Keren: Difference in Middle East mind-set deters peace

By JESSE BARRETT
News Writer

A major difference in mind-sets among Israelis and Palestinians exists, according to Michael Keren, a professor from Tel Aviv University.

This split between pragmatism and idealism is a "discrepancy between states of mind which threatens to undermine the peace process in the Middle East," Keren said yesterday in his lecture "The Middle East and the New World Order." There is a "trend to pragmatization of Israeli thinking in regards to their role in the Middle East," he said. The Palestinians are unable to accept the pragmatic approach and are in a stage where questions such as sovereignty cannot be put aside for pragmatic confidence building measures." "The New World Order is not a new situation in international politics," Keren said. "Many things have changed and much is still changing. These changes are not a signal of the end of a political and ideological struggle. We should not refer to the Order as an entirely new situation, but as an opportunity to play a different ballgame in international politics.

A signal of this change is that Israel is currently making progress in negotiations with Syria and Jordan on issues such as water rights, disputed territories, and mutual ecological projects, he said. These nations show a willingness to bargain and put aside ideological differences.

Weigle: New center-right relationship may be only alternative in former U.S.S.R.

By EMILY HAGE
News Writer

A new center-right relationship may be the only alternative to anarchy in the former Soviet Union.

According to Marcia Weigle, an assistant professor of government at Tel Aviv University.

In her lecture yesterday, "State Formation and Political Parties in Post-Communist Russia," Weigle, who is an expert on the new Soviet Union and social movements, discussed recent changes in Russian history in terms of two major waves of state-party relations.

She said that the first wave, from the spring of 1990 to spring 1992, was because "post-communist reformers and the liberal-democratic coalition failed to consolidate" as a result of disintegrative pressures in the new state and the political party system in addition to the actions of state and party leaders.

The second wave from the fall of 1992 to the present, involved post-communist state leaders and a center-right statist coalition of parties and interest groups.

Weigle said that weigle: there is a daunting array of tasks for Russian political leaders in the post-Soviet Union, with the most pressing being that of establishing state authority.

Weigle approached the issue of the present situation in Russia by concentrating on the institutional and social roots of Russian state power.

"It's really a battle about who controls the government," said Weigle.

She said that the multi-party system is not predetermined. She continued that though "Russia, of all the reforming communist states, was the least prepared to introduce any kind of political parties," political parties and party blocs were the only effective, if extremely weak, form of political representation.

Weigle said that political parties transformed state power from within Russia. She noted that the situation was ironic because, though reforming communists believed that they could use the state to keep political parties in check, these same parties and electoral blocs succeeded in pushing for change.

One way they did this was through self-initiated elections, in March of 1989 and the spring of 1990, said Weigle. These elections, she said, "indicate the capacity of independent political participation to organize its forces in the face of institutionalized opposition."

She said that these events were not "something that could have been taken for granted."

There was an absence of a moderate right party because of the link between nationalism and hardliners and chauvinists. She said that there were "missed opportunities to link new state power with liberal-democratic party coalition."

Weigle said that although parties have gained more power in legislature, "their representation in parliament no longer reflects their standing in the political process or among the general public."

She said that Yeltsin's lack of control over governmental appointees will harm political parties whose candidates were being appointed to government positions.

Weigle said that the preferability of the "second wave" of state/party relations, the state
Memories and thanks: a JPW tribute

My first memory reaches back almost nineteen years ago. I was sitting on the kitchen counter, eating cinnamon red hots. For some reason, Gammy (my grandmother) was in New York, watching the weather while Mom and Dad were gone. It was some reason that I did not know. As my memory jogs back, Gammy did not really mean that I was making a glutton of myself with the red hots. Next, I remember Mom and Dad coming back with a new-born sister.

I remember the last day of nursery school. The school invited all of the parents to the school to watch us ride around on tricycles and then have a hot dog lunch. Dad took off work so that he could come. I remember lobbying hard at lunch to stop at the grocery store on the way home for some of those Double Stuff Oreos cookies that one of the girls in the class had brought for the potluck dessert table.

I remember those summer days and evenings of grade school when all of the neighborhood kids would flock to our backyard for endless games of kickball. Our supply of hand-aided was constantly being taxed with scraped knees and elbows. Mom was continually making pitchers of Kool-Aid to quench the thirsts of the neighborhood youth.

I remember those nights before the grade school science fairs when Mom and Dad were trying to get my sister and me to start and finish the science projects due the next day.

I remember the taxi service that Mom and Dad ran to the birthday parties, the roller skating parties, the CYO basketball games and whatever else was on the agenda.

I remember the days of junior high school. Those days of ups and downs. Those days when Mom and Dad had to deal with me and my friends who knew it all and proceeded to let everyone know it. I remember the last days before leaving for college. Mom was scurrying around making sure that I had bed sheets, laundry soap and plenty of underwear and socks. Dad worked those two small miracles of packing more into a car than seemed humanly possible.

After spending three years here at Notre Dame, I have come to realize that the experiences that I have had with my parents are unique but yet shared by nearly all here. None of us has gotten this far on our own. We have some pretty amazing people behind us.

MacCurtain: Irish society favors men

By KATIE MURPHY
News Writer

Post-famine society in Ireland favored the social and political development of only the male half of the Irish population, according to MacCurtain.

The social needs of Irish women were not satisfied in the ways that the needs of the males were satisfied," said MacCurtain, who spoke yesterday in the Hesburgh Library lounge on "The Waxing of a Patriarchy: Ireland in the 1990s." "There was an endless round of pleasurable activities (for males). The women were not satisfied in the season as well as an open forum of American Thursday to enlist citizen support for a pain-them-gain economic plan that he said would keep America's children from having to settle for a "lesser life."

In a campaign-style rally at St. Joseph's Union Station, the opening shot in his drive to win America to his side, Clinton said he was "tired of all the naysayers" who would oppose his budget plan.

"The price of doing the same thing is higher than the price of change," he declared.

Henry Cisneros, Clinton's housing secretary, carried the pitch to Flint, Mich., still reeling from the closing of a big General Motors plant in 1987. He said higher taxes can't be avoided.

"Taxes—even the word is difficult to express," Cisneros said. "I get dry in the mouth, but it's imperative."

But even as Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen returned to Congress to implore legislators to cast "the vote of a lifetime" for Clinton's plan, a new release of fine print from the White House indicated the administration's deficit cutting to be less dramatic than first portrayed.

Republicans, meanwhile, accused Clinton of mounting a propaganda blitz to sell old tax-and-spend solutions disguised in new clothing.

