Speakers differ widely in the AIDS argument

BY TRACY CRINION
News Writer

The third part in the Blessed Mother Lecture Series, "The Compassion of the Sorrowful Mother," held last night in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium featured five lectures on AIDS by speakers from both Notre Dame and the local community.

Father Thomas McDermott, director of Campus Ministries, said that the Feast of Our Lady of the Seven Sorrows was the ideal moment to bring to mind AIDS, "truly one of the great sorrows of the present day." McDermott felt that the feast should be used to show "love, quiet union and sympathy for those who suffer."

Featured speakers were Fr. Ronald Raab of St. Joseph Parish, also chairman of the Religion Committee of AIDS ministries, Sr. Ethne Kennedy, associate director of AIDS Ministries/AIDS Assist, Carol Seager, director of University Health Services, Professor Charles Rice of the Notre Dame Law School and Dr. Robert Devetski, an infectious diseases clinician in South Bend.

Raab, involved in AIDS ministries for over seven years, urges people to "break open their hearts a bit more" to break through the walls of fear and silence surrounding the AIDS epidemic. For each of Our Lady's Seven Sorrows, he offered a prayer regarding AIDS.

Raab said he prays that those who have turned away from those in need will overcome their fears and show compassion.

Kennedy offered an eumenical response to the AIDS crisis. The Catholic Network has over twenty-four groups that provide education, information and support for AIDS patients or anyone interested.

While many cases of AIDS are contracted by means which the Church finds immoral, said Kennedy, "the AIDS experience confronts Christians with humanity, the meaning of life, the meaning of death," and there is much to be learned about God through compassion for the sick.

Seager, University Health Services Director, spoke of a rising tide of change on campus with regard to the AIDS crisis. "We (UHS) used to go around on campus to speak about AIDS—and no one would show up. However, she said at the Notre Dame Student Activities Night, over sixty people signed up for Students With AIDS Training (SWAT) as volunteers willing to work with AIDS patients or anyone interested.

Bruno's rejected thus far at the Huddle

BY KATIE MURPHY

A proposal to open a branch of Bruno's Pizza in the Huddle has recently been vetoed by the Office of Business Affairs and University Food Services.

Bruno's co-owner John Cataldo drafted and submitted the proposal in July after two meetings with Student Body President Frank Flynn. Although this proposal has been turned down, discussion over bringing outside vendors to campus continues. Currently, efforts are underway to create a survey to gauge customer interest in commercial vendors at LabRome.

"Originally, the intention was to sit down and talk about what we wanted, but there was no closure, because of the choice of Bruno's. The University needs the research before they can make an investment," said Flynn.

Bruno's proposal was rejected for a number of reasons, according to David Prentkowski, director of food services.

"It would have been a financial drain on Notre Dame. Our primary objective was to study the feasibility of the customer. Customer satisfaction is more than just bringing in a popular item. It's how much that item costs," said Prentkowski.

Greider lectured ND on democracy

By DAVID CLAIRMONT
News Writer

With concerned optimism and with a challenge for all Americans who hope for change, William Greider, politi- cal columnist for Rolling Stone magazine, presented the sixteenth annual Joseph Moloney Memorial Lecture.

"We have lost our set of operating principles which we call democracy," said Greider. This proposal, the thesis of his new book, "Who Will Tell the People: The Betrayal of American Democracy," capitulated a packed auditorium yesterday evening in the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies.

Greider identified a "crusade for the country," signals with which to contact those people both disenfranchised and confused with the politics of modern government. His discussion began by citing the end of the Cold War as a dispersion of the American spirit, united for so many years by the former Soviet Union, a common enemy.

He said the past forty-five years could be categorized as a period of "militaristic socialism," during which time consi- derable amounts of the United States' time and resources were spent constructing an arsenal which is not helping us to fight, or at best peaceably coexist with, our new enemy.

Greider said the restructured global economy, our newest and most complex adversary to date, exhibits two characteris- tics which, although fundamentally, are just beginning to approach the political agenda. Those involved with corporations, as well as the many professionals, are finding three things quite profitable while the rest of the labor force is adjusting to a declining level of prosperity, he said.

American democracy is failing, Greider said, as a result of the transfer of power in government decision making. To eco­ nomic stability, the political parties of the United States have abandoned their primary responsibility to maintain the connection between society and the government which decides its condition.

The key shift in political power has been to the multinatio­ nal corporations, which have been confirmed by a media which has sold to the highest bidder. He challenged that all must be ready to evaluate what has come before and speak, with vision, of what is to come.
Saturday's victory over Michigan pleased everyone throughout the country, with two notable exceptions: the Michigan fans, of course, and the Notre Dame t-shirt companies. The t-shirt companies?

Yes.

They're not very happy, and they have good reasons not to be. Notre Dame showed once again that they are capable of beating the big boys. They are likely to be defeated by Michigan in the national championship. The Underdog savors the flavor of victory, "discouraging but not wholly unexpected." The number of people who watch the national championship has dropped. The death penalty perpetrators now have to deal with the realities of capital punishment. They are not very popular. The death penalty proponents are a feeble minority.

Leigh Dingsinger of the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty called the ruling numbers of executions "the largest since 1976. All executions since then have been against those of the author and not necessarily those of the Observer. Everyone must respect the ruler of the United States, not just in theory but in practice."

