The Office of Drug and Alcohol Education is sponsoring several activities this week to observe National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

"We're trying to raise the awareness of students and faculty members of the Joint University, will lecture on alcohol misuse. To sign up, call the motor impairment caused by alcohol education program designed to simulate visual and cognitive impairments caused by alcohol misuse.

The "Dash" is a two-mile obstacle course. The events include:

Wednesday: "The Disorder," a one-act comedy play about sex, drugs and campus issues on Soviet history. It was co-sponsored by the faculty at Indiana University since 1958. His 125-page book, "The Truth About Sex, Drugs and Campus Issues," is the drug of choice for college students.

"Busted! A DUI Mocktrial" was held last night in the Law School. It was co-sponsored by the St. Joseph's County Prosecutors Department, Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD), and the county government groups, and the event was sponsored by the JACC.

The events for the rest of the week include:

The cooperation from students and the university has been "wonderful," she said. "We wouldn't be here if it weren't for their cooperation," Hill said.

Starring with Astin are Ned Beatty as Rudy's father, Charles Dutton as a grounds keeper at Notre Dame who befriends Rudy, and Lili Taylor as Rudy's fiancée.

Astin has starred in "East of Eden" and "Toy Soldiers," while Oscar and Emmy nominee Beatty starred in "Superman I" and II and, more recently, in "Hear My Song." Tony Award nominee Dutton stars in the TV series "Rosie" and recently starred in "Alien 3," and Taylor has starred in "Mystic Pizza" and "Say Anything." "Rudy" is the true story of how one young man, Rudy Ruettiger, struggles to pursue his lifelong goal: to wear the uniform, if only for one down, of the Notre Dame Football team. This is the first feature since "Knute Rockne, All American" in 1940 to be made with the full cooperation of Notre Dame. Ara Parseghian, legendary coach at Notre Dame when Ruettiger first came to South Bend in the early 1970s, is serving as a consultant to the film.

Producing the film for TriStar Pictures are Bob Fried and Cary Woods. Director Anspaugh and screenwriter Pizzo previously teamed up for the 1986 film "Hoosiers," which Fried also produced. Anspaugh is an executive producer on "Rudy." Production is expected to be released in the fall of 1993.

The film is the cream of the crop, "We're working with an amazing cast, our film makers aren't expecting any miracles, but an excellent movie out of this," said Hill. "We don't expect anything but an excellent movie out of this."

Oldest remains in U.S. found

CINCINNATI (AP) - A woman whose remains are believed to be at least 11,600 years old - oldest ever found in the Americas - likely lived in a culture of hunters who processed meat, a geologist who examined the bones said Monday.

No artifacts were found with the remains that could tell how the "Midland woman" and her society lived in what is now Texas, said Curtis McKinney, director of geologic research at the Center for American Archeology in Kankakee, Ill.

But his age estimate would place the woman in the time frame of the Clovis culture, which was known to have used spears to hunt game that included mammoths and mastodons, McKinney told the Geological Society of America's annual meeting.

The Clovis culture is known for finely worked spearheads that had a characteristic long, fluted shape with a groove in the middle. Evidence indicates the Clovis culture spread within 1,000 years over much of North America.

Archaeologists have found evidence that those people built campfires and apparently cured meat in pits, McKinney said. They also had small settlements.

Scientists believe several other North American archaeological sites may be up to 30,000 years old, but none yielded skeletal remains. The oldest modern human skeletal remains are estimated to be 35,000 years old and have been discovered in western Europe and the Middle East.

McKinney calculated the age of the woman, whose bones were found in 1953 near Midland, Texas, using a technique called alpha spectrometry, which measures the ratio of uranium-234 and thorium-230 in the bones.

He said his age estimate would make the bones the oldest human skeletal remains ever found in the Americas.

"There are a number dated between 10,000 and 11,000 years old, but this is the only one over 11,000 years," he said.

Planned Parenthood files suit against groups

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Planned Parenthood chapter filed suit Monday against four groups it says operate bogus abortion clinics as a ruse to talk women out of terminating their pregnancies.

The lawsuit, filed in San Diego Superior Court, accuses the groups of false advertising and other unlawful business practices. It also seeks unspecified monetary damages for a woman who said she visited one of the clinics in September after finding it listed in a telephone directory.

“This is really a consumer fraud issue,” said Mark Salo, executive director of Planned Parenthood of San Diego and Riverside counties, which brought the lawsuit.

He said the groups have violated women’s privacy and tried to coerce them into choosing abortion over adoption. At least one person was given an improper medical diagnosis, Salo said.

The lawsuit names the Center for Unplanned Pregnancy, San Diego Pregnancy Services Inc., Escondido Pregnancy Services Inc., and Pro-Life Pregnancy Counseling and Educational League of San Diego County, which is also known as the Poway Pregnancy Counseling Center.

Officials of the Center For Unplanned Pregnancy and Escondido Pregnancy Services Inc. declined comment. Telephone messages left at San Diego Pregnancy Services Inc. and the Poway Pregnancy Counseling Center were not returned.

The lawsuit seeks to stop the centers’ alleged false advertising and other unlawful business practices.

Shuttle astronauts take photographs

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts fired up a pair of metal-melting furnaces and baked tiny strips of gold, silver and lead Monday after solving a cooling problem halfway through its 10-day flight.

"Every mission that we fly into space takes us one step closer to being able to operate in space and live and work here full time," astronaut Charles Veach said during a broadcast interview.

Veach defended the work being done aboard Columbia. Critics have argued a laser-reflecting satellite dispatched by the astronauts Friday could have been launched from an unmanned rocket and that the subsequent shuttle research is not worth the risk to humans or the nearly half-billion-dollar cost.

"It's hard to assign a dollar value to any one mission or a dollar return to any one event that takes place in space," Veach said. "But the cumulative effect of everything we're doing here is revolutionizing human life, and that's that simple."

As of midday Monday, the astronauts had melted 10 metal samples in two small middeck furnaces capable of being heated to 1,380 degrees Fahrenheit. After being baked, the specimens were cooled so they could solidify as quickly as possible.

Each of the 35 samples — in the form of 1 1/2-long wires — consists of two metals, such as gold and lead or silver and lead. Canadian researchers want to see how well various metals diffuse in weightlessness. Such knowledge could help metalurgists create better alloys on Earth, said Bruce Aikenhead, program manager for the Canadian Space Agency.

Aikenhead said there should be enough time before the flight ends Sunday to process all 35 samples. The experiment began late because of the failure of a fan needed to cool the furnaces.

Veach and Canadian astronaut Steven MacLean solved the cooling problem by hooking a vent hose from the orbiter airlock to the furnaces, bypassing the fan.

The experiments beam down videotaped images of a clear Texas coastline and sparkling, blue pools in the Atlantic Ocean off south Florida. Pilot Michael Baker said there seemed to be less smoke and haze over South America's Amazon basin than he saw during his first space flight a year ago.

On the lighter side, the astronauts received a special greeting from a compatriot of sorts.

Heart ailment sufferers need information

CHICAGO (AP) — More than a million Americans with the same heart ailment that has afflicted President Bush and Mother Teresa should learn more about it so they can get treatment if warranted, Dr. Daniel Lannon, executive director of the National Stroke Association.

Atrial fibrillation occurs when the heart vibrate instead of pump vigorously. That allows blood to stagnate and clot. If the clots break off and travel to the brain, they can clog vessels and cause a stroke.

Many doctors consider blood-thinning drugs too risky for most patients, but a review of five major clinical studies found that the benefits far outweigh the risks at low doses for most older patients, the doctors said.

Their statement is published in the October issue of the journal Chest.

More than a million Americans, most of them elderly, have atrial fibrillation, which increases the risk of stroke sixfold, said James Lannon, executive director of the National Stroke Association.

Stroke is the country's third leading cause of death and the primary cause of adult disablement, costing $15.6 billion to $25 billion annually, he said.

Atrial fibrillation afflicts 5 percent of people over age 60 and as many as 16 percent of people over age 70, said Daniel Perry, executive director of the Alliance for Aging Research.

MAMI (API) — A man who allegedly lied to get a new mobile home from disaster relief officials was arrested Monday after the renter he evicted reported him to authorities.

Vicentino Soto, 62, was charged with filing a fraudulent application for federal disaster help. He was released on $10,000 bond pending a hearing Nov. 5.

