Morrissey braves cold to raise charity money

In a campaign to raise money for the Megan Beeler and Colleen Hipp Scholarship Funds, shirtless members of Morrissey Manor participated in a mile and a half "Polar Run" across the snowy campus Saturday.

The first annual run attracted close to 120 runners and raised approximately nine hundred dollars—only one hundred dollars away from the dorm's set goal, according to event coordinators. All proceeds will be equally divided into the scholarship funds, they said.

Morrissey residents decided to raise money for the funds in a "more exciting way that would not be as effortful as a contribution box," said Blaine Shearson, one of the organizers of the run. Morrissey hopes that the run becomes a tradition on the campus to honor Megan and Colleen, he added.

Saturday morning, about 120 Morrissey men gathered in the dorm's lobby to prepare for the run. Members of the Notre Dame Cheerleading Squad painted "MS" on the chests, backs and legs of the runners to let the campus know which hall they represented.

Father Joe Ross, rector of Morrissey, fully supported and participated in the event, as well as three resident advisors: Greg Hendry, Mike Dehring and Brian Shortal.

As the clock ticked closer toward the noon starting hour, excitement grew and chants and cheers broke out. Said one Morrissey resident before the run, "even though running out in the cold may sound stupid, it's for a good cause.

University President Father Edward Malloy lauched the run. Arriving just before the start, he congratulated the runners. "Never have I seen so many fools in one hall," said Malloy. "It's for a good cause, and you're only young once."

Ross said a prayer and the men filed out, donning their "Ms." Spectators gathered anxiously to see the momentous event. With the firing of the gun, the pack, dressed in nothing but see POLAR/ page 4

Students protest company's policies

By JOHN ROCK

Angered by the environmental and labor policies of International Paper, members of the Democratic Socialists of America (DSA) rallied outside of the Center for Continuing Education last Friday.

The hour-long demonstration was a protest not only against the company's policies, but also against Notre Dame trustee Jane Pfeiffer, a 14-year member of the Board of Directors at International Paper, according to DSA co-chair David Brach.

"Our goal was to show visible concern with International Paper and get the attention of Pfeiffer," said Brach. "We also wanted to get people interested and involved at Notre Dame."

The group waved signs reading "IP dumps toxic waste. Let's dump Jane Pfeiffer." and "Labor-Yes, Environment-Yes, IP-NO." Brach, dressed as the "capitalist grim reaper," planted two memorial crosses marked "Labor RIP" and "Environment RIP."

"We have to understand that the difference between the (real) grim reaper and the capitalist grim reaper is that the former acts with one swift blow while the latter kills slowly," Brach said.

The highlight of the demonstration came when Brach gave a eulogy to labor and the environment.

"We are here today to mourn the lives lost to the paper workers formerly employed by International Paper," said Brach. "Ip's role in our society is no longer acceptable: wage cuts, health insurance cuts and holiday cuts," he said in regard to IP's labor relations, which currently has two complaints pending with the National Labor Relations Board.

Pamphlets passed out by the group indicated that IP had pleaded guilty to several felony criminal charges relating to the illegal disposal of hazardous wastes.

"We mourn the crimes committed against the environment by International Paper...which has committed environmental atrocities at plants nationwide, dumping toxic waste, polluting our water and contaminating our air," Brach added.

"Finally, we mourn the fact that a member of IP's Board of Directors is a trustee of our university. We are concerned about the association of a university like Notre Dame with a greed-driven corporation like IP," he said.

According to Father Oliver Williams, he and Pfeiffer discussed the group's actions and both went out to talk with demonstrators. "We were delighted that there are students who care enough about the environment to do this. If anything, I'm discouraged that there were not more," he said.

Pfeiffer encouraged them to invite her and other IP executives back to campus to discuss business and the environment, according to member Amy Echard.

Health costs too much for American

The thought of spending almost $10,000 for a semester of education is enough to make the average person shudder. But, what about being in the position of having to spend almost $10,000 to maintain one's health? It is not a very pleasant thought. Unfortunately, it is a reality for too many Americans.

Over Christmas Break, I spent two separate days in the hospital as an outpatient for minor kidney problems. No big deal, I thought. The bills that soon afterward filled the mailbox at home begged to differ. It was a big deal.

Bills from this "minor procedure" began piling up faster than the University can add room damage charges at the end of the school year.

In my typical suburbanite mentality, the thought of Blue Cross / Blue Shield set my mind at rest. The almighty insurance will take care of everything, I reassured myself.

After a while, I began thinking about the American health care situation. Would Joe (or Jane) Average from Anytown, U.S.A. have received the same excellent medical care that I did — even if he/she did not have medical insurance?

And again, in the mind frame of my suburbanite mentality, I rationalized that undoubtedly, Joe (Jane) Average would receive the same quality care as I. After all, don't we Americans have at least a sense of compassion?

And certainly, federal government programs would not let good standing American citizens fall through the cracks.

In reality, however, medicine is a money making enterprise, a survival of the fittest. Those who can afford the high cost of health care that they receive needed medical attention without the fear of going into debt for life. A system in which all new born babies are at risk on the day of birth -- pretty scary. A system in which Joe (Jane) Average can afford the high cost of health care that they need, but fall through the cracks.

A system in which Joe (Jane) Average would receive the same quality medical care as anyone else in the United States. And then, how do we pay for the care of the many millions of people in this country that are without health care?

And again, in the mind frame of my suburbanite mentality, I rationalized that un­doubtedly, Joe (Jane) Average would receive the same quality care as I. According to the federal government programs.

Baker: U.S. may aid Russia economy

FRANKFURT, Germany—Secretary of State James Baker held out the possibility today that the United States would contribute to a multibillion-dollar fund to support Russia's economy. But Baker, speaking to reporters aboard a plane bringing him here to inaugurate a food airlift for the former Soviet republics, said any U.S. contribution to a so-called rubble-health-fund would depend on progress in Russian economic reforms. Any further U.S. aid, especially cash, to the successor of the Soviet Union could be unpopular with an American public that tends to regard foreign aid as impinging on the beleaguered domestic economy.

Doctor accused of misusing sperm

ALEXANDRIA, Va.—The prosecution will try to convince jurors an infertility doctor artificially inseminated dozens of women with his own sperm without their knowledge. The defense argues the doctor donated his sperm to increase patients' chances of becoming pregnant or to protect them from potential exposure to AIDS, but only after receiving their consent. Jury selection begins today in U.S. District Court for Dr. Cecil Jacobson, 55, charged with 47 counts of fraud and six counts of perjury. The charges carry a maximum of 285 years in prison and a $500,000 fine. Prosecutors allege Jacobson lied to childless couples about using a sperm bank with anonymous donors to impregnate the women when he instead used his own sperm to father up to 75 of his patient's babies. Jacobson also is accused of falsely telling some women they were pregnant, giving them hormones to simulate pregnancy and claiming to locate the fetuses during sonograms.

