Senior interrupts studies to join Clinton campaign

By MONICA YANT
Editor-in-Chief

As the full presidential campaign heads into home stretch, Notre Dame senior Ashanti Butler has what mightquel a call from the campaign staff, and then an interview with Clinton/Gore '92 campaign headquarters in Little Rock, Ark.

"Bill Clinton is a product of the area of our parents, not our grandparents. A lot of the things that he is concerned with are things that we are going to be facing after graduation."

The government major has a good reason for such polished politeness. Connecticut. She's a full-time student, and Butler admitted he couldn't refuse.

"That's part of the plan for getting America back on track," Butler said of the Arkansas governor's recent campaign forays. "The votes couldn't come from outside."

Butler says he's been following the campaign, politics and education proposals. "I try to make a small change in the course of the world and bearing about people who couldn't come back for financial reasons. That's ridiculous."

Other young voters must share her view. According to Assistant Press Secretary Ethan Zindskul, the voting age is 200 of the more than 350 students in the Little Rock office are under 25 years old.

Butler has worn many hats in the campaign. She's focused her research efforts on college students and the elderly and tracked Clinton for delegates at the July Democratic Convention, where her responsibilities included everything from orchestrating sign-waving to reminding the members of five state delegations of voting sessions.

Butler said the campaign works primarily in surrogate scheduling. Put simply, the job is to make sure that either Bill or Al Gore is available for a campaign appearance in the South. Butler has what pundits might call an inside track to the administration.

"Butler said in a telephone interview that her task to find an appropriate replacement among key Democrats at the local, state or national level. Past surrogates include party Chairman Ron Brown, Boston Mayor Ray Flynn, Evan Bayh, and Indiana Governor Evan Bayh."

In October, Butler will make a trip to the Northwest region and will "make sure that all the voters know that Nov. 3 is the day to vote for Bill Clinton."

The decision to put her studies on hold for the campaign was not an easy one, Butler admits. see INTERRUPT / page 4

Giving the gift of flowers
Seniors Ilana Carlos and Bryan Krayek purchase flowers and balloons at Irish Gardens, located in the basement of Lafortune Student Center, which opened Monday.

Business school sponsors campaign discussion

Special to The Observer

Dennis Moore, director of public relations, confirmed that Democratic presidential candidate Governor Bill Clinton will speak in Stepan Center on Friday.

Clinton campaign officials said the candidate will speak at 3 p.m.

Although the presidential campaign will take center stage Friday, the College of Business Administration's advisory council is also sponsoring a speech by political commentator Mark Shields and a panel discussion focusing on the campaign.

Shields will speak on "The Making of a President: 1992" at 1:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Center for Continuing Education (CCE), and will reportedly give a broadcast from South Bend for the MacNeille/Lehrer Hour later in the day.

"The American Political Process: Is This Any Way to Run an Election?" will feature a panel of four Notre Dame faculty members in a round-table presentation at 10:15 a.m. in the CCE auditorium. Participants will include: Robert Schumuhl, chair of American studies, Douglas Kneale, professor of law, Thomas Morris, professor of philosophy, and Barry Keating, chair and Jones professor of finance and business economics.

Moderated by James O'Rourke, associate professor of management at Notre Dame, the panel will analyze the electoral process, the economy and changes in the American political landscape in the 1990s.

The discussion will be videotaped for cable broadcast at a later date.

A 1959 graduate of Notre Dame is a Shields is a Washington Post columnist. Along with Pat Buchanan, Robert Nave and Al Hunt — a member of CNN's "Capital Gang." He is the author of "On the Campaign Trail," and has provided convention and election coverage for CBS and NBC.

Michelangelo virus attacks ND Law school computer

By JOHN CONNORMON News Writer

The highly destructive Michelangelo computer virus was discovered in at least one Notre Dame Law School computer center last Friday night by a law student.

Krista Maclean, a law student at Notre Dame, discovered the virus when she tried a disk she had been using at the Law School on a computer at her father's law office where it was detected.

Maclean's husband, Tom, Personal Computer coordinator of the aerospace manufacturer HOWMET Corporation and Notre Dame graduate, immediately notified Jeff Morgan, the computer consultant at the Law School.

Although Michelangelo was eliminated from the Law School network, the computer was used on the infected terminal is likely to be carrying the virus.

"Basically the problem that was the Law School had been depending on a virus package developed in 1988," said Tom Maclean.

"Since Michelangelo was only developed in 1990, it couldn't be detected by the Law School's package."

Viruses work by destroying the file allocation tables on hard disks, locking the computer intact but unable to locate or understand any files.

The problem of a virus is magnified by its potential to spread rapidly from computer to computer by users.

"Basically what you've got on your hands is a sexually transmitted disease for computers," noted Tom Maclean.

Last year, the United States and most of the industrialized world were targeted by Michelangelo, when computer experts determined that the virus would attack April 6, 1990, the anniversary of the artist's birthday, wreaking havoc on the world's computer systems.

"Teaching seriously and frankly that which is terrible and the beautiful in the world," Lopez proposed overcoming these perils by teaching students both the terrible and the beautiful in the tension between violence and peace today.

He quoted Thucydides who said, "Those who are truly courageous are those who know how to be terrible in life and what is beautiful and recognizing these can march out and meet what is to come."

Lopez then specified some of the "terrible" facts in peace studies.

"More people on a per capita basis died at their own hands at the hands of their communities than in wars," Lopez pointed out.

"Internal violence has wreaked more havoc on peace than the institute of war."

He went on to explain that the need to find out more about the causes and conditions of internal social violence.

Lopez said that we need to develop "new concepts and models for economic security for states who walk the line of economic peril."

Lopez also brought up the plight of the environment. "What are the basics of security and what are acceptable standards thereof?" Lopez asked.

"The same way we have the UN to protect the environment, we must have the UN to protect/" Lopez told. According to Lopez, Notre Dame has one of the few major peace centers in the United States that does not teach an undergraduate or graduate multidisciplinary course in the environment.

Along with explaining the "terrible," Lopez also talked about the "beautiful" in the realm of peace studies.

"If beauty is in the eye of the beholder," he said, "this beholder believes that the most serious and significant thing that a peace research program can do is to study principled and practical nonviolent approaches to social change."

"I think my own niche in this may very well be placed in the ability to look in the 1990s at where the concerns about peace and war may be going," according to Lopez.

Lopez discussed the large involvement of Notre Dame students in social concerns. However, he expressed disappointment that it is isolated to the Center for Social Concerns, the dorms, and other organizations.

He emphasized the "need to make it connect to what they're learning in class."

"We can all come together as faculty and students," Lopez concluded, "examine the terrible and study the beautiful, raise hard questions about how they fit together, and march out and meet what is to come."