Clinton brushed off questions about new deficit projections as he set out for the Midwest to generate the grassroots support that will be vital if his plan is to survive attacks by powerful interest, criticism by Republicans and misgivings by some fellow Democrats.

In his maiden appearance before Congress Wednesday night, the president proposed raising taxes, directly or indirectly, for most Americans. His ideas would also cut spending in 100 programs but increase it for defense, to reinforce a soft economy, he would cut some business taxes and undertake a quick public works spending program.

This amounted to "reinventing our government," Clinton told the lawmakers. Failure to take painful steps now, he said, would amount to "abandoning our children and our children's children to a lesser life than we enjoyed."

But the new figures from the White House showed that when full accounting is taken of the impact of spending increases and proposed tax cuts, the four-year reduction in deficits would not add up to the half-billion dollars ballyhooed by the ad-

Clinton program is a real change

WASHINGTON (AP) — As more details of President Clinton's policies surface, it's becoming clearer just how fundamental a change he is proposing in the way government does business. The unraveling of the Ronald Reagan legacy is written across the face of government programs, large and small.

"I'm afraid so," the former president said, answering a fellow Republican's own question as he took strong issue with Clinton's assertion, that he wants to tax most those who did well in the 1980s. "Do they really believe that those who have worked hard and been successful should somehow be punished for it?" asked Reagan.

From huge cuts in defense spending and the scaling back of popular projects like the space station, to increases in programs for women, infants and children, to widespread tax increases being proposed, the handwriting is on the wall — the remodeling is everywhere.

"It's not only in the big items, but the little ones as well as the fine print. It's clear that in 12 years we seek to impose a more statist solution.

Clinton's spending proposal includes dozens of items such as more funds to help restore dilapidated public housing, more money for health care for vets and increasing the number of federal meat and poultry inspectors.

"There is a dramatic difference in philosophy that is reflected in Clinton's program and his approach to governance. The contrast is stark," said Thomas Mann, director of governmental studies at Brookings Institution.

Clinton carried on his campaign to undo the Reagan-Bush years on Thursday as the White House released a 145-page book with more details of Clinton's economic proposal.

"Twelve years of neglect have left America's economy suffering from stagnant growth and declining incomes... Such is the sorry legacy of 12 years of shortsightedness, mismanagement and protection of the privileged," Clinton said in an introduction.

The book, which contains most of the detail of a full budget document, did contain one set of figures the administration wasn't particularly bragging about.

A summary table showed that the $493 billion the White House had claimed the day before of reform, depends on how much Russian politics in a state of almost total disintegration.

She said that Russia is "caught between democratic fragmentation and the Charybdis of the hardline strategy... Left-Right opposition." New state leaders may have to rely on a social base with political and economic interests that are unlike the ones that put reformist state leaders in office, Weigle said.

The Clinton administration should try to pragmatize dialogue and resolve Palestinian interests of the government's current peace process. There is an opportunity for a Middle East solution and the Palestinians cannot afford to miss it. The whole peace process is pragmatic, and the Palestinians could well be left out," Keren said.

The Catholic Worker movement was founded in 1913 by two Catholic laypersons, Dad and Mother Amsden. "It's a movement that's been going on for over a century," said Peter Maurin, a homeless epigrammatist.

The movement began as a Sunday evening meeting in the basement of a church and has since grown into a radical newspaper devoted to the social program of the Catholic Church. Its editorial offices in the New York slums soon expanded to accommodate a pacifist and anarchist Catholic community devoted to voluntary poverty, hospitality and the recognition of Christ in the poor. The movement has grown over the years into a loose confederation of such communities.

The exhibition is sponsored by Notre Dame student government and the Student Union Board. It will be at the Center for Social Concerns until April 2, and accessible Mondays through Thursdays from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Saturdays from noon to 2 p.m., and Sundays from 6 to 9 p.m.

"If you look at the vote margin, he doesn't have that many options," said spokeswoman Dee Myer. "He's going to have to prove it; I think the Senate made a pretty strong statement about it.

Seo. Don Nickles, R-Okl., thought so, too, and said the 76-23 vote on his amendment should send the administration a message that letting people with the AIDS virus into the country and letting homosexuals into the military are politically unpopular.

"Frankly, I think President Clinton made a lot of promises to special interest groups that are not in sync with the American people, and this is one of them," Nickles said.

Myers suggested that Clinton had not put up much of a fight on the AIDS issue in the Senate. "The president has been reviewing options for this for the last several weeks, but he's been working primarily on his economic plan," she said.

Up to now, the immigration ban has been a matter of policy that the administration could change. But Nickles' amendment would make that policy a law.

His amendment is attached to a spending bill that authorizes spending for the National Institutes of Health. The bill itself later passed 93-4 and now goes to the House, where a similar effort is under way to put the ban into law.

Before approving Nickles' amendment, the Senate defeat a move by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., that would have kept current federal policy in place for the rest of Clinton's term. Clinton free to change it after that.

Kennedy, whose measure lost on a 56-42 vote, said the United States had obligations that extend beyond its borders. Such obligations, he said, would include political refugees who should not be denied U.S. government protection simply because they have caught a virus.

Kevorkian assists in two more suicides

WATERFORD, Mich. (AP) -- Dr. Jack Kevorkian assisted two more suicides Thursday, bringing to 15 the number of people he has helped die since 1996.

Kevorkian, an advocate of physician-assisted suicide, has speeded up his work as a March 30 deadline approaches. In that time, he has consulted Schwanz on the question of whether to help a patient with the two.

"We can accommodate a pacifist and an intending little more than to distribute a radical newspaper," Schwartz said. "It seems to run up the white flag when both sides are in agreement."
Elders: Teaching abstinence does not work

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Teaching teenagers sexual abstinence hasn't stopped them from getting pregnant or contracting AIDS, so schools should step in with other kinds of information, the nation's next surgeon general said Thursday.

"Every mother I know, every teacher I know, every minister I know, have said they can teach abstinence for a thousand years. We know they're not aborning," said Dr. Joycelyn Elders, chosen for the health post by President Bill Clinton.

Elders, now state health chief in Arkansas, will succeed Dr. Antonia Novello, who steps down Friday.

In a speech to a National School Boards Association panel on school health programs and in later comments, Elders said many parents are ill-equipped to properly teach their children about pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases such as AIDS.

"People always say let the parents take care of it," she said. "Well, nobody ever taught them, so they don't know how to teach their children.

She said 52 percent of children don't go to church and can't receive instruction there.

Elders, 59, is an outspoken pediatrician who has been a target of conservatives and anti-abortion groups since 1987, when then Gov. Clinton made her the first black person and the first woman to head the Arkansas Health Department.

