Democrats vow quick action on revised budget

By AIMEY GREENWOOD

The St. Joseph County Humane Society has advised residents of the area bounded by Douglas, Ironwood, State Road 23, and Juniper streets to use caution when they are outside. "People on the Notre Dame campus should also be aware of the situation if they are found to be walking in pairs and do not stay in one specific area," warned Lybicki.

The dogs are considered dangerous and will attack even if they are not provoked, she said. Often dogs become more vicious when they travel in pairs.

The St. Joseph Humane Society is conducting an ongoing search for the dogs in the area. People who have seen the dogs as well as the owner or owners.

"At this time we do have three suspects," said Officer Eric Rucker of the St. Joseph Humane Society.

One dog bit the man's arm while the other attacked his foot and then his heel. The man is now undergoing treatment for rabies.

The pair of dogs have been described as 45-60 pounds and of medium height. One dog is black, has a pit bull or pit bull mix of is and has a short snout. It is believed to have attacked the female victim.

The other dog is black, but no specific description of him is available at this time.

Cat, mouse cause of power failure

By JOHN CONNOR

In the ultimate "Tom and Jerry" scenario, nearly half of the Notre Dame campus was plunged into darkness yesterday when a cat chasing a mouse across two short-circuited fuses in the substation that connects the campus with the I&M power station.

The loss of power was most severe on the western half of the campus, along Juniper Road, said John DeLee, Director of Utilities for the University.

Numerous buildings, including the Computer and Mathematics Building, Crowley Hall of Music, Hayes-Healy Center Hurley Hall of Business Administration, the South Dining Hall and the Notre Dame Law School were left in the dark, forcing many professors to cancel class.

Notre Dame sports facilities were affected as well. Linda JACC, the Eck Tennis Pavilion assistant, was blacked out.

Every floor above the second in the JACC, and the Eck Tennis Pavilion lost power during the blackout.

"Manipulating Reality" is a pressing issue in photo-journalism today. Tony Kelly, a leading photographer and professor at the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, presented his views on the ethics of manipulating photographs in a lecture Thursday evening.

Kelly began his journalism career with a pen but switched to a camera, citing the elements of excitement and danger for his move to photo-journalism. The professor of a rat yard, Kelly was almost run over by a train while lying on the tracks in preparation for a shot. However, Kelly confesses that, "I've always chickened-out of war photography, even if I have a bullet-proof everything." The train shot is only one of five "near death" experiences he has endured while on assignment. Another of his reasons for switching was that, "everything is going to visual because the complexity can only be registered that way..." he said.

With photos illustrating techniques and examples, Kelly informed those present of the technological problem of manipulating reality in photography.

There was a time when ethical questions in photography involved only maintaining privacy, said Kelly. However, with the development of $5,500 computer systems, photographs can be altered, for whatever purpose, at the touch of a button. Kelly described a situation in which computer enhanced, computer generated, or computer altered photographs are used, the publication not taking any responsibility for losing credibility, said Kelly.

Kelly describes the photojournalist in which when reporting the explosion of the Space Shuttle Columbia, "The Secretary of the Senate Register" altered a photograph of the incident to be received. The sky appeared very dark, almost black in the actual photograph, but in the manipulated version the picture showed a clear, blue sky. Whether or not this action is ethical, the newspaper lost

Dogs attack ND female and unidentified male

By AMY GREENWOOD

The Notre Dame campus was last night in separate incidents.

The female student was attacked at approximately 9:30 p.m. as she approached her Campus View apartment. "One of the dogs apparently came from behind and bit her," according to Officer Eric Rucker of the St. Joseph Humane Society.

The attack was unprovoked.

The male victim was attacked by two dogs about 10 minutes earlier, outside Mike's Restaurant.

One dog bit the man's arm while the other attacked his foot and then his heel. The man is now undergoing treatment for rabies.

Beware of Student Body elections

"Deck the halls with useless fliers (la la la la arf la la) / 'Tis the season for great liars (la la la la, la la la) / It's that time of year again, folks. / The petitions are circulating, the flyers are being written, and the whole campus is braving free-falling toward that wonderful moment in our lives (drumroll, please)—the student government elections! For those of you not familiar with the process, at about this time, candidates for various student offices, from Student Body President to Proposer-Scopper Committee Chairperson, start passing out fliers and telling anyone near enough to listen why they are the right ones for the office.

In the past, some candidates have displayed, well, less-than-fully-commendable qualities on their way to elected positions. Here are a few characteristics to beware of in particular:

- Use of ulterior motives. In 1990, one ticket for student body president and vice president, Vinny Sanchez and Melissa Smith, violated some archaic rule against putting up table tents in the dining halls. In a Senate meeting held to discuss this violation, two members of opposite tickets (including eventual winner Bob Patask) failed to see the obvious conflict of interest and voted to sanction and fine the Sanchez-Smith ticket.

- Naivete. These same candidates were obviously under the impression that college students select their leaders on the basis of table tents.

- Lack of backbone. Even though the Student Senate violated its own appropriations policy with its special funding of Right to Life, they recently voted down a resolution that would have overturned it.

- Secretiveness. Earlier this month, at the one HPC meeting that would have drawn an actual audience, the council decided that, in order to "prevent misrepresentation of what occurred at the meeting," (read: to make sure only the official version of the truth got out), it closed the meeting to the public.

- Obsession with the rules. A candidate who promises nothing, in my opinion, is worse than a candidate who promises everything—instead of failing to meet expectations, that candidate sets up no expectations at all.

- Lack of concrete issues. Some of the recent elections have boiled down to a question of who promised to get more soft drink machines for the dining halls. A candidate who promises nothing, in my opinion, is worse than a candidate who promises everything—instead of failing to meet expectations, that candidate sets up no expectations at all.

Now that you are armed with these warnings, you can help set a new precedent at ND—an election with actual campaign substance.

The views are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Irish Prime Minister to resign

- DUBLIN, Ireland — Prime Minister Charles Haughey, whose administration has been rocked by scandals, has told members of his party that he will resign next week, his office said today. First word of Haughey's intention to step down came from a senator who attended a party meeting today. Haughey, who has led the Fine Gael party since 1979 and is serving his fourth term as prime minister, resigned at the insistence of the junior partner in his coalition government. Haughey, 66, had come under fire after one of his former close allies publicly accused him of lying about a 10-year-old wiretapping scandal.

Sea lion takes to road

- SAN DIEGO — Earlier this week a San Diego resident stopped his pickup to let a 6-foot-long, 400-pound sea lion get across a busy road leading to a shopping center. "It was unbelievable. He was huge," said Bill Bromsky, who was leaving the center Tuesday when the male sea lion flopped out of the San Diego River and waddled across Avenida del Rio. The sea lion, more than a mile away from the ocean, probably crossed the road because that stretch of the river is shallow and choked with plants. The sea lion has crossed the river for at least six months, but Tuesday was the first time it was seenJaywalking.

Service focus of NASCCU

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
News Writer

This weekend the third annual national conference of the National Association of Students at Catholic Colleges and Universities (NASCCU) will be held on the Notre Dame campus. The theme of this year's meeting is "Service in Society: The Role of the Catholic University and College."