By MICHELLE CROUCH

"Teaching seriously and frankly that which is terrible and the beautiful in the world," Lopez proposed overcoming these perils by teaching students both the terrible and the beautiful in the tension between violence and peace today.

He quoted Thucydides who said, "Those who are truly courageous are those who know how to be terrible in life and what is beautiful and recognizing these can march out and meet what is to come."

Lopez then specified some of the "terrible" facts in peace studies.

"More people on a per capita basis died at their own hands at the hands of their communities than in wars," Lopez pointed out.

"Internal violence has wreaked more havoc on peace than the institute of war."

He went on to explain that the need to find out more about the causes and conditions of internal social violence.

Lopez said that we need to develop "new concepts and models for economic security for states who walk the line of economic peril."

Lopez also brought up the plight of the environment. "What are the basics of security and what are acceptable standards thereof?" Lopez asked.

"The same way we have the UN to protect the environment, we must have the UN to protect/" Lopez told. According to Lopez, Notre Dame has one of the few major peace centers in the United States that does not teach an undergraduate or graduate multidisciplinary course in the environment.

Along with explaining the "terrible," Lopez also talked about the "beautiful" in the realm of peace studies.

"If beauty is in the eye of the beholder," he said, "this beholder believes that the most serious and significant thing that a peace research program can do is to study principled and practical nonviolent approaches to social change."

"I think my own niche in this may very well be placed in the ability to look in the 1990s at where the concerns about peace and war may be going," according to Lopez.

Lopez discussed the large involvement of Notre Dame students in social concerns. However, he expressed disappointment that it is isolated to the Center for Social Concerns, the dorms, and other organizations.

He emphasized the "need to make it connect to what they're learning in class."

"We can all come together as faculty and students," Lopez concluded, "examine the terrible and study the beautiful, raise hard questions about how they fit together, and march out and meet what is to come."
Saint Mary's has special appeal

Three years ago if someone would have told me that I would be living in Indiana, I would have thought it was the craziest thing I had ever heard.

When I was looking for a school, I looked all over the coast for the school with the best location, weather, etc. However, people kept telling me about Saint Mary's College in Notre Dame, Indiana. It sounded pretty good except where it is located, especially with me being from the South. Anyway, I thought what I would want to go to an all women's college by choice.

The people who strongly suggested Saint Mary's were my parents, especially my father. He continually told me about the strong tradition and how important it is to go far away to school, my father decided I must experience a new school, my father decided I must experience a new school, my father decided I must experience a new school. Three years ago if I had thought of going to Notre Dame would be too overwhelming that I would want to go to an all women's college by choice.

Notre Dame is a great university with tons to offer a student, just not the one for me. Each year straight, the answer to both questions is offer a student, just not the one for me. Therefore, I didn't apply. Then, of course, I got visited. Not Notre Dame would be too overwhelming that I would want to go to an all women's college by choice.

Three years ago if someone would have told me that I would be living in Indiana, I would have thought it was the craziest thing I had ever heard. Finally, in the fall of my senior year of high school, my father decided I must experience a Notre Dame football game to see the spirit and excitement in the all the people attending. I also remembered him continually telling me how the football team went to the student section after each game, win or lose, and raise their banners to the students' support. He figured that I would fall in love with it all and want to go to school here. Well, his plan worked, but not quite the way the plan worked. I toured the campuses and spent the night at Saint Mary's. The atmosphere of the school was incredible. There are so many ways to describe Saint Mary's that I could go on for pages. It felt like I could easily become a crucial part of the campus. I felt this way nowhere else I visited, was a wonderful sense of security and a place I could easily make home.

Then I faced ridicule from family and friends. My oldest brother, a graduate, stressed to me that Saint Mary's was the place for me because Notre Dame would be too overwhelming that I probably wouldn't make it. That is the reason he thinks I didn't apply, so let him believe that.

The views expressed in the Inside Production News are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Observer.

ON THIS DAY IN HISTORY
- In 1919: Most of Boston’s 1,500-man police force went on strike.
- In 1948: The People’s Democratic Republic of Korea (North Korea) was created.
- In 1957: President Dwight Eisenhower signed into law the first post-civil war Reconstruction Bill.
- It was signed into law in 1985: President Reagan abandoned his opposition to sanctions against South Africa, ordering implementation of measures against the white-ruled Pretoria government.
Student Activities director responds to allegations

Special to The Observer

The following is a letter from Joe Cassidy, director of student activities, in response to Matt Bomberger's allegations that Cassidy has created strife between student government and other student organizations.

In the process of resigning as SUSB director of programming, Matt Bomberger expressed his opinion that I am manipulative and incompetent. It is always my intent, as well as the intent of the Student Activities staff, to try to serve the students of Our Lady's University to the best of our abilities.

I wish that Matt would have come to speak with me about his concerns before resigning from SUSB and making his views public. For whatever reason, Matt elected not to do that.

After learning of Matt's resignation and his impressions, I asked him to meet with me to discuss the opinions he expressed. We met; Matt had the opportunity to share with me his impressions. I had the opportunity to express how I thought he had greatly misinterpreted my actions.

It isn't pertinent to outline what was said in our meeting. That is between Matt and me. What is important is that Matt and I viewed a few things differently and we took the time to discuss those differences. I hope that in the future, any member of the Notre Dame community that is discontented with the Student Activities Office will come and discuss their feelings with me or any other member of the staff.

GSU looks to improved school year

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
News Writer

The Graduate Student Union (GSU) is looking forward to improving the graduate school's activities and integrating in new programs during the 1992-93 school year, said GSU president, Mike Kelly.

Last week, the GSU started off the year by having orientation for the first year graduate students, said Kelly.

Other programs that have been GSU issues in past years are the effort by members to make more travel grant money available, and the social functions that the graduate school sponsors annually, he said.

A new program that the GSU is working on is a system where minority and female graduate students would be mentors for undergraduate students.

The GSU "is always looking for things to improve," said Kelly. "The mentor program is a very good idea."

A needed improvement that the GSU is fighting for is better insurance coverage by the university, he said.

In addition, the GSU, along with university employees, is working towards child care facilities for graduate student use on the Notre Dame campus, said Kelly.

Right now the only child care center is on the Saint Mary's campus and "everyone knows there is a need for additional facilities," he said.

Kelly said that the university is cooperating and that he is pleased with the progress that the GSU has made. "Most of our (GSU's) manpower right now is tied up in the day care and insurance projects," he said.

One issue that Kelly was very concerned about relating to the graduate student body was that counseling services are available for those in need of it. This special concern was due to the death of graduate student, Kryss Toftp Trautman.

Graduate and undergraduate student relations are on very stable terms, said Kelly. "We graduate students all knew when we entered graduate school we'd be working with undergrads," he said. "We certainly came here looking forward to do so. We were all undergraduates once."