Soto was the second person arrested on that charge since Hurricane Andrew battered south Florida on Aug. 24, authorities said.

According to Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman Marvin Davis, Soto owned a mobile home in Homestead, Fla., that he rented out until Hurricane Andrew damaged it.

"He evicted the renter and claimed the damaged mobile home was his primary residence" so he would qualify — falsely — for a new FEMA mobile home, Davis said.

"Then the evicted renter drove by and saw the new mobile home, and he brought it to our attention," he said.

Court documents show that Soto and his wife live in Aguadilla, Puerto Rico.

Quebec vote may end reform

TORONTO (AP) — Canadians voted Monday on constitutional reforms designed to appease cultural and regional grievances, but citizens in a single province could torpedo the package and the polls pointed to trouble in Quebec.

The package originally was put together in an effort to dampen secessionist sentiment in French-speaking Quebec by granting that province special status and rights as a distinct culture. But it grew to include changes demanded by the less populous provinces and by Canada's aboriginal peoples.

Many Canadians complained about the complexity of the long reform document signed by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and premiers of the 10 provinces on Aug. 28.

"It's kind of a confusing vote because I think there are a lot of people who don't know exactly what they're going to do," said Derek Harrest, who stood in the rain waiting to vote at a polling station in Newfoundland. "I'm still not sure what I'm going to do."

The referendum was really a non-binding plebiscite. The key parts of the agreement signed at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, recognize Quebec as a "distinct society" with the right to protect its French language and culture. It would guarantee Quebec a fourth of the seats in the House of Commons and a third of the Supreme Court's nine seats permanently.

At the demand of other provinces, the reforms would be changed by the provinces to the vote for independence. That would be done down the road, however, as the separatist Parti Quebecois is still in opposition and provincial elections are not due until 1994.

Quebec separatists are hoping to use a "No" vote in the province to rekindle a campaign for independence. That would be more than just a referendum, however, as the separatist Parti Quebecois is still in opposition and provincial elections are not due until 1994.

Tourists in Egypt targets of militants

ASSUIT, Egypt (AP) — For the first time, foreign tourists are finding themselves targets in the escalating battle between Egypt's secular government and Muslim militants who want to create an Islamic state.

The fundamentalists' attacks on tourists are not widespread, and have not occurred in major tourist areas. But even so, officials are worried.

Tourism this year became Egypt's No. 1 earner of foreign exchange, contributing $3 billion to the country's economy. So doing damage to the tourist trade could be a potent weapon for fundamentalism.

"The attacks on tourists symbolize attacks against the entire system and against the economy," said No'oman el-Dabb, a law student who described himself as a moderate but appeared to have militant sympathizers.

In addition, a distaste for foreigners' behavior could play a role.

"Tourists are immoral. They drink alcohol. Their men and women mix freely. We are against all that," said Sheikh Mahmoud, a fundamentalist preacher and a member of the Islamic Group — Al-Gama'a el-Islamiya — a loose national organization of militants.

"If they come here just to visit the historic spots, that's fine," said Sheikh Mahmoud, interviewed at his mosque near Assiut, 200 miles south of Cairo, and a militant stronghold. "But they must behave themselves."

Islamic Group members and sympathizers are believed to number about 150,000 to 200,000. About 10,000 of them are believed to engage in violence.

During the summer, extremist violence and police reaction to it left more than 70 militants, police and Coptic Christians dead.
Rabin: Israeli attacks will not derail talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Monday accused Syria of aborting Muslim guerrillas who killed five Israeli soldiers with a bomb in southern Lebanon, but he pledged to go on negotiating peace with the Arabs.

Rabin said Syria was allowing Iranian weapons to reach fundamentalist Muslim guerrillas via Damascus and letting them operate in areas of Lebanon under Syrian military control.

He said it was "greatly puzzling" that Syria could "sit with us at negotiations, and on the other hand permit such activities." Israeli warplanes, helicopter gunships and artillery pounded targets in southern Lebanon during the day and into the night in retaliation for the bomb attack Sunday in an Israeli-occupied buffer zone. It was the deadliest attack against Israel in two years.

Israel's military command said its forces hit suspected guerrilla bases of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, which is trying to force Israeli forces from Lebanon and also wants to wreak the Middle East peace talks.

Security sources in Lebanon said targets in dozens of villages were hit. Lebanese police said 27 people, including four kidnapped at least one civilian and wounded five.

Rabin made his comments during a briefings of parliamentaries before delivering a policy statement to Parliament coinciding with the resumption of peace talks in Washington.

Earlier, some opposition lawmakers demanded that Isreali leaders inform the public on calling it into what they say is an exciting new phenomenon — but probably not fusion.

At the five-day conference in Nagoya, western Japan, and a major American utility group say they will spend millions for research on cold fusion wound up on Monday.

Still, the Japanese government and a major American electricity utility group say they will spend millions for research into what they say is an exciting new phenomenon — but probably not fusion.

As the five-day conference in Nagoya, western Japan, and a follow-up session in Tokyo on Monday, the 300 scientists discussed claims by dozens of researchers that they had generated excess heat in experiments in which special electrodes were used to run electric currents through water containing "heavy" hydrogen.

While some are claiming the boards are caused by nuclear fusion — a notion flatly dismissed by most mainstream scientists others say the heat must be coming from some other process.

Japan's trade ministry, which is planning to spend up to $25 million on such research over the next four years, has settled on calling it "new hydrogen energy."

Michael McKubre, whose research at SRI in Palo Alto, Calif., is funded by the Electric Power Research Institute, is equally cautious about naming the cause of the heat he is observing. EPRI has spent $4 million on McKubre's work and plans another $8 million.

Cold fusion's existence still unknown

TOKYO (AP) — Believers and skeptics agreed at an international conference on cold fusion wound up on Monday.

Still, the Japanese government and a major American utility group say they will spend millions for research into what they say is an exciting new phenomenon — but probably not fusion.

Cease fire brings little relief to struggling Mozambique

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syria's delegate to the Middle East peace talks accused Israel on Monday of negotiating in bad faith, but his Israeli counterpart said three hours of discussions produced progress that was not a joint statement.

After a three-day recess, the talks resumed in an atmosphere charged by the deaths of five Israeli soldiers in southern Lebanon and another attack that killed one soldier in the occupied West Bank.

"Despite the hardships, despite the deeds of murder and terrorism," the government "is determined to make a serious effort to reach peace with Arab states and Palestinians living in the occupied territories," Rabin said.

Combing on top of three other killings of Israelis the past two weeks, Sunday's attacks signaled to Israelis that they are no less vulnerable than before the June 23 election that brought Rabin and his moderates to power.

On Monday, as Rabin was in Parliament appealing to the Palestinians to disavow violence, a firebomb was thrown at an Israeli farmer on the border between Israel and the West Bank, the army said. Arabs took him to a hospital suffering from burns and smoke inhalation, the army said.

The new cease-fire bears a close resemblance to the country's vicious 16-year war, with the government and rebels still exchanging bullets and accusations, leaving millions of desperate civilians caught in the crossfire.

From barefoot peasants in the drought-stricken countryside to diplomats in the white-washed villas of tropical Maputo, people are skeptical of peace talks in Washington. The 4 truce will end the war between the leftist government and right-wing rebels that claimed up to 1 million lives.

"The fighting seems to be going very well," said Aldo Ajello, the recently arrived United Nations special representative, said with a wry smile when asked about peace prospects. "We clearly need to start working on the peace process immediately."

He organized a meeting Monday between government and rebel leaders in Maputo to set up monitoring groups called for in the cease-fire. Ajello's mediation carries added urgency as southern Africa suffers its worst drought this century. More than 3 million Mozambicans are totally dependent on food aid in a humanitarian crisis probably the most serious in the world after Somalia.

Israel says peace talks progressing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syria's delegate to the Middle East peace talks accused Israel on Monday of negotiating in bad faith, but his Israeli counterpart said three hours of discussions produced progress that was not a joint statement.

He sought to dismiss the differing interpretations of the meeting with a joke: "We were not in the same movie."

Arriving for the talks Monday, Alasf said he was concerned about a statement by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin that Israel does not plan to pull back fully from the Golan Heights.

