Iraq will conform to some sanctions

Hurt by U.S.-led air attacks in the south, Iraq promised Thursday to abide by two U.N. demands. But still unsettled in the new Mideast crisis was the key issue of Iraqi missiles that could target allied planes in the region.

Although Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein vowed to strike back, U.S. pilots patrolling Iraqi airspace following the Wednesday-night raids found no sign of hostile activity in the "no-fly" zone of southern Iraq.

U.S. officials said only one of the four targeted anti-missile batteries was knocked out in the short, intense air raids. They said allied jets would track again if needed.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported two planes had flown over northern Iraq on Thursday but fell after being "confronted" by anti-aircraft forces. There was no elaboration and the planes were not identified.

Baghdad gave no indication it would withdraw the missiles that had provoked the attacks by American, British and French jets. But it did quickly back down on two other issues: Deputy Premier Tariq Aziz said Iraq had ended a ban on U.N. flights that prevented weapons inspectors from dismantling Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

Baghdad also promised to stop the raids into Kuwait to remove Iraqi material left there after Iraqi forces were routed from the area in the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Saddam seemed to escalate the pressure as the final days of the Bush presidency ran out. He repeatedly challenged the allied policy of prohibiting Iraqi planes and missiles from entering southern Iraq.

President Bush, who ordered the attack a week before his four-year term ended, said it had "made the skies a little safer." Kuwait, within range of Iraqi artillery, placed its 11,700- man garrison on high alert. The first of 1,100 U.S. soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas, left for Kuwait, where they will join 300 or so special forces there.

Iraqi television said there were "mass demonstrations" by tens of thousands of people nationwide to protest the raids and show support for Saddam.

Academic council discusses future study days

By EMILY HAGE
News Writer

The Executive Committee of the Academic Council is discussing the issue of study days for the future fall semesters, said Student Government President Greg Butrus and Vice President Molly O'Neill. Schedules have been proposed for the next two years, and final decisions will most likely be made in late January, said Butrus.

"We have certain constraints for fall semesters," said Butrus. Exams are not allowed on Sunday, said O'Neill called "a philosophical point with the University." There must also be a certain number of days of vacation before Christmas day, which can make scheduling difficult, depending on the day of the week Christmas falls.

Another obstacle that the study days proposal has confronted is faculty opposition. Students must attend between approximately 69 and 72 days of classes, said O'Neill. Though study days are technically class days, "professors don't like the fact that the number of days could be less than 70 with study days," said O'Neill.

In addition, members of the faculty are upset about last semester's study days.

"A large constituency of the faculty felt uninformed [of the study days] last semester," said Butrus.

"A lot of it depends on what the faculty is willing to do," Butrus continued. In addition to deans, officers, and students, faculty make decisions in the Academic Council.

Reaction to study days was mostly positive, however, said Butrus.

"Rectors loved it," O'Neill said. She explained that rectors were grateful for the marked decrease in cases of sickness and stress in their dorms during exams. Students, too, praised the system.

Butrus said that students said that they felt less frantic than they had in the past.

Letterman leaving NBC for CBS in June

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman told his "Late Night" audience Thursday he'll be taking his "Stupid Pet Tricks" and Top 10 lists from NBC to CBS.

Letterman said his last show on NBC will be June 25.

Letterman didn't give details of the move. CBS was expected to announce later that he had signed Letterman for an 11:30 p.m. talk show, smack against his old friend Jay Leno and NBC's "The Tonight Show."

Not immediately known was how NBC planned to fill Letterman's 12:30 a.m. slot. The 13-year-old show had helped NBC dominate late-night television.

Letterman, during the afternoon taping of his show, tipped his hand by starting with a joke about how he would be visiting outgoing President Bush to pick up any extra moving boxes. Then Letterman referred to lines in the NBC building lobby for "Late Night" ticketholders and said there would be an additional line for "Late Night" — "if you would like to host the show."

Letterman, then announced that his last show on NBC would be June 25. The audience groaned, and he replied, "Do you really mean that, ladies and gentlemen?"

He continued, "Shortly thereafter we'll be taking this program to another network — can I mention this? — taking it over there to CBS."

Letterman's first guests Thursday were movie critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert, and Siskel asked if Letterman would keep the show in New York.

"We'll stay here if we can find reasonable hourly parking rates," Letterman replied.

The irascible talk-show host's decision to leave NBC was fueled by public talk show host David Letterman is headed to CBS after his eleven year run as host of Late Night. His last NBC show is scheduled to air on June 25.

Driver abducted, shot to death

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Police are hunting a couple from Georgia who are holding two kidnapping charges in the abduction of an armored car driver last shot to death in Indiana.

Kay Quinn Reich, 38, and Lawrence Bartley Steward, 37, both of Warner Robins, Ga., are being held in the St. Joseph County Jail in South Bend on federal kidnapping charges.

No charges had been filed in the slaying.

Reich was arrested by officers at a vacant drive-in theater where armored car driver Mark Price, 15, of Warner Robins, had been shot several times. He died about 8:45 p.m. Tuesday at South Bend's Memorial Hospital.

Steward, a 42-year-old South Bend resident, was arrested around 2 p.m. Wednesday at a homeless shelter, police said.

Price, the driver of a Wells Fargo armored car carrying more than $10,000, was last seen 200 feet from a nearby convenience store.

What kind of people can be above the law?
I have decided to join that long and honored tradition of American heroes and sinners. I'm going to break the law.
I think I'll pick a violation that is colorful and eye-catching, like, maybe, I'll go to the Jefferson Memorial in Washington, D.C., and paint a clown face on the Jefferson statue.
Of course, I pick this violation because I want to go out and violate a Congressional mandate, and painting a clown face on Jefferson ought to do the trick. Congress has laws against everything, so I'm sure they've got this covered.
Anyway, I'll probably get arrested and get my face on all the newscasts (the networks just love those criminal types). After some legal haggling, I could come away with the statistics of that other American tradition—the Congressional investigation.
Oh, I'm hauled before the committee, I'll be all set. Since the reporters and the TV cameras will all be there, I'll speak not to the investigations of these matters, but to the television audience of "decent, ordinary, hard-working, blue-collar Americans." I've never understood how the color of your clothing influences the way you think.
I'll talk about the things Americans love to hear about from their heroes: honor, duty, patriotism, pride and the American way (whatever that is). Never mind that I have knowingly broken the law and bluffed my nose at Congress' wishes. When I'm through, the public will consider me a hero. T-shirts will be create, and offers will come flooding in. Someone will nominate me for president.
In short, I'll be an American hero. Of course, I'm not a genuine American who stands up for the Constitution of the United States, who is not against the public's wishes and prosecuting the vilification of the Constitution. I'll do it all.

Two charged with stealing blower

MILWAUKEE — A snowblower was stolen at gunpoint from a man as he cleared the snow near his house during the height of this week's storm, police said.

Two men were arrested and charged with armed robbery. 'Court Commissioner Anthony Machi set bail at $1,500 each for Ward Shackelford, 57, and George McNeil, 18, and scheduled a Jan. 22 hearing. A neighbor flagged down police after Tuesday's robbery. They stopped two men in a car and found the snow blower in the trunk, police said.

Five-inches of snow fell during Tuesday's storm.

FBI will seek Barbie Doll slasher

SANDUSKY, Ohio — Someone has been slashing Barbie dolls in the crotch and breasts at local department stores, prompting authorities to call in the FBI to make a psychological profile of the slasher, police said Wednesday.