SMC's FUERZA to reorganize for 1993

BY BERNADETTE PAMPUCH
News Writer

FUERZA, Spanish for "strength," a multi-cultural organization at Saint Mary's has reorganized after disbanding one year ago to unite women of Hispanic backgrounds on campus, according to Co-President Teresa Marquez.

Founded by 1993 alumna Delia Garcia in the spring of 1992, lack of participation forced the group to dissolve during the 1992-93 school year. Under the leadership of co-presidents Marquez and Gloria Garza, the club is attempting to once again promote increased diversity in the Saint Mary's community.

"FUERZA is trying to change some of the perceptions about students from both schools," Garza said. "I'm trying to make sure we forget about the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's 'stigma' and remember that we're just Hispanics and we're all here trying to get a higher education and we're all trying to do something better for ourselves as a people," Garza said.

FUERZA holds an organizational meeting at 6:15 p.m. in the Holy Cross Hall parlor to plan activities for the year and involvement in community activities.

The basic premise right now is to get ourselves strong, situated as a club on campus, make ourselves known, and give the underclassmen the opportunity to feel out what they want to do and make it stronger so that (FUERZA) will be able to stay a club for the following years," Marquez said.

"FUERZA is a homogeneous campus," Garza said. "We're different, but I think in one aspect we all have common backgrounds," she said in reference to Hispanic students.

FUERZA aims to give members a sense of belonging that is often hard to find on campus, according to Marquez.

"It's very difficult being a minority, or what you would (call) a person of color on this campus because there's not as many people that understand where you're coming from," Marquez said. "Sometimes when you're with people of your same culture it makes you feel stronger, it makes you feel a little more comfortable in what you're doing."

By focusing on both the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame communities, FUERZA is trying to get a higher education and we're all trying to do something better for ourselves as a people," Garza said.

The Huddle now operates without the sale of their beer, according to Prentkowski. Any arrangement with a third party introduces the chance of making a profit and may increase prices, he said.

"If you allow a company to come in and run it, they’re not going to be in the customer service mode," said Prentkowski. "We don’t have to have a surplus and we don’t want to zero out. We’re not in the business to make a profit, and we know for a fact that students don’t want prices to go up."

Prentkowski cited a food service survey taken last winter. "They were very excited about it. It’s just a huge opportunity. Prentkowski echoed Huddle’s concern.

A Bruno’s operation at the Huddle may not be as successful or popular as the off-campus restaurants because of the need to escape from campus, he said.

"Our research shows that people go to Bruno’s because it’s a getaway," said Prentkowski.

According to Cataldo, during its 17 years of operation, Bruno’s has successfully established a sizable clientele in the Notre Dame community. He credits the family atmosphere and the quality of the Bruno’s products for its success.

"When we heard about this, we were very excited about it. It’s just a huge opportunity," he said.

The student senate task force is preparing to work with food services and a marketing graduate student on a Huddle survey.

"You can find out a lot from a survey. We may find out that the menu itself needs to be changed, not necessarily that we need to bring in outside vendors," said Lyphout. "The ideal is not inherently bad, but we just have to make sure we know what we’re getting into."

"We didn’t really consider it a proposition we wanted to pursue," said Lyphout. "I think we really need to look at why students are interested in off-campus restaurants. I think students go off campus to get a change of scenery and also to escape alcohol. I can’t do that on campus." Prentkowski echoed Lyphout’s concern.

Bruno’s new idea was brought to the president, Tom Hesburgh, and vice president, John Cataldo. Bruno’s followed.

Bruno’s suggested that the University receive 30 percent of the revenue and Bruno’s the remaining 70 percent. Flynn acknowledged that the initial proposal was clearly a flippant one and was “obviously slanted towards Bruno’s.”

“They had no clue what the University would support,” said Flynn. Bruno’s presented its proposal on July 15 after it was approved by Flynn and given a tour of the Huddle facilities. The plan to bring a commercial vendor to LaFortune originated in Flynn’s campaign for student government president last year, he said.

A Student Senate task force on university food services was established at the end of the 1992-93 school year, and efforts to set up meetings with Bruno’s followed.

Flynn then sent the proposal to Vice President for Business

Patients.

This movement for AIDS testing, the sale of AIDS victim ID bracelets by student government, and other trends on campus mark increased tolerance and sympathy for victims of the fatal disease, according to Kennedy.

Bice spoke on aspects of legal discrimination against AIDS patients, saying that while AIDS patients deserve compassion, intra-venous drug users and homosexuals are generally not legally entitled to the rights granted to others. Citing Bible passages and a statute passed by King Henry VIII against homosexuals, Bice supported legal discrimination against homosexuals, whether they have AIDS or not, in the military, day care, adoption and foster care.

"Homosexual relationships cannot be put on the same par with married heterosexual couples without undermining the American family," said Rice.

Devetski, a South Bend internist, told the audience that non-physicians are the most important health care workers in the nation.

"Hospitals are not equipped to handle non-physicians," he said. Devetski’s South Bend internist-clinician showed slides portraying the terrible growth of AIDS since it was first officially reported case in 1981. The total number of AIDS cases has increased from 35,235 in 1989 to 47,106.