The programs and issues that the GSU is working on will "directly or indirectly affect the undergrad. Any issue, whether it be better stipends or child care, will increase the caliber of graduate students to choose from," said Kelly.

The fears of the university turning into primarily a research institute are unwarranted, he said. "The research program is not a bad thing to undergraduates," he said. "It will help the undergraduate program by giving the students increased access to better resources."

HPC discusses creation of rape support group

By JOE MONAHAN
News Writer

The Hall Presidents' Council discussed the creation of a support group for rape survivors which will be offered by the Sex Offense Services in conjunction with C.A.R.E. (Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination).

Open to all female undergraduate and graduate students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's and is completely confidential.

Information is available by calling 234-0061 ext. 1308.

Weekend Wheels, the HPC shuttle campus program, will begin operations this Friday night from midnight until 2:30 a.m., according to the HPC. Nightly pickup schedules will be posted in dorms or people can call the F-R-E-D line.

Irish Gardens expressed interest in coordinating flower sales with dorm dance ticket sales to help alleviate the problem of lines in LaFortune Student Center.

KARAOKE

Wednesday night!

9-2

The place to be for the "Class of '93" must be 21

Lee Torrence sells Guatemalan imports in the Sorin Room of LaFortune Student Center. The sale is always popular with students.

GSU looks to improved school year

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
News Writer

The Graduate Student Union (GSU) is looking forward to improving the graduate school's activities and integrating in new programs during the 1992-93 school year, said GSU president, Mike Kelly.

Last week, the GSU started off the year by having orientation for the first year graduate students, said Kelly.

Other programs that have been GSU issues in past years are the effort by members to make more travel grant money available, and the social functions that the graduate school sponsors annually, he said.

A new program that the GSU is working on is a system where minority and female graduate students would be mentors for undergraduate students.

The GSU "is always looking for things to improve," said Kelly. "The mentor program is a very good idea."

A needed improvement that the GSU is fighting for is better insurance coverage by the university, he said.

In addition, the GSU, along with university employees, is working towards child care facilities for graduate student use on the Notre Dame campus, said Kelly.

Right now the only child care center is on the Saint Mary's campus and "everyone knows there is a need for additional facilities," he said.

Kelly said that the university is cooperating and that he is pleased with the progress that the GSU has made. "Most of our (GSU's) manpower right now is tied up in the day care and insurance projects," he said.

One issue that Kelly was very concerned about relating to the graduate student body was that counseling services are available for those in need of it. This special concern was due to the death of graduate student, Kryss Toftp Trautman.

Graduate and undergraduate student relations are on very stable terms, said Kelly. "We graduate students all knew when we entered graduate school we'd be working with undergrads," he said. "We certainly came here looking forward to do so. We were all undergraduates once."

The programs and issues that the GSU is working on will "directly or indirectly affect the undergrad. Any issue, whether it be better stipends or child care, will increase the caliber of graduate students to choose from," said Kelly.

The fears of the university turning into primarily a research institute are unwarranted, he said. "The research program is not a bad thing to undergraduates," he said. "It will help the undergraduate program by giving the students increased access to better resources."

HPC discusses creation of rape support group

By JOE MONAHAN
News Writer

The Hall Presidents' Council discussed the creation of a support group for rape survivors which will be offered by the Sex Offense Services in conjunction with C.A.R.E. (Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination).

Open to all female undergraduate and graduate students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's and is completely confidential.

Information is available by calling 234-0061 ext. 1308.

Weekend Wheels, the HPC shuttle campus program, will begin operations this Friday night from midnight until 2:30 a.m., according to the HPC. Nightly pickup schedules will be posted in dorms or people can call the F-R-E-D line.

Irish Gardens expressed interest in coordinating flower sales with dorm dance ticket sales to help alleviate the problem of lines in LaFortune Student Center.

KARAOKE

Wednesday night!

9-2

The place to be for the "Class of '93" must be 21
Magellan maps Venus; prepared for lower orbit

PASSADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Magellan spacecraft is back in business after a seven-week outage and is making radar pictures of some of the last unmapped regions on Venus, NASA said Tuesday.

Magellan will fly into a lower orbit next week so it can measure Venus' gravity to gain clues about the planet's interior structure.

If the spacecraft continues to work properly through Sunday, it will have mapped 99 percent of Venus' landscape, far more than its official goal of 70 percent to 90 percent, said Doug Griffin, project manager at the space agency's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Scientists "are ecstatic," he said.

One of Magellan's two transmitters broke down in January. The other transmitter was plagued by heat-related "noise" that interfered with its ability to send pictures of Venus to Earth.

So NASA turned off the transmitter July 15 when Magellan already had mapped 97.5 percent of Venus.

The shutdown was intended to make sure the transmitter would still be able to work when Magellan flew over yet-unmapped regions of Venus' southern hemisphere this month.

Griffin said mapping resumed Thursday after engineers raised the transmitter's temperature to a level that minimized "noise" and allowed pictures to be sent to Earth.

Magellan probably won't be able to get pictures of the final, unmapped 1 percent of Venus' terrain because those areas are "little teeny things here and everywhere" on the planet's surface, Griffin said.

Magellan is in an elliptical orbit that ranges from 162 miles to 5,282 miles above Venus' surface. Griffin said the low end of the orbit will be lowered to 113 miles in altitude on Monday so the next day Magellan can start making precise measurements of how the planet's gravity varies in different regions.

Such variations will help scientists understand the structure of Venus' interior.

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME INTERNATIONAL STUDY PROGRAM

TRINITY COLLEGE DUBLIN, IRELAND

INFORMATION MEETING

About A Junior Year Experience

Wednesday, September 9, 1992 4:30 P.M.

Room 114 O'Shaugnessy

---

Share a Little Happiness

Become A Big Brother or Big Sister Volunteer

Orientation Meeting

Tonight, 7:00-8:00 p.m.

Center for Social Concerns

---

University of Notre Dame International Study Program in Jerusalem

Spring 1993

INFORMATION MEETING

Wednesday, September 9, 1992 6:30 P.M.

106 O'Shaugnessy

"Who saw not Jerusalem in its glory has never seen a beautiful city."

---

Interrupt

continued from page 1

"At first I said no. It just wasn't in my plans," said Butler, who was scheduled to study in London for the spring semester and had just completed a semester in Washington, D.C., in December when the call came.

But currency problems persisted, flying her to Arkansas to discuss the job opportunities. Their contact from last Tuesday

---

Two U.N. peacekeepers killed

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Heavy machine gun fire blasted a U.N. convoy arriving from Belgrade near the airport, where a vital airlift of humanitarian supplies was suspended after an Italian aid plane was downed Thursday. Clashes have broken out around the airport.

U.N. forces have increasingly come under fire from warring factions, and the latest incident could bolster proposals seeking greater protection for peacekeepers and relief flights.

