky. To you these people are “guilty.” To me they are individuals with a cruel, devastating illness - and they deserve every chance in the world to be cured.

I hope for Mr. Acker’s sake that the year 2000 finds him in better health. If he is down on the street with the rest of us, he might find that AIDS has hit his next-door neighbor, or his best friend, or a relative. The memory that he doesn’t have enough time to pass all around of the guilt that craft has to be handed out. He might plead, finally, for a little more time, a little more money, a little more compassion to be spent while it can still make a difference.

Advances in bus safety are imperative

Dear Editor:

I extend to the families and friends of the United Limo ac- cident victims, the March 2007 issue of The Observer, Notre Dame University, for your sympathy for the great loss of two sisters, the plane, the bus crash, and the ship and trauma to survivors of this recent bus mishap. I would hope, though, that this tragedy would amount to more than just a very bad accident in the winter of 1992 for families and friends, students and faculty, the swim team, the athletic department, and you.

I believe some meaning could be drawn from the moment in Notre Dame History if you (representing a promi- nent university) would pay attention to Father Hesburgh, the alumni association, and the student body/undergraduates. increased bus safety. With such pressure, maybe future lives could be saved and spared. Injuries. Putting aside structural integ- rity and operator judgment, maybe just the mandatory use of seatbelts in each seat might have saved the lives of these two lost students and all the others injured. Injuries or survivors of the United Limo Bus Accident.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR
The Keenan Revue will be running tonight through Saturday at St. Mary’s O’Laughlin Auditorium.

You can run, but you can’t hide

By PAIGE SMORON
Assistant Accent Editor

The Keenan Revue.
It’s back. It’s bizarre. And it’s blatantly offensive.
No one emerges unscathed. In the first skit alone, even Sally and Schroeder of “Peanuts” fame have their characters impugned.
As usual, the women of Notre Dame are mocked mercilessly. Keenanites wearing floral skirts and sweatshirts depict ND women in conjunction with excess cellulite, hormonal imbalances, and, in particular, Yo-Cream.
Saint Mary’s women fare no better, although they seem to be more anatomically gifted.

The administration, the College of Arts and Letters, and the Irish Guard—also wearing floral skirts and sweatshirts—are familiar targets, with a rare nightclub appearance by Lou Holtz, performing such Irish standbys as “Billy Jean.”

Two of the musical numbers are performed by the Blues Brothers and are accompanied by gyrating backup dancers who supply enough beefcake to last the campus until the Mr. Stanford Contest. In fact, boxer shorts seems to be the requisite minimalist costume for the better part of the show.

In other musical interludes, “Low Places,” “Too Sexy,” and “O.P.P.” have all been rewritten to serve as dirges deploring the Domer way of life. A unique collection of ballads called “Nun Rock,” however, celebrates it.

In addition to the usual freshman, fat chicks, and farting jokes, some original acts provide an unfettered glimpse into the life of a Domer.
“Salad Bar Bimbo,” one of the more well-received skits of the evening, effectively captures the spirit of the North Dining Hall experience; and Shakespeare meets what is perhaps his greatest challenge when he uses his best lines, schmoozing for babes.

There are a few surreal strains throughout the show, including an unfortunate-look-
Nebraska back cleared of drug use

Police continue to look for causes to strange behavior

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Tests showed no sign of drugs or alcohol in the blood or urine of a University of Nebraska running back charged in the beating of a Purdue University student on Jan. 18, Lancaster County Attorney Gary Lacey said.

"That means we have to look to another cause" for behavior that led to the charges against junior from Roselle, N.J. Jones. He suffered an ankle injury in the first game of the season against Utah State and a later shoulder separation early in his first game back, against Missouri.

"We never tried that before," Lacey said.

Lacey said Baldwin is not receiving any drugs for his ankle injury. Addiction and Katrin Krabbe provided the first sparks in what is expected to be the biggest Olympic track rivalry.

Cason set a world record in the 60-meter dash in Berlin, only to be upstaged by Ottery in Ghost, who won in 7.09 seconds, .02 better than the German.

"Who says Krabe is the athlete to beat? in Barcelona, Ottery asked of the reigning world champion in the 100 and 200. "If I'm in top shape, it should be enough to win."

