Clinton to make campaign speech at Notre Dame

By EMILY HAGE

Democratic presidential candidate Governor Bill Clinton will visit South Bend Friday to deliver "a major policy address," according to University public­ Relations.

The site and exact time of the address are being kept secret dur­ing discussions between University officials, Republican campaign officials, and the Clinton campaign in Little Rock, Ark., said that no additional information is available at this time.

The Arkansas governor’s decision to speak at Notre Dame comes in response to a recent invitation by University President Edward Malloy. Continuing a long-standing Notre Dame tradition, Malloy extended the offer to his and 21 other presidential aspirants to speak on "issues important in public concern related to the campaign."

"Clinton's intention to visit has been galvanized by his impression of the success of the campus democratic movement during the first week of the grass-roots effort at Notre Dame," said Wesley Kirkpatrick, Clinton campaign coordinator at Notre Dame.

"As college democrats, we’re very happy to have you," added Notre Dame College Democrats said Clinton’s visit will have a profound effect on campus. "We can take the campaign back from the republican, and Bill Clinton’s coming here will help us tremendously," President Andy Holmgren said.

He added that there is no new­ ed enthusiasm in the democratic party at Notre Dame, citing the more than 300 students who signed up to join the demo-­ cratic last week's activities.

He added that Tommy G. Greet, vice­ chairman of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary’s College Republicans, was not concerned about Clinton’s visit. "We feel that Vice­ President Quayle gives us a large advantage in Indiana and we expect to win and we expect to campaign hard to win." Ciskei

Students for Life

Adult Co-president Claire Johnson expressed concern about the invitation from the University. "I understand that a Clinton invitation was invited but taken in conjunction with this campaign. It makes me question the value the University places on the right to life."

The Northeast Development

Corporation, boosted by a substantial loan from the University of Notre Dame, has purchased

South Bend Ave. Apartments and several contiguous properties and is in the process of rehabilitating the area.

Although Notre Dame will have a financial stake in the project, the University will support the plan for security, according to President Andy Holmgren.

"If we think we’ve turned the corner and I’m optimistic about the future of the Northeast Neighborhood."

Two of the three apartment buildings are completely vacant, and Matteo expects the third remaining units to be empty by Sept. 15. Former tenants left or leases expired or they were released of lease obligations.

The corporation has begun to gut the units out, repainting and recarpet, and replace all applicances and cabinets. Crews will do extensive landscaping around the apartments.

A number of security changes are also being made to improve safety in the area, including new door locks, new security systems, and night-time security guards to patrol the area. Matteo said these changes will help eliminate any remaining issues of crime.

Matteo said lax management of the property, short-term leases and high crime have been problems in the neighborhood. "I think we’re very calm in the near­ future," he said.

While the University and the city have a definite interest in seeing the area cleaned up, Matteo said that "the neighborhood is very pleased about what is going on and very pleased that students will be back."

Notre Dame is involved in several other projects to improve the area south of campus:

• The University plans to sell to the faculty single family homes in the 900 block of Notre Dame Ave. for later development, Lyphout said.

• Notre Dame is part of a partnership, including the City of South Bend, St. Joseph’s Hospital, the Northeast Neighborhood Association and others, that has hired a consultant to develop a long-term plan for the neighborhood.

In 1989, the University began purchasing houses along the avenue. Five houses were torn down, four were renovated and are being rented to faculty and staff and one remains vacant, Lyphout said.

Who's better off now than 12 years ago?

Last Tuesday and Wednesday nights Notre Dame and Saint Mary's had their respective Activities Night and seemed to have a very interesting evening. One stand was handing out bumper stickers and was decorated with signs for various political candidates. This stand had a constant flow of people who seemed really enthusiastic about the upcoming election. Being that this was an event at one of the most conservative schools in the country, most would associate the aforementioned organization was College Republicans, but it was not. It was College Democrats.

Its representatives were well informed and answered questions intelligently about their candidates, Bill Clinton and Al Gore. When asked why one should vote for the Democrats, he or she was given descriptions of Clinton's proposed educational and health care reforms and Gore's environmental record.

One walked away from the booth with a good understanding of the Democratic ticket and why it made sense to vote for it on November 3 or his or her absentee ballot. If one posed the same question to the Republican representative at Saint Mary's the same question, he or she really wasn't given any real answers, only more questions and comparisons between Clinton and Jimmy Carter.

"Did you watch the Republican Convention?" I saw five minutes of it, and the lone impression I was left with was of a woman asking the delegates if the country was better now than it was four years ago. Though they responded with an enthusiastic "Yes," most Americans would probably disagree.

Since this tactic was used by Ronald Reagan 12 years ago against Jimmy Carter, one would assume that is why Republicans are comparing Clinton to Carter.

Why else would anyone compare the Arkansas governor to a President who was voted out of the White House 12 years ago. If the Clinton-Carter connection is supposed to be a selling point, why wasn't the Bush-Gerald Ford link made in 1988 or the Reagan-Richard Nixon connection made in 1980 and 1984? Both Ford and Nixon were in office 12 years before those elections. These pairings sound absurd, as is the Clinton-Carter one. The next thing Republicans will be comparing is real life problems with sitcoms.