The conference will accomplish its goals if "it is able to put together a unified statement about what students' views are about what Catholic universities and colleges should be doing about service in schools and the issue of volunteerism," according to Chris Soller, NASCCU president Notre Dame senior.

NASCCU was "created to be a forum where students could come to discuss issues," said Soller. The purpose of the organization is "to strengthen Catholic education through open forums and insightful discussions," he added. "It serves to unite Catholic students from universities and colleges. One hundred and fifty schools are involved and discuss unique issues, such as parietals."

There will be 120 representatives from approximately 35 schools attending the meeting. The keynote address will be given by Father William Bryon, president of the Catholic University of America and also a member of the Board of Directors of the Presidents Commission on National and Community Service. The address will be open to the public and will be held on Friday night at 8 p.m. at the Center for Continuing Education auditorium. There is no admission.

The agenda for the rest of the weekend includes Saturday morning issue discussion groups which will be led by Notre Dame faculty members. Some of the topics for the discussion groups are AIDS, volunteerism, service after college and the changing role of women in the church.

After lunch the focus will be on the NASCCU topic of service in the society. Afterwards there will be a dinner in the CCE and the speakers will be the Provost and Sue Cunningham, coordinator of Urban Plunge/Summer Service at the Center for Social Concerns. Sunday morning elections will be held for next years NASCCU officers.

Notre Dame was the first meeting place of the conference a year after it was founded in 1989. Last year Dayton University was the host. Soller, Joe Cataldo and Jon Barger are the organizers of this weekends activities.

UN summit to decide peace policy

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Bush and the world's other top leaders gathered Thursday for an unprecedented Security Council summit to coordinate policy on peacekeeping, disarmament and quelling aggression.

On the eve of the high-profile, 15-nation gathering, U.N. diplomats wrapped up days of arduous wrangling over whether to also emphasize human rights, democracy and economic justice and sent a final text to their leaders for approval.

In the end, those points were included, but often in language diluted from earlier drafts. British Prime Minister John Major will preside over Friday's summit, the first of its kind in the council's 46-year history.

The council's new high profile was underlined last year by its vote. The council's new high profile was underlined last year by its role in the Gulf War. The summit was spurred by changes in the wake of the Cold War's end, including the breakup of the Soviet Union.

Ambassadors of the 15 council nations reached general agreement Thursday on the text of the non-binding communique to be issued by the leaders on Friday and sent to their respective governments for approval, said Hannay and U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering. Hannay said he believed the draft communique had "very broad support" but said more consultations could take place. The document was to be adopted by consensus, without a vote.

China tried to minimize references to human rights, "democracy and representative forms of government. " India, which has not signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, was reluctant to endorse nuclear disarmament.

CSCE offers 10 former republics membership

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe on Thursday accepted 10 former Soviet republics as members in hopes of binding them to European and American traditions of democracy.

"The decision to create not a geographical but a political Europe is now irreversible," Italian Foreign Minister Gianu de Michaelis told reporters. "Today we have laid down the first important element of a new world order."

Saying the CSCE had served as "the conscience of the continent," U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III said the group now faced the challenge of extending its values to the new independent states.

"CSCE can serve as a compass" to guide the states to democracy and free market economies, Baker said.

He spoke to the meeting of foreign ministers on a brief stopover between Middle East talks in Moscow and a U.N. Security Council meeting in New York.

The CSCE, which began as a community of 32 European nations, the Soviet Union, the United States and Canada with the signing of the Helsinki Accords in 1975, now encompasses the northern hemisphere from San Francisco to Vladivostok, embracing 48 states.

The Helsinki Accords and subsequent CSCE documents helped the West press Eastern European nations to abide by human rights commitments.

The former Soviet states are obligated to undertake those commitments, as well as those concerning security and arms control.

"The old orders are falling apart and it is our task to build new ones," Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel said in his opening address.

Nationalism and its potential for violence in Yugoslavia and the Caucasus mountains have led the CSCE to focus on how it might prevent conflict.

China strives to repair image

HONG KONG (AP) — From the release of political dissidents to a media campaign pledging new economic reforms, China has launched a grand public relations exercise to bury memories of Tiananmen Square.

Spearheaded by the first visit of Premier Li Peng to the West since the 1989 crackdown on the pro-democracy movement, the drive is one of China's most sophisticated attempts to repair its image.

China's goal seems to be new investment from the West and elevation into the role of a world power, a status Beijing especially covets following the collapse of the Soviet Union.

New investment and trade would help China's Communist Party maintain strong economic growth and satisfy rising expectations of China's 1.1 billion people. Increased international prestige would bolster the domestic stature of Beijing's leaders.

Li has been visiting in Europe and is coming to New York for a U.N. Security Council summit Friday. He reportedly will meet briefly with President Bush — a major public relations victory for a figure so closely associated with keeping the domestic stature of Beijing's leaders.

The United States is a main target of China's image campaign.

China is fresh from tough trade negotiations with Washington over intellectual property and copyright protection. Later this year, Beijing faces a battle in the U.S. Congress over the removal of China's most-favored-nation trade status, which guarantees the lowest U.S. tariffs for Chinese goods.

Chinese officials are waging a sophisticated campaign — broadcasting some stories domestically while using pro-Beijing papers in Hong Kong to serve others up for foreign consumption alone.

When paramount leader Deng Xiaoping surfaced in southern China last week in his first public appearance in a year, China's state-run media was silent while the story made front pages in Hong Kong. China's media also did not mention Deng's praise of capitalism.

Reports Saturday that China released nine more dissidents briefly with President Bush — a major public relations victory for a figure so closely associated with keeping the domestic stature of Beijing's leaders.

The latest volley in the campaign was fired Thursday. It also was directed abroad.

An official Chinese magazine published in Hong Kong said the Communist Party will downplay ideology and promote "pragmatic cadres" at the party congress next autumn.

Bauhunia magazine said China is committed to pursuing "political consultation" and elevating "younger, more energetic" officials.

Chinese media have been covering Li's visit to Italy, Switzerland, Spain and Portugal, but it has been selective about the trip, which has drawn protest demonstrations.

For instance, the official Xinhua News Agency made no mention of Swiss Justice Minister Jean-Pascal Delamuraz canceling a lunch with Li because of human rights concerns. Instead, the news agency focused on trade.

China's campaign combines fact with questionable claims. On one hand, China seems serious about economic reforms, but talk of more freedom appears designed only to assure critics in the West.

On Thursday, the Bauhunia magazine published the official announcement of new economic reforms in the Soviet bloc with keeping China's party united in its support of economic reforms. Deng was quoted as saying Hong Kong's pro-Beijing papers Tuesday as saying the Communists will lose power if they don't reform the economy.

Unfavorable economic news reported by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a rash of discouraging economic news, the government said Thursday that orders for durable goods dropped sharply in December and business layoffs were continuing to rise through the middle of this month.

A separate report said consumers' spending was up only slightly last month in yet another sign of economic stagnation. Americans' personal hope in other economic signs.

President Bush did not comment on the reports during a speech to businessmen in Philadelphia but saw reason for hope in improving economic statistics.