Her resolute support of condom distribution in schools as a means of combating teen pregnancy and AIDS raised the ire of conservative and Christian groups in Arkansas, which has the nation's second highest pregnancy rate among teenagers. Clinton ignored calls for her resignation.

When word of her impending appointment as surgeon general leaked in Washington, the National Right to Life Committee called her a "pro-abortion extremist.

Elders said Thursday her primary goal as surgeon general would be a reduction in the teen pregnancy rate, a goal she never achieved in Arkansas.

"The agenda in my mind is to make every child born in America a planned, wanted child," she said. "I'll take care of that problem ... I will have done a lot."

But Elders said she promoted school clinics because they could reach one-fifth of the nation's population with primary preventive health services.

You have a person in the White House who wants to push school health," she said. "You can't educate children if they're not healthy and you can't keep them healthy if they're not educated."

Correction

In a story in yesterday's issue, The Observer incorrectly reported that a screening and study group has been established during Wednesday's Iceberg Debate by Sheila Moloney of the Breen-Phillips' team. Moloney said that Notre Dame should not compare itself with secular universities in part because the Notre Dame community places technical research, such as fetal tissue studies, ahead of ethical research. Notre Dame banned research with human fetal tissue as contrary to its technical research, such as fetal tissue studies, ahead of ethical research.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coming soon, maybe, to a city near you: freshly paved roads and sidewalks, renovated playgrounds, modern storm sewers and whitewashed rooftops that fully accommodate the disabled.

There are these types of projects that can be funded with a $2.5 billion shot-in-the-arm that President Clinton's economic plan proposes for cities — and for thousands of people who stand in jobs as a result.

The money would come in the form of community development block grants, to be doled out through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Such grants, created by President Richard Nixon, are used for revitalizing neighborhoods and stimulating businesses in cities with at least 50,000 residents.

HUD currently funnels about $4 billion in community development money to cities. Under Clinton's plan, cities would get an extra 60 percent.

So, a city that gets $15 million in community development block grants would get approximately $9 million more.

"We got into the mess we're in because we've neglected paying for our needs," said Wyck, Pa., Mayor William Albans, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. "We've got to rebuild the nation, and you don't do that with $500 million."

"This is the most flexible federal program we've got," he told reporters. "It puts us in a position to act on the need to redefine smaller-scale projects move almost within a master of ways.

"Our role is to make the economic stimulus reach communities all across America, and reach neighborhoods where the jobs machines is not working..."
Christopher calls for peace in Middle East

CAIRO (AP) — Secretary of State Warren Christopher challenged Arabs and Israelis on Thursday to strike compromises quickly or risk diminished U.S. interest in presaging the Middle East peace process.

"There are important opportunities here that should not be missed by the parties," Christopher said on his arrival in Cairo, the first stop on a week-long tour of the region and his first trip abroad since taking office.

"We have come to the region ready to do our best, and we will be assessing whether the parties are ready to do theirs," he said.

A senior U.S. official told reporters on route from Washington that the Arab-Israeli conflict "can't continue to have a high priority if we're pushing against a closed door."

"The official, declining to be identified, said, "It's a big world with lots of things to do. ... You have to have some indication of willingness on their part to take some of the tough decisions."

The talks on borders, peace and Palestinian self-rule are seen as stalemated, the official said.

After a series of stops here, in Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Israel, Christopher will report his findings to President Clinton.

"He'll be inclined to gauge whether or not, as we go around, there's a serious endeavor here on their part," the official said.

In Moscow, the Russian Foreign Ministry said it "welcomes this important initiative of the new American administration."

The statement said Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev spoke with Christopher by telephone before the trip. It said they discussed several issues connected with the Middle East peace process but gave no details.

MIAMI (AP) — A gunman seized a hostage at a Haitian airport, hijacked a missionary group's plane with 12 others aboard and ordered it to Miami on Thursday, an official said.

But the gunman surrendered his weapon to the crew about 2 1/2 hours after he commandeered the plane, before it reached Miami, said a federal law enforcement source who spoke on condition of anonymity. The source also said the hijacker was a soldier.

The hijacker shot a hole in the ceiling of the plane before it took off, but no injuries were reported, said Kathleen Bergen, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta.

The plane, an aging twin-prop DC-3, refused without incident to Providenciales Island in the Turks and Caicos before flying toward Miami, Bergen said.

The plane was carrying 10 passengers, all believed to be U.S. citizens, and a crew of two when the hijacker boarded with a woman he took hostage on the ground in Cap Haitien in northern Haiti, Bergen said.

"I have no idea, any of his demands other than he wants to go to Miami," she said.

She said the plane was due at Miami International Airport shortly before 7 p.m.

The FBI was planning to be there when the plane arrived, said Wendii Jackman, airport spokesman. The U.S. Customs Service sent up a Citation jet to accompany the plane into the airport, according to the Coast Guard office in Miami.

It wasn't immediately known whether the hijacking was related to Haitian refugee crisis.

Tens of thousands of Haitians have fled the impoverished Caribbean nation by sea since the army ousted the country's first democratically elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, in 1991.

American policy has been to intercept the refugees at sea, though some have reached Florida.

The hijacked plane was owned by Missionary Flight International, based in West Palm Beach, Fla. A spokesman for the missionary service said he had no information on the hijacking.

Bergen said she had no information on security procedures in place at the Cap Haitien airport because the FAA doesn't evaluate security there. She said the agency was getting its information on the hijacking from government sources in Haiti.

DC-3 twin-prop transports, able to carry 23 passengers, began service in 1936 and become the most widely used airliner in history.

The missionary group's flight had taken off from Haiti to West Palm Beach, said Dave Bowen, operations director at Palm Beach International Airport.

"They've been based out of this airport for years," he said. "They take food, medical supplies and such to Haiti out of Palm Beach."

Two Haitian soldiers fired their way aboard another missionary plane in Cap Haitien and landed in Miami in April 1989 after an unsuccessful coup attempt.

In June 1989, four Haitians hijacked an Antillean Airlines flight during a stop in Haiti and tried to take the plane to New York but were arrested during a stop on the Caribbean island of Curacao.

CDC: Pregnant minorities at higher risk

ATLANTA (AP) — The first federal study of births complicated by diabetes shows minorities are at highest risk because they don't get prenatal care to detect and control the disease, health officials reported Thursday.

"This is a very clear case of a disease where we have clear risks and clear interventions that can prevent serious complications," said Robert German of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"Women must get early and continuous prenatal care."

Doctors knew that blacks, Hispanics and Indians get diabetes more often than whites. But the rate of diabetes in 1989 was 25.2 cases per 1,000 white women compared with 34.4 cases per 1,000 among black women.