U.N. spokesman Yosuf Khalaf said it was not immediately clear who fired on the convoy, but Serb militiamen and Bosnian government forces have positions near the airport. Two French peacekeepers were slightly wounded in the attack, he said.

Military officers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they thought the attack was deliberate.

The peacekeeping deployment has lasted at least five minutes.

Four Serbs or peacekeepers in Bosnia have been killed and 46 wounded since June. Also, four Italian airmen were killed when officials say their relief plane was shot down.

Sarajevo is reeling from heavy clashes as government forces have tried to break through lines of Serb militias encircling the city, where food and other supplies were running low.

A Serb official said Tuesday that Serb militiamen will have heavy guns around Sarajevo under U.N. supervision by Thursday, two days before a deadline set by international mediators.

U.N. peacekeepers hope that monitoring Serb artillery tanks and other heavy arms will reduce the fighting that has battered Bosnia's capital and other besieged cities for months.

But there was no immediate sign of respite for Sarajevo. The airport is a lifeline for about 240,000 people and people scavenged streets and hillsides for wood and food.

U.N. officials said it was unlikely the airport would resume operations unless governments providing planes wanted stronger security guarantees.

Moniclo Krajinik, head of the parliament set up by rebellious Bosnian Serbs, told The Associated Press that the Serbs would beat the Saturday deadline for monitoring of their big guns.

"We have made sure that our heavy artillery positions will be ready for U.N. supervision on Thursday, two days before the deadline," Krajinik said in a telephone interview.

The Serbs agreed to the plan last month but so far have not implemented it.

The European Community, meanwhile, tightened its trade boycott against Yugoslavia on Tuesday with tougher rules on truck traffic through its only two remaining republics, Serbia and Montenegro.

The boycott is intended to punish Serb-dominated Yugoslavia for fomenting violence in Bosnia. At least 8,000 people — and perhaps as many as 35,000 — have died since the majority Muslims and Croats voted Feb. 29 for independence over the objection of ethnic Serbs.

A senior U.N. peacekeeper in Sarajevo had expressed hope that relief flights could resume to Sarajevo on Tuesday.

---

Interruption urge reform in Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A state-run newspaper on Tuesday ran an appeal urging Iraq's government to try to make democratic reform.

The appeal by a group of eight Iraqi intellectuals — highly unusual under Saddam Hussein's tight control — was printed in the state paper Al-Jumhouria and carried by the Iraqi News Agency.

It ran one day after Saddam's son, Uday, launched a campaign for greater democracy in an editorial in his Baghdad newspaper, Babel.

But the appeal was more muted than Saddam Hussein permits dissent.

The appeal is a group of eight Iraqi intellectuals — highly unusual under Saddam Hussein's tight control — was printed in the state paper Al-Jumhouria and carried by the Iraqi News Agency.

It ran one day after Saddam's son, Uday, launched a campaign for greater democracy in an editorial in his Baghdad newspaper, Babel.

Iraqi attacks on Shiite Muslims have been killed and 46 wounded since June. Also, four Italian airmen were killed when officials say their relief plane was shot down.

Sarajevo is reeling from heavy clashes as government forces have tried to break through lines of Serb militias encircling the city, where food and other supplies were running low.

A Serb official said Tuesday that Serb militiamen will have heavy guns around Sarajevo under U.N. supervision by Thursday, two days before a deadline set by international mediators.

U.N. peacekeepers hope that monitoring Serb artillery tanks and other heavy arms will reduce the fighting that has battered Bosnia's capital and other besieged cities for months.

But there was no immediate sign of respite for Sarajevo. The airport is a lifeline for about 240,000 people and people scavenged streets and hillsides for wood and food.

U.N. officials said it was unlikely the airport would resume operations unless governments providing planes wanted stronger security guarantees.

Moniclo Krajinik, head of the parliament set up by rebellious Bosnian Serbs, told The Associated Press that the Serbs would beat the Saturday deadline for monitoring of their big guns.

"We have made sure that our heavy artillery positions will be ready for U.N. supervision on Thursday, two days before the deadline," Krajinik said in a telephone interview.

The Serbs agreed to the plan last month but so far have not implemented it.

The European Community, meanwhile, tightened its trade boycott against Yugoslavia on Tuesday with tougher rules on truck traffic through its only two remaining republics, Serbia and Montenegro.

The boycott is intended to punish Serb-dominated Yugoslavia for fomenting violence in Bosnia. At least 8,000 people — and perhaps as many as 35,000 — have died since the majority Muslims and Croats voted Feb. 29 for independence over the objection of ethnic Serbs.

A senior U.N. peacekeeper in Sarajevo had expressed hope that relief flights could resume to Sarajevo on Tuesday.

---

Intellectuals urge reform in Iraq

In other developments:

- The head of a U.N. team of chemical weapons experts in Iraq cited "very good" cooperation by Baghdad while testing two Iraqi-built plants built to destroy mustard gas and nerve agents. Previous U.N. weapons inspection teams were blocked or intimidated.

- In an interview with The Associated Press, Ron Manley said he might be able to stay by Saturday when full-scale destruction could begin at the Moammer al-Qaddafi air base, about 70 miles north of Baghdad.

- Officers on the aircraft carrier USS Independence said patrolling southern Iraq to protect the Shites has become routine enough that they're warrant scaling back the operation, but that it will take a political decision.

- In London, Shiite opposition leaders said the eight Iraqis who signed the statement calling for democratic reform were known allies of the Iraqi dictator.

- "These are stooges and collaborators who are trying to save whatever left of the regime's credibility," said Ahmad al-Jabbar, leader of the Iraq Freedom Front council, told the AP.

- Saddam, he said, is "a tyrant who never keeps his promises."

- Laith Kubba, spokesman for the National Iraqi Liberation Front, another opposition group, called the statement "a clear sign of weakness" that will not lessen the opposition's determination to topple the Iraqi leader.

---

Magellan maps Venus; prepared for lower orbit

PASSADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Magellan spacecraft is back in business after a seven-week outage and is making radar pictures of some of the last unmapped regions on Venus, NASA said Tuesday.

Magellan will fly into a lower orbit next week so it can measure Venus' gravity to gain clues about the planet's interior structure.

If the spacecraft continues to work properly through Sunday, it will have mapped 99 percent of Venus' landscape, far more than its official goal of 70 percent to 90 percent, said Doug Griffin, project manager at the space agency's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Scientists "are ecstatic," he said.

One of Magellan's two transmitters broke down in January. The other transmitter was plagued by heat-related "noise" that interfered with its ability to send pictures of Venus to Earth.

So NASA turned off the transmitter July 15 when Magellan already had mapped 97.5 percent of Venus. The spacecraft is back in business after a seven-week outage and is making radar pictures of some of the last unmapped regions on Venus, NASA said Tuesday.
Clinton focuses on employment market;
Bush camp attacks Clinton draft status

(AP) - Bill Clinton pledged Tuesday to spend $2 billion a year to help American manufacturers create more jobs, basing economic themes as his Vietnam draft status came under a three-pronged attack from the Republicans.

