Hawaii Club raffle to aid Iniki victims
By KENYA JOHNSON

The Notre Dame Hawaii Club is raffling off two state General Admission Tickets for the benefit of the people of Kauai, victims of Hurricane Iniki.

"The intensity is just the same as the Hurricane Andrew," said Diane Whiteh, co-president of the Hawaii Club. "There may not be as many people, but the damage in Kauai is just as bad and the people need a lot of help," she added.

Only four students at Notre Dame are from the island of Kauai: Ryan Delapena, Zoraida Radona, Clarissa Remigio, and Emmanuel Remigio. None of the students' families were impacted, but they did report some property damage.

Radona's family did not experience much damage, but said, "many friends and relatives are suffering.

"I think the only good thing out of the disasters is the togetherness I see from everyone. Kauai, and really the entire Hawaiian Island community, has come together to help one another," said Radona.

"As a freshman I'm really shocked to see how quickly Notre Dame students and alumni respond to the tragedy. I'm thankful and now very hopeful," she added. Delapena agreed.

"It's a great gesture by the Notre Dame community," he said. "It's a great way to help those in need."

Group's job is to 'clarify the myths of feminism'
By CORA SANDBERG
News Writer

"People have a right to be scared of feminism because it questions the whole structure of Western authority," according to Ann Clark, chair of the philosophy department at Saint Mary's College.

This was the topic of last night's discussion, "What About the F Word?" sponsored by the Center for Women's Alliance.

Co-chair for the event, Sarah Miyata, said, "Our goal is not only to educate but enlighten people and clarify the myths about feminism today." In addition, Clark, the panel included Joe Incandela, professor of religious studies, Mary Caputi, professor of political science, and students Lisa Klaucen and Renee Young.

Political and social changes are the major contributors to the changes in feminism as a social movement and as a study, said Caputi. Caputi discussed the way in which feminism has changed in the academic arena within the last twenty years.

She expressed her concern about how feminism is perceived by students and the faculty and said she hopes the women's studies courses will help students understand what exactly feminism is.

"A feminist is someone who promotes the equality of sexes," Caputi said.

Mental health center to sell 'Lou' masks
By MARK KREJCI

The Madison Center of South Bend will hold a benefit for the Madelys because they are selling 30,000 full-color masks of Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz. The masks are for three dollars each, according to proceeds to benefit programs to aid homeless people with mental health and substance-abuse problems in South Bend and Mishawaka.

The Madison Center is a non-profit community mental health center which provides services to people with substance-abuse as well as mental health problems.

The center provides free or reduced services for those unable to pay.

HPC received Sept. 1 that they would support the sale of the masks at Notre Dame. They will be sold door-to-door in each dorm, as well as in local business establishments, such as all South Bend/Mishawaka Society Banks, Burger Kings, Martin's Super Market, The Linebacker, Coach's Lounge and others.

All proceeds will go to Madison Center.

Jason Coyle, co-chair of HPC, said that the money raised will be going to an upcoming pep rally and HPC will receive money from the sale of the masks.

Jack Roberts, executive director of Madison Center, said the idea for the fund raiser came from his staff who wanted to see MASKS / page 4

Speaker: Peace message doesn't reach media
By THERESA ALEMAN
News Writer

People should mobilize and educate society on peace, according to Jackie Smith, a Notre Dame graduate student.

Smith, in her lecture Thursday, "Frame or Be Framed: The U.S. Peace Movement, the Media, and National Security Debates," discussed the reasons for the media's apparent lack of interest on the national media and its apathy toward foreign policy.

"The government, generally the President," Smith said, "is the main framer of foreign policy, but Smith defined framing as "defining a problem, finding the cause of that problem, and suggesting solutions to it."

"The main reason for limited public influence on foreign policy, Smith said, is societal concern with domestic affairs and general apathy toward foreign policy. Smith blamed this lack of interest on the national media's unilateral coverage of foreign affairs.

Smith said the national media has a profound effect on general debate, or lack of debate, over foreign policy. She blamed the media's apparent bias against peace movements on the fact that the media rarely never address the agenda of peace movements.

"The media draws on a select, reliable list of sources, and peace movement sources are generally regarded as biased, whereas the word of government officials regarding foreign policy is viewed as reliable," Smith said.

Peace movements gain inroads to media coverage, Smith said, by staging demonstrations to force the media into covering opposing viewpoints. These demonstrations, Smith acknowledged, usually appear as small groups of radicals with poorly defined agendas and proposals.

The media's effect on the efforts of peace movements, according to Smith, is generally negative not because the media disagree with the movement's stance, but rather because of "ineffective framing by members of peace movements."

Like it or not, American taxpayers are shelling out over $100 million to the Democrats and to the Republicans to conduct a presidential campaign.

So, how do you like the results so far? If you didn't understand each and every one of these "sound bytes," don't worry about it.

The point of this list of "sound bytes" is to show how much of the campaign has been based on things that are fuzzy, trivial, irrelevant and, in some cases, downright silly.

Remember, this process decides who is going to occupy the White House for the next four years. As American citizens, should be demanding that the campaign be about things that are going to affect us and our children, not things that make for snappy headlines and high ratings.

Is this any way to select a leader?

Nearly 50 missing in aftermath of French flooding

VAISON-LA-ROMAINE, France (AP) — Families claimed bodies that were laid out in rows of white coffins Thursday as firemen dug through the mud looking for more victims of the flash floods that killed at least 34 people. Nearly 50 people were missing and officials said there was little hope any of them survived the storm, which may turn out to be France's deadliest. An October 1958 storm in the neighboring Gard region killed 36. At least 23 people died in this ancient Roman town when the rain-swollen Ouveze River rose 50 feet Tuesday. The other deaths were elsewhere in the Vaucluse region of southeast France, a popular vacation area, and in the neighboring regions of Ardeche and Drome. In parts of Vaillon-la-Romaine, and elsewhere north of Avignon, stores reopened, cafés were crowded and children once again made their way to school.

But elsewhere, people picked through foundations of houses swept away by the surging river, helicopters circled overhead looking for the missing and workers dug cars out of the mud. At Moulin de César campsite, shown on television broadcast, looked like a child's playroom with campers and trailers tossed into treetops and overturned on top of campsite buildings. We found a body inside a car that had washed away," said fireman Claude Benetti. "It was engulfed in mud that broke right through the windshield. As the toll mounted, ecologists and others threatened official protests over the rapid construction of homes and camping sites in flooded zones. Others said deforestation contributed to the flooding.

European currency markets have calmed; no immediate attacks on the French franc

LONDON (AP) — Europe's chaotic currency markets were relatively quiet yesterday morning, with no immediate attacks on the French franc after the central banks of France and Germany joined forces to prop up the currency.

On Wednesday, currency traders had tried to push the franc lower against the German mark but failed as the Bank of France and Germany's Bundesbank bought large quantities of francs.

Traders said yesterday that they believed the Bank of France was close to running out of money to support the franc. But they were far more worried about the massive sell-off, fearing that the Bundesbank would put up a strong defense.

"It's not over yet by any means," said George Maguire, chief international economist at S.G. Warburg, a big London investment bank. "It still remains very nervous, as you would expect."

The wildly swinging currency markets have induced "fears of worsening economic trouble and seriously damaged moves toward closer economic and political ties among European Community members."

Stability in currency values, a single currency by 1999, is a goal of European unity proponents. It is important because it fosters competition among lower businesses to plan for production. Last week, some traders made millions pushing the British pound and the Italian lira through the floors of the European exchange rate mechanism, which sets maximum fluctuations of member currencies in an attempt to maintain stability.

The pound and the lira were removed from the mechanism and their value jumped sharply. That allowed speculators who had sold the pound and the lira to rake in handsome profits as they bought the currencies later at much cheaper prices.

Traders' attempts to repeat that success by pushing the franc toward a single currency now have not immediately proven successful.

Major demands limits on interference by EC

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister John Major, seeking to mollify opponents of the European union treaty, called Thursday for a declaration limiting the power of the European Community to interfere in the affairs of its 12 member states.

"We need a definition, a settled order of what is for national action and what is for community action," said Major, who currently holds the country's rotating presidency, at the start of a two-day emergency session of Parliament.

Major late Thursday won a 322-296 vote of confidence in his Conservative government's economic policies, which have come under fire since he removed the plunging pound from the European exchange rate system on Sept. 16.

During a debate in Britain's 651-member House of Commons, Labor leader John Smith called Major "the devalued prime minister of a devalued government."

In Bonn, meanwhile, the German government vigorously denied a report that it and France were seeking to establish a European currency in 1993 to exclude Britain and other countries.

German officials called the report "fictitious," saying Kohl was committed to a European union of all 12 members. But a government statement did not deny Kohl and Mitterrand had discussed such a core union. It said only that the two leaders had not "agreed" on such a plan.

Observers in Germany viewed such discussions as "the stuff of Europe" as an attempt to put pressure on Britain to ratify the Maastricht accord.

Student dies after an illness

Danielle Zock, a 20-year-old Saint Mary's sophomore from Niles, Mich., died Wednesday at 9:23 a.m. at Pawling Hospital in Niles after an illness. Zock was born Aug. 21, 1972, in Indiana and graduated from Saint Joseph High School in South Bend. She is survived by her mother Kathleen Zock, and by her father, Joseph Zock, who is a minister at Trinity Lutheran Church in Michigan City.

In Michigan City, students and faculty members paid tribute to Zock's friendly personality and said she was a "bright light" to all who knew her.

"We're looking at the weapon at the present time," said American Heart Association public health officer Dr. John Stofer.

The response by the government to Hurricane Iniki was relatively quick, according to Delapena. "Troops were out helping just a few hours after the Hurricane hit. I think people were more responsive to Iniki than they were to Hurricane Andrew," said Delapena.

"But we still need all the help we can get," he added.

Klauser and Young both shared how they discovered the feminist in themselves.

Getting a Kick Out of Life

Hentrich and his knee are better than ever

By RICH KURT
Assistant Sports Editor

Craig Hentrich has always been a competitor, whether on the football field, baseball diamond or classroom. But when he broke his kicking leg last season, no one knew what to expect.

After all, this was a player who was named an honorable mention All-American after his sophomore year in which he broke his own Notre Dame record for season punting average.

Even more distressing, no one, even the team doctors, had ever seen a torn anterior cruciate ligament (ACL), the ligament which holds the front of the knee together, in a kicker’s or punter’s kicking leg.

That was the biggest crush I’ve ever had, athletically,” said Hentrich, “I taught myself that everything can end so suddenly.”

The injury originally occurred in the Tennessee game. After that point, Irish fans learned the value of solid special teams play. Most will remember only the blocked kick at the end of the game, but Hentrich’s loss was more pronounced on the punting end.

Jim Sexton only managed an average of 31 yards on four punts in the second half, far short of Hentrich’s 44.2-yard career average. This gave the already struggling Irish defense 13 yards less to work with, and made it that much easier for the Vols to score.

Nevertheless, Hentrich wasn’t over for Hentrich. He had several weeks before the Sugar Bowl, and made the most of them.

“I rehabbed before the Sugar Bowl,” said Hentrich. “It was wrong (structurally) with the knee, though with rehab and a knee brace, I thought I could still perform.”