Malloy voted ACE vice chair

By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI News Writer

Elected vice chair on the board of directors of the American Council on Education (ACE), University President Father Edward Malloy has taken on one more responsibility in the name of Notre Dame. Having recently been elected to a second five-year term as president of the University, Malloy will soon begin serving his one-year term as vice chair of the board of directors for ACE.

At its annual meeting in Washington, D.C. on Jan. 23, the ACE elected Malloy to the vice chair on the board of directors which oversees the priorities and budget of the organization’s full-time staff.

“I think this position will help the visibility of the university,” said Malloy. The ACE is an umbrella organization for more than 1,000 schools and nearly 200 associations. “The ACE represents higher education,” Malloy added. “Notre Dame benefits from its operation as well as the other member schools.”

One of Malloy’s roles in his new position will be as a representative of higher education to Congress. According to Malloy, his new job will also entail three meetings a year at the ACE’s headquarters in Washington as well as telephone and fax communication with the full-time staff.

“Right now I am playing an assisting role, learning the responsibilities of the position until I take over full time,” Malloy said.

how to maintain popularity without becoming caught in the wave of sensationalism, according to Storin. In determining whether a news story maintains this balance, Storin stated, "It's a matter of judgement every night."

Storin said that the Clinton story was carried in the January 17 Issue of The New York Daily News because it would inevitably become a decisive factor in the Clinton campaign.

"To think that this was not gonna become an issue...the lawsuit would have to sit there in some courtroom and never see the light of day," said Storin.

He said that the decision to run the story was justified on the grounds that it was not Clinton's private life that was central to the story, but the patterns of Clinton's judgment and behavior which the story revealed.

"I do not think that this is a story about whether a man running for president had an extramarital affair...it's really about behavior, control [and] discipline," Storin said.

According to Storin, the intense media coverage of the allegations against Clinton has virtually destroyed Clinton's shot at the presidency. "I think that Bill Clinton's candidacy is dead," he said.

Although he stated that "the mere existence of a relationship like that should disqualify a candidate for the presidency," Storin said that the negative light shed on Clinton by the media would provide the Republican party with a weapon sufficient to defeat Clinton, should it obtain the Democratic presidential nomination.

As a result, said Storin, the Democratic party will be forced to bring forward a new presidential candidate. In Storin's estimation, the Democratic department does not regard its second-in-line candidate, Paul Tsongas, as a strong enough candidate to win the presidency.

Storin claimed that the me-dia's attention to the private lives of candidates will have implications for future elections. He said, "The Gary Hart thing sort of set up the Bill Clinton thing, and I guess in 1996, no one will run who has anything sort of set up in the water mark."

Storin's lecture was pre­sented in the Hesburgh Library Lounge and sponsored by the American studies department.

More print and broadcasting companies will join together to give the public the news, according to Matthew Storin, executive editor of the New York Daily News.

That is one of the predictions Storin has made about the changes in the American media over the next ten years. He says part of the reason for the change is the low retention of changes in the American media.

"When watching the evening news with a friend take some notes ... at the end of the broadcast ask them some questions about what they heard," Storin said. "You'll be amazed how little is retained by the common listener. (The) combination of video and audio in broadcasting seems distracting."

Storin sees the formation of news services geared specifically toward what is going on in large cities. He also predicts the three major networks will become more like news services, as well. Storin says, "(These changes) will be a threat to all established networks and newspapers."

This threat from the news services will cause an increase in price and quality of newspapers, according to Storin. The price will go up because advertisements will cost more and, therefore, the papers will be thinner because there will be fewer advertisements, he explained.

He said, however, that the papers will be able to get the higher price because the "quality of surviving newspapers... will improve because of the baby boomers."

As the baby boomers get older, they will need and want information about health care and have more of an interest in public policy, Storin said. "The superficiality now seen in newspapers and on television will begin to wane."

One change Storin would like to see is an increase in the amount of ethical people joining the field of journalism. He said the students who come out of Notre Dame are impressive because they have high moral standards.

"Journalism needs those same kind of people," Storin said. "More than ever we need centered on Catholic colleges and their academic missions, and the implications of them being Catholic institutions of learning, Hatch said."

Father Donald Monan, president of Boston College and a key speaker at the convention, spoke of how the essence of a Catholic university is to fulfill a religious responsibility by being good at both research and teaching, Hatch reported. "Our Catholic identity will be determined by the stronger presence of its perfections," he added.

Monan and Eugene Kennedy, professor of psychology at Loyola University, addressed the two speeches the first night. Monan spoke of the role of the faculty in Catholic colleges and universities. "It is imperative that we educate the students who come out of our schools to be moral leaders," he said.

Hatch participated in a panel on the second night, discussing how one goes about nurturing the faculty of Catholic colleges. "Attracting the faculty who embody and express the fundamental purposes of the institutions is the most critical responsibility these colleges and universities have," Hatch said.

In the second panel, three universities and colleges addressed the importance of a Catholic education, and how these schools made a difference in their lives, O'Meara said. "These were three appreciative reflections on the personal, spiritual and intellectual impact of an education from a Catholic college or university," Hatch said.

The ACCU has existed since 1974 as an association of Catholic colleges and universities across the nation. The ACCU is a group of Catholic academics, and an association which Catholic universities and colleges across the nation join voluntarily, O'Meara said. The director of the ACCU is Sister Alice Gallin, who is also a member of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees. An international association also exists, which University President Father Edward Malloy attended in Tulose, France last fall, O'Meara added.
Dear Fellow Sophomores,

So far this year, the four of us have had a wonderful time serving as your class officers. The job has been challenging, yet very rewarding. However, for various reasons, the four of us will not be running for Junior Class Office next year. Our initial goal for this school year was quite demanding, for we wanted to unify the Class of 1994 and make a positive impact on the community. The entire council has shown much persistence in their support, enthusiasm and commitment to the class throughout the year. We thank them for their dedication. Although we feel our group has made considerable progress, there remains much to be done in an effort to better accomplish our goal. We encourage future councils to both build on our successes and learn from our mistakes. With fresh ideas and a new set of hands, even greater progress can be made toward our initial goal.

Throughout your remaining years at Notre Dame, we encourage everyone to stay interested and stay involved. Only Class of 1994 and make a positive impact on the community. The entire council has shown much persistence in officing yet very reward.

Violent clashes erupt in South Africa, 14 dead

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black factional violence killed 14 people across South Africa, including a regional official of the African National Congress, police said Sunday.

The ANC official, Sibhukhuzo Ngweya, was shot to death late Saturday as he left a restaurant in Pietermaritzburg, outside the city and was a member of the group's regional executive committee.