Other disturbing increases in AIDS cases, said Devetski, are where the victims were contracted the virus and how they were contracted the virus. Cases where the victims were contracted the virus have increased 88 percent, he added.

Tug-of-war develops in Middle East over peace

By SALAH NASRAWI
Associated Press

Palestinian opponents of Yasir Arafat’s bridging peace deal with Israel pursued their campaign against it on Wednesday, hoping to overturn it by democratic or violent means.

Arafat, facing the deepest split in the Palestine Liberation Organization since it was formed nearly 30 years ago, returned to his headquarters after calling immediate meetings on how to rally support and heal the leadership rift.

His return came two days after he signed the landmark peace treaty with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in Washington. The accord grants limited self-rule to Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho and sets up a timetable for expanding autonomy to other areas and negotiating a permanent agreement.

Opponents consider it seriously flawed, complaining that it does not guarantee the creation of an independent state or the return of refugees and ignores the critical issue of the status of Jerusalem.

Arafat scheduled meetings with senior aides to discuss the crisis, PLO officials said.

He also was to call meetings of the PLO Executive Committee, which has suffered five defections because of the accord, and the 18-member ruling Central Committee of his own mainstream Fatah faction.

"God willing, it (the accord) will pave the way for similar peace accord on all Arab fronts," Arafat said on his return.

"It started with Palestine. Yesterday (Tuesday) it was Jordan, and later on it will be Syria and Lebanon," he predicted.

Two of the PLO’s staunchest opponents, George Habash and Nayef Hawatmeh, met in Tripoli with Libyan leader Moamar Gadhafi. Gadhafi has criticized the pact and has said in a nationally televised speech that the “will not keep quiet about this mockery.”
Protesting farmers block the traffic around Paris

By TERRIL JONES
Associated Press

PARIS

Thousands of farmers disrupted over a European-American trade accord blocked roads and rail lines around Paris with hay bales, cars and farm equipment Wednesday, disrupting traffic.

The farmers vowed to block traffic again Thursday, after setting up 20 roadblocks and obstacles along major highways leading to Paris and blocking some train lines, including one high-speed TGV line, on Wednesday.

The farmers are protesting an agreement reached last November between the 12-nation European Community and the United States on agricultural subsidies.

Under the accord, EC governments will lower subsidies to farmers, reduce harvests of certain grain crops and cut exports of subsidized agricultural products by 21 percent.

The French government has threatened to veto the accord, but farm groups want to be sure it doesn't back down at a crucial Sept. 20 meeting of EC foreign and agricultural ministers called to discuss the EC-U.S. accord.

France argues the accord is unfair because it requires more concessions from the EC than from the United States, which refuses to renegotiate it.

Agriculture Minister Jean Puech on Wednesday urged France's EC partners to reach a "clear, clean decision to reopen negotiations with the Americans."

On Wednesday, about 10,000 farmers participated in the protest, said Jacques Laigneau, president of Rural Coordination, the grassroots group organizing the protest.

"This is the first time the Cuban government steps back from an effort to expand state control over agriculture," said Jorge Dominguez, a Cuba expert at the Inter-American Dialogue in Washington, D.C. "Indeed, it is creating an important zone of independence."

The party Politburo said cooperatives will be set up on state farms, using the land for an indefinite period. They will still sell all of their harvest to the state, which will tell them what main crops to grow and also set production goals.

But the farmers will split the profits among themselves and will have a greater share in managing the enterprise, handling their own banking and buying materials on credit.

"If they have long-term, indefinite tenure, that gives them virtual control of all the incentives that private ownership does," said economist Archibald Ritter, a Cuba expert at Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada.

Most of Cuba's land is held in massive state farms. It was not immediately clear how much would be converted to cooperatives.

The announcement set the party hopes "to make agriculture more efficient . . . by applying formulas to motivate and give incentives to men . . . to achieve greater volumes of production."

It was a major shift from Cuban Communists' long efforts to boost output with moral exhortations rather than money.

But Cuba's farm sector, like the rest of its economy, is in crisis due to a lack of fuel and fertilizer, cutting output by 20 percent since 1989.

Would-be President faces home

The would-be president of Nigeria fixed his people a message Wednesday, urging them to be patient with his embattled administration.

The extended stay abroad of Moshood Abiola, once heralded as the savior of democracy in this country, prompted his top supporters to the Wednesday for London to persuade him to come back.

The delegation is being led by his running mate, Baba Gana Kingibe, who has urged Abiola to return to the country to claim his mandate.

Abiola's critics have used his absence to try to argue that he lacks presidential mettle.

Clinton seeks support for NAFTA around country

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS

With crates of potential exports towering over him, President Clinton promoted a free-trade pact before friendly dockworkers Wednesday and bristled at all the attention being paid to Ross Perot's counteroffensive.

Visiting the bustling New Orleans port less than a year after George Bush made the same trip to promote the same trade pact — and his re-election — Clinton told a warehouse crowd: "This is a good deal. It's a winner. We ought to take it."

In opening his fall drive to get North American Free Trade Agreement through a recalcitrant Congress, Clinton was clearly seeking to counter the rhetorical fire of Perot.