Twenty-four Barbies have been damaged at three stores in the last eight months, said Timothy McClung, a Perkins Township police detective. Some stores have increased security where the dolls are displayed. McClung said he asked for help because local police may be dealing with a sexual deviant. "We could be dealing with a very sick person. I would hate to think six months or a year down the line that something serious happened because we didn't take that extra step," McClung said. The slasings came to light last week when a worker at a Hill's Department Store reported seven Barbie dolls were taken out of their boxes and slashed. Police then received a report that two Barbie dolls were slashed at a Kmart store.

Free medical school to be offered

PHILADELPHIA — The University of Pennsylvania said Thursday it has begun offering tuition-free, full-time, four-year education to top medical students, freeing them to choose a specialty without worrying about repaying loans. Beginning in 1995, a $10 million endowment from an anonymous alumnus and his wife will cover the $87,000 annual tuition for 25 students in the four-year program.

The University of Pennsylvania said Thursday it has begun offering tuition-free, full-time, four-year education to top medical students, freeing them to choose a specialty without worrying about repaying loans. Beginning in 1995, a $10 million endowment from an anonymous alumnus and his wife will cover the $87,000 annual tuition for 25 students in the four-year program. Eventually Penn hopes the program will cover all medical students. "It will give our students the choice to pursue careers in research, primary care or education if they so desire without the burden of overwhelming debt affecting their decision," Dr. William Kelley, dean of Penn's medical school, said. Many medical students graduate with a debt of $70,000 or more and to live comfortably need to earn about $150,000 annually, according to Penn figures. The debt forces many students to opt for high-paying specialties, such as cardiology, Kelley said. The scholarships, awarded on achievement, need not, will cover the students' other expenses, which average $12,000 a year.

Saint Mary's to offer new class

By LYNN BAUWENS
News Writer

The Department of Business Administration and Economics at Saint Mary's may be offering a new course in communication in 1994 that would focus upon oral and written communication for accounting majors.

Claude Renshaw, professor of accounting, conceived the course to combat the increasing numbers of graduates who have little time to study the art of communication. Students taking the course would concentrate upon the development of listening, speaking, and writing skills to better prepare them for the world of business, according to Renshaw.

"Due to the recent increase in accounting regulations, so much more time in courses is spent upon learning the technical aspects, which justifies a separate course for developing communication skills," said Renshaw.

The proposed three credit course would resemble the current Business Communication course open to all undergraduates, however. Communication for Accountants will only be open to accounting and Economics Accounting majors. It will concentrate upon the communicative skills of students instead of the technical skills of the accounting major, said Renshaw.

While it may not be a requirement, this unique course is expected to give an advantage to students when entering the job market because businesses are more interested in hiring persons with interpersonal skills, said Renshaw.

Given the recent recommendations of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), the proposed course is timely and necessary for undergraduate students of business, said Renshaw.

In the year 2000, AICPA will instate requirements of 150 hours of college credit for persons wishing to be certified as Public Accountants. This is 22 more hours than currently required for graduation at Saint Mary's.

AICPA advises that these additional hours be classes in communication and liberal arts. Students currently within the department are required to complete an Advanced Writing Proficiency within their major. They are also encouraged to take advantage of the liberal arts environment by taking more than the minimum requirement of courses, said Renshaw.

The new course will complement this and fill the need for effective communication among accounting majors, a step ahead of the present requirements of the AICPA.

Professor Renshaw is developing the formal proposal to place the Communication for Accountants course on the books. He was enabled to create the course from a consideration by a Saint Mary's College Improvement Grant that he received last year.

If approved, the course will be offered in the spring semester of next year.

Course emphasizes research

By MATT BOWER

Anthropology professor Martin Murphy has an interesting solution to the research verses teaching debate at Notre Dame—combine them.

His summer anthropology class, "Ethnographic Field Methods and Techniques," allows students to conduct their own research project in the South Bend area.

Murphy first offered the course last summer and seven students participated. The students decided to do ethnographic research on the Hispanic population in the South Bend area.

The project provided some extremely valuable information on the South Bend Hispanic population, dispelling many common rumors. For example, the study found the Hispanics to be no more transient than any other St. Joseph county citizens—most held full time jobs.

The students involved hoped to present their research at the Central States Anthropology Meeting. "This is very exciting for the students," said Murphy. "This is not just any research, it is their research."

Murphy offered the course for several reasons. First, he wanted to show students how research and teaching mix. "There has been a teaching verses research debate. In this class, students are teaching themselves and learning about research and how it goes with community," said Murphy.

Murphy also wanted to provide Notre Dame students with an experience which he enjoyed during his own undergraduate education. "I did my undergraduate education in Latin America and taught in Latin America," said Murphy. "There are some very positive aspects in Latin American education, especially the practical experiences."

I wanted to bring this to the United States." The course will be offered again this summer and is open to all students with permission.

"I am looking for students who will dedicate themselves to an extremely intense course," said Murphy. "Though no topic has been chosen yet," Murphy said, "A number of agencies have contacted us and have asked us to do research for them."

Murphy said he is extremely excited for this summer's course and hopes to expand the program. "In thirteen years of teaching, it was the most enjoyable experience I have ever had."

disatisfaction with his bosses, who had passed him over as successor to Johnny Carson, and a fervent courtship by CBS. CBS was believed to have offered him $14 million to $16 million a year, a hefty raise from the $7 million annually he earned at NBC. Letterman will enter gab- shoveling Special, competing against Letterman, the syndicated "Arsonist Hall Show" and a new Fox show with comedi­ ne Chevy Chase, among others.

Letterman's departure had been in the cards, some say, as early as 1988, after Letterman was named "permanent guest host" to fill the laps of Carson's laid-back "Tonight" taping schedule. Although Letterman signed a new contract in 1990, he was piped when NBC said "Late Night" returns to cable's Arts & Entertainment network without consulting or compensating him. And though he may never have expressly indicated his intention, the "Tonight" show, his feelings were hurt when NBC picked Leno for the job in June 1991 and al­ lowed Letterman to learn an anchorman's trade.

That's when he retained Hollywood "superagent" Mike Ovitz's high-powered Creative Artists Agency to negotiate with NBC, where his contract expires in late June. When contract renewal talks opened in September, NBC set the comedian "explore opportunities out­ side of the network."

In Baer carrying caskets cov­ ered in Iraqi flags, and a bro­ ken window and chipped plaster at the Imam Ali mosque, the holiest Shiite shrine in Iraq - in Najaf. It implied allied jets damaged the mosque.

But the mood in Baghdad streets was somber, and people lined up at gas stations in lines of shortages. "Are they going to bomb again?" one man asked reporters.

More than 110 American, British and French planes raid­ ed missile batteries Wednesday in an aerial exclu­ sion zone, set up in August be­ low the 322 parallel to protect Shiite Muslim rebels. Bush called the raid "a big success."

Pentagon spokesman Peter William said one of the four Iraqi anti-aircraft batteries near the zone was destroyed, two were moved after the raid out of range of coalition aircraft and one — near Baera, in extreme southern Iraq — re­ mains operational.

"The Iraqi southern air de­ fense network is now seriously degraded," Williams said. The jets also targeted four air defense command and control centers, but Williams did not have information on damage to those sites.

Williams said one bomb hit an unintended target, but had no casualties. He added that families that may lose lives as a result of shortages. As painful as they were. His son, Marine Lance Cpl. Brian Lee Lance, was killed in action Feb. 25, 1991, during fighting in Kuwait. "Today was the day my son flew to Saudi two years ago," the Bedford woman said Wednesday. "It just upsets me to think that we still have something to finish that should have been finished the first time... I just think of other families that may lose kids because of this," she said. However, she said, "I feel if they don't stop him (Iraqi President Saddam Hussein) now it will get worse."