Imbali has been the scene of intense fighting recently between supporters of the ANC and rival Inkatha Freedom Party, the two leading black political groups. An attack on an Inkatha leader in Imbali earlier this month left three children dead.

Police said six people died during fighting overnight in the Johannesburg township of Soweto.

It was not clear what sparked the fight, which involved Soweto residents and men living in a nearby hostel for migrant workers. Most of the hostel dwellers are Inkatha supporters.

Police fired rubber bullets, birdshot and tear gas to clear the streets. Police Col. Tienie Halgren said it was necessary to quell the fighting, but ANC spokesman Louis Ramco accused officers of firing only after the Inkatha supporters returned to the hostel.

The ANC often has accused security forces of helping Inkatha during township unrest.

The government denies the charge.

Emergency declared in Algeria

ALGIERIA, Algeria (AP) — The government declared a 12-month state of emergency Sunday to quell spreading Muslim fundamentalist unrest and said it would ban the Islamic Salvation Front.

A month ago, before the start of an intensive crackdown, the party was on the verge of winning power in parliamentary elections.

The moves by the army-backed ruling council came hours after police raided Salvation Front headquarters and after clashes between fundamentalists and security forces left about 40 dead and hundreds injured this past week.

The emergency decree was issued by the five-member High State Committee and announced on national television Sunday evening.

Later, the Interior Ministry said the Salvation Front would be dissolved because of "subversive actions ... that seriously threaten public order and state institutions."

The emergency decree empowers police and military officials to set up special detention centers, to carry out arrests and searches without observing normal legal procedures, and to try detainees before military tribunals.

All demonstrations "likely to disturb public order" are banned. Authorities have the power to dissolve municipal councils. Most of the councils have been controlled by fundamentalists and security forces.

The announcement said the emergency decree was effective immediately, but could be lifted earlier.

The Interior Ministry meanwhile filed a legal complaint against the Salvation Front. If the court upholds the complaint, the party would be banned, state radio said.

Speculation had grown recently that the government would impose a state of emergency as part of its crackdown. Most Front leaders have been arrested.

Early Sunday, the head of the five-member ruling council, Mohamed Boudiaf, said the council would act to curb street battles.

The council took power after the army forced President Chadli Bendjedid to resign Jan. 31 after he indicated he was willing to share power with the fundamentalists. The Front was poised to take control of Parliament in what would have been the first free national elections since Algeria gained independence from France in 1962.

The new government canceled those elections last month. The council promised to restore democracy, without saying when.

The Islamic Salvation Front has tapped deep economic discontent and draws much of its support from the ranks of the young and unemployed. Foes say it was trying to take advantage of the move toward democracy and install its own one-party, Islamic state, the first such state in North Africa.
Indiana crewman dies in Marine helicopter accident

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A town stunned by the deaths of 16 people when a military transport plane crashed and exploded into a motel and restaurant began burying its dead Sunday.

Investigators also began analyzing cockpit voice recorder tapes of conversations among the crew of the aircraft, which had crashed Saturday when it landed at Evansville Regional Airport, about a mile north of the crash site.

Miller declined to divulge the contents of the recording but said it would be contained in a military crash report that would be released publicly and to crash victims’ families when it is finished in three to four months.

Inspectors on Sunday used heavy equipment to put large pieces of the wreckage onto trucks that carried it to an Evansville Regional Airport hangar for safekeeping and analysis.

Mourners attended funerals for three of the 11 Evansville residents killed in the accident. The nine people who died in a meeting room on the hotel’s fourth floor were affiliated with a local plumbing supply company; the two who died in the restaurant worked there.

About 600 people heard two brothers of John Stallings Jr. — a vice president of Plumbing & Industrial Supply Co., a father of young triplets and a Boy Scout leader — eulogize him.

Bruce Stallings said his brother was also a brother to friends who came to the funeral: “I know that John loved each of you. These past few days have made me realize that John was really a brother to each of his many, many friends.”

At a funeral for Darrel Arnold, a P&I worker, the Rev. Robert Brown also said the disaster was incomprehensible to human understanding.

“To God’s way and man’s way are different planes. As far as the clouds are above the ocean, so much higher are God’s ways than the ways of man,” Brown said.

A framed photograph of Arnold sat amid roses on a pedestal next to a closed wooden coffin. A childhood friend remembered Arnold as a compassionate, hard-working person.

Funerals are scheduled through Tuesday in Evansville for its crash victims. P&I lost nearly one-third of its work force.

Earlier Sunday, Gov. Brereton Jones addressed about 3,000 people attending a memorial service in a Louisville airport hangar for the plane’s five crewmen. All five were members of the 123rd Tactical Airlift Wing based in Louisville.
US encourages use of tobacco abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is giving tobacco farmers $3.5 million this year to promote their product overseas as smoking becomes increasingly unpopular in the United States.

The grants are part of a $200-million-a-year program to promote U.S. foods and agricultural products abroad. For the tobacco industry, export markets have become increasingly important as health-conscious Americans give up cigarettes.

"There is a significant smoking population in the world, and there's a growing demand for a high-quality American blend cigarette. We want them to contain as much American tobacco as possible," said Kirk Wayne, president of Tobacco Associates.

Total exports of U.S. tobacco last year are estimated at $1.5 billion, up from $1.4 billion in 1990.

"Without question, there was over $50 million worth of new sales generated last season along with a direct result of our program," said Wayne.

The number of U.S. smokers has dropped 32 percent in the last 22 years, according to the American Heart Association. In the last few years, hundreds of communities have enacted smoking bans and most short and most long domestic flights are smoke free.

Smoking is forbidden in many offices, hospitals, shopping centers, theaters and other public places while some restaurants and hotels separate smokers from non-smokers.

Wayne said the association has used its federal money to provide "the nuts and bolts type of production techniques needed to manufacture a high-quality cigarette in Turkey, Korea and Taiwan.

The state cigarette enterprise in Bulgaria has asked for technical help and the association is trying to determine how it can help Russia.

In Turkey, where Tobacco Associates has been working since 1987, the group helped the state cigarette monopoly develop an American-style cigarette, the TEKEL 2000.

When the TEKEL 2000 was introduced in 1988, Turkey imported raw U.S. tobacco.

Last year, it was the fourth-largest market and overall sales top $100 million.

The Agriculture Department officials praise Wayne's program as one of the success stories of the Market Promotion Program, which also helps producers promote exports of farm commodities, foods, wine and bourbon.

But health activists and critics in Congress object to using the money on tobacco.

"I think it is exporting death. It's not just a wasteful program, it's a deadly program," said Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa.

USDA officials, however, say Congress has ordered the department to promote farm products and tobacco is just that.

"Unless someone makes a judgment that the U.S. Department of Agriculture should not assist tobacco farmers, we're going to promote the product," said Steve Censky, associate administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service.

