Volunteers offer aid to Florida hurricane victims

By DAVID HUNGELING

Nearly seven months after Hurricane Andrew ripped through south Florida, a group of 15 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's student volunteers, led by Craig Oliphant and Elizabeth Fleming, arrived on the scene to help clean up the destruction. Oliphant works as a local relief organization called the Neighbor's Helping Neighbor's (NHN) program to provide hurricane victims with rebuilding supplies and to help put them in contact with volunteer groups. Most of the funding for the program is donated by CBS and other private contributors.

The Notre Dame/Saint Mary's group stayed in Miami last August, and Oliphant flew down to aid in the initial clean-up. The students were asked to return during their spring break by a local volunteer coordinator Craig Oliphant and the Neighbor's Helping Neighbor's organization (NHN). The students flew down using complimentary tickets donated by American Airlines. Their food and other expenses were paid for by Miami CBS affiliate Channel 6, through the NHN program.

NHN is a local relief organization created by Channel 6 to provide hurricane victims with rebuilding supplies, and to help put them in contact with volunteer groups. Most of the funding for the program is donated by CBS and other private contributors.

The students worked mainly on two projects: rebuilding a home for a widow and her grandson who owned a home that was completely destroyed. They also worked on a smaller project in Homestead, where some of the homes are still in need of major repair and piles of trash continue to line the streets in most neighborhoods.

Volunteer becomes local 'hero'

When Craig Oliphant drove to Miami last August he never expected to be a local hero. Three days after Hurricane Andrew's devastating forces tore through Miami, Oliphant left his home in Ocala, Kansas, and traveled to south Florida. He was concerned about his grandmother who owned a condominium there, but had not still not received any word of her well-being. Oliphant found that his grandmother and her home were fine, but the remaining area was not so lucky. Having witnessed first-hand the destruction suffered by other families, Oliphant was inspired to organize groups of volunteer workers to continue the relief effort in devastated areas.

Malloy to chair ACE board and serve education forum

BY BECKY BARNES
Assistant News Editor

Father Edward Malloy, University president, will serve a one-year term as chairman of the board of directors of the American Council on Education (ACE). In addition, he will serve three years on the executive committee of the Business-Higher Education Forum. The ACE is an umbrella organization of participating institutions of higher education including universities, colleges, and academic associations, said Malloy.

Located in Washington, the ACE lobbies Congress and the White House on behalf of higher education and gives advice on legal and financial matters, he continued. As chairman, Malloy will oversee the activities of the board and staff. He has been a member of the Council for four years. The Business Forum consists of 40 business leaders and 40 college and university presidents who work jointly on common concerns. In the process, university officials "come to understand the perspective of business leaders and they come to understand the perspective of university leaders," said Malloy.

The Forum always has four or five on-going projects focusing on topics such as minorities in higher education, the quality of the workforce, and job creation, said Malloy. Recently, they established training programs in Poland and Hungary.

Malloy has been a member of the Business Forum since 1987 and currently is one of two representatives of Catholic institutions on the board. Without Notre Dame and Georgetown, the forum "wouldn't have to recognize the 230 Catholic institutions," he said.

"Something would be missing without a Catholic perspective, just as if a black, Hispanic or other minority view was not represented," said Malloy.

"Malloy has put hard work and energy into the forum and tried to establish credibility. I hope that the appointment of some small sign that the contributions I've made are being felt," he said.
Saint Mary's must be part of the solution

"The independent newspaper scene Notre Dame and Saint Mary's is the hedging that has appeared on the banner of The Observer for many years now. It is a pursuit that is easy to say but a little harder to actually do. Throughout its history, The Observer's effort to cover the Saint Mary's campus has often been inconsistent and plagued with problems, many stemming from the simple fact that the newspaper's office is across the street.

In the past few years, The Observer has made great strides in its effort to cover the Saint Mary's campus as comprehensively, as fairly and as consistently as it covers Notre Dame. The Observer made the Saint Mary's editorial staff a full-time department and increased its size. Recruitment efforts were intensified, including mass mailings to incoming freshmen and pitches to those enrolled in the College's journalism courses. Today, news and sports stories are no longer buried on inside pages as the "token" Saint Mary's stories of the day. Saint Mary's issues have been addressed on the Viewpoint pages and the College's fine artistic and musical talent is represented more and more in Accent.

But problems still remain. Coverage is still far from complete as it should be. Not enough Saint Mary's students serve as editors, managers, and reporters, and recruiting efforts must be integrated into the news, and plans are being made to have more and more students enrolled in the Viewpoint pages and the College's fine artistic and musical talent is represented more and more in Accent.

The Observer currently employs almost 200 students to handle the ongoing running of a daily newspaper. Saint Mary's students must become a more integral part of this operation. They must be photographers, advertising executives, designers and sports writers if the newspaper is really to serve both campuses.

The other part of the equation is the involvement of the rest of the Saint Mary's community: the administrators, the campus leaders and, most importantly, the students who depend on The Observer as the one source of what is happening on their campus. The Observer will cover events and issues only if its editors and staff know it is happening.

And they must be willing to provide feedback — whether it is criticism or praise — directly to the editors if The Observer is to know what its readers are thinking, what it is doing right and what is lacking. There is no other way a newspaper can improve.

The Observer is already working to improve coverage. Recruitment efforts continue within journalism classes and beyond. More than ever, editors are in the mindset that Saint Mary's must be integrated into the news, and plans are under way for a series of special sections to commemorate the College's sesquicentennial.

