Buchanan to deliver policy address at ND
Special to The Observer

Republican Presidential Candidate Patrick Buchanan will visit Notre Dame April 21 to deliver a major policy address, law professor Charles Rice announced Friday.

The address will take place in the Law School at noon, according to Rice. Buchanan will eat lunch and meet with students in the law school lounge after the talk.

Buchanan, who is on the ballot for Indiana's May 5 Republican presidential primary, was invited by Lester Fortney, a second-year law student and chairman of Notre Dame students for Pat Buchanan.

"The Buchanan appearance at Notre Dame is important not only because it will be a major address, but because it comes at the initiation of students who are taking an active interest in political issues," said Rice, Third Congressional District coordinator for the Pat Buchanan for President Campaign.

Although the topic of the Buchanan address will be announced later, Fortney said he hopes that students will "take advantage of this unique opportunity to meet with a candidate for President."

Pro-life, pro-choice activists stage demonstration

By MEREDITH MCCULLOUGH
Assistant News Editor

The pro-life, pro-choice debate manifested itself Friday in a demonstration held at the Women's Pavilion, 2010 Ironwood Circle.

Picket signs in hand, members of Notre Dame's Pro-life chapter met in front of the clinic at 8 a.m. prepared to show "witness" and pray for women who turn to abortion, according to Bill Keen and Elsa Scheidler, co-presidents of the group.

"No one is here to judge any­ one, because we care for them (the women entering the clinic) and want to give them alternatives," said Keen.

Publicity generated by the Right to Life Week attracted an unusually large number of participants, said Scheidler. Including a few South Bend residents and about nine or 10 students from Trinity High School, Keen estimated that between 80 and 90 individuals took part in the demonstration throughout the day.

Carrying signs of a different nature, a band of pro-choice activists were on hand as well conducting a counter-protest.

Notre Dame graduate student, Laura Schwengel said she organized this "contingency group" when she heard that the Right to Life protesters were planning to march.

Schwengel and her group of nearly 40 students and South Bend residents came together in this "non-confrontational, nonviolent" way in order to show their support for women and their right to choose, according to Schwengel.

"Abortion is a hard choice for any woman to make," she said. "We offered compassion rather than harassment."

While the pro-life individuals marched in front of the clinic softly singing hymns and praying, the pro-choice group marched on the Woman's Pavilion property and escorted women from their cars to the facility's door.

There is no report that violent activities took place Friday afternoon, but members of the pro-life faction claimed that clinic employees showed hostility toward the demonstrators.

According to Keen, clinic staff members, including the clinic's doctor, periodically approached the pro-life activists "yelling offensive remarks and profanity."

"We know we are having an effect when we see how upset and angry they are," said Keen. "They don't like to see us be­ cause they know we speak the truth." "Education, awareness, as well as sensitivity will help us in the long run with this problem."

Regina resident victim of rape
By AMY GREENWOOD
Saint Mary's News Editor

A Saint Mary's student was raped by an acquaintance at 8 p.m. last Thursday in her Regina Hall dorm room, according to Saint Mary's Security. The incident was classified as forcible rape according to a security report.

The victim was taken to Saint Mary's Health Services immediately after the incident. She was then transferred to Saint Joseph's Medical Center for treatment. She refused to file a police report.

The Saint Mary's Office of Residence Life has contacted the victim to offer support services, according to Mary Kelleher, director of Residence Life.

"We will provide options, such as counseling, prosecution, pastoral support, et cetera, for the victim so she can regain some control of the sit­uation," she said.

Kelleher said that this is not the first on-campus rape at Saint Mary's, but it is the first time ever that a rape was reported immediately after it occurred.

"It is foolish to think that we can protect ourselves in this community by leaving identifi­cation cards at the hall front desks," said Kelleher. "Education, awareness, as well as sensitivity will help us in the long run with this problem."

INSIDE COLUMN
Change must start with students

"We are adults!" screamed protesters at the recent parietals demonstration in front of the Administration Building. Let's stop to think about that for a minute. Wasn't it adults who came up with the idea of parietals in the first place?

Kids make a lot of sense. I was supposed to be tutoring last week, but while the eight year olds clawed under the desk to hide the teddy bears, I told dirty jokes, I ended up in a discussion with some pre-teenie boppers about, what else, boys.

After asking me if I had a boyfriend and passing a huge "L" for "loser" on my forehead while I was in the shower, one 12-year-old came out with this gem: "Why don't you just go somewher [sic] and ask him to go with you?" He'll probably say yes." She even offered to do it for me.

I remembered the rituals of grade school dating, imagined myself with six other 12-year-olds sitting in someone's bedroom huddled around the phone, and laughed at their naivete. But then it hit me that she had a point.

If you want something, you have to ask for it. Sign the petition and go to your university.

Right now there are a lot of opportunities for students to make their desires known. Believe it or not, the administration is actually looking for student input with the Colloquy 2000 of ideas. And it will do any good, and a lot of faculty members have said it won't, but it sure can't hurt to try. A while ago, Faculty Today asked students to write him a letter saying what they think about the trip to Bermuda!

"Dear Monk,

Your University is a nice place to look at, but it needs a few things. I'd like to see a student bill of rights, smaller classes, and co-ed dormitories. I'm tired of huge classes, but it needs a few things. I'd like to see a student senate, and have my teachers to

There's also some organizations to turn to. There are still opportunities for adult students, and the Adult Students for Adult Privileges group. Protest parietals.

My little brother had some other advice too. "If you want to accomplish something in this place, you're going to have to sacrifice something—your time. You didn't register to go to a library anywhere. You'd see that episode of "Cheers" five times already. Go do something!