The reign continues to look unlikely to meet before the Summer Games. Cason's chances are not rated as high. The reigning indoor 60-meter dash record holder is better known for his explosive start than his finish in the 100.

Cason is the opening leg in the 400-meter relay at the Tokyo World Championships last year for the United States.

"My main goal now is the (U.S.) Olympic trials," he said, predicting he would be tougher with this year's shortened season. "I strongly believe in my possibilities."

So do Ottery and Krabe. Within moments of each other, Krabe first set the personal best in the 100 at Beijing this summer and later shaved an inch from his 100-meter dash in Berlin, only to be upstaged by Ottery in Ghost, who won in 7.09 seconds, .02 better than the German.

Jordan tells NBA that his image is off-limits on clothing

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Michael Jordan has told the NBA he no longer sells apparel bearing his image, giving Nike Inc. those rights exclusively.

The Oregonian reported Jordan's decision, confirmed by the league, in Wednesday's editions. The move, unprecedented in the NBA, means millions of dollars.

Jordan, 28, who led the Chicago Bulls to their first NBA championship last year, is among the most charismatic — and profitable — personalities in the league.

While the NBA no longer may sell Michael Jordan shirts, you'll find all the Jordan wear you want at Nike, which already ranks in about $200 million a year on his image.

The Beaverton-based company's Air Jordan basketball shoes, named for Jordan's gravity-defying on-court performance, are among its best sellers.

The Irish managed to assemble a full field for the 50-yard freestyle sprint. Christine Van Patten was the highest finisher for Notre Dame in second place. Freshman Michelle Lower placed fourth, Stephens placed fifth, and sophomore Colette LaForce placed sixth.

Bethem and Broderick went one-two in the 200 individual medley and finished seconds apart. Williams was the only Irish entrant in the 200 butterfly, but it didn't matter as she competed in any victory with a time of 2:09.70. Garvey beat Pratapas to the touch pad and captured the victory in the 100 freestyle while Lower (4th) and LaForce (5th) also swam well.

In another one-two Irish finish, Stephens and Broderick teamed up respectively for the big win. Williams captured her third victory of the day in the 200 freestyle to go along with her wins in the 200 fly and the 1000 free. The meet was not one of her best, but at least she's on the right track.

"She is a great athlete, a great trainer, a great heart, and a great spirit, she'll be back," said Welsh of Williams. "Five days out of the water is hard. We believe in energy, prayer, and the spirit of Notre Dame. We believe we will succeed on self-discipline and on our love for each other."
LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA had an up-and-down season, but the second-ranked Bruins couldn't survive falling five points from Southern Cal in the first half.

The No. 25 Trojans got a career-high 22 points from Duane Cooper and held off UCLA's rally to hand the Bruins their first loss of the season, 86-79 Wednesday night.

Southern Cal (14-3 overall, 6-1 in the Pac-10) extended its crosstown rivals by surprise and won at Pauley Pavilion for the first time since a four-overtime victory in 1985.

The Trojans were ahead 75-65 with two minutes left and, after UCLA (14-1, 6-1) closed to 82-79, held on at the foul line.

"I wish I could say it was the coach or the players but I'm still trying to figure out how we won," said USC coach George Raveling, who got his first win in 11 tries since coming to USC.

Raveling, formerly at Iowa and recently at Seattle State, scored 18 of his 20 points in the first half and hit 10-of-16 at Pauley Pavilion overall.

To explain his first victory, he could have coped Cooper's 5-3 point shooting and a 20-point performance by Yaman Sanders, both of whom shot 7-for-8 from the floor and contributed to the Trojans' 41-19 lead in the first half.

"When we were up 22, it was very exciting," said Sanders, who had 13 points in the half.

"My shot in the first half was falling so well I was letting me catch the ball and turn around and shoot.

Heidi Nalley added 22 points for Southern Cal, which led 41-19 in the first half. Miner, averaging 27.4 points, was held to seven points in the first half.

He played the final five minutes with four fouls, but helped the Trojans by making 7 of 8 free throws in the final two minutes.

"The guys really stopped forward" when he was on the bench, Miner said. "We're a very close team and at the end of the game, we just kept encouraging each other to hang in there and we did."}

After the Bruins rallied to within 58-56 with 3:39 to play, Southern Cal came back to score the next seven points, including five from Sanders.