"If Israel is not considering withdrawal, that means in other words that Israel is not considering peace," Allaf said. "Peace without withdrawal is impossible, and it is a precondition for peace really for Israeli forces (to) withdraw from all occupied territories."

From barefoot peasants in the drought-stricken countryside to diplomats in the white-washed villas of tropical Maputo, people are skeptical of peace talks in Washington. The 4 truce will end the war between the leftist government and right-wing rebels that claimed up to 1 million lives.

"The fighting seems to be going very well," said Aldo Ajello, the recently arrived United Nations special representative, said with a wry smile when asked about peace prospects. "We clearly need to start working on the peace process immediately."

Ajello's mediation carries added urgency as southern Africa suffers its worst drought this century. More than 3 million Mozambicans are totally dependent on food aid in a humanitarian crisis probably the most serious in the world after Somalia.

"And what if peace does not take place?" asked one senior official. "There will be no more wars, but there will be no peace."

He said Israel either does not want progress at this time or the Israeli delegation has been instructed not to move forward. "And not only was there no progress, there might be some regression," Allaf said.

But Israeli delegate Itamar Rabinovich differed sharply in his account of the meeting, expressing surprise on learning of Alasf's remarks.

"We agreed on some points, we kept reservations on others," Rabinovich said. "And certainly we didn't have a sense of regression, but a sense of working seriously towards a joint statement."
Perot defends his allegations

DALLAS (AP) - Ross Perot Monday angrily defended his accounts of alleged Republican dirty tricks aimed at sabotaging his presidential campaign but said anew he had no proof. Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called Perot "paranoid . . . a crazy man."

"I am sick and tired of you all questioning my integrity without a basis for it," Perot told reporters at an extraordinary session at his campaign headquarters in Dallas.

Perot strode in to a morning briefing his aides were conducting to deliver an angry statement denouncing his conduct. He refused repeated requests to identify the sources he said had informed him of the alleged GOP plot.

Perot said he had become convinced there was a smear campaign when President Bush canceled plans to meet with him after Perot insisted the meeting include a discussion of "this plan to smear my daughter and disrupt her wedding."

Perot said he now accepts Bush campaign denials of his allegations that Republicans planned to sabotage his campaign by smearmg his daughter and wiretapping his office. "I accept their word," he said. "I accept their denial."

Perot also conceded: "I could not prove that this occurred."

Perot also accused ABC of having a "death wish to inaccurately report a story" for airing a report questioning his charge that a bit team once infiltrated his estate but was chased off by a guard dog and his security forces.

"It did happen," Perot insisted. He said a security guard witnessed the incursion, which allegedly occurred 20 years ago, but refused to identify the guard. "I don't have to prove anything to you people," he said. "I said the dog can talk. I'm not sure we can ever satisfy you."

Perot said reporters would know his story was true "when you look at the piece of that guy that the dog had in his mouth."

Perot complained the episode had shifted attention away from the issues in the final day of the campaign, although he raised the story himself Sunday on the campaign trail.

He was sharply critical of both his Republican and Democratic opponents, at one point saying that Democrat Bill Clinton was "moving toward socialism" before backtrackmg to explain that he meant the Democrats wanted more and more government. He said that the Republican policy of trickle-down economies had not succeeded.

Perot's extraordinary charges and today's extraordinary news conference - come after a week in which he surged in polls although remaining a distant third. His resurgence was attributed to his strong performances in the three presidential debates and spending $30 million on his campaign in a recent six-week period.

Pollsters in both parties said Perot's support appeared to hit a plateau late last week, and many predicted his latest unsubstantiated allegations would hurt his candidacy. They also raised new questions about Perot's penchant for heavy secrecy and his occasional use of private detectives to investigate employees and even campaign volunteers.

Bush lists his priorities if he wins reelection

DENVER (AP) - President Bush, moving beyond sharp attacks on Bill Clinton's character and trustworthiness, promised Monday that if his top priorities in a second term would be creating jobs, increasing exports and providing health care to all Americans.

"The best time to move is when you're reelected - no more elections ahead, no worry about the future politics. Just get the people's business done and do it fast," said Bush, who watched Congress ignore his request to act within 100 days on an economic renewal plan.

With polls showing the race tightening, Bush switched from negative attacks on Clinton to a more high-minded look at the next four years. He is collected.

"His speech, to a convention of hardware dealers, was billed as the most definitive answer yet to a persistent question about Bush: Where does he 'wish to take America; how would a second term differ from the first? It's a question frequently framed as 'the vision thing.' His comments eight days before the election begged the question of why Bush had waited so long to respond.

"My agenda can break this gridlock without breaking the bank. It is ambitious but it is doable," by contrast, he said Clinton's plan "simply does not add up. He's promised too much. And his new congressional friends want to raise the ante even higher."

"The result will be much higher spending and taxes and a much bigger deficit or continued gridlock in Washing- ton."

Bush campaigned across Colorado, New Mexico and Iowa in a drive to pull support for his candidacy together. The three states have 20 of the 270 electoral votes needed and win. Bush won them in 1988 but trails now. The president said there are more than a dozen parts to his second term agenda but "three really dwarf all others. First, America really needs jobs."

He said he would push for a capital gains tax cut and even lower taxes. Second, Bush said he would seek new markets for American exports by pushing Congress to ratify the new trade agreement with Canada and Mexico.

"This is the bottom line: More trade creates more American high-paying jobs," he said.

The third priority was his health care program. "The need for action is urgent," Bush said.

Bush has proposed a voucher system to help lower-income Americans purchase health insurance. He would cap damages in malpractice suits and offer incentives for enrollment in low-cost plans.
Clinton performs well on shopping test

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — From bread to blue jeans, Bill Clinton praised Debbie Gilbert’s shopping list on Monday and got a passing grade from the working mother who said the nation’s leader must “be in touch with what the average American family has to go through.”

“Gasoline is about $1.20 depending on what kind of gasoline it is. Hamburger meat’s a little over $1. A gallon of milk’s $1.02. A loaf of bread’s about $1 now,” Clinton said after he was asked what he thought those items cost.

The Arkansas governor said he knows some doctors who “still do visits for the poor for nothing.” He added when some in his audience reacted skeptically.

Blue jeans, he said in an appearance on CNN’s “This Morning” that was televised live, “run anywhere from $15 to $50 depending on what kind you get.”

It was a devastatingly simple question of the type that can easily trip up anyone who has spent the past year running for office. Gilbert said the Democratic presidential nominee had done a “pretty good” job of answering her question on the cost of everyday consumer items.

“I don’t believe that politicians know what it’s like to be in the shoes of the average American family,” said Gilbert, one of several participants in a question-and-answer session with Clinton.

Clinton agreed that isolation is a danger for politicians. “Every now and then we all go out to the grocery store and talk to people and walk up and down the aisles,” he told the mother of two who works part-time at a local hospital.

Clinton’s pop quiz on shopping came at the beginning of his eighth bus tour, a previously unknown type of campaigning that he and running-mate Al Gore have been doing...I do, but not many,” he added when asked in his audience reaction skeptically.

I might wonder whether that’s the kind of legislation that can easilytrip up anyone who has spent the past year running for office. Gilbert said the Democratic presidential nominee had done a pretty good job of answering her question on the cost of everyday consumer items.

EVERYONE IS WELCOME TO ATTEND!
T-Bill rates steadily increasing

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to the highest levels this year.

The Treasury Department sold $11.88 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 2.97 percent, up from 2.94 percent last week. The rates were the highest since Aug. 31 when three-month bills sold for 2.17 percent and stood after the government's bailout program.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills rose to 3.18 percent from 3.13 percent the previous week.

Ryan predicts record S&L profits

WASHINGTON — The top regulator of the nation's savings and loan institutions predicted on Monday that the thrift industry would experience record profits this year.

Timothy Ryan, director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, said about 3,000 savings and loans with assets of about $900 billion remain in business three years after the beginning of the government's bailout program. The thrift industry reported that net income for the July-September period, previously that net income for the first half of 1992 was more than triple the $855 million earned during the first half of 1991.

Cost control fuels media profit

NEW YORK — Many major publicly-held newspaper publishers and broadcasters reported increased profits in the third quarter, fueled partly by cost controls.

A number of companies, however, reported that expenses had risen more than anticipated. Dow Jones & Co., Knight-Ridder Inc., Pulitzer Publishing Co. and McGraw-Hill reported increased profits, while looking to double-digit gains for the July-September period, that included the亚运会.