ND student accused of attempted fraud, theft

Notre Dame student Marvin "Rusty" Setzer was charged last Thursday in Superior Court with attempted fraud and theft, according to Tom Richards of the Mishawaka Police Department.

Setzer, a former Notre Dame football player, was arrested at L.S. Ayres in University Park mall April 8 after allegedly attempting to use a stolen credit card, said Richards.

According to Richards, the credit card came from Notre Dame student Margaret Dougherty's book bag which was stolen from South Dining Hall while she was eating dinner Wednesday.

Setzer, 22, is accused of attempted fraud for allegedly trying to use an L.S. Ayres card in the name of Veronica Dougherty, Margaret's mother, to buy three pairs of shorts, trying to use an L.S. Ayres card.

Along with her wallet, Dougherty said her book bag contained a cassette player and tapes, Richards said. The Tribune reported that police, after receiving Setzer's permission to search his car, found a tape player and cassettes that matched Dougherty's description.

This incidence is the second felony case filed against Setzer in two days.

Panel focuses on ND women

By AMY MARK
News Writer

Notre Dame still has very concrete cases against women, but there has been increased growth in public awareness on problems in many areas, said Josephine Ford and Charlene Avallone, two members of a panel in a discussion of "20 Years of Women at Notre Dame: Past, Present, and Future."

The forum featured a seven-member panel consisting of Father Don McNeill and Josephine Ford of the Theology Department; Manuel Espino and Catherine Sheehy, two Notre Dame seniors; Joanne Kelly, a Saint Mary's alumna; Charlene Avallone of the English Department; and Catharine Rohrs, a member of Notre Dame's first graduating class of women.

Each panel member reflected upon the greatest area of influence Notre Dame experience has had.

Avallone reflected upon the implications of the steady increase in the number of women, both as students and faculty. The first class of women admitted to Notre Dame numbered 125 and will presently top 44 percent of the entire enrollment next fall, she said.

It means that women can speak on important issues, action will be taken, and men will support the concerns of women, she said. "Women feel free to speak out ... freer to address problems," said Avallone.

Sheehy raised the issue of relationships among the students from both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame, and the problems of stereotyping that begins upon orientation at Notre Dame, as well as the underlying seriousness of the jokes made on stereotypes.

"Coming here was actually a jolt. I didn't think about how living separately would affect relationships. They do alter relationships between men and women at Notre Dame, women at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, and men at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's," she said.

Ford came to Notre Dame as one of two women among a faculty of 500 men. "I believe we changed the image of women and the system," she said, noting the progress in student relationships.

When asked the motives for the University's turn towards the admittance of women, Rohrs said she felt it was part of a trend of many colleges in that time.

Ford added that it was a natural transition accelerated by Notre Dame, beginning with its admittance of women to summer and graduate schools, which started a early as 1918.

Ford added that it was a natural transition accelerated by Notre Dame, beginning with its admittance of women to summer and graduate schools, which started a early as 1918.

On the issue of competition between Notre Dame women and both Notre Dame men and Saint Mary's women, Rohrs said that there was "an aura that wasn't necessarily truthful ... about the competitive edge," but admitted to the still-present rivalry in presentation of women in both communities.

"There are stereotypes... I'd like to see their strengths together ... rather than being their own worst enemy," said Kelly.

Bringing up the question of the administration's attitudes towards women's issues, Avallone pointed out the lack of attendance of administrators. However, she noted that there has been "public recognition from the administration that Notre Dame hasn't given priority to [women's] issues ... like many or most universities."

"I do not see a single administrative focus on problems on women's issues," she said.

On the point of the most critical issues to be addressed to bring about positive changes to the future, some of those mentioned were the importance of day care on campus, date rape, women's awareness and ethnic awareness. Sheehy also proposed the topics of co-residential housing and the concern for the enrollment of women.

Avallone called for a women's advocate, or an "advocate for gender issues," as well as a women's center where date rape, harassment, and other pressing issues could be dealt with more freely and effectively.

McNeill concluded his thoughts and the discussion with the need to "look at people here and now."

TWA reduces fares to stay competitive

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines, one of the nation's weakest carriers, said Sunday it would cut many ticket prices an additional 10 to 20 percent in response to a price program announced last week by American Airlines.

TWA didn't say it was matching the fare reductions as had many other carriers, but said its new fares would keep its ticket prices up to 40 percent lower than its competitors on some coast-to-coast flights and for travelers who agree to fly through its St. Louis hub.

It will begin advertising the fares in newspapers on Monday.

Rafsanjani government predicts landslide victory

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The government predicted Sunday that backers of President Hashemi Rafsanjani would win a landslide victory in parliamentary elections, bolstering his drive to liberalize the economy and mend ties with the West.

The early results from Friday's voting appeared to be a sharp setback for more-radical followers of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who have dominated the 270-seat parliament, or Majlis.

Iran's official news media said 35 of the 123 candidates who won enough votes to capture a seat outright were members of the Society of Combatant Clergymen, whose leader is Rafsanjani.

The other 68 decided races were in remote areas and the affiliation of the winners was not immediately clear.

But the fact that the government-run news agency was predicting victory early indicated confidence that the measures Rafsanjani took before the vote to eliminate as many as possible proved successful.

A week before the election, the Council of Guards, a 12-man review panel of religious and civilian legal experts, eliminated one-third of the 3,000 candidates.

About 13.5 million votes had been counted in 189 districts as of last night, which results from all 196 districts expected within two days, the Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The electorate is estimated at 30 million, with only over 15 in the population of 60 million allowed to vote.