Vice President Dan Quayle and others in the Bush camp called on Clinton to clear up what they called unanswered questions about how the Democratic presidential nominee avoided serving in Vietnam.

Quayle, who went through his own press ordeal four years ago over his military record, offered no sympathy for Clinton and said the Arkansas governor should "come clean with the American people."

"Every day there's a new question raised, there's a new story, a new angle, and Bill Clinton simply has not told all the facts," Quayle said at a news conference in east Los Angeles. Quayle said Clinton had given him the same advice to come clean four years ago when the vice president's service in the Indiana National Guard was under question.

The Bush campaign's political director, Mary Matalin, said in a statement that Clinton "says he wants to set the record straight, but this is one draft record that continues to fly out of formation.

"There's no secret that Americans don't like lawyers. The question is whether they dislike them enough to turn lawyer-bashing and legal reform into winning issues for President Bush.

The trial lawyer's lashed leader, immortalized in Bush's convention speech last month, has succeeded the welfare queen's Cadillac as a Republican symbol of what's wrong with America.

Bush devoted nearly a third of his Labor Day kickoff speech to what he called "our crazy, out of control legal system."

He painted legal costs as a major reason for the country's economic problems - driving up prices, inhibiting product development, and costing jobs.

Democrats say that argument won't fly. "He's got a long way to go to convince very many people that the central economic problem of this country is lawyers. A lot more of them believe George Bush is the central economic problem," said strategist Mark Motlan, who does polling and focus groups for the Democratic National Committee.

Bush this week displayed little of the belligerence that characterized his acceptance speech. He said then that Democratic rival Bill Clinton was supported by "every trial lawyer who ever wore a banana suit," and vowed to hold the president, would climb into the ring with the lawyers and "round one starts tonight."

The Clinton campaign weighed in Tuesday with some post-Labor Day spin. "George Bush attacking lawyers is like Arnold Schwarzenegger complaining about violence in the movies," said campaign director George Stephanopoulos. "Bush's single biggest group of campaign contributors is lawyers and lobbyists."

Surveys show Americans don't particularly like or trust lawyers, and polls say they've found the public does make a connection between lawyers and the high costs of automobile and health insurance.

But independent researchers have found no basis to the anti-lawyer sentiment that the country's legal system has compromised its competitiveness.

Gore campaigns along border
seeking heavy Texas turnout

McALLEN, Texas (AP) - Al Gore asked voters on Main Street here Tuesday to "tip Texas over the top for change," as Democrats stepped up efforts to win President Bush's home state.

"Texas may very well be determined by what is done here in the Valley," the Democratic vice presidential nominee told 400 listeners at a networking breakfast before he leaves.

"We're confident that by Tuesday, Sept 15, we'll have won Texas," said Gore.

"With heavy voting, with early voting, with a large turnout, you can ensure that Texas goes for Gore and Clinton," said Gore.

"And Texas can and will ensure that the United States of America reaches out for change, that we reclaim our future, build up this nation .... the Texas senator said.

Before addressing the crowd, Gore walked down Main Street, shaking hands with residents of this city of 35,000, which depends mainly on retail trade from across the Mexican border and is a large Hispanic

The 1990-style two-story buildings on Main Street house electronics and jewelry shops, with signs both in Spanish and English.

Gore spoke to the owner of a sporting goods shop who said more than 90 percent of his business comes from Mexico.

Few non-retail jobs are available.

Gore concentrated his comments on creation and welfare reform.

Clinton-Gore campaign workers promised a vigorous fight for Texas, where a Dallas Morning News poll on Saturday showed the Arkansas governor ahead of Bush.

GOP attacks 'crazy' legal system

WASHINGTON (AP) - It's no secret that Americans don't like lawyers. The question is whether they dislike them enough to turn lawyer-bashing and legal reform into winning issues for President Bush.

The trial lawyer's lashed leader, immortalized in Bush's convention speech last month, has succeeded the welfare queen's Cadillac as a Republican symbol of what's wrong with America.

Bush devoted nearly a third of his Labor Day kickoff speech to what he called "our crazy, out of control legal system."

He painted legal costs as a major reason for the country's economic problems - driving up prices, inhibiting product development, and costing jobs.

Democrats say that argument won't fly. "He's got a long way to go to convince very many people that the central economic problem of this country is lawyers. A lot more of them believe George Bush is the central economic problem," said strategist Mark Motlan, who does polling and focus groups for the Democratic National Committee.

Bush this week displayed little of the belligerence that characterized his acceptance speech. He said then that Democratic rival Bill Clinton was supported by "every trial lawyer who ever wore a banana suit," and vowed to hold the president, would climb into the ring with the lawyers and "round one starts tonight."

The Clinton campaign weighed in Tuesday with some post-Labor Day spin. "George Bush attacking lawyers is like Arnold Schwarzenegger complaining about violence in the movies," said campaign director George Stephanopoulos. "Bush's single biggest group of campaign contributors is lawyers and lobbyists."

Surveys show Americans don't particularly like or trust lawyers, and polls say they've found the public does make a connection between lawyers and the high costs of automobile and health insurance.

But independent researchers have found no basis to the anti-lawyer sentiment that the country's legal system has compromised its competitiveness.

We know you're hungry. We know you're a growing boy (or girl). We know it's a sacrifice! But please...THINK FAST.

Last year, the Wednesday lunch last resulted in almost $15,000 for grass roots farming and education programs around the world.

Signs ups: this week in both dining halls. Or call 271-7889 by Friday, 6 p.m.
The Observer
P.O. Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556 (219) 239-5303
1992-93 General Board

Managing Editor
Monica York

News Editor...........David Kinney
Viewpoint Editor............Joe Mosko
Sports Editor.............Michael Schwartz
Accent Editor.............Jahvielle Harrison
Photo Editor.............Margarette Watkins
Saint Mary's Editor..................Anna Marie Tabor

Advertising Manager.............Mike Hobbs
Ad Design Manager............Kevin Kozman
Promotions Manager.............Jeanne Black
Systems Manager.............Perry Barth

Controller.......................David Bellevue

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame du Lac and Saint Mary's College. It is also not necessary to reflect the policies of the administration of either institution. The news is reported as accurately and objective as possible. Unsigned editorials represent the opinion of the majority of the Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, News Editor, Viewpoint Editor, Accent Editor, Photo Editor, Sports Editor, and Saint Mary's Editor. Comments, letters and inside Column present the views of the authors. Column space is available to all members of the community and the free expression of varying opinions on campus through letters is encouraged.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bookstore employees doing the best they can

Dear Editor:

As an employee of the Notre Dame Bookstore, I just wanted to make a comment about the article in the Sept. 2 edition of The Observer relating to the service at the Bookstore as far as students purchasing books.