Lottery nets third best in sales

INDIANAPOLIS — The Hoosier Lottery, buoyed by large jackpots and improved sales in the past three weeks, set a record for its second best sales figures in two years and third best in history this month.

The state Lottery Executive Director Jean Blackwell said that through Thursday the lottery had sold $74 million in jackpots, almost 50 percent more than the previous record set last September in existence. That would put this month third on the all-time sales list behind only October 1989, the lottery's first month, when sales reached $64.9 million and December 1989, when sales totaled $61.3 million.

American Express cuts 4,800 jobs

NEW YORK — American Express Co. said it will eliminate 4,800 jobs at its card and travel division as part of a major restructuring that resulted in a $342 million third-quarter charge against earnings. The restructuring at the 55-year-old company, which is expected to cost $393 million in severance-pay reserves, is the second large job reduction in two years. American Express fired Chiat-Day-Mojo less than a year after the agency was given the account. The agency is expected to make advertising for its card payment systems.

Continental losing on fare cuts

HOUSTON — Continental Airlines said it would cut fares to Europe by an average 35 percent for travel this winter, but competitors did not immediately match the discount. The fare cut Monday comes as the airline industry was trying to push fares higher. The industry has increased fares about $10 to $30 twice in recent months, leading many to believe that widespread fare cutting had ended.

Luxembourg (AP) — France on Monday won backing from Germany to demand further American concessions over farm subsidy cuts, making it unlikely the dispute will be settled before the U.S. presidential election.

At the same time, Britain and the top farm negotiator for the European Community were questioning about giving ground to the United States over a global trade accord.

"I'm still hopeful," said French Farm Minister Jean-Pierre Soulissi. His colleague, Ignazio La Russa, Italian agriculture minister, said France has opposed the3.22 percent, up from 3.20. In the second quarter of 1992, after the government's bailout program, the thrift office reported that net income for the July-September period, previously that net income for the first half of 1992 was more than triple the $855 million earned during the first half of 1991.

Failing banks not a threat according to regulators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plenty of trouble remains in danger of failure, but no banking crisis threatens to explode just after the elections, senior regulators said Monday.

"A significant number of banks remain in danger of failure, but their assets are substantial. However, there should be no expectation of a banking panic," Fed Chairman Andrew Hove said in a rare post-adjournment hearing of the Senate Banking Committee.

Andrew Hove, acting chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., said 106 to 120 banks with $37 billion in assets will fail this year and an additional 100 to 125 banks with $76 billion in assets will fail in 1993. But the $16 billion in reserves established as of the end of the third quarter is a year in deposit insurance premium and a $30 billion line of credit is available to banks that can be used to pay for losses, he said.

Hove said it was "simply not the case that the Treasury is not holding back on declaring failures before the election.

The wide gap between the interest rates on deposits and on loans produced a record $15.7 billion in bank profits during the first half of this year. These profits have postponed or avoided many of the failures that the FDIC had predicted for this year, he said.

New regulatory standards taking effect Dec. 19 will not cause a significant increase in failures although they might hasten the closing dates for some banks, he said.

The chairman of the committee, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., was the only member to attend the session, called just eight days before the election. He said he was scheduled it because of the sharp disagreement among reputable observers of the banking system.

"Some say the industry is on the brink of healing itself. Some say it's on the brink of a major crisis," he said.

But the ranking Republican on the panel, Sen. Jake Garn of Utah, and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady of the Commerce Department appeared to be negotiations for politicalizing the issue.

"Perhaps the senator finds it politically advantageous to jump on this bandwagon of the fearmongers and doomsayers," Brandy said.

Garn said, "It is a mistake to frighten the public about the condition of the banking system for political advantage."
Don’t cloud election year with non-issues

Dear Editor:

I am never more offended when an article makes individual claims that I am sinning against God. My favorite Lady was voting for Governor Clinton.

I have been called a baby-killer, and have seen a book from Operation Rescue that calls for me to repent or be struck down by God.

What upsets me most is that here at one of the finest institutions in the country, with its excellent philosophy department, so many students refuse an honest debate on this subject and instead fall into demagoguery.

Why must one side portray the other as being “radical”? When one thinks of radical, one thinks of a position that only a few espouse.

When one thinks of a position that only a few have, one naturally does not prove a belief correct (we use “correct” in the same way to our secretary of defense who avoided the draft in a similar way).

Granted, Governor Clinton may not have been completely open about all of the details pertaining to the subject, but I believe it is wrong to judge someone for avoiding a war he, along with most of the country, believed was morally wrong.

One who was not facing the hellish situation of Vietnam with the true understanding of the decisions of those who were. The Vietnam draft issue is really only being used because Republicans must run away from the record of the worst economic performance since the Great Depression.

If you believe that abortion is the main issue, most Americans disagree with you, ranking it well low on their list.

For these Americans voting for Clinton, many of whom are anti-choice, it is not a sin to be voting for the man whose plans give them hope that America will be great again.

Let’s not cloud their vision with non-issues or look down upon them self-righteously as sinners for believing in a place called Hope again.

America is ‘looking forward’

Dear Editor:

As you prepare for your future, many of you are worried about whether there will be jobs for you when you graduate - jobs in which you can apply all you’ve learned, and through which you can realize the American dream.

I know the feeling. Shortly after I was graduated from college, Barbara and I moved to Texas with our young family to begin a life of our own. I started a business, raised a family, and eventually began my career in politics.

I want all of you to have the opportunity to graduate from college, repay your student loans, begin your careers, and start families of your own.

My Agenda for American Renewal will do just that by reinvigorating America’s economy and creating jobs and opportunities for all Americans while protecting our environment.

Revitalizing America’s economy starts with individuals, families, and communities.

It requires lower taxes on individuals and businesses, enhancing competition, and cutting regulations.

It includes health care for all Americans, child care, job training, housing opportunities, a competitive school system based on community involvement, and choice American families.

My Agenda prepares America’s youth for the 21st century by promoting national academic standards so schools like Notre Dame have a strong student population from which to draw.

For you college students, my administration calls for the largest-ever one-year increase in student Pell Grants, and a 50 percent increase in the amounts of individual Pell Grant awards.

In addition, I want to raise the loan limit on guaranteed student loans and make the interest on student loans deductible for federal income tax purposes.

My Agenda calls for continued substantial funding for responsible environmental protection.

The United States has the toughest environmental laws on earth, and it was the Bush Administration that proposed and negotiated the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, which I signed as the most protective and market-oriented clean air laws in the world.

My administration also established a moratorium on offshore oil and natural gas drilling; accelerated the phase-out of ozone-harming substances; added more than 1.5 million acres to America’s national parks, wildlife refuges, and other public lands; tripled the rate of toxic waste site cleanups since 1989, and collected more fines and penalties and secured more prison sentences for environmental crimes in the last three years than in the previous 20 years combined.

I call upon the youth of today to take up the entrepreneurial challenge and join me in making America the economic, export, education and environmental leader of the 21st century.

Let’s win the peace by looking forward, not inward.

My Agenda for American Renewal empowers all Americans to make their own choices and better their lives. No one will be left behind for want of opportunity.

Good luck to you, and may you achieve your goals in life.

Television needs a dose of biblical realism

Edward J. Murphy
Guest Columnist

We are dealing with unnatural acts, perversion, and grizzly violations of the law of God.

"We must begin," David Chilton writes in his book Power in the Blood, "with a rather basic and obvious point." He continues:

- God designed the vagina to be penetrated by a penis.
- The vaginal walls can stretch, and they are naturally lubricated during intercourse.
- The anus and rectum, in contrast, were not designed for sexual activity. They were created to excrete feces, period.
- The rectum is neither elastic nor lubricated; consequently, anal intercourse routinely tears the lining of the rectum and causes the anus to split and create bleeding fissures.
- Some tears and fissures become channels for HIV (AIDS) viruses to enter into the bloodstream.

Again, we need a dose of biblical realism. In his letter to the Romans, St. Paul warned of the wrath that comes from God's "against the irreligious and perverters of the truth: to them God's wrath is revealed in the truth of God's just decree that all who do such things deserve death; yet they are not only do them but approve of them in others."

Let the debate continue, but only with all the cards on the table.