UCLA got its first straight points from Tracy Murray and Mitchell Butler down the stretch but couldn't catch up.

"I thought we were in it all the way down to the last 40 or so seconds," Murray said. "We were hitting the 3s but they would come back and hit their foul shots.

Murray and Maclean each had 21 points.

G'town 61, St. John's 48
LANDOVER, Md. — Alonzo Mourning scored 20 points and Irvin Church had 16 Wednesday night as Georgetown moved into second place in the Big East by beating St. John's 61-48.

Church, a freshman guard, hit 3-of-8 from the floor for the Hoyas, who improved their record to 12-4. St. John's fell to 10-7.

The game was tied 11 times over the first 30 minutes before Georgetown took control. The Hoyas took a 41-39 lead on a pair of free throws by Mourning with 10:08 remaining and a jumper by Mourning made it 43-39 one minute later. A 3-pointer by Church at 8:30 gave George town a seven point lead, and two free throws by Robert Churchwell made it 48-39.

St. John's finally broke a drought of almost five minutes when Jason Buchanan hit a 3-pointer at 5:30, cutting the gap to 48-42, but Joey Brown answered with a 3-pointer that rebuild the Hoyas nine point margin.

The Redmen, who had enjoyed an earlier 11-1 lead, had only three first field goals and no free throws in the final ten minutes of play.

Malk Sealy, who scored the first six points for St. John's, finished with 12 to lead the Redman. Lamont McMillard, who had 11 in the opening half, did not score again.

Okla.10, TX Southern 85
NORMAN, Okla. — Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs didn't think his 18th-ranked Sooners had a chance against playing Eastern Texas Southern.

The Sooners led only by six at halftime. Tubbs used a 9-0 run at the start of the second half to break the game open en route to a 110-85 victory.

The first half was a yawner to say the least. I don't know if anybody was ready," Tubbs said. "The band even hit some bad notes.

"I thought we got our players' attention in the second half and actually made some progress," said Patterson.

Damon Patterson scored 23 points and Angelo Hamilton added a career-high 21 as Oklahoma (14-3) played its last non-Rig Elight Conference game of the regular season.

David Arneaux led Texas Southern (11-11) with 24 points and 14 rebounds and Charles Morris added 17.

A letdown by Oklahoma was to be expected. The Sooners were coming off a come-from-behind victory Monday night against Nebraska and No. 5 Kansas is coming in on Saturday.

"Fortunately, this is our last non-conference game," Tubbs said. "There's not any games now that aren't big.

"We're clear of that now and we'll turn our attention rapidly and be ready to play a Kansas team that's just a really good team. I think we'll have our players' attention in practice the next two days.

Kentucky 96, Miss. 78
LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jamal Mashburn returned to form, and so did Kentucky.

The 6-foot-8 sophomore forward scored 24 points and tied Duke's probable 14-point Wildcats snatched a two-game losing streak by running past Mississippi 96-78 in the Southeastern Conference.

Mashburn was off his worst outing of the season, a four-point, four-rebound effort against Mississippi State, had been turnover nine points, 7 and 3 rebounds.

"I really didn't want to press myself," said Mashburn, who has scored in double figures in 18 of Kentucky's 19 games. "I wanted to stay within myself.

"If I was a freshman, I probably would have pressed," Mashburn said. "I think that's maturity."
Knicks extend Bullets' streak
Heat defeat Sonics for first time; Augmon leads Hawks

NEW YORK (AP) — Gerald Wilkins had 22 points and seldom-used Kiki Vandeweghe scored nine of his 14 in the fourth quarter as New York handed Washington its seventh consecutive loss.

Tom Hammonds scored 31 points, seven more than his previous career high, for the Bullets, who never led after the second minute of the game.

Charles Oakley had 13 points and a season-high 18 rebounds and Patrick Ewing had 17 points and 12 rebounds for the Knicks, who won their fourth straight game.

Hawks 110, Bucks 100

MILWAUKEE — Stacey Augmon scored a career-high 25 points and the Atlanta Hawks, playing for the first time since losing Dominique Wilkins for the season, beat slumping Milwaukee.

Kevin Willis added 18 and Blair Haxamussen and Duane Ferrell each 17 for the Hawks.