I'm from a middle class family background and was taught from day one that you might not have everything in life but you make the best of what you do have.

Here at the Bookstore we, as any common person can see, have limited space.

We do the best we can to accommodate the students and give them the best service we can when they return for the Fall Season.

Sure we can transfer books to other buildings on campus for student pick-up in better ventilated rooms but all this takes extra help which means higher expenses which means higher prices for books.

We try hard to get the best prices to offer the students here at the bookstore.

My suggestion is to submit a set of blue prints to the University and get a bigger bookstore built for students and fellow customers.

But until then, like I mentioned, we work as a family here at the bookstore which Brother Conan started from scratch.

If students come in prepared with a cool shower and clean sweats and deodorant to keep the air smelling sweet, I'm sure we'll survive.

Charlotte S. Ford

Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore

Sept. 3, 1992

Coke grant raises questions

Dear Editor:

I read with great interest your recent story on a gift of $2 million from the Coca-Cola company to support Latin American Studies at Notre Dame. I could not help but wonder if the company has been as generous to the families of the eight Coca-Cola employees in Guatemala who have been murdered in recent years because of their union activities.

The Coca-Cola bottling plant, which has operated in Guatemala for about 50 years, was unionized in 1974. In 1975 a series of disputes broke out between the workers and the plant's president, a Houston lawyer named John Clinton Troster. Troster, who was a close friend of the military thugs who ran the dictatorship of General Lucas Garcia, installed a contingent of counterinsurgency soldiers, attack dogs and the Mobile Military Police right in the plant to intimidate the workers.

In 1978 the union leaders were threatened by name in a series of death squad lists. In the following years eight of them were murdered or "disappeared." Pedro Quevedo y Quevedo, for example, was shot in the face; Manuel Lopez had his throat slit; Marlon Mendizabal was machine-gunned; and two others were kidnapped in broad daylight by Guatemalan police and never seen again. The worker was even shot right on the ground of the plant "by mistake" when he borrowed the hat and coat of a man on the lists. The terror worked, and union membership soon plummeted from 500 to 43.

By 1984 Coca-Cola of Guatemala was in the hands of two businessmen, Anthony Zash and Roberto Mendez y Mendez, who were faced with a union that had been quietly rebuilding its strength. They announced that they were going to close the bottling plant because of "imminent bankruptcy" and offered four leaders a sixty thousand dollar bribe to quietly accept the death of their union. Suspecting that they were being tricked, but unable to prove it, the workers launched an occupation of the plant as a last-ditch measure to save their jobs.

Incredibly, the occupation lasted a year and eventually became internationally known. North America, European and Guatemalan unions and private citizens began to support the workers, especially after it was discovered that the owners had been keeping two sets of books. The set that was made public to try and justify the closing of the plant was fake. The real books showed that the plant was making over a million dollars a year in profits.

In 1985 the plant reopened under new management, and the workers were finally able to go back to their own homes. The murders of the eight unionists were never properly investigated, much less prosecuted, just like the hundred thousand other deaths in Guatemala during the same period.

Ironically, one of the topics to be investigated with the two million dollar grant is "human rights." If the Coca-Cola corporation is seriously trying to improve human rights in Latin America, wouldn't it make more sense to begin massive direct funding of the indigenous human rights groups in Guatemala, El Salvador, Argentina, Chile and Peru which at great personal risk, on shoestring budgets, are valiantly attempting to investigate and prosecute murders like the ones at Coke's own bottling plant?

For it to me to suggest that the Coca-Cola plant grant is a publicity stunt. For all I know, it may represent new evidence of a bipartisanship in the corporation. But I would suggest that until Coke begins to return a small portion of the enormous profits it makes in its third world operations back into those countries on a grass-roots level, to directly benefit the masses of poor who consume their product, then it isn't "the real thing."

Steve Moriarty
Notre Dame '98
South Bend, IN

DUNESBURY

MICELOKING COUPLE LET'S CHECK OUT THESE VALUES

100 YEARS MARRIED

YOU BET, WE STEP THE KNOT 1993 THIS YEAR.

AND NOW WE'RE FOCUSING ON FORWARD TO 1993 IN MARRIAGE.

GARRY TRUDEAU

WHAT, ME WORRY?

HOLLYWOOD FLITE, N.Y.

NO, NO, IT'S NOT GETTING ANY BETTER FROM THE CHARLIE'S ANXIOUS TO HIT THE ROAD.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'Arguments are the arenas in which educated men establish their right to imagine themselves alive.'

James March

Slick Willy's coming, submit for Friday

QUOTES, P.O. Box Q, ND, IN 46556
Wednesday, September 9, 1992

Jeanne Blasi is production manager of The Observer. Her columns appear every third Wednesday in Accent.

Accent

Intercrayola marriages add color

In the beginning, God created crayons: red, blue, and yellow.

But He was pleased.

And crayola God saw it, and He was pleased.

This column was originally run in The Observer in October, 1990.

Jeanne Blasi is production manager of The Observer. Her columns appear every third Wednesday in Accent.

I

Jeanne Blasi is production manager of The Observer. Her columns appear every third Wednesday in Accent.

The Great Wall of South Bend

Basement mural preserves the history of ND football

Artist Jennifer Spitz poses in front of her mural.

By ELISABETH HEARD

Accent Writer

They are all there: Rockne, Leahy, Parseghian, and Holtz. There are also such Notre Dame football greats as Joe Montana, George Gipp, and Angelo Bertelli. They are all present, frozen in time, for all to see.

This mural of the history of Notre Dame football is not being shown in any museum or football hall of fame. It is painted on the basement wall of Paul Roy, a retired schoolteacher from California and Notre Dame fan. "I'm a Notre Dame addict," Roy said. Upon moving to South Bend, Roy hired two art students, Jennifer Spitz from Saint Mary's and Laura Vinnedge from Notre Dame, to paint a mural saluting Notre Dame football on the four walls of his basement.

"Everyone who walks in is in awe of its size," said Roy, "Specifically the Rockne part."

Roy holds a special place in his heart for the famous football coach. In order to express this love, he created this mural which he feels represents everything that is great about Notre Dame.

Along the first wall by the edge of the basement steps there is a painting of Joe Montana and Paul "The Golden Boy" Hornung. After Hornung there is a single lightbulb burning, and underneath is painted the words, "PROD. What The Thud O Dee Be Great Or Small Notre Dame Men Will Give Their All." Next to that is a painting of the University of Notre Dame flag and the words "We Must Go Forth."

After the Dome, the mural moves on into the Rockne era. The four horsemen charge towards you with a look of determination, and next to them stands Rockne. George Gipp is to the right of Rockne.