He said, "Inflation is down; inventories are down; the job market has been expressing optimism in the future; interest rates are down and this is no time for gloom and doom."

The Commerce Department reported that orders for long-lasting, usually expensive durable goods such as cars and computers fell to a seasonally adjusted rate of $486.2 billion in December. The 5 percent decline was the largest since orders plunged 11.2 percent in November 1990.

Orders were down 4.6 percent for all of 1991, the largest loss since the recession year of 1982 when they fell 6.7 percent.

Transportation orders were down 13.9 percent in December, accounting for most of the overall decline. If not for the transportation problems, total orders would have been down just 1.6 percent.

In a second report, the Commerce Department said consumer spending slowed to a 0.3 percent gain from November's 0.4 percent increase. Spending was up just 3.9 percent for the year after rising 6.4 percent in 1990.

Larry Meyer of Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, a St. Louis economic forecasting service, said, "Confidence is still down; the unemployment rate will probably continue to grow. We're not likely to see much more than 1 percent growth in consumption in the first quarter."

That would bode ill for the economy, since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

While personal incomes jumped 1 percent in December, the department said half of that gain was due to increased unemployment insurance and farm subsidy payments and a one-time bonus for automobile workers.

The income gain for the year was 3.3 percent, less than half the 6.8 percent advance in 1990 and barely beating a 3.1 percent increase in 1990.

Affordable economic news reported by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's mayors voiced disappointment with President Bush's budget proposal Thursday, saying it cuts urban programs and fails to provide an economic stimulus that would create jobs.

"This is an emergency, and it demands an emergency response," Baltimore's Democratic Mayor Kurt Schmoke told the Senate Banking Committee.

"The most efficient and effective way in which Congress can address the urgent needs of the cities is to pass a targeted fiscal assistance bill which targets aid directly to cities," he said.

Bridgeport, Conn., Mayor Joseph Ganim, whose city became the first in the nation to seek federal bankruptcy protection, called on Congress to increase grants to cities, stop imposing mandatory programs, increase funding for social programs and law enforcement, and ban assault weapons.

Although Bridgeport's bankruptcy petition, filed by Ganim's predecessor, was denied, the move focused national attention on the financial difficulties confronting cities.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors, in an analysis of Bush's proposed budget for fiscal 1993, said it would reduce the Community Development Block Grant program by $500 million, to $2.9 billion. Congress rejected a similar proposal from Bush last year.

The conference also complained about proposed cuts in environmental aid and in public housing rental assistance and construction.

"What we need in the cities is three things — jobs, housing and a sense of hope," Shmoke said at a news conference. "And we're not sure we have seen that."

To illustrate the impact of cuts in aid to cities over the past decade, the conference pointed to eight key urban programs that in 1981 provided $23.7 billion to cities. If adjusted for inflation, they would amount to $37.3 billion. In Bush's budget, those programs would receive $13.1 billion.

Ireland misunderstood by Americans

Dear Editor:

I am writing to you in response to a letter sent by Kenneth Lamkin which appeared in The Observer (Jan. 23) entitled: Travels in Ireland reveal country's violence, turmoil. Mr. Lamkin believes that he understands the problems that are taking place in Northern Ireland because he has spent a few weeks vacationing there.

It is impossible for an American tourist to fully understand what the people of this region are going through, and Mr. Lamkin is incredibly inaccurate in blaming the IRA for the problems which exist in Belfast. The City of Belfast has been in a permanent recession since the end of World War II, when the city's two main industries, shipbuilding and linen, suddenly lost importance and the problems that are taking place. Since then the unemployment figure has hovered around 20 percent. Mr. Lamkin, along with American television and radio, have given to the American people the idea that Ireland is a country not to be travelled to, that any tourist runs the risk of being shot down or killed in a bomb attack. With the exception of a few areas in the North, Ireland is a very beautiful and peaceful country, with warm and hospitable people and beautiful scenery.

Anyone who minds their own business and uses common sense (which includes not walking through Belfast at night or driving down the Falls Road with the car windows rolled down) can rest assured that violence will not come their way. This is what the majority of the people in Belfast have been trying to do for the last 20 years, for they have enough problems in their own homes.

Belfast, with its crime and pollution, is one of the worst cities in Europe, and the fact that it is governed by rich nobles in London has not helped the situation. The aggression that is shown by the IRA is simply the response to the dire straits in which they live.

They are less in the job of hunting down Protestants than of making a statement to the British Government. They are trying to stop.

Mr. Lamkin is horribly inaccurate in depicting the IRA as a terrorist organization that sends money and weapons to the British Government. They are less in the job of sending money and weapons to the British Government. They are trying to stop.

Mr. Lamkin believes that he understands the problems of Northern Ireland because he has spent a few weeks vacationing there. It is impossible for an American tourist to fully understand what the people of this region are going through.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"It's a dog-eat-dog world and I'm wearing milk bone underwear." -- Norm Peterson (George Wendt)

One year ND student
It would be easy to start this column by saying something eloquent about the apotheosis of postmodern diplomacy, or maybe by asking: "What evil churns within the belly of the body politic?" But I have a gut feeling I shouldn't.

Instead, I will speak of a sickly feeling, of having been a deep in the pit of my stomach.

You see, by some strange, unaccountable accident of having that has left me wondering about my own place in the grand scheme of things. It occurred to me that I was throwing up in South Bend, Indiana at the exact moment that George Bush was losing his cookies in Tokyo, Japan.

Unfortunately, no CNN crew was in hand to immortalize my gastronomic misadventure. Funny. I didn't even think of asking my wife to get out the camcorder. A few hours and three or four tablespoons of my favorite "hot and roasting" later, I tried to get my wife to take seriously the idea that George Bush was being linked in some weird way.

"Just think how upsetting this is," I explained, trying to get my wife to put down her mystery. "I've always said George Bush is the most cynical president of all time, and now it's as if I've been proven correct, even by my own boppings or something."

"Yes, dear," my wife said by way of reassuring me, turning this page to find out if the government is responsible for the unexpected appearance of a second corpse.

"My God, I wonder what I was doing the moment Bush decided to appoint Lynne Cheney chairman of NRC. Let's face it, when he made up his mind to kick "some ass" in the Persian Gulf."

 Probably figuring I was suffering from some exotic type of intestinally-induced delirium, my wife put her book down and passed me on the shoulder.

"Look at the bright side," she said. "Maybe you're on some type of psychic hotline to George Bush that enables you to control what he does."

You know? My God, I wonder what I threw up only because I was throwing up?"

"Why now?" I asked my wife.

"I felt the presence of a disembodied head of state hovering before me."

"You betcha. Listen, I know you feel it is necessary to make letter (The Observer Jan. 22), I agree that more should be done to support pregnant Catholic, omens of my fellow nation as a whole."

Mr. Gaul would agree with me in seeing this is a good thing to send a subliminal message to its crew for each possible number of combinations (\(C(n,r)=\frac{n!}{r!(n-r)!}\)) for each possible number of toppings to be put on the burger (r), which ranges from zero to thirty-two. We need to sum all thirty-three of these combinations together. This results in a total of one hundred and eighty-four, which allows for choosing any one type of roll. The final number is thirty-two, which allows for one hundred and eighty-four differ- en t ways to decorate your burger.