Moses Malone moved past John Havlicek into fifth place on the NBA career scoring list and added 22 points for the Bucks with 28 points. The loss was Milwaukee's fifth straight.

Pacers 115, 76ers 90

PHILADELPHIA — Reggie Miller's 24 points sent Indiana past Philadelphia, snapping the Pacers' four-game losing streak.

The Pacers ran off to a 13-2 lead in winning for only the fourth time in 22 road games this season. Indiana had lost 20 of the last 22 at Philadelphia.

Charles Barkley had 28 points for the 76ers.

Heat 119, Sonics 114

MIAMI — Glen Rice scored five of his 30 points in the final 1:12, leading Miami Heat to its first-ever victory over Seattle.

Miami had lost its first nine games against the Sonics. The victory also was the Heat's first against a Pacific Division team other than Sacramento or the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Heat was 0-6 overall against Seattle, Golden State, Phoenix, Portland and the Los Angeles Lakers.

Cavaliers 95, Pistons 90

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Craig Ehlo's short jumper with 0.9 seconds left broke a tie and sent Cleveland past Detroit.

Ehlo took a pass from Mark Price that rolled off the backboard, and the ball was deflected over Greg Kelser's head and fell through the basket. Price hit late three free throws to clinch the game.

John Williams led Cleveland with 22 points. Orlando Woolridge had 26 points for Detroit and Thomas added 24.

Spurs 108, Mavericks 93

DALLAS — Willie Anderson and the San Antonio Spurs shot down Dallas in the third quarter and went on to send the Mavericks to their 14th loss in 15 games.

The Spurs, leading 49-42 at halftime, outscored Dallas 37-16 in the third quarter.

Anderson scored 13 points on 5 of 5 shooting as San Antonio made 16 of 22 attempts. The Mavericks, meanwhile, made just 7 of 23.

Anderson finished with 21 points.

Suns 128, Nets 95

PHOENIX — Tom Chambers hit all of his six shots in the first quarter, leading Phoenix to a team-record 14 consecutive field goals as the Suns blitzed New Jersey.

Chambers finished with 31 points in the Suns' 16th straight win at home, where they started the season 1-3.

The Chicago Bulls and Utah Jazz have better home records this season.

Jazz 124, Kings 105

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone and Jeff Malone each scored 26 points and Utah outscored Sacramento 46-27 in the second quarter en route to a victory.

John Stockton had 18 points and 16 assists for the Jazz, who handed the Kings their fourth straight road loss and improved their home record to 18-2.

Lionel Simmons scored 25 points and Dennis Henson 23 for Sacramento.

American League teams strengthen rosters early

NEW YORK (AP) — The Detroit Tigers signed four free agents Tuesday and was scheduled to prove their defense.

Outfielder Herm Winningham, meanwhile, agreed to a $450,000, one-year contract with the Red Sox.

The Chicago White Sox invited outfielder Brad Komminsk, pitcher Mike Dunne and catcher Nelson Santovenia to spring training.

Two players in salary arbitration agreed to one-year contracts, leaving 100 remaining.

Infielder Junior Noboa and the New York Mets settled at $722,000, a raise of $132,000, while right-hander Luis Aquino and the Kansas City Royals agreed at $650,000, a raise of $490,000.

King, 27, pitched for the Tigers from 1986 through 1989 and was Detroit's top rookie in 1986 with an 11-4 record. He was 6-11 last season for Cleveland with a 6.60 ERA in 24 starts. He became a free agent Dec. 20 when the Indians declined to offer a 1992 contract.

He made $1,487,500 in 1991.

This confidence translates into making the key plays at crucial times, and more importantly, wins.

"I think we are getting more composed by playing more games together," explained John MacLeod, who led the club in hitting.

"I think we are getting more confident as they grow more accustomed to spring coaching," said Jeff Malone and each other.

We’re looking for seniors who like working with all kinds of hardware.

Careers in data processing, accounting, actuarial, and auditing at State Farm.

At State Farm, we understand the concept of “work.” Believe it or not, we also understand the concept of “play.”

That’s because we don’t think you can be really outstanding at the first without having an appreciation for the second. Which is exactly why a career at State Farm in Bloomington could be the ideal place for you.