They also suspected that minorities were at further risk from diabetes during pregnancy because they get less prenatal care, but they had never been able to track that, German said.
ANC agrees to 5 years of multiparty rule

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress (ANC) formally agreed on Thursday to govern jointly with whites and other parties for up to five years after the end of apartheid.

The announcement, following three days of meetings by the ANC’s top leaders, was seen as an important compromise in the delicate black-white political negotiations.

The ANC also tried to assure supporters it would hold delicately black-white political negotiations.

ANC leaders called for a weak presidency, while de Klerk has spoken of permanent power-sharing entrenched in a new constitution.

de Klerk has spoken of permanent power-sharing entrenched in a new constitution.

Ramaphosa said. That principle of majority rule should not be sacrificed in any way, Ramaphosa said.

He said the ANC agreed of de Klerk’s plan for an interim government on grounds it would lead South Africa out of the apartheid era.

Ramaphosa said joint rule would not last more than five years, while President F. W. de Klerk has spoken of permanent power-sharing entrenched in a new constitution.

The ANC also favors a strong presidency, while de Klerk has called for a weak presidency possibly to be shared among minority parties such as whites.

“We see minority powers not having the power to frustrate decisions,” Ramaphosa said.

“We have to bring about a strong presidency to drive minorities from areas where they were condemned to death,” Tadeusz Mazowiecki, Poland’s first post-Communist premier, has said it was overwhelmed by reports of atrocities. It said crimes were committed by all sides in the Balkan conflict, but blamed Serbs for the bulk of them.

Among its findings were mass grave evidence of systematic rape of Muslim women by Serbs; and the “ethnic cleansing” campaigns of terror to drive minorities from areas dominated by a particular group.

The 1945-49 Nuremberg trials of Nazi war criminals established a chain of responsibility for collective war crimes. Nazi leaders — including Hermann Goering, Martin Bormann and Joachim von Ribbentrop — were condemned to death.

Energy tax hits petroleum users

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton's proposed energy tax increase will mean $118 annually in increased costs for electricity, heating and fuel, according to Department of Energy estimates. Some energy experts think the tax is structured to take more money from oil than from natural gas.

Economists said that the tax represented a step toward reducing greenhouse emissions and help combat the so-called greenhouse effect and global warming. They also said the tax would curb some use of fossil fuels.

But based on the energy experts' projections, it is not clear that the tax will make U.S. industry less competitive. Some economists said the tax will probably have a greater effect on the energy market as a whole than on any one fossil-fuel user.

Critics of the tax, including many Republican lawmakers, were expected to argue that the tax will make U.S. industry less competitive. They said the tax will also hurt the economy and negatively affect the oil industry.

Jobless benefits extended

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democrats have extended another $5.6 billion in unemployment benefits from the Senate to President Clinton's economic program to the House Friday.

The extension was the opening vote to pass whatever they can of President Clinton's economic program to the House on a voice vote; it cast 23-14 vote to delay debate on the measure until next week.

"This is the opening shot," Archer said. "If that's going to be the policy all the way through, they've got the votes to pass whatever they want to.

The measure provides for an additional seven-month extension to Jan. 1, 1997, if the recession continues to be severe. It also authorizes an additional $1 billion to help workers who have exhausted their regular, 26-weeks worth of unemployment benefits, with up to another 26 weeks of benefits.

Right now, the program is set to expire in February. Clinton plans to press Congress to extend the extension by that date. The extension was also set to expire in August. This week, he may propose an extension that would extend it through early October, but no one who files an extension claim after Oct. 2, 1993, would be eligible. Those in the program before that could get benefits until Jan. 15, 1994.
Are you waiting for a ‘miracle’?

Dear Editor:

Regarding the Feb. 12 account of the Louis Putz lecture on Lourdes, I’d like to offer my take on what I believe is an important clarification of the meaning of the supposed healings, scientifically appraised as “miracles.”

First of all, medical authorities do not make a determination as to whether a cure is a “miracle.” The Ordinary of the diocese in which the cured person lives makes that determination. Since 1858, only 65 bishops - on the basis of committees on the basis of their document the power of the Blessed Mother. Moreover, dear Editor:

Parents are the key to greatness at Notre Dame

"We never had a lot of money growing up... But my parents always emphasized that we were going to have a college education... Then, when I was accepted at Notre Dame, that was like the biggest thing in their lives."

With fierce love and admiration, this was just one of the many stories that had introduced me to the Notre Dame appreciation as truly at the center big things in their lives."

The standing faculty and administration could certainly stand a great deal of clarification. The serious questions about how the Notre Dame imprint was going to affect the rest of their lives.

At first I thought, what a strange sentiment! Wasn't it obvious? Look around. What a fantastic institution! Top-ranked students and faculty, and administration and theoretical!

Or look back to a history of the Fighting Irish, Fr. Sorin, Fr. Hesburgh, Rockne, Fr. Nangle, Fr. O'Malley. Wasn't it all quite obvious? But, the more I thought, what became obvious was that while these current and historical traditions and symbols as the Dome and the Dome would only be part of the answer.

The next insight came in class from two seniors. The question this way: "Suppose you get up tomorrow morning and discover all the buildings and faculty are gone, somehow disappeared. The residence halls, buildings that held your classes, the church where you prayed; even such revered symbols as the Dome had vaporized. You and all your friends, two hundred or so, find yourselves standing in the midst of an empty field. The question. Would Notre Dame still exist?"

In the over ten times I have used this question, the answer comes fast and is always the same. Yes, Notre Dame would exist because Notre Dame is not resident in the structures or the practices of this University but rather really found in the student, more specifically in the way student to student relations challenge, support, the way students make a transition that takes a freshman who must respond to survive to the able senior who must give to be fulfilled.

This might allow it. It was the way we structured the academic and social challenges over these four years that enabled the interrelationship between the students to create this indelible imprint. What a great answer.

Immediately, one of the outstanding columns to appear in The Observer, by then sophomore John O'Brien came to mind. John related that as a freshman his roommate had returned home and how he felt lost until a group of juniors took him under their wing. As this friendship grew so did his comfort and happiness.

Now, however, it was the end of his sophomore year and these friends were about to graduate. Joy again and another loss, until he realized that maybe he had been taught to wipe out another's loneliness with his friendship.

Wasn't this what we were all about? Didn't this prove the conclusion? What a great answer. Everything seemed to be fitting in place. The student one-on-one meetings that evening flew by and continued to support the conclusion. After all weren't these one of those structured challenges that contributed to the process of taking "taker" to the senior "giver"? Things were really starting to fit together and I felt terrific.