Harold Simpson, a former U.S. foreign service officer, was named to a five-page calendar of Iraq's military and political leaders, for a long period of time we took no action," Simpson said. "I just kind of wish this thing would all end so I wouldn't have a con­ stant reminder."

Simpson said he would like to see Saddam Hussein uprooted in Iraq, but was not impressed by Wednesday's show clout by U.S. and allied warplanes launched an air raid on Iraqi missile positions.
WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton’s popularity has soared since the Nov. 3 election, although a majority of registered voters believe he is already backpedaling from campaign promises, according to a survey released yesterday.

The poll, conducted jointly by Republican pollster Ed Goeas and Democratic pollster Celinda Lake, also showed that a whopping 69 percent of voters think Clinton is “a different brand of Democrat” and that the party is changing under his direction.

Goeas and Lake were to analyze their numbers today at the National Press Club.

They found that 71 percent of the respondents had a favorable opinion of Clinton and 20 percent of those polled had an unfavorable view of the next president.

On Election Day, voters were split 50-50 on the favorability question for Clinton, according to Goeas and Lake.

The pair surveyed more than 1,000 registered voters Jan. 4-5. The margin of error was 3.1 percent.

Also, 84 percent of the voters said Clinton has done a good job as president-elect, with 69 percent approving of his Cabinet selections.

“He has an amazing opportunity to succeed, but it’s not a guarantee of anything,” Lake said in an interview Wednesday. "On the flip side, 58 percent of the voters agreed that Clinton has already backed off numerous campaign promises."

“This plants the seed for problems in the future if Clinton doesn’t move from rhetoric to delivery,” Goeas said.

Also, President Bush registered his highest favorability rating and job-approval rating since the end of the Gulf War, the survey showed. He had a 59 percent favorability rating.

“Now that their decision-making process is over, and perhaps out of a sense of fairness, voters have returned to their once-held view of George Bush as a likable person,” Goeas wrote in his poll analysis.

Those surveyed said Clinton should make creating jobs his top priority, but three out of four voters said they’d prefer long-term solutions to short-term patchwork.

“The economy is still the 800-pound gorilla in the voters’ minds,” Lake said.

Goeas wrote that Republicans should be worried about the way voters view the Democratic Party under Clinton.

Sixty-two percent of the voters said Clinton is a “different brand” of Democrat, with 29 percent saying he is a “typical Democrat.” Nearly 70 percent said the party is changing, too.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of ethnic groups, harboring high expectations after 12 years outside of the federal power loop, are beginning to worry that President-elect Clinton might give their concerns short shrift.

Blacks are concerned that Clinton may remember his promise to reverse President Bush’s policy on Haitian refugees. The Latino community is fretting about tighter immigration policies for Cubans and Mexicans. Both urban and rural interests complain there’s no money or attention for them.

So far, the job of soothing these concerns has fallen to Henry Cisneros, Clinton’s pick for housing secretary.

“It’s a well-known litany of crime, economic development and job needs, and the need for housing and better quality schools,” Cisneros said in an interview Wednesday. “All of these things have to be brought together.

Cisneros, like many others, worries that the long-en­ treched problems of racial tension, poverty and crime will erupt, as they did in Los Angeles last year, if the problems are not addressed quickly.

But the problem is money. And the Clinton administration has edged away from some campaign promises this week, citing new, more dire projections about the federal deficit.

“Clinton’s taking over at a time when we’ve had 12 years, largely, of neglect,” said William Taylor, former staff di­ rector for the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. “It leaves a residue of bitterness, on top of the country getting more diverse. The only way to deal with the problem is head-on, calling for reconciliation.

The complaints are largely voiced quietly, no one is willing to openly criticize Clinton at this early stage.

But some groups, such as the National Rainbow Coalition and the American Jewish Community, have offered Clinton’s transition team full agendas enumerating their concerns.

“We have, as much as possible, disentangle race problems from the problems of economic isolation,” said Robert Woodson, founder of the National Center for Neighbor­hood Enterprise, a non­ profit advocacy group for low­ income people.

Many blacks were disappointed that Clinton and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, selected a private school for their daughter Chelsea, rather than Washington’s predominantly black public school system.

“We’ll be paying close attention to what he does, and what his secretary of education does,” said Henry Duvall, spokesman for the Council of the Great City Schools, an or­ ganization representing 44 ur­ ban school systems nationwide.

“The problems of urban areas spill over into the schools. How are you going to start in the suburbs?”

Hispanic groups are con­ cerned that their input in urban reform efforts, particularly in distressed Los Angeles, might be limited.
BAY SHORE, N.Y. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl missing for 16 days was found in good condition Wednesday in an underground bunker at the home of the family friend who reported her disappearance.

The elaborate hiding place was so well concealed that it went unnoticed by police posted around the clock in another part of the house, authorities said.

The family friend, John Esposito, 43, was arrested and faced arraignment Thursday on a kidnapping charge.

Katie Beers, who had been caught in a custody battle between her mother and godmother, was found at Esposito's home after he told his lawyers he knew where she was and took authorities to his house, said Sidney Siben, one of the lawyers.

There, he pulled back a bookcase and pulled up a rug, revealing an underground room outfitted with a bed, toilet and television, Siben said.

"Katie was able to crawl out," Siben said. "She was just very happy to be out. She looked a little scared but was in good shape," he said.

Police have said they questioned Esposito for as long as 18 hours shortly after he reported the girl missing Dec. 28. He said he lost her at a video amusement center in Nesconset, on Long Island. He denied any role in the disappearance, but police found no witnesses to corroborate his account.

Police were posted in Esposito's house 24 hours a day, said Suffolk County Police Commissioner Peter Cosgrove. But the girl was held against her will in another part of the house all 16 days she was missing, he said.

Esposito pleaded guilty about 15 years ago to charges of unlawful imprisonment of a 12-year-old boy.

If convicted of second degree kidnapping, Esposito faces a possible sentence of 8 1/3 to 25 years in prison.

Polish ferry overturns in Baltic Sea

RUEGEN, Germany (AP) — At least 32 people died yesterday when a ferry capsized in a violent storm near this Baltic Sea island between Poland and Sweden, authorities said.

The Polish ferry carrying 60 people was sinking about 18 miles east of Ruegen. Only its keel was still above water, officials said.

A storm packing winds of 90 mph raging across the Baltic apparently capsized the ship. Many passengers jumped into the ice-cold waters, officials said.

Police in Schwerin, an east German port city, said at least 32 people had died.

German and Swedish rescue helicopters and ships were searching for survivors.

The 412-foot Jan Heweliusz was carrying 29 crewmembers and 31 passengers from the Swedish port of Ystad to Swinemunde, Poland, authorities said.

FOR ANYONE INTERESTED IN RUNNING FOR STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT

January 18, 1993
Montgomery Theatre
7:30 p.m.
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush today issued a final report on his economic policy, proclaiming that while the country has come through three years of recession, better days are ahead.

Bush was "last Economic Report of the President" to deliver the past 12 years of Republican leadership. The 454-page report took issue with what it called "the prophets of declension" who contend the country is on Its way to a secular, slow-growth economic power. It also blasted "revisionists" who said the government had wrongly tried to blame the recent period of sluggish growth on ill-conceived policies during the Reagan and Bush years.

Soaring that inflation and interest rates are now at the lowest levels in a generation, the president said the country was on the threshold of a period of sustained economic growth.

"America's future can and should be bright," Bush wrote in transmitting the report to Congress. "This economy is the strongest, largest, most successful in the world with the highest standard of living."