But The Observer cannot do this without the active help of those at Saint Mary's. They have an equal stake in this newspaper, and, in turn, must have an equal responsibility to make it a better one.

The views expressed in the Inside Columns are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Mary's students must be part of the solution.

Aristide seeks help from Clinton
WASHINGTON (AP) — Frustrated by continued stalemate, ousted Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide is seeking concrete restoration to power.

But U.S. officials said there was no possibility that Clinton would go along with Aristide's suggestion that the administration set a date certain for reinstating the populist Roman Catholic priest.

The officials spoke as Aristide prepared for a late afternoon visit to the White House today to meet Clinton. The administration has said repeatedly it places high priority on restoring Aristide to power but there is little sign of American interest in putting human rights monitors in Haiti substantially.

Aristide has criticized the administration's use of Coast Guard vessels to prevent Haitians from fleeing the country and has said there has been inadequate enforcement of the embargo against Haiti.

Officials at the Organization of American States, which has assumed a mediating role, said Monday there are 76 OAS observers in Haiti and the figure is expected to reach 100 by the end of the month. The United Nations plans to send 100 observers as well.

Friends and family of Pasquerilla West senior Tara Deutsch will remember her as a "very caring, enthusiastic and socially conscious student who shared her love with others," said her mother.

Deutsch, an accounting and sociology major from Gig Harbor, Wash., died of a sudden heart attack in Chicago last Tuesday. Although she had a pre-existing heart condition, the attack was unexpected, said Assistant Rector Michelle Ryan.

Deutsch's father described her as "very caring, very energetic, and she liked to get people to smile." He has complained about the administration's use of Coast Guard vessels to prevent Haitians from fleeing the country and has said there has been inadequate enforcement of the embargo against Haiti.

He also has called on the administration to freeze the U.S. assets of coup supporters and to cancel their visas.

Under international pressure, the coup government that took power in Haiti 18 months ago repeatedly it places high priority on restoring Aristide to power but there is little sign of American interest in putting human rights monitors in Haiti substantially.

The funeral for Deutsch was held in Canby, Oregon where she lived until several years ago when her family moved to Washington.

In a letter read to the family and friends attending the service, her parents wrote, "She held life in the highest regard. She always gave of herself to social causes and wanted to give the less fortunate hope to live another day .... We would ask you to take all of her loving and caring with you and to share it as she did."

Deutsch's parents said the support offered to the family by the University has helped them greatly. "It made us feel the true Notre Dame family," said her father.

A campus-wide service for Deutsch will be held at a time to be announced, according to Campus Ministry.

Pasquerilla West will also hold a service some time in the forthcoming weeks, said Ryan.

"What is amazing to me is that here it is seven months later and people are still living without roofs, people are still living in tents, people are still living in tents," said senior Bob Quinns.

"They are back to living in the pioneer days. It's still a wreck," said sophomore Margo Quintos.

Senators reject effort to override veto of gun ban

WACO, Texas (AP) — Authorities are cutting off the biblical discussions that have taken up most of the time they've spent trying to negotiate an end to the 16-day-old siege of an armed sect's rural compound, the FBI said Monday.

"What we're trying to do is get away from the continuous biblical, Seven Seals conversations," said FBI agent Richard Swensen. "Frankly, we're not here to be converted."

Branch Davidian cult leader David Koresh, who has claimed to be Jesus Christ, built his following on claims he is the only one who can unlock the Seven Seals that the Bible's Book of Revelation says will lead to the end of the world. The FBI says negotiations frequently include "Bible study."

The standoff began Feb. 28 when more than 100 federal agents raided the compound 10 miles east of here to serve search and arrest warrants on Koresh. Four agents were killed and 16 wounded in a 45-minute firefight. As many as 10 cult members may have been killed and several were believed wounded.

Koresh has told negotiators 17 children and 88 adults remain on the compound. Four adults and 21 children have left since the siege began.

Swensen said two people who left Friday told Koresh on Sunday they were being treated well and advised him to come out. But "none of these conversations appeared to move any of the occupants inside the compound any closer towards resolution," he said.

U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith Jr. on Monday rejected DeGuerin's request to have access to the compound.

"One simply cannot point a gun (literally or figuratively) at constitutional authority and at the same time complain that constitutional rights are being denied," Walter wrote in his decision.

FBI end 'biblical discussions' in Waco

The issue had dominated state politics for two years and involved often intense lobbying by Florio on one side and the National Rifle Association on the other.

DeFrancisco and others said they wanted to show the public that the Legislature wasn't taking its orders from the NRA, which contributed $269,000 to legislative candidates in 1991.

That year, Republicans won seemingly veto-proof majorities in both houses for the first time in two decades. They promised, among other things, to repeal the gun ban, which the NRA said turned thousands of law-abiding gun owners into common criminals.

"To the degree people felt the NRA leadership had a hold on some members of the Legislature, I think we've put that to rest," DeFrancisco said.

"My vote was not based on any particular comments by the NRA. It was based on what I heard from the public."

The Republican-dominated Assembly did vote 54-23 for the override on Feb. 25.

Clintoon to meet Rabin

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is stepping up preparation for the expanded role the United States plans to play in Mideast negotiations.

The president was holding his first meeting today with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel after spending a quiet weekend at the White House.

He ventured out once — to walk eight blocks to church in the snow and slush with his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The meeting with Rabin "is an opportunity for the two leaders to sit face-to-face and get to know each other," White House spokesman Jeff Eller said Sunday.