It wasn't until I laid down in one of those beds at the Morris Inn where the window frames the Dome against the night sky and stared up at this golden image, searching for affirmation, for that well intentioned conclusions began to unravel. Rather than finding the peace of an exhausting and fruitful day, the other shoe dropped.

Most of the students I had been reaching had generally been there just a little over one year. They were still getting their feet wet, but their actions and answers reflected an understanding of what we called Notre Dame that seemed to represent four years of experience. How could that be? Only one answer seemed to remain. They had brought this great university to which had it be that that which we call Notre Dame is a reflection of those qualities that had been taught, disciplined, praised, scolded and loved into these young men and women long before we had ever met them.

And which that we call Notre Dame in simplest terms is a process by which we exercise, enrich and hopefully celebrate these qualities in a very special way. And, that our ability to draw students together that are best able to learn from one another and to surround them with challenge and support that ignites the magic of these in­

Rice, O'Brien Weekend

Friday, February 19, 1993

Dear Editor:

A observation regarding Professor Rice's "Right or Wrong?" column that ran in Monday's Observer: it seems painfully obvious his articles consistently suffer from a lack of relevance. A major example of this shortcoming is the professor's ludicrously abstract use of the terms "reason" and "rational." What precisely does he mean by these words mean to Rice? In the context of human experiences, what is rational. The term "unaneed predisconsistently and probably "call us to these hazy ideals?" these concepts could certainly stand a great deal of clarification.

I am also frustrated by the fundamental concepts of Christian theology that the professor reveals in his discussion of the idea of "dominion." He attacks contraception with the question "Who is in charge, man or God?" Unless I am mistaken, the crucial existence of human free will in Christian­

The Good
Do you remember when 800/10 was simply a zip code? Did you ever think home entertainment would ever get so sophistication as Nintendo and Sega Genesis? Does it prove your heart to sing songs with no talent produce songs like "I Love You Period?" (Duds, sorry that's "I Love You," What's happened to the good old days?)

Our memories are sometimes shortchanged us, and yes folks, we're only getting older. That's why we're here to help you remember certain things which you've probably long forgotten. It's something of an awesome trip, but it's our responsibility to warn you a reminder like this could be hazardous to your health. A nostalgia which you've never felt before may overcome you. You might become violently angry at the fact that many of these things are no longer available. Depression may seep in if you realize what your children will never have. But rejoice, at least you were able to experience some of the finest things life has had to offer to people. And remember there is nothing more powerful then your memory!

Hartley introduces "Silent Men"

By KENYA JOHNSON

Noted independent film maker Hal Hartley will be in South Bend Feb. 21 to introduce his latest work, "Simple Men," at 8 p.m. at the Morris Civic Auditorium.

"Simple Men," a quirky and sophisticated portrayal of life's absurdities, revolves around two radically dissimilar brothers looking for a search for their missing father, who happens to be a legendary New York Yankees shortstop who has gone underground after being accused of a 60s baggie. Each project is one an angry ex-con and the other a quiet, bookish observer—has questions that can only be answered by their father.

The department chose the Morris Civic Auditorium for the event so that it could screen a new 35-mm print of the film, accommodate a larger audience, and "because the auditorium's grand scale is reminiscent of how luxurious an evening at the movies used to be," said Jim Collins, associate professor and associate chair of communications and theater.

Hartley has earned an International reputation as a self-taught, truly independent film maker who avoids Hollywood producers and exorbitant budgets. Droll and minimalist, his style has been compared to French film maker Jean-Luc Godard and the French "new wave" of the 1960s, although his characters and stories are distinctly American. In his work he explores the problems of negotiating a moral life full of love, politics, culture, and pain.

Tickets are available at the door or in advance at the LaFortune information desk for $5. Doors will open at 7 p.m.
Condoms will not solve problem of AIDS

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Was it a mistake, last year, to see Arthur Ashe on television sick with AIDS? for me to write in the Observer: "Nobody can be sure how disastrous the AIDS epidemic will get."

Put not your trust in condoms, the Catholic bishops say, and I agree with the bishops. But if I had a teenager hell-bent with lust, I'd be tempted to sew condoms into the crotch of his blue jeans.

Was it greatly wrong for me to suggest that unless parents have children to throw away, they should take it to the Lord in prayer whether to discourage their hell-raiser from wearing his battle helmet when he enters the war-zone?

Should parents be tempted to supply him with clean needles, if they knew he used drugs? I can't be sure what I'd do if a lad of mine were caught in deep trouble. I hope I'd have the courage to do the loving thing for him always, especially when love means making the hard choice; and this grace is what I'd pray for.

Is it the duty of a father to remove the condoms that his college son has been keeping in the glove compartment of his car? I wonder if such a well-meaning dad could foresee the consequences of interfering in the personal life of a lad who has decided he's old enough to think for himself.

Would it be wrong of me to advise this dad, trying to serve his boy as a guardian angel to put back the condoms, substituting more reliable ones if he found that the originals were cheap?

In mentioning condoms, I stirred up a hornets' nest last year. I didn't expect to hear the great Catholic outcry against condoms, after reading for years that 92 1/2 percent of all Catholic couples practice birth control. Does my mail come from the 7 1/2 percent of the Catholics who don't practice birth control, or from those who don't use condoms in the forms of birth control they practice?

Condoms, which were once a secret kept from children, are now part of the show-and-tell which children are exposed to in the fourth grade. I hate the cynicism that abounds from the hotshops that abstinence cannot be relied on exclusively as the Noah's ark that will save even the very young animals from death by AIDS.

The ugliness of AIDS is a fact of life from which there are no hiding places. Abstinence doesn't always work, even for the pure of heart, struggling with temptations that can lead a boy from peace life to sin, where there is no second chance. The cosmos have not collapsed, that my heart continues to beat as strongly as at God's direction. Of course AIDS is serious, but God will not abandon his children. There will still be music, Father Griffin, after you and I are gone.

He almost sounds as though I were the one with AIDS, but that's alright. He was kind to write. I'll no longer pay attention when they tell me never to play cards with a man called Dice, or eat at a place called Mom's.

A woman, appalled because I admitted that if I had a teenager hell-bent with lust, I might be tempted to supply him with condoms sewed to his clothes, wrote to remind me of the case histories and statistics on the poor record of condoms for birth control, and "their utter failure as protection against HIV virus."

"Ah, my dear," I answered, "Why should you think that if condoms aren't foolproof, they are worthless? Eighty percent effectiveness is far from worthless, and we can do better. I presume any country that can make wrist bands than the educators willing to gamble on condoms as the safest way off the minefield in this age of AIDS.