With 40 percent of the potential three million votes counted in the key Tehran area, all but one of the top 30 vote-winners were members of Rafsanjani's society. His most rabid opponents in parliament, Mehdi Karrazi, the speaker, and Ali Akbar Mohtashimi, a former interior minister, were far down the list for deciding candidates for the runoff election.

Rafsanjani's supporters, pushing pragmatic government measures, clashed repeatedly in the previous parliament with radicals intent on emphasizing religious fervor at home and Islamic revolution abroad.

The radicals also wanted extensive state ownership of business, while the technocrats argued for a more open economy to deal with Iran's high inflation and unemployment and the lack of reconstruction since the 1980-88 war with Iraq.

In Washington, President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said that "I think what you would call moderates seem to have done quite well" in Iran.

But Scowcroft also said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that a big military buildup by Iran raised questions about Rafsanjani's commitment to moderation.

Rafsanjani has advocated change since Khomeini died three years ago, and the election was the first chance for Iranians to have a say.

While Khomeini is still revered as a saint, enthusiasm for the mass rallies and constant political sloganeering born during the Islamic revolution has dimmed.

Rafsanjani also has gradually loosened the strict enforcement of Islamic laws since the end of the war with Iraq. The religious police who ensured that women did not show any hair and couples did not touch are gone, folded into the regular police or sent to rural public works projects.

Soviet prisoner shares words of peace

By CARA ECKMAN

Catholics can attain peace for humanity through lives of active prayer and through protest against the injustices of the twentieth century, said Josyp Terelya, a Ukrainian Catholic and former Soviet political prisoner.

Terelya spoke on the need for Catholics to serve as an evangelistic force in the world in a lecture Friday titled, "A Prisoner of Conscience."

As a result of his attempts to spread the Catholic faith in the Ukraine, Terelya spent twenty years in Soviet prisons. Although the son of high-ranking Communist Party officials, Terelya was raised in the outlawed Catholic faith by his grandmother and participated in underground religious groups.

After his conscription into the Soviet army, Terelya decided that rather than avoid the draft, he would attempt to evangelize his fellow soldiers. As a result, he was arrested and received his first of eight prison sentences.

Terelya said that his faith intensified due to several mystical experiences, including an apparition of the Blessed Mother. He described the apparition, which occurred after a extremely brutal beating.

"I was put into a special freezer cell. After ten minutes time, I began to lose the physical ability to move," he said. "It was so cold that the roots of my hair began to hurt."

Terelya said that he had accepted that he was about to die when he experienced an unexpected physical sensation. "I felt an intense light. I was thinking that these were hallucinations that occur before you freeze to death," he said. "I heard a voice, and after the voice came, I felt a warm hand come over my eyes.

"Almost in an instant, my body was warm, physically warm. I saw before me a young lady of about eighteen or twenty... She radiated such a beauty in my eyes."

According to Terelya, immediately after his apparition, the prison alarms sounded, and several guards rushed into the freezing cell. "The guards came in and they asked, 'Have you what have you been burning in this cell?" Terelya said, "I told them our Blessed Mother came and she saved me."

Since his release from prison, Terelya has proclaimed his faith in the Catholic Church's ability to fulfill its evangelical mission. "The Catholic faith is optimistic faith. We should not have any doubts in our hearts," he said. "We are Catholics and we are building the future millennium of peace."

Terelya's lecture was presented in the auditorium of the Catholic Church's diocese of Columbus. "It will be a dream come true," said Renee Faust of Denver.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime experience," said 17-year-old Tara Needham of Northglenn. She said she heard the news during church services across Colorado. "It's a dream," she said.

A U.S. bishops' statement said Denver was an "attractive" location for Hispanics in the southwestern United States and Central America. Surveys indicate the U.S. Catholic Church will be 50 percent Hispanic by 2020.

Denver has about 245,000 Hispanics, the largest population of the three cities considered for the conference. Its Catholic population is estimated at 330,000.

Gov. Roy Romer heralded Colorado's victory at an out­ door news conference with Denver Archbishop Francis Stafford. Romer said the youth conference would be a chance for Colorado residents of all religions to plan for the future.

"Ultimately, matters of the soul do shape our lives, whether privately or governmental," he told the crowd of about 100.

In New York, Bishop Edward Cardinal Egan, Head of the Diocese of Buffalo said he was disappointed the city wasn't selected, but pleased it was a finalist.

"The fact that we were considered is itself a mark of recognition of the warmth and the goodness of the people of our diocese and of our entire western New York area," he said.

Minneapolis-St. Paul Archbishop John Roach said he, too, was disappointed, but was pleased that the conference would be in the United States.

"The particular city was less important than the fact that it was to be in the United States," Roach said. He quoted a youth from his archdiocese who "will go to Denver in great many respects: to pray, hope, and take advantage of this marvelous opportunity."

"The Pope hasn't announced any other stops on his U.S. visit," said Egan.

Even before Denver was selected, Catholic officials drew up a tentative schedule detailing the pope's appearances from his arrival at Stapleton International Airport Aug. 13, 1993, to his departure two days later.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will order federal contractors Monday to post notices at job sites telling non-union employees they can insist on union fees to support political activities they oppose.

As the president signs an executive order to that effect, the Labor Department will announce a new rule requiring unions to report separately how they spend money for political activities, lobbying and contract negotiations, a White House source said.

Such measures, strongly opposed by unions that fear curtail their support of Democratic candidates in this election year, unions endorse far more Democrats than Republicans.

The White House source said an estimated 3 million workers out of 19 million with labor contracts are in union or agency shops where they must pay dues to a union while resisting union activities.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) radio broadcasters may choose whether to use more than double the space they are currently allowed.

It was reported by The New York Times that the notifications, which began Friday, are part of a settlement with the FCC and will be even greater.