It seems that Americans are finally looking at the ticket and deciding who they want to vote for. Why should our voting pattern be any different than Notre Dame, maybe the polls are telling the truth about the upcoming election.

Lambs crave taste of the real thing

OTTOMONDAY — Lambs don't care much about being part of the Pepsi generation, and if Coke is the real thing, it doesn't matter to them because they will drink it. And, obviously they'll put on valuable weight; and it's recycling something that otherwise would have been a waste disposal problem. Arnold McClain, livestock supervisor at Iowa State University's research farm near Chariton, discovered that a bottling company was discarding gallons and gallons of cola daily because of packaging errors. He decided to see if the animals liked the stuff and, if so, whether it would help them grow.

They liked it and the free soda reduced the lambs' appetite for more expensive corn.

Ignored Ohio city seeks secession

LEDOLE — Welcome, Toledo. Michigan will roll out the red carpet for this Lake Erie city of 330,000 if it decides to secede from Ohio. Frank Semersky, a plastics supervisor at Iowa State University's research farm near Chariton, discovered that a bottling company was discarding gallons and gallons of cola daily because of packaging errors. He decided to see if the animals liked the stuff and, if so, whether it would help them grow. They liked it and the free soda reduced the lambs' appetite for more expensive corn.

Ohio pays very little attention to the area, noting that Toledo has more in common with Detroit, about 45 miles to the north, than Columbus, about 130 miles to the south. Toledo would need approval from the Ohio and Michigan legislatures and Congress before being allowed to secede and join Michigan, said Steven Ludd, a Bowling Green State University political science professor.

SOUTH BEND — Strict rules and a "tough love" policy have helped make the South Bend Center for the Homeless shelter one of the best in the nation. The center's house rules on studying, smoking and watching television are enforced as strictly as its hours: the front doors lock at 9:00 nightly, and lights are out by 10 p.m. Weekday wake-up calls come at 6 a.m. Officials of the National Coalition for the Homeless honored the shelter last week, citing it as a model for other U.S. facilities to follow. "There are nearly 10,000 homeless shelters and facilities in the country, but this is among the best," said Fred Karnas, executive director of the Washington-based coalition. For an hour every day, children staying at the shelter must attend a study hall, where volunteers from the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College tutor them individually.

President of former Soviet republic quits

DUSHANBE, Tajikistan (AP) — The hard-line Communist president, Bakhmon Nabiyev, resigned Monday after armed anti-government militants stopped him at the airport and prevented him from leaving the Tajik capital.

Two presidential bodyguards were injured as Nabiyev was detained.

Nabiyev was the third president of a former Soviet republic to be toppled in the tumult following the 1991 collapse of the Soviet government. The Georgian and Azerbaijani presidents also were ousted amid civil strife.

The resignation came a week after armed opponents seized the presidential palace, forcing Nabiyev into hiding and taking more than 40 hostages, who were later freed. Days later, Nabiyev's Cabinet and leaders of the Supreme Soviet legislature approved a vote of no-confidence in his government. He faced growing opposition from a coalition of former Communists, the liberal Democratic Party and Rastekhoz, or Renewal, a nationalist party's front. They said he did not move fast enough to introduce political and religious freedoms and end civil strife.

Nabiyev, 61, said that he decided to resign in order to end a civil war in the poorest former Soviet republic, a mostly Muslim country of 5.3 million people bordering China and Afghanistan.

Tajik television showed the white-haired Nabiyev at the VIP lounge of Dushanbe airport, wearing a gray suit and brown tie and surrounded by 15 senior guards fired accidentally, and wounding two presidential guards in the legs. Four Russian tanks and two armored personnel carriers arrived at the airport during the incident, but did not intervene, the journalist said.

He passed his powers to parliament speaker Akbarsharif Iskanadov, in accordance with the constitution.

"Taking into account the political situation, and in order to stabilize it and stop the fratricidal war, I decided to relinquish my powers as president," he said. His statement was later broadcast on television throughout the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Nabiyev also forewarned any "provocation or intrigues" in Tajik politics, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

The Cabinet voted to give Nabiyev a pension along with the home in which he lives, and to provide bodyguards.

Nabiyev and a group of lawmakers had gone to the Dushanbe airport to fly to his native Khuzhand, in northern Tajikistan, to meet with other pro-Nabiyev lawmakers boycotting the legislature.

They were detained in the VIP lounge by militants who identified themselves as "the group which last week occupied the palace and took officials hostage, Interfax said. They released the last of the hostages on Thursday and left the complex without incident on Saturday.

A Dushanbe journalist who witnessed the scene said about 1,500 people surrounded the lounge. He said one of Nabiyev's guards fired accidentally, and the militants fired back, wounding two presidential guards in the legs.

Four Russian tanks and two armored personnel carriers arrived at the airport during the incident, but did not intervene, the journalist said.

He then said in a calm voice: "I'm submitting my resignation.

"Down the block from Beedle, county garbage crews loaded debris into dump trucks. At another house, a contracting crew nailed plywood and tarperon on a roof pealed apart by Andrew's 165 mph wind Aug. 24.