The report, prepared by Bush's Council of Economic Advisers, said the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, will grow at 2.8 percent this year. It said this pace will be enough to push the average unemployment rate down to 6.9 percent.

The jobless rate climbed to a 28-year high during 1992 and this rise during an election year was one of the factors cited for Bush's defeat.

The forecast for modest growth in 1993 with inflation remaining well under control was in line with the expectations of many private economists.

Bush's last economic report summed many of the Republican themes of the past decade, including the need to reduce the burden of government regulations and the benefits of lower tax rates to spur private investment.

Bush got in one last plug for his long-sought cut in tax rates on capital gains, the proposal made from the sale of real estate, stocks and other assets.

We agree," he said, "we can have lower tax rates with a more business-friendly economic climate."

Commission members did not question Gould about his public statements in the summer and fall of 1988, when he said it was unclear whether a taxpayer bailout was needed. Yet President Bush, within days of taking office in January 1989, asked Congress for $50 billion for S&Ls.

Andrew Brimmer, co-chairman of the commission, said the report "will be a powerful tool in operating early last summer. He praised the report as a "well-documented, calm and a holdup in making the original appointments."

The House Agriculture Committee has been considering a de­cision to delay the work of the commission, which is not required to have a report in the public domain before the 1992 elections.

Although the commission is focusing on the systemic re­forms for the S&L crisis, it will not be able to answer the questions of individuals when warranted, he said.

Retail sales jump with holidays

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retail sales jumped 1.2 percent in December as consumers enjoyed their best holiday season in five years, the government said today in further evidence of an improving economy.

The increase in sales, however, as auto dealers en­joyed their best holiday season in five years, the government said today in further evidence of an improving economy.

The overall increase was still better than analysts had been expecting and depicted an economy that was slowly begin­ning to rebound following a prolonged period of stagnation.

In other economic news, the government reported a dis­appointing increase in the number of Americans filing for unemployment benefits. The Commerce Dept. reported job­less claims jumped by 5,000 for the final week of the year, the biggest gain in five months.

The Labor Department said first-time claims for unemployment insurance to­taled 343,000 for the week ended Jan. 2, up from 291,000 a week earlier. Analysts said the increase reflected job­less claims amid the holiday season.

"In January we will see further signs that employ­ment is shifting from a recession where it is very difficult to read these numbers," he said. But in better news, the gov­ernment reported that wholesale prices for all of 1992 rose by 1.6 percent, the second lowest showing in the past six years.

Mike Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm, said the report was "a victory" for Washington economic forecasting agencies. "It was a first year increase in prices of finished goods at the wholesale level since they jumped 5.7 per­cent in 1990."

The report attributed much of the increase to a 1.5 percent advance in food costs, including a sharp rise in the price of fresh and dry vegetables.

It was the first yearly in­crease in prices of finished goods at the wholesale level since they jumped 5.7 per­cent in 1990.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Alumni Association says “thank you” to students

Dear Editor:

We would be very appreciative if you print the following as soon as possible:

To the Notre Dame, Saint Mary’s and Holy Cross students who participated in Cotton Bowl activities in Dallas.

On behalf of the Notre Dame Alumni Association and the Notre Dame Club of Dallas, I would like to thank all the students who participated in the various activities surrounding the Cotton Bowl.

It is our sincere hope that you found the Hospitality Center, pep rally, Masses, and game-day activities enjoyable. We would especially like to thank members of the pom pom squad, the cheerleading team, the marching band and Glee Club whose talents added greatly to the festive nature of the weekend.

Our goal was to make your stay as enjoyable as possible and to remind you that your Alumni Association is first and foremost a service organization. Stop by our in 201 Main Building if we can be of assistance.

Harassing phone calls intolerable

Dear Editor:

As many of you are aware, several students reported that they received racially harassing phone calls during the closing weeks of the Fall semester. Unfortunately, harassing and obscene phone calls are not a new phenomenon in society at large or on the Notre Dame campus.

Each year the Notre Dame Security Department receives numerous reports of harassing telephone calls. The calls take different forms and are directed at different people within the University community. Sometimes the calls are racially harassing in nature or are targeted at a particular ethnic group. Sometimes they are sexually or otherwise harassing. Sometimes the calls are directed at faculty, sometimes at students or administrators.

In all instances, this behavior is totally unacceptable. Beginning in the middle of the Fall semester, but in particular in the period following Thanksgiving break, several students reported to Notre Dame Security that they had received racially harassing phone calls that began to emerge as a pattern of offensive behavior by one or more individuals. At a time when Notre Dame is striving to be a welcoming and inclusive community, these calls are particularly reprehensible.

The person or persons making such calls attempt to frighten and intimidate the victims while hiding behind a veil of anonymity. Such cowardly actions are intolerable in any community and are especially offensive in a Catholic university where respect for the worth and dignity of each and every member of the community is central to our academic mission and Christian tradition.

The Notre Dame Security Department gives careful attention to every report of a harassing phone call. Every effort is made to identify the person or persons responsible, as well as to protect the good order of the community and the privacy of each victim.

If it is determined that the person or persons responsible for these phone calls are students, adjudication of this serious breach of University standards of behavior will be handled by the Office of Residence Life in accordance with the procedures set forth in du Lac. If you should receive a harassing, obscene or threatening phone call, or if you have any information about such calls, please contact the Notre Dame Security Department at 631-5555.

I urge each member of the University community to join in condemning this unacceptable behavior, and I ask for your assistance in preventing its occurrence in the future.

QUOTES, P.O. Box Q, ND, IN 46556
Experts and intellectuals should stick to their field

Americans have an odd view of advanced education. Holders of physics doctorates become international relations, and so on. This causes two serious problems: First, it fools many intellectuals into thinking they are experts in fields far outside their area of expertise, and, second, it causes many Americans to accept as fact the opinions of people who often do not know what they are talking about.

The heart of the first problem is best illustrated by the following, possibly apocryphal, story. When the American Catholic bishops issued their most recent pastoral letter on the American economy (in which they advised politicians and economists on how to deal with a number of economic problems), most notably poverty, a Nobel prize-winning economist Milton Friedman to get his reaction.

Friedman, with no theological training, responded, "Economists were touched by the bishops' concerns. In gratitude they awarded a number of us are writing an authoritative statement on the immaculate conception, which we hope to send the bishops in the near future.

Many intellectuals make the same mistake the bishops made. Jean-Paul Sartre, for example, felt that her background in pediatrics qualified her to speak about theology. When Cambridge mathematician and physicist Stephen Hawking toured the country a few years ago after publication of his book "A Brief History of Time," interviewers bombarded him with questions about the existence and nature of God. This of course was as foolish as asking him whether the Fed ought to lower interest rates further to stimulate the economy, or whether UNLV should have been given the NCAA "death penalty." Hawking is a physicist, not a philosopher (to his credit, he generally told the interviewers as much). Similarly, the media and the public took the American Catholic Bishops' letters on the economy and nuclear war quite seriously. Likewise, another leftish theologian, Dr. Benjamin Spock, attracted large audiences when he spoke out against nuclear weapons in the 70s and 80s.

The embarrassing list goes on and on. Another example: in my own field, law, the American Bar Association (the semi-official representative of nearly all American attorneys) regularly issues statements and press releases on political, theological, and political issues such as abortion and affirmative action. These are only a few of the most prominent examples of the problem; there seems to be a general consensus among highly educated intellectuals that they themselves are experts on all issues of public concern. They do not even make a pretense of speaking only as concerned citizens, the con­­scious­ly hold themselves out as experts: The bishops and the American Bar Association (joining the American Medical Association, the American Psychological Association, and a federal district court judge in Texas) held Texas in violation of the Constitution." Nonetheless, Perot convinced himself and a third of the American electorate, before withdrawing from the race in July, that he would make a better President than Bill Clin­­­ton or George Bush. Perot and his followers later acknowledged that his expertise in business somehow translates into expertise in foreign relations, urban issues, and legislative strategy.