Without mentioning the Texas billionaire by name, Clinton told his audience: "The people who are afraid of this agreement are quite well organized. Some of them have a dollar or two, as you may know, and they need to hear from you."

GOP unveils Health Care plans for a deal

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Republicans in Congress prescribed their own health care plans Wednesday, pitching them as easier-to-swallow alternatives to President Clinton's that would gradually cover all Americans without forcing new costs on business.

House and Senate Republicans outlined separate packages aimed at making it more affordable for the uninsured to get coverage — but not requiring companies to pick up 80 percent of their workers' premiums as the White House package would do.

Clinton will officially propose his reform package in a speech to Congress next week, but details have been surfacing in advance.

About 20 Senate Republicans are supporting a plan by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., that aims to eventually force all Americans to purchase their own insurance. Poor people would get help through government vouchers.

A Prospective Trade Center juror biased

By LARRY NEUMEISTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK
Bias and anger about the bombing of the World Trade Center spilled over Wednesday during interviews with prospective jurors, with one suggesting the defendants be hanged.

The second day of jury selection in the conspiracy case against four Muslim fundamentalists included several would-be jurors with biases so strong that U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy lectured them before letting them go.

Even so, those who expressed fears and bias were in the minority and lawyers said they expected jury selection to be completed next week.

"I am very biased," said one of the potential anonymous jurors. They were identified by numbers only.

When the judge asked him to elaborate, he said, "They're guilty, hang them out in an island somewhere." He was among several dozen jurors to tell the judge and lawyers why they wanted out.

Transcripts of closed-door questioning of jurors at the heavily guarded federal courthouse were released afterward.

"I'm convinced of the guilt of the defendants," said another possible juror. "I'm Jewish. I'm a Zionist, and major, a substantial contributor to Israel."

Other prospective jurors said they witnessed the chaos around the Trade Center on Feb. 26 when a bomb in a van tore a 150-foot-wide crater beneath the second-tallest building in the world. Six people were killed and more than 1,000 injured.

Few decent people object to real love, when it seems to be true

Gary Trudeau’s Doonesbury, which appears on the bottom of this page, has a unique place among American comic strips. The various lead people, office workers, etc. of The Family Circus, Cathy, and other strips have to live back by the auto section, but Doonesbury’s character, often canar on the editorial page. The feeling seems to be that they touch a nerve; the strip is a cultural barometer of sorts.

That’s why I was razzled by last week’s storyline. I assume that a lot of people were, and that accounts for its early dismissal; but for the record, here is what Gary Trudeau considered a diverting misadventure: Mark, one of the lead characters, is visited in a dream by an AIDS victim, who informs him that he may be gay. He is unsure. A crisis ensues.

Trudeau milks the situation for sitcom-style gags, e.g. “Do you still like sports?” meant to show up the prejudices of liberal Mark, but Mark says he isn’t ready. J.J., Mike’s wife, says she thinks he’s under pressure to be gay. So on and so forth. The whole episode is about as funny as homophobia, and Trudeau tried to right it up. But it was typical of a well-meaning trend which appears on the bottom of this page. has a unique place in the gay subculture, which despite the efforts of a few solid citizens still largely revolves around sanctimoniousness, disease, and unbelievably squab sex.

Now, these are hard words, I realize, and I suppose that some Observer readers may find them abusive. But this is largely an expression of sympathy on my part, see what I have been through on the other side.

As a Catholic, I am committed to more or less seriously consider Church teachings. The Church has no doubt at all about the place of homosexual acts. These acts are considered wrong and gravely sinful. The proper homossexuals get on board for the big win, the better off the universe will be. But it’s serious business to tell someone that they can never make love again. Serious enough when you have taken holy orders, and that much worse when you are only trying to muddle through the world like the rest of us.

As with birth control, the Holy See offers the troops little in the way of explanation. Go to the papal encyclicals and ask why this terrible burden must be borne, and you are liable to get some answer along the lines of, “If we consider the nature of sex we find there is primarily a procreative as well as unitive function of human sexuality that marks it as analogous to...”

Pretty thin soup, but a papal encyclical is not something you can just blow off if you call yourself a Catholic.

So here we are, with Napoléon on one side, and stern abstractions where we need them least on the other. Compounding the problem is the almost bottomless mirth and contempt most men feel towards male homosexuality. Women seem to be less troubled by female homosexuality, for some reason or other. Neither are men any more so too revolted by lesbianism; far from it, if the truth be known. On a planet of women, maybe homosexuality wouldn’t be a social problem. But this is not a planet of women. Homosexuality is becoming a significant part of our society, and we’re going to have to figure out how to deal with it.

I for one would like to see some moral assimilation. If there’s going to be homosexuality on a wide scale in America, and there’s going to be, I would like to see it at least keep pace with American mores.

Things are slipping fast, but it’s still more or less shameful to sleep with dozens of people in a year, and a sex act per se is still nothing to boast about. The loneliness which lies behind the gay lifestyle is what people find objectionable, a magnified mirror of heterosexual vice.

Few decent people, I think, really have anything against real love, whatever its mode, when it seems to be true—or at least try.