New federal and state aid centers opened, handing out millions of dollars in food stamps, disaster grants and interest-free loans.

Help-wanted signs sprouted along U.S. 1, some for home supply stores struggling to keep up with demand.

Contractors rounded tent cities seeking laborers at $10 an hour. Federal marshals escorted the residents to work.

"Don't want people to just sit around all day," said Eric Thompson, a deputy U.S. marshall.

Homestead, Fla. (AP) — Two weeks after being pounded by Hurricane Andrew, south Florida staggered Monday toward what might have to pass for normalcy, as temporary crises gave way to the beginnings of a long recovery.

Authorities said shelter, food, water and clothing were available to everyone who needed them. The desperate scramble for life's necessities was replaced by long lines for food stamps and federal grants, tedious home repairs and clean up, and family life in annoyingly close quarters at military tent cities.

"It's beginning to look more like the old neighborhood again," said Rob Beetov, moving a neighbor's lawn in the hard-hit Cutler Ridge area. "It's good to see the clean-up guys here."

Baboon Liver patient dies after transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors were not sure Monday what caused the death of a mystery man who survived 15 days with a baboon’s liver, but they said the historic operation helped pave the way for more animal-to-human transplants.

The 33-year-old man, whose name was not made public, died Sunday as doctors at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center tried to wean him from a respirator.

The man died from bleeding inside the skull but did not have a stroke as was first announced, said Dr. John Fung, chief of transplant surgery.

"He had a really light attitude about everything," she said. "If I were to carry over to the community to make an impact," he said, "I think he really have an opportunity to do that."
First black woman to enter into space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Mae Jemison, a doctor-turn-astronaut, will be taking one small step for equality when she rockets into orbit aboard Endeavour.

Jemison, whose mission is scheduled to begin Saturday, will be the first black woman in space, an honor she accepts with some guilt feelings.

"I'm very aware of the fact that I am not the first woman of color, the first African-American woman, who had the skills, the talent, the desire to be an astronaut. I know that I happen to be the first one that NASA selected, right now the only one," Jemison, 35, said.

Only three black Americans, all men, have flown in space. The first was Guion Bluford, on the eighth shuttle flight in 1985.

Of NASA's current 92 astronauts, five are black: four men and Jemison, who was chosen in 1987.

"In that sense, yeah, I want people to know," Jemison said, referring to her flight. "I don't want it to just be Lieutenant Uhura, you know. I thought it was wonderful. ... I want people to know those things can be true and they're real.

Jemison met actress Nichelle Nichols, who portrayed Uhura, at a "Star Trek" convention a few years ago before Jemison was assigned to Endeavour's laboratory research mission.

During the weekend flight, Jemison will be in charge of four female frogs that will be induced to ovulate; their eggs will be removed and fertilized to see how tadpoles develop in weightlessness.

She also will test the power of positive thinking, or biofeedback, in an effort to prevent space motion sickness.

Six others are assigned to the Spacelab mission, a joint venture between NASA and Japan's space agency. Among them are the first married couple in space and the first Japanese to fly on a U.S. space-ship.

"With these few exceptions, it's your standard Spacelab crew," said mission manager Audrey Kay. Jemison views her presence on a personal level — "God, I got to go into space and that's something she always wanted to do — and on a higher social plane.

"I have to look at it as an individual who's part of a society and that society has often times told people who look like me that they can't succeed," she said in a recent interview.

"It's important not only for a white girl but a girl growing up to know, yeah, you can become an astronaut because here's Mae Jemison. But it's important for older white males who sometimes make decisions on those careers of those little black girls."

Three decades ago, in an inner-city neighborhood in Chicago, Jemison was one of those little black girls.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Jerry Lewis raised a record $45,729,368 Monday through his annual muscular dystrophy telethon, despite protests from victims of the disease and a White House appointee.

"The American people are listening. They heard me," Lewis said as the tote board registered the new record, nearly $68,000 over a record amount set last year.

His voice broke as he praised his staff and told a cheering audience: "We're so grateful we have a shot at winning this thing."

The Muscular Dystrophy Association had been concerned about breaking the 1991 telethon mark because of protests by muscular dystrophy victims, including a Bush administration official with a mild form of the disease.

Lewis, who has worked for years for the association, said earlier that it was important this year's telethon collect "one dollar more" than last year's total of $45,071,857. Last year, corporate sponsors presented checks for an additional $65 million.

This year's figure for additional corporate donations was not immediately tabulated.

The telethon featured appearances by dozens of stars, including Billy Crystal, Robin Williams, Whoopi Goldberg, Liza Minnelli, Bette Midler and others.

Association officials said about 100 million people watch the telethon annually.

Lewis kicked off the 21 1/2-hour event Sunday night with an appeal for Hurricane Andrew victims and a promise that this year's show would be "the best, despite the controversy.

Some muscular dystrophy victims are critical of Lewis for an article he wrote in 1990 in which he envisioned himself as a muscular dystrophy victim and said the experience would make him half a person. Others complain the telethon relies on pity.