In New Orleans, he kicked an extra-point after the Irish touchdown of the game, and then the ensuing kick-off. But it was that play that caused the serious damage. After the kick-off, Hentrich was running down the field when the knee gave out on him.

“We couldn’t find anyone at all with a similar injury,” said Dr. Willard Vergler, the team physician. “It needed to be fixed, but we didn’t know what to expect after it was done.”

What laid ahead was a route that no other kicker had been down before.

“The doctors were pretty optimistic and that made me feel better,” he said. “I felt confident (that I’d get to kick again).”

After the surgery came a great deal of work before he could do so.

“We brought him along slowly,” said Vergler. “We gave him plenty of time to heal. Every time you kick, you hyperextend your knee, and you take the chance of stretching it.”

As a result, Hentrich wasn’t able to start kicking for six months after his surgery, but that time wasn’t spent idly.

“I did some rehab, doing weights and calisthenics to strengthen it,” he said. “I did some teaching. I wrote a book (‘Learning to Live’) about mentally and physically than ever before.”

Irish fans should take heed of his greater strength, as he keeps up his average, he’ll finish with the longest punting average in Notre Dame history.

“Craig is a great punter. He does an excellent job,” said assistant head coach Lou Holtz.

With that kind of all-around athletic talent, it should come as no surprise that Hentrich handles both punting and kicking duties for the Irish. In each of his first three seasons, Hentrich would have finished among the nation’s leaders for punting average, except he did not have the necessary attempts to qualify.

If Hentrich gets a chance to kick 18 more extra-points this season, he will be able to break Carlos Huerta’s NCAA record for consecutive extra points made of 137. His 31 field goals tie him for third in the all-time Irish list, and he needs just eight points to break Dave Reeve’s Notre Dame record for most Irish kicker/punter Craig Hentrich about to strike the ball last week at Michigan State.

Given the Chicago Bears’ recent decision to keep Chris Gardocki because he can both kick and punt, Hentrich’s ability to do both well makes him even more valuable.

“The big reason I was recruited was to kick and punt. When you’re a kicker and a punter, when you can do both, it opens up a spot for somebody else,” said Hentrich. “At Notre Dame, it’s another person on the travelling team who could be important in the game.”

It could also be important for his future employment possibilities. With a degree in management information services, a job as a computer analyst lies ahead, but maybe not immediately.

“Professional football is the goal of any college football player,” said Hentrich. “But I’m not going to let that affect how I play this season.”

“I want to improve off last season, average 45 yards a punt, stress hang-time and become more consistent.”

The Notre Dame football team realized last season just how valuable Hentrich was to the team. Many games were won or lost on special teams, and with Hentrich in the line-up, the Irish have one thing less to worry about.
Boilers need some straw inspiration

By MIKE SCRUDATO

The question surrounding this week's game is whether Purdue will show up. For the Boilermaker faithful, the Purdue team will show up, the one which crushed them 17-0 at Cal, 41-14, two weeks ago or the squad which lost to Toledo last Saturday. Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz must know who the Irish will meet.

"You cannot count on this Purdue team. We think we see the team which contains three seniors," Holtz said.

"We've seen the team which contains three seniors," Holtz said. "The fourth linebacker is Pete Bereich, while inside linebacker Zgonina is first and foremost."

The Purdue defense, which was displayed in the win over Michigan State, is first and foremost. Tailback Jeff Hill is one of the best in the Big Ten. "Jeff Hill is a very durable back, who has got good strength and quickness," Holtz commented. "He reminds me of Roger Coziale."

"It's like preparing for a Navy or a Maryland game when the quarterback scrambles, he is quick and he has a strong arm," Holtz reminisced about Roger Staubach when he was at the Naval Academy. The worst thing that can happen to your defense is to get him in trouble. He can take a hit, get up and make it a good one.

"He scrambles, he is quick and he has a strong arm," the seventh-year coach noted. "Whether Hunter or Pike is calling the snaps, his main target will be Ernst Calloway. The Purdue quarterback has led Purdue in rushing in the past two years and tops the Boilermakers in the category once again this season."

The Boilermaker offense should be able to put some points on the board against the Irish defense. Unfortunately, Purdue fans, Notre Dame will not emerge from the tunnel in straw hats, and the Air Holtz offense which was displayed in the 50-point explosion against Michigan State should be able to easily outscore the Boilers.

Purdue's upset over Cal evokes memories of past

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Associate Sports Editor

In recent years, Purdue has proven itself to be one of the Sweet 16 cream puffs on the Irish schedule, a tasty little treat early in a season full of loop teams.

But this year, Purdue is one of the top squads on the Irish schedule. The Boilermakers (1-1), who knocked off 17th-ranked California, 41-14, in their season opener, is a formidable opponent. The next two weeks, Jeff Sagarin's computer rankings placed Purdue atop all other college football teams.

Though the Boilermakers dropped 32-22 to the Toledo Rockets on Saturday, Purdue improved its record to 3-2, thanks to its dominant defense.

Skip Holtz did not plan to follow you

Skip Holtz may be following in his father's footsteps, but that has never been his intention.

Now Notre Dame's offensive coordinator/receivers coach, the younger Holtz started out on another path, enrolling in Holy Cross Junior College, and in 1984, a year before his father was hired to coach the Irish, he transferred into Notre Dame with visions of pursuing a business career.

"I wanted to be the filthy rich, Donald Trump-type," said Holtz.

But by senior year, he "saw the light at the end of the tunnel," he forecasted that an eight-to-five desk job just wouldn't bring happiness. Only coaching football could satisfy his drive.

"I've been around the game my whole life. It holds my interests. It's something I enjoy doing more than just making money."

So far, he has succeeded in his journey, working his way back to Notre Dame in 1990 as a volunteer receivers coach before becoming full-time last year, and then adding the responsibilities of being running backs coach this season.

Now younger Holtz never rodes his father's shirt-tails along the way.

"I just look at it from the standpoint that he's my dad. I'm just learning just about everything about football and I'm learning it from the best," he said.

He worked hard to earn himself a spot on the football team as a true freshman in 1985, and made 51 appearances on special teams, earning a monogram. Holtz holds this as a key experience in his learning process.

"With memories of being a player still fresh in my head, I know what it's like sitting in the stands," he said. "I also know that at a school like Notre Dame, you're required to go to class." The same holds true for his applications for the profession's entry level position.

"The most important thing for me was to go somewhere else and make my own way," stated Holtz, whose thorough knowledge of the game and whose work ethic impressed Florida State coach Bobby Bowden. After graduation, Holtz headed South and worked as a graduate assistant on two of the finest collegiate football teams in history, as they finished 11-1 both years.

Holtz explained the not-so-glorious work of an "intern"

"It involves all the behind the scenes work coaches don't want to do," Under FSU receivers coach John Eason, he cut up well as the opponent's, secondary, organized work for the offense and reviewing game tapes.

Holtz's responsibilities have grown considerably since then. He supervises the running and passing games, sets practice schedules and organizes practice tempo, and works integrally into the offensive game plan.

Though Lou Holtz calls all the offensive plays on the field, his "eyes in the sky," including Skip Holtz, assist head coach Ron Cooper, quarterbacks coach Tom Clements and running backs coach Earle Moore study formations, coverages and trends during the game and offer information and advice from the sidelines.

"I plug the pieces into the puzzle," Holtz said.

Like any businessman who aspires to own his own company, Skip Holtz looks forward to further expanding his horizons and become a head coach some day.

But for now, he is content where he is.
Taylor is larger than life

By JENNY MARTEN
Associate Sports Editor

Big would be an understatement.

Standing at 6'4" and weighing in around 300 pounds, Notre Dame junior Aaron Taylor is one of the more massive members of the Irish offensive line.

But, how does someone get to be that size?

Left tackle Lindsay Knapp has an explanation.

"He likes to eat a lot. Once at the Great Wall buffet, he just pulled his chair up to the buffet and started eating," said Taylor's offensive line mate.

"I realize that I have the potential to be great, but my goal is to be the best." - Aaron Taylor

Taylor doesn't know how he got to be the size he is, but he attributes some of it to natural size and lifting weights. Credit could also be given to Taylor's mom, Mardi and her cooking.

"She loves to cook and I love to eat," admitted Taylor, who is from Concord, California. "I hate it when I go home because I always gain weight. I gained eight pounds when I went home before the Sugar Bowl last year.

"No where in my family is anyone as remotely big as I am. It's like I'm a mutant. I was always the biggest kid in the class."

His size is as absent now as he enters his second year as a starter on the Irish offensive line. The left guard is expected to continue to improve and to become one of the best linemen to play for Notre Dame. Taylor's name has even been mentioned as a preseason All-American candidate.

"He has ability, desire and football sense. He has the talent to be an exceptional lineman for us," said Irish offensive line coach Joe Moore. "We expect him to be a great player, not just a good player."

"Taylor wants to surpass these expectations, but knows that what remains for him to work on is mostly mental work. His goal is to maintain his focus every day and keep his confidence up."

"I realize that I have the potential to be great, but my goal is to be the best. Right now, I don't feel I'm where I'm capable of being or where I'll be when I get out of here."

"I have never played with perfect technique and been outstanding, I've only beaten myself," said Taylor.

Emotional and aggressive on the field, Taylor likes to get downfield to block for the backs and make some hits. In the team sport, he relishes the individual competition that results when a defensive lineman sets up opposite him.

"A lot of ego is involved in lining up one on one on someone with him trying to do his best against you. It's a realization of aggressiveness in a positive way," said Taylor.

Another advantage in a one-on-one situation is knowing what the guy next to you is going to do and this comes from playing together. The projected 1992 five starting offensive linemen have yet to be on the field at the same time, either at practice or in a game. Even Taylor has missed time on the line already this year sitting out the two-a-day fall practices because of nagging tendinitis in his shoulder.

"I think the offensive line is one area where they have to learn to play next to the guy next to him. The guy on you isn't always the guy whose where the play is over, said Holtz.

"There is a communication you have to have with people and it comes from doing it over and over and having a feel for it. Aaron Taylor and Lindsay Knapp have been playing together on the line for two and a half years and have become familiar with each other's moves."

"When you've been with someone that long, you really know what he's going to do and what he can do," added Knapp.

"Playing together for so long should improve the play of not just Taylor and Knapp, but the entire offensive line."
The Senate overrides veto of the family-leave bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Thursday to override President Bush’s veto of the family-leave bill, shining a campaign-season spotlight on an issue Democrats think will wound him come Election Day.

Supporters of the legislation conceded that even with the Senate’s 68-31 vote, a House override effort will probably fail. Nonetheless, Democrats relished the high-profile chance to contrast Bush’s opposition to the bill with his rhetoric championing “family values.”

“Those Republicans who voted with us today chose to ignore the Senate's 68-31 vote, a stunning contrast to Bush's rhetoric,” said Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said the House will vote next Wednesday on the override attempt. But supporters and opponents alike said they expect the House to uphold Bush’s veto. The House approved the bill by 253-177 last November — well short of the 290 votes, a two-thirds margin, that would be needed if all 435 members vote. "It is difficult," said House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

Three Navy admirals lose jobs for poor scandal investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting Navy Secretary Sean O’Keefe stripped three admirals of their jobs on Thursday for failing to investigate aggressively the Tailhook sex scandal and said that those who harass women "will be driven from our ranks."

In a sometimes emotional appearance before reporters, O’Keefe vowed to "get to the bottom" of the affair, which has haunted the Navy for more than a year.