By the same analysis some believe the reductions will be even greater.

Celebration welcoming new members into community

Dear Editor:

Since early September of last year, several of you at Notre Dame have been preparing for the Rite of Initiation into the Catholic Church. This rite will take place on Saturday, April 18 at 10 p.m., in Sacred Heart Basilica. At that time five will receive the sacraments of Baptism, Confirmation and Eucharist. They are: Patrick Hall, Erin Montgomery, William Robinson, Jason Shaw and Eric Zmity.

All members of the Notre Dame and Sacred Heart faith community are invited to join in our welcoming these new members and to support them in the faith commitment they have made.

Letter reveals closeminded prejudice

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the Anti-Japanese letter submitted by Jeffrey O'Donnell. In his letter, Mr. O'Donnell portrays the people of Japan as emotionless automatons controlled by a ruthless MIT (Ministry of International Trade and Industry) whose sole objective is to undermine the industrial potential of the United States and to conquer the American market.

Mr. O'Donnell's understanding of the Japanese is, at best, simplistic and ignorant, at worst, blatantly racist. Mr. O'Donnell's assertion that there exist unfair trade practices in some Japanese markets is well taken. I firmly agree that in a number of areas, especially agriculture, Japan needs to liberalize its markets and make it easier for foreign businesses to compete on equitable terms.

Mr. O'Donnell's conclusion, however, that these practices and the success of Japan in general are indicative of a subversive Japanese conspiracy to destroy America economically is patently absurd. It is clear to me that Mr. O'Donnell does not view the Japanese even as human. Rather, he sees them as a terrifying economic force intent on America's downfall. He has dehumanized them so that he can consequently speak of them in terms of simplistic, single-minded characteristics not easily attributable to complex human beings.

This is the same attitude that brought us the ignorant WWII "Know Your Enemy" films which portrayed the Japanese as passionless tools of the Emperor, and it is the paranoid escalation of this sentiment that makes possible the rationalization of the inexcusable intransigence of Japanese Americans during that same period.

Mr. O'Donnell exhibits this attitude in his critique of Professor Camming's comparison of Japan's economic rise with that of America in the 1920's. O'Donnell claims that a key difference exists in that America was "not working in coordination with big businesses planning the destruction of British industry."

He says that "Both Britain and the USA had similar economic systems." His irrational conclusion that the differences in economic systems implies a maliciously evil design on the part of the Japanese is ludicrous. It follows the same logic as the argument that different means evil, a remark with clear racist implications.

His gratuitous assertion that "Business considerations in Japan completely outweigh all other factors, even those of political and global responsibilities," implying that only the Japanese are guilty of pursuing national interests ahead of global ones, is further evidence that he is incapable of objectively criticizing Japan.

Finally, his malicious speculation that "If Japan were the head of the coalition, Saddam Hussein would control 40 percent of the world's oil and they would be happily paying $50 per barrel" speaks most eloquently of his fanatical prejudice against the Japanese.

In regard to Mr. O'Donnell's mature conclusion that "we must first stop believing that it's our fault and that they just work harder," I would like to respond to him that the Japanese do in fact work harder.

I had the opportunity to interact last summer in Japan with a company owned by a Japanese graduate of the Notre Dame MBA program. As an intern, I was only required to put in 40 hour work. The regular employees, however, regularly put in 60 hour weeks, all of the overtime unpaid. I am not asserting that this extended work period is the sole cause for the Japanese economic success, but I think that it is a much more plausible explanation than Mr. O'Donnell's paranoia.

Bigotry, in some appalling form or another, will never cease to exist, and to argue against its irrationality is a fruitless task. I do not expect in this letter to convince Mr. O'Donnell that he is wrong. It is clear to me that he has retreated into a neurotic haven and closed his mind to rational discourse. What I do hope to accomplish is to reveal to more objective individuals the closeminded prejudice underlying Mr. O'Donnell's remarks and, in doing so, prevent the further spread of its malignant influence.

Racist letter only continues legacy of hatred, ignorance

Dear Editor:

This is in response to Jeffrey O'Donnell's letter about Japanese business practices: "Welcome to capitalism, you Flaming racist!"

I can only thank God that we have hysterical fascists like Mr. O'Donnell to maintain institutionalized racism and wholesale ignorance in the world. After all, it's the American way of life.

Moynihan’s voting record is clearly pro-abortion

Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan (N.Y.), the 1992 Laetare medal recipient, has a consistently pro-abortion voting record, as indicated by the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy (SANE), which grades legislators from zero to 100 on the basis of their voting record on legislation affecting nuclear arms.

Moynihan voted to table an appropriations amendment restricting the use of federal funds to enforce the Roe v. Wade decision by the Supreme Court, which legalized abortion. He voted against an amendment to deny tax-exempt status to organizations which perform or provide facilities under the Medicaid program. He voted to table an amendment which would prohibit the use of funds to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the pregnancy were carried to term. He voted against an amendment to add $2 million to the budget of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for family planning services. He voted to table an amendment to strike out a provision which would authorize the use of federal funds by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for family planning services. He voted to table a District of Columbia appropriations amendment to add $2 million to the budget of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for family planning services. Dear Editor:

The day after I wrote the first installment of this letter, an article about the University governance debate appeared in the Student. The following passage from the article presents Fr. Malloy's views on the inclusion of faculty members, mostly by way of direct quotation.

"Malloy sees it as colleagues disagreeing on "a very fine point."...I think the university is in very good shape overall," said Malloy. "I think everyone involved in this discussion would agree. The only disagreement is a very fine point. No one's complaining that the university's going broke or the university's doing a lousy job or everyone's quitting," said Malloy.