Examination of Clinton's past helps us decide for future

Dear Editor:

The United States does not need nor can it tolerate another sort of leader who cannot be trusted. This time it is Bill Clinton, and the country is America. Even the cursory examination of Bill Clinton's records reveals a tapestry of glaring half-truths and lies. In fact, the record of a man who lost his wallet to a thief is the saga-length episode surrounding what he broke any of the drug laws of the United States does not erase his personal life.

For starters, Clinton tries to claim the American people that he intends to cut spending in certain areas. Upon closer examination, however, his assertions ring hollow.

- Clinton's "alternative Uranium Tax."
- Some examples are plentiful: his economic plan is as fraught with unacceptable, irrelevant measures that make them vealish.
- Clinton's "Putting America First," deserves attention all the more, because it is based upon the necessity of responsible stewardship of this country's economy. Bill Clinton's economic plan is as fraught with fancy footwork and elusive behavior as his personal life.

The perfidy of the economic plan of the Clinton Administration is evident from the outset. For instance, Clinton uses semantics in an attempt to throw the readers of his plan off the tax-and-spend reform. "Medicare," rather than admitting that it is needed spending that is at the heart of his economic plan.

By using the word "silent," Clinton tries to lead voters into believing there will be a "nose-diving return on their tax dollars.

- However, spending without reform, such as the school children for parents and students, simply perpetuates the system of wasteful spending that has characterized Congress for years.

There is over 200 billion dollars of new spending proposed in the plan itself, and Clinton fails to include the cost of his national health-care plan, which will raise the total spending level to 34% of the GNP. The Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill has played a game of partisan politics with President Clinton's sound economic proposals.

However, in this game the American voters will pick the President, but the working men and women of America who should have benefited long ago from these initiatives with more jobs and greater economic security.

Undeniably, one of the foremost issues in this year's presidential campaign is the economy, and I believe that Bill Clinton has played a game of "smoke and mirror" economics, with several stolen and appealing Republican proposals. However, on Nov. 3 the American people may discover which candidate's form of "change" they will live with for the next four years, and it is possible that the American voters will reject this record and think about the country's needs.

Honest person appreciated by man who lost his wallet

Dear Editor:

The nicest thing happened to me a few days ago. Last Friday I could not find my wallet. After searching through my car and apartment, and coming up with nothing, I was led to believe I had lost it somewhere on campus.

This did not exactly thrill me, since I had a good amount of cash, my credit card, and all of my identification enclosed. I received a call from the DeBartolo building manager on Sunday informing me that my wallet had been turned in to him.

When I picked my wallet up on Monday, I was more than gratified; it was not only there, but everything, including the cash, was still in the wallet. The person who found it even left his or her name.

I take this opportunity to thank the honest person and let them know how much I appreciate this. I can only say that I hope that I can do the same for someone else someday. Thanks again.

ND alum hits national scene with new CD, 'Journey of a Dreamer'

By LYNNE BRAGG

Accent Writer

From a standing ovation at the first annual Keenan Review to the national release of his first CD, Notre Dame alum Dennis Klee said he has entered the stage in his life in which he has always wanted to be a top performing artist.

His new CD, titled 'Journey of a Dreamer' will be released in early November. It contains the overture of songs which capture the last ten years of Klee's life.

"These are a combination of songs I have always loved to sing," said Klee. "They all freeze a moment in time for me, and each of the songs is a reflection of that moment." He played his own vocals. During his junior year Keenan Review performance, he sang 'Dreaming Still,' which is currently featured on the 'Journey of a Dreamer' CD. "It just goes to show how the songs on this CD have been such a part of my life.

Dennis Klee, a Notre Dame graduate, put his musical instrument to work in 'Journey of a Dreamer,' his premiere CD.

Klee said he has been in music his whole life, beginning at the age of five when he started his ten years of classical piano training. He also taught himself to play the guitar by mimicking chord progressions of his favorite songs. He modeled himself after the music of the Beatles as well as Simon and Garfunkel and Stevens because their music was melodically oriented and told a story.

Klee said that during his sophomore year in high school, he joined a rock band and by the end of his senior year the band was one of the biggest rock bands in Buffalo, New York, playing local clubs and CTO dances. Although there were recording prospects for the band, Klee left New York to go to school at Notre Dame.

While at Notre Dame, Klee played at the coffeehouse, then known as "The Nazi." He played his own guitar and sang his own vocals. During his junior year at Notre Dame, he and his brother Doug performed at the first annual Keenan Review.

"My brother and I were the first people in the Keenan Review to get a standing ovation in Washington Hall," said Klee. "I'll never forget it."

During his senior year Keenan Review performance, he sang 'Dreaming Still,' which is currently featured on the 'Journey of a Dreamer' CD. "It just goes to show how the songs on this CD have been such a part of my life.

Klee said he never took a music class at Notre Dame. "It is hard to be trained by other people in music because each person has their own certain style," he said. "The students get confined to that style and then there is no originality.

After graduating with a degree in American Studies, Klee went on to work as a restaurant manager. He said he stayed in the business for a while because of the promotions and money, but sooner or later, he knew he had to get back into the music business before he lost all hope of his dream to be a singer. This stage in his life became the inspiration for the song, 'Working World Song.'

After the breakup of his first band in 1990, Klee said he decided that he wanted to perform alone. When he was singing with a band, he felt the music was never really his own. He played the lead guitar and piano while the band played the rest of the background.

However, Klee became frustrated with changes the songs underwent in the process of recording. "After the recording session, nine of the original songs had changed so dramatically that they were not the songs I wanted them to be.

Now, with the exception of one song Klee not only sings all vocals on his CD, but he also plays every instrument.

"It took me about ten weeks in the studio to record all the instrumental and vocal parts, and then track them all together," he said. "It is pretty intense because you must keep doing it over and over until it is perfect."

Klee said that he hopes each of his songs evokes some emotion in the listener. In the record jackets, Klee includes a personal statement about each of the songs.

"If you build your soapbox to say something, you must be able to relate to the audience," he said. "When I have an emotional experience, I play it out in my music and I hope that the feelings are universal to all audiences."

Klee is now based in Richmond, Virginia and is hoping with the national release of his new CD, he will be able to reach a larger audience.

He has done numerous TV and radio appearances in Virginia, and has had pieces done on him by the NPR, ABC and CBS affiliates. He plays a club in the Richmond area which attracts a diversity of people. Standing room only, there are usually about 200-300 people a night.

"On Thursday we get mostly students from the University of Richmond and VCU. Fridays is a mixture of yuppies and students, and Saturday we get yuppies and people ranging from 40 to 60-years old.

'The Journeyman' has been in singles, and Klee feels they have gotten a tremendous response. "All the radio stations have received numbers of calls after playing the song," he said. "We played the song on U 93 one Friday morning and they got a great response from the listeners."

'The Journey of a Dreamer' is available at the Saint Mary's College bookstore.

Automatic for the People reminisces R.E.M.'s earlier days

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR

Music Critic

They're hot. They're happening. They've been together since you were in kindergarten, freshmen. You know 'em. You love 'em. You've love 'em. You've heard their new album 6 googol times already.

Listening to R.E.M.'s 'Automatic for the People' is a little exercise. From the first plucked strings of 'Drive,' the album's guitars, assorted strings, and vocals try to pull you to sleep. Even Michael Stipe slips over to the fine line between interesting and annoying on the band's last two full albums. It's back to some semblance of the old style. The days it's been the album mumbles a little bit. It's very nice to be reminded of the old days.

But niceness and convention surely weren't the band's aims with this, its eighth album. 'Automatic for the People' continues R.E.M.'s complete detachment from traditional guitar-bass-drum structure and toward something different. This time, different means more.

R.E.M. reflects its beginning sound in its latest album. 'Drive,' the first single, is not really a single. The song sounds nothing like 'Can't Get There From Here' but takes us down rural Georgia roads and reveals the metaphors of such journeys through a completely different sound and mood. R.E.M. still makes roadtrip music for the ages.

"Star Me Kitten" is another kind of song. Exploring sexual desire as R.E.M. has rarely done, the song's original title was eighty-five by Warner Brothers. Though the entertainment giant fortunately did no such thing to its lyrics, which are largely unlistenable except for the closing lines.

But with this album, Michael Stipe continues the gradual revelation of his lyrical talent. Early R.E.M. was not about words. 'Wolves, Lower' and 'Sitting Still' had nothing to do with the intricacies of Stipe's poetry. All we needed was a mood and a chorus.