Buckers of the program also stress that the money is being used only for technical assistance and that it's not promoting cigarettes to consumers, only the use of U.S. tobacco over someone else's.

Study: crime rates among blacks have not improved

CHICAGO (AP) — Rising income and educational levels since World War II were accompanied by a drop in crime rates among whites but not among blacks, said a study released Sunday.

The findings challenge "one of the most widely held assumptions of postwar society," namely that liberal social programs can reduce crime by ameliorating social and economic injustices, said the study's author, Gary Lafree of the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

Lafree also found that an increase in the number of broken families was not accompanied by a rise in crime among blacks.

"Blacks were making dramatic educational strides in the 1960s and 1970s at exactly the time crime in blacks was rising," Lafree said. Family income among blacks also increased during that period, he said.

"What we're trying to do now is figure out why that is the case," Lafree said at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

One explanation might be that rising education and income levels among blacks created expectations for jobs that the economy couldn't meet, he said. The most dramatic rise in education and income among blacks occurred in the period from 1969 to 1973, at precisely the time the economy stalled, Lafree said.

He said his findings were obtained by correlating such things as measures of education and income with the Federal Bureau of Investigation's uniform crime reports.

Lafree said he plans further studies to try to determine whether periods of greater social protest are related to changes in crime rates.

Charles Title of Washington State University said Lafree's study was "provocative and interesting." Title is editor of the journal Criminology, where Lafree's study will be published in May.

"It's a pretty unusual finding that these variables appear to be different for blacks and whites," he said.

Billy Tidwell, director of research at the National Urban League in Washington, said he was concerned that the study could encourage efforts to abandon social programs.

"There are public officials who would seize such results as justification for the retrenchment from social programs that's been under way since the 1980s," said Tidwell, who had not seen Lafree's study.

"I don't want to dismiss it out of hand," he said, but "it flies in the face of not just conventional wisdom but also what we know empirically about rehabilitation programs for delinquents, like the Job Corps. Programs like that have shown that by giving individuals alternatives — they're likely to take them."

Lafree said he, too, was concerned about potential political misuse of the findings. "Obviously I'm not arguing for some sort of a decline in educational commitment," he said.

He did say, however, that the rationale for the liberal social programs of President Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" were "too simplistic."

"The expectation you're going to get lower crime rates by raising educational levels — it's more complex than that," he said.

Black education and income levels rose in the 1960s and 1970s, Lafree said. Black rates of robbery and homicide increased three- to four-fold during that period, he said.

Roundtable focuses on Japanese-American trade

By ANDREW RUNKLE

Business Writer
A Notre Dame Council on International Business Development (NDCIBD) roundtable discussion focused on the current state of Japanese-American business and trade relations Thursday at the Morris Inn.

Kazuhiko Fudaba, manager of technology at UN Tek Inc., focused his address on solutions for improving the trade imbalance and trade relations between the United States and Japan.

Fudaba suggested three necessary changes.

First, Fudaba suggested that Japanese executives change their management approach. He suggested that Japanese executives lower the working hours which they spend at the office. Fudaba said that the average Japanese worker spends 2300 hours per year on the job, while American workers spend 1800 hours per year.

Fudaba said that this discrepancy in hours has fueled the recent comments about the American work ethic.

Fudaba also suggested that U.S. domestic problems needed to be resolved. He recommended that American management set long-term goals, like Japanese management.

According to Fudaba, American owners force management into too many "quick fixes" to improve profits immediately.

He also suggested that American businesses look to developing foreign markets more extensively. He believes that U.S. business must expand to foreign markets in order to improve trade.

Fudaba quoted the book, "Made in America," to identify common U.S. problems in business. Fudaba said that he has observed that management and labor are much more integrated and in touch with each other in Japan than in the United States.

He also encouraged increased understanding of both cultures to lessen the friction between business and political leaders from both countries.

Toy manufacturers optimistic about upcoming sales and Toy Fair

NEW YORK (AP) — A decidedly different tone will mark this year's version of the annual baruchal of games, dolls and action figures known as Toy Fair. There's a real optimism underneath the forced gaiety and media hype of the industry's biggest trade show. The doldrums that clouded the 1991 Toy Fair seem to have dissipated. Industry leaders Hasbro Inc. and Mattel Inc. are coming off a strong year, and smaller companies see an opportunity to pick up sales from the aging Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and increasingly expensive video games.

"The manufacturers are a little more upbeat about this year..." said Frank Reysem, editor of the trade magazine Playthings. "There's a hunger for something new and not the same stuff we've seen the last three or four years."

"Things look pretty positive," agreed John Taylor, a toy industry analyst with L.H. Alton & Co. in San Francisco.

Toy makers, whose business was stagnant in 1989 and 1990, had a better 1991. Consumers, although still worried about the recession, spent more freely on toys for Christmas, especially for traditional items like dolls and games that are the backbone of the U.S. toy industry.

Toy company stock prices reflect the turnaround.

Successful movies and television shows will be the basis for many new toys displayed at the 1992 Toy Fair, including dolls based on "The Addams Family" (above) and on the Fox Series "Beverly Hills, 90210."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Turnout poor for ND hoops

Dear Editor:

Outstanding support to the Notre Dame basketball team and coach John MacLeod. the poor turnout and embarrassing non-display of emotion at Tuesday's Detroit game was startling. For those of you who did not attend, which is most of you reading this, the turnout was extremely poor, and those who attended displayed a lack of the so-called "Notre Dame spirit."

We were under the impression that Notre Dame students displayed a show of support at athletic events by standing up through games and cheering in a loud manner. At Tuesday's game however, we were told to "sit the f-k down" by students sitting behind us.

God forbid that we should dis- rupt their view of the game. At the Michigan football game, it took stadium security to calm the ND students down, but this type of spirit is not good for the basketball team-oh, unless we are on national TV. We heard a comment Tuesday night, "sit down it's only Detroit"-well we just want to add that Tuesday night, no thanks to those spirited fans.

Why is it that other schools, regardless of their record, continue to sell-out games, while Notre Dame students continue to sell out? It is time for the student body to get off their butts, start going to the games, and support their team. To those who go, keep up the good work, maybe we can show John MacLeod and the student basketball team that this is not a one sport school.

To everyone else, we notice that Michigan is sold out, please don't forget that Marquette, Loyola, and Xavier are also on the schedule. To proudly proclaim "We are ND", you must first make yourself part of the "ND". We should not have two student bodies, those who root for the football team and those who root for the basketball team.

ND should show more spirit

Dear Editor:

As a recent graduate of the University of Notre Dame (1988) I have been somewhat dismayed at the lack of fan support and overall fan involvement with the Irish Men's Basketball Team. Admittedly the team has struggled and in some games even during the transitional period from the Plymouth's era to the MacLeod reign, however, this is no excuse for the general apathy that I have observed viewing several home games on television.