Roy recounts the legendary story about Gipp. "He had caught pneumonia and was on his death bed. They were going to play Army the next day. Rockne came to his bed, and when he was getting ready to leave, Gipp said 'Win one for the Gipper,' meaning beat Army. And they did the next day."

As the wall turns the corner, the mural enters the Leahy era. Angelo Bertelli is poised, throwing a football and next to him is John Huarte, ready to catch a pass.

Roy looked admiringly at the large painting of Frank Leahy. "For the time he spent at ND he was the best coach we had. He won four out of five national championships."

Roy sighed, "His health was going, and he and Father Hesburg didn't see eye to eye, so he retired."

Next to Leahy near the floor is a simple representation of any sport, but especially Notre Dame football. Four anonymous players wait anxiously to get into the game. Next to them is Tom Cottrell, with his arms up ready to throw a football. Roy looked at him and laughed, "I put him up there in June when he hadn't made coach yet. Now he is the Notre Dame quarterback. It's pretty ironic."

As the era changes from Leahy to Ara Parseghian, Joe Theismann runs with the football. In this section Parseghian smiles as Dave Reece gets ready to kick the football.

Turning the corner to the last wall, the well-known face of Lou Holtz finishes it. The football legends surround Holtz. Chris Zorich stands ready to attack, Tim Brown runs with a just caught pass, and Raghib Ismail straights to catch the football.

Jennifer Spitz, the Saint Mary's artist who worked on the mural decided to approach her professor Roy asked the art depart­men­t of Notre Dame to approach by her professor Roy asked the art depart­men­t of Notre Dame to approach by

"My teacher knew that I live in South Bend, and it would be convenient for me to do it. I wasn't quite sure about doing it at first because I had another job. So I waited a week and then gave him a call. It turned out that I was the first person to call who was really serious," said Spitz.

The painting of the mural was a long and detailed process. "There was nothing but football," Spitz laughed. From its sparse beginnings Spitz used her talents to work magic and transform the walls into work of art. "We used a projector to project the pictures on the wall. I then traced the pictures with markers because I wanted to match almost perfectly."

"I've been working on it since the middle of May, and I still have some finishing touches to do," Spitz said.

Now that the mural is almost finished, she can look back and take an objective view of her work. "When I began, I thought that it was going to be a party room, and I didn't think much about it because I'm not really into football." Spitz stated. "But the more I painted, the more I learned about the history. It pulls out some of the most important people in Notre Dame history."

Looking at the mural it is easy to become swept up in the richness of the history. There is a breathtaking aspect of some of the greatest figures at Notre Dame being preserved on the wall of a simple basement.

"At first it was just a painting," Spitz said in amazement, "but the more I painted, the more I felt the spirit of the players, and it became more important to me."

To celebrate the completion of the mural, Roy is holding a public showing on Sunday, September 13, between 2 and 5 p.m. at 1106 Stanfield, four blocks south of the Notre Dame golf course.

This mural is, to Paul Roy, the embodiment of everything that is special and unique about Notre Dame.

Sister Chain to record demo

By MARA DIVIS

Saint Mary's Accent Editor

After months of planning and rehearsal, the music which has filled Carlson Dolloway's and several other area events will be recorded as Sister Chain. The all-female band comprised of five Saint Mary's students will release a live recording tonight at Dolloway's.

According to Erin Grefenstein, a band member, the group saw its start when four of its members were studying in Ireland. She said that they belonged to a folk group at the college they attended and began to consider forming a band back at Saint Mary's. "We were in a folk group. We all liked singing together," she said. "We realized that there aren't a lot of Saint Mary's bands. But Saint Mary's students have the drive to be in a community band and to be a part of it."

The group's musical variations, which include a majority of original lyrics, in addition to covers of Sinead O'Connor and Indigo Girls music, will make up their recording tonight.

Grefenstein said, "There's a wide range of musical tastes that enjoy our music," she said. "We've got a folk group. We've got a group that we all liked singing together, to give to bars, to sell it, or to keep it for our own benefit," she said.

The recording is tonight at Clarissa Dolloway's Coffeehouse and is sponsored by the Saint Mary's Alumni Board and Special Events, according to the student. One hundred twenty tickets are available at Haggard College Center.
Edberg takes giant step toward a U.S. Open repeat

NEW YORK (AP) — Stefan Edberg took a giant step toward successfully defending his U.S. Open title yesterday when he defeated Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands 6-4, 7-6 (8-6), 6-1.

The victory, his first over the Dutchman in three meetings, put Edberg into the quarterfinals of the year's final Grand Slam tournament.

Edberg, the No. 2 seed, took a giant step toward a U.S. Open champion's trophy and his second straight French Open victory in June, used his powerful serves and blistering groundstrokes to bludgeon McEnroe, he was gracious to the crafty left-hander who has won seven Grand Slam titles — three Wimbledon and four U.S. Opens.

"At his peak, I don't think there was anybody that could beat him...on grass," Courier said. "I am sure we are going to miss him when he is gone. you just don't replace talents just like that. There are some other players, surely, but there will never be another John."

It was a battle of styles — power vs. touch — and of eras — the past vs. the present. Edberg, as aging as a dangerous warrior, had no answers to the various problems presented by Courier, the world's top-ranked player.

Then, to show that the teachings of McEnroe have been appreciated and absorbed, Courier even showed his deft touch with a drop volley, a shot that brought a smile to Edberg's face.

The victory boosted Edberg into the quarterfinals where he will face eighth-seeded Andre Agassi, a 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 winner over No. 10 Carlos Costa of Spain Monday night.

"I am not writing him off," Courier said. "I am not putting him in the grave because he has still got a lot of good tennis in him."

The other top-half quarter will pit No. 3 Pete Sampras, the 1990 U.S. Open champion, against surprising Alexander Volkov of Russia. On Monday, Sampras stopped No. 13 Guy Forget of France 6-3, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3 while Volkov stopped Brad Gilbert 6-2, 6-4, 5-7, 7-6 (7-5) in a battle of unseeded players.

In a third-round men's match, No. 14 MaliVai Washington needed just 10 points to topple Frenchman Henri Leconte in the shortest and longest match of the day. Washington broke Leconte at 30, then served a love game to capture a 6-4, 6-7 (2-7), 6-4, 6-3 victory in a match that was suspended Sunday night because of rain.

In women's play, second-seeded Steffi Graf defeated Agassi, 6-3, 6-1; No. 9 Manuela Maleeva-Fragnieri defeated Carrie Cunningham 6-3, 7-5 and Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria defeated 16-year-old Chanda Rubin 6-2, 6-4.

In the quarters, Magdalena, at 17 the youngest of the three Maleevas, will play her oldest sister for the second time in a tournament. Manuela, now married and living in Switzerland, beat Magdalena in the first round of the Canadian Open two years ago. It will be the first time sisters have met at the U.S. Open since Katroina Maleeva, the middle sister, defeated Magdalena in a first-round match in 1990.