Muscular dystrophy is a chronic disease characterized by the wasting away of muscles. It afflicts about 1 million Americans.

In Los Angeles, about 20 people, many in wheelchairs, protested outside a television studio broadcasting the show Sunday.

"The disability rights movement and the telethon pity parade are on a head-on collision course," said Marta Russell, who wore a sign reading "More Harm Than Good."

She said people with disabilities want work, not charity or pity. But Jack Epling, also in a wheelchair outside the station, defended Lewis.

"He works for us, he represents the young people and the generation to come, for a cure. I don't know what else you can ask of the man but that," Epling said.

White-collar salaries fall in downward spiral

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wages of college-educated, white-collar workers and women are in a downward spiral, a new study says.

The inflation-adjusted wages of college-educated workers fell 3.1 percent between 1987 and 1991, with male college-educated workers experiencing a steeper 4.4 percent decline, said the study released Sunday by the non-profit Economic Policy Institute.

Overall, white-collar salaries fell by 4.4 percent. It said, adding that a 5.5 percent wage gain registered by female workers in the 1980s has eroded by 2.8 percent since 1989.

"Unfortunately, this Labor Day we find that the economy is failing to maintain high wages for nearly all American workers," economist Lawrence Mishel said in a statement accompanying the report, which he co-authored with Jared Bernstein.

The two economists said wage setbacks for white-collar workers and the college-educated marked the end of a 1980s boom in finance, retailing, banking and real estate.

Mishel and Bernstein said that the recent recession bore a distinctly white-collar stamp: a greater rise in unemployment among white-collar workers than among their blue-collar counterparts. Declines in income were most severe among upper-middle-class families.

Clinton embraces middle class

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Bill Clinton offered himself Monday as a champion of the middle class and its values, framing his Labor Day campaign send-off as "the beginning of the end of George Bush's presidency of broken promises."

"If you give me a chance at the end of the Cold War, I will do what Harry Truman did at the end of World War II: more opportunity, more responsibility, an America strong at home as well as strong abroad," the Democratic nominee told a rally in Truman's hometown.

"We are running on vision and hope and we are going to do what Harry Truman did for the next 57 days. Go across the country, give them hell and make America what it ought to be again."

In a speech cut short when ominous thunder gave way to a downpour, Clinton struck a combative, populist tone, using the usual popularity contest as the future against the past, a candidate and hope and we are going to do what Harry Truman did for the next 57 days: Go across the country, give them hell and make America what it ought to be.

"They will try to make you afraid of change," Democratic vice presidential nominee Al Gore said in introducing Clinton, praising his economic development record in Arkansas while warning of heated Republican attacks to come.

As he offered his Labor Day assessment of the stakes and issues facing voters, Clinton again faced questions from reporters about an issue that has dogged him since the early primary season: his Vietnam draft status. Clinton said that while some additional "details not worth a hill of beans" had come out in recent weeks, he had not changed his story about how he became a helicopter pilot that took him to key battlefield grounds.

"I am proud of what we did change the world," Bush said, citing end of the Cold War and said victory in the Persian Gulf War, "But the thing that we're more proud of is the fact that we have a president and executive direction that people who really count are involved.

Kids will cast ballots in mock election

PHOENIX (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Emily Pullen says she plans to vote for Bill Clinton this November.

"She's one of about 1 million kids in 13 states who are expected to cast ballots alongside their parents in a mock election organized by Kids Voting USA on Labor Day.

"It is think a real privilege to be able to vote," says Pullen, an eighth-grader at Andersen Junior High School in Chandler, Ariz. "I think I have an opportunity now of I can encourage adults that I know to vote."

Kids Voting USA is a non-profit, non-partisan group that works to encourage voter participation, said the programs president and executive director, Marilyn Evans. In addition to organizing the youth election, the group provides curriculum guides for politics for grades kindergarten through high school.

"There's plenty of homework so students will get their parents involved. And when children attend the mock election, an adult must accompany them. Kids Voting, or able to do so. We say they're also trying to increase adult voter turnout."

In Arizona areas that had Kids Voting, voter turnout increased 6 percent from 1996 to 1999, the group said.

Kids Voting also has affected adults. In South Dakota and Tennessee schools where the program is taught.

"Student elections at Andersen Junior High have gone beyond the popularity contest. Students must register to vote, but some are signing up to run and face recall if they don't satisfy their constituents. When collecting signatures to organize the first words out of the mouths of candidates are the "Are you a registered voter?" says Terry Williams, head of the social studies department.

"They know that the only people who really count are the kids themselves."

In Arizona, Alaska, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, North Carolina, Ohio, South Dakota and Tennessee schools where the program is taught.

"In Arizona areas that had Kids Voting, voter turnout increased 6 percent from 1996 to 1999, the group said.

The results of the mock election will be tallied after the polls in November and will be released later. Pullen says she'll be at the polls in November and will be registered to vote for the first time.

"If the group said.

Student government welcomes ND students

Dear Editor:

Molly and I welcome all of the new and returning students of Notre Dame! We at student government are off and running in our efforts to make this year a productive and meaningful one.

We will keep you informed of new projects and ways to get involved via the Student Government newsletter, The Voice.