By MARY GOOD
Assistant Writer

Alas, real entertainment is rolling into town and you won’t have to be twenty-one to enjoy it. This Friday night you will not need a fake I.D., only a valid college I.D., to jam to the covers and originals played by the up-and-coming Indiana band, Oliver Syndrome. From 9 p.m. until 11 p.m. the band will be playing at Saint Mary’s in the field behind Havican Hall.

To top it all off, admission is free and refreshments will be available. All this thanks to the Student Activities Board and Saint Mary’s Student Government.

This year Saint Mary’s students are paying an increased student activities fee. According to Jill Hotek, Student Activities Board coordinator, this fee has contributed to the realistic project that will pay off Friday night. Oliver Syndrome primarily plays for a college-age audience and they know how to entertain.

Their song list includes the usual range of covers from Brown Eyed Girl to Suck My Kiss and Two Princes is not missing from the list.

According to lead vocalist and keyboard master, Oliver Morris, in an interview with The Indianapolis Star, the band plays to a college following because, “They can be very loyal. They also talk among themselves substantially more than the ‘townies do.”

Oliver Syndrome has quite a success Hotel said. It has been in the planning since MaryBeth Wilkinson was elected Student Body President last spring. It began as an idea prompted by Oliver Syndrome’s reputation in the college circuit and their appearances at Heartland and a few other local nightclubs, according to Hotel.

Over the summer Student Activities together with Student Government made it a realistic project that will pay off Friday night. Oliver Syndrome primarily plays for a college-age audience and they know how to entertain. Their song list includes the usual range of covers from Brown Eyed Girl to Suck My Kiss and Two Princes is not missing from the list.

According to lead vocalist and keyboard master, Oliver Morris, in an interview with The Indianapolis Star, the band plays to a college following because, “They can be very loyal. They also talk among themselves substantially more than the ‘townies do.”

Oliver Syndrome has quite a reputation after three years of appearances in and around Indianapolis. The group has proven to be a hit at Purdue University, Indiana University, and many other Midwest schools.

The band is based in Indianapolis. Their gigs usually land them no further than five hours from home. They usually play no more than three or four nights a week.

Their decision to abandon the rock star image and stick close to Indianapolis has allowed them more time and money to work with, according to Morris in an interview with Marc Allan.

Morris is working hard to lead the band through a transition from cover group to what he told The Purdue Exponent was “a real band.” They have used their saved resources to build their own studio, Studio 512, in Indianapolis. At the studio they spend time rehearsing and creating a sound of their own.

The composition and the age of the group contributes to their popularity. For Oliver Morris, 24, this band has been his dream since he was 15 years old. He is responsible for getting the guys together and launching their careers.

He is supported on guitar by David Edmonds, 25, whose experience lies in funk bands. Brent McNamara, 29, is the band’s bassist, and Wade Parish, 23, does the drums. Parish’s background also includes some time playing with thrash bands.

This combination of talent is only beginning to bud as the Saint Mary’s/Notre Dame community will find out this weekend.

Although Saint Mary’s and Notre Dame students love covers as much as the next student body, they should also be looking forward to a sound uniquely Oliver.

In January, Oliver Syndrome released a disc called Say Something that was comprised of twelve of Oliver Syndrome’s originals. These songs will be incorporated into Friday’s outdoor event. It is not often that such a rising rage comes to town, and on a football weekend no less. So, come on out to Havican Field with that college I.D. and your dancing shoes Friday night.

At the rate this group is going, you will be lucky to someday be able to say that you saw them when.

Comparisons to past great cromy Styles

By RUSTY MILLER Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio—Lorenzo Styles says he forgot the comparisons to Marcus Marek, Pepper Johnson, Chris Spielman or Dave Torre. Instead, he asks to merely be all the family and friends from the Steel City.

Styles, who lived in Columbus from the sixth through 10th grades, said he's going to need a lot of advice and all the family and friends coming out to see him play.

"I've got very much," he said. "I've got a lot that he has set aside. Asked how many more he needs, he laughed, "No limit." Pitt recruited him, but he decided to return to Columbus.

"If I've never cared too much about the university," he said, "The surroudings are too much in the city, too much to do, too much to get in trouble with. So I decided to come down here. I like the atmosphere better. The campus is apart from the city." Styles started the spring as an outside linebacker, but was moved inside to fill the vacancy left by NFL draftee Tovar. So far, he hasn't disappointed anyone.

"It's nice having a guy like Lorenzo Styles that you can move back to the middle and strengthen your football team," said OSU coach John Cooper.

"Lorenzo's earned that position; that's a message that needs to go loud and clear," Styles said earlier this week.

"There's been a lot of good middle linebackers here at Ohio State, but I just want to be my own person. Show my skills as Lorenzo Styles, not as a Pepper Johnson or Dave Torre type. I just want to be myself," Styles said earlier this week.

So far, being Lorenzo Styles is enough. He leads 11th-ranked Ohio State with 23 tackles as trouble with. Instead, he asks to merely be all the family and friends from the Steel City.

"I've never cared too much about the university," he said. "The surroundings are too much in the city, too much to do, too much to get in trouble with. So I decided to come down here. I like the atmosphere better. The campus is apart from the city." Styles started the spring as an outside linebacker, but was moved inside to fill the vacancy left by NFL draftee Tovar. Michigan's Gary Moeller responds to boos, rebounds from loss

By HARRY ATKINS Associated Press

"We believed all along we had one of the top defenses in the country," said the coach. "Now we're just going out to prove it every night, to put our words on the line."