But through the years, Stipe has moved into new lyrical territory. Automatic for the People's 'Everybody Hurts' and 'Sweetness Follows' are full of musical feeling, and their lyrics take R.E.M. to a different level.

As it has shown consistently through its eight albums, R.E.M. can take the usual rock idiom and transform it into something new, yet familiar and comforting. 'Automatic for the People' is all of that and more.
Purdue on Saturday, tied with seven other teams for second place in the Big Ten and hoping to get rid of the other six to gain the championship for the 13th time. That made the Tigers 49-19-2, third best in the country, behind Oklahoma and Alabama.

Arkansas, once a Southwest Conference powerhouse, decided it needed a new leader and moved into the SEC. After the first game, the Razorbacks decided they also needed a new coach, dismissing Crow and replacing him with Joe Pate. They beat Bytone one year ago, but had lost the last seven games.

UCLA, 9-3 last year and ranked No. 18 in the preseason poll, is 3-4 and languishing in the Pac-10 basement with an 0-4 league record. The Bruins also had their 24-game streak ended in a 20-10 loss on Arizona State on Saturday.

ISU, once an SEC heavyweight, is now 1-6 and bending under the burden of a five-game losing streak, the school’s longest since 1956. The team ranked up an unprecedented fourth straight losing season, making the current senior class the first in the school’s 99 years to graduate without ever posting a winning record.

Oklahoma was 8-3 a year ago, averaging 30 points per game and No. 16 in the final AP poll. Now they’re 2-3-1, and kicking their wounds after losing to—all of them—Kansas, 27-10 on Saturday.

The victory left Kansas ranked No. 18 at 6-1-1 and Oklahoma dropped to 5-1, a printout that has since 1970 and in the first six polls this season, missing action in any of the top five.

"Things are changing," Kansas coach Glen Mason said.

In a lot of places, too.

Young Colts are for real

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ted Marchibroda doesn't confuse progress with momentum. The Indianapolis Colts are visibly better than they were last week. It all stemmed back to his blowup in Minnesota on Oct. 4, when Jim Harbaugh called an audible and Todd Scott intercepted the pass and returned it 35 yards for a touchdown.

Ditka heretod Harbaugh on the sidelines as what was a 20-0 lead turned into a 21-20 Viking victory. In his press conference the following day, Ditka said he didn't regret blowing up at Harbaugh, "because the last thing I told him Saturday night was not to call any audibles because of the noise in The Metrodome."

The Bears had a led of 14 at the half, and Ditka skipped his Oct. 12 press conference.

The Bears defeated Tampa Bay, 31-14, on Oct. 18. Late in that game, a pass from Harbaugh was intercepted by Darrell Pollard for a long return.

At his press conference Monday, Oct. 19, Ditka was asked about his reaction on that interception in relation to the "audible" interference. That's when he unleashed an obscenely-laced tirade at the media.

Bills' heroes prevent O'Brien comeback

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A Monday night against the New York Jets. How could Buffalo Bills fans be more wrong?

They didn't, but just barely, as Thurman Thomas caught a 12-yard touchdown pass from Jim Kelly with 51 seconds remaining, giving the Bills past their AFC East patsy, 24-20. Buffalo marched 75 yards in seven plays, using 39 seconds to earn its 10th straight victory over the Jets.

The late heroics spoiled a superb comeback by the Jets (1-6). Ken O'Brien, the man that fans love to hate, guided New York to a 34-27 win over a 20-17 lead, with Brad Baxter scoring from the 1 with 1:50 remaining.

Browne, the defensive tackle, said his shoulder early in New York's TD drive when hit by Bruce Smith. O'Brien, a 7-1/2-year starter who lost his job to Nagle this year, came in and took them to a 1-05 to the score.

O'Brien found Rob Moore for 9 yards, then Thomas ran for 6 and O'Brien's 45-yard rainbow was dropped in the end zone by Rob Moore, but its Williams was called for interference.

Baxter scored on the next play, leaving more than enough time for the two-time defending AFC champions.

The Bills (2-2) got a 34-yard pass to Don Beebe to the Jets' 49. Beebe also caught a 19-yarder on third down to the 30.

Thomas ran for 18 yards, then found the versatile running back between two defenders in the end zone.

The Bills broke a two-game slide in which they scored only 13 points with a muddled no-huddle attack. The Jets continued their disastrous year, although they played their best game against their nemesis.

Nagle, scrambling toward the sideline, completed a pass to Ken Whisenhunt and was hit by Smith. Nagle tried to get up, but Thurman Thomas' touchdown catch with 51 seconds left in the game provided the winning score for the Bills against the Jets.

Smith wouldn't move. So Nagle pushed Smith, who then appeared to fall back on top of the quarterback.

Jocks tackled Ivy Eatman then dived on Smith, drawing a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

New York led 3-0 on Cary Blanchard's first-quarter 42-yard field goal. But the Bills quickly snatched the lead in the second quarter.

Ken Davis' 2-yard touchdown dive came one play after Thomas gained 29 yards on a sweep. The Bills got in position on a 37-yard pass from Andre Reed on third-and-15.

Blanchard hit a 40-yarder to make it 7-6, but Jake Clemons' interception set up Buffalo's quick drive at the end of the half for a 14-6 edge.

The Bills looked as sharp as ever during the march, which took 43 seconds to go 62 yards. Kelly hit Beebe, fresh off the injury list, on passes of 15 and 18 yards and Thomas ran for 13. Davis scored with 12 seconds remaining in the half.

New York's offense, dormant a lot longer than Buffalo's, woke up in the third quarter. The Bills got their first touchdown in seven quarters and only their third on the ground all season on Pat Chafey's 1-yard run after they drove 84 yards in 10 plays.

That made it 14-13. But the Bills responded with Steve Christie's 33-yard field goal.

Then each team reverted to recent error-prone ways.

Rod Tumbley thrashed by Mike Brim and Mo Lewis recovered and ran 25 yards to the Buffalo 41 early in the fourth quarter. On fourth-and-4, Nagle threw a short pass to Whisenhunt that did not connect, but Mark Kelso was called for interference, a silly mistake because the play would not have gained a first down.

On the next play, though, Henry Jones picked off Nagle's pass and returned it to the Jets' 49. The Bills got nowhere, then stopped the Jocks.

Gambling with just over seven minutes left, New York faked a punt, and Chafey was called for roughing the center for 29 yards. That got the Jocks to the Bills' 43, but they turned the ball over on downs.

Dolphins express concern about running game

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami Dolphins' record is no longer perfect, and their running game certainly isn't.

Now 6-1 following a 43-20 victory Sunday to Indianapolis, the Dolphins in the past five games have averaged just 80 yards rushing, a figure even worse than last year, when their ground attack ranked 25th in the NFL.

"We haven't done anything since the first two games," running back Mark Higgs said Monday. "I mean ball-carriers. Higgs wishes his team would call more running plays.

"It's something we have to try to stick with to try to make it work," he said. "We tend to get away from it a little early because we have one or two bad plays.

An abundance of weapons — including two newcomers, tight end Keith Jackson and two-time 1,000-yard rusher Bobby Humphrey — suggests Miami should be able to mount a balanced attack.

But despite leading Indianapolis much of the way Sunday, the Dolphins had 46 pass plays and a season-low 20 rushing. That ratio is reminiscent of recent seasons, when the lack of a running attack would fail to make the playoffs went hand in hand. Miami's offensive linemen also want to run more.

"We scream about that every week," guard Keith Sims said. "We're a better team when we can run the ball."

"We didn't run with it as well as we would have liked to Sunday," coach Don Shula said.
Rick Mirer completed 12 of 15 passes for 151 yards and two touchdowns on Saturday.

Ray Griggs sprints toward the end zone en route to a 54-yard touchdown.

Demetrius DuRose nails BYU quarterback Ryan Hancock. On the day, the Irish captain had five tackles.

Cornerback Tom Carter picks off a pass in the fourth quarter.