Student Government and CAUSA (Catholic Action Union of Student Advocates) are working together to raise money for the victims of Hurricane Andrew in southern Florida and Louisiana. Donations can be made payable to "Catholic Charities," with boohs set up in LaFortune and both dining halls.

However, we can impact the many homeless families by extending our support in their time of need.

S.U.B. (Student Union Board) is sponsoring They Might Be Giants in concert in Stepan Center on Thursday, Sept. 10. Also, Fred Barnes and Jack Germond, both of McLaughlin Group fame, will be on campus on October 7 for a mock presidential debate.

We are exploring new ways to improve the Fred line (283-3733), a telephone service where students can ask questions and provide input to student government. In addition, for those of you who may not know, the Fred line provides the same schedule for Weekend Wheels, a transportation service for students returning from off-campus.

We welcome any input and will follow up on all suggestions made.

On another front, Lynn Friedewald and the rest of her committee are hard at work at preparing a follow-up report to the Board of Trustees regarding the quality of undergraduate education. Since this issue is important to all of us, we welcome any suggestions you have as to the direction and/or substance of our report.

Student Government will also be holding a student voter registration drive for the upcoming November elections. The drive will be held between Monday, September 14, and Thursday, September 17, with sign-ups in both dining halls and in LaFortune.

Any questions you have can be directed to political awareness commissioner, Chris Setti at 239-7669.

These are just a few of the many projects we have started. As always, your participation is what makes Student Government work, so we encourage you to stop by our offices on the second floor of LaFortune.

Again, all of us at student government send our best wishes for a great year!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

‘Fear and ignorance’ prevail, vandals fail artist’s ink blot test

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to an act of vandalism which occurred to works of sculpture by Marcia Kaplan, a Chicago artist, on the grounds of Saint Mary's College last Thursday night.

Apparently, some individuals took offense to these large biomorphic, abstract forms made from fiberglass and resin. Some people felt offended by the content which they felt made references to sex organs. Others were said to have been circulat ing protest, such as petitions which were said to have been circulated.

The vandals behaved cowardly in the dark and did irreparable damage to one of Kaplan's four pieces on the grounds.

I feel that those involved acted cowardly and ignorantly. It has become clear through their actions that ignorance is not bliss but rather it is something to fear.

The ignorance of these vandals caused them to be afraid of these artworks. Because they didn't understand them, they acted to censor them rather than to inquire about and learn from them.

They didn't even wait to hear the artist lecture about her work. I am embarrassed that such an act of ignorant cowardice would happen in an atmosphere meant for education and the opening of young minds.

In summary, ignorance is a thing which causes some to be afraid because of their own ignorance, and causes others to fear the ignorance which surrounds them. In any case, however, ignorance is never bliss.

international business internships offer students culture, experience

BY JOHN FISCHER
Accent Writer

Some Notre Dame students worked in construction this summer. Others went skydiving for charity in Moscow.

The former job could be acquired courtesy of condo developers anywhere, but the latter was only available as part of an internship sponsored by the Notre Dame Council on International Business Development.

Moscow was one of many spots around the globe which hosted students in internships with various multinational and local businesses. Other locations included Japan, Estonia, Poland, and Singapore.

The Council on International Business Development, advised by Father Ernest Bartell, C.S.C., director of the Kellogg Institute for International Studies, and led by junior Andrew Kiel, made these experiences possible.

The Summer Intern program, in its second year, sent 20 students overseas, both as interns and as delegates attempting to secure future internships.

Between two weeks of experience, another 20 students interned at home. This summer's Moscow program, for example, was a direct result of a delegation sent this past spring.

The goal of the program is to be able to eventually offer students to every continent. This goal could be realized as early as next summer, as delegations went this past summer to South America and South Africa. Programs are already in place North America, Europe, Asia, and Australia, he said.

Students have interned with a variety of companies, including JP Morgan in Geneva, the United States Olympic Committee in Barcelona, Honeywell in Moscow, and the United States embassies in Paris and Barcelona. Students also worked at an English school in Poland and worked for the Polish Central Bank.

Moscow also played host to a student writing for a Russian business journal. According to Ed Padinske, who worked at an English school in Poland and worked for the Polish Central Bank.

Padinske said that his work at the paper saw him covering a concert in Moscow which included pop singer Roy George. He said that he attended the concert and had the opportunity to interview the music reporter because the music reporter had injured his leg while skydiving the day before.

The social aspects of the internships made for an性强an experience as the business internships aspects. Kiel said of his visit to Singapore. He said that the cultural differences were immeasurable.

The purpose of the program, according to Kiel, is to give students both business and international experience.

"Today, the international experience is invaluable in business," he said.

The native Soviets made the experience memorable, Padinske said.

"Moscow is such an incredible place," he said. "The people there really seem to like Americans. It was such a different atmosphere, but I can't wait to go back there."

Sugar, with Bob Mould, mixes old and new on Copper Blue, its premiere effort

BY ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Music Critic

As guitarist and co-leader of Husker Du, Bob Mould played an integral part in shaping the sonic landscape of bands from Seattle to Boston, making distortion and volume the rule rather than the exception.