In short, it is time for intellectuals in particular and the public in general to realize that theologians are only experts on theology, that lawyers are only experts on law, and that pediatricians are only experts on pediatrics. It does a disservice to all of us to pretend otherwise.

Logan Center offers
diverse volunteer opportunities for students

By Sarah Doran
Assistant Accent Editor

The Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who volunteer at the Logan Center are not only vital to the Center, but also just great to have around to help out, according to Ann Lagomarcino of the Logan Center.

Approximately 75-90 students volunteer varying amounts of their time at the center for the mentally disabled.

Students organize and help participate in three major programs for the Center. The first is the Saturday Rec Program that organizes activities including games and special parties at the center on Saturday mornings like games and special parties around holidays.

The group also runs a Friday night dance at the Center once a month and oversees Friday afternoon bowling outings.

ND Junior Julie Dickmann is a leader of Logan Center volunteers who works in the Saturday Rec Program by going on the bowling outings each Friday, the dancem and the Saturday morning activities.

Dickmann also supervised a group of 100 who came to the Notre Dame vs. BYU football game with student donated tickets. She has also helped organize visits to the Logan Center by the Notre Dame Cheerleaders, Penn-Poos squad and baseball team.

Another of the three groups of student volunteer operations is the Best Buddies program which matches a student with a Logan Center participant and encourages a year-long friendship. There are group activities planned for the best buddies, but it is encouraged to be an individual friendship between the two people.

Super Sibs is the last of the programs and also the most recently organized. It pairs a eighth to 13-year-old Logan Center participant with a volunteer who has a sibling with Down's Syndrome and encourages a strong friendship commitment much like that of the Best Buddies program.

Students can also volunteer in other ways, such as working in the classrooms of the Center with either adults or children. Helping with swimming pool activities to develop sensory stimulation and working with a Tuesday night choir are other options.

Logan Industries, which is affiliated with the Logan Center, is a sheltered workshop that employs 300 people with Down's Syndrome or some type of mental disability. Students can volunteer at Logan Industries and help the clients who work there with safety issues, current events and even those studying for their GED.

The newest program at the Logan Center that is in need of volunteers is the preschool day care center.

The Logan Center appreciates all kinds of volunteers, even those who can help in unconventional ways including using their computer, marketing or photography skills.

Volunteers and children feel a difference with Head Start

By Colleen Knight
Accent Writer

If you love children and you're looking for a worthwhile volunteer opportunity that won't take too much of your time, then Head Start is for you. It requires less than two hours a week, and you can make a difference in the life of a four-year-old, and maybe even in your own life.

Just ask the volunteer coordinator of Head Start, Lois Clark. Last year, a total of 85 students volunteered with the comprehensive child development program. And in the more than 20 years that Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students have been involved with Head Start, three students have gone on to make Head Start their life's vocation after graduation.

Volunteers assist teachers in classes of 20 four-year-old children at sites set up at local schools and churches. They mainly work one-on-one with children, talking and playing with them while actively engaging them in conversation.

Because so many of the children come from difficult situations at home, Clark said that they truly benefit from the individual attention they receive from the volunteers.

But the program also benefits, because the contributions of the volunteers make it possible for Head Start to continue to the receive government funding that makes the program possible.

According to Tamara Lyzinski, group leader of student volunteers, Head Start is a wonderful program if you like to work with young children. "It takes so little time," she said, "and the kids are so receptive to the students."

Vans take groups of students to Head Start sites every morning between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m., bringing them back in time to make their 11 a.m. classes. Volunteers are also needed on afternoons between 12:30 and 3:30 p.m. and students can volunteer as often as they want.

Anyone with a car willing to drive volunteers to sites and anyone interested in volunteering at the sites is encouraged to contact volunteer coordinator Lois Clark at 234-2150 or student group leader Tamara Lyzinski at 634-1349.

Students make a difference

"Dear Big Brothers/Big Sisters, I glanced at the clock during my hectic day as a secretary in a busy office. It was 3:30 p.m. I still had two hours to go, but my son Jay would be leaving school right about then. That day, I didn't have the usual half-guilty gnawing in my stomach, however. I knew that Jay's Big Brother Bob would be waiting for him in his brown pick-up truck for an afternoon together.

Bob entered my son's life four years ago. It wasn't long before Jay, who typically kept to himself was calling Bob his best friend. With Bob's help, Jay has grown from a rebellious, hot-tempered, 11-year-old to a level headed, considerate young man. Thank you! Sincerely, Kaythleen Cune

Fun and Learn volunteers give time and energy to disadvantaged children

By KEVIN DOLAN

If the average Dormer is expected to be awake and alert at 9 a.m. on a Saturday, something very worthwhile had better be happening. If you think that's impossible, then Todd Kazmierski has a surprise for you.

It's called "Fun and Learn." Every Saturday at 9 a.m., 20-25 students from Notre Dame and St. Mary's go to the Hope Rescue Mission at St. Mary's, where they work for approximately three hours with socially and mentally disadvantaged children between ages six and 13.

"It's a great feeling to help these kinds of kids, especially when they need it like their kids do. It's a very rewarding experience," Kazmierski said.

Volunteers lead the children through various activities including arts and crafts, music, and playtime. The kids love every minute of it, according to Kazmierski.

"Sometimes they'll all be waiting outside of the door, jumping around, all excited. They haven't had a lot of opportunities to do things like this, so it's that much more special to them," he said.

According to Fun and Learn's Steve Cozzolino, the skills needed to work with kids like these are not rare, for the most part.

"Obviously, you have to like kids and be a good role model," said Cozzolino. "But, you've got to be pretty motivated to get up that early when you've been out partying all night," he added.

One key aspect of life that Fun and Learn tries to teach the kids is group cooperation. "We're promoting friendships between the students and the kids, but we also help them to get along better with other people. Many of them have difficulties in that area," said Kazmierski, citing attention-deficit disorder as one such affliction.

Sometimes, though, the relationship between student and protege becomes stronger, to the benefit of both parties involved. "I've worked with the same kid for four years now, and we're really good friends. His family has given me a sort of home-away-from-home," Cozzolino said.

"It's tough leaving them at the end of the year, when you've seen them grow and have grown with them," Kazmierski said.

Still, many participants stay in touch with their "little brothers/sisters" over the summer months. Fun and Learn is hoping for approximately 10 new volunteers each year, according to Kazmierski.

"For some of these kids, Saturday morning is the best part of the week," Kazmierski said.

Hope Rescue Mission seeks student volunteers

By KENYA JOHNSON

Assistant Accent Editor

There's a little run down building south of downtown South Bend on U.S. 31 which many people don't even know exists.

A place in need of much more support—financially, voluntarily, and spiritually. A place, that with the effort and love of just a few dedicated souls, houses unfortunate, uprooted persons that happen to be without shelter.

This somewhat overlooked shelter is the Hope Rescue Mission of South Bend and "they need all the help they can round up," said junior Mark Krejci, one of 11 students in Professor Benedict Giamo's American Studies class, "Confronting Homelessness in America" in which one requirement was volunteering at Hope Rescue Mission or The Center for the Homeless.