The meeting also is an important step in the future of Mideast peace talks.

The Israeli leader met Friday with Secretary of State Warren Christopher and National Security Council Council. Christopher said the meeting was designed to prepare for substantive bargaining in the negotiations with the Arabs scheduled to reopen April 20.

Christopher said he expected all the parties, including a Palestinian delegation, to attend the next round of peace talks, which several Mideast leaders have described as a "one-time opportunity" for peaceful settlement.

The series began more than 16 months ago, and there still are obstacles.

The Palestinians said Israel must first agree to immediately repatriate 396 Palestinians deported to Lebanon in mid-December as security risks.

Farouk Al-Kaddoumi, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization's political department, said last week that he doubted other Arab delegations would attend the talks because the Palestinians "because the Palestine cause is the core of the Arab-Israeli struggle."

Hints that Rabin is looking to compromise with Syria over the Golan Heights have embarrassed hard-liners jittery enough to wish him bad luck.

"I hope he doesn't succeed," former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the conservative Likud coalition told Israeli radio. "I don't want the American administration to accept the proposal ... that if they put pressure on us we will quickly give the Arabs the Golan and Gaza."
American students had been reported. Accidents involving Notre Dame said. "Offering emergency help," he said. "Including "cutting through red tape with airlines" and students in any other way that Affairs cannot grant excused it. Accommodating."

Individuals, he expects that the faculty will be real heads to explain their professors or department according to Tim Sosnowski, team riggerman. "University or not, delayed students are responsible for contacting themselves stranded."

But some students didn't know how bad the weather conditions actually were until they got on the roads, tried to get back to school, and found themselves stranded.

The Notre Dame crew team experienced similar difficulties. The team spent the week training in Tampa, Fla. Returning to the campus, the team split up into two vans, a trailer and a bus. Each vehicle left at different times on Saturday, ranging from noon to 10:30 p.m.

Both the vans and the trailer made it back around 6 a.m. Monday. As of 9:30 p.m. Monday, the bus carrying about 40 team members was still in Kentucky and would likely be on campus by midnight, according to Tim Sosnowski, team riggerman.

Whether they called the University or not, delayed students are responsible for contacting their professors or department head to explain their situation. Though Kirk said he could not speak for other individuals, he expects that the "faculty will be real accommodating."

Though the Office of Student Affairs cannot grant excused absences, it will help incoming students in any other way that it can, according to Kirk. This includes "cutting through red tape with airlines" and "offering emergency help," he said.

As of 5:30 p.m. Monday, no accidents involving Notre Dame students had been reported.
New treatment reduces risk of heart attack

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Big changes over the past decade in how doctors take care of heart attack victims appear to be paying off dramatically.

Heart attacks are still the No. 1 cause of death in the United States, where they will take about 500,000 lives this year.

But a new analysis suggests that the many new drugs and procedures that came into routine use in the 1980s have perhaps doubled the chances that someone who makes it to the hospital with a heart attack will survive.

"It suggests that all of these things do a little good, and they all add up to a lot of good," said Dr. Mario Talajic of the Montreal Heart Institute, who led the study and presented his findings Monday at a meeting of the American College of Cardiology.

He reviewed the fates of 100 people who were brought to his hospital with heart attacks in 1980 and 100 who were admitted in 1990. In 1980, 22 percent had died of heart disease within a year of being hospitalized. A decade later, this had fallen to 10 percent.

A major cause of the better outlook was less cardiac arrest. This lethal disruption of the heart's rhythm struck 17 percent of the patients in 1980 but just 5 percent in 1990.

The risk of dying from heart disease has been falling since 1980, and better living habits, such as giving up smoking and eating sensibly, probably play a role. But the study suggests better care also is a significant factor.

Hilary Clinton works for health care goals

ANKENY, Iowa (AP) — She furrows her brow. She nods her head knowingly. She takes copious notes, filling big binders with important writings.

Hillary Rodham Clinton is like a giant human sponge on the campaign trail, soaking up the stuff of health care from medical experts and common folks as she travels the countryside.

"What I really want to do is listen," Mrs. Clinton said Monday as she settled in on Bill and Evelyn Lehman's living room sofa to hear about the health care woes of Iowa farm families gathered in the community of Slater.

And listen she did, undeterred by a swarming throng of camera crews and reporters studying her every move from the confines of the Lehman kitchen.

Then it was on to a lengthy public hearing in Ankeny about what's wrong with the medical system, squeezing in a series of television interviews during lunch.

Last week it was Florida, this week it's Iowa, next week it will be Michigan. She's President Clinton's traveling preacher on the gospel of health care reform.

"As head of the White House task force on health reform, Mrs. Clinton is becoming America's national health confidante — part policy wonk, part sympathetic mom, part lawyer.

"Wherever she goes, she absorbs a lot more information than she gives out, offering only broad ideas of where her team is headed in its drive to draft a health plan by May.

To the farm families she gave a soulful listening ear, shaking her head at the high premiums to reduce North Korea nuclear force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Worried that North Korea might have enough nuclear material for a bomb, the Clinton administration is preparing to give Pyongyang bad cop, bad cop in an attempt to reverse Pyongyang's rejection of international nuclear controls.

North Korea's decision last week to withdraw from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and send inspectors packing presented the Clinton administration with its second major nuclear crisis in a month.

As was the case last week when tensions in Moscow rose over the Russian Federation's refusal to consider joining a nuclear weapons freeze, the Clinton administration is hoping other powerful neighbors might use their influence to persuade North Korea to reconsider.