This still seems like a lot, but the RLN is wrong by a world. By being a Christian, we have the capacity to be joy to be witnesses of the Truth of Christ in a world of doubt and error. We must be prophets and expect nothing less than that Christ's kingdom here on earth. Today.

"Lack of education" and a "Failure in American society to place the highest value in human life" are both some of the causes of abortion. Why then eliminate it if it teaches the only true form of protection from disease and unwanted pregnancies, namely abortion? Why replace our Faith with something that negates the very truth of our Faith that proclaims the beauty of the human life?

We all need to pray diligently for God's will to be done. That may mean a sacrifice of our will, but that is part of being a Christian.

Christopher J. Beaudet

Dear Editor:

I am writing Mr. Josh Gaul's letter (The Observer Jan. 22). I feel it is necessary to make some clarification. It refers to none of the erroneous argu­ ments that fellow Cavanaugh resident.

To begin with let me state that I am pleased that Mr. Gaul sees abortion as a "plague." Recognizing it for what it is would be to save many of the lives.

I also agree that more should be done to support pregnant women and their families. Much is being done now but there is still much room for improvement. As a Roman Catholic, however, I must dis­ agree that seeing this is a plague, how this evil should be eradicated.

Mr. Gaul's statement that "the alarming rate of abortion in the United States is not due to its legalacy" is simply incorrect. A woman's motivations for having an abortion cannot be affected by the law, but one can at least say that the rate at which abortions are done is greatly influenced by the law. To say that acts bear no relationship to laws that pertain to is to ignore the history and tell us about other con­ troversial issues. At one time, racism was widely accepted, encouraged, and vented. It was not seen as something that is wrong. Abortion too is not only seen as something that is wrong but also as a fundamental right. Some people thought that racism was absolutely right and fought to have laws that would prohibit the venting of racism while knowing all along that the laws would not eliminate racism just as most acts of violence.

Some people today think that abortion is wrong and are fighting to have laws passed to prohibit the act of abortion while knowing that the laws are not going to convince everyone that abortion is wrong nor end all acts of abortion. After the anti-discrimination laws began to work for the common good.

A Catholic cannot profess be­ lief in Christ's self-identification with the truth, and the truth, and the life (Jn 14:6) and then dismiss this profound declaration because someone disagrees with it. People disagreed with Christ when He said, yet He is going to preach it. People have died for this truth of the Faith! We can call on them.

If one truly believes in Christ and in the Church of which He is Head, then one must believe that Christ through Holy Mother Church knows what is best for not only each individual but for the nation as a whole, as well as the entire best for the nation as a whole.

It would appear as if the Faith is a hindrance to bring the common good. I tend to think, as I am sure most Catholics do, that Christ's law would not only help bring about what is best for our nation as a whole but that obedience to Christ's law is what is best for our nation as a whole.

celebration of international women

Readings reflect different lives and experiences

By Elizabeth Costello
Accent Writer

The whole idea is to present different aspects of women’s lives, according to Diana Matthai, Assistant Professional Specialist, Snite Museum.

Five of the six readers are native of countries other than America. They chose to read works of women authors from their home countries and will talk about the author’s background.

“The readings and the day are a celebration of the lives and concerns of the international women who have come to Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s,” Matthai said.

Roxana Barrantes Glave, a Peruvian graduate student at Notre Dame, is reading fiction from Clarinete Matto de Turner. Matto de Turner, a daughter of a land owner family, lived in the highland city of Cusco, Peru, Glave said.

“Matto de Turner tried to present the Indian with respect and tried to bring to attention the value of human beings to the upper classes,” Glave explained.

Matto de Turner’s concern was the exploitation of Indians. She was one of the first to bring attention to the problem of the Indian, Glave said. Additionally, women are main characters in two of her novels.

For Glave, it is interesting to have the opportunity to know more about Matto de Turner, and the Day of Women is a very important event. “I think it is important because of the national nature of the celebration. It is important for women to know and think about other cultures — not only women but men too,” she added.

This feeling is common among the participants in the day of Women. “I think it is important that we get to know cultures from other countries. I think literature is a good way to get to know people,” Beatriz Castillo, a Saint Mary’s student from Mexico said.

Castillo chose to read and talk about Sor Juana Ines de la Cruz, a Mexican author, popular with Mexican people and scholars. “Her outstanding poetry makes her one of the most important women in Mexican literature,” Castillo said.

Cruz, a 17th century nun, “tried to encourage the right of women to education,” according to Castillo. “She was very advanced for her time,” she added. In the 17th century it was hard for people to speak up — especially women worldwide discuss th...
The Formative Years

By DAVE DIETEMAN

The opening decades of the twentieth century saw great changes sweep the United States and the world.

The world found itself involved in the bloodiest combat to date, as Europe was carved up with muddy, death-laden trenches. Flappers and the "Roaring Twenties" came and went, giving way to Black Monday, 1929, which sparked the Great Depression.

Just 10 years later, an unknowing and starving world stood on the brink of its second world war since the turn of the century. "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" lamented the blight of the poor, as veterans and impoverished families waited in line for handouts and aid.

Fascism came into vogue in the wake of the Great War and the dismal economic conditions in Europe.

In Germany, a disgruntled Austrian named Adolf Hitler was coming into power. Benito Mussolini and his Brown Shirts swept through Italy. Communism, Lenin, and Stalin filled the news pages.

In the midst of these world-wide growing pains, which at times seemed as if they would tear Western civilization asunder, Notre Dame grew, prospered, and changed.

At the close of the 1890s, L'Université de Notre Dame du Lac possessed slightly over 1,000 acres of land and 24 buildings, employed 52 faculty and served nearly 550 students. Tuition, room and board amounted to $400.

 Barely twenty years later, the school's land holdings had increased by 30 percent, as had the number of faculty and students.

Fr. Thomas Walsh, the president of the University in 1893, died that year, as did Father Alexis Granger and Notre Dame's founder, Fr. Edward Sorin, leaving the university listing with a vacuum in its halls of power.

Yet as the twentieth century dawned, a series of charismatic leaders propelled Sorin's college into the national limelight.

Fr. James Burns, ninth president of the university, was inaugurated in 1920 and promptly established a Board of Associate Lay Trustees to muster a million-dollar endowment for the school.

A Scandinavian chemistry student from Chicago, Knute Kenneth Rockne, took an already mighty Notre Dame football program from midwestern to national and world-wide fame. With the aide of stars such as George Gipp and the Four Horsemen, Notre Dame football not only altered Saturday routines on campus and in South Bend, but helped to shape the nation's desire and respect for collegiate athletics. Rockne was also an assistant to Fr. see ROCKNE: page 2
It would have pleased Ring Lardner to know that by fully more than 58 years since his death, he remains one of the most widely read and imitated American writers of fiction. In the years between 1914 and his death in 1933, Lardner gained international fame as a colorful humorist, bit satirist and beloved newspaper columnist. His writings in the Chicago Tribune became an immediate collector's items.