"It's a philosophical point that exists on many college campuses," Malloy also noted that the resolution as written reflects the views of two faculty members, and if it is voted on, that vote would represent the views of 50 faculty members.

Three things are worth of mention here: (1) It is interesting to note that when speaking to the university Fr. Malloy claims that he vetoed the faculty governance proposal because "something fundamental is at stake," but to an outside audience he claims that the disagreement is over "a very fine point." (2) Fr. Malloy's attempt to dismiss the significance of the no-confidence motion as expressing the views of a minority of faculty is based on an inaccurate sense of the faculty's mood. The faculty senate is an elected body, indeed, the only elected body at the university that is constituted entirely of faculty. As such, it represents more than the views of a few individual faculty members. Moreover, Professors Quinn and O'Connor are not frivolous rabble rousers. They would not have put forward this motion if they were not convinced that something fundamental was at stake and that there was significant support for such a step among the faculty at large.

Editor's note: This is the second installment of a two-part letter concerning the University governance debate. The first installment appeared in the Student on Monday, April 13, 1992.

Choice of Bush as speaker seems quite appropriate

Dear Editor:

When I first heard that George Bush was going to be our commencement speaker, I was outraged that we were inviting to our graduation a person whose views are diametrically opposed to the university's. I was shocked and saddened by the fact that we are allowing our commencement speaker to further his views of sexual assault.

Students should appreciate speaker

Dear Editor:

The President of the United States of America is coming to celebrate the 150th Anniversary of this University. Unfortunately, the only response (which has been published at least has been one of discontent and outrage. Surely, this categorically represents the views of the student body at large. Most people do realize what an honor it will be to have George Bush, our President, speak at this year's Sesquicentennial Exercises.

How short memories are!! Just last year, a large number of the graduating seniors, including ourselves, were flabbergasted at the University's selection for our commencement speaker.

Many graduates felt that the University could have chosen a speaker for the ceremony whose accomplishments and reputation were more renowned. (Imagine having to explain both who your speaker was and then the nature of the magazine for which she worked.) While we entered the ceremony with an open mind, we certainly were not the only ones who left disappointed. Some of our classmates even felt slighted, thinking that our university's choice was not enough of a symbol which required clearing before the university could have chosen a more appropriate speaker. This was not a small man, nor is he one to turn from a fight. He was overpowered, however, by the two burglars who first beat him and then took turns restraining and raping him.

This is not a "token story" which must be enclosed for sympathy. It is true—like the others written and printed that we have been asked to read. It is not written to shock or to anger, but to inform and to remind us of our responsibility to our university. Let us not allow our anxiety to be compassionate, we are not the largest in the nation. I hope that we will soon begin to remember. Their stories are no less moving. Their pain is not less severe, their humanity no less fragile.

Four annual Christmas in April project continues past success

By HELEN DIETEMAN
Accent Writer

Rememember when all you wanted for Christmas was that new play-doh machine, the one that came with five different colors of clay? What if all you wanted was a new roof, a new furnace, hot running water, or a new paint job on your house?

For many elderly, disabled, and low-income homeowners in South Bend this is what they wish for, and that is rarely granted, unless Christmas comes in April.

Christmas has come in April for the past three years, and this year is no different. This year over fifty families, through the efforts of two parks in the St. Casimir/Ford Street neighborhood were renovated and restored over the past two weekends.

On April 4, local tradesmen and eighty Notre Dame ROTC students volunteered their time and energy to replace roofs, install bathrooms, and provide other major repairs to several locations in that area.

On April 11, at least fourteen hundred Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students as well as nearly one thousand volunteers from the city of South Bend participated in Christmas in April.

Notre Dame seniors Lora Mangan, Isabel Navarrete, and Bubba Scheibel have been involved with Christmas in April since it first came to South Bend four years ago. For the past three years, they have worked to organize the thousands of volunteers from Notre Dame.

All agreed that every year they are amazed at how quickly the work gets done; volunteers leave campus at 7:30 a.m. and are usually finished by 3 p.m.

The students come from a diverse group, ranging from freshmen to graduate students, all wanting to give something back to the community.

As Notre Dame senior and four-time participant Gaby Clark explained, "It's important to build the relationship with our community. Most people don't see conditions different from their own. This is a chance to get out and do that. It's also a great way to meet tons of people from ND."

For those who were new to the Christmas in April experience, many were unsure of what to expect. Still, they shared the idea of giving back to the community.

Missy Pumphrey, a Notre Dame freshman, stated, "We have so much that we should be able to give back to the community. This is a great opportunity to help out."

Graduate student Moses Garcia agreed, saying, "I was interested in doing this because it's a way for me to feel good about being a Christian." As part of Professor Jakah's conversational Spanish class, Garcia and his classmates hoped to be able to use their language skills to communicate better with the residents of the neighborhood.

Other reasons for volunteering were more personal. As Saint Mary's junior Julie Marsh explained, "My dad's been a house captain for the past two years at home. This is the first chance I've had to be involved. It's really an important experience."

There were also those with a more humorous approach to the day. Notre Dame freshman Amy Weustefeld commented, "I thought it'd be hysterical to watch my friends operating power tools."

Christmas in April is a national non-profit organization that provides warm, dry housing for those who cannot fix their homes themselves because of physical or financial limitations. The South Bend chapter is sponsored by the city of South Bend, the University of Notre Dame, and the Chamber of Commerce of St. Joseph County.

The large job of organizing over one thousand student volunteers is undertaken by a committee of students under the direction of Phil Johnson, assistant director of security at Notre Dame.

In his opinion, "Christmas in April is such a rewarding experience. I come away feeling I've received more than I've given. You really can see what you did; with such tangible results you know you've done something good. This weaves the fabric of community together, and that is the Notre Dame way."