Saying Monday that he was "very disappointed" with the Russian government in Pyongyang, Clinton nonetheless held out hope that "there are several weeks ahead when North Korea might reverse its decision, and I hope they will do so." North Korea's decision only takes effect at the end of May.

The International Atomic Energy Agency is meeting later this week to discuss North Korea's abrogation of the treaty that Pyongyang joined in 1985, although U.S. officials say that at most, the Vienna-based IAEA would take its case to the U.N. Security Council.

North Korea has accused the IAEA of doing U.S. bidding in pressuring for more inspections in North Korea. The agency had given North Korea until late this month to allow inspections of two sites suspected of harboring nuclear bomb-building material.

On the diplomatic front, the United States conceives its leverage is limited. North Korea's decision only takes effect at the end of May.

HONG KONG (AP) — In a stinging speech felt thousands of miles away, Chinese Premier Li Peng on Monday accused Britain of provoking unrest in Hong Kong before the territory's transfer to China in 1997. China will seek co-ownership and preserve the status quo in Hong Kong until 1997. But Patten said that Beijing would not take any time with the transfer.

Li's remarks, an unprecedented attack on a foreign legation, were made before thousands of people gathered in Hong Kong's financial district to protest against a speech by Britain's Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd in which he said that Beijing's representative to Hong Kong should be fair, open and honest, and that the British government is to change its course.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called for greater economic co-operation with China and said that British businesses could benefit from the opening of the market in China. She also expressed hope that the two sides would soon reach an agreement on a new agreement. The Chinese government has until June 30 to complete the handover of Hong Kong to China.

The deal approved by the Foreign Secretary on Monday that China sought cooperation in the face of the United Nations and the United States in order to avoid additional costs and savings and the impact of the Chinese government in the operations of the United States and Japan.

It is time for Notre Dame football games to be returned to the students.

Notre Dame home football games perform a crucial function in our life as a community. These fall afternoons are the prime occasions at which we students express and experience ourselves as one unified student body. Shouting "WE ARE" so loudly the concrete floor and not the benches.

Some would scoff, claiming it is time for Notre Dame to become more "businesslike" or "cynical" at other large Division IA institutions.

Boston College's stadium holds only 50,000, and their student season tickets cost $42, or $7 per game. (Individual tickets were also available to students). My alma mater, Rutgers University, will be a ND football opponent sometime within the next four years, and undergraduates get individual game tickets for free.

That is a sample of ticket policy at other large Division IA schools. This makes clear that Notre Dame can afford a cheaper and more flexible ticket package. With demand so high, it would be wise to continue to charge for tickets to increase the chance assigned seats are used. But not $5 per game? The other 49,000 people holding tickets make up the $7.50 difference it would amount to an increase of only $1.50 per game per patron.

Also NBC television money could be used to subsidize students without charging other ticket-holders. But as things are, $12.50 per game is outlandish for a non-transferable student ticket. Since we already pay so much, I'd rather pay twice as much (full face value) for general admission tickets - ones that students could pool together to bring our parents, sisters and brothers and other friends to a game - honestly.

The danger would be reduced, but not eliminated, if undergraduates were assigned rows, down to field level. Students just have to stop rushing down the aisles, narrow though they are: don't push through people sitting on benches.

Such a system would force a decision to abandon the cathedral that Rockne built for some new safe and soulless arena. The additional revenue an $8,000,000 seat stadium would bring is temptation enough for our avaricious administration; I would hate it if student behavior would give them the pretext to yield to it.

The only way to break the cycle of violence and hatred between warring factions in Northern Ireland is to continue to increase education and programs for the youth of the area. According to Fr. Willie Purcell, priest of Kilkenney, Diocese of Osary and former associate director of the Irish Catholic Youth Council, "The central conflicts in the area involve the longstanding hatred between Catholics and Protestants and the antagonizing presence of the Irish Republican Army and the Royal Ulster Constabulary, according to Purcell. Documenting atrocities on both sides, Purcell explained that few people in the area have avoided being touched by the terror of the violence gripping the area."

"People who were there that day have told me that your heart and spirit is crying out in anger, but you have to give people a sense of not retaliating, not hitting back, not getting one for one, but instead getting a sense of peace," he said.

Purcell related the frustration of a fellow priest who delivered a eulogy for a man whose family had been murdered by violence. "What do you say? It's a very emotional time—your heart and spirit is crying out in anger, but you have to give people a sense of not retaliating, not hitting back, not getting one for one, but instead getting a sense of peace," he said.

"Every great leader has believed that "sense of peace," Purcell said. "Every great leader has this in order to be a leader."

Irish men take third at Eastern Intercollegiates

By ALLISON MCCARTHY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's swimming team closed their 1992-93 season last week at the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships with a third-place finish behind first-place Southern Illinois and runner-up St. Bonaventure.

The Irish scored a total of 422 points, twenty-eight points behind first-place Southern Illinois and runner-up St. Bonaventure.

"We swam significantly faster than the week before at McC's. We were a more aggressive and better prepared team. We did very well," said head coach Tim Welsh. "We swam significantly faster than the week before at McC's. We were a more aggressive and better prepared team. We did very well."

Several university records were set throughout the week-end, including two by distance freestyle specialist and sophomore Mike Keeley who finished fifth in the 500 free (4:35.39) and fourth in the 1500 free and set the 1000 freestyle record during his race. Keeley also placed third in the 400 I.M (4:03.72).