"Sexual harassment will not be tolerated," he said. "And those who don't get the message will be driven from our ranks."

O’Keefe defended his top aide, Undersecretary Dan Howard, against criticism contained in a report issued Thursday by the Pentagon’s Inspector General. Two of the admirals said the report was wrong.

The report faulted the three admirals and Howard — and said their removal from office should be considered — for failing to investigate aggressively the alleged abuse of more than two dozen women at a Las Vegas aviators’ convention in 1999.

O’Keefe said Howard had been given an “impossible task” and had, in effect, become a “referee” in a botted investigation. Howard performed as well as possible and the failure was not his, but that of the officials and officers reporting to him, O’Keefe argued.

A second — and potentially even more explosive — report by the Inspector General dealing with possible criminal charges stemming from the incident is due out in December.

The report said "lurid" sexual behavior had taken place at the annual convention at least as far back as 1985 and naval leadership had done nothing to stop it.

At his news conference, the secretary announced:

• Rear Adm. Duvall M. Williams, the one-star commander of the Naval Investigative Service, which handles criminal inquiries, will be replaced with a senior civilian.

• Rear Adm. John Gordon, the Navy’s two-star judge advocate general and its chief legal officer, will be replaced.

• Rear Adm. George Washington Davis, the Navy’s inspector general, will be reassigned after the Senate confirms his replacement.

The Inspector General’s report faulted O’Keefe for not taking "appropriate disciplinary action" for Gordon and Williams. The secretary said he’d yet made any such decisions.

A Navy source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said O’Keefe’s top aide, Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Howard, was the admiral most likely to be dismissed. The admiral had been appointed by the previous administration.

Williams, in a statement issued through his office, lambasted the report.

"I decided to retire because I believe it to be fundamentally unfair that I could be convicted and sentenced by a DoD IG without due process in a report containing so many inaccuracies and distortions," Williams said.

"It is difficult," said House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

"I do not believe it is fundamentally unfair that I could be convicted and sentenced by a DoD IG without due process," Gordon said he would "do everything in my power to set the record straight," but didn’t say if he would file a lawsuit.

Davis did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

NEH report: campuses threatened by politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Endowment for the Humanities on Thursday criticized college professors who try to stop students from expressing unpopular or biased opinions.

In a report to Congress, NEH Chair Christine Denny warned of the dangers of substituting political advocacy for the traditional ideas that teaching and learning are about "testing and evaluating it critically, (and) weighing conflicting opinions — about trying to tell what is true." Denny also quoted Mari Matsuda of the University of Hawaii, who argued that freedom of speech does not mean "protecting everyone’s views without regard to their content or implied values."

Denny said that since all historical perspectives are affected by "the political climate," universities must be pressuring their views on students.

But she stressed "colleges and universities in every part of the country have been affected." As an example, the report cited two professors who refused to include in their courses any critical viewpoints. Denny cited the concerns of a political activist who pressed their views on students.

In some quarters, there is no longer any question of whether to use the classroom for political purposes; the only question is how most effectively to do so," said Denny.
House votes to limit nuclear weapons tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted overwhelmingly Thursday to reverse President Bush’s policy on nuclear weapons testing, imposing strict conditions on the underground blasts and ending them entirely in 1996. On a vote of 224-151, lawmakers adopted a Senate provision that had been the subject of earlier rhetoric was hopeful, but neither side appeared ready for significant concessions. Negotiators agreed to convene a seventh round on Oct. 21 in Washington, to last as long as this one — one month, with a week off for consultations at the beginning of November.

"We believe the parties have achieved a good foundation for future progress," said Assistant Secretary of State Edward Djerejian. "There was a different and more cordial tone between the parties," he told reporters, summing up the sixth round. "The parties are definitely grappling with the tough key issues of territory, peace and security.

On the plus side, Israel and Syria worked together on a joint statement defining the principles of their talks. Israel and the Palestinians began work on an agreement granting self-government to the 1.7 million Palestinians under Israeli occupation. On the minus side, Israel and Syria failed to reach agreement on the document, saying major differences persisted. And the Palestinians left here bitter about Israel’s refusal to stop human rights abuses in the territories it occupies.

"This period has been very useful as an exploratory period," said Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi. But, "the areas of agreement remain very minimal." Still, Israeli spokesman Yossi Gal said, "It’s our belief that peace in the Middle East is becoming less a matter of contention and more a matter of time."

Negotiations with Syria, at least, appeared stuck on the same dispute that has bedeviled them from the start: Israel wants to know what kind of peace Syria will offer in return for an Israeli withdrawal from the Golan Heights.

Peruvian rebel chieftain promises continued war

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Speaking from a cage in prison pinstripes, the captured chief of the Shining Path rebel movement on Thursday called his arrest a "bend in a long highway" that would not stop leftist revolution in Peru.

The speech before about 300 journalists at a downtown Lima building was the first time the legendary Abimael Guzman, 57, had been seen in public since he went underground in the 1970s. Guzman was captured Sept. 13 at a Lima safe house.

The bearded, bespectacled Guzman was dressed in a black-and-white striped prison uniform that authorities apparently hoped would make him appear as a common criminal.

He spoke for seven minutes from a specially built 25-by-10 foot cage, surrounded by dozens of policemen with automatic rifles. Sentinels were posted on surrounding rooftops.

Pacing the cage and repeatedly thrusting his right fist into the air, Guzman called his capture "a bend in a long highway."

"There are those who see this as a great defeat," Guzman said. "They are dreaming. Let them dream."

Guzman said Maoism, the variant of Communism that he espouses, was gaining ground and eventually would emerge victorious in the imperiled nations of the Third World.

Shelling stalls power restoration in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herze­g­ovina (AP) — Shelling frus­trated U.N. soldiers' attempts Thursday to restore electrical power that was knocked out three days earlier to 80 percent of the Bosnian capital.

In neighboring Croatia, the United Nations' chief civilian officer warned that returnees were still facing the easternmost of four U.N. protection zones, saying that Serb militias were still menacing civilians.

Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen, the envoys leading the ongoing Yugoslav peace conference in Paris, said they would fly to Banja Luka on Friday to investi­gate similar reports of militiamen around the Serb stronghold in northern Bosnia. Several villages with a Serb minority have been captured by Bosnian Muslims and Croats.

Shelling began Wednesday morning as a team of engineers from U.N. Protection Force headquarters in an armored car for the damaged electricity station north of the city at Ugorsko. They make no progress.

Sarajevo has suffered from irregular electricity and water supplies for much of its nearly six-year-old war, but the Serbs' power was knocked out three days earlier to 80 percent of the city of 400,000 residents who had power since shelling slammed into the Ugorsko power substation Monday night.

Former East German spy chief indicted on charges of treason, bribery and espionage

BERLIN (AP) — Markus Wolf, a leading figure in Cold War intrigue who directed 4,000 Communist agents as East German spy chief, has been indicted on treason, bribery and espionage charges, Germany's chief prosecutor announced yesterday.

The exploits of Wolf, 69, are the stuff of legend and include the envoys leading the ongoing unification.

The prosecutions are being questioned in some quarters, however, by people who argue that East Germany was essentially treated as a sovereign state by West Germany although not formally recognized.

Ousted East German Communist boss Erich Honecker is expected to go on trial in November on manslaughter charges stemming from the deaths of people who tried to escape to the West.

In announcing the indictment of Wolf from his office in Karlsruhe, chief federal prosecutor Alexander von Stahl said investigators are still gathering evidence against the former spy chief.

Von Stahl listed 11 other well-known cases he said Wolf was involved in. The operatives listed read like a "Who's Who" of prominent East German spies caught in the West.

One of them is Klaus Kuron, who acted as an East German spy while working in West Germany's chief counterintelligence agency.

Wolf was arrested on his return to Germany just one year ago, on Sept. 24, 1991, after fleeing to Moscow to avoid prosecution. He was freed 10 days later and is believed to be living in former East Berlin.

Hans-Joergen Foerster, spokesman for the chief federal prosecutor's office, said Wolf faces a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison if convicted.

First-time claims by jobless for benefits rose in Sept.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits rose to 414,000 in mid-September, the highest level in five weeks, the government reported yesterday. The Labor Department said the 15,000 increase during the week ended Sept. 12 was due in part to more new claims by the victims of Hurricane Andrew in South Florida and Louisiana.

It was the first time in five weeks that claims totaled more than 400,000. Although claims for the week ended Sept. 5 initially were reported to totaled 400,000, they were revised down to 399,000 in the latest report.

Claims had plunged by a record 91,000, to 383,000, during the week ended Aug. 15, falling below 400,000 for the first time since they totaled 382,000 during the week of Oct. 6, 1990.

But they started back up the following week, rising to 386,000, and to 394,000 during the week ended Aug. 29 before hitting 399,000 during the week ended Sept. 5.

Because of the volatility of the weekly reports, many analysts prefer to track a four-week moving average of claims which smooths the erratic changes and is considered a more reliable indicator of the labor market.

The average was 398,250 during the period ended Sept. 12, up from 390,000 a week earlier when it dipped to the lowest since 387,250 during the period ended Oct. 6, 1990. The average was 409,250 during the period ended Aug. 29.

The department cautioned that recent claims numbers probably are being held down artificially by some claimants using a special emergency unemployment program that is not counted in the weekly release.

Consumers' caution keeps economic growth anemic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at a slightly less anemic rate than first thought in the April-June quarter, but new claims for unemployment benefits rose in mid-September for the fourth week in a row, the government said Thursday.

Consumer caution held the seasonally adjusted advance in the gross domestic product to an annual rate of 1.5 percent in the second quarter, the Commerce Department said, revising its previous estimate of 1.4 percent.

Separately, the Labor Department said 414,000 Americans filed applications for unemployment during the week ended Sept. 12, an increase of 15,000 partly attributed to claims from victims of Hurricane Andrew. It was the fourth consecutive rise.

Analysts expected the mostly gloomy economic news to continue between now and the Nov. 3 Presidential election.

"I can't see how the impression could possibly change before the election," said economist Paul Boltz of T. Rowe Price Associates in Baltimore.

"George Bush is stuck with talking about family values at this point."

Next week, the Labor Department reports on September's unemployment rate. Many economists fear the end of a federal summer jobs program for teenagers and job losses from the hurricane will cause an increase from the 7.6 percent August rate.

On Oct. 27, only a week before Election Day, the government releases its first estimate of GDP in the July-September period. In advance, economists were expecting at best a modest improvement compared with the second quarter.

"What the numbers show is the economy is not particularly improving," said Mason Lally of R.H. Wrightson & Associates in New York. "We're still struggling to get our head above water."

He noted that much of the growth existed in the second quarter came from an unwanted buildup in inventories as consumers cut back on purchasing. Retailers with well-stocked shelves probably will order fewer goods in the third quarter, detracting from growth, he said.

The second quarter performances followed a moderate increase of 2.9 percent at an annual rate in the first three months of the year. That's considered poor for just after a recession but it still was the best growth since the early months of the Bush administration.

American consumers, whose spending accounts for roughly two-thirds of all economic activity, were behind the slowdown. Their spending edged down 0.1 percent in the second quarter after spurring 5.1 percent in the first. The decline encompassed a 2.1 percent drop for durable goods — big ticket items such as autos and appliances.