In 1902, Niles, Mich., the always impeccably dressed Lardner literally exploded onto the American literary scene when his first short story, "You Know Me, Al," was published. By March of 1914, in the Saturday Evening Post. In the most successful dialect narrative ever achieved outside of Mark Twain's pen, Lardner adopted an idiom style to describe the exploits of his comic fictional hero, Jack Keefe, a braggadocio pitcher for the Chicago White Sox.

In 1916, an angry hoard of Notre Dame students torched a South Bend street car in protest of the banning of two students by men reportedly hired by the company for that purpose. That same year, free movies were shown in Washington Hall.

Two years later, the flu—specifically a strain of Spanish influenza—tore through campus. In those days before influenza-suffused flu shots, 10 people died and 200 were hospitalized. Also in 1918, the university offered summer school courses for the first time (female religious orders were allowed to attend these summer sessions). During the fall of the year, the Notre Dame dismantled its branch of the Students' Army Training Corps (SATC), which, since 1917, had allowed the university to bus its otherwise sagging enrollment by admitting students into SATC (much like today's ROTC) who would have instead found themselves in the muddy trenches of France.

In the fall of 1918, SATC students from the University of Notre Dame. During the war, eight Holy Cross students, including Fr. Charles O'Donnell, who arrived in 1924. In 1928 was elected the 11th president of the university.

In 1937, he turned the old natatorium into a gymnasium, as a brand new pool had been installed in the newly dedicated Rockne Memorial building.

In 1925, Fr. Walsh, 10th president of the university, banned all fraternities from campus, including Phi Beta Kappa. Just a year later, the Burke Memorial golf course opened to men—only providing students with a better choice than the scrappy grass behind Badin Hall.

Student life underwent yet further changes, however. The grade school was closed in 1929, as was the School of Journalism. As a result, the same year the graduate school was officially founded.

Notre Dame athletes excelled on the baseball diamond as well as the gridiron. The name of baseball, invented by Alexander Cartwright in the 1860s, was fast becoming known as the American pastime. Frank O'Malley began teaching literature courses in 1909 and did not stop until 1974. The campus underwent an expansion program of fantastic proportions with 25 new buildings constructed or renovated between 1919 and 1939. Among the structures were skyways and small halls. There were nine residence halls (Allender, Crosell, St. Patrick, Cross, Cavanaugh, Dwyer, Lyons, Holy Cross, Howard, Morrissey and Zahnt). The South Dining Hall and Notre Dame Stadium.

In the late 1930s, the world stood on the brink of war. Somehow Notre Dame grew and prospered through it all.

The Student life underwent yet further changes, however. The grade school was closed in 1929, as was the School of Journalism. As a result, the same year the graduate school was officially founded.
Dorais, Notre Dame lobbed pass after pass over the Army defenders to receivers who caught the ball in stride — very rare at the time. Halfback when the Notre Dame pass attack faltered.

During the 1920s, Rockne and his teams made a series of indelible marks upon the national psyche. Stan Cofall, a founding franchise of what would later become the National Football League. For a 9-0-0 record and the Western Championship, professional football players organized the American Professional Football Association, with Jim Thorpe of the Canton (Ohio) Tigers, a founding franchise of what would later become the National Football League.

In 1920, while Rockne's team stormed its way to the 1920 national championship, professional football players organized the American Professional Football Association, with Jim Thorpe of the Canton (Ohio) Tigers, a founding franchise of what would later become the National Football League.

Over the years, the Four Horsemen rode again. In dramatic lore, the Four Horsemen into legend.

"Outlined against a blue-gray October sky, the Four Horsemen rode again. In dramatic lore, they are known as Famine, Pestilence, Destruction and Death. These are only aliases. The Horsemen, however, by no means bowed the world over on their own. In fact, they relied for their successes upon the less-known Seven Mules — Ed Hunsinger, Edgar Miller, Noble Fizer, Adam Walsh, Johnny Weibel, Joe Bach, and Chuck Collins. Behind the Mules and the Horsemen, Notre Dame set itself on the road to being proclaimed one of the greatest football dynasties of all time."

Yet as quickly as Rockne ascended to the throne of national icons, he died. In 1931, Rockne's flight from Chicago to Los Angeles crashed in a remote field in Kansas. Headlines across the nation cried out at the death of a legend, and the Irish mourned. Ironically, Rockne had opted to fly because he disliked the long train ride to the coast.

Between 1910 and 1937, Notre Dame saw 53 of its players attain All-American status, although not all were recognized by the nascent NCAA. In 1947, Frank Leahy's Fighting Irish played the last game against Army. It was a 27-7 victory in the house that Rockne built, Notre Dame Stadium. The series ended (it is to be renewed in 1994) with the Cadets on the bad end of a 34-4-4 record.

In his 13-year tenure, Rockne had succeeded in putting Notre Dame football — and his Notre Dame — on the map.

Seven years after his death, the Rockne Memorial was dedicated. Twenty years after his death, he was elected into the NFL Hall of Fame.

Rockne's successes enabled poor Catholic boys of all descents to have a shot at an education and a career. The team which had adopted a star as its nickname proved time and again on the gridiron that excellence was the only standard by which the Irish judged themselves.

The world — especially on Saturday afternoons, when reserved at Notre Dame for classwork, disorganized games and the "Badin Bag" — would never be the same again.

Editor's Note: This special section is the third in a series examining student life at Notre Dame throughout its 150-year history. Special thanks are given to Charles Lamb and the staff at University Archives. Without their assistance, this project would not have been possible. The research done by Thomas J. Schlereth, professor of American Studies, was also beneficial.

Knute Rockne
the birth of a dynasty

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Editor

In 1910, a young Knute Kenneth Rockne arrived at Notre Dame. The world would never be the same.

Rockne, an excellent student as well as an actor, yearbook reporter and athlete (football, track and amateur boxing), graduated with highest honors, in chemistry, of all subjects.

At the bequest of a faculty member, Rockne was offered a position as a chemistry teacher, with the condition that he would also serve as an assistant to head football coach Jesse Harper.

As a player under Harper, Rockne had developed and honed to a razor edge his football skills and instincts for coaching. "Rockne (sic), a freshman, made a good showing at fullback but showed a tendency to fumble," wrote a newspaper of the day.

Chet Grant, born in Defiance, Ohio, in 1892 (the university's 50th anniversary), played three seasons of football (1916, 1920-21) in a Notre Dame uniform before serving as an assistant coach under Elmer Layden from 1934-40.

Although Rockne's legend would portray the gritty Scandinavian as the founding father of Notre Dame football, Grant has aptly pointed out that Rockne was not so much a founder as a finder.

"His forte had been the genius to make the most of what he had found—an already entrenched athletic tradition in which football had attained championship recognition the year before his advent," noted Grant in Before Rockne at Notre Dame.

Indeed, Notre Dame teams had compiled a record of 147-36-14 for a winning percentage of .746 before Rockne arrived. Rockne, however, improved upon that mark, as his teams went a combined 105-12-5 during his 13-year reign.

Rockne's .881 winning percentage still stands as the highest ever in college and professional football.

During those 13 years, Notre Dame teams, whose nicknames alternated between the Catholics and the Ramblers, recorded five unbeaten and untied seasons, as well as six seasons with one loss each. Rockne's teams won consensus national championships in 1924 (10-0-0), 1929 (9-0-0), and 1930 (10-0-0), but are commonly credited with as many as six championships or as few as two.