Senior Bubba Scheibel, who has been involved with the program the past four years, felt that "Phil does it all. We get the people, but he works with the administration to pull everything together."

Photographer Steve Connelly travels to different college campuses around the country taking pictures for yearbooks. While at Van de Walle on Saturday morning watching the volunteers depart for the various sites, he observed, "The enthusiasm of Notre Dame isn't really valid. I've never seen anything of this scale on any campus, and I go to a lot of 'good' schools. Yale, Northwestern, Georgetown."

Notre Dame sophomores Jessica Holts, Ann Cook and Vanessa Van de Walle were members of the student committee who organized Notre Dame's part in Christmas in April. Van de Walle emphasized that "providing shelter is one of the big things here. The work that gets done is incredible - it's not just touch-up stuff."

According to Lora Mangan, with the limit of fourteen hundred volunteers this year every person would have something meaningful to do.

Isabel Navarrete stated, "Anyone who can participate is encouraged to, but we really need monetary donations. Funds won't allow us to use the large number of people that we can get from the Notre Dame community."

Funded by a variety of loans, grants, and corporate contributions, Christmas in April will accept individual donations. Christmas in April, 521 Eclipse Place, South Bend, IN, 46628.

This week Saint Mary's will encounter for the first time a cultural awareness event. Various events are being sponsored by the M.I.N.T. (Minority, International, Traditional student life) Committee Board of Government, Marriott Food Services, and a committee of ten Saint Mary's students who got the events off the ground.

The most impressive aspect about the program is that the entire experience is student planned and organized. The original initiator was M.I.N.T. Commissioner Tina Buchanan, who wanted to encourage cultural exploration. She felt that a program such as this one would do just that.

According to Buchanan, "Women on campus need to learn that there are (many different) things that go on here." Buchanan said that she came up with the idea and suggested it to some students who she thought would be interested.

With fellow B.O.G. members Della Garcia and Jennifer Hamsun, Buachan sent letters to other students. Everyone was very receptive and worked hard on the program, she said. "We got people thinking, involved and concerned. More ideas can be generated from this."

The events in the line-up for this week include:

Family Photos: Images of Our People to be presented Monday by Dr. Pat Washington, Director of M.I.N.T., Mainini Smarth, English Department Lecturer, and Notre Dame history professor, Marcia Sawyer. The event will take place at 7 p.m. in Haggard Parlor. Monday also Indian Food Night at the dining hall.

There will be a lecture called "Embracing the World" on Tuesday. Saint Mary's Economics Lecturer, Ravindra Parashar will speak at 12:15 p.m. in Haggard Parlor. The dining hall will also be preparing Soul Food.

On Wednesday, the third and final night of the events, will be "Party All Over the World." Mr. Renato Salazar, a Spanish guitarist, will perform at 8:15 p.m. at Dilloway's Coffeehouse. Then at Dalloway's at 9 p.m. will be live music and folk dancing from such countries as Greece, Turkey, Bulgaria, and South Africa.

According to Buchanan, who will hold the same position again next year, hopes to continue the program and start other activities in the years to come.
Lacrosse dominates Mount Saint Mary's

By GEORGE DOHRMANN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team showed no signs of being content with its first national ranking in two years, stunning Mt. St. Mary's 13-3.

A week after the USILA tagged the Irish 22nd in its weekly poll, Randy Colley notched five goals, and the Notre Dame defense used a team effort to conquer the Mount.

"We don't talk much about it," coach Kevin Corrigan remarked about the team's national ranking. "We just take a lot of pride in the way we have been playing."

At times, Mt. St. Mary's looked more like the Belles from the St. Mary's across the road, as a host of Irish defenders, led by Pete Senger and Doug Murray baffled the Mount into submission.

"We've played real aggressive and I think that took them away from some of the things they wanted to do," said Corrigan.

The Mount managed only one goal in the first half, which came early in the opening period.

After the lone score, the Irish notched 13 unanswered goals, Mobley and Colley leading the way, with each netting two goals apiece in the second half.

When the Irish defense wasn't handling the Mount, Colley and the rest of the Notre Dame attack was improving their scoring average.

Ed Lamb and Willie Sutton chalked up two goals apiece from their midfield positions. The duo were two of seven players to contribute to the Mt. St. Mary's defense.

The performance by senior attackman Mike Sullivan was once again brilliant. His goal and two assists on Saturday moved him only three points away from the Notre Dame all-time scoring mark, currently held by Joe Franklin an Irish player from 1983-86.

Although he is excited about the opportunity to eclipse the record, Sullivan is more focused on the team's goals for the rest of the season.

"Right now I am more concerned about the remaining games, and the opportunity to get into the NCAA tournament," said Sullivan. "It would definitely be great to get the record, but it is something which I am not concerned with right now."

Sullivan and the rest of the Irish have focused their attention to Stoney Brook, their opponent today at Moose Stadium.

"We expect to face a similar team to Mt. St. Mary's," commented Corrigan about Stoney Brook. "They will be a fast team after trying to control the tempo of the game that outcome is unlikely."

Winners of five straight, the Irish will travel to Colorado after today's matchup, for two games against Air Force and Denver.

Happy Birthday and much love,
Your family

Men's tennis MCC champs again

By JONATHAN JENSEN
Sports Writer

Here they go again. The Men's tennis team has been a member of the Midwestern Collegiate Conference for four years now, and each year the results in the conference tournament have been remarkably similar.

Four conference championships, three of which have earned the Irish coach Bob Bayliss, and 35 of the 36 possible titles have followed the Irish's participation in the conference tournament. The Irish have only lost one of these conferences, and Bayliss feels that his team has a great shot at winning this year's title.