Officer: U.S. 'didn't have the stomach' to fight over possible unreleased POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top military officer at the end of the Vietnam War told a Senate panel Thursday that the nation "didn't have the stomach" to resume fighting over possible unreleased POWs after peace had been negotiated.

Admiral Thomas Moorer, who was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from 1970 to 1974, said it was politically impossible for President Nixon to reopen the war in 1973 on the unconfirmed possibility that not all Americans had been removed from Laos.

At that time, in 1973, Nixon had concluded peace talks with the North Vietnamese. The government of Laos was not represented in the negotiations. Also, Nixon was preparing to hold welcoming ceremonies for U.S. POWs returned under the Paris peace accords.

"We would have had to go to Laos ... and physically sweep out the whole area," Moorer said.

"We didn't have the stomach for it. We didn't have the will," Moorer said, adding later that he referred to the nation as a whole, not just military and Nixon administration officials.

Moorer testified before the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs as it held a third day of hearings with former military and Nixon administration officials from two decades ago.

Some former officials have testified there was reason to believe more Americans than the 918 eventually released from Laos had been abandoned Americans there.

Committee Chairman John Kerry, D-Mass., said, "The evidence is overwhelming to the committee there is a gap between stated public policy at that time and reality."

In a just-released deposition to the committee, Moorer was questioned about orders he issued in March 1973 to delay withdrawing the final U.S. troops in Vietnam until a full accounting of POWs was provided. One day later, Moorer reversed those orders.

Detroit teachers defy judge's order to return to work

DETROIT (AP) — Most of De­troit's 10,000 teachers defied a judge's order to go back to work Thursday, and picketed noisily outside schools.

Negotiations to end the 3 1/2- week-long strike resumed.

Teachers said they were willing to stay on the picket line as long as it takes to win a con­tract, even though school was to have started Aug. 31. The strike has prolonged summer vacation for Detroit's 164,000 students.

"We need to recall the board," Terry Bagwell, one of about 30 teachers marching outside the George Washington Stark Elementary School, said, adding that she believed the teachers would prevail. "This is a union town."

Wayne County Circuit Judge Robert Colombo Jr. on Tuesday ordered the teachers to return to work under a contract that expires in June.

The Detroit Federation of Teachers and schools began bargaining Thursday morning for the first time since Sunday, schools said, a strike that put more authority and autonomy in individual schools.

The city already has some schools operating under the plan, where teachers, students and principals together work out their schools' problems and needs.

The teachers also have asked for an 8 percent raise; the dis­trict offered a 3 percent bonus tied to teachers' attendance at staff workshops and seminars. Detroit's teachers with a bache­lor's degree start at $27,000 a year, earning $41,000 after 10 years.

Union officials said teachers were reporting to work at a rate of one to two per 75 people not reporting or picking. Wasco officials would know Friday how many teachers reported for work.

Wasco said school officials would consider going back to the judge to seek a contempt of court order. If found in con­tempt, he could jail people who ignore the back-to-work order or fine the union.

In 1973, Detroit teachers ig­nored a similar court order. While no strikers were jailed, the union was assessed fines that eventually totaled $299,000, plus $2.5 million in damages. Those fines were forgiven after the strike was settled in mid-October.

Some of the teachers who go on strike the strike expressed uncertainty about the empowerment plan.

"It's just the general fuzziness of what empowerment means," said Dennis Kevonian, an English teacher at Finney High School who was on the picket line. "If we had an easily understood plan, I'd be OK. I'd welcome a chance to do the things I wanted to do."

Facing a financial crisis, mayor clashes with union

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Ed Rendell, whose city teetered on bankruptcy three times under his predecessor, faced his first major crisis only months after he took office.

With municipal workers threatening to strike, he de­cided Wednesday to practice brinkmanship. He insisted on a new contract with concessions on the 15,000 employees.

"This isn't a battle to protect the rich people some as of the union bosses," Rendell said. "This is a fight for our future."

It's a fight facing financially squeezed mayors across the country.

Union attorneys went to court last week to try to block enforcement of Rendell's conditions violations state autono­my in individual schools.

Under the administration of his predecessor, W. Wilson Goode, the city posted deficits for 12 of 14 years in row. By summer 1991, the city's bonds had fallen to junk level Wall Street, forcing the city to the creation of a state over­sight board that would sell bonds in its place.

While campaigning, Rendell said he was willing to risk a strike to get a grasp on labor costs, told city workers they no longer could look to Harrisburg or Washington, D.C., for a bailout, and promised not to raise taxes or cut services.

Taking office in January, he took a 5 percent pay cut, ordered the same for his top aides, and refused to act as the city headed for bankruptcy three times.

"This is a fight facing financially squeezed mayors across the country. It's a fight for our future," Rendell said.

The 200 to 250 courthouse workers remained on their jobs.

Visitors to the courthouse 60 miles east of Los Angeles are not screened by metal detectors, which are in place in many courthouses in the country.

Use of metal detectors has been considered several times, said Feg Hirsch, di­rector of court services, adding that searches have been used only during spe­cific cases.

The shooting was the latest violent attack at U.S. cour­thouses.

Nunez people have been slain this year in cour­thouses around the country.
Child tries to ‘divorce’ parents

Florida case could set a legal precedent

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Squirming and chewing a gum drop, a 13-year-old boy went to court Thursday seeking a "divorce" from his parents in a case that could help give children more protection against parental abuse.

Gregory Kingsley, brown-haired and pale, sat in the back of the courtroom with members of the foster family he hopes to live with permanently.

His mother, Rachel Kingsley, cried as she denied allegations accusing Mrs. Kingsley, her fiance, Howard Davidson, director of the American Bar Association Center on Children and the Law, said the case could establish a significant legal precedent, but some said it was unlikely to have much practical effect.

"The ramifications are huge, ... You're looking at a fundamental shift in the way we view children," said Howard Davidson, director of the American Bar Association Center on Children and the Law. "The ramifications are huge. ... You're looking at a fundamental shift in the way we view children." He smiled occasionally in court, chewed on a gum drop and whispered to those around him. The trial was shown live on CNN and Court TV.

Child welfare advocates and legal scholars said the case could establish a significant legal precedent, but some said it was unlikely to have much practical effect.

Charmaine Crouse Yoest, policy analyst with the conservative Family Research Council in Washington, said, "The ramifications are huge. ... You're looking at a fundamental shift at the way we view children." Howard Davidson, director of the American Bar Association Center on Children and the Law, said it was unlikely that many children would be hiring lawyers to sever parental custody in the future. He said the case was mainly significant because it had attracted so much attention, not vice versa.

"All of the publicity makes it significant," he said. "To my knowledge, this is the first time in American history that a termination-of-parental-rights hearing has been broadcast on national television." Mrs. Kingsley said she tried hard to provide the boys a stable home, but was forced to put them in foster care because she couldn't afford to keep them on a $200-a-week salary.

Under questioning from Gregory's foster father, attorney George Russ, Mrs. Kingsley denied she had a history of alcoholism. Later, she accused Florida social workers of thwarting her attempts to contact her son.

"I tried to call for his birthday and he was away on a camping trip," she said. "They told me he didn't want to speak with me after a while." Mrs. Kingsley said she had been a frequent visitor to the Kingsley home in a St. Louis suburb when the children were young.

"Gregory finally has a chance to have a decent life with people who love and care for him," Glenn said. "I want that to happen."
DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot's supporters are telling volunteer leaders who will meet with him Monday they want him back in the Presidential race. But Perot's son and other associates say his goal is not to win the Presidency but to force the campaign onto "the tough issues."

In several interviews during the past week, Perot has suggested he would launch an active campaign if supporters who put him on state ballots want him to do so.

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas Foley, upset by a steady Republican bashing of bill Clinton, on Thursday banned further insulting references to the Democratic Presidential candidate in floor speeches. Foley said the Arkansas governor would now be covered under a rule barring lawmakers from using House Floor to make such remarks about the President, Vice-President and lawmakers.

Perot's son says dad doesn't want the presidency

And Orson Swindle, national coordinator for Perot's volunteer organization, said Thursday that a canvas he ordered of state offices found plenty of backing if Perot decides to run.

"This is not a token gesture," Swindle said on NBC's "Today" show, "If he goes for the Presidency, he goes for the Presidency.

But Perot's son, Ross Perot Jr., said his father's goal is "not to be President of the United States."

"His goal is to fix the country, fix some problems, to keep the two candidates really focused in on what the problems are," Perot Jr. told KDFW-TV. "And he wants to make sure they can't avoid the tough issues.

Earlier this week, former media adviser Jim Squires said Perot had no illusions of winning the election, but might begin running ads and making speeches in states such as Texas and Florida, where he might affect the outcome.

Perot's advertising consultant, Murphy Martin, said the spots he has prepared for Perot focus on issues rather than the man.

Asked if the spots use biographical material, Martin said, "That's not really the purpose.

"We're talking about problems that face the country, how to solve those problems and who can best do that.

When he was asked whether the spots say "Voto for Perot,"

Martin said, "They say what is necessary to relay the message and that's all I can say."

While Ballenger triggered Foley's action, aides said the speaker has been bothered for weeks over Republican use of the House floor to attack Clinton's integrity.

Rep. Robert Dormen, R-Calif., for example, has frequently urged the floor to call Clinton a "draft dodger" and "womanizer."

RAHWAY, N.J. (AP) — Here are some of the details of Bill Clinton's health care plan. Where needed are details of related proposals advanced by President Bush.

COST CONTROLS

- Establishes a National Health Care Board made up of consumers, providers, business, labor and government to set national and state health care budgets to limit public and private health care costs.
- Sets up managed care networks — organized systems of insurers, hospitals, clinics and doctors — that will receive a fixed amount of money.
- The spending limits are designed to create incentives for providers to reduce bureaucracy, eliminate duplicative technology and stop waste.
- Bans "pre-existing condition" exclusions so that insurance companies have to take everyone. Bush would also eliminate such exclusions.
- Establishes publicly sponsored purchasing groups that band together and buy private coverage for their members that raise drug prices faster than inflation.
- To trim paperwork, implements a single claims form, standardized billing codes and electronic processing. Bush advocates the same type of streamlining.

UNIVERSAL COVERAGE

- Forces employers to provide coverage for their workers. About 55 percent of employers already do;Clinton's plan would give tax credits to offset the new costs for companies that don't currently underwrite.
- Sets up a government fund to guarantee coverage for non-workers. People would have to pay a sliding scale based on income.
- Raises the health insurance tax deduction for the self-employed from 25 percent to 100 percent. Bush would do the same.
- Bush has not proposed universal coverage or cost controls.

Indianapolis (AP) — Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Jack Kemp predicted Thursday that voters will turn to President Bush when they learn more about Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton's economic policies.

"This egalitarian soak-the-rich, give-to-the-poor policy of the Clinton campaign, I think, eventually is going to turn the stomachs of the American people," Kemp said.

Kemp, a former congressman, argued the Presidential race will come down to differences between his and Bush's plans.

"We cannot compete with a tax code that is steeply graded and progressive," Kemp said. "A progressive income tax is not a tax on the rich. It's a tax on the poor who hope to get rich some day."

Private spending for health care outcompetes American competitiveness by draining money that could be invested in equipment and jobs, he said.