In 1913, Notre Dame won perhaps its most significant victory, trouncing national powerhouse Army 35-13 at West Point's Collum Hall Field. Coach Jesse Harper's team, captained by Rockne, led 14-13 at halftime. It was the second half of play, however, which forever changed the face of college and professional football.

Although the forward pass had been legalized in 1906, many coaches nonetheless continued to regard it as an absolute last-ditch effort when the ground game had sputtered.

On the first drive of the half, Notre Dame—who Fr. Matthew Walsh, 10th president of the university officially christened as the Fighting Irish in 1927—stopped Army at their goal line. With copious use of the forward pass, Rockne and the midwesterners executed the first recorded run and shoot offense, in the process decimating the Army defense.
Hear the sounds of Japan played by the koto

Koto is a traditional Japanese stringed instrument. Its harsh, percussive, or gentle, harp-like sounds have been enjoyed for centuries throughout Japan. Now Notre Dame students have the unique opportunity to attend a concert of koto music.

The concert is part of the second Day of Women, an event scheduled February 11, 11:30 a.m.-12:15 p.m. in the Auditing Auditorium of the Snite Museum of Art. The day has been set aside as an "international celebration of poetic, literary, social, and musical aspects of the lives of women at Notre Dame, St. Mary's College, and in the South Bend community. According to Diana Matthias, Coordinator of Curriculum-Structured Tours at the Snite Museum, the second Day of Women has been scheduled due to the success of the first Day of Women held on January 26, 1991.

In addition to the Japanese koto music concert, panel discussions, a slide lecture, poetry and fiction readings, and story telling are scheduled in the Auditing Auditorium of the Snite Museum of Art. In addition to the Japanese koto music concert, panel discussions, a slide lecture, poetry and fiction readings, and story telling are scheduled in the Auditing Auditorium of the Snite Museum of Art. The concert will be performed by a professional ensemble made up of four native Japanese women in the South Bend area: Reiko Ono, Yumiko Masekawa, Akie Masekawa, and Miyuki Hughes. Ever since the group combined their unique musical talents together eight months ago, they have been faithfully practicing two to three times a week. Yumiko, a junior at Clay High School, is the ensemble's youngest member.

The group is preparing four traditional Japanese pieces and one surprise Western piece for the concert. According to Hughes, the women plan to appear in kimonos, the traditional Japanese female dress. Hughes feels that the taste of Japanese culture and koto music will be a new experience for Notre Dame students and hopes "they come just to enjoy the music."
"It occurred to us lately that it has been a long time since we passed a week without thinking of AIDS," begins the "Town" piece appearing in "The New Yorker.

"By now, the disease has become part of everyday life: a dull hammering, there in our waking hours and in our dreams. ... It's that way, we suspect, for many of our friends. ... The word is getting empty of everyone I know, one by one in every direction they are leaving this world," said a handsome brochure we recently received from AIDS Treatment Project, a foundation that gives cash grants to the ill.

The words were printed in large, angry black letters, "For some people, everyone they know has died...."

Last October, an ND grad who works in Manhattan, told me: "New Yorkers are tired of hearing about AIDS. They're tired of hearing activists demanding money for AIDS-assistance. New Yorkers have decided that people suffering from cancer or Alzheimer's have needs too; so why should the lion's share of money budgeted for disease control be spent on AIDS? Perhaps we should not be so critical of what the disease offers. Nothing sets the Elder Brother's teeth on edge as much as the idea of a free lunch...."

I once asked an Irish mother which of her ten children was the favorite. She answered: "The one who needs me most at the moment." I'm tempted to say that public funds should be made available to the group that needs it most when the funds are on hand, but that could be a mistake.

The horror stories from the AIDS-clinics could persuade you that AIDS-activists oversee in the most tragic game in town. Lisa, visits her brother, who has had full-blown AIDS for three years, reports "The New Yorker, every morning in the hospital, where she reads to him. On her last visit, she handed the book to her brother after finishing a chapter, saying, 'Your turn.' "By the way her brother held the book, and the way his eyes moved, she could tell that he was registering the text. But he didn't utter a single word. She asked, 'Don't you want to read aloud?' He gave her a bruised look and said, 'I thought I was.'"

Each terminal illness generates its own horror, and you don't suppose that in appropriating money for disease control, comparative horror is the name of the game. It should not be good to make the horror of the disease that gets the gravis, it's the threat that the disease offers.

The Mayor of New York could easily get the impression that his city is dying. A vocal critic of the Koch administration has accused city officials of ignoring the AIDS crisis. The critic says: "Sometimes I run into Koch when I'm walking my dog, Molly, and then I address all my comments to her. The comments, spoken loud enough for Koch to hear, are along these lines: 'There's the man who murdered all of Daddy's friends.'"

Mayor Dinkins in New York could shoot the city in the foot if he were to set up AIDS-hospices in Greenwich Village, because a number of gays in the Village engage in unprotected sex. Should he refuse to allow the Red Cross to screen the blood supply coming into St. Vincent's Hospital on 7th avenue because the junkies on MacDougal Street are careless in their use of dirty needles? I think Dinkins could learn a lesson from the Church. The instance of clerics has never left him feeling more sinned against than sinnering? And the answer comes: "The one who needs me most at the moment."

Adrian, a recent ND alum who made a woodcut carved with weeping eyes, entitled "The Learned Art of Compassion," which is about the experience of having AIDS. "This is it. It's as if I were wild about how unfair things are, how cruel and bigoted people can be. I wanted to say, 'Know this! We're just people!' But now I have a different kind of feeling. It's a dying people cliche, but I want to say, 'Capture the moment, whoever you are. None of us is here for ever.'"

Women’s tennis opens season at Illinois
25th-ranked squad focused on task at hand after tragedy

By RICH SZABO
Sports Writer

It will be a focused and uni­fied women’s tennis team that takes to the courts tomorrow at Illinois to open up their season. The Illini, ranked 25th in the country, cancelled both of last weekend’s matches with Ohio State and the Eck Double Classic in light of the tragic events concerning the women’s swim team, events that no doubt brought them, along with the entire Notre Dame community, closer together.

“We were looking forward to playing, but in light of every­thing that happened, the best thing we could do was to show our support,” said junior Eniko Bende.

“I think the accident made ev­eryone feel closer,” echoed se­nior Ann Bradshaw. “Swimming was what those people loved to do, and now things have changed. I really appreciate being able to play on a team at Notre Dame more than ever.”

When the Irish face Illinois, they will be embarking on a season-long mission of contin­ued improvement. Under coach Jay Louderback, the team has seen records of 17-8 and 16-9, with Tracy Barton making the NCAA’s two years ago and Barton and Melissa Harris completing last year. The next logical step in this progression is a team berth in the tourna­ment, a goal not at all unrealis­tic.

Leading the way for the Irish will be first-singles player Harris, currently ranked seventh in the country after compiling an 18-2 record in the fall. Harris will most likely face Notre Dame’s Closest Neighbor

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson’s teen-age accuser told a judge Thursday that the former heavyweight champ pinned her on a bed with his forearms, stripped her, raped her and laughed while she cried in pain and begged him to stop.