You’ll work for one of the country’s most respected companies on the most advanced computer equipment in the industry. You’ll be challenged and stimulated. You’ll be rewarded with excellent pay and benefits. You’ll make your classmates very envious.

What’s more, you’ll have a chance to appreciate the finer things in life. That’s because Bloomington isn’t just a great place to start a career, it’s a great place to live, to enjoy, to start a family (if, indeed, you’re ready to start thinking about that). In addition to the community’s pleasant neighborhoods, inviting parks, and other recreational facilities, you’ll find two universities that offer a host of cultural and social activities to take advantage of.

If you’re a recent math, accounting, data processing, or computer science background, come talk to us at your college placement office. We’re looking for people who are motivated and outgoing. People who enjoy challenges on the job — and away from it. After all, you’re not just looking for a great job. You’re looking for a great way of life.
Indianapolis (AP) — A mostly white, mostly male jury seated Wednesday for the trial of former heavyweight champ Mike Tyson on charges of raping a black beauty pageant contestant.

Three alternate jurors also were chosen after attorneys and the judge agreed that would be enough, rather than four. Court then was closed for the day while attorneys argued motions before the judge in chambers.

Opening statements in the trial were expected Thursday. Tyson, 25, is charged with rape, criminal deviate conduct and confinement. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 63 years in prison.

The last of the 12 primary jurors selected Wednesday was a 47-year-old man who works at a medical equipment company. The jurors range from ages 21 to 55, with most in their 3Os. Four are women, three are black. Most are married blue-collar workers.

Race had become a source of dispute in the trial, with the defense complaining that the jury pool did not represent the racial make-up of Marion County, which is 21 percent black.

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford considered a defense motion Wednesday to suppress a videotape of a Tyson news conference in September. The tape, made by local WISH-TV but not yet broadcast, allegedly caught Tyson making disparaging remarks about his accuser.

The prosecution later agreed not to use the tape, said Dar Byron, the station's attorney. Byron said prosecutors offered no reason for the decision, but WISH newsman Neal Moore said the sound quality was poor.

The judge denied a defense motion to prevent the jury from seeing the clothing Tyson's accuser was wearing during the night of the alleged assault. Defense attorneys argued that her outfit — a sequined bra, blouse and shorts with a ripped waistline — was tampered with by the woman and her father.

Gifford granted a defense motion and blocked author Jose Torres, who wrote the Tyson biography "Fire & Fear," from testifying.

Gifford also denied a defense motion to tell the jury about the accuser's sexual history. Indiana's rape shield law prevents such evidence in most cases.

When Tyson left the courtroom for the day, he reached into the crowd outside to shake hands. "We love you in the ghetto," one man said as he grabbed Tyson's hand.

The black boxer came to court Wednesday with his arm around Camille Ewald, a woman he considers his surrogate mother. Tyson's real mother died when he was a child.

Tyson lived in Ewald's home at Catskill, N.Y., after he was released from reform school at age 13 and came under the wing of the late boxing teacher Cass O'Dattino.

Tyson's accuser, a 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant, told police she met Tyson at a pageant rehearsal on July 18. She said she went with him to his hotel room, and early the next morning he restrained her on the bed and raped her.

The boxer, who has been accused often of fondling women, insists his accuser consented.

"The woman knows what happened. I know what happened. I'm innocent," he has said.

Seventeen courtroom passes for the public were doled out for the first time Wednesday and Tyson's allure was readily apparent. V. John Toms, a bail bondsman, waved a $100 bill and snagged Greg O'Dell, 18, who gladly swapped his pass for the cash.

"I like to find out what goes on behind closed doors," Toms said.

O'Dell bought another ticket for $50, and sold it to a local radio reporter for $100.

Margaret Edwards, who had come to court early to win a pass, said hers wasn't for sale at any price.

"I love Mike Tyson. I believe in him. I've got a son his age," said Edwards, who plans to attend the entire trial. "I know how it is. Boys will be boys."
Louder ready to reach full form
Sophomore goalie returns from broken arm to lead Irish

By JIM VOGEL
Sports Writer

For most hockey players, ten seconds in the penalty box is a long time. But for Irish sophomore goalie Greg Louder, ten weeks was way too long.

Louder, who was Notre Dame's MVP last year as a freshman, broke his hand on October 19 and did not return until just before Christmas break after missing the team's first 13 games.