Other strong swims came from senior Colin Cooley, who placed second in the 100 and 200 breast with times of 56.89 and 2:05.78, respectively. He also took third in the 200 I.M (1:52.85).

Senior Ed Broderick captured second in the 200 I.M. (1:52.79), in which he was the defending champion, and second in the 100 fly (50.38). The senior relay team of co-captain Tom Whowell, Cooley, Broderick, and Greg Cornick finished second in the 400 medley relay (3:23.43) and fourth in the 200 medley relay (1:34.51). Cornick also placed fifth in his specialty, the 100 freestyle at 46.01.

Junior diver Sean Hyer placed first in both the one and three meter diving events. In the three meter events, in which Hyer was the defending champion, his score totaled 436.47 points. Hyer's one meter score was 417.60 points.

"Sean dove very well," stated Welsh. "This is the first time in several years that anyone has won both diving events."

Hyer also competed in the NCAA Zone Diving Championships this past weekend, where he placed twelfth in the one meter and thirteenth in the three meter competition, scoring six points for the Irish.

"Sean had a lot of big dives along the stretch, and his competition was tough—it included the entire Big 10," stated diving coach Adam Hirschfeld. "The divers with the best seven scores will compete in NCAA's."

The Irish, whose dual meet record totaled 11-2, were very pleased with the season.

"We had a very strong season," commented Welsh. "One of the keys to it was that we raced faster in each meet throughout the season. For the most part, we were faster at Easterns than at National Catholics which shows a good progression."

"All things moved in the right direction. The key at the beginning of the year was to see how the freshmen and the sophomore distance freestylers would perform, and they got better and stronger as the season went on."

The men began the season with hopes of "re-establishing some university records, and it was good to see this goal accomplished at Easterns," added Welsh. "We keep thinking we'd like to send someone to NCAA's, too, and each year, we keep appreciating the difficulty of making the standards."

The Irish expect several recruits for the upcoming season.

"We have a very large group of well-qualified people applying," said Welsh. "Now, we're just waiting on admissions office decisions."

Mercifully, for fans of Notre Dame basketball, the 1992-93 season has ended. A year that started with less than stellar expectations failed to live up to them.

Granting the Irish had to deal with more injuries than they expected, but success will not come as easily to the Notre Dame basketball program as it might have seemed last spring during its run to the NIT finals. Not only has there been a large drop-off in the talent level, but those that remain haven't Nulty, either. He's been lifting and doing ball-handling as much as he can to get ready for when he can play. Coming out of high school, Kuroski averaged 26 points and was named the top three-point field goal shooting freshman in the country. The Irish can surely use that offensive ability.

The two recruits for next season are both big men, who will earn some game time as freshmen. Matt Goesch, a seven-footer from Friedenswood, Texas, averaged 21 points, 13 rebounds and 8.4 blocks as a junior last season and is reportedly averaging close to 30 points a game this season.

Derrick Hughes, the other signee, doesn't have great numbers, scoring only 8 points a game as a junior, but averaged 10 rebounds. His team won the Class C state title in Michigan, but he wasn't asked to carry a large offensive load. He's listed at 6-10, and his coach says he's still growing.

Two of these young men and the Irish can sorely use that extra rebounding help. With the additions for next year, it could be a lot more interesting than the one that just ended.

Additionally, MacLeod is optimistic that redshirt freshman Keith Kurowski and junior Jeremy Kurowski will both be healed enough to play. The players who return next year have experience in MacLeod's system and in the race for a marquee-type player to continue Notre Dame's rise to the top.

then on, the Cardinals didn't look back.

"I was really impressed with Louisville. We got out to a nice little lead, but they have too much power in terms of strength, size and quickness," said Irish coach John MacLeod. "We couldn't keep them off the offensive boards. They made their outside shots, which opened it up inside. Defensively, we were competitive, but we don't have the power to compete with them."

Actually, from the way the Irish played early in the game, the outcome might seem a little odd.

Notre Dame's Eric Danapilis nominated for Smith Award

Special to The Observer

The National Collegiate Baseball Writers Association released its list of nominees, which includes Notre Dame's Eric Danapilis, for the 1993 Smith Award for the College Player of the Year and the inaugural Smith Super Team. Danapilis, who plays right field for the Irish and has a career batting average of .390, is nominated in the designated hitter/utility/athlete category.

Also nominated are several players the Irish faced on their spring break trip, including 1992 Smith Award finalist Darren Driefort of Wichita State University, Doug Newsome of Arizona, Antone Williamson of Arizona State University and Robby Moon, Chris Gump and Willie Morales of the University of Arizona.

This year, the voting will include fans as well as the NCBA.

The final vote will be held in August through the Smith Award Web site.

To vote for Danapilis, fans can call 1-900-976-VOTE, at a cost of 99 cents per minute with proceeds going to charity.

Last Tuesday, Arizona's George Arffa led Wildcats in the 19-6 win with a grand slam in the first inning off Notre Dame's David Sinnes continuing his six-game home run streak. John Tejcek, Willie Morales and James Motte (2) also hit home runs in the game.

Sinnes took the loss for the Irish although he only pitched to four batters while the win went to Steve Arffa to boost his record to 3-0.

The offensive highlight for the Irish came in the bottom of the sixth when the Irish finally got on the board with four runs. Two freshmen stepped up to the plate for the first time in their collegiate careers and hit home runs.

look we went out there under some adverse conditions in an adverse place to play where they have about a 75 or maybe higher than that winning percentage at Arizona State and went out there and really took it to them. We didn't just beat them, we took it to them," said Murphy.