At the start of his solo career, Bob Mould played an integral part in shaping the sonic landscape of bands from Seattle to Boston, making distortion and volume the rule rather than the exception.

Husker Du's breakup in 1987 set Mould free to do his own work. And after two successful solo albums, he has taken his place in another power trio, Sugar.

Sugar's first album, Copper Blue, is an effort much in the tradition of Husker Du's latest work. Pop-sensible songs coat the album's rough edges, which include Mould's pained whine of a singing voice.

Lyrical, Mould tackles his usual territory, covering such themes as destruction, depression and devolution. His new-found ability to write pop songs about relationships, brought to the forefront in 1989 with "See A Little Light," is resuscitated with Sugar after being smothered in feedback and noise on Black Sheets of Rain.

In his 1991 solo effort, One of the strongest tracks on the album, "If I Can't Change Your Mind" pleads for the return of a lover. Despite the theme of the song, Mould seems to continue to wonder about the future of the world.

"Tears fill up my eyes/I'm washed away with sorrow/And somewhere in my mind/I know there's no tomorrow," he whines.

While romance is a relatively new addition to Mould's thematic catalog, ecological and political prognostication have been a topic of his work ever since "Newest Industry" pondered future American exploitation. Indeed, Black Sheets of Rain was entirely a treatise on environmental destruction.

With Copper Blue, Mould has abandoned the world. But with "Fortune Teller," he takes on the entire idea of predicting the future.

"Maybe crystal ball is fortune teller/Maybe cards laid out as fortune tellerin the future tense as past/dead fortune present here at last," Mould sings, leaning wondering whether Mould himself still believes any of his own predictions.

The sound on Copper Blue is at once densely noisy and crisply poppy. The lead-in to "Changes" includes a bell-ringing guitar riff over a bouncy bass line, while "Hoover Dam" includes backwards tape reminiscent of Husker Du's "Dreams Bee-eating," albeit at a much lower volume.

Despite a focus on Mould as the front man of Sugar, he is backed up by two capable musicians in bassist David Barbe and drummer Malcolm Travis. Barbe, formerly of Mercyland, and Travis, of the Zulus, support Mould's powerful presence throughout Copper Blue.

But indeed, Sugar is Mould's own show. The melodies have the pop sensibility Mould has developed through his years in Husker Du and as a solo artist, and the grungy sound Mould, Grant Hart and Greg Norton popularized almost ten years ago, though turned down on Copper Blue, is alive and well with Sugar.

For those ten years, Mould has been a defining force in the future of rock music as we know it. While Copper Blue breaks no new ground, it showcases Mould doing what he does better than anyone else.
IRVING, Texas — THE Redskins may be the Super Bowl champions in 49 states.

Not in Texas. With Emmitt Smith rushing for 137 yards and 1 TD and Mark Rypien throwing for 216 yards and a TD, the Dallas Cowboys established themselves as Super Bowl contenders in that lone state by opening the season with a 23-20 win over the Redskins Monday night.

It was Dallas’ third win over Washington in their last four meetings. Two of the last three losses for the Redskins, 17-2 in their march to the NFC title last year, have been to Dallas. One of those victories, 24-21 in Washington last Sunday, ended the Redskins’ 11-0 start and their bid for an unbeaten season.

This one was by far the most dominant — the Redskins didn’t have a play that gained as much as a yard until a 3-yard run by Earnest Byner with 3:46 second quarter left and didn’t get its first down until 1:30 into the second period.

By then Dallas was ahead 9-0 on a punt blocked on the end zone for a safety by Isaiah Holt and a 3-yard TD run by Smith on Smith’s 20-yard drive on the following series.

In fact, Washington really was in the game for just 3.2 minutes in the second quarter, when it cut the deficit to 9-7 on a touchdown created by an interception that shouldn’t have been one by last year.

Replays clearly showed that Washington’s Martin Mayhew dropped the ball on the play and was touched by Alvin Harper before he ran up 25 yards for the first down, but official review has been abolished this season. Three plays after the failed review, Mark Maybush bit Gary Clark with a 30-yard TD pass that put the Redskins behind in back in the first quarter.

It hardly mattered. The Cowboys made it 16-7 with 1:02 left in the half on a 26-yard pass from Akama Ali Harper, who used his height advantage to leap over 5-8 Darrell Garay. The advantage was exploited by both Harper and Michael Irvin all night. The tight end caught a drive that covered 67 yards in just 35 seconds after Mike Shanahan had punted the Redskins at their own 1 with a 54-yard punt.

And then, with 6.42 left in the third quarter, Mike Shanahan fumbled and burst nearly untouched through Mark Maybush for 42 yards for a touchdown. It was his second punt return for a TD in the last three games — he had one for 5 units in Philadelphia in the last game last year.

Chip Lohabacher’s 49-yard field goal 1:02 into the fourth period made it 23-10.

Ryan was 20 of 38 for 208 yards, many of them late in the game and hardly looked the part of last year’s Super Bowl MVP he was and lost it another time when he was sacked by Charlie Hays, just obtained from San Francisco.