“I can hear you, you’re hurt­ing me! Please stop!” And he started laughing, like it was a game,” the 18-year-old told the jury Thursday that the former heavyweight champ pinned her on a bed with his forearms, stripped her, raped her and laughed while she cried in pain and begged him to stop.

“Thank you, thank you, thank you,” she said.

“They called me a one-woman girl. They called me a one-woman girl. They called me a one-woman girl.”

The woman said she told the boxer at a hotel that she was going to the bathroom, and when she got to his car, she said, “He grabbed me, and tried to kiss me. I kind of jumped back, and he said, ‘Oh, you’re not like these city girls. You’re a good Christian girl.’”

The woman said she stopped at Tyson’s hotel, presumably so he could make a phone call. They were watching TV and talking casually when Tyson’s tone suddenly changed, she said.

“He said, ‘Do you like me?’ And I said, ‘I don’t really know you. You seem OK.’ And his voice changed, just like his lips, and he said, ‘You’re turning me on.’”

The woman said she turned Tyson off, don’t know what you think I came up here for, but I told him to back off. And when I come out I want to see Indianapolis, like you said. I told him to back off, and when I come out I want to see Indianapolis, like you said. He said, ‘I’m going to leave. I’m going to leave. He said, ‘I’m going to leave.’”

“Get off me! I tried to fight. It was like hitting a wall. Get off me!”

Tyson’s accuser testified at rape trial

The court student, who met Tyson during the Miss Black America pageant last year, was the second prosecution witness.

She testified in a clear voice about meeting the boxer at a pageant rehearsal on July 18 and making a tentative date with him.

She said she was in bed when Tyson called her from his limousine and asked her to go out, and that she agreed after he said they would talk and sightsee.

When she got to his car, she said, “He grabbed me, and tried to kiss me. I kind of jumped back, and he said, ‘Oh, you’re not like these city girls. You’re a good Christian girl.’”

When she got to his car, she said, “He grabbed me, and tried to kiss me. I kind of jumped back, and he said, ‘Oh, you’re not like these city girls. You’re a good Christian girl.’”

The woman said she stopped at Tyson’s hotel, presumably so he could make a phone call. They were watching TV and talking casually when Tyson’s tone suddenly changed, she said.

"He said, "Do you like me?" And I said, "I don’t really know you. You seem OK." And his voice changed, just like his lips, and he said, "You’re turning me on."

The woman said she turned Tyson off, don’t know what you think I came up here for, but I told him to back off. And when I come out I want to see Indianapolis, like you said. “Get off me! I tried to fight. It was like hitting a wall. Get off me!”

Tyson’s accuser testified at rape trial

The court student, who met Tyson during the Miss Black America pageant last year, was the second prosecution witness.

She testified in a clear voice about meeting the boxer at a pageant rehearsal on July 18 and making a tentative date with him.

She said she was in bed when Tyson called her from his limousine and asked her to go out, and that she agreed after he said they would talk and sightsee.

Bello look to recover from loss to Golden Eagles

By EILEEN McGUIRE
Sports Writer

After a disappointing Wednesday night loss to Bucknell from the Northeastern Illinois, 97-71, the Saint Mary's Belles will try to regain the confidence they had two weeks ago when they faced the Saint Francis College tonight.

However, coach Don Cromer believes that Wednesday's game should not bring the team down.

"Never in all my years of coaching have I seen a player shoot 100 percent before, but Wednesday night against Northeastern Illinois, I did," stated Cromer.

Golden Eagles' sophomore forward Cyndle Donner shot eight-of-eight from the field—two-of-two from three-point range—while successfully completing five-of-five free throws. In all, Northeastern Illinois shot 79 percent, while Saint Mary's only shot 38 percent.

In addition, junior center Julie Sayko became a scoring threat with 14 points and eight rebounds.

Senior forward Janet Libbing was held to 11 points and six rebounds, while senior forward Catherine Restovich chipped in with 10 points and six rebounds.

Therefore, Cromer's practice session for Friday's game emphasized perimeter shooting, free throw shooting, as well as zone and man-to-man defense.

"We kept practice short tonight with the hope that they'll be ready to go tomorrow," stated Cromer.

In the last match against Saint Francis, the Belles lost to the NAIA team.

"Quickness is one of Saint Francis' attributes," explained Cromer. "They also have a couple of big girls on the team that act as a great asset for them."

Senior captain Janet Libbing, whose hometown (Fort Wayne, Ind.) faces Saint Francis, agrees.

"The coaches for Saint Francis were rival coaches for our grade school team," explained Libbing. "They like to run the fast break. From our last encounter, Saint Francis is fundamentally strong and quick. We need to beat them at their own game if we want to succeed.

"But McCann anticipates the key matchup being at the 177-pound level, where JJ McGrew will battle last year's NCAA runner-up, Kip Cromer. "This one should be worth the price of admission. JJ has the ability to be one of the tops in the country, but he keeps getting hurt. If he's 100 percent, he can go anywhere," said McCann.

Notre Dame's other NCAA hopeful is heavyweight Chuck Weidner, who was issued several OSU transfers in Eric Rodzuda. "Chuck has gotten bigger and stronger, and is wrestling with a lot of confidence," stated Weidner, who was overshadowed last season by NCAA qualifier Curt Engler.

Wrestlers hope to pin loss on 10th-ranked Buckeyes

The Notre Dame wrestling team will face the difficult challenge of hosting 10th-ranked Ohio State at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Joyce ACC.

"They're probably the toughest team on our schedule this season," said eighth-year Irish coach Frank McCann. The Buckeyes beat the Irish last season, 27-6, en route to a fourth-place finish in the NCAA's, while the Irish were victorious in the previous two contests.

McCann can compete with these guys, but this year it's one of their best teams physically," said McCann. "They're just so much stronger than we are. We don't want to be intimidated."

Several Irish grapplers see the challenge as a mid-season building stone to the NCAA tournament. Senior Marcus Gowens has emerged as a leader, currently sporting a 16-4 record. He will likely draw a Buckeye freshman. Another outstanding performer for the Irish this season has been junior Jamie Boyd (124-1) at 150, who will face OSU's Ken Ramsey.

Men's tennis hosts Prince Classic
Toughest test to come Sunday when Irish take on Texas

BY ROLANDO DE AGUIAR

It's gut-check time for the Notre Dame men's tennis team. Ranked tenth in the nation, the Irish host the first-ever Prince Collegiate Classic this weekend.

Led by David Dilucia, ranked second nationally, Notre Dame will face Colorado, Michigan State and Texas. The action will kick off this afternoon when the Irish face Colorado at Eck Pavilion.

The Buffaloes are led by Jesse Witt, a Swede who is ranked 24th in college tennis. "Colorado will be a real test," said Bayliss. "They've had a great recruiting year." Steph en Figli, a freshman, and Mark LeClerc also star for the Buffaloes. Figli reached the round of 16 at the National 18- and-under tournament last year, while LeClerc downed Will Forsyth in action last season.

"We'll have a very potent team," he said. "We are their first match, and it's our only second. Both teams will be green and eager. I'd look for a close match."