Reggie Brooks breaks a tackle. The Irish tailback had 112 yards on 15 carries.
The Task Force on Cultural Diversity, which Father Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C., president, appointed in April 1991, reported its work on May 1, 1991. The Final Report was given to Father Malloy and was published in an entirety in The Observer. The officers have continued to discuss the Final Report. A transitional recommendation in the report called for the establishment of an implementation committee to develop a plan based on the recommended actions contained in the Final Report. A follow-up recommendation is in the response in the process of developing that plan. It is based on conversations with offices and other administrators responsible for areas in the life of the University covered by the Task Force's recommendations.

Father Malloy has decided to establish a permanent University Committee on Cultural Diversity, which will be described at the end of this report. This is an important development within the context of the efforts of Father Malloy to achieve cultural diversity goals at Notre Dame. While the recommended actions of the Final Report of the Task Force on Cultural Diversity will form the basis for the work of the committee, certain commitments can be made at this time as a result of the work referred to above.

It is important to begin with a restatement of the Task Force's definition of the term 'cultural diversity.'

Definition of 'Cultural Diversity'

Cultural Diversity, as a stated goal of the University of Notre Dame, means that the University is convinced that it will most effectively carry out its mission of Catholic higher education in an atmosphere where the faculty, students, and staff of the institution are drawn from the full range of ethnic and cultural traditions represented within our society. Cultural Diversity is not simply a thing to be desired, but a set of numbers reflecting the underrepresented ethnic or racial groups present at Notre Dame. It is that and much more. It is the starting point, the corner-stone, of dialogue which demonstrates an understanding and respect for all ethnic and cultural traditions. Cultural Diversity signifies the University's commitment to an environment of hospitality and equality where these various traditions can together contribute to a sharing of perspectives in the pursuit of truth. It is the recognition of the contributions—both individual and collective—of those ethnic or racial groups which have been systematically and socially denied for much of this nation's history. It is the recognition and celebration of the cultural differences within our University community.

Curriculum and Recruitment of a More Culturally Diverse Undergraduate Student Body and Faculty

With regard to curriculum, the provost will ask each department to review its specific course offerings, including the Freshman courses, with regard to their cultural diversity. Steps toward this goal, which will provide follow up in this matter, and keep the other recommendations concerning curriculum in mind.

There is agreement on the part of everyone involved on the importance of the work in admissions to recruit a more diverse student body. Not only will current efforts continue, but there will be a continuing emphasis on providing more adequate levels of funding to meet minority financial need.

Need-based financial aid can be made available to R.O.T.C. students from the office of financial aid to make up the difference between what they have received and total educational cost, where applicable.

In the past, funds have been set aside to attract specific faculty hiring goals. To recruit and hire a culturally diverse faculty, the provost finds special funding acceptable as a concept. The question is the degree to which it is an institution wide effort to set aside funds enough to make a difference at a time when there are significant financial constraints. Within this context, an effort will be made to set aside positions in order to increase the number of minority faculty.

Undergraduate Academic Support Services

In the area of undergraduate academic support services, the provost is aware of the success achieved in the Minority Engineering Program and programs of academic support beyond the freshman year of Studies in the College of Engineering. He will study possible ways in which this program might be replicated in other academic areas. To achieve this, the provost will consult with the deans of the freshman Year of Studies and with the deans of the colleges to see what support can be provided for minority students beyond the freshman year and how the matter of enhanced academic support can be provided under diverse circumstances.

The question of the curriculum in engineering is a long-term one that is not exclusively related to minority students. Efforts will be made to see how people with limited math and science backgrounds can be given more time to fulfill requirements.

The directors of overseas programs will be asked to study ways of effectively recruiting minority students for overseas programs.

Undergraduate Support Services: Residentiality and Student Aftairs

Several recommended actions can be implemented immediately by the Office of Student Affairs in the area of residentiality. There should be balanced distribution of minority students throughout the campus. The Vice President for Student Affairs will seek additional faculty who are involved in minority issues and will report back to the Task Force on Cultural Diversity on progress in this program. The provost will name one of his first actions to be making minority concerns a top priority.

University Affirmative Action Committees

Two University committees review affirmative action issues: The Academic Affirmative Action Committee and the Staff Affirmative Action Committee.

The provost will meet twice each year with the chair of the Academic Affirmative Action Committee to discuss these and other matters.
California, where it trounced the University of San Diego (13-9), 15-10, 15-16, 16-4. Fiebelkorn led Notre Dame with 11 kills, while senior captain Alisa Turner added 9 kills and 16 digs.

The tour's path then crossed the Pacific for a weekend doubleheader with perennial powerhouse Hawaii. Notre Dame was undaunted, however, and subdued the Rainbow Wahine 16-14, 15-11, 15-9, in the first match. Peters and Marissa Cragin pounded 20 kills apiece while Fiebelkorn added 19 and setter Janelle Karlan had 60 assists. The team was efficient throughout the match, rolling up a .383 attack percentage. "We were solid all around," Brown said of her team's performance. "In contract to the Cal State-Northridge match, we probably had our best match of the year in that match. Our hitting percentages, individually and as a team, were outstanding." Hawaii returned the favor in the tour's last match, however, winning 15-10, 15-10, 15-16. Peters led the Irish with 15 kills and 16 digs in a losing effort. Brown was not happy to take the loss, but she was not completely disappointed with her team's effort. "Hawaii definitely played a much better match than they did the first night," the coach said. "We hung tough in the third game. Had we won that one, who knows what would have happened?"

Four of the games scores came in the second half. Forward Courtney Lineky took a cross from Ronnie Bumps and headed SMU to a one-point advantage. Minutes later the lead was increased when defender Kellie Fister victimized Irish setter Janelle Karlan had 40 assists. The team was efficient before the halfway point giving Notre Dame a one point advantage going into the intermission. Providence goalkeeper Jennifer Mead was the main reason the final home game for Notre Dame didn't end in a blowout. The junior made several miraculous saves, keeping the Irish at bay for the most of the game. Loddy also played well earning her 34th career shutout.

"The difference in the game was their keeper," said Irish coach Chris Petrucelli. "It was a very physical game and I think we responded to that. One player who stood out as a force for the Irish was Matesic. Along with her first half assist, the sophomore defender harassed the Friar's attackers and added support on the midfield. It was good to see Jill play well," said Petrucelli. "She's been struggling a bit lately, but she came out focused and it showed." The final games of the season place the Irish at Wright State and Xavier, two must win games if Notre Dame is to see postseason going into the intermission.

"All we can do is keep winning and hope that we get more than the team admitted. It has been a factor," commented Petrucelli. "We hung tough in the third game. Had we won that one, who knows what would have happened?"

Petrucelli earned MGC Volleyball Player-of-the-Week honors after leading the Irish to an upset win over 11th-ranked New Mexico. Fiebelkorn, a sophomore, was selected as the Women's Cross Country Runner-of-the-Week for the third time this fall after leading the Irish to their first Indiana Intercollegiate title.

Number-one singles champion Crabtree picked up the final Women's Tennis Player-of-the-Week award after Notre Dame won the MGC championship.

Irish attack starts slowly but builds momentum behind running attack

By JENNY MARTEN
Associate Sports Editor

At the start of the first quarter, it looked like a game featuring the two most productive offensive units in college football could be a real dog fight, but in the end the Cougars rolled over and played dead in Notre Dame's 42-16 rout of BYU.

Ryan Hancock, BYU's sophomore quarterback, opened the game with three straight passes and two first downs, but the drive stalled when he threw one pass for no gain and an incompletion.

The Irish took the punt and sent Jerome Bettis up the middle for 11 yards and the first down. The Cougar defense tightened and stopped the Notre Dame offense in its tracks to force a punt.

On BYU's first play Hancock and halfback Jamal Williams collided near the endzone and the ball popped free. Notre Dame linebacker Demetrius DuRose fell on the ball for a defensive touchdown.

BYU answered with a 69-yard drive that included a 35-yard pass to Mike Nelson that put the Cougars ahead 7-6. Tight end Byron Rex just missed a touchdown, but the Cougars were penalized for too many men on the field and grabbed one of BYU's onyx statues.

"I'm probably jumping the gun, but it was exciting because it was the turning point in the game," said Mike Henningsen, BYU's tight end. "I'm sure of it. We should have played better in the first half. It's over when it's over.

"It's not over when it's halfway. It's over when it's over."

Brooks who was not at his best was greatest.

"When Reggie came on, he was on fire," said Jerome Bettis, whose 113 yards and two touchdowns sent the Cougars to their 11th straight victory.