He also underthrew a wide-open Art Monk on one play and opened an open Ricky Sanders with another. The crowd of 63,538 also helped.

Haley’s sack came on a late snap when Mike Shanahan lost automatic control over the crowd noise and the safety on Washington’s first possession came after losses of 14 yards in two plays in which the Redskins had trouble getting off field because of the noise.
Bobby Brown, Sullivan of Boston and Tom charge of baseball. The council in person Wednesday in St. Louis to discuss whom to put in charge for new. Among the possibilities are former AL president Lee MacPhail, Democratic National Committee chairman Ron Brown, the current league presidents and former Montreal Expo executive John McFarlane.

"I doubt anybody will be given the title of commissioner, but we'll see," Reinsdorf said when asked what would happen in the near-term. "The council consists of 10 very able people. We'll see what they want to do." MacPhail, for his part, said no one has talked to him about the job and added, "I wouldn't want to." Vincent, elected on Sept. 13, 1989, to a term through March 31, 1994, had argued that the Major League Agreement to create a "superhead" commissioner? This is certainly the goal of some. And while it is bad for baseball, I cannot prevent that change. ... I cannot govern as commissioner without the owners' vote. I do not believe that comment is now available to me." Reinsdorf said he would like to see the office restructured to make it a chief executive officer reporting to the 28 owners as a board of directors. "I respect Fay's decision to step aside" Austry said. "For all of us associated with baseball, we must now strive to find solutions to the problems that confront us."

The owners opposing Vincent met by telephone conference call after the resignation was announced and decided not to continue their special major league meeting on Vincent, which had been scheduled to resume Wednesday in St. Louis. Instead, the leagues will conduct their scheduled quarterly meetings Wednesday, followed by the regular joint major league meeting Thursday. "We've been through some turbulent times and I hope we can resolve it in a peaceful way and get back to playing baseball," Brown said when contacted at the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

Giles said he believed the group against Vincent would have had enough votes for a firings, even if it would have sparked a court fight. "That would not be pretty. It would not have been good for baseball," Giles said. "It's not that it's happened and to go further would have been even worse." The executive council is to appoint this week a committee that will examine restructuring the commissioner's office. "I can only hope owners realize that a strong commissioner, a person of experience and stature in the community, is integral to baseball," Vincent wrote. "I hope they learn this lesson before too much damage is done to the game, to the players, umpires and others who work in the game, and most importantly, to the fans." Vincent's opponents lauded the resignation and tried to look ahead.

"He just didn't have that ability to address the problems and the leadership ability to accomplish it," Minnesota Twins owner Carl Pohlad said. "Fay Vincent has made a statesmanlike decision and I respect him for that," Selig said. "On the best interest of baseball, it is important that we now focus our energies and efforts on the myriad of significant issues confronting the game." Baltimore Orioles owner Eli Jacobs supported Vincent until the end. "He accepted the job as commissioner of baseball in a most difficult time," Jacobs said. "While in office, he has been an unselﬁsh decision-maker, not once failing to act in the best interests of baseball. I am disappointed. Baseball and its fans have lost a great friend."

The move against Vincent had its roots in the collective bargaining negotiations of 1990. Vincent entered the talks with the major League Baseball Players Association only with permission from Selig, chairman of the Player Relations Committee. But Selig and Reinsdorf later began to feel that the interjection weakened the management's bargaining position with the union.

Owners became slightly more disenfranchised in 1991 when Vincent gave AL teams $42 million of the NL's $190 million in expansion money, or a total of $3 million for each AL team. AL owners felt the money wasn't worth giving up three players in the expansion draft.

Opposition to Vincent appeared to wane in June when other owners failed to support Selig and Reinsdorf in their request that the commissioner give up his "best interests" power over collective bargaining.

A month later, however, the move to oust Vincent started when he overrode the NL constitution in July and ordered realignment, sending the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals to the NL West and the Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds to the NL East.

The Cubs obtained a preliminary injunction in federal court blocking the move, and the Tribune Co. became a powerful force in the anti-Vincent movement. The commissioner had been seeking congressional approval to lessen the influence of superstations. The Tribune Co., owns the Cubs, will have the television rights to seven teams on its stations next season: Cubs and White Sox (WGN), Los Angeles Dodgers and California Angels (KTLA), Philadelphia Phillies (WPxl), Philadelphia Phillies (WPHL) and Colorado Rockies (KWGN).

Petrucelli commented. "But, I believe our players are more experienced and they are more soccer than theirs."

The Bulldogs top scoring threat this season are Sieracki and Flanigan who netted both goals for her team on Sunday against Central College. The team's leading scorer in 1991 with seven goals and 12 assists.

With no progress in the injury department, Petrucelli will once again count on his younger players. "The difference between the first and second halves on Saturday was unbelievable. The second half, the game of soccer definitely help," the second-year Irish coach said.

Most impressive of the freshmen in Saturday's game was Rosella Guerero, who recorded a hat trick and could be the big scorer the Irish are missing.

"She has the ability to score goals, and I believe she has the potential," Petrucelli said. "But, we have a number of players that are capable of scoring goals."