In the 8-6 win over Wichita State, Notre Dame pounded out five runs in the first two innings on hits by Failla, Danapilis, Hartwell and Bob Lisanti, but once again it was a team effort at the plate with Layson, Danapilis and freshman Robbie Kent knocking two hits each.

Michalak collected his second win of the season after replacing Irish starter Tom Price in the fourth inning.

Price was tagged for four runs on four hits in his time on the mound while Michalak limited the Shockers to two runs on three in three innings.

Allowing no hits, runs or walks, Ali Walania closed the game for his first save of the year.

On Wednesday, the Irish played an unusual double header with a 10-9 loss in the afternoon against Arizona and a 10-1 loss against the California Angels later that night.

In the game against Arizona, Arias once again hurt the Irish with the long ball this time with a tie-breaking solo home run in the fourth inning.

Arias is one game away from breaking the NCAA record of eight consecutive games with a home run set by Andy Bruce of Georgia Tech in 1991.

The Wildcats responded to two Irish runs in the first inning with seven in the bottom of that inning off Walania who pitched a complete game for Notre Dame.

Strong hitting helped the Irish who scored runs in the first three innings. Danapilis knocked his second home run of the year and Lisanti added a two-run triple and a two-run single.

Against the Angels, Danapilis scored the only Irish run in the fifth inning off an Angel error. Richards got the first Irish hit of the day in the third inning of an Angel pitcher John Farrell and Robbie Birk notched the third and final hit of the evening.

The practice game does not effect Notre Dame's record or the team's stats.

On Saturday, the Irish lost another close one this time 14-11 to Wichita State. The Shockers broke an 11-1 tie with three runs in the seventh inning.

Hartwell led the Irish at the plate with two hits including a double. Every Notre Dame starter scored once in the game except Richards who scored three runs.

Richards who played well was pleased with the trip, "I was very happy with what I did. I got a lot more play than I expected." The Irish squad is hoping to get in an outdoor practice in South Bend before they head to Kentucky for a four-game series this weekend.

Even more incredible, Mark Mapes' and Rowan Richards' home runs were back to back. This is the first time in Notre Dame baseball history that this has happened.

"It was real exciting to say the least," said Mapes of his home run. "I didn't expect much, just to go up there and swing. I just hit it and started running. I saw the umpire signal that it was a home run and it was like, 'Wow. I didn't think it was gone.'"

Seniors make splash in last meet

By HALEY SCOTT
Sports Writer

There is something about being a senior. Maybe it's the fact that they are about to graduate, or maybe it's because they never have to swim in a meet again. But if Notre Dame had an MVP award for their last championship meet, it would be a toss up as to which of the three seniors would receive it: Susan Boldrcr, head coach; Tanya Williams, or NCAA qualifier Tanya Williams.

The women's swim team competed at the Eastern Collegiate Conference Championship meet at Cleveland State University over the first weekend of Spring Break. In their last meet of the season as an entire team, the Irish placed second with 542 points. Winning the meet was West Virginia, only 51 points ahead of the Irish with 593. Finishing out the top five places were Southern Illinois University (457), St. Bonaventure (449) and University of Maryland-Baltimore (420).

The three-day championship meet consisted of a morning session (prelims) each day and an evening session (finals) each day. The top sixteen times from the preliminary sessions competed in the evening—the only time that points could be scored for a team. "We needed to swim fast in the morning to return and score points at night. And for the most part, that's what we did," head coach Tim Welsh said.

On the first day of competition senior co-captain Susan Boldrcr gave an impressive performance in the 500-yard freestyle. Boldrcr placed ninth, winning the consolation heat, with a best time of 5:03.81—three seconds faster than she had swum in the morning. The next day in the 200-yard freestyle, Boldrcr swam close to her best time, and scored tenth for the Irish. Boldrcr's classmate Kay Bradrcr swam one of the fastest meets of her life, beginning with a 9th place, consolation heat win, in the 200-yard individual medley. Boldrcr also swam best times in the 100-yard (56.92) and 200-yard (2:04.39) backstrokes, placing fifth and third respectively.

Senior co-captain Tanya Williams, the only Irish swimmer whose season is not over, competed in the three events that she will swim this weekend at the NCAA championship meet in St. Paul, Minn. Williams placed second in the 200-yard individual medley, first in both the 100-yard and 200-yard backstrokes. Her winning times in the backstroke events were fast enough to set new Eastern Conference meet records.

Williams set the pace for the seniors and the rest of the team to do well, and should finish off the season for the Irish strongly at NCAAs this weekend. The entire swim team recognized and acknowledged the seniors accomplishments this weekend. Sophomore Loriann Horenczyk said, "It was really great to see the seniors finish their swimming career so well. They've worked hard for four years, and it's nice to see that it all paid off. We rewarded as a team in the locker room after the meet.

Welsh was also extremely pleased with the way the meet ended. "We prepared for and raced at the meet well. There were some excellent and promising swims."

Diving also played a role in Notre Dame's second place finish. There were two Irish divers in both the one- and three-meter events. Freshman Liane Gallagher placed fifth and third in the one- and three-meter events. Followed by junior Angola Gelic who placed eighth and seventh, respectively.

Other individual swims for the Irish came from freshman Jesslyn Peterson. Peterson set conference records with a first place finish in the 400-yard individual medley, and in the 200-yard breaststroke in the morning session. The only University record broken this weekend was in the 200-yard freestyle relay, set by freshmen Kelly Walsh, Mary Wendell, and Rachel Thurston, and sophomore Cara Garvey.