A doctor with AIDS replied to the column I wrote last year on Arthur Ashe. He suggested that I stiffen my spine a bit, sit up straight, take a deep breath, and walk out into the countryside, 'then, he says, I will be able to see with my own eyes that nature and cosmos have not collapsed, that God is in his heaven, and that I'd be sorry to have anyone believe I'd ignore a son's young passionate ignorance. As a matter of fact, I'd watch over him, to help him stay pure, all the time."

As soon as she said, "Time and temperature changes in that glove compartment where the college boy keeps those condoms will soon make them as useless as an umbrella in a hurricane," I realized that she wasn't having anything I could have told her; and so, I conceded her argument in addition. I said, "I'm sure they were shopworn when he bought them. The date indicating the shelf life had probably expired."

I don't know if condoms even have a shelf life, but it might give her a grim satisfaction to think she is aware of an additional way that condoms can become a killer bypassing the user.

I wonder what thoughts were in this woman's mind last week when she heard that Arthur Ashe was dead from AIDS, transmitted to him in a blood transfusion? Was her mind leashed by the thought that the blood bank in that hospital might never have been tainted if someone, somewhere along the line, had used a condom?

Condoms are not a miracle drug, or a cure for anything, but all of us are dependent on science to go halfway along to stop AIDS. It could be a way of showing that I'm my brother's brother, in this age of AIDS.

Flyers, Calgary battle to tie; Sharks top Jets

(1AP) - The Philadelphia Flyers have specialized in stirring comebacks this week in the NHL.
They came from behind with two goals to tie the Calgary Flames 4-4 on Tuesday in Cincinnati and pulled off another remarkable comeback Thursday night against the Vancouver Canucks.
Kevin Dineen scored his second goal of the game on a breakaway with 1.6 seconds left to give the Flyers a 3-2 victory over the stunned Canucks.
Dineen stole the puck from Al Arbour, shot it into the Vancouver blue line and skated in untouched to beat goalie Kay Whitmore to the stick side to cap the reversal as a shocked crowd.
"I really like the team we’ve got right now," said Flyers coach Bill DeBusschere. "They’re a real offensive team and, if we tighten up defensively, we can control some problems of our division."
"It was a good night for us," said forward Bobby Clarke. "The chef is out of the kitchen."

Flyer defenseman Murray Baron goes low to block a Gerard Gallant shot.
Soderstrom of the Flyers, who faced 30 shots.

Sharks, Jets for 3

For the time being, at least, the San Jose Sharks are looking at life from the positive end of the scale. Not so the Winnipeg Jets.
"It’s nice to see the other team frustrated for a change," said the Sharks’ Dave Mailey, who had a goal and an assist in San Jose’s 3-2 win over Winnipeg on Thursday night.

The Sharks, winners in just eight of 35 games this season, defeated Winnipeg for the second time in five days, rallying to a 4-0 lead after two periods and holding off the Jets in the final minute.
San Jose has two wins and a good losing effort in its last three games, which is light years from its NHL-record tying 17-game losing streak that ended against Winnipeg on Feb. 14.

"We’ve been frustrated, too," Mailey said. "Of course, our lastest a little longer than theirs."

San Jose coach George Kingston said, "Some people thought we’d wash up when we said we were making progress, but we’re doing some good things on the ice, even while we were losing. The last three games have been a continuation of that development.

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Bo Jackson took a few more steps Wednesday in his bid to return to baseball with an artificial hip, working out at the Chicago White Sox camp a day before spring training officially starts.

Jackson, with a barely noticeable limp, ran the bases, took batting practice and fielded grounders at first base. His 40-minute session came under the watchful eye of team trainers and a few fans who wandered into Ed Smith Stadium.

Jackson worked out earlier this year at North Village Mall in Sarasota, Fla., and began drills designed to determine whether he will be able to play this year after missing the entire 1992 season. He has spent almost a year being accustomed to the plastic-and-metal prosthesis in his hip.

Pitchers and catchers are scheduled to report to Chicago's camp on Thursday, and the first workout is set for Friday. The rest of the team is to report next Tuesday and practice the following day.

Jackson's comeback is sure to determine whether he will be able to provide some of the excitement he did before being injured in January 1991 in an NFL playoff game for the Los Angeles Raiders.

Jackson's last full season in the majors was 1990, when he hit .272 with 28 home runs and 78 RBIs for Kansas City. He played 111 games, most of them in the outfield.

Jackson was released by the Royals in March 1991 and signed by the White Sox in April. He went through a rehabilitation program that took him through the minors, and returned to the majors in September, hitting .225 with three homers and 14 RBIs in 23 games, all of them as a designated hitter.

Next week, Jackson will likely move into the outfield for workouts. As much as the White Sox would like to see Jackson hold down a spot as a starter, it would be happy to see him healthy enough to serve as the full-time designated hitter.

Jackson, a former Heisman Trophy running back at Auburn, is the only player to be an All-Star in the major leagues and the NFL. He was the most valuable player of the 1989 All-Star game at Anaheim Stadium, leading off the bottom of the first inning with a home run and later showing off his speed.

I don't foresee a problem," White Sox trainer Herm Schneider said. "He'll slide head-first on his right side."

Jackson did not comment on his progress. He has told the White Sox public relations department that he does not plan to speak with reporters about his return.

Jackson, 30, underwent hip replacement surgery last April. He had almost a year getting accustomed to the plastic-and-metal pros thesis in his hip.

NOT JUST KNOWLEDGE. KNOW HOW.
Norris-Blocker for WBC crown in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Terry Norris, the WBC super welterweight champion, is out to prove a point Saturday, but Maurice Blocker, Norris' opponent, believes the point cannot be proved.

The Norris-Blocker match is one of four title bouts on a show that will feature Mexican boxing idol Julio Cesar Chavez in defense of the WBC super lightweight championship against Greg Haugen. People still think that Chavez is the best fighter in the world, but I'm here to prove that I am," said Norris.

"I respect all champions," said Blocker, who is the IBF welterweight champion. "As a fighter, I don't believe what is written about other fighters. I just don't believe there is any greater fighter in the world. I just don't believe that."

"Chavez is No. 1," said Azumah Nelson, who will defend the WBC super featherweight title against Mexican Gabriel Ruelas on the card. Nelson, however, made it clear that he is not including himself when he ranks Chavez as the best. The 25-year-old Norris and the 25-year-old Blocker both are fine boxers. The 6-foot-1 Blocker might be a little slicker, but Norris, 5-10, appears stronger and faster.

Norris, of Campbellsfield, Calif., has a 33-3 record, with 19 knockouts. Blocker of Washington, has a 34-2 record, with 18 knockouts.

"I predict a long, hard, painful fight for Maurice Blocker," Norris said.