This year the Irish, despite resting their top singles player and two top doubles teams, won all nine flights in straight sets to capture its fourth consecutive title.

"It's always tough to assume the mantle of the favorite," noted Bayliss. "Sometimes you find yourself playing not lose rather than playing to win, but I think we handled it well."

That could be a major understatement. Bayliss knew how the four participants in this year's conference title would be the same. He felt the Irish had a sure shoulder this weekend. All of that and more has come up with a one-spot. Nevertheless, Andy Zurcher, Chuck Coleman, Will Fleck, Paul Rosas, and Chris Wojtalik all won titles on Monday, and their combined efforts resulted in a 6-1, 6-1, 6-1 win over Butler's Ludovit Arapin and the Irish won both the singles and doubles matches.

"It's not easy when you're inexperienced," said Zurcher. "But we stepped up and did a real job."

The Belles' sophomores also had a strong showing at the meet. Jackie Buckley ran the 3,000m scoring a personal best of 12:24.74. She was impressive because she had her ankle taped up due to a minor injury.

"Jackie had a very gutsy performance," stated Bayliss. "She set a goal and achieved her best time."

1971-72: Notre Dame wrestling has its best season in years, with powerhouse Bob Finam and captain Ken Ryan leading the Irish through an outstanding 11-1 season.

1973-80: Notre Dame continues to wind down a long road of successes and of tradition, and the building of a program ex-emplary of the true "Fightin' Irish" spirit.

1980-84: Brother Joseph Bruno, C.S.C., is named to the head coaching position. His teams showed the growth of the wrestling program through their powerful 15-2 and 18-2 records in the '81-82 and '82-83 seasons. The Irish are lead by these victorious seasons by wrestling Mike Giolli, Joe Notte, Mark Rich, Brian Heinzelman, John Carnesdale, and Mark Fisher, who currently stand in the most wins in a season title for the Irish with 38 wins in the '82-83 season.

1984: Notre Dame ushers in a new era of wrestling with the appointment of former Indiana State coach Frank McCann to the head coaching spot. Along with McCann came an incredible history of leading the Sycamores to regional and national titles, as well as his dedication to building a program competitive in the area of high school collegiate wrestling. Off the mat, he hired Andrea Ayers and Millikan from the Irish schedule; on were teams such as the wrestling powerhouse Clemson, Nebraska, and Ohio State.

1984-92: More impressive than the team's 50-53-1 record over this time is the growth in the depth and quality of a program just breaking into the world of highly competitive wrestling. McCann started to bring in top recruits starting in '85, such as Jerry Dursio, Chris Gehnzer, and Pat Boyd. With a couple of them in his division, the highest finishes ever for Notre Dame.

1991-92: The Irish compile a 6-5 record and sent three wrestlers to the NCAA tournament in seniors Chuck Weaver and Marcus Gowens and (II) sophomore J.J. McGrew. The Irish were excitedly anticipating their first NCAA tournament in 92-93 season, with McGrew and letter-winners Jamie Boyd, Chris Jensen, Steve King, and Emil Saehland returning, as well as several others.

"The team was really looking forward into getting back into the top-20 again like (my) freshman year," Gowens said. And, truly, with all 10th, Coach McCann calls an emergency meeting to inform his team of the elimination of the entire wrestling program at Notre Dame, and a strong defense of interests by the athletic department.

The Irish rebounded in the bottomed in the fourth of the bottom. With two outs, Lissanti and Layson reached on errors, and McCree took advantage. McCree crushed Evansville starter Curtis Browns first pitch over the right field fence to put Notre Dame up for good, 4-3.

On Sunday afternoon, a terrific performance from pitcher Leahy led the Irish to a 6-2 win over visiting Evansville. Leahy's four-hit shutout not only completed a four-game sweep of the Aces, but it also impressed the scoring of priests who came to watch the Irish win and assisted in providing a strong defense of the Irish.

Notre Dame Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal's announcement that wrestling would be terminated after the current season created an interesting debate within the University community. With the elimination of the program, questions were raised about the future of wrestling at Notre Dame, as well as the impact on the athletes and coaches involved.

Fran McCann, head coach of the program for eight years, had a winning record and was respected by players, alumni and fans. McCann's 50-53-1 record at the Irish helm came against the nation's best wrestling programs, making him one of the best, certainly not his last.

Although obviously jilted, McCann responded with grace and understanding in creating a teaching position in the F.E. department next year while continuing to coordinate summer athletic camps at the University.

"They're being good to me," he said, unable to hide the hurt in his voice. "I've got my Masters in Physical Education and teaching experience for 16 years. There's not much market out there for a 52-year-old wrestling coach." McCann's job will always be to help his wrestlers become the best, as he devotes himself to helping others recover from the illness.

First on the list is McCann's six-year-old son Nick, who now finds himself unem­ployed. "Nick's got a wife and three young children," said McCann. "But he's the best, he's a high­Profile figure and I expect Rick to find someone, because he's just too good not to be hired." Stewart, a Duncan, Ok., native, wrestled at Oklahoma State, and was assistant coach for both his alma mater and Clemson before coming to Notre Dame.

Junior Emil Soehnlen, like the majority of the wrestlers, expressed the utmost respect for the Irish coaches.

"They're the reason why I came, why a lot of these people continue and then the university is able to treat them like they are, it doesn't show a lot of concern." Marcus Owens, a four-year starter under McCann, expressed bitterness and confusion after hearing the news.