Irish Guard members respond to proceedings

In light of the events occurring over the past few days involving the activities of the veteran Irish Guard members, we wish to express our views on the proceedings.

To this day we do not know the exact charges brought against us. It is our understanding that frivolous rumors are the basis for our disbandment.

For instance, as stated in The Observer, the accusation of having a single, anonymous student claim that members of the Guard were forcing another Guardman in uniform to consume alcohol is heresy and blasphemy at its finest. It is a covenant law that no Guardsmen may consume alcohol, either publically or privately, in uniform. In addition, how is it that only one student, one parent, has decided that the idea that we were "pouring alcohol down the throat of an other Guardman?"

If this accusation were so, would it not be the entire university which has decided to conduct the trial in question? Furthermore, this article was the first of its kind such knowledge of this accusation.

This and other unfounded rumors played a significant role in the decision made by Patricia O'Hara, Vice-President of Student Affairs. As such, this allegation should have been brought to our attention, so we may have at least the opportunity to rightfully refute and correct this and other such outrageous allegations.

Ms. O'Hara stated in yesterday's article that the Irish Guards had "tried to preserve the positive potential of the Guard. Whether that will happen depends on the faculty itself on the Guard itself, citing specifically volunteer services to young people, she neglected these opportunities in order to stay true to the example of the Irish Guard."

Obviously, we were not the masters of our own fate, nor were we allowed to preserve the positive potential of the Guard, as she would have you believe.

In reference to Ms. O'Hara's charges that our orientation activities were major indiscretions, let us further examine the actions of organizations both athletic and academic.

Be it Kappa Nu, athletic teams, or dormitories, initiations occur campus-wide. Jacob Hall, in order to encourage enthusiasm, covers their new members with mud and paint, dresses them in togas, and parades them to the major social event of the first pep rally, highlighting the fact that many thousands of alumni and students are enabled to witness this public socialization event.

Why is there such a disparity between the initiations of these organizations and the Irish Guard? Never have we had a tradition of this nature nor have we had such an event.

This simple yet traditional aspect of the Guard is the basis of the Irish Guard remains, "What do they have of such significance?"

We are ten men, gentlemen. We are chosen to represent the Notre Dame family which has single handedly established the Irish Tradition as a fraternal bond.

This by no means reflects poorly on the University's Catholic nature nor the Notre Dame family which we are chosen to represent. Based on the above, it is apparent that the student Irish Guardsmen were disbanded in order to eliminate the supposed "cult-like" traditions under which we have been accused of acting.

This reasoning stems from the idea that if Student Affairs will not maintain the current link to the traditions which have existed since the Guard's inception, they will be able to establish a Guard which conforms more appropriately with the values of this academic institution.

We are ten men, gentlemen, all, with the honorable responsibility of representing this University as Irish Guardsmen. Not only do we understand this responsibility, we accept it with the utmost respect and admiration for the Golden Dome.

Student Affairs is an all-encompassing authority, ruled by the unyielding dictatorship of Ms. Patricia O'Hara, which has the power to eliminate any organization given a catalyst.

We express our dissatisfaction with the proceedings of the Office of Student Affairs and would like to warn all groups associated with the University of Notre Dame to take additional precautions to ensure the safety and well-being of our organization.

Though it has been indicated to us that the decision handed down by Ms. O'Hara is final, we would like to state that we will always be Irish Guardsmen at heart. She has single handedly taken away one of the most significant experiences of our lives here at Notre Dame.

We are helpless in our plight to regain our status as marchers on Saturday afternoons, yet we will remain "in our hearts forever." We wish with the remaining five Guardsmen the best of luck and hope with all sincerity that their experiences are as rewarding as ours. Here's to you fags...
Simi Valley resident defends reputation of his hometown

Dear Editor:

As a resident of Simi Valley, California, as well as my family and friends were immediately concerned when an event took place in April and May of this year in the Los Angeles area which involved certain jokes about Simi Valley Police and about the "White Racist" and "Dead End" that comprise the Simi Valley population.

I have heard all of the analogies that compare Simi Valley to the South, and what it is that it is a haven for the KKK. This is certainly not the case. We are a happy, lively community that live in Simi Valley. In all of the years that I have lived there, I have never met a single person who I or anybody else thought was even a mild racist.

I have never seen or heard of anyone dressed in a KKK outfit, and I have never read about a racial beating in the local paper.

What upset me is that people make blind accusations when they appear to know very little about the subject. The fact is, Simi Valley Police officers were involved in the beating of Rodney King; they were responsible for that beating.

Of the twelve members on the Rodney King jury, two were from Simi Valley and the other ten were from Ventura County (i.e. Oxnard, Channel Islands, Ventura, etc.).

Contrary to popular belief, the trial did not occur in the "Simi Valley Courthouse" but rather in the East Ventura County Courthouse which is in Simi Valley; we did not preside over a Simi Valley jury, but by a Ventura County Judge.

By no means am I trying to justify the anger of the trial or to completely shift the blame. My point however, is this: the results of this trial are hardly the fault of Simi Valley alone. Anybody who lives in the fault of Ventura county, the rest of the state, and the rest of the country.

The social and economic strife that facing us is dragging down the justice system of the United States. The injustices we have seen in the courtroom are rooted in the hard times that people everywhere are experiencing.

As several prominent black leaders stated during the riots, this has been a time bomb waiting to explode, and it could just as easily happen in any city in the U.S.

It is too bad that a man had to be beaten, an injustice was served, a city's reputation destroyed, and another city destroyed. But what could others do about it? What could others see through these problems?

You awaken to the problems we are dealing with in this country today. As the song says, you are either going to get eaten and that the house you grew up in is getting burned down because of an event that you and your family had no control over.

How would you feel if you got the bill for the most part, and we have every reason to believe that they were continue to be well attended. We ask that you judge the effectiveness of the council not by its size but by the events it sponsors.

Student managers obs demand dedication

When talking about Notre Dame football, names like Holtz, Clawson, Miller, this, and Dubose dominate discussions about the previous game's touchdowns, penalties, interceptions, and strategies. A person can watch every game, read every article, and discuss every play, but that person will probably never know who the people are who paint the football helmets, raise the field goal nets, or follow Lou up and down the sidelines with the headset cord. It is very seldom that anyone wonders who those people are, or how they found their association with Notre Dame football.

Behind the scenes of every athletic team, the Student Managers Organization works diligently throughout the year to support Notre Dame sports. One individual and nearly one hundred student managers work with all Notre Dame varsity teams, making practice sessions, game preparation, and the game itself run as smoothly as possible. Many sports fans would treasure the chance to work so closely with a team throughout its season and get to know the players and coaches on a personal level. "I joined because I loved sports, and I wanted the opportunity to become involved with a great football program," said Brian Maher, Personnel Student Manager.

Over the last few years, the manager's position has become a highly sought one. While positions are open for any freshman or sophomore to try out, only an outstanding few are selected to continue. This year there are 95 preps who hope to become a part of the student manager's program. The order of rankings is also in order in which those students who they select who make the top three become football managers.

This year the football staff is being run by Maher, along with Head Student Manager Art Monaghan, and Equipment Student Manager John Fligg. During practice, the manager has to know the routine that each coach uses for instructing players and drilling plays so that the coaches are not always glamorous - often they involve carrying around a bag of footballs, or charting plays, or generally running around to various coaches on players need. But once every in awhile a manager may get a chance to fill in as a runningback and run a play with the team. The student manager's job is essential to the functioning of the football team, especially during game preparation. Friday before home games, or Thursday before away games, the student managers work long into the night getting uniforms, replacing worn and broken equipment, cleaning up the locker-room, and getting ready for Saturday.

The ritual for students during the weeks before any home game: roll out of bed around ten, take a Advil, go to a friend's, parent's, or relative's tailgater, watch the Notre Dame football team in action, return to tailgater, go home and fall asleep.

For one group at ND - the Notre Dame Security force - football Saturdays are not nearly as simple or entertaining. Each Saturday morning at 7 a.m., ND security officers report to work, ready to be at the scene of the game. At the scene, those officers allow only those with special passes to enter the stadium, and are the first to enter. ND security personnel are ready to begin their shift at the stadium gates, helping fans into the stadium.

For home football games, security personnel are stationed along South Bend, St. Joseph's County, and Mishawaka, the main areas involved, both in uniform or plainclothes, approaches I-80/90 and 21.

Approximately a week before any home game, the security forces will dispatch officers to control, security is the first line of defense, and the fans are not scalping tickets from any Notre Dame and it is a game of trust. If there are problems, the security officers put on a uniform, and the fans know the security personnel are there to protect them.
The tradition of Notre Dame football is another source of pressure.

"You feel obliged to win because of all the ghosts that are around here as much as anything," Holtz laughed. "The tradition of this school as an elite school in both academics and athletics is a tradition that we have to uphold," he added.

Being an assistant coach is indeed a low-profile job, but it is still a full-time job; one that is fulfilling though it may not bring fame and fortune, but working for Lou Holtz is a job that few coaches anywhere would be willing to trade, least of all the ones who are lucky enough to hold jobs in the shadow of The Dome.

Assistant coaches appreciate positions and environment at ND

ne of the commonly held beliefs about Notre Dame football is that head coach Lou Holtz has control of all aspects of the team.

While he does have the final say on what the team does, he gets plenty of help from his assistants, help that the team could never do without.

These little-known men in sure that practice will run smoothly, spend hours planning game strategies and concentrate on their specialties during games in order to help Coach Holtz decide what the team should do. It is a taxing - and often thankless - job.

An assistant coach's week starts on Sunday morning with an 8 a.m. film session. Here, the coaches break down the previous day's game, identifying what mistakes were made and how to fix them. They leave the film room and break into staff meetings (offense and defense), where the film is discussed further and plans are made for practice that week.

The coaches then gather again to watch more films, this time of the next opponent. It isn't uncommon for these sessions to last until 8, perhaps even 10 p.m.

The coaches are at work well before practice on Monday. Staff meetings are held at 7 a.m. and usually run until the film session begins at 3 o'clock.

Thursday's and Wednesday's practices are about the same as Monday, both ending well into the evening for these coaches. Thursday, however, is what offensive coordinator Skip Holtz calls a "dress rehearsal" for the game. Few new strategies are introduced on Thursday; rather, the team and the coaches try to perfect all the things that they worked on that week.

After practice, the coaches are able to get some much-needed rest with their families.

On Fridays, the assistant coaches spend less time with the Fighting Irish and turn to high-school action. Many films of high-school prospects are analyzed so that the coaches can plan their recruiting visits.

"You want to know what kind of players the kids are, so that when you go to your school, you can concentrate on what kind of person you're dealing with," said running back-coach Earle Mosely.

Saturday, game day, is almost relaxing by comparison. The team meets for breakfast at 6:30 a.m., followed by a team mass. The coaches then go out with their respective teams and as young Holtz said, "They just go out and do it."

Both Holtz and Mosely agreed that the only tensions on Saturday are how their own team would execute.

"You just have to hope that what you've worked on all week is what the players do in the game," said Holtz. After the game, the week ends for the coaches, but they are back at work early Sunday, planning for the next one.

It is a hard job, but it is not without its rewards. The greatest satisfaction comes when our players execute what we work on in practice," said Holtz. "When you pull off a play like the first one against Michigan State (a 43-yard completion to Lake Dawson), you're like, 'Yes! Yes!'"