"Hope is much different for the Center for the Homeless," said Krejci. "Hope doesn't have the resources the Center has since the Center receives a tremendous amount of support from Notre Dame and the South Bend community, perhaps their situation wouldn't be as strained.

Sophomore Greg Behr said part of the problem with Hope receiving aid is the way the public views the two centers.

"Hope Rescue Mission was able to maintain the same kind of support from Notre Dame and the South Bend community, perhaps their situation wouldn't be as strained.

Sophomore Greg Behr said part of the problem with Hope receiving aid is the way the public views the two centers.

"Hope Rescue Mission is a lot older than the Center," said Behr. "Its structure is not as modern, its not as bright. These aspects have an effect on how the public sees the shelters."

The Center for the Homeless may be more appealing to volunteers, suggested senior Natalie Updike.

"Hope cannot compare to the Center, but that's no reason to neglect it," said Updike. "Hope needs just as many volunteers, if not more.

Like the others, Updike agreed the Hope Rescue Mission is often overlooked because of its smaller, less modern facilities.

Hope Rescue Mission has the following volunteer positions available: receptionist, driver, kitchen help, to server, maintenance, office assistant, and Bible study and chapel service leadership. For more information call Joan at 288-4842.
Dear Bill and Al:

Messiah is another of the generation which parented the baby-bombers, I voted for you in December, and have been nervous about it ever since.

The woman you have designated as the new Surgeon General hasn't helped any, since she's remembered for saying that Americans must get over their love affair with the fetus. It would be healthier, she has suggested, if they'd put more faith in condoms, which will save us from dying of AIDS.

If that's all the brave, new world you promised us has to offer, January 20 will not be remembered as the start of the Messianic Age in America, the beautiful, on which God has shed His every grace.

Pro-choice or pro-life are labels which can put us on notice of what to expect from a merely political candidate, but a Messiah is needed whom we can entrust with the Dream. Part of his mission will be to deliver us from the fear, selfishness, and poverty that discourage people from welcoming children as blessings from God.

"I tell you naught for your comfort/Yea, naught for your desire/Save that the sky grows darker yet/And the sea rises higher." (This verse from Chesterton was used on the leader page of the London Times on the day England went to war with the Nazis.)

"You're better off under the Umbrella." (Across from Chesterton, was the verse from Chesterton that you used on the graduation program, which kept away bishops, while the rogue-elephant papists, Democrats, and brigs-ands were not invited to the graduation while the rogue-elephant papists, Democrats, and brigs-ands were not invited to the graduation.

Voting as a Democrat
All I know about the Bush visit, Moynihan's Lactate Medal, and the Cardinal who never left Ireland is what I read in the papers. The President's commencement address was Father Murphy Brown a household name.

The President, side-stepping politics, promoting family values, praised the graduates by playing to the house, especially the parents. A cluster of the graduates wore white arm bands, presumably as a protest to the pooh-bahs under the Dome who invited him, allegedly because they were hand-lickers falling over themselves with eagerness to kiss Caesar's robe.

Bush wasn't at Notre Dame to deliver a Saint Crispin's Day speech. His message boiled down to the idea that the family that prays together, stays together.

You could get the impression from hearing him that America's foreign wars were fought chiefly by Pro-Lifers who worked class people on their knees in the hope with Of Shap thecele to beside them, asking the Author of Liberty to preserve our Dream.

He may not have been explicit in saying any of these things, but it was a generic speech that implied them, if you wanted it to.

The irony is that in staging this conviction as part of the show-and-tell of the Sequen­cential celebration, Notre Dame shone itself in the font by allowing a Jonah on board as the Lactate Medalist.

The image-makers were left talking each other with an embar­rassing chuckle: "After all, it's our gun and our foot." They stayed busy trouble-shooting for a week: "No, madam. This doesn't mean Senator Kennedy will get the Medal next year, when your grandson is gradu­ating."

And so on that day in the JACC, the graduation platform served as a showcase for scandal which kept away bishops, while the rogue-elephant Catholic Senator from New York listened to the Happy Warrior of the Persian Gulf, narrating his New England heart out to papists, Democrats, and shakers and movers from Pax Christi.

Nobody denounced him for kicking ass in Iraq or even New York, saying to the Pope: "No, he's an an­archist! A polygamist! Did he advocate the overthrow of America by force?"

Chesterton said: "I have stood on the other side of Jordan, in a land ruled by a rude Arab chief where the police look so like brigands that one wondered if they were not."

But they did not ask me whether I had come to subvert the power of the Shareef, and they did not exhibit the least curiosity about my personal views on the ethical basis of American politics.

Volcano eruptions in Colombia; six dead

BOGOTA, Columbia (AP) — A volcano erupted in southern Colombia as scientists warned that hundreds of injured and missing people might be killed.

Some 150 researchers were killed, eight injured and 10 missing, officials said.

"I can hear people below in the crater screaming for help," radio reporter Jose Mesenes said in a live broadcast from inside the crater after Thursday night's explosion.

Sixty-five people were turned back by swarms of super-heated rocks and ash.

Three of the injured were identified as Americans and the other 50 were Colombians.

The names of those killed or injured were not immediately available.

It was unknown if any Americans were killed.

"It's a terrible situation," said a doctor who witnessed the eruption.

Some 100,000 Colombians and other scientists from around the world were attending a conference in Pasto, part of a U.N.-supported effort to study 150 volcanoes around the world.

The gathering was the second of three.

The first was in September in Seattle to study Mount Rainier.

Steven Bramley of the U.S. Geological Service said there had been travel advisories involving the region.

Dallas stages record pep rally

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboy fans jammed into Texas Stadium on Thursday night for the biggest pep rally in the state's history. A crowd estimated at more than 70,000 gave a rousing sendoff for Sunday's NFC championship game against the San Francisco 49ers.

The fans cheered widely as they were introduced for brief remarks. Jones estimated the crowd at more than 50,000 even though 5,000 seats of the 65,000 ca-parity seat in Texas Stadium were blocked off for a short fireworks display near the end of the rally.

"We had thousands of fans outside unable to get inside," Jones said, after the rally. "We just had no idea that this many people would show up. We certainly anticipated a lot, but this was outstanding. The NFL and certainly the Cowboys really do want this kind of spirit. This is what sports and football should be about."

Quarterback Troy Aikman, running back Emmitt Smith and other Cowboys, one by one, kept the fans in a frenzy when they appeared, spoke, and when the highlights of the 1992 season were flashed on two giant screens in the stadium.

Earlier in the rally, five former great Cowboys took the stage and also got ovations. They were quarterback Roger Staubach, running backs Tony Dorsett and Robert Newhouse, tight end Billy Joe DuPree and wide receiver Bob Hayes.

Staubach and Dorsett drew screams. The crowd thundered, "No!" "Let me ask that again! Are you satisfied?" "No!" The crowd responded.

Aikman seeks respect versus San Francisco

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Troy Aikman, it seems, always has something to prove to his critics.

"It's not enough that he's led Dallas to 14 victories, including a playoff triumph over the Philadelphia Eagles in his first postseason start."

He still knows what some people will be saying.

"One of the storylines this week will be 'He's not been in the conference championship game and what kind of pressure will he feel since I've never defeated San Francisco,'" the Cowboys' quarterback said. "I keep having to prove myself. The media puts me to the test each week. Each week they put a different obstacle in front of me."

"It's not that Aikman, a top draft pick in 1989 out of UCLA, tries to dodge any issues or teams. If anything, he's been accused of being too macho, staying in the pocket too long, and taking dangerous chances when he does scramble."

"I like pressure," he said. "It's wonderful to play in a city where football matters to people."