"I was pleased with the result of the weekend. We will new concentrate on resting and training this summer to get ready for an even better season next year," Welsh said. That is, after Williams finishes her season and her swimming car-

But homecourt advantage can't overcome turnovers, and the Irish committed 23 to help sixth-seeded Dayton to the first-round upset.

" Dayton played like veterans, which they are, and we played like freshmen and sophomores, which we are," McGraw said.

The Dayton loss was just the end of the roller coaster ride. There were plenty of ups and downs the rest of the way. The season began on a bad note with losses to Marquette and Purdue. Against the Boilermakers, the Irish scored just 41 points and committed 41 turnovers on the way to a 33-point loss.

McGraw called the game "an embarrassment to Notre Dame basketball."

In January, the Irish looked dominating during a four-game win streak that included wins over Dayton and MCC tournament champion Xavier.

That streak came to an end on back to back days as the Irish travelled to face Penn State and DePaul, both ranked in the top 25 at the time.

But to McGraw, basketball isn't all Notre Dame's all-time steal leader, finishing her career with (however many she has, can roose she was gone earlier).

The Irish took all the ups and downs in stride. It was all part of the ride, all part of playing with a young lineup.

But the season is over and that youth now breeds hope. After winning 20 or more games in four consecutive seasons, the Irish have won just 29 games in the last two years and they are hoping that next year's returning firepower can help them reach the 20-win plateau again.

It's really not as bad as it looks.

Despite dropping three out of their four matches over spring break, seeing themselves fall from sixth to 14th in the newest intercollegiate tennis rankings, and having their number-two singles player flout out he will miss the rest of his senior year, the Notre Dame men's tennis team is in good spirits and confident about their role in the national collegiate tennis picture.

Here's why:

• Despite the Irish's drop in the rankings, they still have an NCAA tournament bid all but wrapped up. They have already defeated two of the top teams in the Midwest and will most likely receive the Midwest's automatic bid.

• Even though team leader Andy Zurcher reinjured his wrist during his comeback and has decided to have surgery for taking too much time in between serves during a pivotal point in the match. That call added to the frustration of the Irish, who have had a tough time with doubles matches again.

In those other matches, Forsyth and Spencer lost to Arizona State with a 6-1 loss to the 11th-ranked Pepperdine Waves. The Irish was run under the older format which has the doubles matches being played before the singles matches, whereas the new format that the Irish have played under all season has the doubles matches being played first in eight-game pro sets, and the singles matches afterwards. This format hurt the Irish against the Waves, since it negated their strong doubles team.

Forsyth won five out of the six singles matches, meaning the doubles matches meant nothing. Only two out of the five top teams continue not to play straight sets, as Will Forsyth battled Charles Auffray in a 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1 victory over Texas' second-ranked doubles team. Forsyth won five out of the six singles matches, but the match was a lot closer than the 5-1 score.

Hockey ends season with loss to Michigan

The Notre Dame hockey team wrapped up its season last weekend by falling to the University of Michigan in a 6-1 loss in the final round of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs.

The Wolverines, who are ranked second in the nation and finished second in the CCHA, defeated the Irish handily in two games by the scores of 3-2 and 6-1, respectively.

On Friday night the Wolverines scored the first five goals of the game having only nine shots against Notre Dame starting goalie Greg Loudor. Loudor was replaced by the 11th ranked student after the first period by fellow junior net-minder Brent Lothrop.

Two seconds after Lothrop entered the contest, Irish freshman Jamie Ling scored the Irish on the score board with his fourteenth goal of the year. The score was assisted by alternate captain Dave Bankoske and forward defenseman Matt Bleck.

Michigan closed the first period with a 2-0 lead to 6-1 with 9:29 remaining in the game. Notre Dame head coach Ric Schafer said about the weekend's performance, "I think they (Michigan) are an excellent team. They are far superior to us. We are not prepared to face them in the final four of the NCAA tournament."

"We didn't play great, and we didn't play all that bad," said Irish senior Dan Marvin, who finished his Notre Dame hockey career last weekend along with five other seniors. "They were ready to play playoff hockey and they're planning on going a long way. We just didn't have the firepower.

"Michigan just showed us that we have a way to go," said Ling, who led the Irish in scoring this season. "They showed us why they're ranked second in the country."

Alternate captains Curtis Janicke and Dave Bankoske both expressed sentiments of disappointment toward the endings of their Notre Dame careers on this weekend's note. "It's a bitter-sweet ending," said Janicke. "It was nice to end in the CCHA playing against the best competition in the nation, but it was tough not winning many games."

"It's a disappointing way to end. We had higher hopes," Bankoske said. "I think we can do it in the future. It's just a matter of time."

The hockey team finished the season with a 7-27-2 record overall and a 5-25-2 record in the CCHA. Although this is clearly not a good record, several facts should be noted.

Eighteen of Notre Dame's twenty seven losses came from teams who are ranked in the top thirteen in the nation. Six of these losses came at the hands of the extremely talented Michigan squad which has twenty one player's who have been drafted by the NHL.

The Irish were also faced with the burden of putting together a team with only twelve scholarship positions while most of their league rivals had upwards of eighteen.

"I'm not happy, but I'm not disappointed," said Schafer. "I wish we could have done better.

One ray of light for the Irish this season has been the outstanding play of Ling, who was recently named to the CCHA All-Rookie Team. Ling finished with fourteen goals and twenty six assists for a team leading forty points. His thirteen goals and twenty two assists in league play place him third among freshmen in the CCHA.