Stefan Edberg wasn't disappointed yesterday after he defeated Richard Krajicek to advance to the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open.
Young men’s soccer team confident about conference opener at Loyola

BY JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men’s soccer team may be the best 0-2 team in the nation.

Although they dropped two tough games to No. 4 UCLA and No. 13 Duke last weekend, the Irish proved that they can compete with the nation’s best.

Coming away from the season’s first two games without a win is usually a disappointment, but the young Irish are confident heading into tonight’s Midwest Collegiate Conference opener against Loyola in Chicago.

“I think we’re going into this game in a good amount of confidence,” Notre Dame coach Mike Berticelli said. “We had a chance to look at the game films and the players realize that if they work hard and improve in certain areas they could be a very good team.”

Loyola may not have the talent of UCLA or Duke, but the Irish won’t have to worry about a letdown tonight. Last season, the Ramblers handed Notre Dame their only conference loss with a 2-0 win over Loyola tonight would get the Irish back on the right direction. That will not be an easy task for an Irish team that starts six sophomores and a freshman.

Confidence games will be especially important for the Irish this season as they pursue the MCC tournament championship and a berth in the NCAA tournament.

But post-season play is a long way off, and a win over Loyola tonight would get the conference season started in the right direction. That will not be an easy task for an Irish team that starts six sophomores and a freshman.

Although they are a very talented group of players, their inexperience showed against UCLA and Duke. Freshman Bill Lanza scored Notre Dame’s only goal of the season, and will be a potent offensive threat throughout the season, while sophomores John Joseph, Tim Oates and Tony Richardson will also have to contribute to the Irish to be successful.

Defensively, the Irish have some new faces joining veteran Mario Tricoci. Senior Kevin Guerrero looks to be just the ingredient that the Irish will need to establish themselves as one of the nation’s premier programs.

Monty continued from page 12

abnormalities in heart rhythm and blood flow through the heart now provide a basis for classifying HCM patients. Because of this, NIH doctors now believe that patients such as Williams with a very low risk should be allowed to play competitive sports.

“Our greatest concern has always been for Monty’s health, and our only interest has been for him to continue to monitor his condition and obtain the most up-to-date diagnostic opinions available,” Notre Dame athletic director Dick Rosenthal stated.

“We’re delighted for him that subsequent examinations and information by an acknowledged expert in this area of medical research have resulted in this favorable report on Monty’s present and future health.

Indiana Auto Insurance

Our good rates may save you money.

Call for a quote 9-5, 289-1993.
Office near campus.

Irish continued from page 12

points in just the first two games of the season.

Guerrero looks to be just the ingredient that the Irish will need to establish themselves as one of the nation’s premier programs.

Abnormalities in heart rhythm and blood flow through the heart now provide a basis for classifying HCM patients. Because of this, NIH doctors now believe that patients such as Williams with a very low risk should be allowed to play competitive sports.

“Our greatest concern has always been for Monty’s health, and our only interest has been for him to continue to monitor his condition and obtain the most up-to-date diagnostic opinions available,” Notre Dame athletic director Dick Rosenthal stated.

“We’re delighted for him that subsequent examinations and information by an acknowledged expert in this area of medical research have resulted in this favorable report on Monty’s present and future health.
Monty Williams to return to Irish lineup

BY MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Editor

The Notre Dame men's basketball team, with its four senior scholarship players on its roster, got one yesterday when the University announced that six-foot-seven forward Monty Williams has been cleared to play in the upcoming season.

Williams, who was withheld from competing with the team the last two years due to a probable diagnosis of hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (HCM), was released to play by his physicians at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) following continued research and more detailed classification that indicate that his condition does not pose a threat to his health that would preclude his participation in varsity sports.

"Monty is going to have a positive impact on the team," Notre Dame assistant coach Jimmy Black said. "He is still going to have a lot of respect for him because of what he has been through."

"It's still too soon to say what role he will play on the team. Roles are defined once we start practice on November 1st," Black feels. Though Black feels it is too early, center/forward Jon Ross believes Williams' part on the team has already been determined.

"He is going to be our go to guy and, having him in the team, the top-nine junior said. Williams, who averaged 7.7 points and 3.7 rebounds when named as a freshman in 1989-90, has two years of eligibility remaining.

He has undergone continued regular-testing and evaluation since September, 1988, when Williams' condition was first detected during a routine physical examination.

In particular, he went through a week-long exhaustive physical examination in July, after which doctors in Bethesda,

Monty Williams to return to the Irish basketball team this year after sitting out two seasons because of a heart problem.

"We've met extensively with Monty, his parents and the doctors at the NIH. Monty wishes to return to playing basketball, and both the NIH and the University have cleared him to do so," HCM research scientist Richard Kunselman said.

The echocardiogram revealed thickened muscle wall two years ago and additional tests and specialists confirmed that diagnosis. After extensive testing of more than 700 patients, the NIH has shown that

see MONTY/page10

Guerrero's two goals lead women's soccer past Butler

BY JONATHAN JENSEN
Sports Writer

It was a case of youth triumphing over...well, youth. The Notre Dame women's soccer team, starting a younger lineup due to injuries, overcame a scrappy Butler squad 3-1 in Indianapolis.

The Bulldogs, who are starting just their second year of competition, return all 11 of last year's starters from a 10-7-1 team. They are in the currently experiencing a heart attack, a two-year-old with the usual starters)

It was the second year of competition, return all 11 of last year's starters, got one yesterday as the Irish, who, in the absence of senior captain Margaret Jure, senior Michelle Lodaga, and junior Stephanie Porter, find themselves starting five freshmen.

But it was one of those freshmen who provided the spark last night, as newcomer Rosella Guerrero had a hand in all of the Irish's scoring, hitting on two goals and assisting on another.

Junior Alison Lester, Notre Dame's leading scorer in 1990, converted a pass from Guerrero five minutes into the first half to give the Irish their first lead of the game.

"It's important to execute and maintain our concentration," Brown explained. "This was an opportunity to practice that. The substitutes also gained valuable match experience as well.

"Monty made the right decision."

I'm happy for them," Brown said. In last night's match, the Irish established their dominance immediately, taking just 13 minutes to dispatch the Lady Eagles, 2-0. With the win, Notre Dame moved up nine wins while relinquishing only one goal for an astounding .800 attack rate.

Mb. determined that patients like Williams should be able to compete in sports.

"When the initial diagnosis was made two years ago, there was no medical data amount of risk involved," Dr. Stephen Simons, the University physician who has worked with the team throughout the case, commented.

That's the bottom line. I am an echelon below," said McEnroe after his match.

The era of the tennis heroes of the early 1980's continues as Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

It appears that the sport of tennis has entered a new era with teenagers.

Andre Agassi as well as Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.