He said there were major differences from last year's team, which ended up fourth in the nation in points allowed, and this year's squad.

It really didn't matter. Moeller didn't plan to sit on the ball. Two snaps later, quarterback Todd Collins threw the second of his three interceptions that afternoon.

"I'd sure like to take back the plays that didn't work," Moeller says. "I'd like to have been in position to run the ball a little more. But we didn't perform like we should have."

What the vocal fans apparently failed to realize is that the passing game, at which Collins has become so adept, isn't very effective unless the defense can be kept honest by the threat of a runner like Wheatley.

"You always second guess yourself," Moeller says. "But, no, I wouldn't change much."

The Wolverines (1-1), who dropped from third to 10th in the AP poll after the 27-23 defeat, are id at the back of the pack. The game would have played, against Washington State, was moved up to Sept. 4. Michigan will return to action next week when Houston (2-0) visits Ann Arbor.

Moeller is using the down time to re-evaluate the plan for Monday or Tuesday on Michigan's special teams.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Mike Miller's 56-yard punt return for a Notre Dame touchdown marked the second straight game in which an opponent earned a special teams TD. In the season opener, Washington State's Kevin Hicks returned a kickoff 97 yards for a score.

"We're going to be looking at limiting that change on," Moeller says. "We may have to get some depth from some of our freshmen. There definitely may be some new faces on the punt team.

Yet on the whole, Moeller isn't as unhappy with this team as the 106,851 folks who had to pay their way in last week. Frankly, there is much to like about the Wolverines.

They outgained Notre Dame in every offensive area, finishing with 402 total yards to 371 for the Irish. They simply couldn't overcome three interceptions and some unimproved tackling.

Any team with Wheatley, Collins and a fleet of receivers that is at least five deep, is going to win a lot of games.

Long road ahead for Belles soccer

Weekend road trips to test team's endurance

By CHERYL GILLILAND
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team will be on the road today as they head to Rockford College in Illinois.

The Belles, 1-1, are "off to a good start," said senior Megan Dalsaso. "This is our first away game during the week and playing after a long bus trip will be tough. This game will be a good test for us."

Coach Tom Van Meter is concerned about playing really well. "I'm really happy coming off Sunday's win. Saturday's loss was a hard one, but I feel the team is playing very well," Van Meter is pleased with the season so far. "I feel that the team has progressed thoroughly in the last couple of weeks," said senior Jenny Kaplan. "Today will prepare us for a tough weekend. We hope to improve on many of our faults."

The Belles are looking to improve on defensive skills in their upcoming games. "We have a tendency not to attack the ball defensively," noted Van Meter. "We need to be more aggressive in the future." Kaplan agreed, noting that, "we have been working on our defensive positioning and trapping."

Another long trip will test the Belles on Sunday when they visit Heidelberg for the first time ever. "We have never played them before, but they are going to be a tough team," said Dalsaso. "We really need to get geared up for Sunday's game."

Dalsaso is the leading scorer for the Belles, with two out of the three goals this season. "The seniors have all been playing really well. We just need to be consistent and keep working."

CAMPUS MINISTRY...

Nobody Goes to Heaven All Alone
One of the great promises of the fancy recruitment brochures is that Notre Dame and St. Mary's are places where people will experience "community." As could be found at many other renowned institutions, here we know that we have great professors, anxious to teach, and anxious to learn, and anxious to push the edges of research grants. Like so many of our sister institutions, here we take it for granted that there are talented, competitive students, full of energy and creativity, traversing our ever-upgraded sidewalks. Like almost no place else around here, we are grateful to share in a beautiful, peaceful environment for study and for growth.

Still beyond all of that, around here we proclaim that everybody is somehow dependent upon each other for the success of our environment for study and for growth.

This makes a difference in how we work. It makes a difference in how we learn. If someone is suddenly fired from his or her job, it feels like we have broken a covenant. If someone is forced to withdraw from the university because they can't make their tuition payments, it feels like we all have suffered a defeat.

Most alumni, when they return for the ever more popular five year reunions, talk about the friendships they made while living in the dorms. They remember people who were honest, people who shared - in ways that they may have seldom experienced since. Perhaps it was their age, perhaps it was their constant togetherness. Somehow they were "bonded."

Most alumni, when questioned about the experience of their college years, will talk about professors who cared about their minds and their hearts, who shared their lives openly with them, and who wanted them to grow. Somehow they were "taught."

In these days of enhanced academic excellence, the faculty is flashier and better paid than ever, while at the same time teaching fewer hours per semester than their ancestors. In these days of limited resources, many students are squeezed by a competitive job market and an endless quest to be #1, while working part-time jobs to offset their ever-growing educational loans.

These conditions can work against that elusive, yet oh-so-valued experience of community.

Rod Smith takes Holtz's lesson to the pros

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. - Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz acted swiftly when defensive back Rod Smith missed a tackle on Michigan's Desmond Howard in the 1990 title game. He benched Smith for most of the season. Holtz thinks this lesson can help him overcome a similar situation.