More recently I watched the Irish lose to the University of Detroit Mercy 72-70 at the JACC. I was shocked to see the lack of students at the game and the lack of noise generated by those who were in attendance. Granted the opponent was not a high-caliber team and the game was on a school night, but, the Irish cannot be expected to play the Duke's, DePauls, and North Carolinas every night, and I know for a fact, having graduated only four years ago, that the student body is not held up in classrooms by the time for a Tuesday night.

The ACC (now JACC) used to be one of the most feared arenas in the country. Teams such as North Carolina and Kentucky did not want to play the Irish in South Bend. It is upon the stu- dent body to recreate that atmosphere.

This Sunday a cocky, young and very good basketball team from Ann Arbor will be at the JACC. Let them know that the Irish will not be pushed around in their home arena. Shaking Down the Thunder is not re- served for the Football team. Show the Notre Dame players, the Michigan players and a na- tional television audience that there is some life left in Notre Dame basketball and the Notre Dame student body.

If the Irish are victorious on Sunday and the "sixth man" plays a major role by being too loud that the Wolverines cannot even think. I will believe that this letter will have been worth the effort.

Sincerely,

Brian D. Broderick

The revitalized Disabled Transpo system, under the direction of Mike Cipriano and Russ Singer, averages just under 300 pickups a week.

Look out!
The Disabled Transpo service is cultivating a kinder, gentler image

By JIM VOGL
Accent Writer

They don’t drive leisurely like golfers. They are not the average caddy — a motorist who courteously yields to pedestrians, as a farmer does for his neighbor’s cows. They are more like displaced New York cabbies without horns. They invade walkways around Notre Dame with reckless abandon, sneaking up on us pedestrians and endangering our safety. They use the carts as “chick magnets” and for their own convenience, or take the job just to earn an easy buck.

These are the impressions most people have about the school’s student-run Disabled Transportation program. But last year, two Keenan residents came to the Assistant Director of Security, Phil Johnson, with a proposal to improve Disabled Transportation and change negative perceptions.

Mike Cipriano and Russ Singer submitted a four-page policy handbook detailing the expectations of managers and of approximately ten drivers. Then they inherited the job.

“If a student has a broken leg,” said Cipriano, “they still have the right to get to class on time.” He cited freshmen girls and Zahm residents as his most frequent customers. The program averages just under 300 pickups per week.

In order to accommodate such a volume with only three carts, the process first involves coordination. The two managers must post their names and phone numbers in all dorms, the Directory, Health Services, and Security Dispatch to make the service conveniently accessible to those who need it. Here, the 24-hour in house service project.

Recently, a Disabled Transportation driver crashed a cart into a bench. Although no injuries were sustained, the cart was badly mangled and witnesses couldn’t help but recall those old negative impressions. The cause was not driver negligence, but the cart’s old, balding tires which lost traction on a patch of ice.

Cipriano feels confident in his drivers. “We have a pretty good system of accountability. I think the number one reason is that I know the guys personally.”

For years the service had been funded by the Office of the Provost. Brother Bonaventure Scully, Keenan’s rector, was once in charge of appointing a student in control of the annual endowment. Ever after, Keenan residents have adopted Disabled Transportation as a dorm service project.

Every year, Disabled Transportation is directly accountable to their new sponsor the Security Department. Singer must submit weekly reports on pickups, problems, repairs and a general budget evaluation of the DT division.

Phil Johnson explained the role the security department plays in the program. “The real advantage comes from our ability to fill gaps when the carts are down. We’re also staffed 24-hour a day…” But he admitted, “The real backbone of the program is the students who coordinate and drive.”

Johnson says despite a few complaints from weary pedestrians, he has received an overwhelmingly positive feedback from students, faculty, staff and visitors who use Disabled Transportation. And in his mind, their impressions are the most important of all.

Legends have spread around Notre Dame about the phantom golf carts: true stories, like races around the lakes; and false ones, like drivers so reckless that they create new customers.

Cling the policy manual, drivers must pledge, “not to be a taxi for cute girls, a limo service for athletes to the Joyce ACC, or any such activity…”

— Mike Cipriano

Transpo drivers often battle ice patches and heavy snow to deliver injured students to their classes on time. Darkness, snow and irregular or unplanned pickup times (up to three at a time) as early as 6:30 a.m.

Because of the constant urgency, a necessary axiom in the handbook is driver safety and courtesy. One concern that security had was the speed of the carts. During the summer, carts ran without the constraint of speed governors. “I could ride with the traffic on the toll road,” said Cipriano.

When students returned to crowd campus walkways, the speedy carts posed a potentially serious danger. After several complaints of fast driving, and even one from a faculty member who witnessed a part flying from a speeding cart, security re-instituted the speed governors. Responded Cipriano, “Now they’re pathetically slow (5-10 m.p.h.).”

Recently, a Disabled Transportation driver crashed a cart into a bench. Although no injuries were sustained, the cart was badly mangled and witnesses couldn’t help but recall those old negative impressions. Having to explain the incident to maintenance, Cipriano sought the particulars and found out the cause was not driver negligence, but the cart’s old, balding tires which lost traction on a patch of ice.

Cipriano feels confident in his drivers. “We have a pretty good system of accountability. I think the number one reason is that I know the guys personally.”

Cling the policy manual, drivers must pledge, “not to be a taxi for cute girls, a limo service for athletes to the Joyce ACC, or any such activity that is not in line with transporting the disabled.” While, as Cipriano admits, “it sounds corny,” the new crew recognizes the seriousness of their responsibilities.

Johnson is right; the success rate of Disabled Transportation cannot be accurately measured by a security report or a pedestrian’s perception, but by the many satisfied disabled customers it helps.

Everybody we’ve driven this year is so thankful for our service,” stated Cipriano. “We’ve made a lot of friends and have been pretty reliable. We want to change the perception of the pedestrian that the average golf cart driver is crazy.”

Today, we have kinder, gentler, slower, safer, more responsible Disabled Transportation driver. So lighten up, pedestrians. And look out behind you!

Johnson’s All-Star goodbye pure ‘Magic’

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Clyde Drexler, overshadowed throughout his career by Magic Johnson, happily deferred again to the man who has kept him from becoming recognized as perhaps the best all-around guard in the Western Conference.

“I don’t think there’s any better way to honor a player,” Drexler said Sunday after Johnson scored 25 points and handed out nine assists to win the MVP trophy in the NBA All-Star game.

“Everybody on the court wanted to see him play. It was kind of magical,” he added. “It was his moment and his game.”