Another delay in signing Lewis-Tucker contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The signing of a contract for the scheduled May 8 title fight in Las Vegas between WBC heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis and Tony Tucker has been delayed.

Lewis' manager on Thursday blamed financial demands by promoter Don King. King and Tucker were in Mexico City where the WBC is based Friday, but Maloney said it was not in doubt. Instead, he said the fight should be postponed.

The deadline for the signing of a contract had been set for Friday, but Maloney said it was unlikely the deal would be completed by then. He said the WBC had decided to wait on whether to accept King's demands.

Despite the wrangling, Maloney said the fight should go ahead as scheduled.

Finally for baseball fans, spring training begins

AP—The big day that baseball fans waited for all winter arrived Thursday, and not even a little rain in Florida and Ari zona could dampen spirits: Spring training has started! Willie Randolph's group of 15 of the 28 teams reported to camp in places like Vero Beach, Sarasota and Scottsdale, with the first official workouts planned for Friday.

Before breaking out the bats and balls, however, there was other business to attend to after a busy off-season in which players changed teams like never before.

In Bradenton, Fla., the Pittsburgh Pirates began preparations to win their fourth straight NL East title after los ing the likes of Barry Bonds, Doug Drabek, Jose Lind, Danny Jackson, Roger Mason, Alex Cole and Chuck Raines. The Pirates hope new players in camp named Lexier, Martin, Backlund and DeLos Santos can take their place.

"May they hold out those little name tags to everyone, like they wear at conventions, that say, 'Hi, my name is .. .'" center fielder Andy Van Slyke said.

At least a lot of the Pirates know each other. In Tucson, Ariz., 63 players reported for the expansion Colorado Rockies' first camp, and they spent a lot of time making in trouctions.

"Whenever I meet someone new — which is almost everyone around here — I repeat the name three times to myself," said Steve Reed, who pitched 18 games for the San Francisco Giants last sea son.

"There are 63 guys here, and I'm the only guy from the Giants organization. Trying to remember each guy's name, all the way from reporters to the clubhouse guys to the front office guys, well, it's difficult," he said.

Once able to hold the upper hand over all of college basketball, Duke now can't even do it in its own conference.

Thomas Hill missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer Thursday night, giving No. 23 Virginia a 58-55 victory over the seventh-ranked Blue Devils.

It marked the first time since 1990 that Duke lost back-to-back games to anybody, and the first time since 1990 the Blue Devils were swept by an Atlantic Coast Conference opponent.

"I think all that is good. That means we've had a hell of a few years," said Virginia coach Jeff Jones, whose Cavaliers shot 36.8 percent and had 18 turnovers. But Duke picked up before Virginia again gained the upper hand.

"It's a disappointing loss for us," Kryzyzewski said, "because I thought our kids were ready. But I'm not down on my team. I think it's the type of thing where our younger guys can improve on it and show maturity."

Cory Alexander scored 20 points and Ted Jeffries 14 for Virginia, which last month broke Duke's 36-game ACC home winning streak.

Duke, playing in its first game since losing leading scorer Thomas Hill, who was out with a sprained toe, got

"I don't think I've ever felt as good about an offensive performance as ugly as that one," said Virginia coach Jeff Jones. "I Call it's evident that we're not as deep a team as people think," Kryzyzewski said. "I would say we'll be there. I'm just not sure when that will be."

Duke trailed in much of the first half, when the Blue Devils shot 32 percent and had nine turnovers. But Duke picked up the pace after halftime, forcing nine foul changes and four ties before Virginia again gained the upper hand.

Morrissey defeats O-C in Interhall Basketball, 42-31

By TIMOTHY SEYMOUR
Sports Writer

Using a tenacious press and taking advantage of high percentge shooting, the Morrissey Manor now hold the title of Interhall basketball champions after knocking off a strong O-C. Campus squad 42-31.

Point guard Steve Clear was the motivating factor behind the Morrissey victory, dominating the game in the first half. As coach Andy Curto noted, "Steve started things off right for us, controlling the tempo, and the rest of the team followed his lead.”

Morrissey opened the game using its 1-2-2 press to force turnovers and bad passes, while making almost every shot it attempted in the first few minutes. Most of those baskets were the result of Clear's efforts, as he time and again beat his man to the basket and dished the ball out to sharpshooters Tom Sar and Mike Martin.

The first half was characterized by up-tempo play, with both teams running back up and down the floor after each possession. Morrissey's inside players were particularly strong, with Tully, Corbett, and Brendan Tully, running the floor extremely well, which forced O-C's Brian Raigant and Eric Jones to play both ends.” Curto said.

O-C captain Todd Reynolds concurred with this, saying, "It's obvious that they play together more than we do. Their guards caused a lot of problems, and when we were able to set up in the half court, we had one pass and a shot rather than moving it around.”

Inside play was a key factor as well, since the biggest question before the game was how Morrissey's inside players would fare against the power of Fatigan, Jones, and Ray Griggs. This question was quickly answered by Corbett and Tully, both of whom blocked numerous shots and effectively clogged the lane. In fact the key to the game was the rebounding of the Morrissey team as a whole, since all five players crashed the boards, reducing O-C's second chance shots to a minimum.

After running out to a 26-10 lead, Morrissey held on for an easy victory, scoring at a 11:40 pace, with a second half rally, as O-C took advantage of Clear's early foul on the bench with foul trouble. Both Griggs and shooting guard Brad Loshnich hit a couple of three pointers to close the gap, but Morrissey was able to hold out for a total defense played by Joe Godin and John Neal.

Any chance at an O-C fourth quarter rally was ended by the patient Morrissey spread offense, which ran the clock down and kept the ball in the hands of Clear and Sar, forcing O-C's desperation fouling. The game ended to the rhythm of the hundred-plus Morrissey faithful who watched their team earn the title.

Women's tennis prepares for TCU, LSU

By RIAN AKEY
Sports Writer

Following two tough road losses to Kentucky and Tennessee last weekend, the Notre Dame women's tennis team is hoping that the familiar confines of the Eck Tennis Pavilion will help reverse their fortunes. The Irish, in only their second season and third home match of the season, host Louisiana State on Friday and Texas Christian on Saturday at the Eck.

"These matches are very big for us," said junior Christy Faustmann, "at least in terms of getting back on track. The teams we're playing this weekend aren't as good as some of the other teams we've faced, but at 2-5, we can't take anything lightly."

Junior fellow Lisa Tholen added, "Right now we need the confidence that would come from winning these matches. This is our chance to get back into the swing of winning."

While the team is disappointed with its win-loss record, no large scale changes are in store for the squad.