Saturday could prove to be a test area on Notre Dame's tournament highway at the Irish face Michigan State. The Irish downed the Spartans 7-2 last season. "Unless we're flat or play a bad match, we should be able to win," said Bayliss. "We're a little better team than they are at this point."

The biggest test of the weekend will come Sunday when Notre Dame takes on Texas. "It's a big deal for us to get a team of national prominence like Texas at home," said Bayliss. "Texas has three new foreign players. I know nothing about them. Neither do the voters, so they are not voting for the team."

Hailing from Mexico, Australia and South Africa are Ernesto Ponce, Glyde Thompson and Alistaire McDonald. "They've just arrived on campus within the last two weeks," said Bayliss. "They are coming straight off of the pro circuit, where they've been playing as amateurs."

Another welcome addition to the Longhorn lineup in 1991-92 is Colombian Troy Phillips, who hails from Austin, Texas, home of the University of Texas, brings impressive credentials to the Prince Collegiate. He recently lost a close match to Alex O'Brien, currently ranked number one in the country.

Following Dilucia in the Irish seedings will be juniors Chuck Coleman, Forsyth and Andy Zurcher, all of whom are competing for the number-two-single spots.

"They (Coleman, Forsyth and Zurcher) have made a marked improvement and worked hard," said Bayliss. "We have three number twos, and Mark Schmidt is not far behind."

However, one of these number two will be bumped to number three, and another to number four.

"Last season, we didn't win consistently at number two," said Bayliss. "They (Coleman, Forsyth and Zurcher) have made a marked improvement and worked hard," said Bayliss. "We have three number twos, and Mark Schmidt is not far behind."

Knocking off number ones has become something of a tradition under the Golden Dome, as Irish sports teams have played giant-killer as often as they have played giant.

Digger Phelps led his Notre Dame basketball teams to victories over top-ranked teams numerous times in his 20-year coaching career. Tomorrow, his successor will try to follow in his footsteps, as John MacLeod leads the Irish into the unfriendly confines of Cameron Indoor Stadium to face the number-one Duke Blue Devils.

Duke (16-0), the defending NCAA champion, is led by All-American Christian Laettner, a senior who sank two free throws to seal the Blue Devils' victory over "unbeatable" UNLV last March in the NCAA semifinals.

Laettner brings with him a tradition of top-notch talent to come to Notre Dame, including point guard Bobby Hurley and forwards Thomas Hill and Grant Hill.

The balanced attack of the Blue Devils has left opponents in its dust all season. Duke's most recent victims were the 23rd-ranked Florida State Seminoles, who fell 75-62 in action last night.

Defending against Laettner in the blue key of Cameron will be sophomore Jon Ross. Ross will start in place of senior center Keith Towler, who fractured his left elbow in the second half of Wednesday's victory over DePaul. He will be out two-to-six weeks.

However, all the news is not bleak. The Irish still have history on their side. The last time the Irish played the number-one team in the nation, they came out on top, as David Rivers and Gary Voce led a second-half charge as Notre Dame knocked off North Carolina in a 60-58 nailbiter.

Three more times in the 1980's did Notre Dame topple a top-ranked team from their perch atop the AP poll.

During the 1980-81 season, the Irish defeated the top-ranked Kentucky Wildcats 67-61 in late December. Two months later the number-one Virginia Cavaliers, led by Ralph Sampson, fell to the Irish charge, 57-56.

A year earlier, the Irish took two overtimes, but ultimately drained the DePaul Blue Demons, led by Mark Aguirre and Terry Cummings, 76-74.

Notre Dame put another tally on DePaul's all-time loss column last night, defeating the Blue Demons 74-69. The win was ND's second in a row, and upped its record to 7-8 on the season.

Led once again by the senior trio of Elmer Bennett, LaPhonso Ellis and Daimon Sweet, the Irish showed that they can win ugly. To beat the Blue Devils, however, the Irish will have to play well. And hope that history repeats itself.

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

Less than two weeks ago, the Notre Dame women's basketball team left Indianapolis with two big losses.

Not only did Butler knock off the Irish 77-63, but freshman guard Audrey Gomez tore her anterior cruciate ligament and would be lost for the season. It seemed like their fortunes would never improve.

However, they responded to that adversity well with a win over MCC rival Detroit on Wednesday night, and they will be in action again tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 p.m. at the Joyce Center against Loyola.

Finding the right chemistry has been a problem for the Irish this season, but they seem to be coming together as their schedule winds to a close.

"We've had problems finding the right combination," junior guard Coquese Washington said. "We need to find five players that play well together. We've had some good practices this week and I think we've found a good balance."

They had the right balance against Detroit, dumping the Titans 86-70. Four players were in double figures, led by senior Margaret Nowlin's 20 points. Washington dished out eight assists to key the offense. Letitia Bowen grabbed 11 rebounds as column on Wednesday night, the boards, 56-30. The win improved their record to 5-11 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

Beating the Ramblers will not be as easy for the Irish, who lost a day of practice yesterday because of the power outage at the Joyce Center. If they can pick up where they left off against Detroit, however, they should come out on top.

"We need to play together and get good ball movement and good shots on offense," Washington explained. "Defensively, we've got to put a lot of pressure on the ball and force them out of their offense." Forcing the Ramblers out of their offense means shutting down MCC assist leader Mariann Murtaugh.

"Murtaugh is the key to their team," Washington added. "We have to pressure her and force their offense to do things they don't want to do."

Over the past two seasons, Murtaugh has collected more than 400 assists and has been the all-time loss leader.

Forsyth a winning addition as Irish gain national reputation

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Writer

Notre Dame men's tennis team member Will Forsyth may not be the highest-regarded player on the Irish team, but he is definitely a main reason why Notre Dame has gained national recognition in recent months.

Forsyth, an Oregon native, came to Notre Dame from Trinity University in Texas following his sophomore year. Out of high school, he was heavily recruited by the Irish but decided to stay closer to home. After Trinity dropped from Division I status, Forsyth asked his coach to inquire about his transferring to Notre Dame.

"His coach at Trinity called me based on them dropping their program from Division I," said coach Bob Bayliss. "They sent me a release, and then after Will and I talked frequently, he came out for a visit and met the team."

After visiting the campus, Forsyth made the decision to continue his collegiate career with the Irish. Although Notre Dame was clearly his first choice, the move wasn't without difficulty.

"When I transferred last January it was a little rough coming in, and it took me a while to adjust," said Forsyth. "But the team is a real special group and we got along really well."

In his first season with Notre Dame, Forsyth showed flashes of brilliance. He competed at both the number two and number three singles positions for the Irish, finishing with a 15-17 record and ranked 15th in Region IV. His greatest success came with fellow junior Andy Zurcher playing number two doubles for the Irish. The duo qualified for the NCAA championships last season, compiling a 12-7 overall record.

A rigorous off-season fitness program has Forsyth talking about greatly improving on last year's performance.

"In the last nine months, I have spent quite a bit of time in the weight room and now it is paying off," said Forsyth.

Bayliss has also seen the improvement in Forsyth's game and has high expectations for the talented junior.

"I expect a lot from him this season," said Bayliss. "He's