Drexler, who scored 22 points and had nine rebounds and six assists in his first All-Star start, appeared to be on his way to winning the MVP award. But then Johnson, who hadn’t scored in the second half, hit his three straight 3-pointers in the final 2:42.

Drexler and the crowd of 14,272 at Orlando Arena cherished the storybook-ending for Johnson, who was voted into the starting lineup over Drexler and Magic’s former teammate Larry Bird.

“I told them I didn’t want it,” Johnson said. “I wanted to go out — with a lot of votes among Western Conference guard in fan balloting.

“The team kept telling me you’ve got it, you’ve got it,” Drexler said of the MVP trophy. “I told them I didn’t want it.”

Johnson received nine of 11 votes in the MVP balloting. The other two went to Drexler, who was appearing in his sixth All-Star game and the first in which he’s received the most votes among Western Conference guard in fan balloting.

“He went out the way he wanted to go out — with a lot of respect,” said Michael Jordan.

“Everybody wants to go out with the respect of other players and the fans.”

East coach Phil Jackson said his team, trailing by 30 points midway through the fourth quarter, conceded the game and tried to soak up the atmosphere in what Johnson has said could be his last NBA game.

“I think the last six minutes we kind of walked away from the game and let it happen,” said Jackson. “I think we got out of the competitive mode and enjoyed the spectacle. Everyone knew we were watching something special.”

No one was happier for Johnson than his best friend, Isiah Thomas, who challenged Johnson to try to stop him defensively in the final minute, then watched Johnson throw in a rainbow 3-pointer over him in the closing seconds.

“I said to myself, there is no way this shot is going in,” Thomas said. “I turn around and there it was going down. That’s just Magic. Special things happen for him. It was his day, a perfect way to end the game.”

Tim Hardaway, picked as an extra reserve when it was decided that Johnson should not take an all-star berth from a deserving player, said Magic was the inspiration for the solid performance of the West team.

Team Dennis Conner sinking in America's Cup competition

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Defiant extended its winning streak against Stars & Stripes to four in a row Sunday as the America3 Foundation continued its dominance over Team Dennis Conner in the America's Cup defender trials.

Defiant won the second race of the second round by its largest time advantage yet, crossing the line 4 minutes, 16 seconds ahead of Stars & Stripes. Pushed by southeast­ely 12- to 15-knot winds off Point Loma, Defiant cruised around the eight-leg, 22.6-mile race course in 2 hours, 37 min­utes, 38 seconds.

Stars & Stripes, skippered by Conner, the defending America's Cup winner, was faster than Defiant on the three upwind legs. Conner, who moved his mast forward between rounds, had trouble keeping his mainsail properly trimmed when sailing to weather, or into the wind.

Defiant's victory gave the boat two points. Stablemate America3, sharing its name with that of the syndicate, leads the defender series with eight points. Stars & Stripes, winless in Round 2, has three points.

Perfect season ends for Irish fencers
By JONATHAN JENSEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men’s and women’s fencing teams completed their seasons in Champaign, Ill. this weekend, with the men capped off an other undefeated season by sweeping the Midway Mercy 26-1, Michigan State 25-2, Wayne State 18-9, and Purdue 19-7.

The men’s team finished 23-0 last year, uncoached, with this season’s 14-0 record, they have retained an amazing 37-match winning streak.

The women finished a stellar 11-2 season with victories over Detroit Mercy and Purdue, both by a score of 15-1, but ended the year with a hard-fought 9-7 setback at the hands of arch-rival Wayne State.

The men’s full squad turned in an excellent effort this weekend, as junior captain Jeff Ripple led the fullists to victories over Detroit Mercy, Michigan State, and a tough Wayne State squad by compiling a perfect 6-0 record. Ripple was especially impressive in a 5-4 victory over Wayne State, winning all three of his three wins in the Irish’s 3-4 victory.

”I’m really pleased with Jeff’s win,” said Irish head coach Mike DeCicco. Also contributing to the Irish victory were seniors Ed Lefevre(6-2) and Mike Trisko(5-1), who defeated Irishmen Brian Girard(4-2) and Greg Ripple(3-0), Lefevre and Trisko ended their senior campaigns with impressive 25-7 and 22-4 records.

Teenage Irish sabre squad solidified their claim as the top sabre team in the Midwest during another impressive meet, highlighted by two 9-0 shutout wins against Detroit Mercy and Michigan State. All of the sabreurs turned in excellent performances, including seniors Ed Bagauer(7-0), Henry Chow(5-0), and David Kirby(5-0) unblemished records.

Bagauer ended the season with an astonishing 30-0 record, second only in the Notre Dame annals to two-time National Champion Mike Sullivan’s 41-0 slate in 1973. Chow also finished with a stor­ ing 17-1 record.

”Ed has joined the elite ranks of fencers in the long history of Notre Dame,” noted coach DeCicco.

Junior All-American James Taliaferro added six wins and one loss to his 25-6 season record. After competing in the semifinals of the two-day event, in the final, he de­ creased his role as Irish-killer.

DiLucia in the semifinals of the singles tournament. This weekend, Noriega con­ turning now to the epee team really showed their experience.

Belles end home swim season with loss

By CHRISTINE PENOTE
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

Working on the "little things" in practice last week helped the Saint Mary's swim team keep the score closer than expected against University of Indianapolis on Friday, 128-98.

The Belles knew Friday's meet was going to be tough. This is to be expected when a Division III team competes against a Division II team, especially against a team that has "more guns." But Belles coach Dennis Cooper is impressed with how the Belles swam.

"The final score was close for a Division II/Division III competition," said Cooper. "They have way more firepower than we do, but our girls stuck it out. It was good to see out of our swimmers that they could keep coming back. Indianapolis couldn't let up at all."

Three of four seniors boast success in their last collegiate home meet. Senior captain Michelle Colburn swam her lifetime best in the 200 backstroke, just one second short of the school record. Kathleen Grocki, another senior captain, also swam her lifetime best in the 50 and 500 free while diver Carrie Cammings placed first on the 3-meter board with her best score of the year, 225.2.

Junior Jennifer Danahy also swam exceptionally well in both the 400 IM and 200 breast.

"I was pleased because my times are finally getting back to where they should be," said Danahy. "It makes you feel good about yourself to know that you can swim that well even if you're as exhausted as we were."

In fact, the whole team seems pleased with Friday's outcome. And with Cooper as the team's spokesperson, the Belles will continue to "improve on the little things," but still work on polishing up those finishing touches.

Irish men's volleyball wins in coach's debut

By DAN PIER
Sports Writer

If patience is a virtue, the Notre Dame men's volleyball team has practiced virtue as much as it has volleyball lately. After struggling through part of the season without a coach, the Irish waited over an hour to begin Friday's victory over Ball State in new Notre Dame coach Kim Reefer's debut.