"At first, I thought I'd miss four weeks and maybe I could play with it broken," he said. But then after the doctor gave him two doses of disappointing news, he was finally told to have surgery.

"It wasn't healing as fast as they thought it would," Louder said. "He broke all the way through the bone."

Despite his prolonged absence, Louder quickly regained his starting job and played well against Princeton. He commended junior Carl Picconato and sophomore Brent Anderson each scored twice as Notre Dame, saying it was an up and coming program.

"I didn't think it was a consideration that I'd go right out of high school," he explained. "Unless you go in the first or second round, there's not really much pressure for you to go for."

Although some people might argue that goalie is the most important part of the team, Louder also explained that it is nonetheless a tough position for a young player in the draft. "I think the only goalies that ever went in the first round straight out of high school would have been Tom Barrasso, who's from my hometown," he said.

"[Edmonton] encouraged me to go to Notre Dame, saying it was an up and coming program and that we'll certainly see a lot of good competition."

They were aware that starting next season, the Irish will enter the Central Collegiate Hockey Association, which features such powerhouse programs as Michigan, Michigan State, and Western Michigan.

Louder and the Irish are excited about the challenge the CCHA offers. "It will give our team a chance to play against top teams every night," he said.

"When we went to Michigan, you could see the team was up," he said. "With 5,300 fans screaming "We hate ND," our intensity is so much higher. Playing against a team that strong, the game is much faster and more hard fought."

Louder should benefit from increased competition in skill, intensity and confidence. But despite all his early accolades, Louder doesn't seem to suffer from cockiness.

"I never really thought of myself as being overconfident in anything," Louder said. "It just isn't my personality to be that way."

This humility is evident in light of his future. "It's so hard to make it that you never expect to," Louder said. "I'm not at a point where I'm saying, "Well, after I graduate from here I'm going to play pro hockey," because it's not that easy."

"I'll have a lot more options when I graduate from here than any other hockey factory, but I definitely want to play with an [professional hockey] a shot, whether it's here or somewhere in Europe."

Nordiques lose on road; Hawks down Oilers 4-3

(AP) - The Quebec Nordiques can't win on the road. The Chicago Blackhawks can't lose at home - at least lately.

"We're playing a little better on the road, discipline has been a key," said Blackhawks captain Chris Chelios after a 4-3 victory in Edmonton Wednesday night.

It was the Blackhawks' third straight road victory on their current seven-game swing. Before the trip, the Blackhawks had an unimpressive 4-12-6 record on the road.

The Nordiques, meanwhile, apparently weren't working hard enough on the road. They're 0-19-4 this season, following Wednesday night's 5-2 loss at Toronto.

Elsewhere, it was Detroit 4, Buffalo 4; and New Jersey 4, Montreal 3.

Blackhawks 4, Oilers 3

Jeremy Roenick scored his 35th goal of the season in the third period to lift Chicago over Edmonton.

Chelios set up the goal at 4:46 and assisted on goals by Steve Smith and Brent Sutter to lead the Blackhawks to their sixth consecutive victory.

The goal by Roenick tapped a Chicago comeback from a 3-1 deficit, with Sutter and Frank Kucera scoring two minutes apart to tie it.

Mark Lamb, Joe Murphy and Scott Mellanby had goals for the Oilers, who lost goalie Bill Ranford early in the second period with a groin strain. Norm Foster came on to make the save.

Maple Leafs 5, Nordiques 2

Dave Elliott and Glenn Anderson each scored twice as the Maple Leafs defeated the Nordiques. The Nordiques have not won on the road since last March.

It was the third straight win for the Maple Leafs, who were 5-5-0 in January, their first .500 month of the season.

Red Wings 4, Sabres 4

Steve Yzerman had a hat trick and Paul Ysebaert scored with 29 seconds left in regulation to give the Red Wings a tie with the Sabres.

With the Red Wings skating with an extra attacker after pulling their goaltender, Ysebaert forced overtime with his 26th goal of the season.

Devils 4, Canadiens 3

Randy McKay's second goal of the game 1:01 into the third period lifted the Devils over the Canadians.

The controversial goal drew loud protests from the crowd of 16,707 at the Montreal Forum after McKay swept around the net and stuffed the puck past Patrick Roy with Devils forward Doug Brown in the crease. Referee Bill McCready ruled that Brown had been pushed into the crease.