"It was probably one of the toughest moments I've had in my life," said Wednesday of his denouement by Holtz. "Having gotten through it, I look back at it now as a very positive thing and ended up gaining a lot from it."

Andre Reed burned Smith for two fourth-quarter touchdowns as Buffalo won the season opener over the Patriots, 38-14. Last Sunday, Smith played only on special teams and in goaline defenses in the Patriots 19-16 loss to Detroit.

"It was a very similar situation and feeling to being at Notre Dame," the cornerback said. "There are so many good people that guys that got moved around an awful lot and the coach is always searching for the best combination."

"I got benched for seven games and had to work my way back in and made some big plays and held my spot after that," Smith said.

He said mental strength helps a player survive the stressful environment at Notre Dame, where coaches challenge players and talented teammates threaten their jobs.

"It's only on page 137, but there's really not a whole lot to the book, really. There's not a whole lot of facts. There are a lot of opinions," Smith said. "I'm not sure what the (authors') point was to prove."

"From a different angle, it looks a little better. From a different angle, it looks a little worse. Every program has its problems."

Smith, who said he wasn't interviewed for the book, admitted that Holtz is a very demanding coach.

"The kids who made it through that place and who were reasonably successful are the guys who had a large amount of mental toughness," he said. "You were challenged every day, and a lot of people break down under those type of conditions.

"You had to be able to work through the pressure," he added. "I never wilted. I had good support from my family and friends."

Smith played every game as a reserve cornerback in his sophomore season. Although he was in every game as a junior, his diminished playing time left him with just 29 tackle.

He was a starter in his final season and had 69 tackles and three interceptions. The Patriots took him with the second pick of the 1992 draft and he started one of the 16 games he played for that 2-14 team.

"There's not really that much to talk about" concerning Smith's play, Parcells said. "He's playing well for us on special teams and right now he's backing up Maurice Hurst at cornerback."

Last Sunday, the remnants of that group gathered in LaFenriere Bolleroom to continue their struggle for community. Twelve of the original eighteen groups survived. Some of their folks have gone off to London, or Innsbruck, or Rome. Others became bored, or tired, or busy with other things. But among those who chose to continue, there was a sense of community, something good, and need to follow it to its conclusion.

In January of this school year, new groups of students will be formed. First year students especially will be targeted for the invitation to community. In the meantime, on Monday night, September 20, information meetings will be held at 9:00 p.m. in the Faculty Dining Room, upstairs in the South Dining Hall. All interested students should attend.

On Wednesday, September 29, the first of several dinner meetings for faculty will be held in that same room, upstairs in the South Dining Hall. Campus Ministry and the Center for Social Concerns have invited interested professors and their spouses for a conversation about the relationship between their faith and their professional lives.

Somewhere I bet "community" will again be a powerful word at those tables.

Realignment complete, Pirates agree to join NL Central

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH

The National League's new three-division alignment fell into place Wednesday when the Pittsburgh Pirates, the East's most successful team since division play began in 1969, moved to the new Central Division.

The alignment was set to begin during the major league owners meetings at Boston last week but the Pirates and Atlanta sought to be in the East. The new three-division alignment fell into place Wednesday when the Pirates agreed to move to the Central Division.

—NL East: Atlanta, Florida, Montreal, New York, Philadelphia.

—NL West: Colorado, Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco.

The new East makeup continues rivalries such as the Phillies-Mets as well as creating the new deep-South rivalry between the Braves and Marlins that Atlanta desperately sought. Until this season, no other NL franchise was even remotely close to Atlanta.

"The fact that Pittsburgh has agreed to go to the Central makes a lot of sense," Braves owner H. Wayne Huizenga said. "They were the closest to the West and the closest to those (Midwest) teams."

Pirates president Mark Sauer pointed out that Cleveland, the closest franchise to Pittsburgh, also chose the Central when faced with the same East vs. Central decision last week.

"We received no arm twisting on this at all," Sauer said. "There's a lot at stake here ... and, after we got back from Boston, the decision fell into place very quickly. It just made sense. We talked with (the Braves and Marlins), but we made our own decision."

The Pirates were initially adamant about not leaving the East, but Sauer dropped his opposition when American League owners won a continuation of the current balanced schedule through 1997.

"We were trying to throw another win in the mix, and we were very close to those games." Sauer said. "But you'd like to go home for Christmas."

Kinder

This week's game, but playing adds a lot to the excitement. "It's neat for me because I could have been there instead of here," said Kid Kinder.

Because of his familiarity with some of the Spartan players, some might think he would make a good scout, but not Kinder. He doesn't think he knows enough about the game to make a judgment about the talent. "I hope Holtz isn't looking for any tips," he said.

On Saturday, Kinder will only be trying to throw another win into the Irish record books. He'd like to go home for Christmas.

Improving North Park to challenge Belles volleyball

By JENNIFER GUSTAFSON

The Saint Mary's volleyball team is hoping that history repeats itself tonight at 7 p.m. in Angela Athletic Facility as the Belles take on North Park College in the season home opener.

Last year, the Belles defeated North Park in three games, 14-15, 13-15, 15-10. However, Belles' coach Julie Schroeder-Biek realizes that a repeat will not be easy.