"I don't think he was able to accelerate," said Brooks. "I felt like we should have done better with the ball protection and played better defensively."

"Irv Shumate came on strong," said Jerome Bettis, whose 113 yards and any interceptions, receptions and touchdowns in the second half were exciting because of nipping the Cougars in the backfield.

"We run the type of offense that after the first half, we want to be in the 40-yard line (the ball) to the second half," said Muter. "But we've learned in the past that it's not over at halftime.

"It's not over when it's halfway. It's over when it's over."

BYU's only touchdown midway through the third quarter came on a 20-yard field goal. BYU's best chance to score earlier in the game was when Hancock under pressure lost a fumble and fell on his own 16-yard line and sprinted past the BYU defensive line to tie the game at 7-7.

"We were excited because it was a big game," said Mike Henningsen, BYU's tight end. "Irv Shumate came on strong, but I didn't know if we could keep it up.

"Irv came on strong in the first half and then stopped the rest of the game. We were excited because it was a big game."

When it's right, it's right and it's hot. Saint Mary's soccer team demolished Rockford College, 9-0, in their last home game this season on Sunday. It was an emotional game for the Belles as the seniors took homelde for last time.

At halftime, forward Megan Dakas spoke for the team, in a speech to seniors Mary Barger, Kristen Crowley, Cindy Jordan, April Ebert and Stacy Winget. "It will be a little lonely next year on the field," said Dakas. But for the time being, only the Rockford College sideline was lonely.

The Regents could only start ten players and had no players coming off the bench. The Belles enjoyed that advantage all game.

Forward Winget, off an assist from midfielder Molly O'Connell, sliced through the Regents defense, scoring the first of six goals in the first half. Off a cornerkick by O'Connell, midfielder Kristen Crowley leaped into the air and headed the ball past the Regents goalie. The Belles' fans were out of their seats screaming for more.

Head coach John MacLeod, his coaching staff and all the members of the 1992-93 Fighting Irish men's basketball team will hold a "Meet the Team" night on Wednesday at 9 p.m. at "Theodore's" in the LaFortune Student Center.

The event will give the entire community a chance to talk to MacLeod and his team about the upcoming season prior to the start of pre-season practice, which begins on November 1. The event is free and open to the public. Door prizes will be given out and players will be available for autographs.

MacLeod is entering his second year with the Notre Dame program and the Fighting Irish posted an 18-15 record last season and advanced to the championship game of the National Invitation Tournament.

In South Bend, Laketa previously spent three seasons with Downdate at Illinois State, two as a graduate assistant while completing work on a master's degree in education. A 1985 graduate of Kansas State University with a degree in social science and education, Laketa earned basketball letters with the Wildcats as a sophomore and junior. Knee injuries sidelined him the remaining season.

A former standout at the Homewood-Flossmoor High School in Flossmoor, Illinois, Laketa captured all-state and all-Chicago area honors while earning acclaim as the South Suburban player of the year as a senior. He won all-conference recognition on two occasions. His father, Don, retired three years ago following a lengthy basketball coaching career at that school.

Laketa was married last summer to the former Brigitte Boyer (sister of Irish junior guard Brooks Boyer), who serves as the women's gymnastics coach at Western Michigan.

Boring football? a little passing might liven things up

As I stood in line for nachos at halftime of Notre Dame's 42-16 over BYU, I reflected on the thirty minutes of football which had just taken place.

I searched my mind for visions of dazzling touchdowns, great runs, or amazing catches, but to my surprise I could not think of any. In fact, I couldn't remember a thing. Almost the entire first half had been erased from the archives of my brain, and I did not know why.

I desperately grasped the few visions of football alive in my head. We kicked off and scored first. The band played very loud. That was it. A half-hour of football (two and a half hours of TV time) were unaccounted for.

I returned to my seat and watched the second half as attentively as I could amidst the constant chatter of fall break activities. Upon exiting the stadium, I began to reflect upon the second half. Fresh in my mind was the many interceptions, scoring passes, and punting.

After reassuring myself that I did not fall asleep too much before the game and am not on any medication, the only conclusion I could find to explain my temporary amnesia was the first half was beyond boring.

I kept a hold of the half stats and they confirmed my thoughts. Eight punts, the longest run from scrimmage was eleven yards, Notre Dame's longest pass was a whopping sixteen yards.

I realize that these numbers do not compare to the Gerry Faust years, where the term Pinkett, Pinkett, Pinkett, Punt (referring to tailback Allen Pinkett) described Notre Dame's offensive attacks. Thus, a far cry from the type of offense Irish faithful have grown accustomed to.

I was not at fault for the Seminoles sponsored first half. Three scoring passes in field goal distance, the potent passing attack seemedcontent with fifteen yard passes over the middle.

My remembrance of the second half was again rebooted. At halftime Notre Dame did not punt, Rick Mirer had 54 completion, and the Irish compiled 216 yards rushing compared to 75 in the flat half.

Of those interceptions, saw the game as a two-part series. The Irish finally got the car moving at halftime. The defensive (referring to tailback Gifford Nielsen or Robbie Bosco during Saturday's first half. But the sophomore, starting his fourth game, couldn't keep his form up for the entire contest.

"Hancok did a nice job in the first half," said Edwards. "It's the first time he's been under a real lot of pressure."

That pressure came not only from the game's national scope, but from a second-half surge by the Irish defense which stopped the Cougars' passing game cold.

"Our defensive secondary was truly outstanding in the second half," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "You should pick up momentum when you're in a lead." "The Irish finally got the car moving at halftime. The defensive secondary shut Hancock down, limiting him to 95 yards in the second half and picking off three passes. Jeff Burris, who had two of those interceptions, saw the game as a two-part series.

"Like Coach Holtz said, we played the first half to set up the second half," Burris said. "The first half was a prelim to the second half."

That scenario was no more apparent than in the offensive backfield, where the Irish were shut down during the first half, but came back with 216 second-half yards on the ground.

Holtz chose to keep an injured Reggie Brooks on the sideline during the first half. But the senior tailback turned on the heat after Notre Dame's quarter in the league opener, gaining all of his 113 yards in the second half.

"I didn't think the few times he (Brooks) played in the first half that he was really in sync," said Holtz. "But in the second half he...

Midseason break took the Notre Dame volleyball team away on a whirlwind tour of the Southwest. The Midnight Busters, who had explained, three-hour flight delay in a Chicago airport, along with the team's best and worst matches of the year within the space of five days, produced some magic. A dramatic five-set victory over 13th-ranked New Mexico (10-7) at the Lobos' Johnson Arena. After two and a half hours, the Irish prevailed in a nail-biter, 12-15, 16-14, 13-15, 15-12, 15-13.

Senior Jessica Fleckler and sophomore Christy Peters each had 17 kills in the victory. A vocal crowd made the close match even more exciting.

"It was a fun environment," Brown observed. "It was a long, difficult match. They bled a lot of people there, and there were also a lot of (Notre Dame) alumni cheering us on."

Success over break leaves women's soccer with wait and see position

V-ball upset of Lobos is no mystery

A 3-1 finish during the fall break by the Notre Dame women's soccer keeps its NCAA tournament hopes alive as it enters the final two games of the season.

The selection committee will choose twelve teams, two from each of the four USA regions. The Irish left town leaving four at-large bids. The Irish lost out of the running for an uncommitted bid, but are still in contention for a regional bid.

Maryland, Virginia, William & Mary, and Rutgers join the Irish as the top four teams in the region, while Wisconsin is the ranked lower team in Notre Dame. The Tribe must face the Cavaliers in their annual interstate battle posing the possibility that the losing team will fall in the region.

An additional possibility that faces Notre Dame is that the NCAA committee will look past the rankings and at the competitiveness of each team. In repeated games this year, Notre Dame proved it was better than a highly ranked foe but fell short on the scoreboard. In back-to-back loses to top ten teams Duke and Portland, Notre Dame dominated the play only to fall 2-1.

"The teams are not selected based on the rankings," said senior tri-captain Margaret Jarc. "We have a decent chance to get one of the bids in our region.

The chance could have been a sure thing if the Irish would have come out on top in their first game of the week against sixth-ranked Southern Methodist.

The Lady Mustangs never allowed the potent Irish offense to get started, holding the Irish to three shots on goal while attempting 24 of their own en route to a 1-0 win.