Swim teams sweep UI-Chicago in midst of tragedy

Irish women douse Flames with only eleven members

Thursday, January 30, 1992

There are some things in life that bring a smile to your face and give you a warm, fuzzy feeling inside. One of those is watching someone who is presented with a great adversity come out on top.

If you ask Rebecca Collier, she will tell you that she never would have won an ACC meet if she had not been presented with the loss of a teammate.

Collier lost two of her teammates and one swimmer. The team was without a captain, and the meet was full of anticipation as the Irish and the fans of the higher purpose the season has assumed.

"Our intentions were to have Colleen Hippi and Meghan (Beeler) the whole time," said senior co-captain Shana Stephens. "We were inspired from the accident and the miracles we have seen this week."

"We won with ten girls and we didn't get to pick which," said Notre Dame coach Tim Welsh. "And a lot of love and prayer and support."

The meet was full of love and support as members of the Administration, the Athletic Department, and other varsity teams, parents, and students all came to see the women resume their season. Flowers marking the end of each lane and cards and messages filling three giant boxes by the poolside showed the Irish and the fans of the higher purpose the season has assumed.

"The experiences from this season have also been building blocks in Notre Dame's success story. "We wouldn't have won this ACC meet in December, just because we were a bit out of control," commented Terry. "We didn't really have the poise necessary to win this type ball game."

Men overcome UIC with spirit

After dedicating the rest of their season to the memory of Meghan Beeler and Colleen Hippi, the Notre Dame men's swim team returned to action last night against Illinois-Chicago.

In one of the most spirited meets of the season, the men overcame a tough challenge from the Flames and pulled out a 133-108 victory.

"It is as much spirit as I've seen since the National Catholic meet," freshman Matt Gibbons said. "It's uplifting to see the lead.

"It was a different trail, but the had to fight off a rally midway through the meet to retain the lead. Illinois-Chicago won four consecutive

The Notre Dame men's basketball team overcame an anemic first-half shooting performance to defeat DePaul, 74-69, at the Joyce ACC last night.

The Irish missed 15 of their first 16 shots, but were able to turn things around in the second half.

"When we were cold early, I felt that I had to get us going," said Elmer Bennett, who finished with a career-high 32 points.

"We (DePaul) had two quick guards in (Joe) Daughrity and (Terry) Davis, and they were all over me all game.

"The Irish came out strong in the second half, hitting their first two shots. Bennett fed Keith Tower, who put in a layup, and they followed a Daughrity miss. Davis then nailed a three from the top of the key at 18:27 to give the Irish a 34-31 lead, which they would never relinquish.

"Notre Dame gradually expanded its lead until the 50-55 with 3:23 left. DePaul was tough on the glass, as the Irish outrebounded the Irish 40-31, and they had 20 offensive rebounds.

"Overall, they are a tough, strong rebounding team," Jen Ross said. "They have a lot of guys who can get underneath and rebound."

"We have a lot of guys who can get underneath and rebound."

The Irish men were able to open the lead to 63-58 with a 13-foot jumper from Bennett, but DePaul Rees got a three-ball with 3:16 to go to cut the lead to 66-63.

The experiences from this season have also been building blocks in Notre Dame's success story.

"We wouldn't have won this ACC meet in December, just because we were a bit out of control," commented Terry. "We didn't really have the poise necessary to win this type ball game."

Earlier this month, Bennett made a couple of come from behind ball games, and that takes a lot of guts.

"It was a different trail, but the had to fight off a rally midway through the meet to retain the lead. Illinois-Chicago won four consecutive

Irish Exorcise Bleu Demons

Two minutes remaining. Would the Irish crumble under the pressure, or would the DePaul full court trap? Not a chance, as Bennett, Daimon Sweet and LaPhonso Ellis sank the critical shots and free throws to seal the victory.

"From a senior's perspective, I really don't get rattled because I've been in similar situations so many times," said Ellis.

The only rattling Ellis made was the rattling of the rim on a massive one-handed dunk that came off a rebound to seal the victory.

"It's (senior experience) vital," explained center Keith Towery. "If you do it off the bench, it's (the stretch) the time for the men to play the ball game. That's the time for the old guys."