"Everyone has been playing well," said Faustmann, "it just hasn't all come together yet." On an individual basis, however, Faustmann, who won both her matches in last weekend's losses, is trying to implement some minor alterations in her game.

"I've been working on being more aggressive—rushing the net more and taking more control on the baseline. I need to turn my level of play up a notch,"

Tholen, on the other hand, is more concerned right now with her mental toughness than any physical aspects of her game.

"I'm coming off a couple difficult losses," she said, "and I need to get some confidence back. Winning this weekend will go a long way in doing that."

Although unranked, both LSU and TCU will be looking for an upset of the twenty-second ranked Irish. "They won't be easy matches," warned Faustmann. "Overall, we're probably pretty matched with these teams."

Tholen added, "I remember from playing in Texas that the last two years that they're a scrappy, fighting team. Even if we get an early lead, we can't slow up because they will not give up."

Playing in the Eck Pavilion, the Irish hope, will have a positive influence for the team. "We all feel at home is definitely going to help us—especially for the juniors since we were going to be there," said Faustmann.

Matches against LSU begin at 2 p.m. on Friday and Saturday the action versus TCU begins at 1:00.

Maradona makes his return for Argentina

(AP) — Diego Maradona returned to international soccer for the first time in 2½ years as Argentina and Brazil played a 1-1 tie Thursday night.

The 32-year-old forward hadn't played for Argentina's national team since the 1-0 loss to Germany in the World Cup final on July 8, 1990. The 2-12-year absence included a 15-month suspension for cocaine use imposed by the Italian League on April 6, 1991, following a positive test March 17.

"This is a marvelous day. I was anxiously waiting for this," Maradona said after the match. "Before I reached the stadium I was moved to hear so many young people chanting my name."

Maradona didn't score, but made some fine passes, especially in the second half. He neatly put the ball between defenders Mauro Silva and Cafu to Gabriel Batistuta, whose shot narrowly missed the goal, caused a roar that shook the flag-decked grandstands in River Plate Stadium, filled with about 75,000 fans.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY—The University of Notre Dame men’s tennis team, ranked sixth in the country, defeated tenth-ranked Texas, 4-3, on Thursday, 4-3, in the second round of the 1993 USTA-ITA Men’s National Indoor Intercollegiate Team Championship. The win improves Notre Dame’s record to 4-2, while the Longhorns drop to 2-1.

Notre Dame, which received a first round bye in the event, will now face top-ranked USC on Friday in the quarterfinals at 12 noon. USC was a 4-3 winner over Alabama-Birmingham on Thursday and had a 6-0 record on the season. The match against the Trojans is a rematch of last spring’s NCAA Championship semifinal, in which the Irish upset the defending national champion by a 5-1 count.

In the win over Texas, Notre Dame was at the top three single positions over players all ranked in the top 40. Irish senior Will Forsyth, ranked 19th by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association, improved his record to 19-7 on the season with a 6-4, 6-2 win over Anders Erikkson, ranked 23rd in the nation. Senior Chuck Coleman beat No. 37 Trey Phillips, 6-7, 6-1, 6-4 and senior Mark Schmidt beat No. 26 Ian Williams, 6-0, 7-5.

The match began with doubles play and in a new format this season, the school that wins the most doubles matches gets one point towards the match score. The team of Coleman and Forsyth won at No. 1 doubles for Notre Dame, defeating the nation’s top ranked doubles team of Erikkson and Phillips by an 8-3 score.

The 63rd annual Bengal Bouts answer the bell this Sunday as 75 Notre Dame students lace up their gloves to help the Holy Cross Missions in Bangladesh.

The quarterfinal round is slated for a 2 p.m. start time in the Joyce JACC Arena. The semifinals will be held the following Wednesday in the JACC Fieldhouse. The finals are Friday at 8 p.m. back in the main arena.

Made famous by Dominic J. "Nappy" Napolitano, the director from 1931-1981, the Bengal Bouts have been a significant part of Notre Dame student life since its inception in the 1930's.

Despite the number of boxers escaping the group of 72 which laced up their gloves last year, the large turnout not only shows more funds for the Holy Cross Missions but also adds an additional weight division this year at 130-pounds, upping the number of divisions to 12.

Jeff Gerber (140-pound), Matt Corrigan (130-pound) are the only returning champions from last year. Joe Carrigan's reign ended after taking a year off following his win at 150-pounds two years ago.

Barring those three and the always impressive Lou Hall, few big names return, opening the door for new challenges.

A look at each division:

This new weight class was added to supplant the 2nd, no. 184, of the line and added three boxers this year. A relatively young group houses only one junior with two sophomores included in the lineup.

Notre Dame's tentative line-up for the 130-pound division:

Malik Russell will have to come to the forefront if the Irish are going to defeat DePaul on Sunday.

The Fighting Irish limp to Chicago this weekend to meet another slumbering team in the DePaul Blue Demons, who have lost seven out of their last 11 games before downing the UB Blazers on Tuesday night.

"Our confidence is at all-time low," said DePaul coach Joey Meyer.

The Blue Demons will get no sympathy from the Notre Dame coaching staff, as the Irish have lost six out of seven, falling to 24th-ranked Marquette, and 130-pounds in their last outing on Wednesday night.

Despite having only eight scholarship players available against Marquette, the Irish led for most of the game, with the likes of freshman Eric Garcia's performance in training tabbed him the favorite with fellow sophomore Rob Payne also a contender.

135-pound

There are three words which describe this class: Gerber, Gerber, Gerber. Dillon hall junior Jeff Gerber has destroyed the opposition the past two years en route to two titles. His quest for a third title should be fulfilled quite easily with the only significant other being senior Pat Owens.

140-pound

Colin Hanley appears to be the gem of this group with only minimal resistance coming from the rest of the field. Mike Ahsantz is a longshot with hope as well as Dan Schmidt. Schmidt was a semifinal loser a year ago.

"This is a really strong division," said Schmidt. "All the boxes have a chance, but you have to consider Colin the favorite."

145-pound

The big question surrounding this division is whether Lou Hall can live up to the billing which he has failed to see.

In DePaul, the Irish face a team that may be even younger than they are, as the Blue Demons are led by sophomore Chigacoums Tom Kleinschmidt (18.3 PPG) and Brandon Cole (14.7 PPG), and junior forward Kris Hill (139 PPG, team-leading 8.8 RPG).

DePaul's senior leadership is provided by athletic guard Terry Davis, who has started every game for the Blue Demons and provides 15.3 points per game.

Senior Monty Williams, the Irish's leading scorer and rebounder, will look to rebound from a 10-point performance against the swarming defense of the Warriors by asserting himself this weekend at the Rosemont Horizon.