By KILEY COBLE
Sports Writer

The Belles volleyball team had an impressive pre-season opener at the Kalamazoo College Tourney on Saturday, placing third out of nine colleges.

In pool play, St. Mary's took the first two games, winning 15-11, 15-8. In its second game of pool play, the Belles were defeated by 15-10, 15-9, 15-5 in its first match of the Tourney. The team then won on to defeat Carthage 10-15, 15-10, 15-11, in its second game of poolplay.

"We played a lot differently this year, more as a team," Martin said. "Our offense is tremendous, but our defense needs work."

The team has started a new defense this year and according to Schroeder-Biek they had a good number of digs. "But at the end of the day we were tired and we had a dull defense," Schroeder-Biek said. "Our weaknesses are very workable, this is only the pre-season."

The Belles will be traveling again on Thursday to go against Bethel College at 7:00 pm.

Vincent's resignation is bad news for baseball fans

Take me out to the ball game. Take me out to the crowd.
But wait until April of 1994.
With the resignation yesterday of baseball commissioner Fay Vincent, a dreadful possibility looms largely real: that the 1993 season will end up as a wash, a summer-long lockout of money-grubbing major-league players by money-grubbing major league owners.

Skyrocketing salaries, and owners willing to pay them, have put several clubs, and indeed the entire institution of major league baseball, in financial jeopardy.

With the expiration of the Major League Agreement set for 1993, major league owners will have the option of opting out of the agreement for restructuring before next year's season begins. With profound gaps between the owners' views of the players' union, a lockout seems like the most likely scenario for next April's opening day action.

But despite the fact that the owners are willing to go to the mat with the players' union, they are forgetting their own recent history. The owners never won their labor court cases. Sunday, on This Week with David Brinkley, political analyst/baseball scholar George Will likened the major league owners' legal record to the regular-season marks of the infamous Cleveland Spiders in the late 1880s.

But like those seasons must have done it on for the Cleveland Spiders, so the summer of 1992 will drag for big business, especially big clubs, and indeed the entire institution of major league baseball, in financial jeopardy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Fay Vincent gave up the fight to keep his job and resigned Monday, four days after an overwhelming no-confidence vote by major league owners.

"I've concluded that resignation — not litigation — should be my final act as commissioner in the best interests of baseball," Vincent wrote in a three-page letter to owners that he made public Tuesday.

On Aug. 20, Vincent had vowed "I will never resign," but the timing of his resignation with 18-9 with one abstention Thursday urging him to quit, and he decided to resign after a weekend of reflection at his vacation home in Harwich, Port, Mass.

Vincent was forced out by owners angry at his refusal to relinquish the commissioner's "best interests" power on collective bargaining, his unilateral order to realign the National League and his stance against superstations.

The group was led by Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox, Bud Selig of Milwaukee, Stanost Cook of the Chicago Cubs and Peter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It would be an even greater disservice to baseball if I were to precipitate a protracted fight over the office of the commissioner," Vincent wrote. "After the vote at the meeting last week, I can no longer justify imposing on baseball if I were to precipitate a protracted fight over the office of the commissioner.

"It was the only sensible thing he could do," Reinsdorf said. "It was his best interest and in our best interest. The important thing is that the commissioner made the decision that was right for himself, for baseball and for everybody. We don't have to speculate on what we would have done had he not done that.

Vincent took over as baseball's eighth commissioner when his friend, A. Bartlett Giamatti, died on Friday of Labor Day weekend three years ago. He becomes the third commissioner forced to leave early, joining Happy Chandler and William Eckert.

In addition, Bowie Kuhn was defeated in his bid for a third term and Peter Ueberroth departed prematurely after sensing owners would not re-elect him.

The only losers through all of this inflated bickering will be the major league fans. When next July rolls around, without baseball, the losers will be the rooftop watchers behind Wrigley Field, the Dodger Dog vendors at Chavez Ravine, and the new Marlins fans Joe Robbie Stadium.

Major league owners have tried to get their acts together ever since salaries began to take off in the early '80s, but, through escalating salaries and repeated labor disputes, haven't been able to do so. It's possible that the owners may have dealt themselves and the 1993 season a final blow by forcing Vincent out of office.

The 18th-ranked Notre Dame women's soccer team learned a lot on Saturday against fifth-ranked North Carolina State. Tonight the Irish will try to put it to use as they travel to Indianapolis to face Butler.

"They are a very organized team that is difficult to score against," Irish coach Pete O'Neill said. "I know we have more talent than them, but that doesn't mean we are going to win." They (Butler) are excited about playing Notre Dame. This is their biggest game of the year.

Notre Dame, which starts five freshmen, will begin its defense of the Midwestern Collegiate Conference title against a Bulldogs team which won its season opener on Sunday over Radford, 2-1. Butler returns all 11 starters from last season's inaugural 10-7-1 team, and this experience could play a factor in tonight's game.

"It's a funny thing, they are a second year program, but we are younger than them," Boyle said.

"It was the only sensible thing he could do," Reinsdorf said. "It was his best interest and in our best interest. The important thing is that the commissioner made the decision that was right for himself, for baseball and for everybody. We don't have to speculate on what we would have done had he not done that.