His durability has been a controversial topic. But he answered those critics by getting through a long season with only one hurt finger. He never missed a minute and said "They worked very hard but their work is not done. I'll ask you the same question I asked them 'are you satisfied?' The crowd responded. "No!" "Let me ask that again! Are you satisfied?" "No!" The crowd responded.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — After two straight Super Bowl losses, some people perceive the Buffalo Bills as losers. Don't count the Miami Dolphins among them.

If anything, the Dolphins are convinced the Bills are a team to emulate. With the way Buffalo has performed in this postseason, that's not a bad idea.

"I might hate them — I hate every opponent when we're playing them, but I respect them as a great team," Bill Parcells, the Dolphins' head coach, said yesterday. "I think they respect us, too."

"You have to look at what they've done. They went to two Super Bowls, which is a lot better than most teams do. They got all those injuries, but they still make that comeback and then go into Pitts­burgh... We respect them as winners and they have to feel that way about us because we both got here."

To Sunday's AFC championship game, that is. In 1990 and '91, the Bills were home for the final step to the Super Bowl and beat the Raiders, then the Broncos. The next step, winning the NFL title, has yet to be taken.

"Does that make us losers?" receiver James Lofton asked with a look of incredulity.

"Losers are not teams with our record," Parcells said. "They don't win the Super Bowl! Does anyone say that Super Bowl doesn't mean you're a loser? You're the second-best team in the NFL and you're right up there. "All it means to me is that you retain that hunger to get back there and to win it."

Unfortunately, that has not been the way the public has responded. Think about Bud Grant's Minnesota Vikings, 0-4 in the Super Bowl. How are they remembered?
Seles named female athlete of the year for second time

Monica Seles repeated herself in 1992, winning three of the four Grand Slam tournament titles and dominating women's tennis for the second straight year.

Today, she repeated as Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year. Seles, who won every Grand Slam tournament except Wimbledon last year and reached the final in 14 of 15 tournaments, is the first woman to win the award in consecutive years since another tennis star, Chris Evert, in 1974-75.

Seles said she was honored — and fortunate — to get the award.

"I think last year was pretty lucky," she said in Melbourne while preparing for the Australian Open. "I can't go on winning three Grand Slams and getting into the finals of every tournament."

Seles, who turned 19 last month, beat out a strong field of Olympic stars for the AP award. She received 40 first-place votes and 296 points from a nationwide group of writers and broadcasters. Figure skater Kristi Yamaguchi finished second with 29 first-place votes and 257 points, while track and field star Jackie Joyner-Kersee was third with 23 and 210.

Soccer star Mia Hamm was fourth, followed by sprinter Gail Devers, gymnast Shannon Miller,awiad Summer Sanders, hockey goalie Manon Rheaume, race car driver Lyn St. James and skier Petra Kruerberger.

It is rare for a non-Olympian to win the award in an Olympic year. It has happened only three previous times — Evert in 1980, Mickey Wright in 1964 and Maureen Connolly in 1952.

Connolly is the only tennis player to win the award three consecutive years (1951-53). Four other tennis stars — Seles, Evert, Althea Gibson and Alice Marble — have won it twice in a row.

In 1992, Seles won the Australian, French and U.S. Opens for the second straight year. But her bid for a Grand Slam sweep was stopped by Steffi Graf in the championship match at Wimbledon, the only Grand Slam title Seles has never won.

Although women's tennis is probably more competitive than ever, Seles is the undisputed queen. She won 78 of 75 matches last year, earned a record $2.6 million on the tour, captured her third straight Virginia Slims Championship and retained the No. 1 ranking she has held since March 1991.

Most of her victims felt like Martina Navratilova did after losing to Seles 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 in the Slams final. "In the last two sets I got run truck," Navratilova said. "It's amazing to me that she can do the ball that hard that close to the line so consistently." The only major prizes that eluded Seles last year were Wimbledon and an Olympic gold medal. Seles, a native of Yugoslavia who now lives in Florida, was ineligible for the Barcelona Games because she didn't participate in the Fed Cup.

Seles made headlines with her noisy grunts on the court as tennis superstar Monica Seles won her second straight AP Female Athlete of the Year award yesterday.

Afterward, Seles said she would concentrate more on shutting down her opponents than shutting up during matches.

Swimming teams ready to tackle weekend challenges

Back from Tempe, women face Northern Illinois

By HALEY SCOTT
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's swim team returned to action this weekend with their first meet of 1993. The Irish women, who faced Northern Illinois University on Saturday at 2 p.m. also began training for the second semester season.

The Irish also competed in the Arizona State Invitational while training in Tempe. Notre Dame finished seventh out of eight teams, behind nationally ranked Arizona State. Head coach Tim Welsh said of the meet, "I was really pleased with the way we swam, and with the way we trained."

"We are in real good shape and ready to swim hard this weekend," said sophomore Jenni Dahl.

Last year the Irish beat Northern Illinois, 128-88, with only ten swimmers competing. This year Notre Dame is clearly our team and is expected to dominate. Assistant coach Randy Julian is confident that Notre Dame will win. "Our depth as a team makes it difficult for a team like Northern Illinois to beat us. NIU's team this year is very similar to the team last year, whereas our team has gotten stronger," noted Julian.

Without being over-confident, the Irish women will swim a variety of events tomorrow. Distance freestylers will be sprinting, while the sprint freestylers will be swimming other events such as butterfly and backstroke. "We can't take this meet for granted, but we also don't want to give everyone a chance to swim different events," said Julian.

The focus of the meet this weekend, according to Julian, is to swim fast and prepare the team for the St. Bonaventure meet in two weeks.

"Sweetness" headlines finalists for Hall of Fame

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time leading rusher, was named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame's Class of 1996.

Payton rushed for more than 1,000 yards in 16 of his 13 seasons with the Chicago Bears. His 16,726 yards and 110 rushing touchdowns are both all-time NFL records. Twice the NFL player of the year (1977, 1985), the Jackson State.prod topped 100 yards in rushing 77 times in his career.

Noll led the Pittsburgh Steelers to Super Bowl victories in 1975, 1976, 1979 and 1980 — more than any other NFL franchise. Over his 23-year coaching career, his teams were 209-136-1 including 16-8 in his postseason.

Joiner took over a team that hadn't won a title since joining the NFL in 1933. Sixth all time in coaching victories, he played guard for the Cleveland Browns for seven years and was an NFL assistant nine years before building the Steelers' dynasty in the 1970s.

Walsh took over a San Francisco 49ers team that was 2-14 the year before the Super Bowl in three years. Under Walsh, the 49ers won the NFC West in 1982 and 1989. Currently the coach at Stanford, Walsh was 102-63-1 in his career.

Joiner, who spent most of his career with the Chargers and also played for the Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Bengals, had 750 receptions in 18 seasons. Winslow, who spent all of his nine seasons with the Chargers, had 541 catches in his career.

good shots, keep Michigan off the offensive boards, and prevent them from making second shots. MacLeod hopes that playing mostly man-to-man on defense, his team will do this.

He also hopes that matching bigger players such as Billy Taylor, Carl Cozen, or Malik Russell up with Michigan's talented 6'8" point guard Jalen Rose, who averages 1.5 points a game and switches between 4-3, may help the Irish defense. The team that the Irish face is almost the same team that defeated them by 26 points last season in the NCAA tournament one year's experience, the experience of an NCAA tournament, and the experience of already beating three ranked teams this season (North Carolina, Kansas, and Purdue).