The Cardinals, after calling to report a problem with the team bus, arrived near 8:45 for the scheduled 7:30 game. Notre Dame had already begun an intraquad scrimmage to keep the modest crowd entertained. When the contest finally got underway, Notre Dame dominated 15-8, 15-11. Club president Mike Flecker was pleased with the team's performance.

"We played very well as a team," Flecker said. "The starters had a great night, and the bench came in to do their job as well. It was a good all-around effort."

The victory lifted Notre Dame's match record to 3-0, despite recent struggles. The original head coach ran into problems with time commitments and was unable to continue. The Irish played in a tournament at Michigan without an official head coach.

"We did not fare well in the Michigan tournament," Flecker explained. "You can attribute that directly to not having a coach. We needed to find direction."

The team turned to Reefer for that direction. Currently an assistant with the women's volleyball program, she agreed to take over the men's position as well. The results have been favorable thus far.

"Now that we have a coach, we look much better," Flecker said. "Things are looking really good for us right now."

The Irish will take on Toledo in an overtime match tonight at 7:30 in the JACC pit.
The Notre Dame men's and women's track teams had a dominating day at the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Indoor Track Championships on Friday at the Meyo Track in Loftus Center. Both teams won their respective divisions in the meet.

For the men, the victory marked the ninth consecutive event Notre Dame has won in the event in its ten year history. In its fourth annual championships, the women's team captured its first ever MCC title.

Needless to say, Notre Dame coach John plane was pleased with the performances of his runners.

"It's a fine meet for us," said Plane. "I am real happy for the ladies; they really competed very, very well.

The women edged out strong competitors. Calbert Cheaney, who finished in second place, Loyola who was an early favorite, but finished third, and Butler.

Freshman Lisa Junck had a "beautiful night" for the Irish according to Plane winning the 55-meter hurdles and the high jump and finishing fourth in the 55-meter dash and third in the one meter dash. Her time in the hurdles was a new MCC record while her high jump of 5-4 set a new Notre Dame Indoor record and a new Meyo Track record.

The Irish women did well in the field events. Junior Karen Harris and freshman Karen Mayer won the top two spots in the shot put final. Harris' throw of 44-8 3/4 was a new MCC record. In the long jump, freshmen Lisa Lathi and Samantha Spencer placed third in their respective events.

Freshman sprinter Monica Cox placed second in both the 55-meter hurdles and 55-meter dash with speed performances. Freshman Kristi Kramer won the 5000 meter race and set a MCC record at the same time. Sophomore Kristin Stovall also won her event, the 400, and set a record, but hers was a Notre Dame Indoor record. Senior captain Diana Bailey set yet another Irish indoor record with her performance in the 1000-meter race. Freshman Kala Boulware finished third in the event. In the mile, freshman Sarah Riley placed second while classmate Eva Flood and junior Lisa Gorski made a strong tandem in the 3,000-meter race in which the pair finished second and third respectively. Flood's time was another team indoor record.

The 4 x 880 relay team of Boulware, Flood, sophomore Laura Gayer, and Bradley crushed the opponents and cruised to a first place finish in addition to setting new MCC and Notre Dame Indoor records.

On the men's side, the Irish won all but three events in a dominating performance that left Butler, Loyola, and Detroit Mercy far behind.

"The challenge should have come from Loyola in the distance and middle distance events, but they only won the mile," said Plane.

Brian Peppard
The meet featured several events in which the Irish claimed to top three spots. Notre Dame senior co-captain Ryan Milhalko, and sophomores Brian Brach and Brian Kubicki combined for a one-two-three finish respectively in the shot put. In the 55-meter dash, sophomores Tom Carter, Willie Clark, and Dean Lyall qualified for the 14A meet with their times. Finally, in the 1000-meter race, the senior trifecta of Greg Soroka, Neil Mulrooney, and Shawa Schneider also captured the top three spots.

In addition, there were numerous events in which the Irish won the top two spots. Freshman Brian Headdrick and sophomore Craig Christison both made up the winning tandem in the triple jump while freshman Jonathan B. Meurolo and senior Kevin Keegan did it in the 5000-meter race. In the high jump, sophomore Todd Herren qualified for the 14A meet with his top finish. Headdrick finished second. Both Lyall and senior Phil Casper qualified for the 14A meet in the 200-meter event with their respective finish. Lyall also set a new MCC record with his time. Finally, in the 3000 meters, senior Pat Kearns and sophomore Jim Trautman finished also one-two.

Other noteworthy performances came from sophomores see TRACK page 15

Women win three over weekend

By RICH SABO
Sports Writer

Being favored in a contest always puts a little extra pressure on a team to perform up to expectations, but the Notre Dame women's tennis team had no trouble meeting those expectations this weekend.

The Irish (3-1) won three matches in two days to ease the frustration of dropping a season-opening match to Illinois that no one expected them to.

On Saturday, the Irish smacked Kansas State 8-1, dropping only the second-singles match. Melissa Harris led the way at first singles, disposing of Karin Luciee 2-6, 6-3, 6-3. At second, Michele Riniker defeated Notre Dame's Laura Schwan 6-2, 6-2 for Kansas State's only point.

Continuing the strong singles play, Christy Faustmann defeated Marie Plocher 6-3, 7-5 at third and Lisa Tholen beat Nell Wilcox 6-3, 6-1 at fourth singles. The remaining two singles contests proved to be a breeze for the Irish, with Terri Vitale pounding Suzanne Sing 6-1, 6-1 at fifth, and Ann Bradshaw turning in a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Marline Shrubsole at the sixth slot.

At doubles, Faustmann and Tholen pulled out a three set win over Lusiee and Plocher, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5. Eniko Bende and Bradshaw had no trouble at second doubles, cruising to a 6-4, 6-1 win over Riniker and Wilcox. Finally, Kristy Doran and Vitale beat Sing and Shrubsole 6-1, 6-0 at third.

Said Faustmann, "We pulled it together this weekend in comparison to last weekend (at Illinois). We're in the direction we need to get in. We had everything to lose, because we were supposed to win. At the same time, our main objective was to prove that we could play better than we did against Illinois. Illinois may have been a blessing in disguise."

On Sunday, the Irish swept two shortened dual matches, with five singles (one point each) and one doubles match (two points) being played instead of the usual full slate.

The Irish had their hands full against Drake, staking a 3-2 lead after singles. Harris was upset by Vera Vitek 4-6, 7-5, 6-2 at first singles, and Faustmann lost to Claudia Rodriguez 6-4, 6-4 at third. Schwan defeated Tisa Vail 6-2, 6-2 at second singles. Tholen knocked off Stacy Janikowski 6-3, 6-3 at fourth, and Vitale crushed Stephanie Dewald 6-2, 6-0 at fifth.