North Park wasn't much of a match for the Belles last season but Schroeder-Biek felt they improved a great deal from the year before under a new coach. She's expecting that improvement to continue.

"We are really working on quickening our offense," she said. "But we need the pass to be able to do so."

Although the Belles will be playing without last year's star Karen Lorton, several players have stepped up to fill the void.

Transfer student Erica Freithe provided 56 points for the Belles in their six-game tournament last weekend.

The team will also turn to senior tri-captain Michelle Martin, who leads the team in assists and senior tri-captain Kim Bramstetter who contributed 53 digs in last weekend's effort.

Momentum will also be a factor for the Belles in tonight's contest.

As a result, the Belles are looking to continue this improvement as they gain experience.

The Belles appeared to be a much improved team at the Kalamazoo College tournament, where they credit to increased game experience.

"We got to know each other better and were able to play more as a team," senior tri-captain Sara Stroncek said after last weekend's matches.

After another week of practice, the Belles are looking forward to this weekend's tournament as they gain experience.

Hometown fans don't hinder Kinder

By JENNY MARTEN

"That's the kid from Michigan. I think he's from somewhere near Lansing. You know the one who left and went to Notre Dame," was heard over from a Wolverine fan during last Saturday's game.

Michigan residents all over the stadium were whispering similar comments as Irish freshman running back Randy Kinder entered the game in the second half.

Some of the whispers turned to cheers when Kinder was dropped for a loss of five yards.

As a prep standout at East Lansing High, Kinder had narrowed his choice of colleges down to three: Notre Dame, Michigan and Michigan State.

By choosing Notre Dame, Kinder managed to disappoint the entire state of Michigan making enemies with Wolverine as well as Spartan fans.

And the fans are not about to forget.

On Saturday, a lot of eyes will be on Kinder as his hometown team, Michigan State, comes to Notre Dame Stadium.

"It's going to be a real special game for us. As a kid, I grew up loving Michigan State and thinking I was going to be a Spartan," said the freshman.

For Kinder, the game will be special because about 20 members of his family including his grandfather will be attending the game and because he has played with or against several players on the team.

He is looking forward to seeing them play again and catching up with them, but winning is a must.

"I'm looking forward to it as just another game. Any loss at this point could cost us our national championship," said Kinder. "The (use) is another reason we have to win this game. I can't go home for the like the next 40 years of my life if we lose."

Going into the game, Kinder has the same attitude he has had before every game. He is focused on giving 100 percent and maybe a little more.

As a freshman, Kinder has proved a pleasant surprise for a running corps that lost senior tri-captain and Reggie Brooks a.k.a. "Thunder and Lightning." In the Northwestern game, Kinder got his first college carry and much more. He got the call four times and turned in solid runs including a 21-yard carry. Against Michigan, Kinder had a long run of five yards on three carries.

Although he never tried to predict whether he'd get a chance to play in his freshman campaign, Kinder was looking forward to this game and last year's opener.

There will be some extra emotion for East Lansing, Mich. native Randy Kinder in Saturday's game against Michigan State.

Mellow McDougal unfazed by increased media attention

By BRIAN KUBICKI

Kevin McDougal, you just led your team to its biggest upset in years. What are you going to do now?

Whatever Notre Dame's quarterback decides to do next, it surely will not be out of character. He will remain quiet, hard working, and patient.

The senior thrusted himself into the national spotlight with last Saturday's win.

Kevin McDougal over Michigan. McDougal's performance against the Wolverines, then ranked No. 3, was seen in person by nearly every student crowded in NCAA history as well as on national television.

Irish head coach Lou Holtz even called the new hero into his office to warn him about success. "You're not going to be the same person off the field. People will not treat you the same, but you better be the same person on the field," the coach said of his warning at Tuesday's press conference.

McDougal posted near-Heisman like numbers against Michigan with 38 yards on 12 of 21 passing and leading the Irish in rushing with 66 yards on nine carries.

As much as he shone on the field, he has been equally patient off the field. That is one trait that even Holtz doesn't believe McDougal will give up amidst all the attention.

"Kevin has never changed since the day he arrived on campus in his attitude. He has never done anything except try to work hard. Kevin is just very, very patient and unassuming," said the coach.

McDougal has had to be patient and unassuming. His first three years at Notre Dame were spent waiting eventually first-round draft pick Rick Mirer for a chance to start.

"That was very difficult," admitted McDougal. "Coming in here you think you can play, but it is sort of O.K. because Rick is a great quarterback."

Even with Mirer out of the picture, McDougal has not become the immediate go-to guy. Despite an excellent spring camp, the senior came out of it virtually tied with junior Paul Faila for the starting job.

With freshman Ron Powlius out of the picture due to a broken collar bone, Faila and McDougal both played in the opener against Northwestern.

Neither had an outstanding game, but it was McDougal who finally got the offense moving.

He alone kept it moving against the Wolverines as Faila watched from the sidelines with a jammed thumb.

And even now after McDougal appeared to prove himself to the only people that mattered, Holtz plans on playing both quarterbacks against Michigan State.

"Paul had a great spring. He had a green light. I still think he deserves to play," he said. "I'm not worried about that."

What he is worried about is the Spartans and what he needs to do to help the team beat them.

"I don't want to have a let-down. I still have a lot to prove," he said.