Assistant coaches are, for the most part, happy in their positions. "I'd love a head job, but I'm not actively seeking one," said Holtz. "My commitment is to Notre Dame, and as long as I'm here, I plan to do the best I can for them."

Mosely agreed. "I'm a quiet guy, but I've been a head coach in a high school, and being an assistant coach is equally rewarding," he said.

Both coaches also agreed that to be at Notre Dame was to be in a bit of a fishbowl, especially with the NBC television contract and high expectations for success.

The tradition of Notre Dame football is another source of pressure.

"You feel obliged to win because of all the ghosts that are around here as much as anything," Holtz laughed. "The tradition of this school as an elite school in both academics and athletics is a tradition that we have to uphold," he added.

Being an assistant coach is indeed a low-profile job, but it is still a full-time job; one that is fulfilling though it may not bring fame and fortune, but working for Lou Holtz is a job that few coaches anywhere would be willing to trade, least of all the ones who are lucky enough to hold jobs in the shadow of The Dome.

eight Notre Dame the parking fields in the scalpers. Some like "NEED 2 FIX" he appears unrecognizable to selling them above face value. The offices then send these tickets to the ticket manager to see who was originally issued the tickets. This is a surprising tactic of which many students may not have been aware.

Another aspect of security is safety. In past years when ND had night games, pedestrian safety was a major concern. With the large amount of tailgating, more than 3,000 people would be there each game. Hurley said that he used to keep his fingers crossed "that no one would get hurt."

Recently, with the NBC contract specifying 12:35 p.m. kick-offs, this concern has thankfully become a much less pressing problem for security. In addition, the earlier starting times have caused a decrease in alcohol-related arrests.

"ND security officers realize that a football game is a social event. We want people to have a good time, as long as they're not preventing others from enjoying themselves," said Hurley.

One last thought about Notre Dame Security from Hurley: "People don't realize how hard we work. They are indeed human beings, and they do a great behind-the-scenes service to Notre Dame.
A profile in courage of the lonely God

A freshman reader has been asking me a question that comes every year: do I really think God is lonely? Lately, I told the kid, he's been doing better. Swaggart's downfall was his mother's heen out a lot, making field trips, so she says, to Sundance country, where she hopes they will build her a shrine.

This summer, a band of angels, swung too low coming over Jordan and crash-landed their chariot. Now they're rookies again, starting boot camp over.

The student looked to see if the chairs with the butterfly nets were in sight, coming for to carry me home.

"Being the Lonely God is no bed of roses," I told him; but I could see he had lost interest. Instant whimsy can be a litmus test separating the men from the boys. The lad wasn't ready to enter the orbit of the Lonely God; and though that's too bad, he needn't worry.

He'll run into the Lonely God when he's older, sitting alone, drinking, and feeling blue. The student will not know who He is, or anything about Him except that He keeps turning up when a fellow needs a friend. Finally the student will say: "Who are you anyway?" and He will answer, "Can you tell?"

The student will say: "He's Griffin's pookah. II The pookah known to all of us, I hope, is an imaginary, six-foot rabbit named Harvey. "He's not a pookah," the Lonely God, taking umbrage, will retort.

Father Robert Griffin
Letters to a Lonely God

"How can you tell?"

"As the Lonely God, I can tell that I'm neither invisible nor imaginary." To prove His high calling, He will pull the Energizer Rabbit out of a Martini glass, and permanently cure the student's post-nasal drip.

"Rabbit?!" will cry the student, astounded, and the Lonely God will blush, and allow the student to see Him subliminally as the Burning Bush. I introduced Notre Dame to the Lonely God early in the alienated Seventies. Asking if He's really lonely is like asking if Asian in the Chronicles is truly a lion.

He has to be lonely; this campus is his Narnia, and it comes with the territory. If this were the other Narnia which C.S. Lewis writes about, the Lonely God would be Asian, the Redeemer Lion who sang his mythical country into its temporal existence.

The Kingdom of the Lonely God is only a myth if Notre Dame is a myth. He came here to show the lonely-Ol'heart that He is their brother. We may outgrow our need of Him, and perhaps He hopes that we will, for He must wear many masks, and He must be called by many names.

But at a time when many are so sure of themselves, He was there for us—not as a Man of sorrows acquainted with grief, we would need a great growth in grace to reach Him at this depth—but as the companion who stayed with us to bear the chimes at midnight, because He had no place else to go.

We outgrow Him, lose Him, then find Him again. But He stays close, and is persistent like a heartbeat.

Metaphysically, you could say He is everywhere; but He's more intimate than that. Finding Him as a sidekick in the depths. Because He's made His peace with the grave. He's sensitive to all the fears I have of dying.

As the Lonely God, He doesn't need dogmas to define Him. He's not on deck to take my loneliness or yours away, but to fill it with His presence.

I've never before tried to put the Lonely God into words; still, I'm not evangelizing on His behalf. But I'm putting you on notice: His friendship is worth having. He's not biodegradable, and He doesn't get shopworn, or have a shelf life.

Even without the school logo, He's part of the tradition, so I hoped you'd want to meet Him.

Men's X-Country hosts Invitational

BY SEAN SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's cross country team will collide with 21 other Catholic colleges and universities in the 13th annual National Catholic Cross Country Championships tomorrow at the Burke Memorial Golf Course. The Irish, who are currently ranked number six in the nation, look good coming into this meet.

The All-American tandem of junior Mike McWilliams and senior captain John Coyle will be the leadership as well as the arsenal in Friday's attack. McWilliams and Coyle finished 1-2 in the season opener against Georgetown and should be two of the strongest runners in Friday's race.

Traditionally, the National Catholic Championships has featured intense competition with fantastic finishes. Last year's meet was one of the fastest invitational races at Notre Dame in recent years.

"Last year the leaders went out like lightning," said Notre Dame head coach Joe Piane. John Coyle finished the race with a time of 24:21.5 and Mike McWilliams set his personal record for the home course with a blazing 24:04.6. As in years past, the competition will be strong. While returning champion Providence will not be at this year's competition, Marquette and Loyola both have excellent teams. Marquette boasts a strong front with five returning seniors. And in James Westphal, Loyola has one of the top individual runners in the country. Last year, against Notre Dame and Providence All-Americans, Westphal won the race by six seconds.

Coach Piane stressed that for Notre Dame to run an effective race it is important for them to run as a team. In the last meet against Georgetown the Irish stayed together in the fast and intimidating pack formation throughout two and a half miles. While Georgetown may have sprouted out two quick runners initially, they were no match for the onslaught of the Notre Dame seven blazing over the Burke Memorial fairways. Once again, fans should expect a hard-fought race. Look for Marquette and Notre Dame to battle it out in the first 300 meters. Coach Piane predicts that Marquette will have an explosive start in order to establish position early on.

The fast start has been a traditional tactic for Marquette. The Warriors will come on strong with their eyes on the prize of being National Catholic Champions. With 5 seniors on the team, this year is the year to do it.

Piane believes that beyond the Championship itself, many of the runners are on a personal mission to topple the Fighting Irish. But it will take more than vendettas to defeat Notre Dame. In years past the Irish have owned this race. In fact, a victory tomorrow will be the fourth Irish win in five years.

However, cross country meets are unpredictable and the winner of this race can only be established at 5:00 tomorrow along the chalk path of Burke Memorial Golf Course. So go out and cheer on the men's varsity cross country team as they make their surge towards the national title.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Iowa coach Hayden Fry calls Colorado quarterback Kordell Stewart "just a tremendous all-around athlete" who is not only uncommonly fast for a quarterback but is "faster than any running back we've ever had here."

According to Fry, Stewart also is an "avoid weightlifter who squats over 500 pounds, which is what our top lineman do."

"After handling out such accolades, how does Fry intend to stop Stewart when his Hawkeyes invade No. 10 Colorado on Saturday?"

"I hope he doesn't play," Fry said.

No such luck, Hayden. Stewart, who missed last week's 21-20 victory over Minnesota because of a sprained foot, will return to the starting role on Saturday.

"Kordell's looking good," coach Bill McCartney. "He's moving well and he's breathing well. Saturday, hopefully, the injury won't be noticed."

Before his injury, Stewart was the nation's second-ranked passer, having completed 37 of 53 passes for 660 yards with seven touchdowns and one interception. He missed the second half of the Baylor game in Week 2, and was left at home last week as junior Duke Tobin, who mans the position, isn't a true freshman. Tobin is the brother of true freshman Koy Detmer — the Big 12's top-ranked passer as a receiver.

"I'm proud that our defense has continued to play hard after 97 plays to give up big plays. I'm proud that our defense showed good resolve and intensity and the ability to continue to play hard after 97 plays (last week), which is a lot," McCartney said. "Our backs were pinned for a good portion of the game. But, no, I'm not satisfied by a long shot. I know we can play better defense."

"There's a lot of talent at GE, too. Couple this talent with technology leadership, strong financial performance and a management team second to none and you've got the recipe for a truly world-class company."

California ruins No. 24 Kansas’ perfect season, 27-23

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Dave Barr accounted for two touchdowns and Russell White smashed Chuck Muncie's school all-purpose running record Thursday night, lifting California past No. 24 Kansas 27-23 in the Jayhawks’ first game as a ranked team in 16 years.

The Bears (2-1), 7-point underdogs, dominated Kansas along the line of scrimmage and never trailed while holding their hosts from the Big Eight Conference 27 points below their season average.

Kansas (3-1) closed to within 10-0 against quarterback Kordell Barr's 11-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter and only 11 yards to the Cal 44.

Barr hit Mike Caldwell for 11 yards on third and 9 on the quarter and two plays later found Dawkins down the right sideline for 37 yards to the Kansas 17. Then, after再度 stacked at the 15 and Doug Brien made it 10-0 with a 33-yard field goal.

The Jayhawks then mounted their only drive of the half, zipping 80 yards in five plays. Hill- leary hit Gay for consecutive gains of 14 and 25 to the Cal 20. Then, after Gay fumbled to pass, he was driven out of the pocket and bobbed and weaved into the end zone with 1:33 remaining in the half.

The Bears led 13-10 at halftime. They went ahead 20-10 on Barr's 1-yard run with 7:02 left in the third quarter. Kansas quarterback Chip Hilleary, who entered the game as Colleagues

Norris, Brown ready for title fight

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, who was battered into retirement by Terry Norris, says he doesn't like Norris' style.

Not Norris' boxing style, his hairstyle.

"I think he can become a star if he gets a new haircut," Leonard said recently of the fighter who knocked him down twice and easily outpointed over 12 rounds on Feb. 9, 1991.

Norris laughed on hearing of Sugar Ray's opinion and said he will not give up his habit of shaving a message into the back of his head.

"Knockout" was the message Norris carried into the ring for his last fight against Meldrick Taylor last May 9.

The 25-year-old Norris stopped Taylor in the fourth round of his seventh defense of the WBC super welterweight title.

"I'll have something," Norris said Thursday when asked what the barbered message would be Saturday night when he fights Simon Brown, who is moving up in weight in a bid for a second world title.

Norris was a 6-1 favorite in the 12-round bout at the Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion.

"I've been in tough fights before; now I'm really going to be in a tough fight," said the 28-year-old Brown, who lost the WBC welterweight title when he was outpointed by James "Buddy" McGirt last Nov. 29.