"Rosenthal has a personal vendetta against the wrestling program. He doesn't like the coaches and he's afraid it will come back to them, instead he cuts the whole program." McCann expressed concern for former wrestlers like Soehnlen, who will have little remand of their endless hours of hard work on Notre Dame's mats and weight rooms. "It's going to be hard on the alumni because there's nothing to come back to. They have the school, but it's not going to be the same."

The announcement could not have come as a bigger shock to McCann, who was first ap­pointed by Jahnelle Harrigan on Thursday. On Friday afternoon, he got the tragic news.

Then, he had to deliver the toughest speech in his 23-year coaching career.

"I really didn't have to say much. He just said about it all," reported junior Emil Soehnlen. "I was so unex­pected." McCann reiterated. "They've competed since their early teens and before. They always knew it would end one day, but not prematurely; that's the real shock, that it was so unex­pected."

"A lot of us have been wrestling since first grade, certainly not for my first school, but still have a lot of goals to meet, face equally tough decisions," said Soehnlen.

"It's going to be hard on the fans," said McCann shortly after meeting with the team. "I didn't see this coming. I saw obvious pain." McCann then informed the players that he would not return to the program. "It's not all they know how to do, but wrestling's a major part of his life. It's like getting a leg cut off, it's always been there. You're really putting them in a bad situation to make them decide." McCann reiterated. "They've competed since their early years and before. They always knew it would end one day, but not prematurely; that's the real shock, that it was so unexpected."

"I don't want to live the rest of my life saying, should I have wrestled my sen­ior year in college? I was so close this year to doing a lot. I lose to the national champ 3-5 and lost to all the All-Americans by a point. I think I'm right there." McCann knows the impact of dropping the program devastates the lives of young wrestlers and veteran coaches alike. "I don't know if I ever will get over it. It's taken 20 some years to get in my blood, and knowing that it's taken away is hard. As for his crew, "They've been a close knit group in the last several years and now they're all split up."

THOUGHTS, AS YESHUAH HAD ENTERED THEIR HEARTS FOR THE FIRST TIME.
The 1992 NCAA wrestling championships were held in Oklahoma City this past March, and Notre Dame sent six wrestlers to the competition to showcase their talents.

Marcus Gowens, J.J. McGrew, and Chuck Weaver all performed admirably at the competition. Gowens reached the national duals, while assistant Rick_hot on an up-and-coming wrestling program intramural programs, nor can one opt to transferred to the next year.

The wrestling team has been perfect and the axe-wielding architects of the coming years.

Surely other options were available or Binkiewicz to Oklahoma's two City tournament match to North Oklahoma.

Weaver cruised to victories in his first two matches before facing failure. Weaver dropped his opening tournament match to North Carolina State's Sylvester Terkay, who had ripped through a 27-0 regular season and eventually finished second. After a tough 3-0 victory over Missouri's Jeremy Lay, Weaver fell to Lorenzo Neal of Fresno State.

For Gowens and Weaver, seniors, this season marked a final chance for glory, a farewell tour of sorts. But for McGrew and the other underclassmen on the squad, they all had next year to look forward to, with the possibility of bigger and better things to come.

Unfortunately, they had all hoped wiped out when the athletic director Dick Rozenthal announced on Friday that the University was dropping the wrestling program. Budget cuts had to be made, and the axe-wielding architects of the athletic department decided to slice the wrestlers away.

The wrestling team has been successful, as this year's results undoubtedly display. Three wrestlers in their championship was a strong showing, and it held the promise of top-notch recruiting and even more success in the coming years.

Now, however, people like J.J. McGrew, who turned down more traditional wrestling powerhouses, instead gambling on an up-and-coming wrestling program at Notre Dame, will have to look somewhere else to get the chance to pursue their skills. The hard work and dedication put in here is, as is a chance of getting Notre Dame's first wrestling national champion.

As far as the coaches are concerned, however, with the program, the Irish wrestling program grew in my blood, and knowing some years to get (wrestling) (get over it). It's taken eight years as head coach. It's just that it's taken away hard.

The Irish got on the board early in the game scoring once in the first inning and National a three-run rally in the second.

Evansville starter John MacCasey (5-4) ran into some control problems in the third inning. Adam Maisano and Bob Lissanti got the inning started with back-to-back singles, but Maisano got caught leaning at second by Aces' catcher Sal Fasanu. Layson reached base on a throwing error by shortstop Aaron Gries. MacCasey then served up a pair of walks to Mee and Craig Counsell which brought home Lissanti.

A wild pitch by Eric Danapilis scored the second run of the inning. MacCasey intentionally walked Steve Verduzco, which loaded the bases, but the plan backfired when the next batter walked Paul Falla to score the third and final run of the inning.

The Irish scored two more runs in the seventh for the final 6-0 margin. Evansville had made sure that Saturday's game would be no repeat of Friday's shutout. Aaron Devlin led off the game with a single, stole second, and scored on a single by Pat Schultz. From there, Walania cruised. He gave up only two hits, struck out four and walked two. The Irish finished 36th at the NCAA Championships, where they were represented by 126-pound Marcus Gowens, J.J. McGrew at 177 pounds and heavyweight Chuck Weaver.

The most successful year in McCann's tenure was 1988-89, when the Irish were 10-3 and placed 21st at the NCAA's. That same season, the Irish wrestling program produced two All-Americans.

Wrestling was first offered as a varsity sport in 1955-56 and continued until this sea-son. In the 38-year history of the program, Notre Dame had a 234-245-8 dual match record and had its highest NCAA finish in 1978 at 18th.

"Though our program has enjoyed some success at the national level over the last eight years, that hasn't translated into the fan inter­ est we might have hoped for."

"When you're dealing with college athletics, you know there's always going to be cutbacks, budget cuts. When you're coaching a non-see AXED/ page 16