On receiving the honor he said, "I'm happy, but I'd just assume still be playing right now."

His teammates certainly feel that he is worthy of the commendation. "Jamie's a good player," said Janicke. "He's very smart and very skilled."

"He's very gifted with the puck and he has great vision of the ice," Marvin said. "I think that sets him apart from just an average player.

Ling is also a strong candidate for CCHA Rookie-of-the-Year.

"It would be nice to get it, but I'm not expecting to," he said. "If I get it, fine, but I won't be disappointed if I don't."

The Irish will be working hard over the off-season to improve on strength and quickness. They have already signed two highly recruited forwards and are expected to announce the signing of a few more recruits in the near future.

They will be aided in the recruiting process by an increase in scholarships from twelve to thirteen and a half.

Irish baseball off to rough start

By JENNY MARTEN

Here's a little analogy to describe how the Notre Dame baseball team's spring break trip went. It's like if the Irish football team beat Michigan and Colorado or the men's basketball team defeated Duke and Seton Hall, in one week.

The 16th-ranked Irish (2-3) headed out west for a seven-game roadtrip and bested two top-15 teams in a week. Arizona State, then ranked 6th, fell first in a 13-4 Irish victory last Monday. Six days later then 7th-ranked Wichita State became the second victim of the 1993 season in a 8-6 ND win.

In between the two games, the Irish lost to Arizona, then ranked 8th nationally, twice (19-6, 10-9), the California Angels (10-1) and Wichita State once (14-13). A third game with the Shockers was cancelled due to weather.

Notre Dame head coach Pat Murphy felt the trip was a good experience.

"I think we performed very, very well, but I gotta be honest, I expected it. I expected to do well. I expected to play well. We didn't play nearly in our capabilities. We easily could have had four victories, but you've got to be encouraged coming out of the chute...but we've got a long way to go. We didn't even scratch the surface of how good we could be. But, we did wake up and say: 'If those are the best teams in the country, they truly are, we're pretty close.'

Irish senior captain Eddie Hartwell added, "Overall, we did a lot of good things. We swung the bat well and we didn't give up in any of the games. That we continued to fight and to battle back showed this team's blue collar attitude." In a week which Hartwell described as a "great confidence builder," several members of the Notre Dame squad contributed in the win.

Against Arizona State (16-7-1), senior Chris Michalak staked the Sun Devils from the mound allowing only eight hits and four runs in nine innings of work in the 13-4 victory.

"He jammed me four times. I know it was every time and I couldn't do anything about it." At plate, the Irish knocked ASU starter Mike Benzemer off the mound in the second inning after scoring a run in the first and the second.

The Irish bats were liven in the game with Craig DeSensi, Williams—scored in double figures for Notre Dame, with 13. But the Irish shot better than in the past, hitting at 47 percent for the game while Louisville shot the same percentage. Statistically, rebounding wasn't the problem, as the Cardinals accounted only two more boards than the Irish. The real problem was a McColl, a smothering press that forced the Irish into 18 turnovers.

Coming out of the half, Notre Dame was still within striking distance, trying to cut into the Cardinals' 33-31 lead in the next four and a half minutes made things a bit more difficult for the Irish.

Louisville's star forward Clifford Rozier set the tone with a monster dunk off of a missed shot to spur a 15-5 run, putting the Cards up by 12.

But Notre Dame didn't look like they were quite done yet. The Irish ran their own press and scored a fast-break lay-up for Jon Ross.

The Irish's inside game proved to be too much for the Irish and Louisville started to get easy inside baskets while Notre Dame was relying on Monte Williams. Williams scored 9 of 11 Notre Dame points from the 14-55 mark until 5:47 remained in the game.

Only one problem — for five of those minutes the Irish could manage only three points, while Louisville scored 17. From there, to increase their lead to 64-47. From

Notre Dame hoops finish disappointing seasons

By RICH KURZ

LOUISVILLE - When the Irish took the floor against the Louisville Cardinals a week ago Sunday for their final game of the 1992-93 season, they weren't playing for an NCAA bid. Or, for that matter, for NIT bid.

But it's almost a cliche that a team with no hope of a post-season invitation tries to win its final game to set a good tone for the next season. If that truly is the case, then maybe Notre Dame should look ahead to its trip to Europe this summer to get a good feeling for next year.

Playing against a Cardinal team that played as if it was looking forward to the Metro Tournament and an automatic bid for the NCAAs, the Irish showed signs of improvement before sliding in the second half, eventually falling 53-63.

Monty Williams was again the main man for the Irish and if not for his efforts, the margin could have been even larger. He had the game of his career offensive, scoring 34 points on 12-18 shooting, grabbing 11 rebounds, more than twice as many as anyone else on the Irish.

Only one other player — Jason Williams — scored in double figures for Notre Dame, with 13.

Irish's loss to Dayton in the first-round of the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament.

In the regular-season finale against the Aces, the Irish got 17 points off the bench from junior Sherri Drisko to secure the No. 3 seed in the conference tournament.

The win was Muffet McGraw's 116th as Notre Dame coach, lifting her past Mary DiStanislao as the winningest women's basketball coach in history.

But the record didn't satisfy her.

"The only record we're concerned about is five straight MCC championships," McGraw said.

It wasn't to be as the Irish lost their first MCC tournament game ever.

With the tournament at the Joyce ACC, McGraw was confident that the team could use the homecourt advantage as a springboard to the title.