"I know he's a tough fighter," Norris said. "He has a lot of power like Mugabi and Jack­son.

Norris won a share of the 154-pound title when he knocked out John "The Beast" Mugabi in the first round March 31, 1990.

That was his second champion­ship bid. In the first, he was making Julian Jackson look foolish until he went to the ropes and got cute in the second round of the WBC junior middleweight title match.

"I got a little too cocky," Norris recalled of the knockout loss. "He caught me with a good shot, it was lesson."

It was lesson taken to heart. The speedy boxer-puncher has won 12 straight, six by knock­out.

Brown has fought once and won since his loss to McGirt, which snapped a 13-fight win­ning streak that included seven successful title defenses.

He spent five days in a hospital for treatment of dehydration after the McGirt fight.

"I had problems making weight," Brown said of the 147-pound welterweight limit. "But it was always one more fight. I did everything my body would do to make the weight. When you don't have body to perform even if the mind and heart want to."

"I think he will be much stronger," Norris said. "That's a thing that's been on my mind. If he was weak at 147, he'll be more comfortable at 154."

Norris has a 32-3 record, with 18 knockouts. Brown, whose style is to force the action, has a 36-2 record, with 27 knockouts.

Washington State receiver suspended

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State wide receiver Phillip Bobo has been suspended for Saturday's game against Fresno State because of a shoplifting charge, Cougars coach Mike Price said Thursday.

Bobo was arrested Wednesday night at a Pullman supermarket and faces a third-degree theft charge.

Price said sophomore Albert Kennedy will replace Bobo in the starting lineup.

Bobo, a junior from Moreno Valley, Calif., is tied for the Pacific-10 Conference lead in receptions this season with 14 catches. He has gained 132 receiving yards with one touchdown this season.

Bobo has started the last 23 games for the Cougars.

Cubs, Cards to remain in East
Owners' committee nixes Vincent's realignment

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's executive council ruled National League realignment Thursday, a move that was ex­pected after Vincent's decision to seek the resignation of commissioner Fay Vincent.

The Chicago Cubs, who are owned by the Tribune Co., had obtained a preliminary injunction blocking realignment, which would have moved the Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals to the NL West and the Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds to the NL East.

During the maneuvering that forced Vincent from office on Sept. 7, some owners were said to have promised the Cubs they would move for realignment to be withdrawn if the commis­sioner was forced out.

David Hiller, vice president and general counsel of the Tri­bune Co., said the action was taken by the executive council on Wednesday evening. The Cubs and lawyers from the commissioner's office filed a jointly motion Thursday that was dis­missing the lawsuit, and U.S. District Judge Suzanne B. Conlon dis­missed the injunction and vaca­tion her July 23 decision, meaning it cannot be used as preliminary.

The 10-person executive council rules the major leagues when the commissioner's office is vacant. Bud Selig of the Mil­waukeee Brewers, the council's chairman, denied earlier Thursday that realignment was withdrawn, then issued a statement praising the settle­ment.

I consider this an extremely positive development for base­ball," Selig said. "We can move forward to resolve the realignment issue through consensus rather than confrontation, which is the approach I would like to take to each and every problem confronting the game today."

After the Cubs obtained the injunction, the situation was further clouded by the San Francisco Giants' proposed move to St. Peter­burg Fla., an issue still unresolved. On Aug. 31, Vincent said he gave the NL permission to issue a 1993 schedule without realignment because of pressure from the Major League Baseball Players Association, which has the con­­tractual right to demand a draft by July 1. The NL then issued its schedule to clubs on Sept. 2.

The executive council on Thursday appointed a commit­tee of six owners and the two league presidents to "examine all aspects of divisional align­ment, scheduling and possible new formats."

Bill Giles of the Philadel­phia Phillies, who was named to the panel, said "it seems to me that we probably will have some­thing by January or February."

"We have to look at more creative things, see if there's any consensus on three divisions, an extra round of playoffs, interleague play, possibly switching teams between leagues," Giles said.

The National League voted 10-2 for realignment on March 4, but the Cubs vetoed the move, a right granted in the league constitution to all teams involved in proposed shifts. Six clubs requested that Vincent use his "best interests" power under the Major League Agreement, and the commis­sioner ordered a re­vote on July 6.

The Cubs, concerned that a switch to the NL West would cause them to play more West Coast night games — and thus decrease advertising revenue for the Tribune Co. on its un­der­seated, WGN — sued the following day. Conlon granted the injunction and a hearing on the commissioner's attempt to lift it was scheduled for Sept. 30 before the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In the interim, Vincent re­signed under pressure, partly because of the maneuvering by the Cubs. Vincent said Thursday he didn't have any comments on the withdrawal.

"This was clearly a prudent, and reasonable course of action in light of the fact that baseball recently empowered a commit­tee to examine the entire issue of divisional alignment," Selig said in his statement. "Furthermore, because the deadline for establishing the 1993 National League schedule have already passed, it is not possible to realign for the com­ing season. These factors have given baseball a welcome op­portunity to examine this diffi­cult question without undue haste and in the spirit of coop­ération, rather than forcing the issue in the courts."

Stanton Cook, chairman of the Trum ­be Co., did not return a telephone call to his office, but issued a statement saying "we are pleased that this matter has been resolved."

"We look forward to working with all the other clubs to ex­plore the issues of league alignment for the future," Cook said.

In addition to Giles, other members of the new committee are Cook, John Harrington of the Boston Red Sox, Eddie Ein­horn of the Chicago White Sox, and Richard Jacobs of the Cleveland Indians, Stanton Cook of the Atlanta Braves.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only as men's basketball coaches do minorities hold more than a handful of the top sports jobs at major NCAA schools, the General Accounting Office said in a report to be released Friday.

"Except for historically black schools, minorities rarely held athletic department positions at Division I schools," the watchdog agency said in a report to Congress. "Head coach of men's basketball was the position most frequently held by minorities."

The GAO which surveyed all 298 Division I schools, found only one traditionally non-black college that had a black head football coach in the 1990-91 school year.

And that was Stanford, the school that appointed Dennis Green, now coach of the Minnesota Vikings, as its head coach after the 1989-90 season.

Former Stanford head coach Dennis Green, now coach of the Minnesota Vikings, was the only black head football coach in the nation last season.

The study, which was scheduled to be released Friday as the NCAA football season begins, found that only one traditionally non-black school had minorities coaching their women's basketball teams.

But those are only a handful among the 256 non-black schools that responded to the survey showing that football coaches enjoyed the highest pay, averaging $114,759. Women's basketball coaches had the lowest, $44,996, compared with an average total pay package of $180,180 for men's basketball coaches.

However, when comparing the salaries of men and women who coach women's basketball, women came out ahead. Their average pay was $47,356 compared with $41,279 for male coaches of women's teams.

Men's basketball coach salaries were $131,410 compared with $114,759 for women's basketball coaches.

Almost one-fifth of the schools reported that the women's basketball coach was also the athletic director, a position that often pays more than the coaching salary.

Baker at Michigan and Cincinnati were the only schools that listed a non-white as the athletic director for both men's and women's sports programs. About 8% of men's and women's basketball coaches were minorities.

The study also found that 27% of the schools surveyed had minorities coaching their football teams.

It also found that minority athletic directors or as directors of the women's programs were head coaches of men's sports programs at more than 5% of the schools.

The study, which was released Friday at a meeting of the NCAA, found that the salaries of men and women who coach women's basketball, averaged $47,768 and $27,924 respectively. Pirates all but wrap up East

MONTREAL (AP) Pittsburgh virtually wrapped up its third successive NL East title as the Pirates gunned out its fourth consecutive complete game and Barry Bonds hit a three-run homer for the 9-3 victory.

The victory moved the Pirates seven games ahead of Montreal and reduced Pittsburgh’s magic number to three. It was Pittsburgh’s 92nd victory of the season, the third consecutive year in which the Pirates won 90 or more.

Drabek (15-10) allowed seven hits, striking out five in his fifth consecutive victory. He is 3-1 against the Expos this season.

Cezy Epsy and Jose Lind added two RBIs each as the Pirates banged out 14 hits off Bill Krueger (0-1) and four relievers. Bonds hit a game-clinching homer in the sixth.

Phillies 3, Cubs 2

Philadelphia—Rickey Horde’s pinch-hit RBI single following a 10th-inning brawl gave Philadelphia a victory over Chicago. Darren Dalton Doubton singled off Bob Scanlan (3-6) with two outs and went to second when Dave Hollins was hit in the shoulder by a first-pitch fastball. Hollins charged the mound, resulting in a bench-clearing brawl ensued, after which Hollins, Scanlan and Cubs’ Jason Kiekfoere were all ejected.

Carolinas 4, Mets 3

ST. LOUIS—Todd Zeile’s bases-loaded single capped a wild 14th inning as St. Louis rallied to beat the Mets.

It was the second time in the game that Hollins was hit in the shoulder by a first-pitch fastball. Hollins charged the mound, resulting in a bench-clearing brawl ensued, after which Hollins, Scanlan and Cubs’ Jason Kiekfoere were all ejected.

Winfield sets RBI mark

Baltimore (AP) — Dave Winfield became the oldest player to drive in 100 runs, collecting four RBIs with a homer and a two-run double for the Orioles.

The victory enabled Toronto to stay 3 1/2 games ahead of Milwaukee and open a six-game lead over the Mets. It was the Orioles’ third consecutive victory over the Mets.

Winfield had to come off a 17-0 defeat to edge Minnesota 21-20. Iowa coach Hayden Fry said, “I didn’t think any team could match (No. 1) Miami in speed, but Colorado comes close.”

Portland, Stanford, and Wisconsin loom ahead in the upcoming week, intensifying the importance of the Duck game to start the stretch on a positive note.

“The next four games are very important for us,” commented Petrucci as he prepared his team for yesterday’s practices. “We’ve had a good week of practice, and I think we’re ready.”

Today will be the first test, and a hard one for the Notre Dame defense. For the first time all season the Irish defenders will be forced to stop a three forward attack.

Petrucci has inserted Julie Veeke into the defensive line moving her from midfielders position to help combat the Blue Devil attack.

Sophomore Heidi Durham, the leader of that unit, after tallying seven goals, five assists, and nineteen points a year ago. Offensively the Irish will be facing a tough Duke defense, led by goalkeeper Gregan Young.

The junior started in fourteen games last season, averaging only 1.66 goals per game.

Notre Dame will attempt to use its speed to counter the Blue Devil defense. Sophomore Jeff Starwig, and freshmen Rosella Guerrero and Megan Goyne will give the Irish a boost of speed.

The Irish have four days off since their last contest, a 4-1 win over Dayton, something which may work to their advantage.

Everybody’s anxious to play action, but all four are on the road and are underdogs. No. 12 State, Illinois and Northwestern are idle this week. Iowa, after having a week off, travels to No. 10 Colorado; Purdue is at No. 6 Notre Dame; Michigan State is at No. 25, Purdue College and Minnesota has a night game at Pittsburgh.

Michigan coach Gary Moeller wasn’t sure earlier in the week that a quarterback. Elvis Grbac had an ankle injury and missed last week’s game. Todd Collins stepped in and threw two touchdown passes in a 35-3 victory over Oklahoma State.

The Iowa-Colorado match should be interesting. Colorado since we’ve had so many days off,” commented an excited Guerrero. “You know we’re good and that we can play with them.”