With the score 3-2, the winner of the doubles match would claim the contest. Susan Hall and Darcy Maat jumped in front of Bende and Bradshaw 6-4 in two shortened dual matches.
Women lose weekend pair
Special to the Observer

Shari Saunders had only three pointers of the game with thirty seconds remaining pushing Dayton past the Notre Dame women’s basketball team 61-62 at the Thomas J. Frericks Athletic and Convocation Center on Saturday.

The Irish led by as much as seven in the second half, but went scoreless in the final three minutes of the game. After struggling in the latter part of the first half, the Irish found themselves down by six at the opening of the second half.

Dayton was able to maintain the lead, until consecutive baskets by Irish forward Comalita Haysbert tied the score 46-46 with 10:28 left in the game.

Notre Dame raised the lead to seven with just over four minutes remaining, but the Flyers held the Irish to only two points in the games final four minutes while scoring ten.

Haysbert led the Irish with 12 points. Michelle Marichak followed Haysbert with six.

The loss to Dayton was the second in four days for Notre Dame who fell to Xavier 104-86 Thursday night.

The Irish were able to keep it close in the first half, down only 46-45 at the game’s halfway point, but Xavier exploded in the second half and cruised to their thirteenth win of the season.

Xavier was led by Carol Madsen’s 26 points. Margaret Nowlin topped the Irish scoring column with 22.

15th-ranked Wolverines raised their record to 14-5. The Irish saw themselves fall to 7-11.

Rose led the Wolverines with 20 points, with King scoring 19, with Webber 17, and Howard adding 14. The fifth member of the group, Ray Jackson, scored four points in joining his teammates on the starting lineup for the first time this season.

This was the best first half we’ve played maybe in a decade, or at least in the last four or five games,” said Wolverine head coach Steve Fisher. “I chose to start the five freshmen and I thought they played fairly well when they were in there together.

“ ’We moved the ball better than we have in a very long time. We’re pretty good right now. I think this team’s got a chance to continue to grow and progress. We just need to keep working together.”

The Wolverine team is still very young; however, they took a major step yesterday afternoon at the JACC in maintaining their pose and not recovering from a shaky stretch in the second half. The Irish made a charge, but Michigan was able to withstand. If this is an indication of things to come, the rest of the Big Ten had better beware.

Said Elmer Bennett, “They’re not freshmen, they’re basketball players. They are very talented, and if they stay together and keep their heads straight, they can go far.”

Fabulous, indeed.

For most teams, starting five freshmen would be a sign of a rebuilding season.

For Michigan's basketball team, it supported the belief that the 12th-ranked Wolverines may have the most talented five freshmen ever.

Notre Dame, the team Michigan, a 30-13 lead, and couldn't recover in the second half as the Wolverines drowned the Irish 74-65 Sunday in front of a capacity crowd at the Joyce Center.

Freshmen, led by Jalen Rose's 20 points, garnered all of Michigan's points and shot 48 of Michigan's 51 shots.

Michigan shut down Irish guards Elmer Bennett and Damon Sweet in the first half, limiting the duo to one-of-nine shooting. LaPomposo Ellis, behind four of five, prevented the Irish offensive threat with 17 first-half points, eight of which were dunks.

"This was a real good, important game for Michigan. It was the best first half we've played in many years. We moved the ball better than we have in a long time. We passed and kept our options to one, and we had some big performances in the second half," said third-year Wolverine coach Steve Fisher.

A tenacious center Michigan's speed gave them the tactical advantage over the Wolverines and the Wolverines dominated the Irish 37-13 in the second half.

A basket steeled Michigan's lead to 54-48 with two free shots after a foul by Pelinka.

Following a Michigan turnover, Taylor tipped up a three-pointer and, after a Michigan turnover, Sweet followed with a layup and was fouled by Michigan junior James Voskui.

Junior Bob Pelinka, missed from three-point range on Michigan's possession and Sweet took an outlet pass from Keith Tower. Sweet connected on 13-foot jumper and once again drew the foul from Voskui.

Tower returned to his starting position after suffering a broken elbow against DePaul.

Billy Taylor brought cut the gap to 54-48 with two free shots after a foul by Pelinka.

This game marked the first time that the Wolverines' starting lineup was composed of the five freshmen, and they responded by inconceivably scoring every single Wolverine point.

"We just want to go out and prove how good we are," said forward Chris Webber, tallied 17 points on the day, 12 of them coming on tremendous dunks that rocked the sold-out Thunderdome crowd.

Led by Webber's 13-first-half points, Michigan pushed out to a 34-27 lead at halftime. They led by as many as 17 in the first half, holding the Irish to 43% from the floor by utilizing an aggressive, hands-in-your-face defense that yielded the lead only once, at 2-1.

Along with Webber, Jimmimg King tossed in nine points, with Juwan Howard and Jalen Rose adding seven apiece as the young Wolverines were 4-0 in the second half.

It's too bad that hockey games don't last 20 minutes.

If they did, Notre Dame could have called it quits after the first period, the Irish would have walked away with two victories from 12th-ranked Western Michigan.

After the first stanza in Friday night's game at the Joyce Fieldhouse, the Irish looked like worldbeaters, as they coasted to a 3-1 advantage.

Unfortunately, the Broncos awakened in the second period to crush the Irish hopes of an upset, with five goals to cruise to a 4-0 victory.

Saturday's contest was deja-vu, in Kalamazo0, as the Irish match up to 3rd lead in the second period, only to be finished off 7-2.

Friday's game displayed the disparity between a top-25 team and a rebuilding Western Michigan hockey program. "They're better than we are, period," explained Irish coach Fir Schaefer. "They are stronger, faster, play at a higher level than us."

The Irish went into an early 3-1 lead, with winger Lou Zudra lighting the lamp twice in the first stanza. Right wing Troy Casey scooped in his sixth goal of the year in the first period of a 3-1 advantage at 7:17 of the first period. The second period, however, spotlighted why the Broncos are one of the best teams in the country. The Michigan defensive depth of Western Michigan just outmatched Notre Dame's talent.

In the battle of youth versus experience, youth came of age.

"The "Fab Five," touted as the best recruiting class in the history of college basketball, showed their talent on the basketball floor in leading Michigan to a 74-65 victory over Notre Dame's senior-led squad.

"This game marked the first time that the Wolverines' starting lineup was composed of the five freshmen, and they responded by inconceivably scoring every single Wolverine point.

Along with Webber, Jimmimg King tossed in nine points, with Juwan Howard and Jalen Rose adding seven apiece as the young Wolverines were 4-0 in the second half.

"They're athletic, quick, strong, and long-armed," said MacLeod. "Webber is awesome. He can go for 40 (minutes). They are confident and sure of themselves. It's an impressive group of freshmen they have recruited."

In prepping for the second half of the Big Ten season, the Fab Five is ready to go.