"We need to keep concentrating on our rebounding and defense," McGraw explained. "We've been shooting the ball very well and we didn't turn it over too much tonight and that's what we have to do Saturday."
Streaking hockey team set for pivotal CCHA matchups

By DOMINIC AMOROSA
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame hockey team rides a three-game winning streak into this weekend's games against Miami of Ohio on Friday night and Kent State on Saturday night at the JACC.

These games are part of a six-game homestand which began with a two-game sweep of Ohio State last weekend. The overall series between Miami and the Irish is tied at four-apiece, while the Irish hold a 13 to 8 edge with Kent.

Notre Dame (6-13-1; 4-11-1 in CCHA) moved into a tie for eighth place in the CCHA with last weekend's sweep. In their last 12 games, the Irish are 6-5-1, but they have won 4 of their last 5.

With Irish head coach Bee Shafer tending to a family crisis, Irish assistant coaches Tom Carroll and Jim Johnson might handle the coaching duties this weekend because Shafer's return is questionable.

Carroll credited the team's hardwork for their recent success. "Our tremendous work on and off the ice has started to pay off and we've gained some dividends," noted Carroll.

"We must capitalize on our success and continue to win," he added.

Miami University comes into Friday night's game ranked fifth in the nation, leading the CCHA with a 13-6-3 record. The Redhawks are coming off a weekend in which they gained three points from nationally-ranked Lake Superior State.

The Ohio school is led by All-American candidate Brian Savage. Savage, a junior center, has scored 19 goals and dished out 11 assists. "We must contain Savage as well as their other key weapons," said Carroll.

Ohio's other weapons include senior defenseman Joe Cook (6 goals, 17 assists), senior forward Chris Bergstrom (8 G, 19 A) and sophomore Matt Oates (8 G, 12 A).

Carroll cites Miami's hard work as their key strength. "They have great team speed; they take advantage of opportunities and are a very disciplined team," said Carroll. In order to counter their speed, Carroll stated that "we must limit our mistakes in the neutral zone."

Miami took two victories from the Irish when the teams met at Goggin Arena earlier in the season (Nov 6-7). However, the Irish have improved dramatically since that time. Seniors Curtis Janicek, Eric Gregoire and Dave Bankoske have increased their production considerably.

Janicek, last season's top scorer, has six goals and 13 assists in the last nine games. Gregoire, a senior defender, has been a defensive stopper and Carroll cites his play as a key to their success. The other senior, Bankoske, sat out all last season with an injury. However, he has come on strong recently with eight goals and six assists in his last 10 games.

"Our seniors have increased their production and we need them to step up again this weekend," commented Carroll.

Another reason for Notre Dame's surge has been the consistent play of freshman Jaime Ling. Ling is the leading freshman scorer in the CCHA and is ranked tenth overall in the league scoring column.

The biggest surprise for the Irish has been the reemergence of junior goaltender Greg Louder. Louder, out of action for two weeks in mid-November, was named the CCHA/Michigan Hockey Magazine Defensive Player of the Week for his performance last weekend. His response to his improved play is reserved. "It feels good to come back and play well for a string of games," said Ling.

As for this weekend, he feels the Irish "need to keep up the pace and play as well as last weekend." Carroll and the rest of the coaching staff is elated with Louder's play. "It gives us four goalies who are comfortable in the pipes," stated Carroll.

Although Miami is a national power, Carroll is taking it in stride. "It's just like any other game—we need the two points and a win would move us up in the standings," said Carroll. The players are confident as Louder noted that, "We want to keep going from here."

As for Saturday's game, Kent State, with a 7-10-3 record, does not possess the same firepower as Miami. However, the Golden Flashes swept 2Detalle contested games from the Irish back in October and Carroll knows the revenge factor will be evident. "We could have won both games and we're anxious for another chance to prove ourselves," noted Carroll.

Irish assistant coach Jim Johnson calls them, "a good defensive team with a blue collar attitude." As for the Irish's approach, "we must use our quickness and speed to counter-attack and get goals in transition."

The confidence of the Irish is at an all-time high and they are itching to knock off two conference foes this weekend. Earlier this year, the Irish wanted to be competitive, now they want to win.

Fencing opens season against OSU this weekend

By KEVIN JANICKI Sports Writer

The Notre Dame fencing squad opens the season this weekend in Evanston, Illinois with two days of competition against several tough opponents. Last year’s NCAA sev­eral place finisher Wayne State brings its outstanding team, featuring a women’s squad that promises to contend for the national championship this year.

Also participating in the meet will be a tough Cal State Long Beach team, MIT, Tri State, Michigan State, and U. Cal San Diego. Finally, the women face defending national champion Temple.

The Irish returned to school on January 7th to begin three days of double sessions before returning to a regular practice schedule on Tuesday.

Men’s head coach Mike DiGero is optimistic about breaking into this opening meet. After several pre-season events, it appears that his top fencers are prepared to open the season well. This weekend’s number one fencers will be captains James Talalero in the saber event, Piper in the foil event, and Grzegorz Wozniak in the epee.

Chris McQuade and Bernie Rice will compete for three spots for the sabre. Stan Brunner and Jordan Maggio or Rich Kurz will hold those spots in the foil division.

For the women, top fencer Maria Pazny from Hung­ary will not be available to fence as her eligibility is yet to be confirmed by the NCAA. Freshman Claudette de Brain senior Kathleen Veg ert and junior Kimberly Arndt will be called upon to lead the women’s list.

How well the women can face without their leading fencer and how the Irish’s other strong returners will perform in a tough early season match will be determined this weekend in Evanston.

Men set to challenge Webb and mighty Wolverines

By BRIAN KUBICKI Sports Writer

Notre Dame has the reputation of playing by the rules. This weekend, however, the men’s basketball team would like to break just one law—Murphy’s.

Not only do the Irish have to travel to Ann Arbor to face the second-ranked Michigan Wolverines, who will be pumped up after losing to Indiana on Tuesday, but Notre Dame’s leading scorer and rebounder, senior Monty Williams, had not even played. If anything, he can go wrong, the Irish hope it won’t.

Coach John MacLeod said the forward may not practice today or play in Saturday’s match-up. According to MacLeod, Williams slipped on a wet floor during Tuesday’s Stanford game and “did the splits”. The actual nature of the injury has not yet been determined at press time.

The loss of their leading rebounder and scorer is even more devastating since the Wolverines’ strengths are their rebounding and their defense. “Michigan is a powerful team that has the ability to miss a shot and get the ball back,” said MacLeod. “They will crash the offensive boards.”

Crashing those boards will be national stand-out, Chris Webber, who leads Michigan with 9.7 rebounds and 20.3 points per game and fellow-sophomore Juwan Howard, pulling down 6.9 rebounds and putting in 14.6 points a game.

As much as the coach worries about his opponent’s rebounding, it is their defense that most impresses him. The Wolverines have held their opponents to 10.3% shooting percentage and blocked 84 shots to 33 by the opposition. Webber leads them again with 46 blocks.

“People do not talk about it, but you’ve got to credit (Michigan head coach) Steve Fisher. He has them playing tough defense,” MacLeod said. “They do have individual talent, but they mesh.”

Despite these obstacles, MacLeod has not conceded the game to Michigan. “We know what we’re up against, but we are prepared for every situation,” he said. The answer is shoot yeah, we’re gonna try.”

What the Irish will try to do is work for a better season after last year’s disappointment.

The Observer/John Brigham

Senior guard Coquese Washington contributed 10 points in last night’s win.

The loss of their leading rebounder and scorer is even more devastating since the Wolverines’ strengths are their rebounding and their defense. “Michigan is a powerful team that has the ability to miss a shot and get the ball back,” said MacLeod. “They will crash the offensive boards.”