Kickoff time is scheduled for 7:30.

Saint Mary's volleyball destroys Hope College

By JENNIFER GUSTAFSON
Sports Writer

After a slow start, the Saint Mary's volleyball team was able to hold off the Flying Dutch of Hope College in three matches (15-2, 15-6, 15-9).

In the first game, the Flying Dutch jumped out to a 9-0 lead before the Belles settled down and began a comeback.

"They were a good serving team, but once we got use to it, we got into the game," noted Belles coach Julie Schroeder-Biek.

Once they got into the game, the Belles tied the score at twelve and never fell behind again. They jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the second game, and a 3-0 lead in the final game.

Mentally, the Belles became tougher as the game progressed. "In the beginning, it seemed like we knew we were better than this," said Schroeder-Biek. "We were beating ourselves.

Senior co-captain Laura Panowicz agreed. "Once we have control, we stay with it. We won't stop for anything. You can see it on the court as we come together more mentally and physically.

Defense has been the main focus at practice for the Belles this week. This extra work some points or we're going to lose.

Both teams are 2-1 and on top of the NFC West, where the Saints are defending champions. But they've gone about it in far different ways.

San Francisco's Steve Young has completed 439 yards per game, the NFC's top rushing offense with 154 yards and the conference's No. 1 passing game with 439 yards per game. The 49ers have the NFL's top offense with 439 yards per game, the NFC's top rushing offense with 154 yards and the conference's No. 1 passing game.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) -- You'll get plenty of opinions on what's wrong with the New Orleans Saints offense.

"We're not in sync right now," said offensive coordinator Carl Smith.

The unit isn't holding the ball long enough, said receiver Eric Martin. "It's about execution. We've just got to find a way to get it done."

Guard Steve Trapolino said a review of game films indicates the line is doing a good job, "but it's not quite clicking yet."

"We have not had any consistency," said coach Jim Mora. "Our passing game is poor. Our percentage of completions is bad."

No matter what the problem, a cure had better pop up before Sunday night's game in the Superdome against the San Francisco 49ers, Mora said.

"Held it not been for our ability to play defense, we'd be 0-3 right now," Mora said.

"Offensively, we're going to have to move the ball and score points or we're going to lose."

The Belles hope to use this game as a confidence booster for this weekend in their triangular meet against North Central College and Carroll College.

"This win was extremely important for us," Panowicz pointed out. "It should help our morale and physical play. It will make a tremendous difference in our triangular this weekend it will make us more prepared."

Some players have been improving and are coming through for us," noted Schroeder-Biek.

Returns highlight young season

(AP) The first three weekends of the NFL season have seen 26 touchdowns scored on returns, the highest total at this point since the league began keeping statistics in 1932.

The scoring returns included nine fumble recoveries, eight interceptions, six punt returns, one kickoff return, one blocked field goal and one blocked punt.

Not included in the total was a spectacular kickoff return Sunday by Houston rookie Corey Harris, whose 98-yard dash to the end zone was called an interception, six punt returns, one kickoff return, one blocked punt.

Since the league began keeping records of the NFL season have seen 26 spectacular kickoff returns, 11 field goals and one blocked punt.

All three teams doing whatever I felt like.

“I’ve never felt anything more exciting than that,” Harris said. “I was standing there in the end zone doing whatever I felt like. And then I turned around and realized what had happened.”

Even without getting the touchdown, the rookie from Vanderbilt still finished with three returns for 83 yards in the first half. Harris corrected an earlier problem with bubbling the football that cost him the job of returning punts for the Oilers (2-1), who play host to winless San Diego on Sunday. He blamed the problem on wearing old contact lenses.

“It’s easier to catch kickoffs because you know where the ball is going,” Harris said. “It goes up from one spot and so you can track it better. Punts are different. You have to make a lot more adjustments on the punt.”

Elsewhere in the NFL on Sunday, it’s Atlanta at Chicago, Buffalo at New England, Denver at Cleveland, Minnesota at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay at Detroit, Miami at Seattle, the New York Jets at the Los Angeles Rams, Pittsburgh at Green Bay and San Francisco at New Orleans. On Monday night, the Los Angeles Raiders are at Kansas City.

Dallas, Indianapolis, the New York Giants, Philadelphia, Phoenix and Washington have open dates.

Because of Harris’ depth-perception problems on punts, Pat Coleman is still Houston’s punt returner.

“I really think that the opportunity to return punts will come, but right now I’m returning kickoffs,” Harris said. “Coleman is doing a good job of that and although I didn’t have any long returns, he did a good job of protecting the ball. You’ve got to protect it first.”

The Houston-San Diego matchup pairs the NFL’s top pass attack at 315 yards per game against the Chargers’ No. 1 AFC pass defense, allowing 164.7 yards. The last time the two teams met was 1990 when Warren Moon threw for 335 yards and two TDs in a 17-7 victory.

San Diego has amassed over 300 yards for two consecutive games, but hasn’t won. The Chargers were outscored 16-0 in the fourth quarter Sunday against the Steelers in a 23-6 defeat.

Pittsburgh seeks a 4-0 start for the first time since 1979 when it makes its first visit to Green Bay since 1983. The game pairs rookie coaches Bill Cowher and Mike Holmgren, who got his first coaching victory Sunday on the Brett Favre’s last minute touchdown pass against Cincinnati.

Favre, who replaced Dan Majkowski because of an ankle injury, will get his first start. Terrell Buckley had a 58-yard punt return touchdown for the Packers against the Bengals.

The biggest game between division rivals Sunday matches San Francisco and New Orleans, both 2-1 atop the NFC West.

If the past is any indication, the game should be a close one. The last five games at the Superdome between the two teams have been decided by a total of 15 points.

The 49ers are still waiting for the return of Joe Montana, but without him they have the NFL’s top-ranked offense at 439 yards per game. Steve Young is No. 2 in the league with a quarterback rating of 123.2, trailing only the Eagles’ Randall Cunningham.

San Francisco is facing a Saints defense that has surrendered an NFC-low 28 points. New Orleans has yet to allow a passer to throw for 300 yards or a receiver to have 100 yards in receptions.

Things such as:

1. The large sums of money given to the university for television rights. Funds which benefit the entire student body, not just the athletic department. (Ya, right?)

2. The opportunity to sweat out or freeze off the effects of the alcohol consumed during pregame tailgates, so the enjoyment of the game will be un-tainted by foreign substances.

Home games will feature sober, financially-beneficial entertainment, while away games bring opportunities to improve one’s academic standing and the appearance of campus.

Personal enjoyment of Notre Dame Saturday should never decrease due to the presence of commercials. Take a lesson from the networks, who don’t let the football game compromise their enjoyment of making money.

Enjoy Notre Dame football, despite the delays

With most of the attention of this young football season centered on the tie with Michigan, the defense, and most recently the Irish Guard, one major complaint has yet to be voiced concerning Notre Dame football, the length of the games.

Notre Dame Saturday, as NBC likes to call it, and College Gameday, ABC's spiffily named for its slate of games, both featured the Irish this season, but only as a sidebar to the onslaught of commercials which filled their TV screens.

Both the Michigan and Michigan State contests lasted over four hours, with the actual play itself lasting only an hour (four fifteen-minute quarters).

It boggles the mind that a network must spend this amount of time on commercials for every minute of football.

I know that one man can't change television's greed, but at least I can use it to my advantage.

The next televised away game will pose an interesting challenge for me. During the time intervals occupied by commercials, I will attempt to do one or more of the following things:

1. Watch the entire Godfather trilogy
2. Complete the construction of the quad in front of the DeBartolo Building
3. Get my American Studies degree (with honors)
4. Knit sweaters for all 22 members of Irish safety John Lovington's family.
5. I am fairly certain that at least one of my tasks will be completed and I believe there exists a faint possibility that I could complete two or three. The point being that I will have used the commercial time wisely, not wasting a single moment.

When attending games, these opportunities don't exist. We cannot accomplish any feats, or even snicker at the checkerboard mumbling the poor NBC employee who stands and signals when the commercials end and play can begin.

The murmurs from the student section were civilized during the Michigan game. "This is so annoying," and "I hate that guy" were the most frequently heard comments aimed at NBC's TV timeout boy.

But I fear the escalation of the crowds frustration to the point where things may get out of hand. Who knows what will be said later in the year, say, at the Penn State game.

"I know where that guy lives," and "I bet I could reach him with a smaller-caliber rifle" may seem far-fetched but who knows what will enter the minds of Irish faithful when the temperature tips below zero, and they are waiting an extra three hours so Bud Light gets their way.

Hopefully fans will be tolerant, keeping in mind a number of beneficial things resulting from the commercials.

Sporting a new haircut and a newfound air of confidence about his team, Notre Dame women's soccer coach Chris Petrucelli couldn't be happier about his team's chances against 14th-ranked Duke tonight at Alumni Field.

After dropping off comments from his players concerning his newly trimmed scalp, Petrucelli talked about his team's chances with a confidence not seen this season.

"I think we have a good team, and we match up with them well," said Petrucelli. "We will be comfortable playing at home, and I think it will be an advantage for us."

A small trio of confidence has existed in Petrucelli's voice throughout the season, but nothing resembling the confidence the fifth-year coach has in his team going into today's game.

Perhaps Petrucelli knows something that opposing coaches don't about the 16th-ranked Irish. It could be the fact that his youthful squad is coming together as a unit, and prepared to step up its level of play.

In early season matchups with highly regarded Rutgers and N.C. State, Petrucelli talked about the importance of his young players to avoid intimidation, and to raise the level of their game to the college level.

Now the Irish coach feels his team could beat just about any team in the country.

That feeling will be put to the test in the upcoming week. The matchup with the Blue Devils is the first of four contests with ranked opponents.

Men ready for Indiana rematch

This one is for real.

When the Notre Dame men's soccer team meets Indiana in the Golden Boot Classic last month, the Hoosiers suffered an exhibition loss, but tonight's game in Bloomington will be different.

Neither team put too much emphasis on the exhibition, using it only as a chance to improve before the beginning of the regular season.

"We were only looking at our team and we weren't trying to be organized as far as scouting Indiana," Irish coach Mike Berticelli said of the exhibition. "It was too easy too early in the season and both teams used it only as a practice game."

The Hoosiers are an accomplished team and we weren't trying to be vulnerable against some tough defensive teams, so that's a slight advantage for us.

"It will be a very competitive game as it always is when we play Indiana," Berticelli explained. "But it's most important for us that we get out and play very hard."

The Irish will have to play hard to knock off the explosive Hoosiers.

However, Indiana has proven to be vulnerable against some tough defensive teams, suffering three shutouts in the young season.

20th-ranked women's volleyball achieves balance

On a 4-1 team ranked 20th in the nation, one would expect to find some standout, a superstar or two who usually carry the load. In this case, it seems that everyone stands out about equally, rendering the spotlight useless.

"Our balance is one of the things that makes us a strong team, and a difficult team to play against," said head coach Debbie Brown. "A team can't come in and say,We just need to stop this player or that player'. That makes it tough to defend."

Three teams will try to deal with that problem this weekend when the Irish travel to the William and Mary Invitational. On Saturday, Notre Dame will face North Carolina in a game to provide the best competition in the tournament. Georgetown, off to a slow start, and Maryland will be different.
